

E.D.
847e

ETYMOLOGICAL AND PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY OF DIFFICULT WORDS.

BY THE REV.

E. COBHAM BREWER, LL.D.

(Of Trinity Hall, Cambridge),

AUTHOR OF

"Guide to Science" (300,000th);

"History of France" (brought down to the present year);

"Dictionary of Phrase and Fable" (3rd edition);

"Les Phénomènes de Tous les Jours" (dedicated by authority to Napoleon II., and sanctioned by Mgr. SiSour, Apb. of Paris);

&c., &c.

5-26 56
2/1/02

LONDON:
WARD, LOCK, & CO., WARWICK HOUSE, SALISBURY SQUARE, E.C.
NEW YORK: 10, BOND STREET.

PE

1580

B66

1882

PREFACE.

OBJECT IN VIEW.

The object of this Dictionary is not to collect together all the words employed in the language, nor to furnish an exhaustive list of the several meanings of each word, but simply to call attention to errors of speech and spelling made, not by the uneducated, but by those who wish to speak and spell correctly.

In pursuance of these objects, the plan adopted is—

1. To omit all words which are so obvious as to present no difficulty of meaning, spelling, or pronunciation.*

2. To supply the correct spelling and pronunciation of every word likely to be looked for in such a manual as this.

3. To point out those errors in spelling, pronunciation, or use, to be especially guarded against.

4. To give so much of the meaning of each word as may suffice to identify it and explain its general use.

5. To set side by side homonyms, paronyms, and synonyms, that they may be readily compared and correctly applied.

6. The plural of every word (except those which add -s or -es) is given, the feminine of every masculine, the past tense and past participle of every verb, the degrees of comparison, the changes of -y into -ies, the doubling of consonants, and every other variation which a word in its different phases undergoes.

In carrying out the scheme some repetition has been made, with a view of saving the searcher that tedious and most unsatisfactory task of turning to a word which he does not want, after he has been at the pains of finding the one which he requires. As a dictionary is read piece-meal and not consecutively, the only fault of these repetitions is that it somewhat enlarges the bulk of the book.

* The earlier letters of the book are not so full as the latter. The original intention was to limit the size of the book to about 300 pages.

7. Attention is called to all outrages of spelling and combination; but, that the corrections suggested may in no wise interfere with the received spelling or pronunciation, they are invariably added as notes in a smaller type. Thus equerry is pointed out as indefensible in spelling, rhyme (meaning the clink of words in poetry), indelible, isinglass (from the German "hausenblase," a sturgeon's bladder), imposthume for "aposteine," infusible (both positive and negative), pedometer for "podometer," defence and offence for "defense" and "offense," letter and lettuce, marry and marriage, manacles for "manicles," marmalade for "marmelade," ospray for "osfray" (the bone-breaker), passenger and messenger, with scores of others. Some of these errors may probably get corrected after attention has been called to them, others may afford amusement or gratify literary curiosity.

8. All hybrids are noticed, all abnormal derivations, all perversions, all blunders of philology, all inconsistencies: for example—pro-ceed with -ceed, and pre-cede with -cede; primogeniture and primogenitor for "primi-" (Latin "primi-genitus," &c.); the introduction of h in the middle of some Greek compounds and its omission in others, as philharmonic, aphelion, diarrhœa, philhellenist, enhydrous, &c., on the one side, and pan[h]oply, ex[h]odus, pan[h]orama, an[h]omaly, peri[h]od, &c., on the other. In some instances the h is omitted even at the beginning of a word, as udometer, although we have fifty other compounds of hudor with the "h" affixed, apse for "hapse," erpetology for "herpetology," endecagon for "hendecagon," and that much abused word eurêka, which ought to be "heurêka."

Amongst the many instances of perversion, take the following from the French: connoisseur, dishevel, frontispiece, lutestring, encore, epergne, furnish (for "garnir"), and furniture (for "meubles"). Some of these perversions are too well established to be disturbed, but it cannot fail to amuse the curious to pry into these oddities.

Our hybrids are above 200 words in common use: witness octopus (Latin and Greek), grand-son (English-French and English), grand-father (French and English), bi-monthly (Latin and English), demi-semi-quaver (French, Latin, and Spanish). In regard to "grandfather" and "great-grandfather" we have no excuse, as excellent words existed for those relationships before the conquest; "bi-monthly" is very objectionable, and "octopus" is a blunder.

ETYMOLOGY AND DERIVATION.

Etymology is the tracing of a word back to its original source, and showing the ethnological changes it has gone through in its travels thence to its settlement in the language under consideration.

Derivation is simply showing from what source a people came by a certain word, regardless of any more remote origin.

Take two very simple illustrations. A man offers me some cherries, and I ask him where they come from, he replies from his own garden. That would be "derivation" if applied to language; but if he went into the tale about Lucullus and the Mithridatic war, showing that the Roman general transplanted them from Cerasus to his own garden at Rome; that the Romans imported the tree into Spain, where the word was modified into cereza; that the French obtained the tree from their neighbours, and, hating the letter z, changed the word to cerise; that we borrowed it from the French, and called the word cherries: this would be etymology, more or less valuable as each stage of the process could be proved to be an historical fact; but for everyday life the simple answer, "they came from my own garden," would be quite sufficient, and the learned disquisition about Lucullus and his wars would be tedious and out of place.

So, again, a labourer named Hetty settles in our village, and I ask a neighbour where the man came from. He replies from Singleton, the other side of the Downs. That is all I require. But another informs me that the original family came from the terra incognita called Arya, somewhere near the ancient garden of Eden, and that the word may be distinctly traced in all the Aryan family of languages. Thus we have the Gothic hath, the High German had, the old Frankish chad, the Celtic cath in Cathmor, the Scandinavian Hoedhr (according to Grimm). We have the Catti, a warlike tribe of Teutonic origin, Cato and Catullus in Latin, Cadwalha in Welsh, Chabot in French, from curious that four of the anomalous words are examples of e, i, o, u before -dg, as Acknowledg-ment	e before -dg .

Abridg-ment	i before -dg .
Lodg-ment	o before -dg .
Judg-ment	u before -dg .

The only other exception is argue, which makes argu-ment.

III. The next class of words needing reform is much larger. There are two general rules which, if strictly observed, would do much to simplify our spelling.

(a) Monosyllables ending in one consonant, preceded by one vowel, double the last letter when a suffix beginning with a vowel is added: as "thin," thinn-er, thinn-est, thinn-ed, thinn-ing.

(b) Dissyllables accented on the last syllable, under the same conditions, are treated in the same way: as "defer," deferr'-ed, deferr'-ing, deferr'-er, &c.

The negatives of these two rules are:—

(c) Monosyllables, and also dissyllables-accented-on-the-last-syllable, do not double the final consonant (1) if more than one vowel precedes it; and (2) if no vowel at all precedes it: as "clear" (more than one vowel before the final consonant), hence clear-er, clear-est, clear-ing, clear-ed, &c.; "bright" (the final letter is not preceded by a vowel at all), hence bright-er, bright-est, &c.

(d) No dissyllable (even if it ends in one consonant preceded by one vowel) doubles the last letter on receiving an affix, unless the accent of the word is on its final syllable: thus "dif'fer" (although it terminates in one consonant, and that final consonant is preceded by only one vowel) remains unchanged throughout, because it is not accented on the last syllable: "dif'fer," dif'fer-ing, dif'fer-ed, dif'fer-er, dif'fer-ence, &c.

If these rules could be relied on they would be useful enough, but the exceptions are so numerous that the rule is no rule at all. The first palpable observation is that the rule will not apply even to the most favoured examples: thus "defer," it is true, makes deferr'-ing, deferr'-ed, &c., but it has only one r in def'er-ence and defer-en'tial. If it is objected that the accent of "def'er-ence" is thrown back to the first syllable and of "deferen'tial" is thrown forward, the reply is this, fifty other examples can be produced to show that accent has no part or lot in the matter.

We have nine dissyllables ending in p not accented on the last syllable. Six of these preserve one p throughout, and three of them double the p when a suffix beginning with a vowel is added:—

Thus "gos'sip" makes gossipp-er, gossipp-ed, gossipp-ing, gossipp-y.

"kid'näp" makes kidnapp-er, kidnapp-ed, kidnapp-ing.

"wor'ship" makes worshipp-er, worshipp-ed, worshipp-ing.

Compare with the above the following examples:—

"Fil'ip," fillip-ed, fillip-ing.

"Gal'lop," gallop-ed, gallop-ing, gallop-ade, &c.

"Sca'llop," scallop-ed, scallop-ing.

"Wal'lop," wallop-ed, wallop-ing, wallop-er.

"[De]vel'op," [de]velop-ed, [de]velop-ing, [de]velop-er.

What reason can be given why the first three of these words should double the p and the last six should not? It is mere wantonness, and the superfluous p of the first three words ought to be suppressed.

¶ The case with words ending in l is still worse. There are between ninety and one hundred words of two syllables accented on the first syllable and having one consonant for the last letter preceded by only one vowel. Of these words about one-half conform to the rule, and the rest are a rule unto themselves. For example:—

"E'qual" makes equall-ed, equall-ing, and, to make matters worse, equal'-ity, although the accent is brought to the last syllable of the simple word, equal'-ise, equal'-ised, equal'-ising, equal'-iser, &c.

"Mar'shal" makes marshall-ed, marshall-ing, marshall-er.

"Sig'nal" makes signall-ed and signall-ing, but signal-ise, &c.

Above twenty other words in -al do not double the l, as:

Brutal, carnal, crystal, feudal, final, formal, frugal, local, loyal, moral, regal, social, special, venal, and vocal. To these add capital, federal, general, liberal, mineral, national, and rational.

§ Of those ending in -el some fifty double the l, and seven or eight do not: thus—

"An'gel" makes angel'-ic, angel'-ical, &c.

"Chi'sel" makes chisel-ed, chisel-ing, chisel-er.

"Impan'nel" makes impannel-ed, impannel-ing, but not panel.

"Han'sel" makes hansel-ed, hansel-ing.

"Parallel" makes parallel-ed, parallel-ing, parallel-ogram, &c.

"Tea'sel" makes teasel-ed, teasel-ing.

"Gospel" makes gospel-er, but gospel-ise, gospel-iser, &c.

The fifty which double the l are—

Apparel, barrel, chancel, chapel, corbel, counsel, cudgel, drive, duel, embowel, entrammel, flannel, fuel, gravel, grovel, hansel, housel, hovel, impail, jewel, kennel, kernel, label, laurel, level, libel, marvel, model, panel, parcel, pommel, quarrel, ravel, revel, rowel, sentinel, shovel, snivel, spancel, swivel, tassel, tinsel, towel, tunnel, trammel, travel, umbel, vowel, &c.

§ Of the dozen words in -il there are four which preserve the single l throughout and eight which double it. The four are—"Civil," civil-ian, civil-ist, civil-ity, civil-ise.

"Devil" (to grill), devil-ed, devil-ing, also devil-ish, devil-ism.

"Fossil," fossil-ise, fossil-iferous, fossil-ist, fossil-isation.

"Imperil," imperil-ed, imperil-ing, but "peril," perill-ed, perill-ing, and to make the matter worse, peril-ous, peril-ously.

Those which double the l are—

"Ar'gil," argill-aceous, argill-iferous, argill-ite, argill-itic, argill-ous.

"Cavil," cavill-ed, cavill-ing, cavill-er, cavill-ous.

"Council," councill-or.

"Pencil," pencill-ed, pencill-ing, pencill-er.

"Peril," perill-ed, perill-ing, but peril-ous, &c.

"Pistil," pistill-aceous, pistill-iferous, pistill-ate, pistill-idium.

"Stencil," stencill-ed, stencill-ing, stencill-er.

"Tranquil," tranquill-ity, tran'quill-ise, tranquill-i'ser, &c.

§ Of words in -ol only carol doubles the l, as caroll-ed, caroll-ing, caroll-er, and this is so doubtful that some dictionaries give it one way and some the other; gambol, pistol, and symbol retain one l throughout.

Nothing can be worse and more perplexing than this uncertainty, but nothing could be more simple than a substantial reform in this respect. Restore to the simple word the lost letter where it is due, and preserve it throughout; but where the simple word has but one consonant do not force upon it a second when a suffix is added. For example, cavil (Latin cavill-or) should have double l, but counsel (Latin consul-o) should have only one. Similarly gallop (French galop-er) should have only one p throughout. The same should be carried into words accented on the final syllable: thus excell (Latin excell-o), distill (Latin distill-o), &c., the double l should be restored to the simple word and preserved throughout.

(2) In -do, as bravado, innuendo, rotundo, tornado, and torpedo. Of these "rotundo" is Italian, often written rotunda in English; and, to show our spirit of contradiction, the foreign words bravata and tornada we make "bravado" and "tornado"; innuendo and torpedo are concocted from the Latin verbs innuo and torpeo, so that none of these five words has the least pretence to a plural in -es.

3. The words in -go are cargo, flamingo, indigo, mango, sago, and virago. Of these, "cargo," "flamingo," and "indigo," are Indian. "Mango" is the Indian-Talmudic word mangos; "sago," the Malay word sagu, in French sagou; and "virago" is Latin, the plural being viragines. So that none of these six words has a plural resembling its modern English form.

4. In -no the only examples are no-es (persons voting "no"), albino-es, domino-es, and volcano-es. Of these "albino" is spelt both ways in the plural, albinos and albinoes; "domino" and "volcano" are Italian; and as for the plural of "no," if this is the only word which stands out we must write nos, as we write I's, m's, and so on.

5. In -ro there are four words: hero, negro, tyro, and zero. "Hero," like "echo," is common to Greek, Latin, and French, in all which languages the singular is heros. Probably we borrowed the word from the French, where the s is silent, but there is not a tittle of authority for heroes. As for "negro" and "zero," they are Italian; and "tyro," the Latin word, has tyrones for its plural.

We have now gone through every word ending in -o, except six, and can find no reason why the plural of all should not be s. By this uniformity an enormous difficulty of spelling would be removed, nothing would be lost, and every word would be consistent with its original form.

The six remaining words are those ending in -to. Of the twelve words with this termination, six go one way and six another. We have already noticed the words canto-s, grotto-s, junto-s, memento-s, pimento-s, and stiletto-s; the remaining six are manifesto-es, mosquito-es, motto-es, mulatto-s, potato-es, and tomato-es. Three of these are Spanish, "mosquito," "mulatto," and "tomato"; two are Italian, "motto" and "manifesto"; and the sixth is a corruption of the American-Indian word batatas. In every case the suffix -es is an abomination. In every case, therefore, it is a violation of correct spelling, an anomaly in English orthography, where -es should be limited to words ending in -s, -sh, -ch (soft), and -x (with the single word topaz-es in -z); it introduces great confusion and difficulty; has not one single excuse; and ought to be abolished. To use the words of Lord Lytton, it may be fairly said "such a system of spelling was never concocted but by the Father of Falsehood," and we may ask with him, "How can a system of education flourish that begins with [such] monstrous falsehoods"?

INDIVIDUAL LETTERS.

A few words may here be added respecting individual letters:

(1) c. This Latin and French letter is one of the greatest pests of our language. It does duty for c, s, and k, and often drives us to vile expedients to determine its pronunciation. Thus we have the word "traffic," but cannot write trafficed and trafficing, because c before -e and -i = s, and therefore we are obliged to interpose a k. Why in the world did we drop the k instead of the c in the word traffick? If we had dropped the c all would have gone smoothly, "traffik," traffiked, traffiking, but printers have set up their backs against the letter k, and hence the spelling of the language is tortured to preserve a fanciful uniformity of type.

A similar intrusion of c for s is far more serious. We have only six words ending in -ense, but above 220 in -ence. Here the c is an intruder and ought to be turned out. The six words are con-dense, dis-pense, ex-pense, im-mense, pre-pense, and recom-pense. It will be seen that the s in all these words is radical, and cannot be touched; but what of -ence? Take a few examples at random, "acquiescence," why not acquiesense (Latin acquiescens)? "adolescence," why not adolescense (Latin adolescens)? "cadence" (Latin cadens), "coalescence" (Latin coalescens), "decence" (Latin decens), "efflorescence" (Latin efflorescens), "innocence" (Latin innocens), "licence" (Latin licens), "precedence" (Latin precedens), and so on. In other cases the -ce represents the Latin -tia as magnificence (Latin magnificentia), munificence (Latin munificentia), &c., but it would be no outrage to spell these words magnificense^o and munificense, for s is as near to "t" as c is, if not nearer.

Another intrusion of c is its being made to do duty for k in Greek words. If the Greek k were preserved it would tell the eye at a glance the nationality of the word, whereas the c gives no certain cue. Thus kardiak, kriterion, kritik would label the words "Greek" in origin; but cardiac, criterion, and critic may be Latin, French, or perverted Greek. Nothing can be worse than the double sound of this letter, which is sometimes = s, and sometimes = k.

(2) A similar accusation lies against the letter g which sometimes is soft and sometimes hard, and hence we are driven into all sorts of shifts to make it speak an articulate language. For example: fatigu-ing, plagu-ing, leagu-ing. We are obliged to preserve the useless letter u in order to keep the g from contact with the i when it would lose its hard sound and = j. We might spell fatigue, plague, and league without the absurd -ue, but g before e and i is generally soft, and therefore -ed and -ing might alter its sound. Here, however, we are inconsistent in inconsistency, for we find no difficulty in begin and give, singing, gear, and get.

Then again, why has g thrust itself into such words as light, bright, night, sight, rough, tough, and so on? It does not exist in the original forms and is a gross solecism. Niht, briht, siht, would be far better and more normal, and as for the other two, rouh and touh would do as well as rough and tough, although it must be confessed that "rñf" and "tñf" would express the sound attached to these words better than either of the other combination of letters.

(3) The final -e, added to words for the sake of lengthening the preceding vowel is certainly one of the clumsiest contrivances which could be devised, and quite as often fails of its duty as not: thus live, give, festive; come, have, love; genuine, sterile, handsome, vine-yard, examine, destine, respite, discipline, and hundreds more are a standing protest against this use of the letter for such a purpose. How much better would it be to reintroduce the accents of our older forms, and write lif for life, liv for live (1 syl.); mīl for mile and mīl or mill for mill; stīl for stile and stīl or still for still.

¶ As our alphabet now stands, we are wholly unable to express certain sounds. Thus no combination of letters can give the correct pronunciation of such simple words as these: spirit, merit, psalm, puss, push, put, foot, only, bosom, whose, pull, full, rule, qualm, pudding, pulpit, bush, prorogue, rogue, fugue, rugged, water, calf, calve, half, halve, sugar, loaves, sheath, wreath, beneath, show, woman, and hundreds more. Let any one try to express by letters the sound we give to full and put, and show the difference between full and hull, put and hut, and it will be presently seen how difficult the task is. Or let anyone try to express the sounds attached to woman and water, spirit and merit, pulpit and bush, and the necessity of some more definite vowels will be readily acknowledged.

PHONETIC SPELLING.

Many schemes have been projected of late years to simplify our spelling by making sounds the ruling principle; but there are many grave objections to all these systems. First and foremost any material alteration, such as these systems contemplate, would render our existing literature antiquated and unreadable, except as a dead language, an evil which no literary man would sanction. Next it would fossilise our present system, as if it were already perfect, and perpetuate errors which are not now immutable. Those who have lived for half a century, have seen numerous reforms in the spelling and pronunciation of words, and there is no reason to believe that we have yet arrived at the period of verbal petrification.

A third great objection is, that it not unfrequently obscures the derivation, but the great tendency should be the other way. The only fixed principle in language is the parent stock of words, and the only plan to make words living symbols of ideas is to show from what "stock" they spring, and how the present meaning has arisen from the parent or cognate word: thus have and hair are pronounced exactly alike, but one is the Anglo-Saxon hær, and the other hara; so with reed and read (reôd and réd[an]), mare and mayor (mearh and Spanish mayor), with hundreds more. If any reform were made in such words as these, it should not be to make them more alike, alike to the eye as well as to the ear, but to make them speak a more definite and articulate language by bringing them back more closely to the primitive words, and not to perpetuate the notion that they are identical in derivation as they now are in sound. Before any word is fossilised by phonetic spelling, we should feel quite sure that no existing or future scholar either will or can improve upon the form proposed; for my own part I believe that many of our words are at present in a transition state, and that the tendency of the age is to reduce them more and more to their etymological standard, and to pronounce them more and more according to the letters which compose them.

OLD ENGLISH.

Some reason may be expected for the rather unusual substitution of "Old English" in this dictionary for what is more generally termed "Anglo-Saxon." The main reason is to force upon the attention the great fact too often overlooked, that our language is English, substantially English, and that even numerically considered it is still English. In the dictionary referred to, "so highly commended by certain reviewers for its etymology," not a twentieth part of the words belonging to us have been acknowledged, but they have been fathered on the Greek, German, Dutch, Persian, and often on tongues still more remote. The use of the term Saxon or Anglo-Saxon helps to favour the notion, by no means uncommon, that we have no words of our own, but that every word has been imported, and Latin, Greek, Hebrew, and Arabic, are often most cruelly tortured to account for a word well known to our forefathers before Harold fell at Hastings.

Again, the language of England before the introduction of the Norman element was not English and Saxon, as the word Anglo-Saxon implies, nor yet English Saxonised. One element, no doubt, was Saxon, but other elements were Keltic, Latin, Danish, and Gallic.

By Old English is meant the English language as it existed before the introduction of the Norman element, and no possible confusion can arise from this use of the term, as all words due directly to the Conquest are termed Post Norman, those later down are termed mediæval, and those still later archaic.

It is not unusual to divide the language into five periods :—

1. OLD ENGLISH down to the middle of the twelfth century (say 1150).
2. TRANSITION ENGLISH, when the old terminations were struggling for existence and only those best suited to the language survived (1150–1250).
3. EARLY ENGLISH, from 1250 to the Reformation (say 1526).
4. MIDDLE „ from the Reformation to Milton's death (1526–1674).
5. MODERN ENGLISH, from Milton's death to the present times.

The following table will show the proportion of English, French, Latin, Greek, and other words in the language.

This dictionary contains 17,437 distinct families of words, Of these groups or families of words—

3931 are English.

3595 are borrowed from the French.

4925 are borrowed from the Latin.

2098 are borrowed from the Greek.

146 are English taken from the Latin before the Conquest.

1862 are from miscellaneous sources, as Welsh, Dutch, German.

211 are hybrid.

541 are from proper names.

37 are words in imitation of sounds, like cuckoo.

91 are Mediæval or Low Latin.

17,437 Total.

PREFIXES AND PRENOUNS.

Prefixes and prenouns may be added to words beginning either with a vowel or with a consonant.

When a prenoun is added to a word beginning with a vowel, the general rule is to take the genitive case of the word prefixed without its termination; but when added to a word beginning with a consonant the vowel of the termination is left to form a vinculum: Thus, from the Greek “dêmos” (the people) gen. dê mou, we get dem-agogue and demo-cracy; from the Latin “lumen” (light) gen. lumi nis, we get lumin-ary and lumini-ferous.

In Greek words, most unfortunately, we convert “u” into y, and “k” into c, after the Latin and French method: For example, “martur” (a martyr) gen. marturos, gives martyr-dom and martyro-logy; “anthrax” (a coal) gen. anthrakos, gives anthrac-erpeton and anthraco-saurus.

(“Ch” is a distinct character in Greek (written thus χ); “th” is also a distinct character which existed in Anglo-Saxon, but unhappily has been dropped out of use. How very desirable it would be to have two distinct characters for th (soft) and th (hard), as in the and thin. In this Dictionary the character τ has been introduced for the hard letter.

Irregularities. (i.) In the first Greek declension the final vowel is changed to o. In the first Latin declension the final vowel is changed to i.

(1) Greek	aitea	gen. -as	etio-logy
	cephalê	„ -ês	cephalo-pod
	hōra	„ -as	horo-scope
	idēa	„ -as	ideo-logy
	phonê	„ -ês	phono-logy
	phusa	„ -ês	physo-grade
	psuchê	„ -ês	psycho-logy
	rhizê	„ -ês	rhizo-pod
	sphaira	„ -as	sphero-meter
	selênê	„ -ês	seleno-graph
	skia	„ -as	scio-mancy
	staphuîc	„ -ês	staphylo-raphy
	technê	„ -ês	techno-logy
	tracheia	„ -as	tracheo-tomy

(Exception: “theka” gen. thekês, theka-phore.)

¶ The older form of the gen. case of the first Latin declension was -ai: as “musa” (a song) gen. musai; the “ai” is generally written æ, but in prenouns it is written i.

(2) Latin	mamma	gen. -æ (for -ai)
	palma	„ -æ (for -ai)	palmi-ferous penna	„ -æ (for -ai)	penni-form petra	„ -æ (for -ai)	petri-fy pinna	„ -æ (for -ai)	pinni-ped
	rota	„ -æ (for -ai)	roti-fer
	seta	„ -æ (for -ai)	seti-ferous
	spina	„ -æ (for -ai)	spini-ferous

(Exception: “aqua” gen. aquæ, aque-duct.)

(ii.) The ou of the second Greek declension is sometimes changed to i: as “archos” gen. archou gives archi-pelago, archi-tect, but not generally, hence from “deinos” gen. deinou we get deino-therium; “autos” gen. autou gives auto-crat; aristos gen. aristou gives aristo-cracy, &c.

¶ The “i” of the second Latin declension is in some few examples converted into o:—

(3)	planus, (adj.)	plani	plano-concave
	primus „	primi	primo-geniture
	&c.		&c.

All such words are barbarisms: We have the Latin plani-loquus, plani-pedia, plani-pes, plani-tudo, and even in English plani-sphere.

Again, primo-genitus is debased Latin; Cicero uses primi-genia, Varro primi-genius, Lucretius primi-genus, then we have primi-para, primi-pilaris, primi-pilus, &c.

¶ The -as of the fourth Latin declension is a contraction of -uis: as “fluctus” (a wave) gen. fluctuis contracted to fluctûs. The vinculum vowel of this declension seems to have puzzled our word-minters, and hence from manus (a hand) we have mana, mani, and manu: as mana-cle (a disgraceful word, Latin manica), mani-fest, manu-facture; but the general vowel for this declension is i—

(4)	fructus	gen. fructûs (for fructuis)	fructi-fy manus	„ manûs (for manuis)	mani-fest
	risus	„ risûs (for risuis)	risi-ble

¶ Latin words with Greek endings generally take o for the vinculum—

(5) lac	gen. lactis	lacto-meter	better galacto-meter muscus	„ musci	musco-logy	„ mosco-logy
nox	„ noctis	nocto-graph	„ nucto-graph
oleum	„ olei	oleo-saccharum	„ clæo-saccharum
pes	„ pedis	pedo-meter	„ podo-meter
pomum	„ pomi	pomo-logy
sonus	„ soni	sono-meter	„ phono-meter
spectrum	„ spectri	spectro-scope

(Exception: “polari-scope.” This would be better “polaro-scope.”)

¶ The usual vinculum vowel before “-ple” is u—

(6) centum	centu-ple	quinti-	quintu-ple
octo	octu-ple	sextus	sextu-ple
quadra-	quadru-ple	septem	septu-ple

(Exception: “mani-ple.” This is a Latin inconsistency: manu-pletium, a handful; and mani-pulus, a handful.)

¶ Most words of modern manufacture not derived from classic sources, or if joined together by a hyphen, take the vowel o for the vinculum—

(7) aluno-gen, Fr. alun alum	Gothico-Latinum
Anglo-Saxon	Latino-Anglican
Austro-Prussian	meso-Gothic
Franco-Prussian	politico-religious

¶ The following are abnormal or contracted forms—

(8) anti- for ante-	anti-cipate ba- for bi-	ba-lance chromo- for chromato-	chromo-trope
ori- for oreo- or oro-	ori-ganum penta- for pente-	penta-meter
rubi- for rubri-	rubi-cund
sulpho- for sulphu-	sulpho-vinic pseudo- for pseudo-	pseudo-prophet
taxo- for taxeo-	taxo-nomy
terri- for terrori-	terri-ble

¶ Three prefixed words are very uncertain in the vinculum—centum, centi, centu: centum-viri, centi-pede, centu-ple contra, contro: contra-distinction, contro-versy manus, mana, mani, manu: mana-cle, mani-ple, manu-script

PREFIXES AND PRENOUNS.

(By permission from Dr. Brewer's "Prefixes and Suffixes.")

EXAMPLES.
a-	Eng. d , from, away	a-go, a-rise
a-	Eng. d , intensive	a-wake, a-bide
a-	Eng. of , intensive..	a-shamed, a-fraid
a-	Eng. of , of, off	a-board, a-float
a-	Eng. -on , upon the, on	a-way, a-sleep
a-	Eng. ge-	a-like, a-mong
a-	Lat. a , from (before -m and -v)..	a-vert, a-mannuensis
a-	Lat. a[d] , up to, up	a-scend, i.e. as-scend
a-	Gk. a , without, negative	a-cephalous, a-conite
a-	Fr. a , to, for an end	a-vail, a-dieu
ab-	Lat. ab , removal from, contrary to	ab-dicate, ab-normal abs-	Lat. abs , from (before -c and -t)..	abs-tract, abs-cond
ac-	Lat. ac for ad , to (before -c)	ac-cede, ac-cept
acro-	Gk. akros , upwards	acro-genus, acro-lith actino-	Gk. aktin gen. aktinos , a ray	actino-crinites (-kri-nites)
ad-	Lat. ad , to	ad-apt, ad-ore (2 syl.)
ætho-	Gk. aithôn , luminosity	ætho-gen aer-, aeri-	Lat. aer gen. aëris , air	aer-ate, aeri-fy aero-	Gk. aër gen. aëros , air	aero-lite, aero-naut
af-	Lat. af- for ad (before -f)	af-firm, af-fix after-	Eng. after	afternoon, after-math
ag-	Lat. ag for ad (before -g)	ag-grandise, ag-gravate agalmato-	Gk. agalma gen. -matos , delight	agalmato-lite
agapè-	Gk. agapè , brotherly love	agape-mone (5 syl.)
agatho-	Gk. agathos , good	agatho-phylum al-	Eng. æl , all, altogether	al-mighty, al-ready al-	Lat. al for ad , to (before -l)	al-lege, al-lude
al-	Arab. al , the	al-kali, al-cohol

		EXAMPLES.
aletho-	Gk. alēthos , true	aletho-pteris
alexi-	Gk. alexo , I ward off	alexi-pharmic
all-	Eng. el , aēl , all, altogether	all-wise, all-saints
allo-	Gk. allos , another, different	all-egory, allo-pathy
alun-	Fr. alun , alum	aluno-gen, alun-ite
aluno-	Lat. am for ad (before - m)	am-munition am-	Lat. ambi , about, around	am-putate, ambi-ent
ambly-	Gk. amblyos , obtuse, blunt	ambly-pterous, ambly-gonite
ammo-	Gk. ammōs , sand	ammo-coetes, ammo-dytes
amphi-	Gk. amphi , both, on both sides,	amph-id, amph-theatre
amphi-	all round	an-nex, an-nihilate
an-	Lat. an for ad (before - n)	an-cestor an-	Lat. an-te , before	an-hydrous, ana-chronism
ana-	Gk. an-a , without, free from	ana-cathartic
ana-	Gk. ana , upwards	ana-logue
ana-	Gk. ana , similar	ana-stomose
ana-	Gk. ana , into, up into	an-archy, ana-thema an-	Gk. ana , without, apart	andro-genous, andro-id
andro-	Gk. andr gen. andros , a man	ang-nail
ang-	Eng. ang- , painful, troublesome	Anglo-Saxon
Anglo-	Lat. Angl-i , gen. - orum , English	Anglic-ism
Anglic-	Lat. Anglicus (adj.), English	ant-arctic, anti-septic ant-	Gk. anti , reverse of, opposite	ante-cedent, ante-diluvian anti-	Lat. ante , before	antho-zoa, antho-lite
antho-	Gk. anthōs , a flower	anthrac-erpeton, anthrac-anthrac-	Gk. anthrax gen. anthrakos ,	sauros
anthrac-	coal	anthropo-phagi
anthropo-	Gk. anthrōpōs , a man	anti-cipate, anti-quary anti-	Lat. anti , before	ant-agonist, anti-pathy anti-	Gk. anti , opposed to, reverse of ap'	Welsh ap' (prefixed to men of "family")	ap'David, ap'Jones
ap-	Lat. ap for ad (before - p)	ap-peal, ap-ply
aph-	Gk. apo , away from (before - h)	aph-thelion
apo-	Gk. apo , away from	apo-stasy, apo-crypha aqua-	Lat. aqua gen. aque , water	aqua-fortis, aque-duct aque-	Lat. ar for ad (before - r)	ar-rive, ar-range
ar-	Gk. aēr , air	ar-tery
arch-	Teutonic arg , crafty	arch-ness
arch-	Gk. archos gen. archou , chief	arch-angel, archi-tect
archi-	Gk. aristos , the best	aristo-cracy
aristo-	Lat. as for ad (before - s)	as-sault, as-sume
as-	Lat. asa , gum	asa-foetida
asa-	Lat. at for ad (before - t)	at-tend, at-tract
at-	Gk. atmōs , vapour	atmo-meter, atmo-sphere
atmo-	Lat. ater , atra , atrum , black	atra-biliary
atra-	Gk. autōs , one's ownself	auto-crat, auto-maton
auto-	Lat. bi- , two, twofold	be-lance ba-	Eng. bac , behind, to the rear	back-wards, back-gammon back-	Eng. be- converts nouns to verbs	be-friend, be-night be-	Eng. be- converts intrans. to trans. verbs	be-speak, be-think be-	Eng. be- part of adv. and prep.	be-cause, be-fore be-	Eng. be- , privative	be-head, be-reave be-	Eng. be- , intensive	be-daub, be-smear be-	Eng. be- , to, in, for, at, about, &c.	be-long, be-hold beati-	Lat. beatus gen. beati , blessed	be-gin, be-lieve beati-fy

		EXAMPLES.
em-	Eng. em- (converts nouns and adjectives to verbs)	em-bred, em-bitter
	(Used also with Romance words)	em-balm, em-power en-	Romance en- (converts nouns and adjectives to verbs)	en-rage, en-camp
	(Used also with Latin words)	en-able, en-quire, en-throne en-	Gk. en, in	en-caustic, en-cine end, endo-	Gk. endōn, within	end-organ, endo-gen enter	Fr. entre, between	enter-tain, enter-price
ento-	Gk. entōn, within	ento-zoon
entomo-	Gk. entōmōn, insect	entomo-logy, entomologist entre-	Fr. entre, between	entre-pôt, entre-sol es-	Gk. es, recent	es-gene ep-, epi-	Gk. epi, over and above, upon ..	ep-anym, epi-gram
epi-	Gk. epi, upon, &c. (before -h) ..	epi-phenomena
equi-	Lat. equus, equal	equi-potens, equinox
eryl-	Gk. erus, a drawing	eryl-pelas
es-	Gk. es, in	es-paller
ex-	Lat. ex, from, out of	ex-cel-sus
ex-	Romance ex	ex-plains
esse-	Lat. esse, to be	esse-nces
ethno-	Gk. ethnos, nation	ethno-logy, ethno-graphy
etio-	Gk. etia, cause	etio-logy
etymo-	Gk. etymos, the real word	etymo-logy
eu-	Gk. eu, well, good	eu-charist, eu-logy
eury-	Gk. eurus, broad	eury-nctus, eury-pterus
ex-	Lat. ex, out of, beyond	ex-cel-sus, ex-cite (Used also with Romance words)	ex-cise, ex-change, &c.)
ex-, exo-	Gk. exo for ek, out of, recent ..	ex-arch, exo-gen extra-	Lat. extra, out of, more than ..	extra-mundane, -ordinary female	Fr. femelle (a gender-word) ..	female-servant
fet-	Eng. fet, the feet	fet-lock, fet-ter flor-, flori-	Lat. flos gen. floris, a flower ..	flor-id, flori-culture for-	Eng. for-, negative, aside	for-lid, for-bear for-	Eng. fore-, before	for-ward
fore-	Eng. fore-, beforehand	fore-known, fore-tell fore-	Eng. fore-, front, before	fore-head, fore-father fore-	Eng. fore-, leading, chief	fore-horse, fore-man forth-	Eng. forth, promptly	forth-coming fratri-	Lat. frater gen. fratris, a brother	fratri-cide fro-	Eng. fro, from	fro-ward (per-verse)
fructi-	Lat. fructus, fruit	fructi-ty, fructi-ferous
frugi-	Lat. frux gen. frugis, fruit ..	frugi-ferous, frugi-vorous gain-	Eng. gain, the appetite	gain-say gastro-	Gk. gaster gen. gastrōs, the belly	gastro-nomy, gastro-pod
genec-	Gk. gēnu, breed, descent	genec-logy
gen-, gent-	Lat. gens gen. gentis, family, high-birth	gen-erous, gent-ool genu-	Lat. genu, the knee	genu-flection
geo-	Gk. gē, the earth	geo-graphy, geo-metry
ger-	Germa. gēr, a hawk	ger-falcon
glyc-	Gk. glukus, sweet	glyc-erine, glycy-syrup
glycy-f	Gk. glukus, sweet	glycy-syrup glypto-	Gk. glukus, carved	glypto-don
god-	Eng. god, by christian rites	god-father, god-child
gon-	Eng. gōdes, god's	gon-pod, gon-ship
grand-	Fr. grand, once removed	grand-father, grand-son (Great-grand, twice, great-great-grand, thrice removed) grandi-	Lat. grandis, grand	grandi-loquent
gutta-	Lat. gutta gen. guttæ, a drop ..	gutta-percha, gutti-ferous
gutti-f	Lat. gutta gen. guttæ, a drop ..	gutta-percha, gutti-ferous

		EXAMPLES.
cosm- }	Gk. kosmós , the world	cosm-orama, cosmo-graphy cosmo- }
coun-	Lat. cum , in conjunction with..	coun-tenance, coun-sel counter-	Lat. contra , in the opposite way	counter-act, counter-march cruci-	Lat. cruz gen. crucis , a cross ..	cruci-fy, cruci-form
crypto-	Gk. kruptós , concealed, secret..	crypto-logy, crypto-gram cyan- }	Gk. kudnós , deep-blue	eyan-uric, cyano-gen cyano- }
cyclo-	Gk. kuklós , a circle	cyclo-pædia, cyclo-pteric
dais-	Eng. dæg-es , of the day	dais-y days-	Fr. dais , a raised platform ..	days-man
de-	Fr. de (prefixed to men of "family")	De-saix, De-lolme de-	Lat. de , motion down from ..	de-cline, de-part de-	Lat. de , intensive	de-clare, de-solate
de-	Lat. de , reversive	de-stroy, de-magnetise de-	Lat. de , privative	de-capitate, de-odorise
de-	For duck , as in d/rake	de-coy dec-, deca-	Gk. déka , ten	dec-andria, deca-gon dein- }	Gk. deínós , dreadful [from its deino- }	size]	dein-ornis, deino-therium dem-	Gk. démós , the people	dem-agogue, demo-cracy demo-
dem-	Fr. démi , half	demi-god, demi-lune
denti-	Lat. dens gen. dentis , a tooth ..	denti-frice, denti-cle
dent-	Gk. deutérós , a double quota ..	deut-oxide of copper; that is, two equivalents of oxygen	to one of the base (copper)
deutero-	Gk. deutérós , a second, another	deutero-nomy, deutero-gamy di-, dis-	Gk. and Lat. di-, dis- , asunder..	di-vide, dis-solve di-	Gk. dis , two	di-cephalous, di-petalous
di-	Gk. dia , through	di-rect, di-electrics di-	In Chem. , double equiv. of base.	di-sulphate of silver dia-	Gk. dia , through	dia-gram, dia-meter
dif-	Lat. dis , asunder	dif-fuse, dif-fer dis-	Lat. and Gk. dis , asunder, the reverse	dis-believe, dis-agree
	(Added also to Teutonic words	as disown, dislike, disbar) doc-	Eng. dd , a gender-word (the female of certain animals) ..	doe-rabbit dog-	A gender-word (the male of certain animals)	dog-fox, dog-otter
dog-	Pertaining to the dog	dog-star, dog-fly dog-	Depreciative, deceptive	dog-sleep, dog-Latin dog-	Eng. déog[ot] , dodge, dodging ..	dog-watch (board ship)
dulc-	Lat. dulcis , sweet.. ..	dulc-amara, dulci-fy dulci- }
du-, duo-	Lat. duo , two	du-plicate, duo-decimal duum-	Lat. duo , two	duum-viri
dyna-	Gk. dunámis , power	dyna-meter
dynam-	Gk. dunamis gen. dunameós , }	dynam-ics, dynamo-meter dynamo-	power
dys-	Gk. dus , evil, diseased	dys-pepsia, dys-phagia
e-	Lat. e , out of (before the liquids, and -c, -d, -g, -j, -v)	e-mit, e-vince, e-lect
e-	Gk. ek , up, out of.. ..	e-lectuary
ec-	Gk. ek	ec-lectic, ec-lipse
ec-	Lat. ex (only one example) ..	ec-centric eco-	Gk. oikos , house	eco-nomy
ef-	Lat. ef for ex (before -f) ..	ef-fect, ef-face
el-	Gk. el for ek , out	el-lipsis (a leaving out) electri-	Lat. electrum gen. electri , amber	electri-fy electro-	Gk. electron , amber	electro-scope, electro-type

		EXAMPLES.
em-	Eng. em- (converts nouns and adjectives to verbs)	em-bed, em-bitter (Used also with Romance words: em-balm, em-power)
en-	Romance en- (converts nouns and adjectives to verbs)	en-rage, en-camp (Used also with Latin words: en-able, en-quire, en-throne)
en-	Gk. en , in	en-caustic, en-ema end-, endo-	Gk. endōn , within	end-osmose, endo-gens
enter-	Fr. entre , between	enter-tain, enter-prise
ento-	Gk. entōs , within	ento-zoön
entomo-	Gk. entōmōn , insect	entomo-logy, entomo-lite
entre-	Fr. entre , between	entre-pot, entre-sol
eo-	Gk. eos , recent	eo-cene
ep-, epi-	Gk. epi , over and above, upon	ep-onym, epi-gram
eph-	Gk. epi , upon, &c. (before -h)	eph-[h]emera
equi-	Lat. æquus , equal	equi-poise, equi-nox
crysi-	Gk. crūsis , a drawing	erysi-pelas
es-	Gk. eis , on	es-palier
es-	Lat. ex , from, out of	es-cape
es-	Romance en	es-planade esse-	Lat. esse , to be	esse-nce ethno-	Gk. ethnōs , nation	ethno-logy, ethno-graphy
etio-	Gk. aitia , cause	etio-logy
etymo-	Gk. etymōs , the real word	etymo-logy
eu-	Gk. eu , well, good	eu-charist, eu-logy
eury-	Gk. eurus , broad	eury-notos, eury-pterus
ex-	Lat. ex , out of, beyond	ex-ceed, ex-cite (Used also with Romance words: ex-cise, ex-change, &c.)
ex-, exo-	Gk. ex[ō] for ek , out of, recent	ex-arch, exo-gens extra-	Lat. extra , out of, more than	extra-mundane, -ordinary female-	Fr. femelle (a gender-word)	female-servant
fet-	Eng. fēt , the feet	fet-lock, fett-er
flor-, flori-	Lat. flor gen. floris , a flower	flor-id, flori-culture for-	Eng. for- , negative, aside	for-bid, for-bear for-	Eng. fore , before	for-ward fore-	Eng. fore , beforehand	fore-know, fore-tell fore-	Eng. fore , front, before	fore-head, fore-father fore-	Eng. fore , leading, chief	fore-horse, fore-man forth-	Eng. forth , presently	forth-coming fratri-	Lat. frater gen. fratris , a brother	fratri-cide fro-	Eng. fra , from	fro-ward (per-verse)
fructi-	Lat. fructus , fruit	fructi-fy, fructi-ferous frugi-	Lat. frux gen. frugis , fruit	frugi-ferous, frugi-vorous gain-	Eng. gean , the opposite	gain-say gastro-	Gk. gastēr gen. gastēros , the belly	gastro-nomy, gastro-pod
genca-	Gk. gēnēa , breed, descent	genea-logy
gen-, gent-	Lat. gens gen. gentis , family, high-birth	gen-erous, gent-eel
genu-	Lat. genu , the knee	genu-flection
geo-	Gk. gē , the earth	geo-graphy, geo-metry
ger-	Germ. geier , a hawk	ger-falcon
glyc- glycy- }	Gk. glukus , sweet	glyc-erine, glycy-[r]rhiza glypto-	Gk. gluptos , carved	glypto-don god-	Eng. god , by christian rites	god-father, god-child
gos-	Eng. godes , god's	gos-pel, gos-sip grand-	Fr. grand , once removed (Great-grand, twice, great-great-grand, thrice removed)	grand-father, grand-son
grandi-	Lat. grandis , grand	grandi-loquent
gutta- gutti- }	Lat. gutta gen. guttæ , a drop	gutta-percha, gutti-ferous

		EXAMPLES.
gym- }	Gk. gumnós , naked	gym-notos, gymno-sperm
gymno- }	Gk. guné , a woman	gyn-andria, gyno-stemium gyn-, gyno-	Gk. gûrós , circular, circuit ..	gyt-odus, gyro-mancy
gyt-, gyro-	Eng. hapertas , cloth of legal width	haberdash-er
haberdash-	Germ. hals , the neck	ha-bergeon
ha-	Gk. hadros , huge	hadro-saurus
hadro-	} Gk. haimagen , haimâtós , blood	hæma-chrome, hæmato-logy hæma-		hæmato-
hæmato-	Gk. haima gen. haimâtós , blood	hæmatos-ine
hæmatos-	} Gk. haima gen. haimâtós , blood	hæmo-[r]hage, hæmo-ptysis hæmo- (for hæmato-)		hæmo-
hagio-	Gk. hagios , holy	hagio-graphy, hagio-logy
hama-	Gk. hâma , together with	hama-dryad hand- }	Eng. hand , the hand	hand-sel, handi-craft
handi- }	Eng. here , army	har-binger, har-bour har-	Fr. haut , long, high [in flavour]	haut-bois, haut-gout haut-	Eng. haga , hedge	haw-thorn
haw-	Eng. hæsel , a cap	hazel-nut hazel-	} Gk. hêlîós , the sun	hell-anthus, helio-trope heli-		heli-
helio-	Gk. hêmi , half	hemi-sphere, hemi-ptera
hemi-	Eng. hen , a gender word for a female bird	hen-sparrow, pea-hen hen-	} Gk. hêpar gen. hêpâtós , liver ..	hepat-itis, hepato-gastric hepat-		hepat-
hepato-	Gk. hepta , seven	hept-archy, hepta-gon
hept-	} Gk. hêtêrós , another	heter-archy, hetero-dox hepta-		heter-
heter-	Gk. hex , six	hex-andria, hexa-gon
betero-	Gk. hiêrós , sacred, priestly ..	hier-archy, hiero-glyph hex-, hexa-	} Gk. hippos , a horse	hipp-urite, hippo-potamus hier-		hipp-
hiéro-	Eng. hóf , a hoof	hob-goblin, hob-nail
hipp-	Gk. hólós , the whole	hol-aster, holo-caust
hippo-	Gk. homîos , like	homeo-pathy
hob-	Lat. homo gen. homînis	homi-cide hol-, holo-	} Gk. hómós , the same	hom-onym, homo-logous
homeo-		homo-
homi-	Gk. homoîos , like	homoio-zoic
homo-	Gk. hóra , the hour, time	horo-scope, horo-logy
homoio-	Lat. hortus gen. horti , garden ..	horti-culture
horo-	Eng. hús , house	hus-band, hus-wife
horti-	} Gk. hudor , water	hydr-angea, hydro-gen
hus-		hydr-
hydr-	Gk. hugros , moisture	hygro-meter, hygro-logy
hydro-	Gk. hulaios adj. of hulé , wood ..	hylæo-saurus
hygro-	Gk. hulé , wood, matter	hylo-theism, hylo-zoism hylæo-	Gk. hymen gen. hyménos , mem-	} hymeno-ptera
hylo-	brane
hymeno-	Gk. hus gen. huós , swine	hyo-potamus, hyos-cyamus
hyo-, hyos-	Gk. huper , over, very much ..	hyper-critical, hyper-bole hyper-	Gk. hupo , under	hypo-chondriac, hypo-thesis
hypo-	Gk. ichnos , footstep	ichn-ite, ichno-logy ichn-	Gk. ichthys gen. ichthuos , a fish	ichthyo-saurus, -graphy ichno-	Gk. eikón gen. eikónós , an image	icono-clast, icono-latry ichthyoicono-

		EXAMPLES.
icos- }	Gk. eikōsti , twenty	icos-andria, icos-a-hedron icosa- }	Gk. idēa , idea	ideo-graphy, ideo-logy
ideo-	Lat. ig for in (before five exam- ples of -n), not	ig-noble, ig-noramus
ig-	Lat. ignis , fire	ign-ite, igni-potent ign-, igni-	Lat. il- for in (before -l), in, into	il-lapse, il-lative il-	Lat. il- for in (before -l), not ..	il-legal, il-liberal il-	Lat. il- for in (before -l), intensive	il-lustrious, il-luminate im-	Lat. im- for in (before -b, -m, -p), in, on, to	im-bibe, im-part im-	Lat. im- for in (before -b, -m, -p), not	im-mortal, im-perfect
im-	Romance for en- or em- to verb- alise words	im-bitter, im-brown in-	Lat. in , in, on, to	in-cite, in-cline
in-	Lat. in , not	in-attentive, in-animate
in-	Lat. in , intensive	in-candescent in-	added to Romance words	in-born, in-bred, in-come inter-	Lat. inter , between, among ..	inter-cede, inter-mix intra-	Lat. intra , within	intra-mural
intro-	Lat. intro , within, to	intro-duce, intro-it
ir-	Lat. ir- for in (before -r), with, over, on	ir-radiate, ir-rigate ir-	Lat. ir- for in (before -r), not ..	ir-rational, ir-regular is-	Eng. ed gen. ēds , water	is-land, Enn-is isa-	Gk. isos , -a , -on equal	isa-gon
iso-	Gk. isōs , equal	iso-sceles, iso-thermal jack-	a gender word (male)	jack-ass, jack-daw jack-	coarse, large	jack-plane, jack-towel
jeo-	Fr. jeu , sport	jeo-pardise juris-	Lat. jus gen. juris , justice ..	juris-diction, juris-prudence justi-	Lat. justus gen. justi , just ..	justi-fy juxta-	Lat. juxta , side by side	juxta-position
kal-	Gk. kālos , beautiful	kal-eidoscope kick-	Fr. quelques , some	kick-shaw
klepto-	Gk. kleptos , thief	klepto-mania
knap-	Germ. knappe , a boy, a servant	knap-sack labyrinth-	{ Gk. laburinthos , a maze	{ labyrinth-odon labyrinthi-		{ labyrinthi-form
lact-, lacto-	Lat. lac gen. lactis , milk	lact-eal, lacto-meter land-	Eng. land , land	land-scape, land-mark lapid- }	Lat. lapis gen. lapidis , a stone	lapid-ary, lapidi-fy lapidi- }
lateri-	Lat. lātus gen. lātēris , the side	lateri-folious lati-	Lat. lātus gen. lati , broad	lati-septæ
laurus-	Lat. laurus , a laurel	laurus-tinus leg-	Lat. lego , to read	leg-ible, leg-end legis-	Lat. lex gen. legis , law	legis-late legitim-	Lat. legitimus , lawful	legitim-ate, legitim-ise
lib-, libr-	Lat. liber gen- libri , a book ..	lib-el, libr-ary liber-	Lat. liber , free	liber-al lieu-	Fr. lieu , instead of	lieu-tenant
liga-	Lat. ligare , to bind, to tie ..	liga-ment lign-, ligni-	Lat. lignum gen. ligni , wood ..	lign-ite, ligni-fy limac- }	Lat. limax gen. limacis	limac-idæ, limaci-ous limaci- }
lingua-	Lat. lingua , the tongue	lingua-dental, lingui-form lingui-
lique-	Lat. liqueo , to melt	lique-fy, lique-faction
liquid-	Lat. liquidus , liquid	liquid-ise

		EXAMPLES.
lith-, litho-	Gk. lithos , stone	lith-ornis, litho-graph
	Eng. lead[an] , to guide	load-stone, load-star
	Gk. logos , ratio	log-arithm
	Gk. logos , a word	logo-graph, logo-machy
long- }	Lat. longus gen. longi , long	long-eval, longi-pennate
longi- }	Lat. lux gen. lucis , light	luci-fer, luci-d
lumi- }	Lat. lumen gen. luminis , light	lumin-ary, lumini-ferous
lumi- }	Lat. luna , moon	luna-cy, luni-form luna-, luni	Scotch mac (prefixed to the names of men of family)	MacGregor, MacDonald
Mac-
macro- }	Gk. macrōs , large	macro-oura, macro-therium
mael-	Norwegian mal , evil	mael-strom magneto-	Gk. magnēs gen. -ētēs , magnetia	magneto-meter, -electricity
magn- }	Lat. magnus gen. magni , great	magn-animous, magni-ficent magni- }	Eng. mægth (gender word)	mald-servant, mer-maid maid-	Fr. mal , evilly, not	mal-treat, mal-content
mal-	Lat. malus fem. mala , naughty	mal-aria, mala-pert mal-, mala-	Gk. malakōs , soft	malac-ostology, malaco-lite malaco-
male-	Lat. male , amiss	male-diction, male-volent
male-	Fr. mâle (gender word)	male-servant, heirs-male malle-	Lat. malleus , a hammer	malle-able mamma-	Lat. mamma , the breast	mamma-logy
mamm-	Lat. mamma gen. -æ , the breast	mammi-fer, mammi-form
mammali-	Lat. mammalis , adj. of mamma	mammali-ferous man-	Fr. main , the hand	man-cœuvre, man-ure man-	Eng. mann , man	man-slaughter, man-ful man-	Eng. mann , man (a gender word)	man-servant, Scotch-man
mana-	Lat. manus , the hand	mana-cle
mani-	Lat. manus , the hand	mani-fest, mani-ple
mani-	Eng. manig , many	mani-fold
mano-	Gk. manos , rarity	mano-meter, mano-scope
manu-	Lat. manus , the hand	manu-facture, manu-script
mar-	Eng. mare , a horse	mar-shal marcion-	Med. Lat. marcio gen. marcionis , a marquis	marchion-ess mari- }	Maria or Mary	mari-gold, mario-latry mario- }
marin-	Lat. marinus (mare , the sea)	marin-er, marin-orama
marit-	Lat. maritus , a husband	marit-al
marmal-	Port. marmelo , quince	marmal-ade marqu-	Eng. marc , border land	marqu-is marri-	Lat. mas gen. maris , man	marri-age
marti-	Lat. Mars gen. Martis	marti-al
Martin-	Martin , a man's name	Martin-mas martyr-	Gk. martur gen. martūrōs , a martyr	martyr-dom, martyro-logy martyro-
Mary-	Mary, the "virgin Mary"	Mary-bud
mas-	Lat. mas , the male kind	mas-culine mast-	Gk. mastos , the breast	mast-itis, mast-odon materi-	Lat. mater gen. matris , a mother	materi-al
matern-	Lat. maternus , adj. of mater	matern-al, matern-ity matri-	Lat. mater gen. matris , a mother	matri-clide, matri-mony medi-	Lat. medius , the middle	medi-eval, medi-terranean
mega-	Gk. mēga , great	mega-ceros, mega-therium
megalo- }	Gk. mega gen. megālou , great	megal-ichthys, megalo-saurus megalo- }

	EXAMPLES.
melo-	Gk. meîdn , less	mcio-cene
melaun- melano-	Gk. melas gen. melânos , black ..	melan-choly, melano-chroite
mell- melli-	Lat. mel gen. mellis , honey ..	mell-ite, melli-fluous mel-	Gk. melos , song	mel-rose, melo-drame
memor-	Lat. memor , mindful	memor-able, memor-y merc-	Lat. merx g. mercis , merchandise	merc-er, merc-ery meryco-	Gk. merukô , I ruminant	meryco-therium
mes-	Gk. mêsôs , in the midst, middle	mes-embryanthemum
meso-	Gk. mêsôs , middle	meso-carp, meso-thorax met-	Gk. mêta , after	met-empsychosis meta-	Gk. mêta , after	meta-physics, -morphism
metalli-	Lat. metallum , gen. - li , metal ..	metalli-form, metalli-ferous metall- metallo-	Gk. metallon , metal	metall-urgy, metallo-graphy meteor- meteoro-	Gk. mêteôrôs , a meteor	meteor-ite, meteoro-logy
meth-	Gk. mêta (before - h), with ..	meth-[h]od
meth-	Gk. methu , wine	meth-ylene, meth-yl
metro-	Gk. metron , a measure	metro-nome, metro-polis
mezzo-	Ital. mezzo , middle	mezzo-tinto, mezzo-soprano micro-	Gk. mikros , small	micro-scope, micro-cosm
milit- militi-	Lat. miles gen. militis , a soldier	milit-ary, militi-a mill- mille-	Lat. mille , a thousand	mill-ennium, mille-pede
mio-	Gk. meion , less	mio-cene mis-	Eng. mis -, wrong, out of place ..	mis-belief, mis-lay mis-	Fr. mes -, evil	mis-chance, mis-chief mis-	Lat. mi[nu]s , amiss, evil	mis-calculate, mis-fortune mis-, miso-	Gk. misco , I hate	mis-anthope, miso-gyny mod- modi-	Lat. modus gen. modi , measure ..	mod-ule, modi-fy mole-	Lat. moles , a mass	mole-cule, mole-st
molli-	Lat. mollis-culus (mollis , soft)	moll-use
mon- mono-	Gk. monôs , only, one	mon-arch, mono-syllable
mon-	Eng. môna , the moon	Mon-day
mort-	Fr. mort , dead	mort-main, mort-gage
morti-	Lat. mors gen. mortis , death ..	morti-fy
Mosa-	Lat. Mosa , the Meuse (river) ..	mosa-saurus multi- multi-	Lat. multus gen. multi , many ..	multi-angular, multi-form
muni-	Lat. munus , a gift	muni-ficent, muni-cipal
muni-	Lat. munio , I fortify	muni-ment
mur-, mus-	Lat. mus gen. muris , a mouse ..	mur-idae, mus-cle
mur- muri-	Lat. murus gen. muri , a wall ..	mur-al, muri-form musco-	Lat. muscus , moss	musco-logy (hybrid) mut-	Lat. muto , I change	mut-able my-	Gk. muo , I close	my-ops myce-	Gk. mukês , fungus	myce-[c]illium
myco-	Gk. mukos , fungus	myco-logy
myel-	Gk. myelos , spinal marrow ..	myel-itis
myl-	Gk. mulos , a mill	myl-odon
myo- myos-	Gk. mus gen. muos , a muscle ..	myo-logy, myos-itis
myri-	Gk. myrios , numberless	myri-ad, myri-acanthus
nau-, naus-	Gk. navis , a ship	nau-machia, naus-ea

		EXAMPLES.
navi-	Lat. navis , a ship	navi-gate (i.e. [va]gari)
necro-	Gk. nekros , a dead body	necro-mancy, necro-logy nectar- }	Lat. nectar gen. nectāris	..	nectar-ine, nectari-ferous nectari- }
neigh-	Eng. neeth , near	neigh-bour
neo-	Gk. neos , new	neo-logy, neo-phyte
nether-	Eng. nither , lower, down	nether-ly Nether-lands
neur- }	Gk. neuron , nerve	neur-algia, neuro-logy neuro- }
night-	Eng. niht	night-shade, night-mare
nitro-	Gk. nitron , nitre	nitro-gen, nitro-meter
nocti- }	Lat. nox gen. noctis	nocti-vagant, nocto-graph, nocto- }			noctu-ary noctu- }
nomen- }	Lat. nomen gen. nominis	..	nomen-clature, nomin-al nomin- }
nomo-	Gk. nomos , law	nomo-graphy
non- }	Lat. nona , nine	non-illion, nona-gesimal nona- }
non-	Lat. non , not	non-sense, non-conformist
north-	Eng. north	north-ward, north-man
noso-	Gk. nosos , disease	nose-graphy, noso-logy
no-	Eng. no , not any	no-thing, no-body
notho-	Gk. nothos , bastard	notho-saurus not-, noto-	Gk. notos , south	not-ornis, noto-therium numismat-	{ Gk. numisma g. - matos , coin ..	{	numismat-ics, numismatonumismato-			logy
nut-	Eng. hnut , a nut	nut-meg, nut-shell
O-	Irish (prefixed to men of "family")	..	O'Connell, O'Donovan
o-	Lat. o- for ob , away	o-mit
ob-	Lat. ob , against	ob-ject, ob-struct
oc-	Lat. oc- for ob (before -c)	oc-cur, oc-cupy
ochlo-	Gk. oklos , the mob	ochlo-crazy
oct-, octa-	Gk. okta , eight	oct-andria, octa-gon
oct-, octo-	Lat. octo , eight	oct-ennial, octo-syllable
octu-	Lat. octo , eight	octu-ple
od-, odo-	Gk. hōdōs , a way, a road	od-yle, odo-meter
odont- }	Gk. odous gen. odontōs	odont-algia, odonto-logy odonto- }
cen-, ceno-	Gk. oinos , wine	cen-anthic, ceno-thera of-	Lat. of for ob (before f)	of-fend, of-fer of-, off-	Eng. of , away from, from	of-fal, off-set ole-	Lat. olēum , oil	ole-fiant, ole-ic
olig- }	Gk. ollgōs , a few	olig-archy, oligo-clase oligo- }
ombro-	Gk. ombros , a shower	ombro-meter
omni-	Lat. omnis , all	omni-scient, omni-potent on-	Eng. on , upon, forth	on-slaught, on-wards
oneiro-	Gk. oneiron , a dream	oneiro-mancy
oner-	Lat. onus gen. onēris , a burden	oner-ary, oner-ous onomat-	{ Gk. onōma g. onōmātōs , a name	{	onomat-ology, onomato-pœia onomato-
op-	Lat. op- for ob (before -p)	op-pose, op-press
oper-	}	}	oper-culum, opera-meter opera-
ophl-	}	}	ophi-cleide, ophio-mancy ophio-
ophthalm-	{ Gk. ophthalmos , the eye ..	{	ophthalm-odynia ophthalamo-			ophthalmo-scope opt-, opti-	Gk. opt-ikos , pertaining to sight	..	opt-ics, opti-graph
opto-	Gk. optomat , I see	opto-meter

		EXAMPLES.
organ- } organo- }	Gk. orgānon , an organ	organ-ic, organo-logy ori- ori-, oro- or-, ori- ornith- } ornitho- }	Lat. os g. oris , the mouth, a gap .. Gk. ōrōs , orēōs , a mountain .. Fr. or , gold.. .. Gk. ornis gen. ornithōs , a bird ..	ori- fice ori-ganum, oro-logy or-molu, ori-flamme ornith-ichnite, ornitho-logy
oro- ortho- os- os- oss-, ossi- osteo- ostrac-	Gk. oros , a mountain Gk. orthos , right Lat. os - for ob (one example) .. Lat. os , a kiss Lat. os gen. ossis , a bone Gk. osteon , a bone Gk. ostrakon , a potsherd, an oys- ter (?)	oro-logy, oro-graphy ortho-graphy, ortho-doxy os-tensible os-cula, os-culate oss-eous, ossi-fy osteo-logy, osteo-graphy ostrac-ism, ostrac-ite ostro- ot-, oto- ourano- out- ov-, ovi- over- ovo- ovu- ox-, oxy- ozo- ozono- }	Gothic ostro , eastern Gk. ous gen. ōtōs , the ear Gk. ourānos , the heavens Eng. ūt , out Lat. ovum gen. ovi Eng. ōfer , too much, above Gk. ōn Latinised (o [v]on), an egg .. Lat. ovum , an egg Gk. oxus , sharp Gk. ōzō , to smell [offensively] ..	ostro-Goth ot-itis, oto-scope ourano-graphy out-side, out-cast ov-ary, ovi-ferous over-do, over-come ovo-logy, ovo-viv[i]ous ovu-lite, ovu-le ox-ide, oxy-gen ozo-kerite, ozono-meter
pachy- pachyo- paci- pal-, palæ- palæo- pali- palin- } palim- } palim- } palmi- }	Gk. pachus , thick Gk. pachus gen. - eos , thick Lat. pax gen. pacis Gk. palaios , ancient Gk. palaios , ancient Gk. palin , again Gk. palin , again Lat. palma , a palm-tree.. .. (as if from palmēcus , palma palm) Lat. palma g. palmātis (the palm) Gk. pas , pan everything.. .. Gk. Pan gen. Pānds , the god Pan .. Lat. panus g. pani , a quill of yarn .. Lat. panis , bread Gk. pas , plu. panta all things .. Gk. pas gen. pantos , everything .. Gk. para , from, by itself, near .. Gk. parallēōs , parallel Lat. par gen. paris , equal Fr. parler , to speak For patri , Lat. pater , father Lat. pars gen. partis , part Fr. passer , to pass.. .. Lat. paternus , adj. of pater , father .. Gk. pathōs , suffering Lat. pater gen. patris , father } Gk. pater gen. patros }	pachy- derm , pachy- pteris pachyo- pterus paci- fy pal-ichthys, palæ-ontology palæo-saurus, palæo-logy pali-logy palin-drome, palim-psest palm-er, palmi-ferous palmac-ite, palmac-eous palmati-fid, palmati-partite pan-orama, pan-theism pan-ic, pano-phobia pani-cle pani-faction, pani-vorous panta-morphic panto-graph, panto-logy par-allax, para-graph parallelo-gram, -piped pari-syllable, pari-ty parl-ey, parl-our parri-cide part-y, parti-cipate pass-over, pass-port patern-al, patern-ity patho-logy, patho-geny patr-onymic, patri-mony pea-jacket pecto-lite pectin-al, pectini-form

	EXAMPLES.
pector- } pectori- }	Lat. pectus g. pectōris , the chest	pector-al, pectori-loquy
ped-, pedo- }	Gk. pais gen. paidos , a child ..	ped-agogue, pedo-baptism
ped-, pedi- }	Lat. pes gen. pēdis , a foot ..	ped-al, pedi-ment
pedo- }	For pedo- , Gk. pous g. pōdōs , a foot	pedo-meter, pedo-mancy
pel- }	Lat. pel- , for per (one example)	pel-lucid
Pelopo- }	Gk. Pelops gen. Pelōpōs , Pelops	Pelopo-nesus pen- }	Lat. penē , nearly, almost ..	pen-insula, pen-umbra
penn- }	Lat. penna gen. pennæ , a wing ..	penn-ule, penni-form penni- }	Eng. penig , a penny	penny-worth, penny-wise pent- }	Gk. pente , five	pent-andria, penta-gon
penta- }	Gk. pentē[konta] , fifty	pente-cost per- }	Lat. per , through	per-ambulate, per-jure per- }	Lat. per , intensive	per-suade, per-secute per- }	(In Chem.) a maximum quantity	per-oxide, per-sulphate peri- }	Gk. peri , round, near	peri-gee, peri-œd petr- }	Lat. petra gen. petræ , a stone ..	petr-oleum, petri-fy petri- }	Gk. petrōs , a stone, a rock ..	petro-graphy, petro-logy petro- }	Fr. petit , little	petti-coat, petti-fogger
petti- }	Gk. phanta[sma] , a phantom ..	phanta-scope
phanta- }	Gk. phantasma , a phantom ..	phantasma-goria
phantas- }	Gk. phantasma g. phantōs ..	phantasmato-graphy pharmaco- }	Gk. pharmākōn , medicine ..	pharmaco-poëia, -logy
phil- }	Gk. philōs , fond of	phil-anthropy, philo-logy
philo- }	Gk. phōnē gen. phōnēs , sound ..	phon-ics, phono-logy phon- }	(as if from phōnētikos , phōnē) ..	phonet-ic phonet- }	Gk. phōs gen. phōtōs , light ..	phos-phorus, photo-graphy
phos- }	Gk. phosphōrōs , phosphorus ..	phosph-ate, phosphor-ite
photo- }	Gk. phōs gen. phōtōs , light ..	phot-opsy, photo-sphere
phosphor- }	Gk. phōs gen. phōtōs , light ..	phot-opsy, photo-sphere
phren- }	Gk. phrēn gen. phrēnos , mind ..	phren-sy, phreno-logy phreno- }	Gk. phullon , a leaf	phyllo-gen, phyllo-pod phyllo- }	Gk. phusis , phusēs	phys-ics, physio-logy
phys- }	Gk. phusa gen. phusēs , a puff ..	physo-grade
physio- }	Gk. phuton , a plant	phyt-elephas, phyto-logy
phyto- }	Eng. piga	pig-sty, pig-tail pig- }	Lat. pinus , a pine-tree	pin-y, pin-ite pin- }	Lat. pinna gen. -æ , a wing ..	pinn-ate, pinni-ped
pinni- }	Lat. pinnatus gen. -ti , winged ..	pinnati-ped, pinnati-fid pinnati- }	Lat. piscis , a fish	pisci-form, pisci-culture
pisci- }	Gk. plax gen. plākōs , scaly ..	placo-derm, placo-ganoid placo- }	Lat. planus gen. plani	plani-sphere, plani-metry plani- }	Lat. planus gen. plani	plano-concave, plano-convex plano- }	Gk. platus , broad	platy-crinite, platys-omus
platy- }	Gk. pleion , more	pleio-cene
pleio- }	Lat. plenus gen. pleni , full ..	plen-ary, pleni-potentiary
plen- }	Gk. plēon , too much	pleon-asm
pleni- }	Gk. plēsios , near	plesio-saurus, -morphous pleo- } plesio- }

	EXAMPLES.
pleur- }	Gk. pleuron , side, rib	pleur-itis, pleuro-carpus
pleuro- }	Gk. pleion , full	plio-saurus, plio-cene
plio- }	Lat. plus , more	plu-perfect plur- }	Lat. plus gen. pluris , more ..	plur-al, pluri-partite pluri- }	Lat. Pluto gen. Plutonis ..	Plutoni-an
Plutoni- }	Gk. pneuma gen. pneumatos , air, spirit, breath	pneumat-ics, pneumato-logy
pneumat- }	Gk. pneumon , lungs	pneumo-gastric, -thorax
pneumo- }	Ital. poco , somewhat, rather ..	poco-piano, poco-curante poco- }	Gk. pous gen. podos , a foot ..	pod-agra, podo-phyllum
pod-, podo- }	Lat. polaris , polar	polar-ise, polari-scope polar- }	Gk. pōlēmōs , war	polem-arch, polem-scop
polemi- }	Gk. pōlus , many	poly-anthus, poly-gon
polemo- }	Lat. pomum gen. pomi , apple ..	pom-ade, pomi-ferous
poly- }	Fr. pomme , apple	pome-granate, pome-citron
pom- }	Lat. pomum gen. pomi , apple ..	pomo-logy
pomi- }	Lat. pons gen. pontis , a bridge ..	pont-age, ponti-fex pome- }	Lat. porro , forwards	por-tend pomo- }	Fr. pour , for, by	por-trait pont- }	Lat. porta , a gate	port-cullis, port-er
ponti- }	Fr. porte ; Lat. porto , to carry ..	port-able, port-manteau
por- }	Eng. port ; Lat. portus , a harbour	port-reve, Port-land por- }	Lat. post , subsequent to, later on	post-pone, post-obit port- }	Lat. præ , before	pre-cede, pre-judge
post- }	Lat. præter , more than, aside ..	preter-natural, preter-mit pre- }	Lat. primus , first	prim-eval, prim-rose pre- }	Lat. primus , first	primo-geniture prim- }	Ital. primo , fem. prima , first ..	primo-buffo, prima-donna primo- }	Lat. pro , quasi, assistant ..	pro-consul, pro-noun pro- }	Lat. pro , in front, forth ..	pro-boscis, pro-duce pro- }	Gk. pro , previous, before ..	pro-legomena, pro-chronism pro- }	Lat. pro , before one, conspicuous	prod-igal, prod-igious prod- }	Gk. prōs , before	pros-ody, pros-opopæia pros- }	Gk. prôtēs , chief, first	prot-ornis, proto-type
prot- }	Gk. prôtēs , chief	protho-notary
proto- }	Gk. psalmos , psalm	psalm-ist, psalmo-graphy
protho- }	Gk. pseudēs gen. pseudōs , false ..	pseud-onym, pseudo-prophet
(for	Gk. psuchē , the soul	psycho-logy, psycho-mancy proto-)	Gk. psychros , cold	psychro-meter
psalm- }	Gk. ptērōn , a wing	pter-ichthys, ptero-dactyl
psalmo- }	Gk. ptērus gen. pterūgos , a wing	pteryg-otus, pterygo-id
pseud- }	Lat. pulmo gen. pulmōnis , lungs	pulmo-grade, pulmon-ary, pseudo- }	Lat. pulsus , the pulse	pulmoni-fer psycho- }	Lat. pulvis gen. pulvērīs , dust ..	puls-ate psycho- }	Lat. pro , beforehand, forth ..	pulver-ise, pulver-ous psychro- }		pur-pose, pur-sue pter- } ptero- } pteryg- } pterygo- } pulmo- } pulmon- } pulmoni- } puls- } pulver- } pur- (for pro)

		EXAMPLES.
pur-	Fr. pour , on, off, away ..	pur-chase, pur-loin
pur-	Lat. parum , somewhat ..	pur-blind
puri-	Lat. purus gen. puri , pure ..	puri-fy puri-	Lat. pus gen. puris , pus..	puri-form
pycn- }	Gk. puknos , thick ..	pycn-odont, pycno-style
pycno- }	Gk. pur gen. puros , fire ..	pyr-ope, pyro-technic
pyr-, pyro- }	Gk. purêlôs , fiery heat ..	pyret-ics, pyreto-logy
pyret- }	Lat. quadra , a square ..	quadr-angle
quadr- }	Lat. quadrus gen. quadri , four..	quadri-dentate, quadru-ped quadru- }	Lat. qualis , such as, like ..	quali-fy quali- }	Lat. quantus gen. quantî , much ..	quantî-fy quart- }	Lat. quartus , fourth ..	quart-er quatern- }	Lat. quaterni , by four ..	quatern-ary, quatern-ity quatre- }	Fr. quatre , four ..	quatre-foil
quin- }	Lat. quinque , five..	quin-decemviri, quin-decagon
quinq- }	Lat. quinque , five ..	quinq-angular, quinque-partite quint- }	Lat. quintus , fifth ..	quint-essence, quintu-ple
quintu- }	Fr. quint ; Lat. centum , a hundred	quint-al (a cwt.)
radi- }	Lat. radius gen. radii , a ray ..	radi-ate, radio-lite radio- }	Lat. radix gen. radicis , a root ..	radic-ate, radic-al radic- }	Lat. ramus gen. rami , a branch.	ram-ous, rami-fy ram- }	Lat. rarus , rare ..	rare-fy rami- }	Lat. ratus gen. rati , firm ..	rati-fy rare- }	Lat. ratio gen. rationis , reason	ration-al
ration- }	Lat. re -, again, back ..	re-verse, re-animate re- }	(Added to Teutonic words: as re-open, re-build)
re- }	Lat. res , matter, affairs ..	re-public rect- }	Lat. rectus gen. recti ..	rect-angle, recti-fy recti- }	Lat. rex gen. regis , a king ..	reg-al
reg- }	Seven examples ..	red-eem, red-olent red- (for re-) }	Eng. hêr[an] , to raise oneself [in the air] ..	rere-mouse
rere- }	Fr. arrière , behind ..	rere-dos [or rear-dos]
rere- }	Lat. retro -, backwards ..	retro-grade, retro-spect
retro- }	Gk. rhinos , the nose ..	rhin-encephalic, rhino-ceros
rhin- }	Gk. rhiza gen. rhizês , a root ..	rhiz-anth, rhizo-pod
rhino- }	Gk. rhôdôn , a rose ..	rhod-anthe, rhodo-dendron
rhizo- }	Lat. risus , a laugh ..	risi-ble
rhodo- }	Lat. rivus , a bank, a river ..	riv-al, riv-er
risi- }	Lat. rota gen. rotæ , a wheel ..	rota-lite, roti-fer
riv- }	Lat. ruber , red ..	rub-eola, rubi-cund
rota-, roti- }	Lat. rubellus , reddish ..	rubel-lite
rub- }	Lat. rubigo gen. rubiginis , rust	rubigin-ous
rubi- }	Lat. rus gen. ruris , the country	rus[t]-ic, rur-al rubigin- }	s-ample, s-scarce, s-corch; for extra, s-tray rus- }	Lat. sacer gen. sacri , sacred ..	sacri-fice, sacri-lego
s- for ex- }	Lat. sal gen. salis , salt ..	sal-ary, sali-ferous sacri- }	Lat. salsus gen. salsi ..	salsi-fy sal-, sali- } salsi- }

	EXAMPLES.
salut-	Lat. salus gen. salutis	salut-ary salv-	Lat. salvus , safe	salv-able sam-	Eng. sam , half; Lat. semi	sam-blind sancti- sanctu- }	Lat. sanctus gen. sancti , sacred			sancti-fy, sanctu-ary sand- (for sam) }	Eng. sam , half	sand-blind
sangui- sanguini- }	Lat. sanguis gen. sanguinis , blood	sanguif-erous, sanguini-ous
sans-	Fr. sans , without	sans-culotte
sapon-	Lat. sapo gen. sapōnis	sapon-aceous, sapon-ule
sapor- sapor- }	Lat. sapor gen. sapōris , flavour.			sapor-ous, sapor-ific sarc- sarco- }	Gk. sarx gen. sarkos , flesh	sarc-asm, sarco-logy sati-, satis- satur- }	Lat. satis , enough	sati-ate, satis-fy Satur-	Lat. satur , full	satur-ate sauc- sauro- }	Eng. Seater , a deity so called	Satur-day
saur- sauro- }	Gk. sauros , a lizard	saur-ichthus, sauro-pus
saxi-	Lat. saxum , gen. saxi , a rock, a stone	saxi-cavous, saxi-frago schismat- schizo- (for schisto-)	Gk. schisma g. schismatos , schism			schismat-ic
scio-	Gk. schistos , cleft, cloven	schizo-pod
scle[r]- sclero- }	Gk. skia gen. skiās , shadow	scio-mancy
scler- scler- }	Gk. sklēros , hard	scler[er]-retinite, sclero-derm se-	Gk. sklērotēs , hardness	sclerot-ic
sed-	Lat. se (scorsum), out of, from, off			se-cede, se-clude seismo-	Lat. sed - for se - (one example)	sed-ition
selen- seleno- }	Gk. seismos , earthquake	seismo-graph, seismo-scope self-	Gk. selēnē , the moon	selen-ite, seleno-graphy sema-	Eng. self , one's proper person	self-taught, self-will semeio-	Gk. sema , sign, signal	sema-phere semi-	Gk. semeios , a sign, a symptom	semeio-logy
sen- (for seven)	Lat. semi , half	semi-colon, semi-acid
sens- sensu- }	Eng. seven , seven	sen-night, sen-nit
sept- septi- }	Lat. sensus , sense	sens-ible, sensu-al
septem- septen- }	Lat. septem , septi - seven	sept-ennial, septi-lateral sept- septi- }	Lat. septem , seven	Septem-ber, septen-ate septu- sesqui- }	Lat. septum gen. septi , a fold	sept-ate, septi-form set-, seti-	Lat. septem , septu - seven (1 exam.)			septu-ple sex-	Lat. sesqui , one-and-a-half	sesqui-bromide, .pedalian sex-	Lat. seta gen. setæ , a bristle	set-ose, seti-ferous
sexti-	Lat. sex , six	sex-ennial
sextu-	Lat. sextus gen. sexti , six	sext-illion, sext-ile
sharp-	Lat. sextus , six	sextu-ple
she-	Eng. searp , sharp	sharp-set, sharp-en
she-	Eng. seo (a gender word, female)			she-wolf, she-bear shod-	Eng. schir , a county	she-riff sidere-	Past part. of shed , to throw off	shodd-y
sider- sidero- }	Lat. sidus gen. sideris , a star	sidere-al
	Gk. siderōs , iron	sider-ite, sidero-scope

		EXAMPLES.
sign- }	Lat. signum gen. signi , a sign ..	sign-al, signi-fy signi- }
silic- }	Lat. silex gen. silicis , flint ..	silic-ate, silici-calcareous silici- }
simpli- }	Lat. simplex gen. simplicis ,
simplici- }	simple	simpli-fy, simplici-ty
sin-, sine- }	Lat. sine , without	sin-cere, sine-cure
so- (sub) }	Through the French	so-journ
soci- }	Lat. socius g. socii , a companion	soci-al, socio-logy socio- } sol- }	Lat. sol , the sun	sol-ar, sol-stice
sol- }	Lat. solus gen. soli , alone	sol-loquy, soli-pod
solid- }	Lat. solidus , whole, solid	solid-ungulous
somn- }	Lat. somnum gen. somni , sleep ..	somn-ambulist, somni-ferous somni- }
soni- }	Lat. sonus gen. soni , a sound ..	soni-ferous
sono- }	Lat. sonus , a sound	sono-meter sonor- }	Lat. sonor gen. sonoris , noise ..	sonor-ous, sonori-fic sonori- }
soph- }	Gk. sophos , wise	soph-ist, soph-ism
sopori- }	Lat. sopor gen. soporis , sleep ..	sopori-fic speci- }	Lat. species , appearance, species	speci-al, speci-fy spectro- }	Lat. spectrum , a spectrum	spectro-scope, spectro-logy spher- }	Gk. sphaira g. sphairas , a sphere	spher-ics, sphero-meter sphero- }
spin- }	Lat. spina gen. spinæ , a thorn ..	spin-ose, spini-ferous spini- } spirit- }	Lat. spiritus , spirit	spirit-less, spiritu-al spiritu- }
spiro- }	Lat. spiro , I breathe	spiro-meter
splanchn- }	Gk. splanchnon , the viscera ..	splanchn-ic, splanchno-logy splanchno- }
spor- }	Gk. sporos , a spore	spor-ule
sporid- }	Gk. sporos g. sporidos , a spore ..	sporid-ium, sporo-carp sporo- }
staphyl- }	Gk. staphylê , a bunch of grapes	staphyl-oma, staphylo-raphy staphylo- }
star- }	Span. estri , the right-hand side ..	star-board
stear- }	Gk. stear gen. steatos , suet	stear-line, steat-ite steat- }
steneo- }	Gk. stenos , thin, small	steneo-saurus, steno-graphy
(for steno-) stentor- }	Gk. stentôr gen. stentôros , a stentoro- }	Stentor	stentor-ian, stentoro-phonic
step- }	Eng. steop , orphan, bereft	step-son, step-mother
stereo- }	Gk. stereos , solid	stereo-type, stereo-scope
stetho- }	Gk. stethos , the breast, the chest	stetho-scope, stetho-meter stom- }
stoma- }	Gk. stoma , the mouth	stom-ate, stoma-pod
strati- }	Lat. stratum gen. strati , a layer	strati-fy, strati-form
strato- }	Gk. stratos , an army	strato-cracy
straw- }	Eng. streaw , straggling	straw-berry
stulti- }	Lat. stultus gen. stulti , foolish, a fool	stulti-fy
sub- }	Lat. sub , under, inferior	sub-side, sub-editor
	(Added to Teutonic words as:	sub-writer, sub-worker) sub- }	(in Chem.) the article named inferior to the base	sub-carburet subter- }	Lat. subter , underneath, underhand	subter-fuge
suc- }	Lat. suc- for sub (before -c) ..	suc-ceed, suc-cumb

		EXAMPLES.
suf-	Lat. suf- for sub (before -f) ..	suf-fer, suf-fix
sug-	Lat. sug- for sub (one example)	sug-gest
sui-	Lat. sui , oneself ..	sui-cide sulph- }	Lat. sulphur gen. sulphūris ,
sulpho- }	sulphur ..	sulph-uret, sulpho-vinio
sum-	Lat. sum- for sub (before -m) ..	sum-mon
sumptu-	Lat. sumptus , expense ..	sumptu-ary
sup-	Lat. sup- for sub (before -p) ..	sup-pose, sup-port super-	Lat. super , over, above, extra ..	super-abound, super-cargo sur-	Fr. sur- (Lat. super), over ..	sur-base, sur-mount sur- (for cir-)	Lat. circum , around, about ..	sur-round
sur-	Lat. sur- for sub (before -r) ..	sur-render, sur-rogate
sur-	Lat. sur- for super , over, beyond	sur-plice, sur-face
sus-	Lat. sus- for sub (before -c, -s, -p, -t) (Only one example of each, the other two are)	sus-ceptible and su[s]-spect sword-	Eng. sword , a sword ..	sword-play, sword-stick
syc-	Gk. sukos , a fig ..	syc-more, syc-phant
syl-	Gk. sul- for sun , with ..	syl-logism
sym-	Gk. sum- for sun (before -b, -m, -p)	sym-metry, sym-pathy
syn-	Gk. sun , with ..	syn-onym, syn-opsis sy-	Gk. sun (before -s, -z) ..	sy-stole, sy-zygy
tanto-	Gk. to auto , the same ..	tauto-logy, tauto-phony
taxi-	Gk. taxis , arrangement ..	taxi-dermy tax-	Lat. taxis gen. taxis , a yew-tree	taxi-ite
taxo-	Gk. taxis g. taxis , classification	taxo-nomy techn- }	Gk. techné , art ..	techn-ic, techno-logy techno- }
tel-, tele-	Gk. tele , far distant ..	tel-erpeton, tele-scope
teleo-	Gk. téléos , perfect, the end ..	teleo-saurus, teleo-logy tempor-	Lat. tempus gen. tempōris , time	tempor-al, tempor-ise
tenaci-	Lat. tenax gen. tenācis , adhesive	tenaci-ous
tenebr-	Lat. tenebræ , darkness ..	tenebr-ous
ter-	Lat. ter (in Chem.), three atoms of the substance named, gene- rally refers to the negative constituent ter-acetate [of lead] ("Ter-acetate of lead = 3 atoms of acetic acid to 1 oxide of lead" "Tris-acetate of lead = 1 atom of acetic acid to 3 oxide of lead")	tergi-versation, tergi-ferous
tergi-	Lat. tergum gen. tergi , the back terr- }	Lat. terra gen. terræ , earth ..	terr-aqueous, terri-genous terri- }
terri- (for terrori-)	{ Lat. terror gen. terroris , terror	terri-fy, terri-ble
testi-	Lat. testis , a witness ..	testi-fy, testi-mony
tetr- }	Gk. tetra , four ..	tetr-arch, tetra-gon tetra- }
thau-	Gk. thau gen. thau-mōtos ,
thau-	a marvel ..	thau-ma-trope, thau-mat-urgus
thec- }	Gk. theké , a sheath ..	thec-odont, theca-phore theca- }
the-, theo-	Gk. theos , god ..	the-ist, theo-logy therm- }	Gk. thermos , heat ..	therm-al, thermo-meter thermo- }
thorough-	Eng. thuruh , through ..	thorough-fare, thorough-bred
thuri-	Lat. thus g. thuris , frankincense	thuri-fer, thuri-ble
Thurs-	Eng. Thor g. Thores , a Scand. god	Thurs-day to-	Eng. adverbial prefix ..	to-day, to-morrow
Tom-	A gender word (male) ..	Tom-cat, tom-tit tom-	big, awkward ..	tom-toe, tom-fool
tox-	Gk. toxikōn , poison ..	tox-odon, toxico-logy toxico- }

		EXAMPLES.
tracheli-	Gk. trachelōs , the neck or throat	tracheli-pod
	("Tracheli-poda" ought to be)	trachelo-poda)
trach- } tracheo- }	Gk. tracheia , the wind-pipe ..	trach-itis, tracheo-tomy trade-	Eng. tredde , a beat, a tread ..	trade-wind tra-	Lat. tra- for trans , across ..	tra-montane, tra-duce
traf-	Lat. traf- for trans (before -f) ..	traf-lic trag-	Gk. tragos , a goat ..	trag-edy (for trag-ody) tran-	Lat. tran- for trans (before -s) ..	tran-scribe, tran-sept trans-	Lat. trans , across, elsewhere ..	trans-fer, trans-plant
tres-	Romance (Lat. trans) ..	tres-pass
tri-	Gk. treis , three (in Chem.), it denotes three atoms. It gene- rally refers to the positive constituent tris -acetate ("Tris-acetate of lead" = 1 atom of acetic acid to 3 oxide of lead) ("Ter-acetate of lead" = 3 atoms of acetic acid to 1 oxide of lead)
trigono-	Gk. trigōnōn , a triangle ..	trigono-metry, -carpon tri-, triph-	Gk. treis , three ..	tri-phyllous, triph-thong
tris-	Gk. treis , thrice ..	tris-agion, tris-megistus turn-	Eng. tyrn [an], to turn ..	turn-stile, turn-coat
tur-	Eng. tur , round ..	tur-nip
twi-	Eng. twēon , doubtful ..	twi-light
typ-, typo-	Gk. typos , type ..	typ-ic, typo-graphy
Udo- (for hudo-)	Gk. hudor , water ..	udo-meter (for hydo -meter)
ultra-	Lat. ultra , beyond ..	ultra-montane, ultra-radical umbr-	Lat. umbra , a shadow ..	umbr-age, umbr-ella
un-	Eng. un- , not, back ..	un-true, un-wind
un-, uni-	Lat. unus gen. unius , one ..	un-animous, uni-corn under-	Eng. under , beneath, inferior ..	under-ground, -secretary
und-ul-	Lat. und-ula , unda , a wave ..	undul-ate ungu- } ungul- }	Lat. unguis , a nail, a hoof ..	ungu-al, ungui-form uni-	Lat. unus gen. unius , one ..	uni-form, uni-son up-	Eng. up , high, over ..	up-lands, up-set (Prefixed to nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs.)
usque-	Irish uisge , water ..	usque-baugh
usu-	Lat. usus , use ..	usu-fruct, usu-al
ut-, utt-	Eng. ut , out ..	ut-most, utt-er
uxori-	Lat. uxor gen. uxoris , spouse ..	uxori-ous

SUFFIXES AND TERMINATIONS.

(By permission from Dr. Brewer's "Prefixes and Suffixes.")

The part in brackets [] is either the vinculum of a suit or an accidental part of the termination. It is displayed in this list for three reasons: (1) because the general reader will more easily find the termination he seeks for by having it written out in full; (2) because it very often affects the suffix with "a new shade of meaning:" thus [-tr]ess is more than a mere female like -ess (in "Hon-ess"), as the tr denotes that the word is not only female but a female agent; and (3) it guides to a declension, conjugation, and sometimes even to a language.

-a	Romance	..	Noun, denotes a woman	donn-aunt-a
-a	Lat.	..	Noun, (in Bot.) a genus	scabiosa, achillea-a
-[a]ble	Lat. habilis ;
	Eng. abal	..	Adj., able to be, fit to be	eat-[a]ble, culp-[a]ble

(The "a," in words from the Lat., denotes that the verb to which this suffix is joined is of the first conj., but the rule is very rarely observed. Words of other conj. take "-ible" instead. English verbs take only "-able.")

-[a]c	Lat. -[a]c-us;		Adjectival Noun, pos-
	Gk. -[a]k-os		sessed of ..	demoni[a]
-[a]ce	Lat. -[a]x, gen
	-cis, -[a]c-ius,		Noun, made of, pro-
	-tia, -cia, -cius		duced from..	terr-[a]men-[a]ce
-[a]ceæ	Lat. -[a]ceæ	..	Noun, (in Bot.) an order	amaranth-[a]ceæ
-[a]ceous	Lat. -[a]ceus	..	Adj., from a concrete	sapon-i-a-cus, argil-noun ..	[a]ceous
-[a]che	Lat. -aceus; Ital.
	-accio..	..	Noun ..	moust-[a]che
-[a]cious	Lat. [a]x g. -cis		Adj., from an abstract noun ..	aud-[a]cious, ten-
-[a]cious	Lat. -[a]tios-us,		Adj., from an abstract	[a]cious
	-[a]cios-us	..	noun ..	grati-o-s, spaci-ous
-[a]c-ity	Lat. -[a]c-itas	..	Abstract noun*	audia-civ, ten[a]c-ity
-[a]c-le	Lat. -[a]c-ul-um	..	Noun, diminutive	tabe-a-cle
-[a]c-le	Lat. -[a]c-il-um..	..	Noun, instrument, place	rece-ss-a-cle, or [a]c-le
-[a]c-y	Lat. -[a]t-ia,
	-[a]c-ia	..	Abstract noun*	fall-[a]c-y, effe-c-[a]c-y
-[a]cy	Gk. -[a]kia; Lat.
	-ia, -cia	..	Noun, office, rank	cur-[a]cy, rap-[a]cy

(*"-cy" denotes rank, office, jurisdiction, but "-y" denotes, the arts: as apostasy, minstrel-sy.)

* "Abstract nouns" are those which are formed from adjectives: as audacity from "vital," constancy from "constant," audacity from "audacious," constancy from "constant."

-ad	Gk. -as g. -ad-os	Noun, the concrete of an idea	mon-ad
-ade	Fr. -ade ; Lat. -atus	Noun, concocted, made	lemon-ade, palis-ado
-ade	Fr. -ade ; Lat. -ades	Verb, to use, to employ	cannon-ade
-[a]dæ	Gk. -[ai]des	Noun, a family, a group	sepi-[a]dæ
-age	Lat. agere , to do	Noun, a trade, a thing done	broker-age, marri-age
-age	Fr. -age	Noun, collective, season of	assembl-age, vint-age
(Added also to Teutonic nouns: as "till-age," "cott-age," "bond-age.")
-age	Fr. -age	Noun, condition, duty	vassal-age, hom-age
-[aig]n	Lat. thro' the Fr. [ag]ne	Noun, characterised ..	camp-[aig]n
-[ai]n	Lat. -[a]n-us , } -[a]n-is	Noun, office, rank (good or bad)	capt-[ai]n, vill-[a]n
-[ai]n	Lat. thro' the Fr. [ag]ne	Noun, characterised ..	mount-[ai]n
-[a]l	Lat. -[a]l-is	Adj. from a noun ..	vit-[a]l, music-[a]l
-[a]l	Lat. -[a]l-us	Adjectival noun ..	gener-[a]l, crimin-[a]l
-al	Lat. -al-us, um	Noun	met-al
-[a]l-ity	Lat. -[a]l-itas	Abstract noun, state ..	vit-[a]l-ity
-[a]n	Lat. -[a]n-us	Adj., belonging to ..	veter-[a]n, public-[a]n
-an	Lat. -an-us	Adjectival noun ..	Rom-an, equestri-an
-ana	Lat. -ana	Noun (plu.), things pertaining to	Johnsoni-ana
-[a]nce	Lat. -[a]ns gen. -ntis, -[a]ntia	} Verbal noun, act of, state of	vigil-[a]nce
(Also joined to Teutonic words: as "forbear-ance," "hinder-ance.")
-[a]n-cy	Lat. -[a]ns , } -[a]ntia	} Abstract noun, state of	mendic-[a]n-cy, pli-[a]n-cy
-[a]nd	Lat. -[a]nd-us	Noun, to be done ..	multiple-[a]nd
-[a]ne	Lat. -[a]nus	Adj., belonging to ..	hum-[a]ne
-[a]nt	Lat. -[a]ns gen. -nt-is	Participial noun, agent	inform-[a]nt
-[a]nt	Lat. -[a]ns, &c.	Participial noun, state	verd-[a]nt
-ar	Norse -ar-er ; Lat. -[a]r-ius	Noun, agent	begg-ar, registr-[a]r
-[a]r	Lat. -[a]r-is	Adj., pertaining to ..	vulg-[a]r
-ard	Eng. hard	Noun, one of a class ..	drunk-ard, dull-ard
-art	Eng. hard	Noun, one of a class ..	bragg-art, sweet-heart
-[a]ry	Lat. -[a]ri-us	Noun, one of a craft ..	lapid-[a]ry, statu-[a]ry
-[a]ry	Lat. -[a]ri-um	Noun, a dépôt, adapted or set apart for }	libr-[a]ry, gran-[a]ry, sanctu-[a]ry, sal-[a]ry
-[a]ry	Lat. -[a]ri-us	Adj., relating to ..	liter-[a]ry, second-[a]ry
-[a]ism	Gk. -[a]sm-os	Noun, state	enthusi-[a]ism, pleon-[a]ism
-ass	Fr. -asse	Noun, made of	cuir-ass, (cuir, leather)
-aster	Fr. -astre	Noun, in depreciation	poet-aster
-aster	Gk. -astér , a star	Noun, star-struck ..	dis-aster
-[a]te	Lat. -[a]t-us	Noun, office	magistr-[a]te, advoc-
-[a]te	Lat. -[a]t-us	Verbal noun	postul-[a]te
-ate	Lat. -at-us	Noun (in Chem) denotes a salt formed by the combination of an acid in -ic with a base	nitr-ate of soda, i.e., nitric acid combined with soda [the base]
-[a]te	Lat. -[a]t-us	Adj., inclined to, favoured by	fortun-[a]te, passion-[a]te
-[a]te	Lat. -[a]t-us	Verb, to energise ..	anim-[a]te, fluctu-[a]te
-[a]te	Lat. -[a]t-or, -us	Noun, agent	cur-[a]te, deleg-[a]te
-[a]t-ic	Lat. -[a]t-ic-us	Adj. or Adjectival noun	lun-[a]t-ic, aqu-[a]t-ic

-ber	Sanskrit var-a , time	Noun, time or month of the year	Octo-ber, Decem-ber
-ble	Rom. -ple	Noun, multiplicative	dou-ble, tre-ble
-ble	Lat. habilis	Adj., fit for, full of ..	hum-ble, fee-ble
-ble	Lat. -bul-um	Noun, instrument ..	sta-ble, mandi-ble
-bond	Lat. -bund-us	Gerundial noun ..	vaga-bond
-bule	Lat. -bul-um	Noun, dépôt	vesti-bule (robe-dépôt)
-[br]um	Lat. -[br]um	Noun, instrument ..	candela-[br]um
-bund	Lat. -bund-us	Gerundial noun ..	mori-bund
-c	Lat. -c-us	Adj.	frant[i]-c, rust[i]-c
-c	Lat. -c-us	Adjectival noun ..	crit[i]-c, mania-c
-[c]a	Lat. -[c]a , -[c]ia ..	Noun, denoting agenus	angeli-[c]a, lactu-[c]a
-ce	Lat. -ci-a , -ti-a ..	Abstract noun ..	justi-ce, mali-ce
-cede }	Lat. cedo , to go	Verb, to go	pre-cede, pro-ceed
-ceed }	Ital. -celli ; Lat. -cullus	Noun, dim.	vermi-celli
-cello	Ital. -cello	Noun, dim.	violen-cello
-[c]h	Eng.	Adjectival noun, Adj.	Scot-[c]h, Dut-[c]h
-chre	Fr. -cre ; Lat. -cr-um	Noun, dépôt, instru- ment	sepul-chre
-chre	Gk. chroa	Noun, colour of	o-chre (egg-colour)
-cle	Lat. -cul-us	Noun, dim.	canti-cle, mus-cle
-cle	Lat. -cul-um	Noun, dim. instrument	tenta-cle, ventri-cle
-cule	Lat. -cul-um	Noun, dim.	corpus-cule
-culum	Lat. -culum	Noun, dim.	animal-culum
-[c]und	Lat. -[c]und-us	Adj., endowed with ..	jo-[c]und
-[c]y	Fr. -[c]te ; Lat. -ti-a	Abstract noun	excellen-[c]y, con- stan-[c]y
-cy	Lat. -ti-a , -ci-a ; Gk. -ki-a ..	Noun, office, state, jurisdiction	magistra-cy, cura-cy

(For difference of -cy and -sy, see page xli.)

-d	Eng. -de , -[e]de , -[o]de	Past tense of weak verbs	hear-d, fle-d
-den	Eng. den for denu	In names of places, a valley	Tenter-den
-dom	Eng. -dóm	Noun, rule, province	king-dom, wis-dom

(This suffix is also used with Romance words: as "duke-dom," "martyr-dom.")

-[d]or	Span. -[d]or	Noun, agent, instrum.	corri-[d]or (a runner)
-[d]ore	Span. -[d]or	Noun, agent	mata-[d]ore
-[d]oor	Fr. -[t]oir	Noun, instrument ..	battle-[d]oor
-e	Lat. -o	Verb	produc-e, divid-e

(Very often it is added merely to lengthen the preceding vowel: as cloth, clothe.)

-[e]æ	Gk. -[e]ai	Noun, a sub-genus ..	amygdal-[e]æ
-[e]æn	Lat. -[a]m-eus	Adj. or Adjectival noun	Mediterran-[e]æn
-[e]d	Eng. -de , -[e]de , -[o]de	Past tense of weak verbs	learn-ed, lov-ed
-[e]d	Eng. -d , -[e]d , -[o]d	Past part. of weak verbs	learn-ed, lov-ed

(Also added to nouns: as "horn-ed," "wing-ed," "foot-ed.")

-ed	Eng.	Added to all verbs not from native words	syllabl-ed (Gk.) expand-ed (Lat.)
-ee	Fr. é , -ée	Noun, object of some action	legat-ee, mortgag-ee

(Chiefly used in legal phraseology, the corresponding active noun, or that which is the subject of the action being -or: as "mortgag-or," "legat-or.")

∴ In some few words this suffix is added to nouns of an active character: as "devot-ee," "grand-ee," "repart-ee," "absent-ee."

-[ee]l	Lat. -[e]l-is ..	Adj., belonging to ..	gent-[ee]l
-[e]l	Eng. -l, -[e]l ..	Noun, instrument ..	shov-[e]l, hov-[e]l
-[e]l	Lat. thro' the Fr.	Noun, instrument ..	mod-[e]l
-[e]l	Lat. -[e]l-a, -us	Noun, dim. ..	lib-[e]l, quarr-[e]l
-el	Fr. -eau or -elle	Noun, dim. ..	tumbr-el, parc-el

(The final -el of many other words is only a part of the termination: thus in "gospel" it is -spel, in "hydromel" it is -mel, in "rebel" it is bell-um, in "excel" it is cell-o, in "dispel" it is pell-o, in "refel" fall-o, &c.)

-[e]n	Lat. -[e]n-us ..	Noun, one of a class ..	ali-[e]n
-en	Eng. -an, -en ..	Plural of certain nouns	ox-en
-en	Eng. -en ..	Gender-noun, female	vix-en (a she-fox)
-en	Eng. -en ..	Adj., made of ..	wood-en, gold-en
-en	Eng. -en ..	Verb, to make ..	black-en, thick-en
-en	Eng. -en ..	P. p. of strong verbs	writt-en, shak-en
-[e]n	Fr. -[e]n, -[e]nne	Noun ..	gard-[e]n, warr-[e]n
-[e]ign	Lat. -[a]n-us ..	Adjectival noun ..	sover-[e]ign (super-an[us])
-[e]lg	Lat. -[a]n-us ..	Adjective ..	for-[e]ign (Lat. foris)
-[eo]n	Fr. -[eo]n, -[tio]n	Noun, instrument ..	haberg-[eo]n, gall-[eo]n
-[eo]n	Fr. -[eo]n	Noun, instrument ..	trunch-[eo]n, escutch-
-[e]nce	Lat. -[e]nt-ia;
	Fr. -[e]nce ..	Noun, result, exhibit	patl-[e]nce, pres-[e]nce
-[e]ncy	Lat. -[e]nt-ia;
	Fr. -[e]nce ..	Noun, result, exhibit	dec-[e]ncy, excel-[e]ncy
-[e]nd	Lat. -[e]nd-us ..	Adj., to be, to be done	rever-[e]nd, divid-[e]nd
-[e]ndous	Lat. -[e]ndus ..	Adj., fit to produce ..	trem-[e]ndous, stup-
-[e]nsis	Lat. -[e]nsis	Noun, instrument ..	amann-[e]nsis
-[e]nt	Lat. -[e]ns gen.
	-entis.. ..	Participial noun ..	stud-[e]nt, accid-[e]nt
-er	Eng. -or, -ra ..	Comparative degree ..	near-er, narrow-er
-er	Eng. -ere ..	Noun, agent ..	learn-er, robb-er
-[e]r	Lat. -[i]r, -[e]r ..	Noun, agent ..	mast-[e]r, defend-[e]r
-[e]r	Fr. -[eu]r ..	Noun, agent ..	labour-[e]r, devin-[e]r
-[e]r	Lat. -[a]r-ius ..	Noun, occupation, trade	mountain-[e]r, engin-
-erel	Fr. -erelle, -erel.	Noun, agent, dim. ..	cock-erel, dott-erel
-ern	Eng. -ern ..	Adj., in the direction of	south-ern, north-ern
-[e]rn	Lat. -[e]rn-us,
	-[u]rn-us ..	Noun, place ..	cav-[e]rn, tav-[e]rn
-[e]ry	Lat. -[e]ri-a,
	-[a]ri-a ..	Noun, dépôt, workshop	rook-[e]ry, smith-[e]ry
-[e]ry	Lat. -[e]ri-a, }	Noun, an art, result of
	-[a]ri-a }	art ..	cook-[e]ry, scen-[e]ry
-es	Eng. -as, later -es	Plu. of nouns in ch	church-es, fish-es,
		(soft), sh, s, x ..	gas-es, box-es
-es	Eng. -eth, later }	3 sing. pres. Ind. of v.	reach-es, wash-es,
	-es .. }	in ch (soft), sh, s, x.	pass-es, fix-es
-es'	Eng. -es.. ..	Possessive plu. of }	church-es', fish-es',
		nouns in -es.. }	fox-es'

(The sign (') arose from a blunder of old grammarians, who supposed the possessive case to consist of "his" and we still have in the Prayer Book "for Christ his sake," i.e. Christ's sake, or rather Christes sake.)

-es'	Eng.	Poss. of proper names	Moses' sake, Xerxes'
		in -ses, -ces ..	army
-[e]sce	Lat. -[e]sc-o ..	Verb, inceptive (-sc in-ceptive) ..	efferv-[e]sce, coâl-[e]sce
-[e]scence	Lat. -[e]scent-ia	Noun, inceptive, incip-	conval-[e]scence,
		ient state ..	putr-[e]scence
-[e]scency	Lat. -[e]scent-ia	Noun, inceptive, advanced state ..	adol-[e]scency

-[e]scent	Lat. -[e]scens } Adj., inceptive, finished	{ conval-[e]scent, putr-[e]scent
	gen. -entis }
-ese	Fr. -[i]s, -[o]is, } Adjectival noun, denot-	{ Chin-ese, Malt-ese, Japan-ese
	-[ai]s .. ing a people; Adj.
-ess	Fr. -esse; Lat., } Noun, denoting a fe-	count-ess, lion-ess
	Gk. -[i]ss-a } male

(This suffix is restricted to females of the human family and some few quadrupeds.)

-esque	Fr. -esque .. Adj., like, of the char-	{ pictur-esque, Arab- esque acter of
-eous	Lat. -eus .. Adj. from concrete nouns	calcar-eous (see -lous) proph-et, dig-et
-et	Lat. -et-us, -et-a } Noun, one of a class..
-et	Fr. -et, -ette .. Noun, a small recept-	budg-et, buff-et, lanc-et acle or instrument.

(Added to other nouns besides those from the French: as "clog-et," "wick-et," "thick-et.")

-[e]te	Lat. -[e]t-us .. Past participle ..	obsol-ete, eff-ete
--------	-------------------------------------	--------------------

The words with this ending are all compounds: thus "com-plete" and "re-plete" (Lat. v. pleo), "con-crete" (Lat. v. creresco), "de-lete" (Lat. v. leo), "ef-fete" (Lat. fact-us), "ob-solete" (Lat. v. soleo), and "se-crete" (Lat. v. cerno).

-ey	Fr. -ée Noun	{ all-ey, chimn-ey, journ- ey, vall-ey, roll-ey medl-ey (Fr. mesle) pull-ey (Fr. poulie) abb-ey (Fr. abbaye) parsl-ey (Fr. persil)
-ey	Fr. -é Noun
-ey	Fr. -[i]e Noun
-ey	Fr. -aye Noun
-ey	Fr. -il Noun

("Barley" is bar-ley, Welsh bara llys[tam], bread-plants.)

-ey	Fr. -cr Verb and Verbal noun	parl-ey (Fr. parler) hon-ey (hunnig) clay-ey, sky-ey
-ey	Eng. -ig Noun
-ey	Eng. -ig Adj., after ay - ..

In "jockey" and "monkey" the -ey is diminutive. See pp. 544 and 675.
"Purvey" is Fr. pourvoir; "Obey," Fr. obier; "Survey" and "Convey," Lat. veh[er].

-fast	Eng. -fæst .. Neun, effectually, en-	stead-fast, shame-faced tirely.. ..

("Shamefaced" is a corruption of shamefæst or shamefast.)

-fic	Lat. -fac-tus .. Adj., made	beati-fic, calori-fic
-fold	Eng. -feald .. Adj., repeated, multiplied	two-fold, four-fold

-form	Lat. form-ica, } Noun, (in Chem.) the	Chloro-form the ter- oxide of formyle (=form'yl) an ant
	ter-oxide of a hydro- carbon. So called from its resemblance to formic acid ..

-ful	Eng. full or ful	hate-ful, hope-ful
------	------------------	--------------------

-fy	Lat. facio, facis } Verb, to make, to be-	versl-fy, testl-fy come

-gen	Gk. geno, to pro-	oxy-gen, nitro-gén duce

-head	Eng. -hād .. Noun, person, state,	God-head boy-hood, girl-hood condition

-hood	Eng. -hād .. Noun,	regal-ia, insign-ia
-ia	Lat. -ia.. .. Noun, things belonging to

-ia	Lat. -ia; Gk. -ia } Noun, (in Bot.) an or-	monogyn-ia, mammal-ia, reptil-ia
	der or genus; (in Zool.), a class or order

-iad	Gk. -iad-os ..	Noun, patronymic ..	Il-iad, Dunc-iad
-[i]ble	Lat. habilis ..	Adj., able, fit to ..	tang-[i]ble, sens-[i]ble
(Same as -able, but added to Lat. words not of the 1st conj.)
-[i]c	Lat. -[i]c-us ..	Adj., belonging to ..	civ-[i]c, pacif-[i]c
-[i]c	Gk. -ik-os, -ik-a ..	Noun, a science ..	mus-[i]c, log-[i]c
(Except in the 5 words (arithmetic, logic, magic, music, rhetoric, derived from the French) this termination is always plural.)
-[i]c	Gk. -ik-os ; Lat. ..	Adj., of the nature of, ..	angel-[i]c, basalt-[i]c
	-ic-us ..	like ..
-[i]c	Gk. -ik-os ..	Adj., (in Path.) in an excited state ..	titan-[i]c, chron-[i]c
(If not excited, the termination is -oid or -ode: as titanoid or titanode.)
-[i]c	Gk. -ik-os ..	Adj., (In Chem.) denotes an acid containing a maximum of oxygen ..	nitr-[i]c, carbon-[i]c
(If it contains less than the maximum the term. is -ous: as nitrous, &c.)
-ical	Lat. -ical-is ..	Adj., pertaining to ..	astronom-[i]cal, spher-
-ically	Lat. -ical-is with ..	Adverb ..	iron-[i]cally, mus-[i]cally
-[i]ce	Lat. -[i]c-ia, -[i]lia ..	Abstract noun ..	avar-[i]ce, mal-[i]ce
-[i]cle	Lat. -[i]culum ..	Noun, dim. ..	part-[i]cle, art-[i]cle
-[i]cian	Lat. -ian with ..	Noun, one skilled in a science ..	polit-[i]c-ian, arithmet-[i]c-ian
-ics	Gk. -ik-a ..	Noun, denoting a science ..	mathemat-[i]cs, stat-[i]cs
-dict	Lat. dict-um ..	Verbal noun ..	inter-[i]dict, ver-[i]dict
-id	Lat. -id-us ..	Noun, outcome, result ..	ac-[i]d, luc-[i]d
-id	Gk. -idēs ..	Noun, patronymic ..	Æne-[i]d, carot-[i]d
-id	Gk. eid-os , like ..	Noun (in Science), with o for vinculum, and the two combined into a triphthong ..	spher-o-[i]d = sph'roid alkal-o-[i]d = al'ka.toid
-idæ	Gk. -idēs ..	Noun, patronymic, a family ..	can-[i]dæ, formic-[i]dæ
-idal	Lat. -idal-is ..	Adj., of the nature of ..	pyram-[i]dal
-ide	Gk. eid-os , like ..	Noun, (In Chem.) a non-acid combination of oxygen ..	chlor-[i]de, iod-[i]de
-ide	Gk. eid-os , like ..	Noun, (In Chem.) the more negative of two elements combined ..	ox-[i]de of iron chlor-[i]de of sodium
-ides	Gk. -idēs ..	Noun, patronymic ..	Atlant-[i]des, Caryat-[i]des idion	Gk. idion ..	Noun, one's own ..	enchr-[i]dion
-ie	Scotch -ie ..	Noun, dim. ..	bird-[i]e, dogg-[i]e
-ier	Fr. -ier ; Lat. ..	Noun, characterises ..	halberd-[i]er, brigad-[i]er
	-erius, -arius ..	an agent ..
-iff	Fr. -if ; Lat. -ivus ..	Noun, one employed officially ..	plaint-[i]ff
-iff	Eng. -ge-réfa ..	Noun, a reeve, a steward ..	sher-[i]ff, ball-[i]ff
-[i]l	Lat. -[i]l-is, -[e]lis, -[a]lis ..	Adj., from a substantive stem ..	civ-[i]l
-[i]le	Lat. -[i]l-is ..	Adj., from a substantive stem ..	gent-[i]le, host-[i]le
-im	Heb. -im , plural ..	Noun, plural ..	cherub-[i]m, seraph-[i]m
-in	Chaldee -in , plu. ..	Noun, plural ..	cherub-[i]n, seraph-[i]n
-[i]n	Lat. -[i]n-us ..	Noun ..	ru-[i]n, bas-[i]n

-in	Lat. -in-us ..	Noun, (in Chem.) a simple substance ..	amid-in
-ina	Rom. -ina ..	Noun, denotes a woman	czar-ina
-ine	Lat. -in-us ..	Noun, belonging to a group ..	fel-ine
-ine	Lat. -in-us ..	Noun, belonging to, of the nature of ..	mar-ine, sal-ine
-ine	Rom. -ine ..	Noun, denotes a woman	hero-ine, landgrav-ine
-ine	Gk. -in-is , an } offspring }	Noun, (in Chem.) an element ..	chlor-ine, iod-ine
-ing	Eng. -ing ..	Noun, son of, descendant of ..	Athel-ing
-ing	Eng. -ung ..	Participial noun ..	the preach-ing [of John]
-ing	Eng. -igende ..	Gerund ..	the fear of open-ing..
-ing	Eng. -ende, -inde ..	Pres. part. ..	lov-ing, hear-ing
-[i]on	Lat. -[i]o, g. -onis , Fr. [-]on ..	Noun, act of, one of ..	compan-[i]on
-[i]on	Lat. -[i]o, g. -ionis ..	Verbal noun ..	admiss-[i]on, relig-[i]on
-[i]or	Lat. -[i]or ..	Adj., comparative deg.	super-[i]or, infer-[i]or

(The suffix -or is added to the first case of the positive which ends in -i: thus in superus (high) it is added to the gen., but in brevis to the dat.)

-ious	Lat. -ius ..	Adj., (in Bot.) pertaining to a class, order, or group ..	monogyn-ious
-[i]ous	Lat. -[i]us ..	Adj., from an abstract noun ..	grac-ious (see -eous)
-ique	Fr. from Lat. -iquus ..	Adj., belonging to ..	ant-ique, un-ique
-ise	Lat. -it-ium , -is-us ..	Noun, act of, habit of	exerc-ise, parad-ise
-ise	Gk. -iz-o ..	Verb, to undertake to do, to make ..	apolog-ise, sermon-ise
-ish	Eng. -isc ..	Adj., external resemblance, hence folk ..	Engl-ish, Ir-ish
-ish	Eng. -isc ..	Adj., added to a noun "like" ..	boy-ish, girl-ish
-ish	Lat. -esc ..	added to an adj. dim. Verb, inchoative ..	whit-ish, black-ish
-isk	Gk. -isk-os ..	Noun, dim. ..	admon-ish, fin-ish
-[i]sm	Gk. -[i]sm-os ; } Lat. -[i]sm-us }	Noun, a system, a doctrine, a phase, a structure ..	Calvin-[i]sm, vulgar-[i]sm, organ-[i]sm
-ist	Gk. -ist-és ; Lat. -ist-a ..	Noun, agent ..	art-ist, antagon-ist
-ister	Gk. -ist-es ..	Noun, agent ..	chor-ister
-it	Lat. eo sup. it-um ..	Verb, engaged in doing	ed-it
-it	Lat. -[i]t-us, -um ..	Noun, " "	mer-it, pulp-it
-ite	Lat. -[i]t-us, -um ..	Verb, " "	un-ite, inv-ite
-ite	Lat. -it-us ..	Noun, (in Chem.) a salt formed from an acid ending in -ous ..	sulph-ite [of potash], i.e., sulphurous acid with the base potash
-ite	Lat. -[i]t-us ..	Adjectival noun, one of a race or nation ..	Canaan-ite, infin-ite
-ite	Lat. -[i]t-us ..	Verbal noun, subject of an action ..	appet-ite, contr-ite
-ite	Gk. [i]th-os, a } stone .. }	Noun, a mineral, a fossil ..	ammon-ite
-[i]tis	Gk. hiēmi ..	Noun, (in Med.) inflammation ..	card-itis
-[i]ty	Lat. -[i]tas ..	Abstract noun ..	curios-[i]ty, duplic-[i]ty

-ium	Lat. -ium ; Gk. } Noun, (in Chem.) a } -ion .. metal.. ..	potass-ium
-ium	Lat. -ium ; Gk. } Noun, (in Bot.) a spe- } -ion .. cies ..	dolphin-ium
-ive	Lat. -iv-us .. Adj., able or inclined to	cohes-ive, express-ive
-ive	Lat. -iv-us .. Verbal noun ..	capt-ive, nat-ive
-ix	Lat. -ix , .. Noun, denoting a } woman ..	testatr-ix, executr-ix
-ize	Gk. -iz-o .. Verb, to make, to pro- } duce	scandal-ize
-kin	Germ. -chen .. Noun, dim. ..	lamb-kin, nap-kin
-kind	Eng. -cyn or -cin Noun, race ..	man-kind
-l	Lat. [a, e, i, o, } u] with -lus } Noun, instrument {	can[al], bush[el], pen- c[il], id[ol]
-le	Eng. -l, -ol, -ul Noun, instrument ..	hand-le, sett-le, gird-le
-le	Eng. -l, -el, -ol Adj., dim. ..	britt-le, spark-le
-le	Lat. -l-um .. Noun, instrument ..	examp-le, temp-le
-le	Lat. [e]l-us, [i]l- us, [u]l-us .. Noun, instrument ..	ang-le, cand-le
-le	Lat. [c]ul-us .. Noun, dim. ..	circ-le, obsta[c]le
-le	Fr. -elle .. Verb, dim. ..	crack-le, dabb-le
-ledge	Eng. -lach, -lac Noun, gift ..	know-ledge
-lent	Lat. -lent-us .. Adj., full of ..	corpu-lent
-less	Eng. -leas .. Adj., privative, void of	spirit-less
-let	Romance -let, -et Noun, dim. ..	brace-let, corse-let (Used with pure English words: as ham-let, ring-let, stream-let.)
-ling	Eng. -ling .. Noun, the state or con- } dition	world-ling, hire-ling
-ling	Eng. -ling .. Noun, offspring of, dim.	duck-ling, lord-ling
-lith, -lite	Gk. -lith-os, a } stone ..	mel-lite, acro-lith
-lock	Eng. -lac, a } pledge ..	wed-lock
-lock	Eng. -loce .. Noun, a tuft of hair ..	fet-lock, elf-lock
-lock	Eng. -loc .. Noun, the lock of a door	fire-lock, pad-lock
-lock	Eng. -leac, a herb Noun, a herb or plant	hem-lock, house-leek
-long	Eng. -linge .. Adverb and Adjective	head-long, live-long
-ly	Eng. -lic .. Adj., like ..	god-ly, man-ly
-ly	Eng. -lice .. Adv., in the manner of	vain-ly, nob-ly
-lyse	Gk. lu-o, to loose Verb, to resolve a com- } pound into its ele- } ments by the agency } of electricity ..	electro-lyse
-lyte	Gk. lu-o, to loose Noun, a substance } decomposable ..	electro-lyte
-m	Eng. -m .. 1st pers. sing. of verbs	a-m (only example)
-m	Eng. -m-a .. Noun ..	bloo-m, besc-m
-m	Gk. -m-a .. Noun, done, made ..	epigra-m, emble-m
-m	Lat. -m-us, &c. Adj., established ..	fir-m
-m	Lat. -m-a .. Noun ..	for-m, pal-m
-ma	Gk. -ma .. Noun, made, done ..	panora-ma, dog-ma
-me	Lat. -ma .. Noun ..	fla-me, fa-me
-me	Lat. -me-n .. Noun ..	cri-me, volu-me
-meal	Eng. -mat-um .. Adv., part by part ..	piece-meal
-ment	Lat. -ment-um Noun, instrument ..	experi-ment, firma-
(Also added to Teutonic words: as fulfil-ment, acknowledg-ment.)
-ment	Fr. -ment .. Noun, subject of an } action	move-ment, judg-ment
-mn	Lat. [u]mn-us .. Noun ..	colu-mn, autu-mn
-monger	Eng. monger (a } dealer) } Noun, a dealer, a } tradesman ..	iron-monger, fish-mon- ger, cheese-monger

-mony	Lat. -moni-um	Noun, state, condition	testi-mony, patri-mony
-most	Eng. mōst	Adj. (superlative deg.)	fore-most, hind-most
-mus	Lat. -mus	Noun, an instrument	isth-mus, cala-mus
-naut	Gk. nautes	Noun, a sailor	acro-naut
-nce	Lat. -ns, -nti-a	Noun, outcome, result	abund[a]-nce, indulg[e]-
-ncy	Lat. -nti-a	Abstract noun	infa-ncy, dece-ncy
-nd	Lat. -nd-us	Noun, to be done	leg[e]-nd, garl[a]-nd
-ndum	Lat. -ndum	Noun, something to be done	memora-ndum, corri-ge-ndum
-ness	Eng. -nes, -nis	Abstract noun	good-ness, white-ness
(Also added to Romance words, especially with "ful" as a vinculum, g.e., mercif[ul]-ness, bounti[ful]-ness, &c., savage-ness, factious-ness.)
-nt	Lat. -n[s] gen.
	-nt-is	Participial adjective	abund[a]-nt, prud[e]-nt
-nt	Lat. -n[s] gen.
	-nt-is	Participial noun	serv[a]-nt, ag[e]-nt
-oc	Welsh -og	Noun, full of	hav-oo
-[oc]ity	Lat. -[oc]itas	Abstract noun	fer[oc]-ity, precoc-ity
-ock	Eng. -uc-a	Noun, dim.	bull-ock, hill-ock
-od	Gk. hodos (a way)	Noun, a range, a way	peri-od, syn-od
-ode	Gk. hodos (a way)	Noun, a range, a way	epis-ode (see p. 315)
-ode	Gk. ódos	Noun, an ode	ep-ode
-podes	Gk. pous gen.
	podos	Noun, feet	anti-podés, a-podés
-œcious	Gk. oikos (a house)	Adj., (in Bot.) arrangement of stamens and pistils	mon-œcious
-oid	Gk. eidos (like)	Noun, (in Med.) disease in an unexcited state	tetan-oid or -ode (Disease in an excited state terminates in -ic: as tetanic.)
-oid	Gk. eidos (like)	Noun, like (with o vinculum)	spher-oid, cycl-oid
-oidal	Lat. -al-is with Gk. eidos	Adj., like in nature	cycl-oid-al
-on	Romance -on, -one	Noun, act, instrument, state	glutt-on, apr-on
-[i]on	Romance -[i]on	Abstract noun	opin-[i]on, domin-[i]on
-on	Gk. -on	Noun, (in Chem.) a metalloid	bor-on, silic-on
-one	Romance -one	Noun, large, augmentative	tromb-one
-oon	Romance -on, -one	Noun, large, augmentative	ball-oon, bass-oon
-or	Lat. -or	Noun, denoting masc. gender	auth-or, administrat-or (Used especially in legal phraseology to denote the active agent in opposition to -ee the objective agent. Also after t or s : as doct-or, spons-or.)
-or	Lat. -or	Adj. (comparative deg.)	superi-or, inferi-or
(The suffix is added to the first case of the positive which ends in -i.)
-or	Ital. -or	Noun, a man	sign-or
-[o]ry	Lat. -[o]ri-um	Noun, a dépôt	dormit-[o]ry
-[o]ry	Lat. -[o]ri-us, &c	Adj., pertaining to, province of	orat-[o]ry, sanat-[o]ry
-ose	Lat. -os-us	Adj., full of	verb-ose, joc-ose
-[os]ity	Lat. -[os]itas	Abstract noun	pomp-[os]ity (see -ocity)
-ot	Fr. -ot, -otte	Noun, dim.	ball-ot, chari-ot
-ot	Lat. -ot-a, -ot-es	Noun, characterises a person	patri-ot, idi-ot

-our	Lat. -or thro' the Fr. -eur ..	Abstract noun ..	val-our, hon-our
-ous	Lat. -os-us ..	Adj., (in Chem.) an acid with less oxygen than -ic denotes ..	nitr-ous, sulphur-ous
-ous	Lat. -os-us ..	Adj., full of ..	fam-ous, delici-ous
-ous	Lat. [a, e, i, o]x ..	Adj., full of ..	aud[aci]-ous, fer[oci]ous
(Used also in many modern formations: as joy-ous, wondr-ous, &c.)
-over	Eng. ofer ..	Adv., besides ..	more-over
-ple	Lat. pli-co, to fold ..	Adj., folded ..	tri-ple (3-fold)
-r	Eng. -r-e ..	Gen. suffix preserved in the pronouns ..	he-r, the-l-r, ou-r, you-r
-r	Romance -r-e; Lat. -r-us ..	Adj. ..	clea-r, tende-r
-r	Lat. -[a]r-is ..	Adj. ..	famili-[a]r, regul-[a]r
-r	Lat. -[a, e]r-is ..	Noun ..	ae-r, cinde-r
-re	Fr. -re; Lat. -rum ..	Noun, instrument, place set apart ..	theat-re, scept-re
-re	Fr. -[aig]-re; Lat. -r-us ..	Adj. ..	meag-re, pu-re
-red	Eng. rēd (coun-sel) ..	Proper name ..	Mild-red, Etheld-red
-red	Eng. hrēth (active) ..	Noun, active, operative ..	hat-red, kind-red
-rel	Fr. -[e]r with -el, dim. ..	Adj., dim., depreci-ative ..	mong-rel, dogg-rel
-erel	Fr. -er with -el, dim. ..	Adj., dim., depreci-ative ..	cock-erel, hogg-erel
-ric	Eng. -ric ..	Noun, dominion, jurisdiction ..	bishop-ric
-ry	Romance -rie ..	Noun, collective ..	fai-ry, poult-ry
-ry	Lat. -ri-a ..	Noun, dépôt ..	vest-ry, armo-ry
-s	Eng. ..	The ordinary plural of nouns ..	boy-s, tree-s

(Nouns ending in -ch (soft), -sh, -s, -x, add -es: as church-es, dish-es, glass-es, fox-es. To these add one word in -z, topaz-es.)

-s	Modern Eng. ..	Adjectival noun (plural number) ..	good-s, sweet-s
-s	Eng. ..	The 3 sing. pres. Ind. of verbs ..	love-s, hear-s

(Verbs ending in -ch (soft), -sh, -s, -x, -z, add -es: as reach-es, wish-es, guess-es, box-es, whizz-es. Till the 11th century it was -th.)

-s	Eng. -es ..	Possessive case of nouns	man-'s, men-'s
-[s]'	Eng. -es (sing.) ..	Possessive plu. after -s	boys', girls'

(This sign (') arose out of a blunder. Our old grammarians supposed the possessive -s was a contraction of his, and wrote it accordingly 's). The plu. (') is a double blunder, as -es is not a plu. gen. term.

-saur or	{ Gk. sauros }	A prehistoric reptile
-saurus	{ (a lizard) }	of the lizard race ..	See pp. 1050-1053
-scape	Eng. -scape ..	Noun, view ..	land-scape
-[s]h	Eng. ..	Adjectival noun ..	Engli-[s]h, Iri-[s]h folk
-ship	Eng. -scape ..	Noun, tenure, pos-session, office ..	lord-ship, guardian-ship
-ship	Eng. -scape ..	Noun, form, state, condition ..	hard-ship, friend-ship
-ship	Eng. -scape ..	Noun, skill, art ..	horseman-ship, work-man-ship
-[s]ion	Lat. -[s]io gen. -ion-is ..	Noun, act, state ..	confu-[s]ion, ascen-[s]ion

-sis	Gk. -sis..	.. Noun, process, its result	analy-sis, synthe-sis
-sm	Gk. -sm-os	.. Noun, system, act ..	method-[i]sm, spa-sm
-some	Germ. -sam	.. Adj., full of, containing	glad-some, light-some
-son	Eng. sun-u	.. Added to proper names	John-son, Dick-son
-[s]or	Lat. -[s]or	.. Noun, agent ..	spoon-[s]or, succes-[s]or (or is especially used in legal phraseology to denote the active party in opposition to -ce the object of an action. It is also used after -t or -s.)
-[so]ry	Lat. -[so]ri-us ..	Adj., full of, able to ..	'illu-[so]ry, persua-[so]ry
-[so]ry	Lat. -[so]ri-um	Noun, a dépôt ..	sen-[so]ry, insen-[so]ry
-ss	Fr. -[e]ss-e, -és..	Abstract noun ..	progr-[e]ss, distr-[e]ss
-st	Gk. -st-és	.. Noun, agent ..	antagon-[i]st, art-[i]st
-ster	Eng. -ster	.. Noun, trade, skill ..	malt-ster, spin-ster
(ster does not denote one of the female sex; it is added to any gender, and means trade, pursuit, or the skill which results therefrom: thus "malt-ster" is one whose trade or pursuit is malting, "spinster" is one whose pursuit is spinning.)
-[st]ic	Gk. -[st]ik-os ..	Adj., active quality ..	sophi-[st]ic, sarca-[st]ic
-[st]ical	Lat. -al with Gk. -[st]ik-os	Adj., active quality ..	sophi-[st]ic-al
-[str]ess	Fr. -[str]ess-e ..	Noun, a female ..	song-[str]ess, mi[st]r-ess
[s]ure	Lat. -[s]ur-a ..	Abstract noun ..	mea-[s]ure, plea-[s]ure
-sy	Lat. -ca, -ti-a ..	Noun, an art, office ..	minstrel-sy, embas-sy (-cy is added to Abstract nouns denoting rank, office, as aristocra-cy.)
-sy	Eng. -s'-eye ..	Added to certain plants	dai-sy
-[s]y	Gk. -sia	Noun, a group, a genus	euphra-[s]y
-[s]y	Romance -[s]ie	Abstract noun ..	courte-[s]y, here-[s]y
-sy	Romance ..	Adj. ..	tip-sy, trick-sy
-t	Eng. -ed, -d, -t	Past part. ..	clef-t, spel-t, dream-t
(In Ang.-Sax., verbs ending in o, h, p, s, t, x, took -t instead of -d in the past and past part. In modern Eng. the -t is limited to verbs ending in f, l, ld, m, p.)
-t	Eng. -ed, -d, -t	Participial noun ..	gif-t, shoo-t
-t	Eng. -t ..	Noun ..	lef-t (the lef or weak hand)
-t	Romance -t, -te	Participial noun ..	habi-t, profit
-t	Lat. -t-a, -s gen. -t-is ..	Noun ..	aun-t, ar-t, moun-t
-t	Lat. -t-um	Participial noun ..	deb-t, rescrip-t
-t	Lat. -t-us	Adj. ..	hones-t, modes-t
-t	Gk. -t-és	Noun, agent ..	prophe-t, com-et (one who wears long hair)
-te	Gk. -t-és	Noun, agent ..	hypocri-te, athle-té
-teen	Eng. -tyme	Numeral, ten added ..	four-teen, six-teen
-teenth	Eng. -thet, -theoth-e	Ordinal adj., ten added	four-teenth, six-teenth
(-th converts nouns to adjectives: as "wide" wid-th, "hale" heal-th "long" leng-th, "deep" dep-th, "broad" bread-th.)
-[t]er	Lat. -[t]r-um ..	Noun, instrument ..	coul-[t]er, canis-[t]er
-[t]er	Romance ..	Noun, instrument ..	bols-[t]er, cas[t]-er
-[t]er	Eng. -[t]er-e	Noun, agent ..	wri[t]-er, figh[t]-er
-[t]er	Eng. -[t]or	Verbal noun ..	laugh-[t]er, slaugh-[t]er
-[te]ry	Lat. -[te]ri-um	Noun, condition, state	mys-[te]ry, mas-[te]ry
-[te]ry	Lat. -[te]ri-um	Noun, dépôt, place } set apart ..	baptis-[te]ry, monas-[te]ry
-th	Eng. -th	Converts adj. to abstract nouns ..	tru-th, dep-th
-th	Eng. -t-a, -th-e	Ordinal adj. ..	six-th, seven-th
-[ti]a	Lat. -[ti]a	Noun of multitude ..	mili[ti]-a

-[tl]c	Gk. -[ti]k-os ..	Noun, active ..	here[tl]-c, cri[ti]-c
-[ti]cal	Lat. -al with Gk. -k-os ..	Adj., active quality ..	here[ti]-cal, cri[ti]-cal
-[ti]on	Lat. -[ti]o gen. -on-is..	Noun, act of, state ..	mo[ti]-on, no[ti]-on
-[ti]on	Lat. -[ti]o gen. -on-is..	Noun, a thing made ..	po[ti]-on, lo[ti]-on
-[t]or	Lat. -[t]or ..	Noun, agent ..	audi[t]-or, fac[t]-or
-[t]re	Lat. -[t]ri-um, -[t]ri-a ..	Noun, instrument ..	scep-[t]re, mi-[t]re
-[to]ry	Lat. -[to]ri-um ..	Noun, dépôt, place for	lava-[to]ry, dormi-[to]ry
-[to]ry	Lat. -[to]ri-us ..	Adj., active quality ..	inflamma-[to]ry, purga-
-[tr]ess	Fr. -[tr]ess-e ..	Noun, female agent ..	instruc[tr]-ess, en-
-[tr]ix	Lat. -[tr]ix ..	Noun, female agent ..	execu[tr]-ix, testa[tr]-ix
-tude	Lat. -tud-o ..	Abstract noun ..	forti-tude, grati-tude
-[t]ure	Lat. -[t]ur-a ..	Abstract noun ..	na-[t]ure, adven-[t]ure
-[t]ure	Lat. -[t]ur-a ..	Concrete noun ..	pic-[t]ure, aper-[t]ure
-ty	Eng. -tig ..	Multiple of ten ..	six-ty, seven-ty
-[u]ce	Lat. -[u]ca, -[u]cti-o ..	Noun, outcome, pro-	lett-[u]ce, prod-[u]ce
-duce	Lat. -duc-o ..	Verb, to lead ..	intro-duce, re-duce
-ule	Lat. -[c]ul-us, -a ..	Noun, dim. ..	pust-ule, spher-ule
-[u]nd	Lat. -[u]nd-us ..	Gerundial noun ..	joc-[u]nd, rubic-[u]nd
-ure	Lat. -ura ..	Noun, relating to the	agricult-ure, horti-
-ure	Fr. œuvre (work)	Noun, manipulated ..	man-ure, manufact-ure
-uret	Lat. ur-o (to burn) ..	Noun, (in Chem.) de-	notes a combination
-ve	Lat. -v-us ..	Noun ..	with an inflammable
-ive	Lat. -iv-us ..	Noun, inclination ..	or electro-positivo
(v, often changed into "f": as sa-fe , bailiff , &c.)
-ward	Eng. -weard ..	Adj., tending to ..	north-ward, south-ward
-wards	Eng. -weardes..	Adv., in the direction	home-wards, heaven-
-ways	Eng. -wis ..	Adv., in the direction	wards
-wig	Lat. -uca; Fr. uque ..	Noun, formed ..	side-ways or side-wise
-wise	Eng. -wis ..	Adv., in the direction	perri-wig
-worth	Eng. worth (land)	In names of places, a	length-wise, breadth-
-wright	Eng. wirht-a or wyrht-a	farm land belong-	wise
-y	Eng. -ig ..	ing to ..	Words-worth, Isle-
-y	Eng. -ig ..	Noun, a workman or	worth
-y	Gk. -ia ..	wright ..	ship-wright, wheel-
-y	Lat. and Gk. -ia	Noun, dim. ..	wright
-y	Eng. -ig ..	Adj., of the nature	Nell-y, Johnn-y
-y	Gk. -ia ..	of, like ..	snow-y, frost-y
-y	Lat. and Gk. -ia	Noun, denoting a	astronom-y, homeo-
-y	Eng. -ig ..	science ..	path-y
-y	Gk. hulé , wood	Abstract nouns ..	charit-y, modest-y
-yl, -yle	Eng. -[gu]ere ..	Noun, an agent ..	law-[y]er, i.e. lagu-cre
-yl, -yle	Gk. hulé , wood	Noun, the substance	benzo-yle = bon-zoil ,
-yl, -yle	Gk. hulé , wood	from which any-	meth-yl
-yl, -yle	Gk. hulé , wood	thing is made

ERRORS OF SPEECH.

AND OF

SPELLING.

ā, fate;	ǎ, about;	ā, father;	th, the.
ē, need;	ě, betray;	ē, Gk. long e;	rh, thin.
ī, ivy;	ǐ, ill;	ō, Gk. long o;	j, jest.
ō, no;	ǒ, on;	ōw, grow;	" , the stronger of
ū, unit;	ǔ, us;	ōw, now;	two accents.

A- (Old Eng. adverbial prefix) denoting "away," "without," "on," &c.

A- (prefixed to verbs) intensifies, as "awake," "arouse."

A- (Greek prefix) negative; an before vowels.

A (Article) is An with the n omitted, before words beginning with a consonant or aspirated h. Exceptions: It stands before one, as "many a one," before Eu- and u= yu, as a eulogy, a u-nit, and not before words beginning with h, unless the accent is on the first syllable, as a his'tory, an histo'rian.

Ab- The Latin preposition, used as a prefix, drops the "b" before m and v; and adds "s" before c and t.

"AB" (prefix) means diminution,

Removal, or complete exclusion;

'Tis "A" before both m and v,

And "ABS" before both c and t.

Abattoir, ab.at.twor', a public slaughter-house (French).

French abattre, to knock down (a battre).

Abbassides, Ab'.bas.sides. A family of caliphs. (Double b and s.)

Abbas, Mahomet's uncle; -sides, -ides (patronymic) descendants of.

Abbé, ab.bay. French clerical title given for scholarship.

Abbot, feminine abbess. Head of an abbey or nunnery.

Abbreviate, ab.bree'-vī.ate not a.bree'-vī.ate. (Double b.)

Abbreviation, ab.bree'-vī.a"-shun. A shortened form.

Latin ab breviāre, to shorten.

Abet, abett-ed, abett-ing, abett-or (Rule i.)

Abhor, ab.kor' not a.bor'; abhorr'-er, abhorr'-ence, abhorr'-ent, abhorr'-ently, abhorred (2 syl.), abhorring (Rule i.)

Abide, past tense abode, past participle abided.

Ablative, ab'lä.tiv not ab.lay'.tiv, a case in grammar.

-able (Latin suffix -bilis, preceded by a). Added to adjectives.

The "a" is merely a copula. In words derived from the first conjugation the copulative vowel is a, otherwise it is i.

Abnormal, ab.nor'.mal, out of rule, irregular.

Latin ab norma, not according to the square [used by builders].

Abacadabra, ab'-räh-käh.dab"-räh not ab'-ä-kä.dab"-räh.

Abridgment (verbs in -äge drop "e" before -ment). Rule xix.

Abrotonum, a-bröt'.ö.num, often misspelt abrotanum.

Greek abrotōnōn, the immortal plant, so called from its great antiseptic qualities (a brotos, not mortal).

Abstract, ab'.stract (noun), ab.stract' (verb). Rule l.

Abuse, a.buce' (noun), a.buze (verb). Rule li.

Abut', abutt-ed, abutt-ing, but abutment (Rule i.)

Ac- (prefix). Latin preposition ad before "c."

-ac (suffix), Greek -ak-os, Latin -ac-us, "possessed of," "of."

Acacia, a.kash'.i.ah not a.kay'.sher, nor a.kaze'jer.

Latin acācia, a thorn. (The thorny plant.)

Academics, ak'.ä-dem".iks. Disciples of Plato.

Because he taught in the Academy, or grounds of Acadēmus.

Academy, a.kad'.è.my not ak'-ä.dèm-y. (The "e" is long in Gk.)

Greek acadēmos, Latin acadēmia.

Acalephæ, ak'-ä.lec"-fē. The "medūsæ," as sea-nettles, &c.

Greek akalēphē, a nettle.

Acarus, plu. acari (Latin), ak'.ä.rüs, ak'.ä.ri, mites, &c.

Acarides, a-kar'ry.deez, or acar'idæ. The acari family.

Greek akari and -ides (patronymic) the acari family.

Acatalectic, a.kat'-ä.lek"-tik not a.kat'-a.lep"-tik.

Accede (not one of the three which end in -ceed.) Rule xxvii.

Latin ac [ad] cedo, to go. (N.B.—"exceed," "proceed," "succeed").

Accelerate, ak.sel'.c.rate. To hasten. (Double c, one l.)

Latin ac [ad] celerāre to hasten to [the end].

Accent, ak'.sent (noun), ak.sent' (verb). Rule l.

Accessible, not accessable (Lat. ac [ad] cedēre, see -able).

Accessory, ak'.sēs.sö.ry not ak.ses'.sö.ry (Rule lv.)

Law Lat. as [ad] cessorius, one who goes to or joins another [in crime].

Accidence, elements of grammar; Accidents, mischances.

Accipitres, ak.sip'.i.treez. Such birds as hawks, vultures, eagles, &c.

Latin accipiter, plural accipitres, hawks.

Accclimate, ak.kli'.mate not ak'.kli.mët.

Acceli'matise, not acclimatize; acclimatisa'tion (R. xxxi.)

Latin ac [ad] clima [habituated] to a climate.

Acclivity, ak.kliv'.x.tj not a.kliv'.x.tj. A slope.

Latin ac [ad] clivitas, a bending upwards.

Accom'modate, accom'moda'tion (double c and m).

Latin ac [ad] commodare, to lend help to one.

Accomplice, ak.kom'.plis not a.kom'.plis. A confederate.

Latin ac [ad] complico, to fold up with one [in mischief].

Accomplish, ak.kom'.plish not a.kom'.plish. To finish.

Latin ac [ad] compleo, to complete entirely.

Accord, ak.kord' not a.kord'. To agree with one, to award.

Latin ac [ad] corda, [hearts] to hearts.

Accordingly, ak.kord'.ing.ly not a.kor'.ding.lî.

Accordion, ak.kord'.i.on not a.kor'.de.on. An instrument which plays in accord with others.

Accost, ak.kost' not a.kost'. To address another.

Latin ac [ad] costa, to draw near to one's side [to speak].

Account, ak.kount' not a.kount'. A bill; to verify.

Latin ac [ad] computo. A mercantile term, meaning "the particulars of a bill set forth," and hence "to state particulars." "Compt" is a contraction of computo (comp't).

Accountant, accountable (1st conj., computare, R. xxiv., xxv.)

Accoutrements, ak.koo'.tre.ments. Military equipments. (Fr.)

Accredit, ak.kred'.it not a.kred'.it. To give trust to one.

Latin ac [ad] credo, to give credit to one.

-ace (suffix of nouns) Latin c or t, preceded by "a."

Thus menace (Lat. minaciæ), preface (Lat. præfatio),

It means "of the nature of," "pertaining to."

-aceæ (In botany) denotes an "order:" as amaranth-aceæ.

-aceous, -acious (suffix, of adjectives), "of the nature of," "appearance of," as saponaceous (Lat. sapo, sapon[is], soap).

Acephala, a.sef'.ä.lä.h. In Geology, molluscs without a head.

Greek a kephälê, without a head [as oysters].

Ache, ake, pain. Hake, a hook, a fish.

"Ache," Greek achos, pain. "Hake," Old Eng., hacca, a hook. The jaw of the hake is like a hook.

Achores, a.kö'.reez not ak'.ö.reez. Pustules on the head.

Greek achôr, an ulcer on the head with an inflamed base.

Achne, often misspelt acne, ak'.ne. A pimple on the face.

Greek achnê, surface foam.

-acity added to Abstract Nouns: as audacity. See -aco.

Acknowledgment, ak.knōl'.ledg.ment not ak.knōw'.ledg.ment.

All verbs ending in -dge drop the "e" before -ment (Rule xviii.)

-acle (Latin [-a]culum), "diminutive;" as tabernacle, a little wooden house.

Acme, ak.mēy (Greek). The highest point, the crisis of a disease. It means "the edge," hence the Greek proverb, ἐπὶ ξυροῦ ἀκμῆς (on the razor's edge), that is, "at the critical moment."

Acne, see Achne. Hackney, a horse kept for hire.

Aconite, ak'.ō.nite. The herb Wolfsbane.

Greek akoniton, the plant without dust, meaning, it will grow on rocks where there is not even dust for a soil. It is called "Wolfsbane" because meat steeped in its juice was used by our forefathers as a lure to poison wolves.

Acorus, a'.ko.rus. "Sweet flag," &c.

Greek a kōrēo, to stop diarrhoea, for its astringent properties. Called "flag," because its flowers resemble a flag curled by wind.

Acotyledon, a'.kōt-y.lee"-dōn, plu., acotyle'dons, or acotyle'dōna.

Plants without husks or seed-lobes for their seed.

Greek a kotyledōn, without husks (like ferns, mosses, lichens, &c.)

Acoustics, a.kōw'.stīks not a.coo'.stīks. Science of sounds.

Greek akouō, to hear.

Acquit, acquitt-al, acquitt-ance, acquitt-ed, acquitt-ing (R. i.)

Acrogenous (plants), a.krodg'.ē.nūs not ak'.ro.jee".ne.us.

Greek akro gēnos, growth upwards. Plants, like tree-ferns, which grow tall, without increasing much in bulk. Plants which grow in bulk, not height, are called amphigens.

Acroleine, ak.krō'.lē.ēn. Acrid fumes from distilled oils.

Latin acre olei, acrid-product of oil.

Acrolith, ak'.krō.lith. A statue partly in stone or marble.

Greek akrō-lithos, stone extremities (as head, arms, legs, &c.)

Act, a deed. Hacked, hakt, mutilated.

Latin acta, things done. "Hack," Old Eng., hacc[an], to cut.

Actæa, ak.tæe'ah. The snake-root genus of plants.

Greek a ktaō, preventive of death [from the bite of snakes]. Called "herb Christopher," because St. Christopher was invoked to ward off evil spirits, which often assumed the form of snakes (Gen. iii.)

Actinia, plu. actiniæ, ak.tin'.ē.ah, ak.tin'.ē. Sea-anemonēs, &c.

Greek aktis, a ray, because their numerous tentacles extend like rays from the circumference of the mouth.

Actinocrinites, ak'-tin-o.kri"-nites, not ak'-tīn.ok"-rī-nites. A subgenus of extinct "actinia."

Greek aktis krinon, ray-lily (radiated lily-shaped animals).

Actor, fem. actress; not acter as it is a Latin word (R. xxxvii.)

-acy (suffix) Greek [-a]k-os (nouns) "rank," "office;" as papacy.

-acy (suffix) Latin -[a]sia, -tia (nouns) "state," "condition:"
celibacy.

Ad- (Latin preposition) to, for. As a prefix it intensifies, or denotes "approach," "juncture," "addition." It changes its consonant in sympathy with the liquids, and with c and s, p and f, g and t.

"AD" (prefix) means augmentation,
Juncture, or approximation;
But when preceding c, f, g,
A liquid, or a p, s, t,
These letters it prefers to d.

Ad infinitum (Latin) ad in.fī.nī.tum. Without end, for ever.

Ad nauseam (Latin) ad nau'.sē.am. To disgust, to nausea.

Ad valorem (Latin) ad va.lō.rem. A tax in proportion to the market value of the things taxed.

Observe the terminations of these last three words.

Adage, ad'.adje, a proverb. Adagio, a.day'.jě.o not a.dadg'.ě.o.

"Adage," Latin adāgium. "Adagio," Ital., slow time (in Music).

Adamantean, ad'-ā.man.tēe"-an not ad'-ā.man"-tē-ān.

Latin adamantēus, hard or strong as adamant.

Adamic, Ad'.ām.īk not A.dam'.īk, as "The Adamic Covenant."

Adansonia, A'-dan.sō"-ně-āh. The baobab or Monkey-bread-tree.

So called by Linnæus in comp. to Michel Adanson, a French botanist.

Adapis, ad'.ā.pīs. An extinct animal resembling a hedgehog.

This was the animal which Cuvier worked out from a stray bone or two by his knowledge of comparative anatomy.

Add, to join. Had, past tense of "have." Aid, help.

"Add," Latin addo. "Had," Old Eng. hæfde, p. of habban, to have.

"Aid," ade, French aider, to assist; Latin adjuvāre.

Addendum, plu. addenda (Latin). Things to be added.

Addicted, ad.dict'.ed not a.dict'.ed. Given up to the habit.

Latin ad-dictus, given in bondage to [a creditor or habit].

Addition, ad.dish'.on not a.dish'.on; addit'ional (double d).

Address, ad.dress' not a.dress'. To speak to, to give the due title.

French adresser (one d), but in English the d is doubled.

-ade (Lat. at-us), termination of Nouns: "state of," as blockade.

-ade, as a termination of Verbs: "act of," as cannonade.

-adæ (Greek patronymic -idēs or -iadēs), "descent from," "of the family of"; generally -idæ as canidæ.

Adephagans, a.def'.ā.ganz. A tribe of voracious insects.

Greek adēphāgos, voracious.

Adept, a.dept' not ad'.ept. One skilled in something.

Latin adeptus, one who has discovered [the philosopher's stone].

- Adiantum, ad' i.an"-tum. "Maiden-hair" and other ferns.
Greek adianton, dry. So called because rain does not wet it.
- Adieu, ă.de'u, Good b'ye. Ado, a.doo, fuss.
"Adieu," French à Dieu, [I commend you] to God.
"Ado," Old Eng. verb ado'n. The noun means a fuss, as if there was much to do.
- Adipic (acid), ad' i.pik not a.dip'ik. Fat procured by acid.
Latin adeps, adipis, fat.
- Adipocere, ad' i.po.seer. A substance, called "grave wax."
Latin adiposa cēra, fatty wax (found in cemeteries).
- Adipose, ad' i.poce not ad' i.poze. Full of fat, fatty.
Latin adiposus, containing fat.
- Adjournment, ad-jurn'.ment not a-jurn'.ment. Postponement.
French ajournement, deferred to another day (four, a day).
- Adjure, ad-jure' not a.jure'. To bind by oath.
Latin ad-jūro, to make one swear to [what he says].
- Adjust, ad.just' not a.just'; adjustment, ad.just'.ment.
Latin ad-justus [righted] to what is correct.
- Adjutant, ad' jū.tant. (This word is incorrect in quantity.)
Latin ad-jūtant, one who aids.
- Adjutor, female adjutrix, ad.jū'.trix (R. xlv.)
- Admin'istrato, female admin'istratrix (Latin) R. xlv.
- Admit', admitt'-ance, admitt'-able also admiss'-ible, admitt'-ed, admitt'-er, admitt'-ing (Rule i.) Admittable (R. xxiii.)
- Adonis, A.dō'.nis. The plant called "Pheasant's eye."
The flower of the "corn Adonis" is poetically supposed to have been reddened by the blood of the boy Adonis dropping on it.
- Ad'ulator (Latin), not ad'ulater (Rule xxxvii.)
- Advertised, ad'.vēr.tizd (in a newspaper).
ad.vēr'.tizd (by private letter).
- Advertisement, ad-ver'.tiz-ment, not ad'-vēr.tize"-ment.
- Advertiser, ad'-vēr.ti-zēr; not advertiser (R. xxxi.)
Latin ad verito, to turn [public attention] to something.
(Advertiser is not a Latin word, but an English coinage, and hence the suffix is er, not or (Rule xxxvii.)
- Advice (noun), advise (verb). Latin ad viso, to go to see (R. li.)
- Advisable, ad.vī'.zā.b'l (Not of the 1st Lat. conj., R. xxiii.)
- Adynamic, a'.dy-nām"-ik, not dynamic or strong.
- Adytum, ad'.y.tum, not a.dy'.tum (Gk. adūton, Holy of Holies).
- Ædile, ē'.dile. A Rom. magistrate who had charge of the public buildings. (Lat. ædes, sing. "a house," plu. "a temple").
- Ægean (Sea) E.jee'.an (Sea). The Archipelago.

- Ægicerea, e'-jī.ser"ry-āh. Order of plants, genus Ægiceras.
Greek aigos kéras, goat's horn. Ægicera, ē.jī's.ē.rah.
- Ægilops, ē'-jīl.ōps. A sore in the corner of the eye.
Greek aigos ops, a goat's eye. Goats being subject to the disease.
- Æneid, E.nee'.īd, not E'.nē.īd. Virgil's epic about Æne'as.
-īd (a patronymic) meaning "pertaining to," "concerning."
- Æolian, E.ō'.lī.ān. It ought to be E.ol'.ī.an (o short).
- Æolic, e.ōl'.īk, not e.ō'.lik. Belonging to Æōl'ia (Greece).
- Ærugo, e.rū'.go. (Lat.) The green "rust" of bronze ornaments.
- Æthal or Ethal, ēth'.al. (A word coined by Chevreul.)
It consists of the first syllables of Eth [er] and Al [cohol].
- Æsthetics, ee.ṛhet'.īks. The philosophy of good taste.
Greek aisthētikos [beauty as it is] appreciated by the senses. (The e of the second syllable is long in Greek.)
- Æthogen, ēth.ō.jën. An intensely luminous compound.
Greek aithōn gēnō. I produce luminosity.
- Æthusa, ē.ṛhū'.zāh. A genus of plants including "Fools' parsley."
Greek aithousa, burning hot. The leaves being very acrid.
- Ætites, more correctly Ätites, a'-ē.tī'-teez. Hollow stones.
Greek artos, an eagle. Supposed to form part of eagles' nests.
- Aer- (prefix). All words with this prefix (except a.e'.ri.al) have the accent on the first letter. For example:—
- | | | |
|-------------------|---------------------|-----------------------|
| a'erate (3 syll.) | a'erog"raphy | a'eronaut'ics |
| a'era"ted | a'erolite (4 syll.) | a'eropho"bia |
| a'era"tion | a'erol"ogy | a'erophytes (4 syll.) |
| a'erifica"tion | a'eroman"cy | a'eros"copy |
| a'erify | a'erom"eter | a'erostat'ics |
| a'ero-dynam'ics | a'eronaut | a'erosta"tion |
- Affair, af'-fair not a.fair', business; plu., transactions in general.
French affaire; Latin af [ad] facēre to do [something].
- Affect, af-fect' not a.fect'; affec'ted; affec'tion (double f).
Latin af [ad] fectus, to act on [one].
- Affettuoso, af-fet'-too.o"-so. (Ital. term in Music.) With feeling.
- Affianced, af.jī'.anst not a.jī'.anst. Betrothed.
Latin af [ad] fido, to trust to one's good faith.
- Affidavit, af'-fī.da"-vit. ('Davy is a vulgarism.)
Old law Latin affidāre, to give an oath of fidelity.
- Affiliated, af.jīl'-i-a-ted not a.jīl'-i-a-ted (double f, one l).
Latin af [ad] filius, [to assign] a child to one.
- Affirm, af.firm' not a.firm'; affirma'tion (double f).
Latin af [ad] firmāre, to make [something] firm to [another].
- Affix (verb), af'fix (noun). A postfix (Rule 1.)
Latin af [ad] fixo, to fix to [something].

Afflatus, af-flay'-tus not a-flay'-tus. Inspiration.

Latin af [ad] flatus, breathed into one [by divine inspiration].

Afflicted, af-flik'-ted not a-flik'-ted; afflic'tion (double f).

Latin af [ad] fligo, to dash against one.

Afford, af-ford' not a-ford'. To be able to bear the expense.

French afforer; Latin af [ad] forum, according to market-price.

Affright, af-fright' not a-fright'. To startle with fear.

Old Eng. afryht changed to afryht' (the g is interpolated).

Affront, af-frunt' not a-frunt'; affronted (double f).

French affronter; Lat. af [ad] frontem [to insult one] to his face.

A fortiori (Lat.), a for.she.o'ri. For a still greater reason.

Afraid, a-fraid' not af-fraid. Filled with fear.

Old Eng. afærd changed to afærd' ("afæard'" is the older).

Afresh, a-fresh' not af-fresh'. Again, anew, recently.

Old Eng. afersc changed to afresc (c equals ch).

Aft (Old Eng. æft), behind. Haft (Old Eng. hæft), a handle.

Ag- (prefix) is the Lat. prep. ad before "g."

Agagite (The) Ag'.a.gite. Haman is so called (Esth. iii. 1).

Agalmatolite, a'-gal.măt"-ō-lite. A clay for statuary.

Greek agalmătōs lithos, stone for images.

Again, a.gen' not a.gāne. (Old Eng. agen.)

Agama, plu. agamas, ag'.ā.măh, &c. A species of lizard. The adjective is ag'amoid, as "agamoid lizards."

Agama, plu. agamæ, ag'.ā.mee. Flowerless plants. The adjective is ag'amous, same as cryptogamic, q.v. All the species, &c., are the agam'idæ or "ag'ama" family.

Greek a gāmos, without sexual organs.

Ag'amī, plu. ag'āmis. The gold-breasted Trumpeter.

Agapanthus, ag'-ă.pan"-rhūs. The African blue lily.

Greek agapētōs anthōs, the lovely flower.

Agape, ag'.ă.pee, a love-feast. Agape, a.gape, wonder-struck.

"Agape," Greek agapē, brotherly love.

"Agape," Old Eng. agedp, open-mouthed with amazement.

Agapemone, ag'-a.pem"-ō-ne. Love's abode.

Greek agapē mōnē, Love's mansion.

Agaric, ag'.ă.r.ĭk. A genus of fungi.

Greek agărikon, fungus; from Agăria, a river of Sarmatia.

Agathophyllum, ag'-ă-ŧhō.fil"-lum. Clove nutmeg of Madagascar.

Greek agăthon phullon, the good leaf.

Agathotes, a.gath'.ō.teez. One of the gentian family.

Greek agathōtes, goodness (from its medical virtues).

Agave, a.gă'.və not ag.ăv'. The American aloë.

Greek agauē, splendid [plant].

-age (French suffix), "state of:" as pupilage.

-age (Lat. agēre) "the act of:" as tillage.

-age (Celt. fulness), added to collective nouns: as herbage.

Agen'dum, plu. agen'da (Lat.) Mem. of "things to be done."

Ageratum, a-jē'ră.tūm not a.jē.ra'.tum (Bot.) A flower.

Greek agērāton, exempt from old age. Properly, "Everlastings."

Agglomerate, ag.glom'-e-rate not a.glom'-ē-rate (double g, one m).

Lat. ag [ad] glōmerāre, to wind into a ball (glomus, a clew of thread).

Agglutinate, ag.glu'-tī-nate not a.glu'-tī-nate. To glue together.

Lat. ag [ad] glutīnāre, to glue together (gluten, glutinis, glue).

Aggrandise, ag'.grūn.dize not a.gran'.dize. To exalt.

Aggrandisement, ag-gran'-diz-ment not ag'-gran.dize"-ment.

Latin ag [ad] grandesco, to make larger and larger (Rule xxxi.)

Aggressive, ag.gress'-iv; aggress'ion, aggressor (double g and s).

Latin ag [ad] gressio, a going against. ("Aggressor," Rule xxxvii.)

Aggrieve, ag.greev' not a.greev'. To do wrong to a person.

A hybrid word. Lat. ag [ad], French grever, to burden with taxes.

Agilia, a.jil'.ī.āh. Squirrels, dormice, and similar "Rodents."

Latin agilla, nimble creatures.

Agio, adg'.ī.o not a'.jē.o. The market difference between bank notes and current coin. Ago, a.gō'. Gone by.

"Agio," Ital. aggio, difference. "Ago," Old Eng. agdn, gone by.

Agitator (Latin), aj'.ī.ta'-tor not agitater. (Rule xxxvii.)

Agnail see Angnail.

Agnate, ag'.nate. Related on the father's side; Cognate, on the mother's.

Latin ag [ad] natus, born to [the same surname].

Agomphians, a.gom'-fī-anz. Rodents without grinders.

Greek a-gomphios, without a grinder.

Agora, ag'.ō.rāh. The Greek "forum."

Greek ageirō, to assemble; the place of assembly; the market-place.

Agree, agree-ing, agree-ment, agree-able, agree-ably, &c.

(Observe the double e is retained throughout.)

Agrimony, ag'.rī.mūn'.īj. A genus of field plants.

Greek agros mōnē, the field my abode.

Aide-de-camp, plu. aides-de-camp (French). A military officer.

A'.de.cong, plu. aid'.de.cong, sometimes aids.de.cong.

Aiguille, a.gweel (French). For boring holes in blasting.

Ail, to suffer. Ale, malt liquor. Hail, frozen rain. Hale, healthy.

"Ail," Old Eng. egl [an], to be in grief. "Ale," Old Eng. eala, ale.

"Hail," Old Eng. hagot or hægl, hail. "Hale," Old Eng. hæl, hearty.

Ailing, ailing, suffering. Hailing, hailing, hail falling.

Ain't, "am not," "is not," should be written "â'n't" (a contraction of am not, as not, "as" being the old form of is). Ar'n't is a contraction of are not. (Colloquial.)

Air (we breathe); Airs, plu., tricks of conceit. Are, ar, plu. of "am." Hair (of the head). Hare (game). Heir, air (of property). Here, in this place.

"Air," Latin aer, the atmosphere.

"Are," Norse, plural of the Old Saxon verb ic bed, thi bist, he býth.

"Hair," Old Eng., hær, hair "Hare," Old Eng. hara, a hare.

"Heir," Latin hæres, an heir. "Here," Old Eng. hēr, here, now.

Airless, without air. Hairless, without hair. Heirless, airless, without an heir.

Airy, adj. of air. Hairy, adj. of hair. Aerie or eyrie, an eagle's nest.

Aisle, ile (of a church) meaning "the wing;" isle, an island. French aisle, now aile; Latin ala, a wing. "Isle" (Lat.) insula.

Ajuga, a'jũ.gũy not a.joo'.gah. The plant called "Bugle."

Lat. a Jũga, averse to Juno; supposed to favour miscarriage.

Alaria, a.lair'-rẽ.ăh. A genus of sea-weeds, as "badderlocks, &c.

Latin ala, a wing. "Badder-locks" means "locks of Balder."

Albeit, awl.be'.it. Although, notwithstanding (Rule lviii.)

Albino, plu. albinos, al.bee'.nõ, al.bee'.noze (Rule xlii.)

Al Borak, al'Bo.rak'. The animal that carried Mahomet from the earth to the seventh heaven.

Arabic al borăka, the shining one.

Albucum, al.bũ'-kũm not al'.bũ.kum. The white daffodil.

Albugo, al.bũ'-go. A white speck on the cornŕa of the eye.

Albumen, al.bũ-mẽn not al'.bũ.men. White of egg.

Alcahest, al'.kũ.hes't (Arabic). The universal solvent.

Alcaid, al.kaid'; or alcayde, al.kay'.dẽ. (Spanish.)

Arabic al kadi, the governor [of a Spanish fortress].

Alcalde, al.kal'-de. A Spanish magistrate.

Arabic al kaldĩ, the judge, or justice of the peace. (It is a mistake to suppose the Alcayde and Alcalde are merely different spellings of the same officer.)

Alcedo (Latin), al.see'.dõ. The kingfisher genus of birds.

Alchemilla, al'-kẽ.mil"-lăh. The plant called "Ladies' mantle."

The "Alchemists' plant," being greatly prized by them.

Alchemy, al'.kẽ.me, not alchymy; alchemist, al'.kẽ.mist.

Arabic al kimia, the secret art. It is a mistake to suppose the word mixt Arabic and Greek,—as al, the; chuma, something poured out.

Alcohol, al'.kõ.hõl. The spirit of fermented liquors.

Arabic al kohol, the volatile substance.

Alcoholize, al'.kõ.hõ.lize not al.kõ'.hõ.lize; Al'cõhõliza"tion.

Alcorad, al.kõ-rad. Contrariety of light in planets. (Astrology).

Alcoran, see Alkoran. The Mohammedan Scriptures.

Alcoranes, al'-kõ.ray'-neez. The high slender turrets of mosques.

Alcyonite, al'.sĩ.õ.nite not al.sĩ'.õ.nite. A sponge-like fossil very common in chalk formations. (See below.)

Alcyon'ium, plu. alcyon'ia. Halcyon stones. Supposed at one time to have been used by kingfishers for their nests.

Greek alkūōn, a kingfisher. Alkūōnē, daughter of Æolus changed into a kingfisher. (With or without an initial h.)

Aldobaran, al.deb'-ā-rān. The "Bull's eye" in TAURUS.

Arabic al dābarān, the follower [of the Pleiades].

Alder (tree), ol'.der, not al'.der, nor awl'.der (Rule lviii.)

Old English aler, an alder-tree; Latin alnus.

Alderliest, al'-dēr.leef"-ēst. Best or oldest loved (2 Hen.VI.i.1.)

Alderman, ol'.dēr.man. A civil dignitary (Rule lviii.)

Alembek, a.lem'-bēk. A vessel used by alchemists.

Arabic al anbiq, the cup; Greek ambix, a cup.

Alethopteris, a.lee.rhop'-tēr-rīs. Fossil ferns (coal formations).

Greek alētho-ptēris, the true fern.

Aletris, al'.ē.tris not a.lee'.tris. A garden shrub.

Greek alētris, a miller; the plant being covered with "meal."

Alexicakon, a.lex'ik"-ā-kōn. A medicine.

Greek alexō kākōn, I drive out the evil thing.

Alexipharmic, a.lex'-ī.far"-mīk. Antidote of poison.

Greek alexō pharmākōn, I avert poison.

Alexipyretum, a.lex'-ī.pir"-rj-tum. A fever mixture.

Greek alexō pyrētōs, I drive off fever.

Algæ, al'.jee (Latin). Sea-weeds.

Alguazil, ālg'.wā.zeel'. A Spanish constable.

Arabic al wasil, the man in authority.

Alien, generally pronounced ā'.li.ēn. A foreigner (Rule lvii.)

Alienate, al'.ī.ē.nate; alienation, al'-ī.ē.nay"-shun.

Latin aliēno, to make another's; aliēnus, one of another country.

Alike. "Two" and "both" should not be used together with "alike;" as "The two are both alike;" say "The two are alike;" or "They are both alike;" or "The two are exactly alike."

Alike (adj.), meaning similar, always stands after its noun, as "The darkness and the light are both alike to Thee." (Ps. cxxxix. 12.)

Alike (adv.), means in a similar way, equally, as "Whether they shall both be alike good." (Ecc. xi. 6.)

Alima, al'ī.māh. A medicine to assuage "craving for food."
Greek a limos, antidote for hunger.

Aliment, al'ī.ment. Food. (Obs. only one l.)
Latin alimentum, verb ālo, to nourish.

Alimony, al'ī.mīn.ŷ. For a wife's separate maintenance.
Latin alimōnia, alimony. (Obs. The o is long in Latin.)

Alismaceæ, al'īss.may"-sē-e. "Water-plantains," &c.
Greek alisma, the water-plantain.
The suffix -cia or -cea means "of the same sort." (Gk. -kia, -kea.)

Alkahest, al'.kă.hest. The Universal Solvent.

Alkali, plu. alkalis, al'.kă.lī, al'.kă.līze. Soda, potash, &c.
Arabic al kali, the kali plant.

Alkaloid, al'.kă.loid. A substance analogous to an alkali.
The Greek -eidos (-id), like our -ish, is sometimes a diminutive.
Alkaloids are substances slightly alkaline.

Alkoran, al'.kō.răn not al.kō.ran. The Arab "Scriptures."
Arabic al Koran, the Koran. It is incorrect to say "The Alkoran."
"The Koran" means the Readings. We call our "Bible" The Writings (Scriptures).

All, awl, every one. Hall, hawl (of a house), a mansion.
"All," Old Eng. eall, or æl. "Hall," Old Eng. heall, a hall or mansion.

All. The perfect compounds of this word drop one l: as:— almighty already altogether almost although always

See Rule Iviii.

But when it is only agglutinated to another word, it preserves its double l: as all-wise, all-fours, all-saints.

All of them. In this and similar phrases "of" does not mean out of, but has an adverbial force, like the Latin ex in ex parte (partly), e duobus (two by two, twoly), &c. So all of them means "them wholly," "altogether." Both of them "them both-ly," or "both-together," the whole of it "it entirely," "in its entirety," &c.

Allantoic (acid), al.lan'.tō.ĭk not al'-lan.tō"-ĭk (see below).

Allantois, al.lan'-tō.iss. A membrane like a sausage in form.
Greek allantō-eikos, sausage-like.

Allay, al.lay', to mitigate. Alleÿ, al'lēÿ, a passage. Ally, al.lī, an associate.

"Allay," Old Eng. alecg [an], to lay down; French allegger.

"Alleÿ," French allée, a passage. "Ally," Latin al [ad] ligo, to tie to one.

Allege not alledge; allege-able (Verbs ending in -ge and -ce preserve the "e" before -able). Rules xx. and xxiii.

Latin al [ad] legere, to read an indictment against a person.

- Allegiance, al.lee'-jī.ance. Obedience due to an overlord.
French allégeance. Medieval Latin allegianſia (ad-legend).
- Allegro, al.lay'-grō (Ital. term in Music). Bright, sprightly.
- Alleviate, al.lee'-vī.ate not a.lee.vī.ate. To lessen a trouble.
Latin al [ad] leviāre, to lighten [a burden] to the bearer.
- Alley, plural alleys, not allies (Rule xlv.) (See Allay.)
French allée, a passage (verb aller, to go).
- Alliance, al.lī'-ance not a.lī.ance. Union by treaty or marriage Latin al [ad] ligo, to tie together [by treaty, &c.]
- Alliteration, al'.līt-ĕ.ray"-shun not a'.līt-e.ray"-shun. (One t.)
Latin al [ad] lītēra [words or lines made] to a letter.
- Allium, al'.lī.um (Latin). Garlic and similar plants.
- Allochroite, al.lok'-rō.ite. Iron garnet which is iridescent.
Greek allos chrōa, [exhibiting] different colours.
- Allocatur, al'.lō.kay"-tūr. Cost allowed in a law suit.
Latin al [ad] locātur, placed to one's credit.
- Allodium, al.lō'-dī.um. A free tenure, not held of an overlord.
Norse odel, a patrimonial estate; Medieval Latin allōdium.
- Allopathy, al.lop'-ă.rhĕ. Treatment of disease by antidotes.
HOMEOPATHY.—Treatment of disease by what causes it. "Like curing like," as curing a burn by hot fomentations.
- Allopathist, al.lop'-ă.rhĭst. One who practises allopathy.
Greek allos pathos, [medicine] different to the disease.
Homeopathy homoios pathos, [medicine] like the disease.
- Allophane, al'.lō.fain. A mineral which changes colour before the blowpipe.
Greek allos phain-ōmai, I appear of different [colours].
- Allot', allott'-er, allott'-ed, allott'-ing, allot'-ment. (Rule l.)
Medieval Latin al [ad] lotto, to place to your lot.
- Allow, al.lōw; allowance, al.lōw'.ance; allowable.
French allouer; Latin al [ad] locāre, to place to your share.
- Allude, al.lood'. To hint at, reference to.
Latin al [ad] ludo, to play towards one [with nods and other signs].
- Allusion. Verbs ending in -d, -de, -s, -se, change these terminations to -sion, instead of -tion. (Rule xxxiii.) This word should be employed only for vague and indirect references: thus, "Henry V. won the battle of Agincourt" is a positive statement, and a person ought not to say "the battle alluded to was fought in 1415," but the battle referred to.
- Allure, al.lure'; allurement, al.lure'.ment, To entice, &c.
Latin al [ad], French lurrer, to decoy.

Alluvium, plu. alluvia, al.lu'.vĭ.um, al.lu'.vi.ah.

Latin al [ad] luere, to wash to [the bank or shore].

Ally, plu. allies, al.lĭ, al.lĭze', allied (2 syl.), alli-ance, ally-ing.

Alley, al'.ley, a passage. Allay, al.lay', to set at rest, see Allay.

Almanac, ol'.mă.năk. A calendar of the year. (Rule lviii.)

Arabic al manach, the computation; or, Anglo Saxon almónaght.

Almighty, awl.might'.ĭ. All-powerful. (Rule lviii.)

Almond, ah'.mun' not al.mon'. The nut of the almond-tree.

Greek ámugdlé (ámugd'); French amande; Spanish almendra.

Almoner, al'.mō.nēr not al'.mō.nēr. One who dispenses alms.

French aumonier; Med. Lat. almonarius; Old Eng. almes-man.

Almost, ol'.most not awl'.most (Rule lviii.)

Alms, arms not alms. Charity. Both singular and plural.

"Who, seeing Peter and John, asked an alms" (Acts iii. 3).

"Thine alms are come up for a memorial" (Acts x. 4).

Anglo Saxon almes; Old English almesse; Norman almoignes; Latin eleemosyna; Greek eleēmōsūné (eleémón, pitiful).

Aloe, plu. aloes, al'.ō, al'.ōze, a plant. Halloo, plu. halloos, to shout, shouts. Hallow, hal'.lō, to hold sacred. Halo, hay'.lo, a "glory."

"Aloe," Greek aloē, the aloe. "Halloo," Low Ger. hallo, outcry.

"Hallow," Old Eng. hállig [an], to hold sacred. "Halo," Greek halos, a halo.

Aloetic, al'.ō.eé'-tĭk not al'-o.ēt-ĭk. Containing aloes.

Greek aloetikós. The postfix -ic means "pertaining to." To express acids, it means containing the most oxygen possible.

Aloexylon, al'.ō.eex'-ĭl-ōn not al'-o.ěx'-ĭl-on. Wood of aloes.

Greek aloē xulon, aloe wood.

Alopecurus, a.lō'-pĕ.kū'-rŭs. Fox-tail grass, &c.

Greek alopékōs oura, fox's tail.

Alopecia, a.lō'-pĕ.sĭj. A disease of the hair.

Greek alopékta, fox's evil (o long, e short).

Aloysia, a.loij'-zĕ.ăh. The Verbena order of plants.

Greek alousia, unwashed; because rain does not wet the leaves.

Alpaca, al.pak'-ăh. Cloth made of paco hair. The paco of South America is a kind of camel with long woolly hair.

Alphitidon, al.fĭt'-ĭ-dŏn. A fracture with the bone smashed.

Greek alphiton, bran (the bone ground like bran).

Already, ol.red'.ĭ. At this time, in time past (Rule lviii.)

Alsine, al.sĭ'.ně (Latin). Chickweed, mouse-ear, &c.

Alsinia, al.sĭ'.ně.ăh. The "alsine" or chickweed group of plants.

Also, ol'.sŏ. Likewise, in like manner (Rule lviii.)

- Alsodeæ, al.so'-dē-e. The violet sub-order of plants.
Greek alsodēs, woodland plants.
- Alstonia, al.stōn'-ċ-ah. The Dogbane tribe of plants. So named from Charles Alston, a Scotch botanist. (1688-1760.)
- Alstonite, al'.stōn.ite. A white or greyish mineral, found in the mines of Alston Moor, in Cumberland.
- Altar (of a church). Alter, to change (Rule lviii.) Halter.
"Altar," Celtic alt; Old Eng., alter; Latin altäre; &c.
"Halter," Old Eng. hælfster, a halter or headstall.
- Alteration, ol'-ter.ray"-shun not al'-ter.ray-shun (Rule lviii.)
- Alterative, ol'.t'ra.tiv not al'.ter.ä.tiv. A medicine to change gradually the habits of the body (Rule lviii.)
French alterer, alteration, alteratif.
- Altercation, al'-ter.kay"-shun not ol'-ter.kay"-shun.
Latin altercäre, to talk one against another.
- Alternate, al'.tēr.nate (verb); al.ter'.nate (adjective). Rule 1.
- Alternative, al.ter'-nä.tiv. Choice of two things.
Latin alter, [if not one] the other.
- Although, all.thōw not all.rhōw. Notwithstanding (R. lviii.)
- Altitude, al'.tĭ.tude not ol'.tĭ.tude. Height.
Latin altitudo, from altus, high.
- Alto, plu. altos, al'tō, al'.tōze. Counter-tenor (Rule xlii.)
- Alto-relievo, plu. alto-relievos, al'.tō rel'.ĭ.ā".vō (rel'.ĭ.ā".voze) not al'.to re.leev'.ō, &c. Term in sculpture (Rule xlii.)
- Alto-primo, plu. alto-primos, al'.tō pree'.mo (pree'.moze).
- Alto-secun'do, plu. alto-secun'dos (Rule xlii.)
- Altogether, all'-tō.geth'-er. Wholly, entirely (Rule lviii.)
- Aludel, a.lū'-dēl. A vessel used in sublimation.
Latin a lutum, [a pot or vessel] without lute.
- Alumina, al.loo'.mĭ.nĭh. Earth containing alum.
- Alumine, a.loo'.mĭn. (Same as alumina.)
- Aluminium, al'.oo.mĭn'.ĭ.um. Metal obtained from alumina.
The gold-coloured is a mixture of aluminium and copper.
Latin alūmen, saltstone. (The u is long.)
- Aluminous, a.loo'.mĭ.nus. In Geology, means clayey.
- Aluminum, a.loo'.mĭ.num. The metallic base of clay.
- Alunite, a.loo'.nite not al'.oo.nite. Alum-stone.
French alun, alum; Greek lithos, a stone.
- Alunogene, a.loo'.nō.jene. An efflorescence on damp walls.
French alun, alum; Greek genō, to produce.

Alveary, al'-vē.ăry not al-vee'-a-ry. The hollow of the ear.
(The "a" in ary is long in the Latin word.)

Latin alveārium, a bee-hive. (Rules lv. and lvii.)

Alveolar, al'.vē.đ.lar not al-vee'.đ.lar. Containing sockets.

Alveolus, plu. alveoli (Latin), al'.vē.đ.lus, al'.vē.đ.li.

Not al-vee'.o.lus, nor al-ve.đ'.lus. (Both e and o short.)
The hole or socket of a tooth.

No such word as alveola used by Dr. Mantell, Wonders of Geology.

Alveolite, al'.vē.đ.lite. One of the coral groups.

Always, ol'.wayz. At all times, for ever (Rule lviii.)

Alyssum, a.lis'-sŭm. Madwort, &c. [To prevent madness.]

Greek a lysson, preventive of madness [from the bite of mad dogs].

Am- (prefix), Latin preposition ad before the letter m.

Am, was, been. These are parts of three distinct verbs.

Am is Norse; Be is the old English beo; and Was is the old English wes [an] "to dwell." Beo is Indicative Mood, and be is still used so in rural districts and in poetry.

Amadou, am'.ă.doo not am'.ă.đw. German tinder.

French amadou, from the Latin am [ad] manus dulces (a'ma'du').

Amanita, am'-ă.ni"-tah. A fungus common in Amānus.

Amanuensis, plural amanuenses, a.man'-u.en"-sis, -en'.sees.

Latin a manu -ensis: a manu, a secretary; -ensis (suffix) office of.

Amaranth, am'-ă.ranth, or amaranthus, am'-a.ran"-rhus.

Greek amaranthos, the unfading flower (a maraino, I die not).

Amaranthaceæ, am'-ă.răn.ṭhay"-sě-e. The "order" of the above; -aceæ, added to plants, denotes an "order."

Amaryllis, plural amaryllises, am'-a.ril"-lis, &c. A flower so called from the shepherdess of classic pastorals.

Amaryllidaceæ, am'-ă.ril"-li.day"-cě-e. The "order" of the above; -aceæ, added to plants, denotes an "order."

Amateur (French), am'.a.ture'. One who cultivates an art or science for his own pleasure, and not as a profession.

Amaurosis, a.maw.ro'.sis. Called by Milton "the drop serene."

Greek amauros, blindness [without any visible defect in the eye].

Amazon, Am'.ă.zon. A race of female warriors. Amazo'nian.

(This word is wrong in quantity, the second "a" is long).

Greek amāzon, without a breast. The right pap being cut off.

Ambas'sador, feminine ambas'sadress, not embas'sador, &c.

Fr. ambassadeur; Med. Lat. ambascia; Celt. ambacht, a servant.

Ambas'sador Extrao'rdinary, plu. Ambas'sadors Extrao'rdinary

Ambas'sador Ple'nipoten"tiary, plural Ambas'sadors, &c.

Ambergris, am'.běr.griss not am'.běr.grease. Grey amber.

French ambre gris (grey). To distinguish it from the noir and jaune Amblypterus, am.blip'.tē'.rus. A genus of fossil fishes.

Greek amblys pteron, [fish with] obtuse or large fins.

Ambreine, am'.brē.in. The active principle of amber.

Ambreic (acid), am'.brē.ik not am.brē'ik. (See above.)

Ambrosia, am.brō'.zē.āh not am.brō'.zhe.ah. Food of the gods.

Greek a brotos, not mortal [immortal food].

Ambulacra, am'.bu.lay"-krāh. Holes in the crust of sea-urchins through which their "walkers" protrude.

Latin ambulācra, walking places.

Ambulatores, am".bū.lā.tō.rēz. An order of birds; their feet have three toes before and one behind (Rule iv.)

Latin ambulātōres, walkers. (The o is long in the Latin word.)

Ambuscade, plu. ambuscades; am'.bus.kade', am'.bus.kādz'.

Ambusca'do, plu. ambusca'does (Spanish). Rule xlii.

Spanish emboscar, to retire into the thickest part of a forest.

Amenable, a.mee'-nā-b'l not a-men'-ā-b'l. Accountable.

Italian ammalnare, to strike sail; French amener.

Amend, a.mend', to correct. Amends, satisfaction.

French amender, to amend; Latin a menda, without fault.

Amende honorable (Fr.), a-mend' on"-ō.rāh'-b'l. An apology.

Amenity, a.mee'-nī-ty not a-men'-ī-ty. Softness of climate.

Latin amēnitas, agreeableness of climate or manners.

Amentaceæ, a-men.tay'-sē-e. An order of plants with catkins.

Lat. amentum, a catkin or thong; -aceæ (suffix) an "order" of plants.

Ametabolia, a.met'-a.bōl"-ī.āh. Insects which change not.

Greek a metabōle, without change or metamorphosis.

Amethyst, am'.ē.τhist. A precious stone of a violet colour.

Greek a methūstōs, preventive of drunkenness.

Amianth or amianthus, am'-ī.an"-τhūs. A sort of asbestos.

Greek amiantos, that which does not contract defilement.

Amianthoid, am'-ī.an"-τhoid. Like amianth. (Rule xlix.)

Greek amianto-eidos, like amianthus.

Amide, am'.īd. A chemical substance not unlike starch.

Greek am [ulon] -idēs (patronymic) of the starch family.

Amidin or amidine, am'.ī.dīn. The soluble part of starch.

The insoluble part is called amyline, q.v.

Ammocetes, am'-mo.see"-teez, a genus of sand-fishes.

Greek ammos koitē, sand-bed [fish].

Ammodytes, am'-mo.dīj"-teez. Sand-eels, &c.

Greek ammos dūtēs, sand-divers.

Ammonia, am.mō-nī"-āh. Spirits of hartshorn. (Double m.)

Ammoniacal, am'-mo.nī"-ā-kāl not a'-mo.nī"-ā-kāl. (Double m.)

- Ammoniacum, am'-mo.ni''-ă-kum not a'-mo.ni''-ă-kum. Gum of the Persian plant called [dorema] ammoniacum.
- Ammonite, am'.mō.nite. A family of fossils resembling a ram's horn. Ammon-ite, like [the horns of Jupiter] Ammon.
- Ammonitidæ, am'-mo.ni't'-i-de. The Ammonite family of fossils. -idæ (Greek patronymic -idēs), of the family or race.
- Ammophila, am.mof'-i-lah. Sand wasps.
Greek ammos phileō, I love the sand.
- Ammunition, am'-mu.ni'sh'-on. Military stores.
Latin am [ad] munitio munitions for [war].
- Amœba, a.mec'.bāh. The lowest type of animal life.
Greek amoibē, the changeable [animal].
- Amomum, a.mō'.mum. The ginger species of plants.
Greek amómum, ginger.
- Among, a.mung', not a.mong. Old English amang.
- Amorphous (rocks), a.mor'.fūs. Having no definite shape.
Greek a-morphos, without [definite] form.
- Amorphozoa, a.mor'.fō.zō'-ăh. Zoophytes, like sponges, &c.
Greek a-morphos zōa, living animals without [definite] form.
- Amour propre (French), a.moor' propr. Self-respect.
- Ampelic (acid), am'.pě.līk. Produced from coal tar.
- Ampelin, am'.pě.līn. A liquid resembling creosote.
- Ampelite, am'.pě.lite. Alum-slate.
Greek ampelis, the vine. "Ampelite" is so called because it was used by the ancients for destroying the vine-insects.
- Amphi- (Greek prefix). "All round," "on both sides," "doubt."
- Amphibia, am.fib'-i-ăh. Animals that live in water or on land.
Greek amphibios, having life both [on land and in water].
- Amphibichnites, am'-fi.bik'-nites. Animals which have left their footprints in certain geological rocks.
Greek amphibia ichnos, footprints of amphibia.
- Amphibolite, am.fib'-ō-lite. Parts of amphibia fossilised.
Greek amphibios lithos, amphibia [become] stone.
- Amphibole, am.fib'-ō-lě. Hornblende.
Greek amphibōlōs, something doubtful [whether hornblende or augite. It being difficult to distinguish them].
- Amphibology, am'-fi.bo'l'-ō-jě. Words which bear two interpretations, like the responses of the ancient oracles.
Greek amphibōlōs logos, doubtful words.
- Amphibrya, am.fib'-rī-ăh. Plants which grow in bulk, not height.
Greek amphibruō, to swell all round. Those which grow upwards, and not in bulk, are acrogens.

Amphigens, am'fĭ-gens. Plants which grow in bulk, not height.
Greek amphi gēnos, growth all round (like lichens). See Acrogenous.

Amphitheatre, am'fĭ-thee'-ă-tēr. A circular theatre. (The "a" is long in the Greek word.) Rule lvii.
Greek amphi theatron, a theatre all round.

Amphora, am'fō.răh. A wine vessel with two handles.
Greek amphi phōrein, [handles] on both sides to carry it by.

Ample, am'p'l, am'ple.ness, am'ply. (Latin amplus, large.)

Amplify, am'plĭ.fy, am'plify-ing, but am'plifies (3 syl.), am'pli-fied (3 syl.), am'plifi-er, am'plifi-ca'tion. (Rule xi.)
Latin amplificāre, to make ample.

Ampulla, am'pul'.lăh (Latin). A bottle large in the middle.

Amulet, am'u.lēt. A charm worn about the person. (One m.)
Latin amulētum, a charm; a molior, to drive away [evil].

Amuse, a.muze', amuse'-ment, amused' (2 syl.), amu'ses, amu'ser, amus'-ing, amus'-ingly, amus'-ive, amus'-ively. (R. xix.)
French amuser; Latin a Musis, [to turn] from the Muses or study.

Amygdaleæ, a-mig.dal'ĕ.e. A family of plants including the peach, apricot, plum, and almond.

Amygdalic (acid), a.mig'.dă.lĭk. Derived from amygdaline.

Amygdaline, a.mig'dă.lĭn. A crystalline principle contained in bitter almonds.

Amygdaloid, a.mig'.dă.loid. Volcanic rocks with almond-like cells or cavities filled with foreign substances.
Greek amugdalos eidos, almond-like.

Amyl, am'ĭl, or amyline, am'ĭl.ĭn. Insoluble part of starch.
The soluble part is called amidine, q.v.
Greek ămūlon, starch.

Amyridaceæ, am'ĭ-rĭ.day"-se.e. Plants of the myrrh kind.
The genus am'ÿris (Latin myrrha, myrrh), is type of the order.

An- (prefix) Latin preposition ad before n; Greek an (privative) before a vowel.

-an (suffix), Latin an-us "belonging to:" as Roman.

An (Article), before vowels and silent h; also before h aspirated, when the accent of the word is not on the first syllable, as "a his'tory," but an histor'ian. On the other hand, the n is dropped before one, and also before cu and u pure, as many a one, a u-nit, a Européan.

Anacathartic, an'-ă-kă.rhar"-tik not an'-ă-kă.rhark"-tik.

Greek ana katharsis, purging upwards [through mouth and nose].

Anacharis, an.ak'.ă.rĭs. A troublesome river-weed,

Greek ana charis, out of favour, a nuisance.

- Anachronism, a.nak'.rö.nizm. A chronological error.
Greek ana chronos, out of time.
- Anæmia, a.nee'.mī.äh not a.nem'.ī.äh. Deficiency of blood.
Greek an aima, without blood.
- Anæmic, a.nee'.mik not a.nem'.ik. Blood-failing.
- Anæsthesia, an.ece.rhee'.zī.äh. Defect of the sense of feeling.
Greek an aisthēsia, without the sense of feeling.
- Anagallis, an'-a.gal'.lis. The pimpernel group of plants.
Greek anagelao, to laugh heartily. Supposed cure of "spleen."
- Anagrammatic, an'-ä-grām.mat"-tīk (double m).
Greek ana gramma, transposition of letters.
- Analogue, an'-ä.lög. Something analogous.
Greek analogos, of similar proportion.
- Analogy, a.nal'.ö.gy, anal'og-ous, anal'og-ously, anal'ogist, anal'ogism, anal'ogise, anal'ogising; analogical, an'-a.loj"-i-kal, analog'ically, analog'icalness. Rule xi.)
Latin analogia, analogus; Greek ana lōgōs, similarity of words.
- Analysis, plural analyses, a.nal'.y.sīs, a.nal'.y.seez.
Greek ana-lusis, a breaking up. The opposite process is syn'thēsis.
Greek synthēsis (sūn tithēmi), a putting together again.
- Analysable, analysation not analyzable, analyzation.
The s is part of the word analysis (lusō not luzō).
- Anamorphosis, an'-a.mor"-fō-sīs. (Wrong in quantity, Rule lvii.)
In Natural History, development.
In Botany, when one part of a flower assumes the appearance of a higher principle.
In Perspective, elongating the figure.
Greek ana morphōsis, upward shaping.
- Ananas, ä.nah'.nāz (Brazilian word). The pine-apple species.
- Ananchytes, an.an'.kī.teez not an.an.kī'.teez. Fairy loaves, &c.
Greek anantēs chētē (gaia), steep mounds.
- Anandrous, an.an'.drūs. In Botany, without stamen.
Greek an andros, without a male or stamen.
- Anastomose, an.as'.tō.mōze. To interlace vessels, &c.
Greek ana stōma, [to insert one vessel] up the mouth [of another].
- Anastomosis, an-as'-tō.mō"-sīs. In Botany, union of vessels.
- Anathema, plural anathemas, a.nath'.ēm.äh, a.nath'.e.mars.
Greek ana-thēma, a thing set apart: hence a ban of the church, which sets a person "apart" from church fellowship.
- Anathematize not anathematise, a.nath'.ēm.ä.tize.
Greek ana-thēmätizō, to make accursed. (Rule xxxii.)
- Anatidæ, an.at'.ī.de. Web-footed birds, as swans, geese, ducks.
Latin anātēs -idæ, the duck family (-idæ, a patronymic)

Anatomy, a.nat'.ō.my, anat'omist; anat'omise, not anat'omize, anat'omised (4 syl.), anat'omiser, anat'omis-ing, anat'omis-ation; anat'om'ical, anat'om'ically.

Latin anātōme, anātōmēus; Greek ana tōmé, a cutting up.

Anatropal, a.nat'.rō.pāl. In Botany, an inverted ovule.

Greek ana-trépō, to invert [the ovule], as in apple blossoms.

-ance (suffix, Latin -ans). Attached to verbal nouns.

There are nearly 300 words with this termination, and not one ending in the more correct form -anse.

Ancestor, fem. ancestress, an'.sēs.tōr, &c. A predecessor.

French ancestres, ancêtres; Latin ante cessor, a predecessor.

Anchor, an.kor (of a ship). Anker (Dutch), ten gallons.

Old English ancor; Latin anchōra; Greek agkūlōs, hooked.

Anchovy, an'.cho.vy not an.cho'.vy. (In Port. anchóvy.)

Ancient, ain'.shent not an'.shent nor arn'.shent, of old.

The Ancients, plu. People of the olden times.

French ancien, old; Italian anziano; Latin antiquus.

Ancile, an.sī.le (Latin). The sacred shield of Mars.

Ancillary, an'.sil.lā.rŷ not an.sil'.lā.rŷ. A handmaid (Rule IV.)

Latin ancilla, a maidservant.

Ancipital, an.sip'.ī.tāl. In Botany, two-edged.

Latin anceps, ancipitis, two-edged (am caput, head both sides).

-ancy (suffix, Latin -ans, -antis). Added to abstract nouns.

Ancyloceras, an'.si.lōs"-ē-rahs. Fossils curved like a horn.

Greek agkulos, curved [like a horn]. (Greek "g" before k = n.)

And (a copulative). Hand (of the human body).

"And," Old English and. "Hand," Old English hand.

And so forth, et cætēra. (Old English and swá forth.)

Andante, an.dan'te (Italian). In Music, moderately slow.

Andirons, an'-dē-rōnz not hand'.i.ons. Fire-dogs.

Old English brand-isen, iron to hold a brand or log.

Androgynous, an.droj'.ī.nŷs not an.drōjee'.nŷs. (Botany.)

Greek anēr gunē, man-woman. (Male and female flowers united.)

Android, plu. androides, an'.droid, an.droi'.deez. An automaton.

Greek andro-eidos, [an automaton] like a man.

Andromeda, An.drom'.ē.dūh. Wild Rosemary, &c.

As Andromeda pined on a rock surrounded by sea monsters, so the plant droops its head in swampy places amidst reptiles.

Anellides, an.ēl'.ī.des, or anellids, an'.ēl.īds. Earth-worms.

(All these words should be spelt with one n and double l. Latin anellus, a little ring.—Horace's Satires, II. 7-9.)

Anelytrous, an.el'.j.trūs not an.ě.ly'.trūs.

Greek an elātrōn, [insects] without wing sheaths.

Anemone, a.nem'.ō.ně not a.nen'.ō.mě. The wind-flower.

Plu. anemones not anemonies (Lat. anemōne, Rule lvii.)

Greek anēmōs, wind. These flowers love a free open space.

Aneroid, an'.ě.roid. The air barometer, which has no mercurial or other liquid column. (The "e" long in Greek.)

Greek a nērōs eidos, without [a column] resembling a liquid [column].

Anethum, a.nee'.rthūm. The dill genus of plants.

Greek anēthon, dill; anō thein, to run upwards, by rapid growth.

Aneurism, an'.eu.rizm. Morbid dilatation of an artery.

Greek aneurūnō, to stretch or dilate.

Angel, ain'.jel, a heavenly being. Angle, ān'.g'l, a corner.

Angel'-ic, angel'-ical, angel'-ically (Rule iii: -el). (This is a strong example of the perversity of English spelling. Although the accent is on the -el', the "l" is not doubled, while in travel, travelling, &c., it is doubled, although the accent is on the first syllable.)

"Angel," Greek aggelos, a messenger. (In Greek g before g = "n."
"Angle," Old English angel, genitive angles, a fish hook.

Angelica, an.ge'l'.k-kāh not an'.ge.lee".kah. A plant.

So called from the "angelic" virtues of its seeds and root.

Anger, ang'.er, angered (2 syl.), angering (Rule ii.)

Old English ange, vexation; Latin angor, sorrow.

Angina, an.ji'.nah (Latin). A disease affecting respiration.

Angle, a corner. Angel, a heavenly being. (See Angel.)

Anglican, an'.gli.kan. Belonging to England.

Anglice, an'.gli.se (adverb). In English.

Anglicism, an'.gli.sizm. An English idiom.

Anglicise, Anglicised (3 syl.), Anglicis-ing. (Note s not z.)

Anglo- (prefix) English: as Anglo-Saxon, Anglo-Norman, &c.

Old English Angel-; as angel-cyming, the English Kg.: angel-theōd, the English nation. Angle or Engle, the Angles or English.

Angnail, not agnail nor hangnail.

Old English ang-nægl, a nail-trouble. Similarly ang-breo'st, a chest-trouble (asthma), ang-mo'd, a mind-trouble (vexation).

Angry with you, not "angry at you." Angri-ly.

Anhydrite not anhydrate, an.hij'-drite; anhy'drous.

The "h" is needless. The Greek is anudria, and ἀνυδρος. Greek an hudor, without water. It would be impossible, in Greek, to express by letters such a word as Anhydrite. (Rule lxx.)

Aniline, an'.i.lin. An oily liquid used in "mauve" dyes.

Arabic anil, indigo; from which it may be obtained.

Animalcule, plural animalcules, an'-i.māl''-kūle, an'-i.māl''-kūlz ; or, an'imāl''culum, plural an'imāl''cula.

Latin animal-cūlum (-cūlum, a diminutive).

An'imalise, an'imalisa''tion (with s not z. Rule xxxi.)

Anker, ten gallons. Anchor (of a ship). (See Anchor.)

Ankle, an.k'l. Part of the leg. (Old English.)

Annals (no singular). History arranged by years (double n).

Latin annālēs, from annus, a year.

Annates, an'.nates. First-fruits on presentation to a living.

Latin annus, [the value of one] year's income.

Annelida, see Anelida (with one n).

Annex, an'.nex (noun), an.nex' (verb). Rule l.

Latin an [ad] nexus, tied to [another thing].

Annihilate, an.nī'.hīl.ate, annihilated, annihilat-ing, annihilat-or, annihilation. (Double n.) In Latin the ni- is short.

Latin an [ad] nihilum, [to reduce] to nothing.

Anniversary, plu. anniversaries, an'-ni.ver''-sā-rīz. The return of the time-of-the-year at which an event happened.

Latin annus versus, [the time of the] year returned.

Announce, an-nounce' not a.nounce' ; announce'ment.

French annoncer ; Latin an [ad] nuncio, to tell to [others].

Annoy, annoyance, an.noy', an.noy'.ance (Rule xxiv.)

Italian annoiare ; Latin an [ad] noceo, to incommode.

Annual. Yearly. In compounds, -ennial ; as bi-ennial, tri-ennial, per-ennial, &c. (Double n.) Latin annus.

Annuitant. One who receives an annuity. The i in these words is a blunder taken from the French, just as well write annuilly.

Annuity, an.nu'.i.ty not a.nu'.i.ty. A yearly payment.

French annuité ; Latin annuatim, yearly, annualia.

Annul', annull'-er, annulled' (2 syl.), annull'-ing. (Rule l.)

French annuller ; Latin an [ad] nullum, [to bring] to nothing.

Annular not annuler ; annulated ; annulose, an'.nu.loze ; annulosa, an.nu.lo'sa. Earth-worms, &c., composed of rings.

Latin annūlus, a ring ; annularius, ringed, full of rings.

Annunciate, an.nun'.shē.ate not a.nun'.shē.ate ; annunciator.

Latin an [ad] nunciāre, to carry tidings to one.

Anode, an'.ode. The positive pole of a voltaic battery. (The opposite pole is called the Cathode.) Rule lxx.

Greek ana-ōdos, the way up ; kata-odos, the way down (hodos).

Anodon, plu. anodons or anodonta, an'.ō.dŏn, &c. The river mussel.

Greek an ōdontoī, without te. th.

Anodyne, an'ō.dīne. A medicine to relieve pain.

Greek anōdūnē, destroyer of pain.

Anoint, an.oint' not a.noint'. (Note only one n.)

Norman-French enoindre; Latin inungo, to anoint.

Anomaly, plural anomalies, a.nom'.ā.lī, a.nom'.ā.līz. In the Greek word the o is long, to compensate for the lost h.

Greek anōmalos, irregular (hōmōlōs, like). Rule lxx.

Anomopteris, an'.ō.mōp"-tē-rīs. Fossil ferns.

Greek anōmos ptēris, anomalous fern.

Anonymous, a.non'.j.mus. The name suppressed.

Latin anonymus; Greek anōnōma, without a name.

Anoplotherium, plu. anoplotheria, an'.ōp-lō.rhee'-rī-um, an'-op-lō.rhee'-rī-āh. An extinct quadruped without horns, tusks, claws, or other weapons of defence. (Rule lxx.)

Greek anōplōs, unarmed (an hōplōs, but ἀνοπλος, without h).

-anse. No word in the language has this termination.

Anserine, an'.sērīne. Of the goose tribe. (Lat. anser, a goose.)

-ant (Latin participle suffix). "A" is merely the vowel copula of words belonging to the first conjugation.

Ant- (Greek prefix), contraction of anti. "Opposite to."

Ant, ānt, an insect. Aunt, a relation. Haunt, place of resort.

"Ant," corruption of Old English æmete (æm't), an emmet.

"Aunt," corruption of Latin amita (am't), an aunt.

"Haunt," French hanter, to frequent a house or place.

Antacid, ant-aç'-id not an'-tī.aç'-id. Acid counteracter.

Antacid, ant-ak'-rīd not an'-tī.ak'-rīd. Acid counteracter.

Antarctic, ant.ark'.tīk not an.tar'.tic. Opposite the arctic.

Greek anti arktos, opposite the Northern Bear.

Ante- (Latin prefix), "before," as antedate.

Antecede, an'.tē.ceed (not one of the 3 in -ceed). Rule xxvii.

Antecedent, antecedence, not antecedant, antecedance.

Latin ante cedere, to go before. (Not of the 1st conjugation.)

Antediluvian, an'-tē-dī.lu".vī.an. Existing before the Deluge.

Latin ante diluvium, before the Deluge.

Antelope, an'.tē.lope. A corruption of antholope.

Greek anthos ops, beautiful eye.

Antemeridian, an'-te.me.rīd"-ī.an. Before noon.

Latin antimēridiānus.

Antenna, plural antennæ (Latin). The feelers of insects.

Anten'ula, plu. anten'ulæ (Latin) diminutive.

The singular, antenna, is very rarely used.

Antepenult, an'-tē-pē-nult' not an'-tē-pee"-nult'.

Latin antē pēnē ultimus, before the almost last (syl.)

Pene ultimus, the last-but-one; ante penultimus, the last-but-two.

Anthelion, plu. Anthelia, ant.hee'.li.ah. A bright spot opposite the sun. The "h" is needless. (Rule lxx.)

Greek antēlios, ἀντῆλιος (anti hēlios, opposite the sun).

Anthelix, anth'.ē.lix. The part of the ear opposite the "helix."

The th of this word belongs to the first syl. (Rule lxx.)

Anthem, an'.rhem. A corruption of the Old English antefen (ant'fen, ant'em), same as antiphon, Greek antiphōnōs, sounds or voices from opposite choirs. Anthym (anti-humnos) might be "a hymn sung by two opposite choirs," but anthem can only be Greek anthemis, ἀνθαμῖς, q.v.

Anthemis, an'.rhē.mīs. Chamomile and its group of plants.

Greek anthēmis, verb anthēō, I blossom [abundantly].

Antherozoides, an'-rhēr-ō.zoi"-deez. Life-giving corpuscles of algæ, ferns, mosses, and lichens (li'.kenz).

Greek anther zōē-eidos, life-like anthers.

Anthesis, an'.rhee'.sis not an'.rhē.sis. In Botany.

Greek anthesis, the bursting or opening of a flower.

Anthodium, an'.rhō'.dī.um. The flower-head of comp. plants.

Greek anthōdēs, full of florets (anthos duo, I put on flowers).

Antholites, an'.rhō.lites. Fossil impressions of flowers.

Greek anthos lithos, fossil or stone flower.

Anthophore, an'.rhōfore. The column which supports the petals.

Greek antho-phoros, the flower supporter.

Anthophylite, an'.rhof'.il.ite. Species of hornblende.

Greek anthophyllon, a clove (which it resembles in colour).

Anthozoa, an'-rhop.zō'-ah. Sea-anemonēs, &c.

Greek anthos zōa, flower animals.

Anthracite, an'.rhra.site. Cannel-coal (Greek anthrax, coal).

Anthracosaurus, plural anthracosauri, an'-rhrāk-ō.saw"-rūs.

Anthracosaur, plural anthracosaurs. An extinct saurian.

Greek anthrax sauros, lizard of the coal-measures.

Anthracotherium, an'-rhrāk-ō.rhee'-ri.um. An extinct beast.

Greek anthrax thērion, a wild beast of the coal-measures.

Anthrakerpeton, an'-rhray.ker".pē-ton. An extinct reptile.

Greek anthrax erpeton, a reptile of the coal-measures.

Anthropophagi (plural), an'-rthro.pof"-a.ji. Cannibals.

Greek anthrōpos phagein, to eat men.

Anti- (Greek prefix), "opposed to," "the opposite of:" as antidote,

See Ante-.

Antichrist, an'-ti.krist. A false Christ, a foe to Christ.

Greek anti Christos, antagonist of Christ.

Anticipate, an.tiss'ĩ.pate. To forestall. Anticipat-ing, anti-cipation, anticipator, anticipa'tory.

Latin anticipāre (ante capere), to take beforehand. This word and antiquarian, antiquity, &c., are the only instances of anti- signifying before in time, (ante-), instead of antagonistic (anti-).

Anticlinal, an'-ti.kli"-nal. (Geology.) Applied to strata.

Greek anti klinein, [strata] dipping in opposite directions.

Anticolic not anticholic. (Latin colic [us]).

Antipathy, plu. antipathies, an.tip'.ǎ.thĩ, an.tip'.a.thiz.

Greek anti pathos, a feeling repugnant to [something].

Antiphonal, an.tif'.ō.nal. Responsive or alternate singing.

(This word ought to be an.ti.fō'-nal. An.tif'-ō-nal means "mutual slaughter"—ἀντι-φόνος.)

Greek anti phōnos, ἀντι-φώνος, responsive singing.

Antiphrasis, an.tif'-rǎ-sis. Irony.

Greek anti phrāsis, [meaning] opposite to the words expressed.

Antipode, plu. antipodes, an'-tĩ-pode; an.tip'-ō-deez.

Greek anti podoi, [people whose feet are] opposite to our feet.

Antiquary, an'.tĩ.qua.ry. A person fond of antiquities. Not antiquarian which is an adjective.

Antiquate, an'.tĩ.quate, an'tiquated, an'tiquating.

Antique (Fr.), an.teek'; antiquely, an.teek'.ly; antiqueness.

Antiquity (former ages), plu. antiquities, an.tik'.wĩ.tiz.

Relics of olden times.

Latin antiquarius, from ante before; antīcus, one before us.

Antiseptic, an'-ti.sep"-tĩk not an'-ti.skep"-tic. "Antiseptic" means a preventive of putridity, but "antiskeptic" would mean one who is not sceptical or a disbeliever.

Greek anti septikos, opposed to putridity (σῆπω).

Antithesis, plural antitheses, an.tith'.ě.sis, an.tith'.ě.secz.

Greek anti thesis, words set in contrast.

Anvil, an'.vil. A smith's iron block. (Old Eng. anfil, an anvil.)

Anxiety, plu. anxieties, anx.ǎ'.ě.tiz. Distress of mind.

Anxious, angk'.shus; anxiousness, anxiously.

Latin anxietas, anxius, from anxi, I have vexed.

Any, en'.ny not an'.ny. Old English enig or ænig.

Aorta, a.or'.tah. The great or trunk artery. (Greek aortē.)

Ap- (prefix), Latin preposition ad before p.

Apartment, a.part'.ment (with one p). A room set "apart."

The corresponding French word has double "p" appartement; ap [ad] parti, parted off for you.

Apathy, ap'.ǎ.thĩ; apathetic, ap'.ǎ.thet"ĩk. Without sympathy.

Greek a pāthōs, without passion or emotion of mind.

Apatite, ap' a. tite, a phosphate of lime. Appetite (for food).

"Apatite," Greek apatē, deceit; so called because it appears in every variety of colour and form, so that it is often mistaken.

"Appetite," Latin ap [ad] petitus (appēto, to seek for [food]).

Ape, male dog-ape, female bitch-ape. (Old Eng. apa, an ape.)

Apennine, Ap' ēn. nīne. A range of mountains in Italy.

Latin Apennīnus (Single p, double n.)

Aperient, a. pee' rī. ent. (The "e" of this word is short in Latin.)

Latin aperiens, opening. (A laxative medicine.)

Aperture, ap' er. ture. An opening. (Only one p.)

Latin āpertūra, (āperio, to open).

Apex, plu. apexes or apices; a. pex, plu. a' pex. es or ap' ī. seez.

Latin apex, plural āpices, the summit of anything.

Aphelion, plural aphelia; af. hee' ī. on, af. hee' ī. āh. The position of a planet when it is furthest from the sun. Perihēlion is its position when nearest to the sun.

Greek apo hēlios, away from the sun. Peri, near. (In Greek it would be apēlion, similar to ἀπηλιώτης not ἀφηλιώτης.)

Aphis, plural aphides, a' fis, af' ī. deez. The plant-louse. (Lat.)

Aphorism, af' ō. rizm. A maxim expressed with antithesis.

Greek aphōrismōs, distinction (aphorizō, to separate).

Apiary, plu. apiaries, ap' ī. ā. riz. A place for bees (Rule iv.)

Latin āptārium (āpis, a bee).

Apiocrinite, ap' ī. ok' rī. nite. A fossil sea-lily or "en'crinite."

Greek apion krinon, pear [shaped] lily [zoöphyte].

Apo- (prefix) Greek preposition, equivalent to the Latin "ab," q. v.

Apocalypse, a. pok' ā. lips. The Book of the Revelation.

Greek apokalupsis, from apo kaluptō, to un-cover or reveal.

Apocrypha, a. pok. rī. fūh. The uncanonical Scriptures.

Greek apo krūpha, things hidden from [the general].

Apocryphal, a. pok' rī. fūl. Belonging to the Apocrypha, false.

Apode, ap' ode. Fish without ventral fins, like sword-fish, eels, &c.

Greek a podoi, without feet (or ventral fins).

Apodons, ap' ō. dōns. A generic name for "apodes" (ap' odes).

Apogee, ap' ō. jee. That point in a planet's orbit furthest from our earth. (The point nearest to our earth is the perigee).

Greek apo gē, away from the earth (peri gē, near the earth).

Apollyon, A. pol' yon. The destroyer (Rev. ix. 11).

Greek apollūōn, destroying (Angel of the bottomless pit).

Apology, plu. apologies, a. pol' ō. jiz, excuses; apol' ogist.

Apologetic, apologet' ical, apologet' ically, apologet' ics.

Apologize, apologized, &c. (Greek apo-logizomai. R. xxxii.)

Greek apōlōgia, an excuse; Latin apologeticus, apologetic.

- Apophthegm not apothegm, ap'-ð.rhem. A sententious saying.
Greek apo phthēgma, [a saying made] by a word.
- Apoplexy, ap'.ð.plex.y. Suspension of the action of the brain.
Greek apoplēxia (apo plēktos, one struck by a fit).
- Apostasy not apostacy, a.pos'.tū.sj̄. Falling off from the faith.
Greek apostasia (apo stasis, a standing away from the faith.)
- Apostatize not apostatise, a.pos'.tū-tize. To become apostate.
Greek apo stātizō, to place oneself away from [the faith].
- A posteriori (Lat.) a pos.ter'ri.ð".ri. Causes inferred from effects.
(The opposite is a priōri, effects predicated from known causes. Natural Philosophy, being based on data, is an example of the former; Mathematics of the latter.)
- Apostolic, a.pos.tōl'ik not a.pos'tl'ik, adjective of apostle.
Greek apostolikos (apostōlos, apo stelo, to send off on a message).
- Apostrophe, plu. apostrophes (Greek), a.pos'.trō.fj̄, a.pos'.trō.fiz.
Apos'trophise, apos'trophised (4 syl.), apos'trophising.
Greek apostrophē. ("Apostrophise" is not a Greek word. R. xxxiii.)
- Apothecary, plu. apothecaries, a.poth'.ē.kū.riz. A druggist.
Greek apothēkē, a place for stores. "Apothecary" a drug-storer.
- Apotheosis, generally called ap'-o-thee.ð"-sis, but more correctly ap'-o.rhē-o"-sis (ἀποθέωσις). Deification.
Greek apo theōsis, [placed with the gods] by deification.
- Appal, appalled (2 syl.), appall-ing, appall-ingly. (Rule I.)
(This word would be better with double "l"—appall.)
Latin ap [ad] pall [eo], to turn very pale.
- Appanage, ap'.pā.nāje. Lands assigned to younger sons.
Med. Lat. ap [ad] panāgium, for maintenance (panis, bread).
In French one "p," apanage.
- Apparatus, ap'.pā.ra"-tūs not ap'-pa.rat"-us nor a-par'rat-us.
Latin ad [ad] parātus, [instruments] prepared for [experiments].
- Apparel, apparell-ed (3 syl.), apparell-ing. (Rule iii. -EL.)
French appareil; Latin ap [ad] paro, to dress thoroughly.
- Apparent, ap.pair'.ent not a.pair'.ent. Evident.
Latin ap [ad] parens, parent[is], visible to [men].
- Appeal, ap.peal' not a.peal'. To refer to a higher court.
Latin ap [ad] pellāre, to drive or refer to [another court].
- Appearance. (The spelling of this word is quite indefensible.)
It ought to be appearence, as "apparent."
Latin ap [ad] parens; Med. Latin apparentia; French appareance.
- Appease, ap.peez' not ā'.peez'. To pacify. (Double p.)
Latin ap [ad] pacifico; French one "p," apaiser (pax, peace).
- Appellant, ap.pel'.lant. One who removes his suit to a higher court.
Latin ap [ad] pello. Medieval Latin appellans (a noun).

Appendage, ap.pen'.dāge not a.pen'.dāge. Something added.

Medieval Latin ap [ad] penditia, hung on to [something else].

Appendant, appendance. (These words ought to be appendent, appendence, as dependent, dependence, independent, independence, pendent, impendent.)

Latin ap [ad] pendens, hanging on to [something].

Appen'dix, plural appen'dixes or appen'dices (4 syl.) A supplement.

Latin appendix, plural appendices (4 syl.)

Appetite, ap'.pě.tite. Natural desire for food. (See Apatite.)

Latin ap [ad] petitus (ap-peto, to seek for [food]).

Applaud, ap.plawd' not a.plawd'. To praise by clapping hands.

Applause, ap.plawz' not ă.plawz'. To clap the hands.

Latin ap [ad] plaudo, to clap the hands [in approval].

Applicable, ap'.plī.kă.b'l not a.plik'.ă.b'le. Suitable.

Latin ap [ad] plicabilis, fit to be folded to [something].

Apply, applies (2 syl.), applied (2 syl.), applier, appli-able, appli-ance, appli-cable, appli-cability, but apply-ing.

Latin ap [ad] plico, to fold to (or) against something.

To "apply a blister," is to fold it to the skin. To "apply to your books," is to fold your attention or thoughts on them.

Appoggiatura, ap-poj'.jũ.tũ"-răh not a-podg'-j̃-too"-rah. A grace-note in Music. (Italian.)

Italian appoggiare, to lean on something. A grace-note "leans on" the note preceding it.

Appoint, ap.point' not ă.point'; appointment (double p).

French appointer, to give a salary to a person.

(It is incorrect to say a person is "appointed" on a committee or board, if no "pay" is attached to the office.)

Apportioned, ap.por'.shund not a.por'.shund. Assigned.

Latin ap [ad] portio, [to give] to one his portion.

Apposite, ap'.po.zite. To the point. In Grammar, an amplification without a connecting word: as "Victoria, daughter [of the duke of Kent]."

Latin ap [ad] positus, placed (or) put to [the other].

Appreciate, ap.pree'.shě.ate not ă.pree'.shě.ate.

Fr. apprecier. Lat. ap [ad] pretium, [to value] according to its price.

Apprehend, ap.pre.hend', apprehend-er, apprehend-ing (from the root), apprehens-ible, apprehens-ion, apprehens-ive (from the supine).

Latin ap [ad] prehend-ere, apprehens-um, to seize on.

Apprentice, ap.pren'.tis not ă.pren'.tiz. One bound to a trade.

French apprenti, a learner (apprendre, to learn); Latin apprehendo or apprendo, to learn.

Apprise, ap.prize'. To inform, to give one notice of [something].

French appris, participle of apprendre, to learn.

Approach, ap.proach' not ă.proach'; approachable.

French approcher (proche, near), to draw near.

Approbation, ap'-pro.bay"-shun. Approval. (Double p.)

Latin ap [ad] probatio, proof or satisfaction given to [the judgment].

Appropriate, ap.pro'pri.ate not a.pro'pri.ate; appropriator.

French appropriier. Latin ap [ad] proprius, [to take] to one's self.

Approve, ap.proov' not a.proov'. To admit the propriety of.

Latin ap [ad] probo, to prove to (or) satisfy [the judgment].

Approximate, ap.prox'.imate not ă.prox'.imate.

Latin ap [ad] proximare, to draw next to some one.

Appui, ap'.pwe'. (In horsemanship) reciprocity between horse and rider. If the mouth of the horse answers readily to the bit, the horse has a good appui. If the rider manages his reins skilfully, he has a good appui.

French appui, a support or fulcrum; the two ends of the lever are the reins and bit, the power is applied by the hand of the rider, the fulcrum is the corner of the horse's mouth. "Appui" is a nice adjustment of power in the rider, and a sensitive response in the mouth of the horse.

Appurtenance, ap.pur'.tē.nance not a.pur'.tē.nance. (The spelling of this word is quite indefensible.)

Latin ap [ad] pertinens, pertaining to; French appurtenance.

A priori (Latin), a pri.ō'ri. Premising the effects of a cause.

In Mathematics, we argue a priori: thus, knowing the value of 2 and 4, we conclude that $2 \times 4 = 8$, $4 \div 2 = 2$.

In Natural Philosophy we proceed the other way (a posteriori): thus, we find all unsupported bodies fall to the earth, and from this fact we assume there is a power in the earth to cause it. The power we call "gravitation."

Apron, a'.pron not a'.pun. "An apron" corruption of a nape-ron (French), a large cloth (nappe, a table-cloth).

Apse (1 syl.) of a church. The bay or curved part behind the altar. This word ought to be hapse (Greek ἀψίς.)

Apsis, plu. apsides, ap'.sis, ap'.si.deez. Two points in the orbit of planets, one nearest the sun, and the other furthest off. (This word ought to be hapsis, hapsides.)

Greek hapsis, a hoop, arch, bow (ἀψίς).

Aptera, ap'.tē.nāh. Wingless insects, as spiders, fleas, &c. (For the singular we use the word ap'teran.)

Greek a ptēra, without wings.

Aquatic, a.quat'.ik. Pertaining to water, living in water.

(In Latin, the second "a" of this word is long.)

Latin aquaticus, aquatic (aqua, water).

Aquarium, plural aquaria or aquariums. Cases for the exhibition of marine animals and plants. (This word should be aqua-vivarium, as the Latin word "aquarium" means a "place for watering cattle.")

Aqueduct, not aquaduc nor aquaduct, a'.quē.duct.

Latin aquē-ductus, a duct or conduit for water. (Aquæ, gen. case.)

Aqueous, a'.que.ūs. Watery. (Latin? aquēus.) (Note, aque not aqua.) (The spelling of this word is indefensible.) Aquilegia, a'.qui.lee"-gī.āh. The Columbine plants.

(This word is most improper to express "An eagle-like plant." It exists in Latin, and means "vessels to collect water" (aqua-lego). Aquī, a cont. of the old form aquai.)

Latin aquila, an eagle; from a fanciful resemblance of the flower to eagle's claws. "Columbine" is from Columba, a dove; from a similar resemblance to the claws of a pigeon. Probably it is a corruption of aquila-chēlea—chēlē, a bird's claw (the eagle's-claw).

Aquiline, ak'.quī.line. Hooked like an eagle's beak.

Latin āquilinūs, like an eagle (āquila, an eagle).

Ar- (prefix) is the Latin preposition ad before r.

-ar, (termination) of adjectives is the Latin -r[is] preceded by "a," as vulgar, "pertaining to" the vulgus (мѡб).

-ar, termination of native nouns, "agents"—beggar.

Arabesque, Ar'.a.besk. Moorish ornamentation.

-esque (French postfix for like), Arab-like.

Arabic, Ar'rā.bīk not Ar'ab'.āk. The Arabian language, from Arabia, Arabian: as gum-arabiç.

Arable, ar'rā.b'l. Fit for tillage, cultivated by the plough.

(This word in Latin has the second "a" long.)

Latin arābilis (verb arāre, to plough). It is the long ā of the 1st conj.

Arachnoid, a.rak'noid. A membrane of the brain fine and delicate as a cobweb. In Botany, soft downy fibres.

Greek aracnē-eidos, like a cobweb.

Araneides, ā.rain'.ī.deez. The spider family.

The genus is called arachnida, ā.rak'.nī.dāh.

Latin arānea-idēs, the spider family.

Arbitrary, ar'.bī.trar"rj not ar'.bī.ter"ry. Dogmatic.

Latin arbitrarius (āra bīto, to go to the altar to give judgment. In swearing, the Romans touched the horns of the altar, hence the phrase usque ad aras, to assert on oath).

Arbitrarily, ar'.bī.trar"rj.lj not ar'.bī.ter"rj.lj. Dogmatically.

Arbitrator, feminine arbitratrix. An umpire (Law Latin).

Arboretum, plu. arboreta, ar'-bo.ree"-tum, ar'-bo.ree".tah. A pleasure ground of rare shrubs and trees (Latin).

Arbour (of a garden) not harbour. Harbour (for ships) not arbour.

"Arbour," Latin arbor, a tree (a seat under a tree).

"Harbour," Old English here-berga, an army-station, hence a place for a fleet, and hence a place for ships in general.

Arbutus, ar'bū.tus not ar.bū.tus (Latin). The strawberry-tree.

Arc, part of a circle; Arch (in architecture).

Latin arcus, a bow. "Arch"—this word is a blunder, from the supposition that architect means a maker of arches, and not a "directing builder" (Greek architectōn, archi tektōn), where the prefix archi- is from the verb archō, to direct, and not from the Latin arcus, a bow.

Arcanum, plu. arcana (Latin), ar.kay'.num, ar.kay'.nūh. A secret [preparation], the secrets of a secret society.

Arch- (prefix), Teutonic arg, "crafty," "waggish," as archness.

Arch- (prefix), Greek arkos, "chief," as archbishop.

RULE i.—ARCH- followed by a consonant is pronounced arch.

RULE ii.—ARCH- followed by a vowel is pronounced ark.

Examples of Rule i.—

ARCH-bish'op	ARCH-duke	ARCH-mar'shal
-bish'opric	-duke'dom	-ness
(Archiepiscopal, R. ii.)	-du'cal	-pas'tor
-buil'der	-duch'y	-philos'opher
-but'ler	-duch'ess	-po'et
-but'tress	-fel'on	-pon'tiff
-cham'berlain	-fiend	-prel'ate
-chan'cellor	-flam'en	-pres'byter
-conspir'ator	-flatt'erer	-priest
-crit'ic	-foe	-pri'mate
-dea'con	-gov'ernor	-proph'et
-dea'conry	-her'etic	-stone
-dea'conship	-her'esy	-trait'ors
(Archidiaconite, R. ii.)	-hyp'ocrite	-trea'son
-di'ocese	-like	-ty'rant
-Dru'id	-ly	-wise

Examples of Rule ii.—

ARCH-a'ism	ARCH-i.epis'copate	ARCH-i.tect
-æ.o'l'ogy	-i.epis'copal	-i.tecturo
-an'gel	-il	-i.trave
-angel'ic	-i.loch'ian	-i.volt
-e.go.sau'rus	-i.ma'gus	-ives
-e.type	-æ.im'edēs	-on
-ical	-i.pel'ago	-on.ship
-i.diac'onal

Exceptions:—

ARCH-apos'tate

not ark.apos'tate

ARCH-apos'tle

not ark.apos'tle

ARCH-er, ARCH-ery, ARCH-ed, ARCH-es, ARCH-ing, &c.

Archives, ark.ives not ar'.cheevz. Historical records, their dépôt.

Greek archeion, a public building, residence of the chief magistrates under whose charge the public records were placed.

Arctic, ark.tik not ar'.tik. Pertaining to the North Pole.

Greek arktos, the [Great] Bear, the chief northern constellation.

-ard (native suffix), "species," "kind;" dotard, drunkard—one of the doting kind, one of the drunken kind.

Ardent, ardent-ly, ardency. (Latin ardens, ardentis, burning.)

Ardour, ar'.dor. Fervency. (Latin ardor, French ardeur.)

Are, är not air. The old Norse "we, you, they are," has superseded the older form of synd or sinden.

Areca, a.ree'.käh. The betel-nut tree. (Malabar areek.)

Arena, plural arenæ or arenas, a.ree'.nah, a.ree'.nee, a.ree'.nâz.

Latin arēna, sand; that part of the amphitheatre where the gladiators fought, which was always well sanded.

Areola, plural areolæ, a.ree'.ô.lah, (sing.), means the coloured circle round the nipple of the breast; a.ree'.ô.lee (plural) means the spaces in the wings of insects between the nervures (2 syl.) Aurelia, q.v., is quite another word.

Areopagus, ar'ree.op"-ä-gûs not ar'ree'-o.päy"-gus.

Greek Ares pagós, Mars' Hill (a court of justice in Athens).

Argentine, ar'.gên.tîn (a mineral); ar'.gen.tine (adj.), like silver, belonging to the republic of La Plata.

Latin argentum, silver. (The metal is also called argentan.)

Argil, ar'.gil, clay; argill-aceous, argill-iferous, argill-ite, argill-itic, argill-ous, &c. (with double l). (Rule iii. -ll.)

Argonautic, ar'-gō.naut"ik not ar'-gō.nawk"-tik. Pertaining to the argonauts. (Greek Argo naus, the ship "Argo.")

Argue, ar'.gu; argues, ar'.guze; argued, ar'.gûde; arguer, ar'.gu.er; argument not argument, ar'gumen"tion, ar'gumen"tative, ar'gumen"tatively. (The "e" in argue is a blunder.) (This is the only word, except four verbs in "-dge," which drops the "e" before "ment.") Rule xviii.

French arguer [er], argument, argumentation, &c.; Latin arguo.

Arise, past tense arose, past part. arisen. Aris-ing.

A.rize', a.roze', a.riz'.n, a.rize'.ing. To rise up.

Old English arts [an], past ards, past participle arisen.

Aristocracy, plu. aristocracies, ar'ris.tok"-ră-sŷ, ar'ris.tok'-ră-siz.

It is now customary to spell all the words from the Greek kratia "cracy," not crasy: thus, aristocracy, autocracy, democracy, with the hybrid mobocracy. The ending -cy denotes "rank," "office," &c. Greek aristokratia (ariston kratein), rule of the best-born.

Arithmetic, a.rith'.mě.tik not a.reth'.mě.tik.

Arithmetical, a.rith'.met"-i.kāl not a.reth'.met"-i.kal.

Arithmetician, a.rith'-mě.tish"-an not a.reth'-met.ish"-an.
(In the Greek the "e" of all these words is long.)

Greek arithmos, number; arithmétikōs, one skilled in numbers.

Armada, ar.may'.dāh not ar.māh".dāh. An armed fleet. (Sp.)

Armadillo, plural armadillos (Spanish). (Rule xlii.)

Armillary (sphere), ar'.mīl.lūry not ar.mīl'.lūry. A machine fitted with movable circles representing the great and little geographical circles of our earth.

Latin armilla, a bracelet or iron ring.

Army, plural armies, ar'.mỹ, ar'.mīz. (Rule xliv.)

Aroma, a.rō.mah. The fragrant principle of plants.

Aromatic, ar'rō.mat"-ik. Containing arōma.

Greek arōma, seasoning. Latin arōmaticus, aromatic.

Arpeggio, plural arpeggios, ar.ped'jo, ar.ped'joze. (Rule xlii.)
Chords played as in the harp, that is "open," not "close."

Italian arpeggio (arpa, a harp; arpeggiare, to play the harp).

Arragonite, ar'ra.gō.nite not ar.rag'on.ite. A metal.
(This word ought to be spelt with one r.) It is named from Aragon, in Spain.

Arraign, ar.rain', to indite. Arrange, to set in order.

Old Fr. arraigner; Lat. ad rationem stare, to stand to a law-suit.

Arrange, ar.rainj, arranged (2 syl.), arrang-ing, arrang-er, arrangement (with the e), ar.rainj'.ment. (Note the double r.) (Only 5 words lose the "e" before "ment": acknowledg-ment, abridg-ment, lodg-ment, judg-ment, and argu-ment. All but the last end in -dge.)

French arranger, arrangement, i.e., ar [ad] rang, according to rank.

Arrant (thorough), as an "arrant knave." Errant, wandering.

"An arrant knave" is probably the Old English a nearo cnāpa (an arrant knave), similarly nearo bregd (great fear), nearo grap (thorough grasp).

"Errant," Latin errans, errantis, wandering.

Array, arrayed not arraid. To put in order of battle.

Medieval Latin arraya, an array; arraiatio, an arraying.

Arrest, ar.rest' not a.rest'. To seize as a prisoner.

Greek arēsta, [summoned to hear] the judgment of the court.
Medieval Latin arresto, to arrest; arrestum, an arrest.

Arrive, ūr.rive' not ū.rive'; arrived (2 syl.), arriv'-ing, arriv'-al.

Latin ar [ad] rivum, [come] to the river (the shore or boundary), rivers being the natural boundaries of nations.

Arrogant, arrogance, arrogancy, arrogate (double r).

Latin ar [ad] rogāre, to claim to [oneself].

-art (Old English termination), added to agents, as braggart.

Art (of the verb "to be"), is the Old English ear-th or ear-t, the first person "am" being eo-m (later form ea-m), m is the first person pronoun, and th or t the second.

Art, a work of skill. Hart, a male deer. Heart (of the body).

"Art," Latin ars artis. "Hart," Old Eng. heorot. "Heart," Old Eng. heorte.

Art'ist, art'isan, art'ifice, artificer, artific'ial, artific'ially.

Artemisia, ar'-tēmiz'-i-ăh. Mother-wort, wormwood, &c.

From Artēmis, who presided over women in child-birth, hence also the name mother-wort. It is called worm-wood because moths dislike it for its bitterness.

Art'ery, plu. art'er'ies. A vessel to convey blood from the heart. (In Greek the "e" is long, as in artērial.)

Greek artēria (i.e., aer tēro, to hold air; from the old notion that arteries are air tubes, because in dead bodies they are empty).

Artesian (well) Ar.tee'.zī.an not Ar.tee'.zhūn. Water obtained by boring the earth.

So called from Artois (or Artēsium) in France.

Article, THE called the "definite," AN the "indefinite." "An" drops its n when the word following begins with a vowel or h mute. "The" is a pronoun adjective, "An" the numeral adjective ane (one). See A (article).

Artifice, ar'.tī.fīs (Latin artificium, done by art).

Artillery, ar.til'.lērj. Ordnance. (French artillerie).

Artisan, ar'.tī.zan. A skilled workman, a mechanic.

Latin artis, with the termination -an (an agent), "a man of skill."

Arum, air'.um. The wake-robin, cuckoo-pint, lords and ladies, &c.

Greek arōn, said to be an Egyptian word. Called "Wake-robin," because it generates great spontaneous heat.

-ary (Latin termination) -ri[us], preceded by "a." It is added both to nouns and adjectives. In nouns it means "a place" for something, as library; or "one who pursues a craft," as statuary. As an adjective it means "pertaining to," as literary.

As- (prefix), the Latin preposition ad before "s."

As ... as; so ... as. In affirmative sentences as follows as. In negative sentences as follows so. "It is as light as day;" "It is not so light as it was." So in indirect negative sentences: "Few kings have been so feared as Napoleon," that is "not many kings," &c. "So far as I know," that is, "I do not know to the contrary."

Asafœtida, as'ă.fee'-tī-dŭh. A gum-resin of fetid smell.

Latin asa fœtida, a fetid gum (asārum, nard).

Ascaris, plural ascarides, as'kǎ.ris, as.kar'rj.dēez.

Greek askāris, an intestinal thread-worm.

Ascend, ascended (3 syl.): -ed after "d" or "t" forms a separate syllable.

Ascension not -tion: after "d," "de," or "t," -sion and not -tion is added.

Ascendency, ascendant ought to be ascendent (not the 1st Latin conjugation).

Ascendable, one of the abnormal words in -able. (Rule xxiii.) It ought to be ascendible, like "descendible."

Latin as [ad] scendēre (i.e., scandere), to climb up to [something].

Ascertain, as'ser.tain'. To make oneself sure by investigation. Latin as [ad] certus, to assure oneself.

Ascetic, as.set'ik, a hermit; acetic, a.see'tik, sour.

Greek askētós (asked, to honour a divinity).

Ascii, as'si.i.. Those who have no shadow [at noon]. For the singular we use the word as'cian.

Greek a skia, without shadow (people in the torrid zone).

Ashamed, a.shamed' not as.shamed'. "To be ashamed," and "To be glad," are deponent verbs, that is, passive in form but active in sense.

Old English a-scāmian, to be ashamed; gladian, to be glad.

Ask, ǎsk not ǎsk (ax is a vulgarism). Old English asc[ian].

-asm (Greek termination -sm [os] preceded by "a." It is added to nouns), "system of," "state of"—enthusiasm.

Asparagus, as.par'ra.gŭs not spar'row.grass nor grass.

Greek asparāgōs, a plant with turios, i.e., unexpanded shoots.

Asperse, aspersed' (2 syl.), aspers'-ing, aspers'-er, aspers'-ion.

Latin aspergo, supine aspersum, to sprinkle.

Asphodel, as'fō.del not as.fō'.del. The day-lily, or King's-spear.

Greek asphōdēlōs (spōdōs, ashes), from its use in funerals.

Asphyxia, as.fix'.i.ǎh. A lull in the action of the heart.

Greek a sphuxis, without pulse (from suffocation, &c.)

Aspire', aspired (2 syl.), aspir'-ing, aspir'-er, aspirant.

Aspirate, as'pirated, as'pirat'-ing, as'pira'tion.

Latin as [ad] spirāre, to breathe towards or aim at [something].

-ass (French termination -asse added to nouns), means "made of," as cuirass, made of leather (cuir).

Ass, possessive case ass's, ass'iz; plural asses, ass'.ez.

Assail, assailed (2 syl.), assail-ing, assail-er. (Rule ii.)

Assailable, as.sai'l.a.b'l not ǎ.sai'l'a.b'l. (Rule xxiii.)

Latin as [ad] salire, to leap on one.

- Assassin, as.sas'.sîn. One who attempts murder by surprise.
 Armenian hashishin, hemp-eaters (LANE); hassa, to lie in ambush in order to kill (VOLNEY). (Observe double s twice.)
- Assassinate, as.sas'.sîn.ate. To kill by surprise. (Double s twice.)
- Assault, as.salt' not ă.sawlt'. To attack violently.
 Latin as [ad] saltum, to leap on another.
- Assay, past tense assayed not assaid. It is no comp. of "say."
 French essayer, to try; Medieval Latin assaia, assay.
- Assemble, as.sem'.b'ld, assem'bl-ing, assem'bl-er assem'bl-y, assem'bl-age. (Double s throughout.)
 French assembler, to gather persons together; Med. Latin assemblatio, (as [ad] simul blatio, to chat together).
- Assent, as.sent' not ă.sent'. To admit as true.
 Latin as [ad] sentio, to think as you think.
- Assertion, as.ser'.shun not ă.ser'.shun. An affirmation.
 Latin as [ad] sertum. Not the supine of "sero," to sow, which is sätum, but of sero, to knit or weave; whence serère colloquia (Livy), and serère sermōnes (Plautus). Conversation is a "web of words," or "knitting thoughts with words."
- Assessor, as.ses'.sör not ă.ses'.ser. One who assesses. (R. xxxvii.)
Assessable, one of the abnormal words in -able. (R. xxiii.)
 Latin as [ad] essor, a sitter [at a board for adjusting taxes].
- Assets, as.sets' (plu.) Property available for payment of debts.
 Latin as [ad] satis, [to be taken till there is] enough to [pay all].
- Asseverate, as.sev'.e.rate, assev'erat-ed, assev'erat-ing, assev'e-rat-or, assev'era''tion. To declare positively.
 Latin as [ad] severäre, to speak according to the truth.
- Assiduous, as.sid'.ă.ūs not ă.sid'.jũ.ūs. Industrious.
 Latin as [ad] sedēo, to sit close to [work].
- Assign, as.sine not ă.sine'. To make over to another.
Assignor, as'.sĩ.nor not as.sig'.nor nor as.sine'.or.
Assignee, as'.sĩ.nee not as.sig'.nee nor as.sine'.nee.
Assignment, as.sinc'.ment not ă.sinc'.ment. (Double s.)
 Latin as [ad] signo, to mark out for another.
- Assimilate, as.sim'.i.late not ă.sim'.ă.late. To make like.
 Assim'ilat-ed, assim'ilat-ing, assim'ilat-or, assim'ila''tion.
 Latin as [ad] similäre, to liken to something else (-mi- not -mu-).
- Assistant, assistance, as.sis'.tant, as.sis'.tance (Rule xxiv.)
 Latin as [ad] sistens, standing by or near another.
- Assize, plu. assizes, as.size', as.size'.ez. (Double s.)
 Law Latin assisa (as [ad] sessio), a sitting to [hear trials].

Associate, as.sō'.shĕ.ate not ă.sō'.shĕ.ate. To join as companion.
 Asso'ciat-ed, asso'ciat-ing, asso'ciat-or, asso'cia'tion, asso''ci-able (because the 1st Latin conjugation).

Latin as [ad] sociāre, to be a companion to one.

Assume, as.sumĕ', assumed' (2 syl.), assum'-ing, assum'-er, assum'-able. (Rule xxiii.)

Assumpt'-ive, assumption', assumpt'sit (from the supine).

Latin as [ad] sumĕre, supine assumptum, to arrogate to [oneself].

Assure, as.shure', assured' (2 syl.), assur'-ing, assuredly (4 syl.), assur'-edness (4 syl.), assur'er, assur'ance. To make sure.

French assurer; Medieval Latin assūre, assurancia; i.e., as [ad] secūro, to secure to one.

-aster (term. of nouns. French -astre). Deprecatory: poetaster.

-aster (Greek astĕr). "Affected by the stars:" disaster.

Asterisk, as'.ter.ĭsk not as'.ter.ĭk. A mark thus *.

Greek astĕriskōs, a little star (used to direct to a footnote).

Asteroid, as'.tĕ.roid. One of the minor planets.

-Greek astĕros-eidos, like a star. Herschel uses the gen. case to signify "likeness of character;" thus in Latin similis domini, "of a similar disposition to the master." (See Astroid.)

Asteroida, as'.tĕ.roid".ăh. An order of polypes (3 syl.)

Greek astĕros-eidos. So called because their expanded tentacles form a star-like or rayed arrangement.

Asthma, asth'.mah. A disease affecting the breathing.

Greek asthma, a panting (ad, to blow or puff).

Astroid, as'troid. A star with six points instead of five.

Greek astrō-eidos, like a star in outward visible form; so in Latin "os, humerosque similis deo," in outward form like a god—in face and shoulders. (See Asteroid.)

Asylum, plu. asylums or asyla, a.sĭ'.lum, a.sĭ'.lah. (One s.)

Greek asylon, a place not to be violated (a sŭlad, not to pillage).

At- (prefix). The Latin preposition ad before "t."

At (preposition). Being a preposition it requires after it a noun, expressed or understood. Hence, such a phrase as "Where are you living at?" is incorrect; although it would not be incorrect to say "What house are you living at?" (i.e., at what house are you living?) Hat (for the head).

"At all," "not at all," not "a-tall," "not a-tall."

-ate (Latin termination -t [us] preceded by "a.")

It is added to nouns, adjectives, and verbs.

To NOUNS signifying "office:" as advocate.

To ADJECTIVES signifying "made of," "full of:" passionate.

To VERBS signifying to "take up," "put into:" animate.

-ate (in Chemistry), denotes a salt formed by the union of an acid with a base: as nitrate.

Ate, past tense of eat. Hate, dislike. Ait, an island.

"Ate," Old English e[ðan], past æt, past participle eten, to eat.

"Hate," Old Eng. hæte, verb hettan, past hette, past part. hetten, hate.

"Ait," corruption of the Norse eyot or ayot, a little ey or ay [island].

Athens'um or Athenæ'um. Public club house, reading room, &c.

Greek Athenaion, the temple of Athēnæ (goddess of wisdom).

Athletic, ath.lét'ík not ath.lit'ík, adjective of athlete (2 syl.)

(In Greek the "e" of the second syllable is long.)

Greek athlētēs, a wrestler; adjective athlētikos.

-atic (Latin termination -tic[us] preceded by "a") added to adjectival nouns: as fanatic, "one who belongs to a fanum or temple;" i.e., a priest, who raved like a madman when he gave responses in the temple.

Atlas, plu. Atlantes, At'las, At.lan'teez, not Atlan'tides (4 syl.)

In architecture, "Atlantes" are figures of Atlas used as supporters or pillars. (See Atlantides.)

Atlantean, At.lan'tēan not At.lan.tē'an, adj. of Atlas.

Latin Atlantēus, belonging to Atlas. (Atlantian is quite another word, being the adj. of "Atlantias," a female descendant of Atlas.)

Atlantides, At.lan'ti.deez. The Pleiades (Pli'ā.deez) or seven "daughters of Atlas" formed into a constellation.

Greek Atlas-ides (-ides, a patronymic), offspring of Atlas.

Atlantiades, At.lan'ti.ā.deez. Mercury, a descendant of Atlas.

In Greek the masculine patronymics are -adēs, -idēs, and -iadēs.

-Atmosphere, at'mos.fear. The fluid enveloping the earth.

Greek atmos phaira, a sphere of vapour. (The "air" is one part of the "Atmosphere." The Atmosphere consists of air, vapour, gases, and whatever else contributes to the mass.)

Atmospheric, at'mōs.fēr'-ik not at'mōs.fēe'-rik.

French atmosphérique, pertaining to the atmosphere.

Atom, at'om, at'omic, at'omed (2 syl.), at'omise, at'omised (3 syl.), at'omis-ing, at'omis-er, at'omism. An indivisible particle. (One t.)

Atomical, a.tom'i.kal, atom'ically, adj. and adv. of atom.

Greek ātōmōs, an atom (a temno, not cut, not able to be cut).

Atone, a.tōnē', atoned' (2 syl.), aton'-ing, aton'-er, atone-ment.

A compound of at-one.

Atonic, at'.ō.nik, atony, at'.ō.ny. Wanting tone.

A ton'ic is a medicine to give tone.

Greek a tōnōs, without that which strains or "braces."

Atrabiliary, a'-trā.bil'-i-ā-ry not a'-trā.bil'-ā-rŷ. Melancholic.

Latin atra bilis, black bile; supposed at one time to produce melancholy. (Greek mēlān cholē, black bile.)

Atrocious, ă.trô'.shūs not at.trô'.shūs. Very heinous.

Latin atrox, atrōcis, black, heinous.

Atrocity, ă.trōs'.tīj; atrociousness, a.trō.shūs.ness.

(In Latin the "o" of atrocity is long.) (Atrōcitas.)

Attach, at.tach'; attachment, at.tach'.ment. (Double t.)

French attacher, to bind to another. Low Latin attachiāre.

Attack, attacked, at.takt' not ă.takt'. To assault.

French attaquer; Latin at [ad] Greek tasso, to put an army in array; hence the Latin word tactici, those who array an army.

Attain, at.tain. To touch on, not to complete. Thus a man attains his 50th year on his 50th birthday.

Attainment, attainable (double t). Rule xxiii.

Latin at [ad] tinēre [tenēre], to touch on, to reach till you touch.

Attainted, at.taint'.ed not ă.taint'.ed. Condemned to lose one's civil rights, stained with the charge of treason.

Latin at [ad] tinctus (tingo, to dye; Greek leggo=tengo).

Attempt, at.tempt' not ă.tempt'. An effort, to try.

Latin at [ad] tento, to try to [do something].

Attend, attention, at.tend', at.ten'.shun. (Double t.) To stretch the mind to follow a person's thoughts, hence to follow.

Latin at [ad] tendo, to stretch out to something.

Attendance, attendant. These should be attendance, attendent: as superintendent, superintendence. (Rules xxiv. and xxv.)

Latin at [ad] attendens, verb attendere, to attend.

Attenuate, at.ten'.ū.ate not ă.ten'.ū.ate. To make thin.

Atten'uated, atten'uat-ing, atten'ua"tion, atten'uat-or.

Latin at [ad] tenuo, to make very thin.

Attestation, at'-tes.tay"-shun not ă-tes.tay"-shun. Attestator.

Latin at [ad] testāri, to bear witness to [a document].

Attire, at.tire' not ă.tire'. A dress, to dress or adorn.

Attired' (2 syl.), attir'-ing, attir'-er.

French atour, a head-dress; dame d'atour, lady of the bed-chamber.

Attorney, at.tur'.ney, plu. attorneys not attornies.

Law Latin attornātus, one who takes the turn or place of [his client].

Attorney-general, plu. attorney-generals, not attorneys-general.

In this compound "general" is not an adjective, but a noun. The word does not mean general or common attorneys, but head or crown attorneys. Similarly lieutenant-generals, brigadier-generals, major-generals, &c.

Attraction, at.trac'.shun not ă.trac'.shun.

Latin at [ad] tractio, a drawing towards something.

Attractable, attractability. These ought to be attractible, attractibility, as contractible, contractibility (Rule xxiii.)

Attribute, at'.trī.bute (noun); at'.trib'.ute (verb) (Rule 1.)

Latin at [ad] tribuere, to give or ascribe to someone.

Attributable, contributable, distributable (Rule xxiii.)

Attrition, at'.trish'.on not ă.trish'.on. Wearing by friction.

Latin at [ad] tritui, [one thing] rubbed against another.

Attune, at'.tune' not ă.tune'; attuned (2 syl.); attun'-ing.

Latin at [ad] tonus, to put in tune [with other instruments].

Auction, awk'.shun not ok'.shun. A sale by bidding.

Latin auctio (augeo, to increase [the amount of each bid]).

Aucuba, au'.kū.bah not a.kū'.bah. A Japanese plant.

Audacious, au.day'shūs not ou.day'.shus. Bold, impudent.

French audacieux, Latin audax, audācis, bold.

Audible, not audable; so inaudible. (Not the 1st Lat. conj.)

Latin audire, to hear; audibilis, what may be heard.

Audience. "A.B. had an audience of Her Majesty," not "an audience with—;" "the queen gave an audience to—"

Augean, Au'.jē.an not Au.jee'.an (short e). The king's name was Augēas not Augēas. A mythical king of Elis (Greece.)

Aught and naught; ought and nought.

Old English ǣht, anything; nāht (ne ǣht), nothing.

Also, ǣht, anything; nēht (ne ǣht), nothing.

Augment, aug'.ment (noun); aug.ment' (verb). Rule 1.

August, au'.gust (noun); au.gust' (adjective).

Augustins, not Augustines. Of the order of St. Augustin.

Aunt not ǣnt, a corruption of amt. Ant, ǣnt not arnt.

Latin amit[a] shortened to am't; similarly "ant" is a corruption of em't; i.e., emit shortened to em't. Incorrectly emmit.

Aurelia, au.ree'.li.ah. It ought to be au.rel'.i.ah.

Latin aurum, gold, with the diminutive -el, and the termination -ia, the little gold creature. The Greek chrysallis is the same:—chrysos, gold; chrysallis, the little gold creature (our "chrysalis").

Aureola, au'.rē.ō.lāh not au.ree'.ō.lāh nor au.rē.ō.lāh. The circle of gold or "glory" round portraits of saints.

Latin aureolus, golden; aureōla, the golden nimbus (aurum).

Auricula, au.rik'.ū.lah. The plant called "bear's-ear."

Latin auris, and the diminutive -cula, a little ear; so called because the leaves resemble in shape a bear's ear.

Auspice, plu. auspices, aus'.pīs, aus'.pī.siz. Augury.

Auspicious, aus.pish'.us. Lucky; of good augury.

Latin auspicium, divination from birds (aves specto, I inspect birds).

Austere, aus.tear', comp. auster'er, sup. auster'est.

Austerity, plu. austerities, aus.ter'.rī.tīz.

Latin austerus, rough; austeritas; Greek austērós, austērōtēs.

Authentic and Genuine, au·then·tĭk, gen' ŭ.in.

"Authentic" book, one true in what it states.

"Genuine" book, one written by the person to whom it is ascribed.

Author, feminine authoress or author. (Latin author, R. xxxvii.)

Authorise, not authorize. (It is not a Greek word. Rule xxxi.)

Autocracy not autocracy. (See Aristocracy.)

Greek autō-krātēs, ruling by oneself, absolute.

Autocrat, feminine autocratrix, au'.tō.krat, au.tok.rā·trix.

Greek autōkrātōr, an absolute monarch.

Auto-da-fé not auto-de-fe, pronounce au'-to da-fay' (Port.)

Autom'aton, plu. autom'ata or autom'atons.

Greek automaton (autos mattō, to work of oneself).

Autumn, aw'.tum; autum'nal. (Latin autumnus.)

Auxiliary, plu. auxiliaries, aux.il' ŭ.ŭ.riz, not aux.il' ŭ.riz.

Latin auxilium, help; auxillāres, auxillārius, sent from allies; verb auxillor, to help, from auglo, perf. auxi, to increase.

Avail, a.vail', avail-able, avail-ableness, avail-ability, &c. (R.xxiii.)

Latin a [ad] valēre, to be strong against [an adversary].

Avalanche, av'.a.lansh'. A vast body of snow sliding down a mountain.

French avalanche; Latin a [ad] vallem lancināre, to tear away towards the valley.

Avarice, av'.a.ris; avaricious, av.a.rish'us; avariciousness.

Latin avaritia, avarice; avarus, a covetous man.

Avenge, a.venge'; avenged' (2 syl.), aveng'-ing, aveng'-er.

Old French avengier, to revenge; Latin a [ad] vindicāre.

Aver, averred', averr-ing, a.ver', a.verd', a.ver'ing. (Rule i.)

Averse, a.verse'; averse-ly, averse'-ness, aver'sion.

Avert', avert'ed, avert'ing, avert'-er.

Latin a verto, to turn away, supine aversum.

Aviary, plu. aviaries, av' ŭ.ŭ.riz. A place for fancy birds.

Latin avilārium, an aviary (avis, a bird).

Avocation, av'.o.kay".shun. An occupation distinct from your regular trade or profession. It is incorrect to call your ordinary business your avocation, it is your vocation. Thus building is the "vocation" of a builder, gardening may be his "avocation."

Latin a-vocation, a calling away [from business].

Avoid, a.void', avoid-able, avoid-ance, avoid-er.

Latin a vitāre, to shun from [seeing a person].

Avoirdupois, av'.wor.du.poi·z". The ordinary trade weights.

Corruption of the Old French avers "goods in general," du "of," and poise "weight." A system of weights for goods "sold by weight."

Awake, past awoke or [awaked, 2 syl.], past part. awoke or [awaken]; awak-ing, a.wake'-ing. To rouse from sleep.

Old Eng. awac[an], past awóc, past part. awacen, to awake.

Awaken, past part. awakened (3 syl.) (In a religious sense.)

Old English awæcn[ian], past awæcnede, past part. awæcned.

Awe, aw-ing, aw-ful, aw-fully, aw-fulness; but awe-struck, awe-less. Old English ége, dread. (Rules xvii. and xix.)

Awkward means left handed; hence ungraceful, clumsy.

French gauche. Awk, the left hand. "The awke or left hand" (Holland's "Plutarch").

Awl, a shoemaker's tool for boring holes. All, every-one.

Haul, a catch of fishes. Hall (of a house), a mansion.

"Awl," Old Eng. æl or awel, an awl. "All," Old Eng. æl or al.

"Haul," French haler, to haul. "Hall," Old Eng. heall, a hall.

Axil, ax'il, the armpit. Axle, ax'l (of a wheel).

Axil, ax'ill-ar, ax'ill-ary. (Latin axilla, the armpit.)

Axle, axle-tree. Axled, ax'ild. (Latin axis, an axis.)

Axis, plu. axes (Latin), ax'iss, ax'eez (The plural of Axe is also axes, but pronounced ax'ēz.)

Ay or aye (meaning yes), plu. ayes, eye, eyes. No, plu. noes.

Aye, ā, meaning always. Old English awa, always; Greek ai.

Azalea not azalia, a.zay'.lē.ăh. A genus of shrubs.

Greek azalēos, dry; so called because it loves a dry soil.

Azoic, a.zō'ik. Where no trace of life exists, as "azoic rocks."

Greek a zōon, without a living creature.

Babble, bab'.b'l, to prate. Babel, Ba'.bel (Gen. xi. 9).

Babbled, bab'.b'ld; babbler, babbling. (Double b.)

French babiller, to prattle.

Baboon, bă.boon'. A large monkey. (One b.) Rule lxi.

French babine, a lip, and -oon, augmentative (large-lipped).

Baby, plu. babies, bay'.bÿ, bay'.bez; also babe, babes (1 syl.)

A word common to the whole Aryan family of languages.

Bacchanal, bak'.kă.năl; Bacchana'lian. (Double c.)

Greek Bakchos, the wine-god. Latin Bacchānālīs, Bacchus.

Bachelor, batch'.ĕ.lor; feminine spinster, maid.

Backgammon, back-gam'.mōn. (Double m.)

Either Old English bac-gamen, the back game; because the art is to bring all the pieces back into the adversary's table.

Or Welsh bach cammaun, a little battle.

Or Danish bakke gammen, a tray game.

Backward (adj.), dull. Backwards (adv.), in a back direction.

Bad, worse (comparative deg.), worst (superlative deg.) Worse, worst, are the degrees of the obsolete word wear (bad).

Bade, bād (past tense of "bid"). The final e is to compensate for the diphthong in bæd.

"Bad" is probably an ecclesiastical word, taken from Rev. ix. 11; "Abaddon," from the verb abad, to be lost. If so, bad means "lost eternally."

Badinage, bad'x.narje not bad'x.nazh nor bad'x.nāje. Banter.

Bag, bagged (1 syl.), bagg-ing, bagg-age (Rule i.)

Bagatelle, bag'a.tel' (French). A trifle, a game.

Bagnio, plu. bagnios, ban'yō, ban'yōze (Rule xlii.)

Bail, surety. Bale, a packet. (Both pronounced alike.)

"Bail," French bailier, to give or deliver.

"Bale," French balle, a pedlar's pack.

Bailiff, a steward, an officer of justice. Bailey, a prison (R. vi.)

"Bailiff," Law Latin ballivus, a bailiff.

"Bailey," Law Latin ballium, the enclosure of a fortress.

Bait, lure for fish, refreshment for a horse. Bate, to lessen.

"Bait," Old-English bat[an]. "Bate" or "abate," French abattre.

Baize, coarse woollen cloth. Bays, plu. of bay (laurel).

"Baize," Spanish bayeta; called in French espagnolette.

Balance not ballance. A pair of scales. (Only one "l.")

Latin bi-lances, two dishes or platters. French balance.

Balcony, plu. balconies, bal'ko.nīz. Window platforms.

In the Italian the "o" is long: balcone (bal.kō'ne).

Bald, bawld not bawl. Without hair. Baldness not bawl.ness.

Bale, a packet. Bail, surety. (See Bail.)

Balk, bawk. Old English balca, a balk.

Ball, retains double l in all its compounds: as ball-oon, ball-ot, ball-room, football, snowball, &c. (Rule x.)

Ballad, Ballet, Ballot, bāl'.lād, bāl'.lāy, bāl'.lot.

Ballad. A song containing a tale. (French ballade.)

Ballet. A theatrical dance. (French ballet.)

Ballot, "A little ball" used in voting. (French ballotte.)

Balloon, bāl.loon. Ball with -oon augmentative. (Rule lxi.)

Balluster, bal'.lūs.tēr. A short ornamental pillar.

(The guard of a staircase is corruptly called banister.)

Ballustrade, bal'.ūs.trāde. A set of ballusters.

French balustre, balustrade.

Balm (the herb). Barm, ferment, leaven.

"Balm," contraction of balsam (bal'm), Latin.

"Barm," Old English beorma, leaven.

Bamboo, plural bamboos (Malay), bam'.boó', bam'.booz'.

Ban, banned (1 syl.), bann-ing. Banns (of marriage). Rule i.

* Latin bannum, a ban; banna (matrimonialia), banns.

Banana (Spanish), bă.nah'.nah not bă.nay'.nah.

Bandit, plural bandits or banditti, ban.dit', ban.dit'.tj.

Italian banditto, plural banditti, outlaws.

Bandrol, band'.rol. The little flag attached to a trumpet.

French banderole (2 syl.), bande and -role (diminutive).

Bandy, plural bandies (2 syl.), ban'died (2 syl.), ban'di-er, but ban'dy-ing, ban'dy-legs, &c. (Rule xi.)

Banian (days) ban'.yan'. Days when no meat is served. The Banians of India abstain from animal food.

Ban'ister. The guard of a staircase. Corruption of balluster.

Bankrupt, bank'.rupt not bank'.rup. One who has failed.

Bankruptcy, not bankruptcy. State of being a bankrupt.

Italian banco-rotto, broken-bench; because when a money-lender failed, his bench was broken, and he was expelled from his office.

Banner, ban'.ner. A flag. (Double n.)

Latin pannus; Welsh baniar; French bannière.

Banns (of marriage), not bans nor bands. (See Ban.)

Ban'quet, ban'quet-ed, ban'quet-er, ban'quet-ing. (Rule iii.)

(-ed forms a distinct syl. after d or t.) French banquet.

Baptize' not baptise, bap'tism, bap'tist. Baptized' (2 syl.), bap-tiz'-ing.

Greek baptizô, baptisma, baptistos.

Bar, barred (1 syl.), barr-ing, barr-ister, barr-ier, barr-icade, barr-ulet, barr-y. (Rule i.) French barrer, to bar.

Barbarize, bar'.ba.rize not barbarise. To make barbarous.

Greek barbärizô, to make barbarous.

Bar'berry. A corruption of berbery. (Genus berbëris.)

Barefoot or barefooted. "Walking naked and barefoot." (Isa. xx. 2.) Old English bær-fót, bare-foot.

Barley. The plural barleys means different specimens or sorts, the general crop: as, The barleys look well (the general crop). Barleys were higher (the specimens offered for sale). Welsh bara llys[iau], bread plants.

Barm, leaven. Balm, balsam. (See Balm.)

Baron, a lord (one r). Barren, not fertile (double r).

Baron, feminine baroness. Baronry, baronet, baronial.

* bă'.ron, bă'.ron.ess, bă'.ron.ry, bă'.ron.et, but bă.rō'.ni.al.

"Baron," Latin baro (a dolt); Barones dicuntur servi militum, qui utique stultissimi sunt, servi videlicet stultorum (Scholiast). First a serving soldier, then a military chief, then a lord.

- Barouche, bă.roushv. A four-wheel coach with a falling top.
 Latin birōta, a cart with two pair of wheels (vis rota), through the German barutsche.
- Barrack, plural barracks. The plural is more generally used.
 The singular is used in compound words as barrack-master, barrack-life.
- Bar'rel, bar'relled (2 syl.), bar'relling. (Rule iii. -EL.)
 Spanish barrel. In Welsh and French baril, only one "r."
- Barren, not fruitful. Baron, a lord. (See Baron.)
- Barricade, bărr.ri.kade'. Originally meant to block up a thoroughfare with barrels (French barriques) filled with stones or earth. (French barricader, to barricade.)
- Barrier, bărrr.ri.er. A bar to keep out intruders.
 French barrière, from barre, a bar; Welsh bâr, a bar.
- Barrister, bărr'ris.ter. One called to the bar, a pleader.
Bar and the Old Eng. termination -ster, business, habit.
- Baryta, bărr'rij.tah, incorrectly bărr'ij.tah. A heavy mineral.
 Greek barūtēs, heaviness; so called from its weight. (See next.)
- Barytone, bărr'rij.tone. A deep tenor voice.
 Greek barūs tōnōs, heavy tone of voice.
- Base, vile. Bass (voice). Both pronounced alike.
 "Base," Welsh bās, low, mean. "Bass," Italian basso.
- Bashaw, now called "Pasha," pah'shah.
- Basilisk, bas'ī.lisk. The cockatrice. Basilic, adj. of basil'ica.
 Latin basiliscus (Greek basileus, a king). The "king serpent;" so called from a crest on its head like a crown.
 "Basilica," a royal hall of justice; such a hall used for a church.
- Basin, ba'sin not bason. (The French word has double s).
- Basis, plural bases (Latin), bay'sis, bay'seez. (See Base.)
- Bass, plural basses; or basso, plural bassos: base, base'.ez; bas'so, bas'soze. (See Base.) Rule xlii.
- Bass-relief, plural bass-reliefs; or basso-relievo, plural basso-relievos: base re-leef', base re-leefs'; or bas'so rel.ī.ā.vō, bas'so rel.ī.ā.vōze. (Rule xlii.)
- Bassoon, bās.zoon'. A deep bass wind-instrument.
Bass and -oon (augmentative). Italian bassone; French basson.
- Bastille, bas.teel'. A State prison in Paris. (Not bastile.)
 French bastir now bâtir, to build. It means the building.
- Bastinado, plural bastinadoes, bas'-tī.nah"-doze. (Rule xlii.)
- Bat, batt-ed, batt-ing. Bat (the winged mouse), batt-ish. R. i.
 "Bat," Old English bat, a bat. French battre, to beat.
 "Bat" (the animal), Welsh bathor, a dormouse.

- Bate, contraction of abate. Bait, refreshment. (See Bait.)
- Bath, bàth not băth (noun); bathe, băthe (verb). Rule li.
- Bathos, băth.ôs, mock sublime. Pathos, păth.os. Words which excite a feeling of grief.
 "Bathos" (Greek), depth; the reverse of sublime.
 "Pathos" (Greek), feeling of grief.
- Baton (French), băt.tone. A small staff used by the leader of an orchestra, a marshal's staff of office, &c.
- Batrachians, ba.trak'.ă.anz. The frog order of reptiles.
 Greek batrăchos, a frog.
- Battalion (double t and one l), but in French bataillon.
 Latin batuo, to fight; Italian battaglione
- Battery, plu. batteries, bat'.te.riz. (French batterie.)
- Battle, bat'.t'l, battled, bat'.t'ld, battling, battlement.
 Welsh batel. French bataille. Italian battaglia. Spanish batalla.
- Bazaar, bă.zar', a depôt of fancy articles. Bizarre, fantastic.
 "Bazaar," Persian bazar, a market. "Bizarre" (French), fantastic.
- Be- (prefix) added to nouns, verbs, prepositions, and conjunctions. Added to nouns, it converts them into verbs, as be-friend. Added to verbs, it intensifies them, or adds the idea of about, at, before, for, in, on, over, &c. In prepositions and conjunctions it has the force of by or in
- Be (verb). Bee (insect). "Be" forms parts of the verb "To Be." It is used in hypothetical propositions, as: "If I be," that is, "If I should be."
 "Be" (verb), Old English beôn; present tense ic beô, thû bȳst, he bȳth; plural beôth (all persons).
 "Bee" insect, beo, plural beon (without accent).
- Beach, coast. Beech, a tree. (Both pronounced beech.)
 "Beach," Old Eng. becc, a brook. "Beech," Old Eng. bēce, a beech.
- Beadle, bee'.d'l. A church officer. (See Bedell.)
 Old English bædel, one who bids or cites [to a court of law].
- Bead-roll not bead-rol. A list of those to be prayed for. (R. x.)
Beadsman, feminine beadswoman; plu. beadsmen, beads-women. One employed to pray for another's welfare.
 Old English bead or bēd, a prayer.
- Bean, pulse. Been, bĭn, past participle of "To be."
 Old English bean, pulse. "Been," Old English ben of the verb beôn.
- Bear (to carry), past bore [bare], past participle borne.
Bear (to bring forth), past bore [bare], past part. born.
 "Bear" (to carry, to produce), O. Eng. bēran, past bær, p.p. boren.
- Bear (a wild beast); he-bear, she-bear. Bare, naked.
 "Bear" (the animal), Old Eng. bera. "Bare," Old Eng. bār[ian].

Beast, beest, beast-ly, beast-liness: but best-ial, best-iality, best-ially (without "a"). (The "a" of beast is inserted to distinguish the word from "best.")

Latin bestia, a beast; bestialis, bestial.

Beat, to strike. Beet, a root. (Both pronounced beet.)

Beat, past beat, past part. beaten or beat. (We say:

"He was dead beat," but beaten is the general past part.

Old English beaþ[an], past beoþ, past part. beoþen.

"Beet" (the root), German beete; Latin bēta; French bette.

Beatify, be.at'ify; beat'ify-ing; but beatified (be.at'i.fide); beat'ifi-ca'tion, bentif'i-cal. (Rule xi.)

Latin, beatus facio, to make happy.

Beau, bo, a fop. Bo! an exclamation to frighten children.

Bow, plural bows, an instrument to propel arrows. (Bow to rhyme with grow.)

Beau, plural beaux, bō, boze; feminine belle, plural belles, bell, bells (French). Gentlemen and ladies admired.

Latin bellus, beautiful. Beau is a contraction of bellus (be'u).

Beau ideal, plural beaux ideals, bō i.dee'al, boze i.dee'al (French.) A fancy model of beauty or excellency.

Beau monde, bō mōnd (French). The fashionable world.

Beauty, plural beauties, bu'tiz; beauti-ful, beauti-fully, beauti-ty, beauti-fying, beauti-fied (3 syl.), beauti-fi-er (Rule xi.): beaute-ous, beaute-ously, beaute-ousness (with ē).

French beauté. (There is no sufficient reason for the change of vowel.)

Beautiful, bū'ti-ful. In poetry the superlative beautifullest is sometimes used.

Becafico, ought to be beccafico, bek'-kū.fee"-ko. The fig-pecker.

Italian beccafico (beccare fico, to pick the fig or fig-tree).

Becalm, be.carm' not be.calm; becalmed, be.carmd.

Fr. calme; Ital. and Sp. calma, quiet, with prefix be-, "to make."

Become, past became, past part. become, pres. part. becom-ing.

Old English becum[an], past becom, past part. becumen.

Bed, bedd-ed, bedd-ing; but bedpost, bedstead, &c. (Rule i.)

Old English bed or bæd (noun); bed[ian], to go to bed.

Bed-clothes, bed-cloze (no sing.) Sheets, blankets, and quilt.

Bedell not beadle, bee'dell. A university or court mace-bearer.

Always styled the Squire bedell. (Latin bedellus.)

Bedim, be.dim', bedimmed (2 syl.), bedimm-ing. (Rule i.)

Old Eng. dim, dark, with prefix be-, which converts nouns to verbs.

Bedlam, bed'lām. Corruption of Bethlehem, the name of a religious house converted into a lunatic asylum.

Bedouin, Bed'win. An Arab tribe (dwellers in the desert).

Arabic bedawi (from badw or bedw, a desert).

Bee, the insect. Old Eng. beo. Be (the verb). Old Eng. beô.
(See Be.)

Beech, a tree. Beach, a coast. (See Beach.)

Beef, the flesh of slain oxen; plural beeves, living oxen.
(Rule xxxviii.)

French bœuf, plural bœufs; Latin boves, oxen.

Beef-steak, beef-stake not beef-steek.

"Steak" is Old Norse stek; Danish steg, a broil, or slice to roast.

Beef-eaters, beef-eaters. Yeomen of the guard.

Norman French buffetiers or bouffitiers, waiters at the bouffets.

Been, bin, past part. of "To be." Bin (for corn, wine, refuse.)

"Been," Old Eng. beon. "Bin," Old Eng. bin or binn, a crib, hutch, &c.

Beer, malt liquor. Bier, beer, barrow for the dead.

"Beer," Old English beor. "Bier," Old English bær.

Beestings, beest-ingz not beestlings. First milk after calving.

Old English bysting, which is the better spelling, and sing. number.

Beet, a root. Beat, to strike. (See Beat.)

Beetle, bee'tl, an insect; a mallet. Betel, bee'tel, a shrub.

Old English betel or bitel, a beetle; bytel or bytl, a mallet.

"Betel," an East Indian plant, the leaf of which is much used.

Beeves, beevz, black cattle; plural of beef. (See Beef.)

Befall, befell, befallen; not befal, befel, befalen. (Rule x.)

Befit, befitted, befitt-ing. To suit, to become. (Rule i.)

Defool, Old Eng. prefix be- makes verbs of nouns. (Rule lxii.)

Beg, begged (1 syl.), begg-ing, begg-ar, beggared (2 syl.) beggar-ing, beggarly, beggarli-ness, beggary, beggarman (all with double g.) Rule i. "I beg to inform you" means "I beg leave to inform you."

Beggar, a corruption of begiarer (Norse). This accounts for the termination "-ar."

Beget, past begot [begat], past part. begotten [begot], begett-er, begett-ing, begott-en. (Rule i.)

Old English begeôl[an], past begeât, past part. begoten.

Begin, past began [begun], past part. begun, beginn-ing, beginn-er. To commence, &c. (Rule i.)

Old Eng. beginn[an], past began, past participle begunnen.

Begird, past begirded, past part. begirded or begirt.

Old English begyrd[an], past begyrde, past participle begyrded.

Begonia, plural begonias, be.gō.nī.ăh. Elephant's ears (a plant.)

So called from M. Begon, French botanist.

Beguins, Beg'winz. A sect of religious women of Germany.

So called from a linen cap (or beguin) which they wear.

- Behalf. A corruption of the Old English behēfe (benefit).
- Behold, past and past participle beheld. The more ancient participle beholden means "under an obligation."
Old English beheald[an], past beheold, past part. behealden.
- Behoof (noun), behove (verb), Old Eng. be.hōf[ian]. Rule li.
- Belay, past and past part. belayed (2 syl.), not belaid. (R. xiv.)
Old English belēw[an], past belēwde, past part. belēwed. Lēwa, a betrayer, and prefix be- which converts nouns into verbs. It has no connection with the verb "lay." (Old English leagan.)
- Beldam (French belle dame). A euphemism for "an old hag."
Similarly the French say bel age for great age.
- Belemnite, bel'.em.nite not bel'.em.ite. "Thunderbolt."
Greek bēlēmnon, a dart. (These "stones" are fossil molluscs.)
- Belie, be.lī', past bel.ied', part. pres. bely'-ing. (See belly.)
Old Eng. belec[an], past belege, past participle beled.
- Belief (noun), believe (verb); be.leef, be.leeve. (Rule li.)
Believe, believ-able, believ-er, believ-ing, believ-ingly.
- Belle, plural belles, feminine of Beau, plural beaux (French), bell, bells; bō, boze. Pretty girls and their admirers.
- Belles lettres (plu), bel lettr. Polite literature. (French.)
- Bellows (plural), may refer to a single pair, but always requires a plural construction: "The bellows are broken."
Old English bylig, bellows (from bælg, a bag).
- Belly, plural bellies, bel'.līz; bellied, bel'.līd. (Rule xi.)
Belly-ing, belly-ache, belly-ful. (See Belie.)
Old English belig (from bælg, a bag); Welsh boly.
- Belong requires to after it: as "This belongs to me."
Old English gelaŋg, belonging to, property of.
- Belvedere, bel'.vē.deer'. A lookout in a garden.
Italian bel vedere, fine sight; Latin bellus videre.
- Bend, past and past part. bent; bended (adj.), as "On my bended knee."
Old English bend[an], past bende, past participle bended.
- Beneath, be.neeth' not be.neerh'. Old English beneoþan.
- Benedick or Benedict. A man who vows not to marry.
"Benedick" (in Much Ado about Nothing) vows he will not marry, but afterwards marries Beatrice. "Benedict" is a play on the proper name. It means "Blessed," or "Made happy," and is applied to an old bachelor who has become a bridegroom.
- Benefactor, feminine benefactress, ben.e.fāk'.tor, ben.e.fak'.tress.
-or- is more common than -er after t and s. Unhappily no uniform rule is observed.
Latin bene facio, to do well; beneficium, a benefit or good deed, &c.

Benefit, past and past part. benefited not benefitted; benefiting not benefitting. (Latin beneficio.) Rule iii.

Benign, benignly, be.nine', be.nine'ly; but benignant, benignantly, be.nig'.nant, be.nig'.nă.tij, &c.

Latin benignus, benignant (bēnus old form of bōnus, good).

Benumb, be.num'. To make numb or insensible from cold.

Old English benim[an], past bendm, past participle benumen, to stupify, to benumb. (The b is interpolated.)

Benzine, ben.zeen'. A fluid obtained from coal-tar.

Better Benzole, ben.zole, as the termination -ine denotes a gas. So called by Mitscherlich, who obtained it from benzōic acid. It was Faraday who discovered it in whale oil and coal tar.

Benzoin, ben.zoin', resin of the Benzoin plant (Styrax Benzoin).

In French Styrax Benjoin, and hence called "Gum Benjamin."

Benzoin, ben.zo'ın not ben.zoin'. Obtained from bitter almonds.

Bequest' (noun), bequeath (verb), be.kweeth'. O.Eng. becwēth[an].

Berberis, ber'.bĕ.ris (Latin). The barberry genus of plants.

Bereave, past and past part. bereft or bereaved (2 syl.)

Old Eng. beredf[ian], past beredfode, past part. beredfod.

Berg, a mountain. Burg or burgh, a fortified place: as "Heidelberg," the heather-hill (Germany);

"Edinburg," the fortified town of Dunedin (Scotland).

Old English berg, a hill. Burh, genitive burge, a fort.

Bernardine, Ber'.nar.dine not Ber.nar'.dine. Adj. of the next.

Bernardins, Ber'.nar.dins. So called from St. Ber'nard.

Berry, plu. berries, ber'.rĭz, a fruit. Bury, to inter (only one "r").

Both Old Eng.: Berie (only one "r"), a berry. Buri[an], to bury.

Berth, a place to sleep in. Birth, the act of being born.

Both Old Eng.: Būr, a bed-room; Beorth or berth, birth,

Beryl, ber'.rĭl. A precious stone somewhat like an emerald.

Greek bērullōs. (In the Greek word the "e" is long.)

Beseech, past and past part. besought. (The "g" is interpolated.)

Old Eng. besce[an]; past besōht; past part. besōht.

Beset', past and past part. beset; pres. part. besett-ing (R. i.)

Old English besettan; past besette; past part. bescten or besetten.

Beside, by the side of. Besides, in addition to, moreover.

Besom, bee'.zum not bee'.sum. A large broom. (O. Eng. besm.)

Besot', besott-ed, besott-edly, besott-edness, besott-ing, besott-ingly. (Old English be-sot.) Rule i.

Bespeak', past bespoke; past participle bespoken [bespoke].

Old English besprecc[an]; past besprecc; past participle besprocen.

- Besprinkle, past besprinkled, past part. besprinkled or besprent. (The prefix be- added to verbs intensifies them.)
 Old English bespreng[an], past besprengde, past participle besprenged; also besprinc[an], past bespranc, past participle bespruncen.
- Best (superlative deg.) Good, better, best. (Obsolete positive bet more.) At best; at the best: as "Life, at best, is but a shadow;" "Life, at the best, is but a shadow." "Life at best" means—to say the best of it. "Life at the best" means—in its best condition, taking the most favourable example. The two ideas are not identical.
- Bestial, bestiality, bestially (Latin bestia). See Beast.
- Bestir', bestirred (2 syl.), bestirr-ing. (Be- intensifies "stir.")
 Old Eng. bestyr[ian], past bestyrde, past participle bestyred.
- Bestrew, past bestrewed (2 syl.), past part. bestrewed or bestrewn. (The prefix be- added to verbs intensifies them.)
 Bestrow, past bestrowed (2 syl.), past part. bestrowed or bestrown. To scatter thoroughly, to strew well.
 Old English bestreow[ian], past bestreowode, past part. bestreowod.
- Bestride, past bestrode or bestrid, past part. bestridden.
 Old Eng. bestræd[an], past bestrade, past part. bestræden.
- Bestud, past bestudd-ed, past part. bestudd-ed or bestud, bestudd-ing. To decorate with studs. (Rule i.)
 Old Eng. studu, a stud. Be- added to nouns converts them into verbs.
- Bet, past and past part. bet or betted. Bett-or, bett-ing. (R. i.)
 ("Bettor," with -or, to distinguish it from the adjective.)
 Old Eng. bad[ian], past badode, past participle badod.
- Betake, past betook, past part. betaken; pres. part. betak'-ing.
 Old English betæc[an], past betæhte, past participle betæht.
- Bethink, past and past part. bethought. To call to mind by thinking. (The "g" is interpolated.)
 Old English bethenc[an], past bethōhte, past participle bethōht.
- Betray', betrayed' (2 syl.), betray'-ing, betray al, betray'er. (R. xiii.)
 The prefix be- added to "traitor" converts it into a verb.
- Betroth, be.trōth not be.trōth. To pledge to marry.
 Old Eng. trēowith, troth, pledge. The prefix be- makes verbs of nouns.
- Better, more good. Bettor, one who bets. (See Best.)
- Betunia (no such word). It should be Petunia, pe.tu'.nī.ăh.
- Bevel, bevelled (2 syl.), bevell-ing, bevell-er. (Rule iii. -EL.)
 French bévil or biveau (noun), a sloping edge.
- Beware-of. No past tense, participle, or gerund. Without an auxiliary it is used only in the Imperative and Infinitive present. (The auxiliaries used with it are shall and should, may and might, also the verbs must, needs, can, and could, but not do or did, have or had, am, be, or was.)
 Old Eng. wær, caution. Prefix be- converts nouns to verbs.

Bey, a Turkish prince. Bay, a small gulf, a laurel.

"Bey," Turkish beg. "Bay," French bate, Old French bée.

Bi- or Bis- (prefix). Latin bis. Twofold, double. "Bis" drops the s before consonants. The two exceptions are biscuit and bissextile. Before "o" it is written bin as bin-oxide, bin-oxalate, &c. (This prefix is often added to Greek words, instead of dis.)

In Chemical nomenclature the Greek and Latin numeral prefixes have an arbitrary force: Thus in metalloids, if the base is in excess the Greek prefixes are employed: di- (2), tris- (3), &c.; but if the gas is in excess the Latin prefixes are used: pro- (1), sesqui- (1½), bi- (2), ter- (3), &c. Thus a "dioxide of A" (the base), would mean 2 quotas of A to one of oxygen; but "bin-oxide of A" would mean 2 quotas of oxygen to one of A (the base).

Bias, bī'as. A leaning or tendency in one particular way, (verb) bī'assed (2 syl.), bī'ass-ing. (French biais, bias.) The doubling of the s in this verb is an outrage. (R. ii.)

Bib, bibbed (1 syl.), bibb-er, bibb-ing (Rule i.), but bib-a'cious, bib-ac'ity, bib'ulous, bib'-io (the wine-fly).

Latin bibo, to drink; bibax, genitive bibācis, given to drink; bibūlus, having the capacity to sop up like sponge.

Bible, bī'ble. The Book [of Books]. (In Greek, the i is short.)

Bib'li'cal, bib'li'og'-ra-pher, bib'li-o'ma"-ni-a, bib'li'pole.

"Bible," Greek biblōs, a book.

"Bibliographer," Greek bibliōgraphos or biblio-grap-ter, a writer of books.

"Bibliomania," Greek biblio-mania, book madness.

"Bibliopole," Greek biblio-pōlēs, a bookseller (pōlēo, to sell).

Bicarbonate, bī'kar'bō'natē. A salt with two equivalents of carbonic acid to one of a base.

Latin bi [bis] carbo (-ate, in Chem., means a salt formed by the union of an acid with a base). The "acid" two to one of the "base."

Biccaroon. No such word. See Bigaroon. A white-heart cherry.

Biceps, bī'seps. Any muscle with two heads, as that between the shoulders and elbow. Bicip'ital, not bicep'ital, bicip'i-tous. (Note -ci, not -ce.)

Latin bi [bis] caput, genitive bicip'itis, with double head.

Bicephalous, bī'sef'ā'lus. Having two heads.

An ill-compounded word: Latin bi [bis], Greek képhalē, a head. (It ought to be dicephalous: Greek di [dis] kephalē.)

Bichromate, bī'krō'mate. A salt with two equivalents of chromic acid to one of the base.

Latin bi [bis], Greek chrōma (-ate, in Chem., means a salt formed by the union of an acid with a base). Bi- is used in Chemical nomenclature to denote that the gas prevails. Di- (Greek) to denote that the base prevails.

Bicuspid, bī.kus'pid. Having two points or two fangs.

Latin bī [bis] cuspis, two spear-points (as a tooth with two fangs).

Bid, past bade (băd), past part. bidden [bid]. (Bod is a vulgarism.) Bidd-er, bidd-ing, bidd-en (Rule i.)

Old English bidd[an], past bæd, past participle beden, to bid.

Bide, past bode or bided, past part. bided, bī.ded. To abide.

Old English bīd[an], past bād, past participle biden, to abide.

Biennial, bī.en'nī.ăl. Lasting two years, once in two years.

It should never be used in the sense of "twice a year."

(See Bi-monthly.) Annual becomes -ennial in the compounds bi-ennial, tri-ennial, per-ennial, &c. (Double n.)

Latin biennis (bis annus, double year), one year twice over.

Bier, a barrow for the dead. Beer, malt liquor. (See Beer.)

Biestings or beestings. The first milk of a cow after calving.

Old English bysting, byst, or beost.

Biffin, bif'fin. An apple which is dried in an oven and flattened.

Bifurcated, bi.fur'-ka.ted. Forked, divided into two branches.

Latin bī [bis] furca, [like the] two prongs of a fork.

Big, bigg-er, bigg-est; big-ness, big-ly (Rule i.)

Corruption of "būg," swollen. (Old Eng. verb big[an], to swell.)

Bigamy, big'.ă.mĭj; big'amist. A man with two living wives.

An ill-compounded word: Latin bī [bis], Greek gāmōs, double marriage. The word ought to be digamy. Greek di-gamos.

Bigaroon, big'.ă.roon'. Corruption of Bigarreau.

French bigarreau, the mottley cherry (a "White-heart"); Low Latin bigarella, a corruption of bitarella (bis varius, doubly mottled).

Bight, a small bay. Bite (with the teeth). (Both bīte.)

"Bight," Old Eng. biga, a bay. "Bite," Old Eng. bīt[an], to bite.

Bignonia, big.nō'nī.ăh. The trumpet flower, yellow jasmine, &c.

So called by Tournefort from the abbé Bignon, a botanist.

Bignoniaceæ, big.nō'nī.a'-sē.e. The order of which Bignonias are types (-aceæ, in Botany, denotes an order).

Bigot, big'.ot, bigoted not bigotted. A religious zealot. (R. iii.)

Old Eng. big[an], to worship. Suffix -ot, dim. or depreciatory.

Bijou, plu. bijoux (French), bee'.zhoo', bee'.zhooz'. Trinkets.

Bijoutry (French), be.zhoo'.trĭj not bejoutĕrĭj. Jewellery.

Bilbo, plu. bilboes. The singular means a "rapier," so called from Bilbao, in Spain. The plural means "fetters."

Latin bī [bis] boia, double collar of iron.

Bilious, bīl'yus, having the bile out of order. (N.B.—One l.)

Biliary, bīl'.ă.rĭj not bīl'.ă.ry. Relating to the bile.

Biliary duct, bīl'.ă.rĭj duct not bīl'.ă.rĭ duc.

Latin biliōsus, full of bile (bīlis, bile).

Billet, bil'let. A log of wood; to quarter soldiers. Bill'et-ed, bill'et-ing. (One t. Rule iii.)

"Billet of wood," French billet. "Billet" (to quarter soldiers), French billet, a ticket (Latin bullā, a seal to authenticate the order); Low Latin bilētus, a billet.

Billet-doux, plu. billets-doux, bee'.ya.doo', bee'.ya.dooze', not billo.doo, billy.dooze (French). A love-letter.

Billion, bil'yun. A million million.

Latin bi [bis] million, a million twice over.

Billy-goat, a male goat. Nanny-goat, a female goat.

Bilobate, bi.lō'-bate. (Botany.) A leaf with two lobes. This word is wrong. The o is short, and the Bi should be Di.

Greek di lōbos. "Bilobate" is part Latin part Greek.

Bimana, bi.ma'-nāh not bima'nia. It ought to be bi'mān-ah. Animals with two hands like men. ("Bima'nia" would mean mad on two subjects, double madness.)

Latin bi [bis] mānus, having two hands.

Bimonthly, bi.month'ly. Twice a month. In this sense the word is quite indefensible. It can only mean "Every two months;" as Biennial, "every two years." Besides, bi (Latin) monthly (Anglo-Saxon) is a false compound. It should be Twymonthly (twice monthly).

Binacle, bin'a.cle. Corruption of the French habit'acle -or 'bitacle, a box containing the compass and lights. Bin'ocle, a telescope with two tubes.

"Binacle," Latin habitāculum, a small house or abode.

"Binocle," Latin bin [bis] oculus, for both the eyes. (See Bi-)

Binary, bi'nā-ry not bin'a-ry. Combination of two bodies (as double stars), two compounds, two figures, &c.

Latin binārius (binus, i.e., bi [bis] unus, one twice).

Bind, past and past participle bound, to fasten by bonds.

Bounden (adjective), obligatory: as "My bounden duty."

Old English bind[an], past band, past participle bunden.

Binnacle or binacle. (See Binacle.)

Binoxalate, bin.ox'.ā.late. Binoxide, bin.ox'.ide. In Chemistry the Latin numerical prefixes pro- (1), sesqui- (1½), bi- (2), ter- (3), denote that the gas is the part referred to, and prevails. The Greek di- (2), tris- (3), &c., denote that the base is the part referred to, and is 2, 3, &c., to one of the gas. (See Bi-)

Latin bin [bis], Greek oxālis.

Biography, bi.og'.rā.fy. The written history of a person's life.

Greek bios grapho, I write the person's life.

Biology, bi.ol'.ō.gy. The science which investigates the phenomena of life, whether animal or vegetable.

Greek bios logos, a treatise or discourse about "life."

Biped, bi'ped. One who has two feet, like men and birds.

Latin bi [bis] pēdes, two feet.

Bipennate or bipinnate, bi.pen'ate or bi.pin'ate.

Latin bi [bis] penna or pinna, having two wings.

Bird (common gender). Cock-bird (male), hen-bird (female).

Old Eng. bird, a bird; brid, a young bird or a brood.

Birr, ber, a whirring noise. Burr, a prickly plant.

"Birr," an onomatopoe (4 syl.) "Burr," Old Eng. bure, the burdock.

Birth, act of being born. Berth, a sleeping-place. (See Berth.)

Bis- (prefix), Latin bis, "two," "twofold," "double." The "s" is dropped before consonants (except in bis-cuit and bis-sex-tile). Before "o" it becomes bin-, as bin-ocle, bin-oxide. In Chemical nomenclature it denotes that the gas is twofold the quantity of the base. Thus bi-carbonate of potash means: two equivalents of carbonic acid gas to one of potash.

Biscuit, bis'kit (Fr. bis-cuit, twice cooked; Lat. bis coct[us]).

This word and "bis-sextile" are the only two which retain the s of "bis" before a consonant.

Bisected, bi.sek'ted. Cut into two equal parts.

Latin bi [bis] sectus, cut into two parts (called bisegments).

Bishop. In the Saxon period called bisceop or biscop, and his diocese a bisceopdom or biscopdom. Contraction of Greek episkōpōs. Latin episcopus ('piscop').

(Greek epi skōpōs, an overseer (of the clergy); verb skōpōo, to look.

Bismuth, biz.mūth not biss.mūth (French). A metal.

In German it is bismuth or wismuth.

Bison, bi'son (Greek bison). A wild ox with a hunch.

Bissextile, bis.sex'tile. Leap-year. (See Biscuit.)

Latin bis sextilis, the sixth [of the calends of March or February 24, counted] twice. Now, a day (29) is added to February.

Bisulphate, bi.sul'fate. A salt containing two equivalents of sulphuric acid to one of the base.

Latin bi [bis] sulphur, sulphur twice. The suffix -ate denotes a salt where the acid is most oxidised, and therefore ends in -ic: as sulphur'ic acid; -ite denotes a salt where the acid is less oxidised, and therefore ends in -ous, as sulphite a salt formed of sulphurous acid with a base.

Bit, a morsel. Bitts (plural), two pieces of timber in the fore-part of a ship round which cables are fastened.

Bit, bitt-ed, bitt-ing. To put the bit into a horse's mouth.

Bitt, to put the cable round the bitts; bitt-ed, bitt-ing.

"Bit," Old Eng. bit[an], past bāt, past part. biten, to bite.

"Bitt," Old Eng. bitol, a bridle [a cable is the ship's bridle].

(The second "t" is added to distinguish the two words.)

Bitch, feminine of dog. Also a gender-word as bitch-fox, dog-fox; bitch-ape, dog-ape; bitch-otter, dog-otter, &c.

Old English bicece or byege, a bitch.

Bite (with the teeth). Bight, a bay. (See Bight.)

Bite, past bit, past part. bitten [bit]; bit-ing, bit-er. R. xix.

Bitter, bit'ter, acid. Biter, bi'ter, one who bites.

"Bitter," Old Eng. biter, bitter. "Biter," Old Eng. bitt, a morsel.

Bitts (for cables). Bits (for horses). See Bit.

Bitumen, bi'tū-men not bi't.u-men. Mineral pitch or tar.

Bitu'minise, bitu'minisa"tion (s not "z." Rule xxxi.

Latin bitūmen; (Greek pitta, pitch or tar.)

Bivouac (French), bi'voo.ak. To encamp in the open air.

It ought to be pronounced bi.vak, "ou" in French being equal to w: thus "Zouave" (1 syl.), Zwarve, "Edouard," Ed.ward.

Biweekly, bi.weekly. Twice a week. This word is quite indefensible. It means "Every two weeks" (once a fortnight). The compound is also abnormal. Bi (Latin) weekly (Ang.-Sax.) It should be Twyweekly, twice a week.

Bizarre not bizzarre (French), bi.zar'. Fantastic.

Bazaar is a mart or dépôt of fancy articles. (See Bazaar.)

Blab, blabbed (1 syl.), blabb-ing, blabb-er (to tell tales). (R. i.)

Norse blabble, to gabble; German plappern, to blab.

Bladder (double d). The old form has but one "d," blædre."

Blain, a sore. The old form was blægen.

Blame, blam-able (not blame-able), blam-ably (R. xix. xx.), blame-ful, blame-less, &c., blame-worthy. (Rule xvii.)

(Only words ending in "-ce" and "-ge" retain the "e" before the postfix "-able.")

Blancmange, blam-mônj'. A white jelly-like confection.

An English perversion of the French blancmanger.

Blare, blair (like a cow). Blear, ble'-ar, sore: as "blear-eyes."

"Blare," Low German blarren, to cry. "Blear," Danish blære, a sore.

Blaspheme', blasphé-ming, blasphemed' (2 syl.), blasphé-mer; but blasphémous, blasphémously, blasphémy. (The "é" long in Greek.)

Greek blasphémō (blapsis phēmi), to speak hurtful words. "Blasphemy," Greek blasphēmia; "blasphémous," Greek blasphēmōs.

-ble (postfix) Lat. -bil[is], added to nouns: "able to," "full of," &c.

Bleach, bleech. To whiten. (The "ea" is the diphthong æ.)

Old English blæc[an] or blæcian, to bleach.

Bleak, bleek. Cold. (The "ea" is the diphthong æ.)

Old Eng. blæc or blæc, pale, bleak. So Lat. pallidus, pale, bleak.

Blear, bleer, sore. Blare, blære, to bellow. (See Blare.)

Bleat, bleet (like a sheep). (The "ea" is the diphthong æ)

Old Eng. blāt, a bleating; verb blatan, to bleat.

Bleed, past and past participle bled; blooded, by venesection.

Old English blēd[an], to bleed, or to draw blood.

Blend, past blended, past participle blended or blent.

Old English blend[an], past bland, past participle blenden.

-blende, a word added to several metals: as "horn-blende," &c.

German blenden, to dazzle. The metals so named are lustrous.

Bless, to make happy. Bliss, happiness. Old Eng. blis, joy.

Bless, past blessed (1 syl.) or blest, past participle blest.

Blessed (adj., "happy," "extolled"), blest'-ed (2 syl.)

(Blessed be the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. xiv.

Blessed be the God of Abraham.) Similarly, blessedly, blest'.ed.ly; blessedness, blest'.ed.ness.

Old English bless[ian], past blessode, past participle blessod, to bless.

Blight, blite. A disease of plants by which they are withered.

Old English blæth, rust, mildew.

Bliss (Old English blis, joy). Bless (Old English bless[ian], to make joyful).

Blithe, not blīrh, cheerful. Old English blithe, joyful.

Blithely, blitheful, blithesome, blithesomeness, blithesomely.

(Only "whole," "due," and "true," drop the "e" before -ly.)

Bloat, blōte; bloated, bloater. A herring slightly dried.

Blond (adj.); blonde (noun), a woman of fair complexion and light hair. A dark woman is a brunette. (French.)

Blossom (double s). The old form had but one "s," blōsm.

Blood, blūd; bloody; bloodi-er, blud'.i.er; bloodi-est, blud'.i.est, bloodi-ly, blud'.i.ly; bloodi-ness, blud'.i.ness.

Old Eng. blōd, blood; blōdig, bloody; blōdgian (verb).

Bloom, not blāme. Old Eng. blōsm, softened into blōm (R. lxi.)

Old Eng. blōsm[ian], past blōsmode, past part. blōsmod, to bloom.

Blot, blott-ed, blott-ing, blott-er, blott-y (Rule i.)

Old Eng. blāt, black [spot]; verb blat[an], past blatode, p. p. blatod.

Blouse, blooz not blōuze. A short blue smock-frock worn by French artisans. German blau-lēs, loose blue.

Blow, past blew, past participle blown.

Old Eng. blow[an], past blēow, past part. blāwen, to blow, or breathe; but blōw[ian], past blōwode, past part. blōwod, to blow or blossom.

"Let the pealing organ blow," is correct, because the organ sounds only when the organ pipes "blow" or transmit the blast of the bellows. "Let the fire blow," would be nonsense, because the fire does not burn by transmitting the blast of the bellows.

- Blue, a colour. Old Eng. bleo. Blew (did blow), see above.
 Blueness, bluebell, &c. "A fit of the blues," spleen (R. xvii.)
 Blu-ish, blu-ishly, blu-ishness (Rule xix.)
- Blur, blurred (1 syl.), blurring. To blemish. (Rule i.)
- Boa (a serpent), bō'.ah. Boar (a pig), bō'.ar. Bore (to make a hole), bōre. Boor (a rustic), boo'r.
 "Boa," Latin boa, from bos, a cow, which it was supposed to suck.
 "Boar," O. Eng. bār. "Bore," O. Eng. bōr, a bore; bōr[ian], to bore.
 "Boor," Dutch boer, a farmer; Old English ge-būr, a rustic.
- Boar, bō'.ar, a male pig; female sow. (See Boa.)
- Board, bōrd, a plank; to furnish with lodgings and meals.
 Bored, bōrd, perforated. Bawd, a procuress.
 "Board," Old Eng. bōrd, a plank; also "food and lodging."
 "Bored," Old Eng. bōr[ian], past bōrode, past part. bōrod, to bore.
 "Bawd," French baude (baudir, to incite.)
- Board-of-Trade, plural Boards-of-Trade, &c.
 (Phrases compounded with a prep. pluralise only the 1st word.)
- Boarder, one who boards. Border, an edging. (Both alike.)
- Borderer, one who lives on a frontier or border-land.
- Boarding, pres. part. of board. Bordering, making a border.
- Boast, bōste; boast'er, boast'ing, boast'ful, boast'fully, &c.
 Welsh bost, a boast; bostiad, a boasting; bostiwr, a boaster; bostio, v
- Boat, bōte, a vessel urged by oars. Boot (for the foot).
 Boated, past tense of boat. Booted (wearing boots).
 Boating. Boatswain, a ship's officer in charge of the boats.
 Boatman, one whose trade is to manage a boat.
 Boatsman, an amateur manager of boats: as Lord Star is a good boatsman, not boatman.
 Old English bāt, a boat; bāt-swān, a boatswain.
- Bob, bobbed (1 syl.), bobb'ing. To fish with a bob, &c. (R. i.)
- Bop. (Provincial.) To duck to avoid something.
- Bobbin. A spool on which cotton is wound. (Double b.)
 French bobine (only one b). Bobbin, in French, means "bobbinet."
- Bode; boded, bō'.ded; bod'ing, bō'.ding. To portend.
 Bodied, bōd'.ed, is the past tense of body, bodying, &c.
 "Bode," Old English bod[ian], past badode, past part. bodod.
- Bodice, bod'.iss, a corset. Bodies, bod'.iz, plu. of body.
 Old Eng. bodig ceac, a restraint or stay for the trunk. (See Body.)
- Bodleian (library), Bod'.le.an. A library at Oxford. So called in honour of Sir T. Bodley, its founder.

Body, plu. bodies, bod'iz; bodied, bod'.ed; bod'i-ly, bod'i-less; possessive singular body's, possessive plural bodies'; body-guard, body-linen, body-politic (Rule x.)

Old Eng. bodig, the trunk of a man, the whole body was called he.

Bog, boggy (full of bogs). Bogy, bō.gŷ, a hobgoblin.

Bog, Gaelic; Irish bogach. "Bogy," Welsh bwg, with -y diminutive.

Boisterous, boice'.tē.rūs; boisterously, boisterousness, not boistrous, boistrously, boistrousness.

Welsh bwystus, savage, ferocious (bwyst, a savage, ferocity).

Bold, intrepid. Bowled, bōld, past tense of "to bowl."

"Bold," Old Eng. bōld or bald. "Bowled," French boule, a bowl.

Bolder (more bold). Boulder, a large rounded stone.

Bole (1 syl.), the trunk of a tree. Bowl, bōle, a basin.

"Bole," plu. bol, the belly. "Bowl," Old Eng. bolla, a basin.

Bolero, plu. boleros, bo.lair'.ro, bo.lair'.oze. A Spanish dance.

Boletus, bo.lee'.tus (Latin). A species of fungus.

Bolster, a long pillow. Bolsterer, one who bolsters-up another.

Old English bolster, a pillow; i.e., bol, a sleeping-room, -ster, something habitual or common to a bedroom. (See -ster.)

Bomb, bōm, an explosive shell. Boom (of a ship).

"Bomb," Latin bombus, a blast. "Boom," Dutch boom, a spar.

Bombardier (Fr.), bōm'.bar.deer'. The soldier who fires bombs.

Bombasine, bōm'.bā.zeen. A cloth made of silk and cotton.

It ought to be bombycine, bom'.bŷ.sŷn.

Latin bombycinus, made of silk (bombyx, silk or fine cotton yarn; Greek bombux, the silk-worm).

Bon mot (French), boh'n mō. A witticism.

Bon ton (French), boh'n to'gn. Good in the opinion of fashion.

Bon vivant (French), boh'n vee.vah'gn. One who loves to eat.

Bonne bouche (French), bon bouch. A dainty or "tit bit."

Bona fide (Latin), bo'.na fi'.dē. In good faith, without deception.

Bona fides, bo'.na fi'.deez. An equitable intention.

-bond (postfix, Latin -bund[us]). Added to gerundial nouns: as vagabond, a wandering person or vagrant.

Bond-man, fem. bond-woman, plu. bond-men, -women, a slave.

Bonds-man, fem. bonds-woman, a surety.

Bone (1 syl.), bōned (1 syl.), bōn-ing, bōn-y. Bon (Fr.), good.

"Bone," Old Eng. bān, a bone. "Bon," Latin bon[us], good.

Bonito, plu. bonitoes (Spanish), bo.nee'.toze. A species of tunny-fish.

- Bon'net (for the head). Bonnette, bon'et (in fortification).
 Bon'neted, bon'neting (with only one t). Rule ii.
 Both French (connected with ben, the head or top, as Ben-Nevis).
 Bonny, bon'ny (jolly); boni-ly. Bony, bō'ny, full of bones.
 "Bonny," Latin bonus, good, with -y diminutive.
 "Bony," Old English bānen, adjective of bān, bone.
 Booby, plu. boobies; pos. sing. booby's, pos. plu. boobies', boo'bez.
 Spanish bobo, a dolt.
 Book, book not booke. (Old English bōc.) Rule lx.
 Boom (of a ship). Bomb, bōm, an explosive shell. (See Bomb.)
 Dutch boom, a spar. Bommon, to sound like an empty tub (R. lxi.)
 Boon, a favour; corruption of the Old Eng. bēn, a petition.
 Boon (companion); Latin bonus, good (Rule lxi.)
 Boor, a rustic. Bore, to perforate. Boar (pig). Boa, a serpent, q.v.
 Boot (for the foot). Boat, bōte (for the water). (See Boat.)
 French botte, a boot. "Boot," profit, Old Eng. bōt, profit (R. lxi. f.)
 Bootes, Bo.ō'tēez, a constellation. (Greek boōtēs, a herdsman.)
 Booth, boothe not boorh, a shed. Both, bōth, the two (R. lxii. b).
 "Booth," Gaelic bōth; Law Latin botha, a tent.
 "Both," Old English bā-twā, both two.
 Booty, spoil. Beauty, bu'ty, what is handsome, Botty, priggish.
 "Beauty," French butin, spoil. "Beauty," French beauté.
 "Botty," Welsh bostiwr, a boaster; verb bostio, to brag.
 Boracic, bo.ras'ik, adjective of "borax." (French.)
 Borage, bō.rāge not bur.ridge. A herb.
 Corruption of Corage, Latin cor-ago, to act on the heart; so called from its cordial virtues: Ego Borāgo gaudia semper ago: that is, "Burrage gives courage," or "Borage, I ween, drives away spleen."
 Border, baw'der, an edging. Boarder, one who boards, q.v.
 Bore, to perforate. Boor, boo'r, a rustic. Boa, bō.ah, a serpent, q.v.
 Borecole, bōr.kōle (a vegetable). Welsh bore cawl, early cabbage.
 Born (to life). Borne, born, carried. Bourn, bō'urn, a limit.
 "Born" and "Borne," Old English boren, verb bēran, to bear.
 "Bourn," French borne, a limit or boundary.
 Borough, Burrow, Borrow, Barrow.
 Borough, bur'rāh, a town "represented," but not episcopal.
 Burrow, bur'ro, a rabbit's lodge.
 Borrow, bor'ro, to take on loan.
 Barrow, bar'ro, a hand-cart, a mound over the dead.
 "Borough," Old English buruh or burug, a city. Also burh.
 "Burrow," Old English burigen, a sepulchre, or buruh, a dwelling.
 "Borrow," Old English borh or borg, a loan.
 "Barrow," Old English berewe, a wheelbarrow: beorga, a mound.
 Borrow, see above. (Double r.)

- Bos (in Zoölogy), the ox genus of animals. Boss, a knob.
 "Bos," Latin bos, ox, bull, cow, &c. "Boss," French bosse, a hump.
- Bosom; booz'om not buzzum. Old Eng. bósm. (Rule lx. d.)
- Botany, bot.ănŷ. (Greek bōtanē, herbage.) This word should be limited to fodder and herbage. The science of plants should be phytology, fi.tol'o.gy. (Greek phŷtōn lōgōs, plants the subject.)
- Both, bōth not borth. Booth, boothe. A tent-shop. (See Booth.)
Both of them. "Both-of" has an adverbial sense. It does not mean both out of them, but them both-ly or both-together. (See All, All of them.)
- Bottle, bot'tl (for wine, &c.) Bottel, a bundle (bottel of hay).
 "Bottle," French bouteille; Low Latin buticula or butticula, a little butta or "butt."
 "Bottel," French botel, a little botle or bundle.
- Bottom (double t). The older form was botm.
- Boudoir (French), boo'dwor. A lady's private room.
- Bough, bōw (of a tree). Bow (of a boat), to bend the head.
 "Bough," Old English boh, genitive boges (2 syl.)
 "Bow," to bend the head, Old English būg[an] imperfect buh.
- Boulder, bold'er, a large rounded stone. Bolder (more bold).
 "Boulder," corruption of boulder, a [stone which has been] bowled about.
 "Bolder," Old English bāldra, more bold (bāld).
- Bounty, plu. bounties, boun.tiz; bounti-ful, bounti-fully, bounti-fulness; but bounte-ous, bounte-ously, bounte-ousness. (There is no sufficient reason for this change of the vowel. See Beauty.)
 French bonté, Latin bōnitas, goodness (bōnus good).
- Bouquet, plural bouquets (French), boo'kay', boo.kaze'.
- Bourgeois, bour.zhwoiz (sing and plural). A citizen, a Burgess. (Pronounced bour-zhwoi in French.)
- Bourn, bo'urn not bōrn, a limit, a country. Born, brought forth.
Borne, carried. (See Born.)
- Bow, bōw (to rhyme with now): (1) a salutation with the head, (2) the fore part of a boat or ship, (3) to bend. Bough (of a tree). See Bough.
- Bow, bōw (to rhyme with grow): (1) the propeller of arrows, (2) a curve, (3) an instrument used with a violin, &c.
 "Bow" (to bend): Old Eng. beg[an], beōg[an], or būg[an].
 "Bow" (for shooting arrows) is from the same verb.
- * * Compounds in which "bow" rhymes with vow :—
Bōw-grace (sea term), bōwman (first oar), bōwpiece (of a ship), bōwline (in ships), the Spanish bolina.

* * Compounds in which "bow" rhymes with grow :—

Bōw-bearer, bōw-bent, bōw-dye (so called from Bow, near London), bōw-hand, bow-instruments (as violins, &c.), bōw-legged, bōw-less, bōw-man (an archer), bōw-net, bōw-saw, bōw-shot, bōw-sprit, bōw-string, bōw-window, &c.

Bows, bōwz (of a ship). Bows, bōwz (of a saddle). Bouse, to drink. French buveur, a drinker, boire; L. Lat. buo.

Bowed, bōwd (term in heraldry). Bowed, bōwd, bent.

Bode, to portend. Old English bod[ian], to tell.

Bowing, bōw-ing, saluting. Bowing, bōw-ing, curving.

(As "bōw" and "bōw" are from the same verb, the only excuse for the twofold pronunciation is that of making the sense more clear.)

Bowel, plural bowels, bōw.el, bōw.elz ("bōw" to rhyme with vow), bowell-ed, bowell-ing. (Rule iii. -EL.)

French boel, Latin botellus, the gut.

Bower, bōwer (in a garden), a boudoir. Old Eng. būr, a bower.

Bower-anchor, bōw.ər an.kor not bōw.er an.kor. The second anchor, carried at the ship's bōws.

Bowie Knife, bōw'.ee nīfe not bōw'.ee nīfe. Used in North America. So called from "Jim Bowie," one of the most daring characters of the United States.

Bowl, bōwl, a basin. Bole, a clayey earth.

"Bowl," French boule, a bowl. "Bole," Greek bólōs, a clod.

Bowler, bōwl.er not bōw.ler. One who bowls.

Bowling-green, bōw.ling green not bōw.ling green.

Bowled, bōwld not bōwld. Bold, intrepid. (See Bold.)

Boy, plu. boys, feminine Girl, plu. girls. Buoy, a float.

"Boy," Old English býre, a son (verb býr[ian], to raise).

"Buoy," French bouée; Dutch boei, a float.

Brace, a tie; two head of game, &c. Brass, a mixt metal.

Brace (verb), braced (1 syl.), brac-ing, brac-er; but brace-let.

"Brace," French bras, the arms, hence embrasser, to hug.

"Brass," Old English bræs, brass.

Brachial, bray'.kī.āl. Pertaining to the arms.

Latin brāchiālis (brāchtum, the arm); Greek brachion.

Brachiopod, plu. brachiopods or brachiopoda, brāk'.ī.ō.pōd, brāk'.ī.ōp".ō.dāy. Molluscs with feet like arms.

Greek brachion pous (podos), arms [for] feet.

Brag, bragged (1 syl.), bragg-ing, bragg-ingly, bragg-er, bragg-art.

Braggadocio, plu. braggadocios. (Rule xlii.)

Old English bræg[an], to pretend to arrogate to oneself.

Brahman or Brahmin, plu. Brahmans or Brahmins, never Brahmen. The termination -man is merely by accident like our word "man," as Roman, &c. It arises from the addition of -n to a noun ending in -ma, as Brahma[n], Roma[n]. Brahman'ic, Brahmin'ical, Brah'manism.

"Brahman," from Brahmā; "Brahmin," from Brahm.

Brahma or Brahm, chief of the Hindū Trinity.

Braid, brāde, trimming. Brayed, past tense of bray. (See Bray.)

"Braid," Old English bræde (verb bræd[an], to weave).

Brain, brāne (of the head). Old English brægen, the brain.

Brake. A female fern, a skid, a carriage for training horses, &c.

Break, brāke, to fracture

"Brake" (a fern), Danish bregne. Welsh brwg, bracken.

"Brake" (a skid), Latin brachium, an arm, a lever.

"Brake" (a carriage), Old Eng. brece, a [carriage for] breaking-in.

"Break" (to fracture), Old English brēc[an], to rupture.

Bramble, brām'b'l. The older spelling is brāmbel or brembel.

Bran, brān. The husk of ground corn. Brann-y. (Rule i.)

French bran: as bran de scie, sawdust.

Bran-new. Quite new, with the sheen or brightness still there.

Old Eng. brene or bryne, shining; verb byrn[an], brenn[an], to burn.

The word occurs with a difference in "Brown" brūn, the colour of things burnt; "brim-stone," burning stone; "brand" (brand-d) -d being added to convert the participle into a noun; "Burn-ish," to make the surface glow. Not a corruption of Brand-new.

Brandy, plural brandies, bran'diz; brandied, bran'did.

German brannt-wein, Dutch brand-wijn, burnt-wine.

Brass, brās (a mixt metal). Brasses, monumental slabs of brass.

Brassy, brassi-ness; brazen, brazier (a worker in brass).

Old Eng. bræs, brass; bræsen, brazen; bræcian, to braze.

Bravado, plu. bravadoes, bra.vah'do, bra.vah'doze. Brag. (xlii.)

Spanish bravdta, the brag of a bully; braveador, a bully.

Brave, braver or more brave (comp.), bravest or most brave (sup.), braved (1 syl.), brav-ing, brav-ery, brave-ly. (Fr. brave.)

Bravo, plu. bravos, brah'voze. Assassins for hire. (Rule xlii.)

Italian bravo (noun and adj.); Spanish brávo (adj.), ferocious.

Bray, brays, brayed (1 syl.), bray-ing, bray-er. (Fr. braire.) R. xiii.

Braze, to solder with brass. Braise, charcoal used in a brasier.

Braize, a method of cooking over a slow fire. Brays, 3rd per. sing. of bray. Breeze, refuse coke, &c.

"Braze," Old English bræs[ian], to cover with brass.

"Braise," French, prepared charcoal for cooking purposes.

"Braize," French braiser, to bake over braise.

"Brays" (pounds in a mortar), Old Eng. bræs[an], to bruise.

"Breeze," French brisé, broken; Latin brisa, something trodden on.

Brazen, ought to be basen, adj. of brass, not "soldered."

Old English bræsen, made of brass (bræs).

Brazier, one who brazes or works in brass. Brasier, a pan to hold "braise" or charcoal in ignition.

Breach, breech, a gap. Breech, the thick end of a gun, &c.

"Breach," Old Eng. brice (c=ch), a fracture; French brec.

"Breech" (the hinder part or bottom), Old Eng. brēc, breeches.

Bread, brēd, food. Bred, past and past part. of breed.

"Bread," Old Eng. bræd or breod, bread, food generally.

"Bred," Old Eng. bræd of the verb bréd[an], to nourish.

Breadth. "Length," "depth," "breadth;" "height" not height.

Old Eng. brēd, broad, with -th. This suffix added to adjectives converts them into abstract nouns, as strong, strength; &c.

Break, brūke not breek, to rupture. Brake, a female fern.

Break, past broke [brake], past part. broken [broke].

Breakfast, brēk'fāst. The morning meal (break [the] fast).

Breaking, brūke.ing not breek.ing. (See Break.)

Bream, a fish of the carp family. Brim, brīm, a rim, a brink.

"Bream," French brème [brama]. "Brim," Old Eng. brymme.

Breast, brēst (of the body). Old Eng. brēost, the breast.

Breath, brēth (noun); breathe, breethe (verb). Rule li.

Breath (brēth), breath'-less, breath'-lessly, breath'-lessness.

Breath (breethe), breathed. (1 syl.), breath'-ing, breathes (1 syl.), breath'-er, breath'-ing-time.

Old Eng. brēth, breath, an odour, exhalation.

Breccia, brēc'h.ě.ăh. A rocky mass of angular fragments. A mass of rounded fragments is a Conglomerate.

It ought to be bricia (Italian), a fragment. The Italian word breccia means a "breach."

Breech, plural breeches, breech, britch'.ez. In the singular it means the hinder part, as the "breech" of a gun. In the plural it means trousers terminating at the knees. The verb (breech) means to flog; and also to change the petticoat-suit of young boys for jacket and trousers.

Breach, breech, a gap, an opening. (See Breach.)

Breed, brēde, to hatch, to generate. Bread, brēd, food, q.v.

Breed, past bred, past participle bred.

Old English bréd[an], past bréd, past part. brēden, to nourish.

Breeze, refuse coke. A gentle wind. A gad-fly.

"Breeze" (refuse coke), French brisé, broken; Latin brisa.

"Breeze" (a gentle wind), French brise, a breeze.

"Breeze" (a gad-fly), also spelt Brise, Old Eng. briose, a gad-fly.

Bressummer. It ought to be Bretsummer, a beam over a shop window, &c., to support the weight above it.

German bret, a plank or beam, and sumer (Welsh) supporter.

Brethren, plural of brother, chiefly used in Scripture language
For all general purposes the plural of brother is brothers.

"Brethren" is altogether a blunder. The Old English was brōðhor, plural brōðra or brōðru, later form brōðre.

Breve (1 syl.), a note in Music. Brief, brēfe (of a barrister).

"Breve," not Ital. but French brève (in Music). Ital. is nota intiera.

"Brief," Latin brevis, short. A short summary of a cause.

Brevet, brev'et [rank]. An honorary degree in the army, being one grade higher than that which takes the pay.

French brevet, brevet rank, a commission.

Brevier, brev'vier. A small type, like that used in this line.

Latin brevis, small. Said to have been the type of breviaries.

Bridal, brī.dəl, adjective of bride. Bridle, brī.d'l, for a horse.

Bridal or Brydal was the marriage feast, the "bride ale." The adjective of bride in Old English is bridlic or brydlic.

"Bridle," Old Eng. bridel or brydel (verb brid[ian], to curb).

Bride, masculine bridegroom, a corruption of bridegume.

Old Eng. brid or bryd; brid or bryd guma

N.B.—Gum- (prefix) denotes excellence. Gum-mann, the famous man. Gum-cynn, man-kind; Guma, man "par excellence."

Bridesmaid, attendant on the bride. Best man, attendant on the bridegroom. (Bridemaid is incorrect. It does not mean the bridal maid, as "bridecake" means the bridal cake, but the maid of the bride.)

Bridecake, not bridescake. It means the bridal cake not the cake of the bride.

Bridge (over a river). Brig, a ship with two masts.

"Bridge," Old Eng. brig. "Brig," a contraction of brigantine.

Bridle, brī.d'l (for a horse). Bridal, brī.dal, adj. of bride, q.v.

Bridled, brī.d'ld; bridling, brī.d'ling; bridler, brī.d'ler.

Brief, brēfe, the summary of a cause. Breve (in Music), q.v.

Brier or briar (a plant). Briery (Old Eng. brær, a brier).

Brigade Major, plural brigade majors, brī.gāde', &c.

Brigade General, plural brigade generals, brī.gāde', &c.

Bright, brīte, shining, clear. (O. Eng. beorht corrupted to breoht.)

Bright'en (verb), bright'ened (2 syl.), bright'ening.

Bright-ly, bright-ness, bright-eyed, bright-shining, &c.

Brilliant, bril'yant. (French brillant, verb briller, to shine.)

Brim, a rim. Bream, a fish of the carp family. (See Bream.)

Brimm-er, brimmed (1 syl.), brimm-ing. (Rule i.)

Brim-less, brim-ful (full to the brim).

("Full," "fill," and "all," drop one l in the compounds.)

Brimstone, sulphur. (Old Eng. bryne-stone, the burning stone.)

Brinded, tabby, streaked. Brindled (diminutive of the same).

Italian brinato, speckled, spotted.

Brine, brin-ish, brin-ishness, brin-y (i long). Rule xvii.

Old Eng. bryne, salt liquor. (Bryne, burning, has no accent.)

Bring, past brought, past part. brought. To carry to the place where we are, to carry elsewhere is "to take."

Bring-or and bring-ing, not brin-ger and brin-ging like finger and fingering, where the n stands for g (figger).

O. Eng. bring[an], past bróhte or brang, past part. ge-broht or brungen.

Bristle, bristles, bristled, bristl-ing, bristl-y, bristli-ness, bris's'l, bris's'lz, bris's'ld, bris'.ling, bris'.ly, bris'.li-ness.

Old Eng. bryst, a bristle. By metathesis bryst and dim. le.

BRITAIN, Brit'.n; Briton, Brit'.ŋn; British (one t).

Britan'nia, Britan'nic. (Latin Britannia, Britannicus.)

Brit'tany. (Double t. The -y is diminutive.)

"Britain," Old Eng. Brittan, Brytten, Bryten, Dreoten, &c.

"British," Old Eng. Brittisc, Bryttisc.

"Briton," Old Eng. Brit or Britte, plu. Brittas (i or y).

Brittle, brit'.l; brittler or more brittle, brittlest, or most brittle; not britteler, brittelest. Easily broken.

Old Eng. bryttic, verb bryt[an], to break.

Britzka, brits'.käh or briz.kah. Russian britshka. An open carriage which can be closed at pleasure.

Broach, to tap. Brooch, an ornament for the neck or breast.

"Broach," Fr. broche, a spigot. "Brooch," Sp. broche, a clasp.

Broad, brawd, wide. Brod, a sharp-pointed instrument. Brood.

"Broad," Old Eng. brād or brād, broad.

"Brod," same as prod, an awl, a goad; Danish braad, a goad.

"Brood," Old Eng. bród, a brood; bródiȝ, brooding.

Broadwise, not broadways. In the direction of the broad part.

Old Eng. suffix -wis, in the direction of; wisā, a director.

Broccoli, plural broccoliis, brok'.kǒ.lǐ, brok'.kǒ.liz not broccolow.

French brocoli (one c), a spring cauliflower. (Not Italian.)

Brogue, brög (g hard), a twang in speech, as the "Irish brogue."

Gaelic brog, a shoe made of rough hide.

Bromelia, bro-me'.li.ăh. A genus of plants. So named from Olaus Bromel, a Swedish naturalist. The pine apple, &c.

Bromeliaceæ, bro-me'.li.ă'-se-e. The order containing the above.

In Botany -acæ denotes an order.

Brome (1 syl.), or Bromine, brōmĭn. A non-metallic element.

Brom-al, a fluid obtained from brome by alcohol.

Brom-ide, a non-acid combination of brome and oxygen.

Brom-ic, an acid combination of brome and oxygen.

Brom-ate, a salt from the union of bromic acid and a base.

Greek brōmos, fætor. (So called from its fetid smell.)

Bronchia, plural Bronchiæ, brōn'.kī.ăh, brōn'.kī.ēē. The ramifications of the tubes called bronchi, terminating in the vesicles of the lungs. Bron'chial, brōn'.kī.al (adj.)

Bronchus, plural bronchi, brōn'.kus, brōn'.kī. Bronchus, either of the two branches of the windpipe (bronchus dexter or bronchus sinister), the two are the bronchi.

Greek brōgchōs, the windpipe. (Note "g" before g or ch = "n.")

Bronchitis, brōn.kī'tis. Inflammation of the bron'chus.

In Medical phraseology the suffix -itis denotes "inflammation;" as carditis, inflammation of the heart; peritonitis, inflammation of the peritonæum; pneumonitis, inflammation of the lungs.

Bronze (1 syl.), bronzed (1 syl.), bronz-ing, bronzes (2 syl.), bronz-ite, bronz-y. (Italian bronzo, bronze.) Rule xix.

Brooch, an ornament. Broach, to tap. (See Broach.)

Brood, a progeny; (verb) to sit to hatch. Broad, brawd, wide (q.v.)
Old English brōd, a brood; brōdig, brooding. Brād, broad.

Brook, a stream. Broke, brōke, past tense of break, brāke.

"Brook," Old Eng. brōc, a rivulet. "Broke," bræc[an], bræc, brocen.

Broom, a brush. Brougham, broom (q.v.) Brome (q.v.)

"Broom," Old English brōm, the broom shrub.

Broth, brauth not brōth. (Old Eng. brōth, broth.)

Brothel, brōth'el. Corruption of the Fr. bordel. Ital. bordello.

Brother, plu. brothers. In Scripture language, plu. brethren (q.v.)

Brother, feminine sister, plural sisters.

Brother-in-law, plural brothers-in-law, by marriage.

Step-brother, plural step-brothers, sons of different families made brothers by the second marriage of their surviving parents.

Old Eng. step[an], to bereave. Brothers bereaved of one parent.

Foster-brother, plural foster-brothers, nursed together.

Old Eng. fōster, to feed. Food-brothers, fed by the same parent.

Old Eng. brōthor, plural brōthra or brōthru, later form brōthre.

Brougham, broom not broo'am. A light four-wheeled carriage.

So named from Lord Brougham, whose name, says Lord Byron, "is pronounced Broom from Trent to Tay."

Similarly Vaughan is Vawn, and Maughan is Morn.

Brow, brōw to rhyme with "now," not brōw to rhyme with "grow."

Old English bræw, the eye-brow.

Brown, brōwn to rhyme with "gown," not with grōwn.

Old Eng. brūn, the colour of burnt things, brunen or burnen, burnt.

Browse (1 syl.), to graze. Brows, eye-brows. (See Brow.)

"Browse," Greek [bi] brōskō, to eat; brōsis, food.

Brucine or Brucina, bru'.sîn or bru'.sînăh. An extract somewhat like strychnia (stri'k.ně.ăh). Named after Dr. Bruce, mineralogist and traveller, New York.

Bruin, brū'in, a bear. Brewing, brew'ing, making beer.

Bruin is so named from Sir Bruin, the bear, in the German beast-epic of Reynard the Fox. (The brûn or brown animal.)

"Brewing," Old Eng. brēow[an], past brēaw, past participle browen.

Bruise, brūse, a contusion. Brews, 3rd person sing. of "Brew."

"Bruise," Old Eng. brysa[n], to bruise, past bryse, past part. brysed.

Bruited, brū'ted, noised, rumoured. "It got bruited abroad."

A verb made from the French bruit, a noise, report.

"To bruit," in French, is Répandre un bruit au loin.

Brunette (French), broo.net'. A woman of dark hair and complexion. A fair woman is a blonde (French).

Brus'que (French), brūsk, abrupt, blunt in manners.

Brute (1 syl.), a dumb animal. Bruit (French), a rumour.

Brūt'al; brūt'-ally, brūt'-ality, brūt'-alise, brūt'-alising, brūt'-alisa'tion, brūt'-ish, brūt'-ishness, brūt'-ishly, brūt'-ism, brūt'-ify, brūt'-ifying, brūt'-ifies (3 syl.), brūt'-ified

(3 syl.) Rule xvii.

Latin brūta [animālia] brute animals.

Brutum fulmen (Latin), brū.tum fūl.men. A harmless throat.

Bryony, brī'.o.ny. The wild vine, the lady's seal, &c.

Greek brūō, to sprout out; no plant makes longer shoots.

Bubble, bubbles, bubbled, bubbl'ing, bubbly-y.

bub'.b'l, bub'.b'lz, bub'.b'ld, bub'.b'ling, bub'.b'ly.

Dutch bobbel, a bubble.

Bucaneer not buccaneer buk.a.neer. A sea-robber.

French boucanier from boucaner, to smoke flesh; boucan, a smoking-place. Boucaneers originally hunted wild beasts for skins, and smoked the flesh for food. (Boucan, a Caribbean word.)

Buck, lye in which clothes are soaked to bleach; hence Buck, a fop, whose clothes are "buck," or well bleached and got up, and Buck-basket, a basket for dirty linen.

German beuchen, to steep clothes in lye.

Buck, feminine doe. Fallow deer. (Old Eng. buč, a stag.)

Buck (a gender-word): as buck rabbit, doe rabbit; buck hare, doe hare; buck goat; roebuck.

Buck-bean, corruption of bog-bean. The marsh or bog vetch.

Buck-wheat, corruption of buche-wheat. Beech-wheat.

German buchweizen, beech-mast or buck-wheat.

Bucketful, plural bucketfuls not bucketsful. Bucketful is a noun, and means the quantity which fills a bucket. Two bucketfuls is twice that quantity, but two "buckets-full" means two buckets filled full,—quite a distinct idea.

Buckle, buckled, buckling, buk'.k'l, buk'.k'ld, buk'.ling.

French boucle, a buckle or ring.

Buckler. A shield made of osiers and covered with ox-hide.

Low Latin buccularium (buculus, a bullock), ox-hide shield.

Bucolic, bu.kol'.ik. Pastoral, a pastoral poem. (One l.)

Latin bucolicus; Greek boukolós, a herdsman; boukolikos.

Bud, budd-ed, budd-ing, budd-er. R. i. (French bouton, a bud.)

Buddlea, budd'.le.a not budd.lee'.a. A genus of shrubs. Named in honour of Adam Buddle, an English botanist.

Buffalo, plural buffaloes (Spanish bufalo). Rule xlii.

Buffet, buf'.fet, a blow. Buffet, bū.fet' or bū'fay, a sideboard.

Italian buffetto, a fillip, a blow. French buffet, a cupboard.

Buffoon, buf.foon', a fool. (French bouffon, a jester.)

Bug, bugg-y, bugginess. (Welsh bucai, a maggot, &c.) Rule i.

Buggy. A gig for commercial travellers. (French bourgeois.)

Buhl, būle. Brass, &c., for inlaying in wood furniture. So called from Sig. Boule, cabinet-maker to Louis XIV.

Build, bild, past and past part. built, bilt, or [builted].

Old English byld[an], past bylde, past participle byliden, to build.

Bul, bull. Four words (bulb, bulge, bulk, and ebullition) have the u short, as in "dull." All the rest have the u long to rhyme with "wool." (Rules lxv. and lxvi.)

Bulb, būlb, bulbous. A root solid, like the tulip; scaly, like the lily; coated, like the onion; or jointed, like the adoxa.

Latin bulbus, bulbosus; Greek bōlbōs, a bulb.

Bull (rhyming with wool), not būll (rhyming with dull), feminine cow; bull-calf, feminine cow-calf or heifer.

Welsh bwla, a bull. "Cow," Old English cū, cū-cealf, a cow-calf.

Bullock, an ox fed for slaughter. Steer, a young bullock.

Old English bultra, a bullock. Steer, a steer.

Bullace not bullis, bull'.ace ("bull" rhyming with wool). A plum.

Welsh Eirthen bulas (Dr. Withering).

Bulletin, bull'.ē.teen ("bull" rhyming with wool). An official report.

French bulletin (2 syl.) This word and the Pope's "bull" owe their names to the bullo or seal which authenticates them.

Bully, būl'.ly ("bull" rhyming with wool), bullies (2 syl.), bullied (2 syl.), bully-ing, bulli-rag. (Rules xi. and xiii.)

Bulrush, bull'.rush ("bul" rhyming with wool, not with dull).

Bul or bull prefixed to many words means "large": as bull-frog, bull-trout, bul-rush, &c.

Bulwark, bul'werk ("bul" rhyming with wool). A fortification. Dutch bolwerck, a fortified wall. The "boulevards" of Paris, &c., is the same word. (Boulevard [2 syl.], boul.var.)

Bumbailiff. Corruption of bunde-bailiff, i.e., a "bound bailiff;" a bailiff "bound" by sureties to the sheriff, who is responsible for his bailiff's acts. (Old Eng. bunde, bound.)

Bundle, bundled, bundling, bun'.d'l, bun'.d'ld, bun'.dling.

Old English byndel, bind[an], to bind, and -el diminutive, "A little bound thing;" bindele, a binding or bond.

Bungle, bungled, bungler, bungling, bunglingly, bun'.g'l, bun'.g'ld, bun'.g'ler, bun.gling, &c.

Buoy, a float. Boy, a male child. Buoyed (1 syl.), buoy-ing, buoy-ant, buoy-antly, buoy-antness, buoy-ancy.

French bouet, a buoy or float.

Burden or burthen. (Old English byrden or byrthen.)

Bureau, plu. bureaux (French), bū.ro, bū.roze.

Burglar not burgler. The -lar is the French larron (Latin latro) a thief, and burg means a dwelling. The Old Eng. word was burgbrice, a house-breaker.

Low Latin burglaria, burglary (burgagium latro, house robber).

Burgess, plural burgesses, bur'.gess, bur'.gess.es. A man who has a town vote. The -ess is not the feminine termination, but a contraction of -ensis, "one employed on or for."

Low Latin burg-ensis, one employed in a town or borough.

Burlesque (French), bur.lesh', burlesqued (2 syl.), burlesquer, burlesqu-ing. (Italian burlesco, burlare, to ridicule.)

Burn, past and past participle burnt or [burned].

Old Eng. byrn[an], past barn, past part. burnen, to burn.

Burnish. To polish till the surface glows like fire. -ish added to nouns means "like," as boyish; burnish means [to make] like fire. (See Bran-new.)

Burr. For monosyllables ending in a double consonant, see Rule vii.

Burrow, bur.rō, a hole in the ground, to make a hole in the ground. Borough, bur'.rūh not bur'.rō. It is merely a corrupt way of pronouncing burh.

"Burrow," Old Eng. beorg[an], to shelter, borgh or borga(n).

Burst, past and past part. burst, not bust, busted, nor bursted.

Old Eng. berst[an], past bærst, past part. borsten, to burst.

Bury, to inter. Bury, a borough. Berry, a fruit.

Bury, buries (2 syl.), buried (2 syl.), bury-al, bury-ing.

"Bury" (to inter), Old Eng. byrg[an], to bury.

"Bury" (a borough), Old Eng. burh or burhg, a town.

"Berry" (a fruit), Old Eng. berie or berig, a berry.

Bush, boosh not būsh. This and Push are the only two words in -ush with the "u" like oo. All the others have "u" short. They are "blush, brush, crush, flush, gush, hush, lush, plush, rush, thrush, and tush."

"Bush" is French bouchon, a tavern bush, a wisp.

"Push" is French pousser, to push. (The "u" represents Fr. ou.)

Business, biz'nez. Vocation, employment. (See Busy.)

Bus, a contraction of Omnibus (q.v.) Buss, a kiss.

"Buss," Spanish buz; Latin basium, a kiss.

Busy, busies, busied, biz'y, biz'iz, biz'id, busy-ing, busi-er (comp.), busi-est (super.), busi-ness, biz'nez, busi-ly, busy-body, &c. (Rules xi. and xiii.)

Old Eng. bysgian, to occupy; bysgung, business.

But (conj.) But [end], the big end. Butt, a tun; to toss.

"But" (conj.), Old Eng. būtan or būta, except, but, without.

"But [end]," French bout, the end.

"Butt" (a large tub), Old Eng. butt or būt, a tun.

"Butt" (to toss or thrust), Welsh putian, to poke or butt.

Butcher, boot'cher ("but-" to rhyme with foot, not with "ūt").

This is the only instance of but so sounded. Of the nine other words one has "u" long as in "unit,"—viz., būty'ric; and eight have "u" short,—viz., but and butt, butler, butment, butter, buttery, button, and buttress.

"Butcher," French boucher. The "u" in bush, push, and butcher owes its abnormal sound to its representing the French ou.

Butt, a mark; to toss. But [end]. But (conj.) See But.

Butts, plural. A place where archers meet to shoot at butts.

Butter, būt'ter. (Old Eng. butere or butyrs, butter.)

Latin būtīrum; Greek bouturon (Gen. xviii. 8), bous turos, cow curd.

Buttery, plural butteries, but'těry, but'těriz. In the Universities the college buttery supplies all sorts of food to the students, from a penny roll to a banquet.

Butyric [acid], bū.ty'rik not but'j.rik. Obtained from butter.

Butyrine, bū.ty'rin not but'j.rine. An oily substance obtained from butter. (Latin būtīrum, butter.)

Buy, to purchase. By (prep.) B'ye, as Good b'ye.

Buy, past and past part. bought. Buy-er, buy-ing, buys.

"Buy," Old Eng. bycgan, past būhte, past part. geboht.

Buzz. One of the monosyllables ending in a double consonant. (Rule vii.) The others are: Add, odd; burr, err; ebb, egg; buzz, fuzz; fizz, frizz; butt, bitt, mitt.

By (preposition). Spelt anciently be, bi, big, and by (be-cause).

When both agent and instrument are expressed, by follows the agent, and with the instrument: as "The bird was killed by a man with a gun." If only the instrument is expressed, by follows passive and neuter verbs: as "London was destroyed by fire, in 1666." "Socrates died by poison." "Burnt with fire." "Killed with poison." "Slay him with the sword."

By (gerundial): as "It may be had by applying at the office." This is good English. The Gerund with the preposition by or with being used, both in English and Latin, to express the manner, cause, or means. "It may be had (how?) by paying sixpence." "It may be had (how?) merely by asking for it."

By (past, near). "The train has gone by." By-gones.

By and by, not by and bye (adverbial). Soon, presently. Near, in point of time, that is, soon. "By and by" means soon and nearly [now], almost immediately.

By or Bye, a borough, house, place, way; (adj.) local, private. TOWN: By-word, town talk.

By-laws, town or local laws, not statute or national laws. (Latin leges privatae.)

PRIVATE: By-lane, by-path, by-play, by-road, by-way.

SECRET, underhand, sly: By-stroke.

OUT OF RULE: By-ball or Bye-ball. (See below Bye.)

By the by, by the way (en passant, French; in transitu, or ob-iter, Latin). (Old Eng. bý or býe, a way, a place.)

B'ye as Good b'ye, Good by, "God be wi' ye" (à-dieu, Fr.)

Bye, plural byes (in Cricket). "A bye" is a ball which passes the batsman and eludes the grasp of the wicket-keeper behind him.

Cabal, ka.bāl', a junto. Cable, ka'.b'l, a rope.

Cabal, caballed' (2 syl.), caball'-er, caball'-ing. (Rule i.)

"Cabal," French cabale, a club. It is merely by strange coincidence that the initial letters of the British Cabinet in 1671 formed the word "CABAL." "Cable," French cable, a rope.

Cabbage, cab'.bidge, a vegetable. Cab'bage, to pilfer. (Double b.)

Italian cappuccio, a cabbage lettuce; Latin caput, a head.

"Cabbage" (to pilfer), Dutch kabassen, to pilfer.

Cabin, ka'.in, a hut. (Welsh cab and caban, a booth.)

Cable, ka'.b'l, a rope. Cabal, ka.ba'l', a junto. (See Cabal.)

Cabriolet, kab' rĭ.ð.lay. A one horse coach, with a hood.

Cab, a contraction of the same word. It means, a little coach, that scampers along like a kid or mountain-goat.

French cabriolé, a caper, a scamper (cabri, a kid).

Cacao, ka.ka'o, the chocolate tree. Cocoa, kō.kō, made from cacao nuts. Coca is another word, being a Peruvian tree of narcotic virtues.

"Cocoa" is a contraction of chocolate (choco'), and both "cacao" and "chocolate" are corruptions of the Mexican word cacauath or quachuath, as the tree is called.

Cacoethes, kak'-o.ee'-theez. A bad habit hard to resist. Generally applied to scribblers, whose love of writing is termed cacoethes scribendi (Greek kakos êthos, bad habit).

Caddis, a grub. Caddy, plu. caddies, kad'.diz, a box for tea.

"Caddis," Latin cădus, Greek kădôs, a case or chest. The "caddis" or "case-worm" is enclosed in a case or sheath.

"Caddy" is the Chinese word catty, a small packet of tea.

Cadmean, kad.mee'.an not kad'.mĕ.an. Relating to Cadmus.

Cadmium, kad'.mĭ.um. A metal.

Latin Cadmĕus, adj. of Cadmus, a mythical king of Thebes.

"Cadmium," Latin cadmia, brass ore, so called from Cadmus.

Caduceus, ka.dū'.sĕ.us, Mercury's wand. Caducous, ka.dū'.kus, in Botany, shedding as the calyx of a poppy is shed.

"Caduceus" (Latin), from the Greek kêrukios, adj. of kêruz, a herald.

"Caducous," Latin cadūcus, from cado, to fall.

Caffeine, kaf'.fe.ĭn. The bitter stimulating principle of coffee.

Theine, tee'.ĭn, is the similar principle in tea.

French café, coffee. The plant is called "Coffĕa Arabica."

Cage (1 syl.), caged (1 syl.), cag-ing, kay'.jĭng. To coop, a coop.

French cage, a coop, Latin căvĕa, a cave, or coop.

Caique, kay.eek' (French). A small Spanish war-ship.

Caitiff, plu. caitiffs. A knave, a wretch. (Rule xxxix.)

French chetif, Latin captivus, a captive.

Cajole, kă.jole', cajoled (2 syl.), cajōl'-er, cajōl'-ing, cajōl'-ery.

French cajoler, to flatter.

Calamanco, plu. calamancoes, kal'.ă.man''.koze. (Rule xlii.)

Spanish calamaco, a woollen cloth checkered in the warp.

Calamine, kal'.ă.mĭn. A mineral; chiefly carbonate of zinc.

Chamomile, kan'.o.mĭle, a plant. Calomel, mercury.

"Calamine," Latin calămus, a reed; when smelted it adheres to the furnace in the form of reeds.

"Chamomile," Greek chamai melon, apple lying on the ground, so called from a resemblance in the smell (French camomille).

"Calomel," Greek kălôs mĕlas, beautiful black. It is prepared by rubbing mercury with corrosive sublimate which forms a black mixture, turned pale grey by heat.

Calcareous, kal.kair'ré.us. (Would have been better with i.)

Latin calcārius, adj. of calx, lime.

Calcedony, better Chalcedony, kal.see'don.y. A precious stone.

From Chalcēdon, in Asia Minor, where the first was found.

Calceolaria, kal-sē-ō.lair''ri.ah, not kal-se.lair''-ī.ah.

Slipper-wort. (Latin dim. of calceōlus, a little shoe.)

Calcine, kal'sine. To reduce to powder by heat. (Fr. calciner.)

Cal'cined (2 syl.), cal'cin-ing, calcin'-able (i long).

Calculate, kal'kū.late. To reason by figures. Cal'culat-ed, cal'culat-ing, cal'culat or, cal'cula'tion, cal'culable, cal'culably; in-calculable and in-calculably (negatives).

Latin calculāre, from calculus, a pebble, used by Roman boys to assist in adding and subtracting.

Calculus, plu. cal'culi, stone on the bladder. Cal'culous, stony.

Calculus (Latin), a stone; calculōsus (Latin), stony.

Caldron, kaul'dron, a large kettle. Chaldron, chol'dron.

"Caldron," Latin caldarium, a caldron.

"Chaldron," French chaldron = 36 English bushels.

Cal'endar (of the year). Cal'ender, a machine for calendering.

"Calendar," Latin calendārium, an account-book.

"Calender," French calandre, verb calandrer, to mangle; Latin cylindrus, a roller; Greek kulindrōs (kulindō, to roll).

Calender, cal'endering, not calendring, calendered, kal'en.derd.

Calendrer. One who calenders cloth. The poet Cowper uses the word Calender for "Calendrer." (See John Gilpin.)

Calendula, ka.len'du.lah. Marygold, &c.

Latin calendæ, the first of the month; so called because these plants flower almost every month in the year.

Calf, plu. calves, karf, karves; bull-calf, fem. cow-calf.

Old Eng. cealf, plu. cealfu. Our plural ought to be calfs. (R. xxxviii.)

Caliber, kal'ī.ber not ka.lee'ber. The diameter of a gun-barrel.

Fr. and Sp. calibre, dimension of a ball, bore of fire-arms (Arab calib, a mould, or from the Lat. equilibrāre, to weigh out in equal parts).

Calico, plu. calicoes, kal'ī.ko, kal'ī.koze. Cotton cloth. (R. xlii.)

French calicot, from Calicut (E. Ind.), whence it was first imported.

Calisthenics, kal'iss.rhen'-iks. Exercises to develop the body.

Greek kālōs sthēnōs, beauty and strength [combined].

Calix, plu. calixes, kay'lix.ez, a cup. Calyx, part of a flower.

Latin calix, Greek kulix, a cup. (A different word to calyx.)

Latin cālyx, Greek kalux, the empalement of a flower.

Calk or Caulk, kauk. To drive oakum into the seams of a ship.

Cauk, a sulphate of bary'ta. Cork (of a bottle).

"Calk," Latin calco, to tread, to press (calx, the heel of the foot).

"Cauk," a miner's term, derivation unknown.

"Cork," Latin cortex, the bark of a tree. Nare sine cortice, to swim without corks (Hor. Sat. l. iv. 120); German kork, cork.

- Call, to shout. Caul (of a wig), a membrane. (Old Eng. cawł.)
Call, kawł, called (1 syl.), call-ing, call-er.
Calcall, recall, callboy, &c. It retains the double "1" always.
 Latin cālo, Greek kāleo, to call.
- Calliope, kal'.li.ō.pē not kal.li'.ō.pē, as it is generally called.
 Greek Kalliope, the muse of epic poetry (kallōs, beauty).
- Callous, kal'.lus, insensible. Callus, bone gluten.
 Latin callōsus, callous. Callus, a glutinous substance growing about the fracture of bones, serving to solder them.
- Calm, karm; calmer, more calm; calmest, most calm. (Fr. calme.)
- Calomel, kal'.o.mel, prepared mercury. Chamomile, kam'.ōmile (a flower). Calamine, kal'.a.mīn, a fossil (q.v.)
- Calorio, ka.lō'.rik not ka.lōr'.rik nor kal'.ō.rik. The principle of heat. (Latin cālor, cālōris, heat; cāleo, to be hot.)
- Caltrop, kol'.trop. Ought to be coltrap. A kind of thistle.
 Old Eng. coltræppe, a whin, thistle, or caltrop.
- Calumet, kal'.u.met. A pipe smoked by American Indians when they make a treaty or terms of peace.
- Calumny, plu. calumnies, kal'.um.niz. A slander.
Calum'niate (4 syl.), calum'niated, calum'niat-ing, calum'niat-or, calum'nia'tion, calum'niatory, calum'niuous, calum'niuously. (Latin calumniā.)
- Cal'vary, the place of Christ's crucifixion. Cavalry, horse-soldiers. (Second "a" of "Calvary" is long in Latin. No such word in the Greek text of Luke xliii. 33.)
 "Calvary," Latin calvāria, a cemetery (calva, a skull).
 "Cavalry," French cavalerie; Latin caballus, a horse.
- Calve, karve, to bring a calf into life. Carve, to serve meat.
Calves, plu. of calf. (See Calf.)
 "Calve," Old Eng. cealf-ian, to bring a calf into the world (c=k).
 "Carve," ceorfan, to cut, hew, or carve (c=k).
- Calvinism not Calvanism. The religious tenets of John Calvin.
Calvinist. One who entertains the religious views of Calvin.
- Calx, plu. calxes or calces, kal'.sēz. Lime, chalk.
 Old Eng. cealc or cālc; Latin calx, plu. calces, chalk.
- Cal'yx, plu. cal'yxes or cal'yces, kal'.y.sēz. Calix, a cup (q.v.)
 Latin cālyx, plu. cālīyces; Greek kalyx, plu. kalūkēs, the empalement of a flower.
- Cambric, kame'.brik. Fine linen made of flax.
 From Cambray, in Flanders, where it was first manufactured.
- Camelion, better Chamcōleon, ka.mēe'.le.on.
 Latin chamcōleon; Greek chamailēōn, the reptile lion.
- Camellia, generally called ka.mēe'.li.ah, better ka.mel'.li.a.
 These beautiful plants are named after G. J. Kamel (Latinised into Camellus), a Moravian Jesuit, and botanist.

Camelopard, generally called kam'.ĕl.ō.pard or kam'-el.lep'.ard.

Latin cāmēlopardālis, the giraffe. The word is compounded of camēlo-pardālis, the parded camel, the camel spotted like the pard or panther, and should be pronounced ka.mee'.lo.pard.

Cameo, plu. cameos, kam'.ĕ.o, kam'.ĕ.oze. Stones cut in relief.

Intaglio, in.tal'yo. A stone cut in hollow, like seals.

Italian cammeo and intaglio.

Camomile, better Chamomile, kam'.o.mile. A plant.

Calomel, kal'.o.mel. A preparation of mercury.

"Chamomile," Greek chamai mēlōs, an apple on the ground. So called from a resemblance in the smell.

"Calomel," Greek kālōs mēlōs, beautiful black (bleached by heat).

Campaign, kam.pain'. The time an army is in "the field."

Champagne, sham.pain'. Wine made of Champagne grapes.

"Campaign," French campagne, a field or open country.

Campaigner, kam.pain'.er. One who has served in campaigns.

Campana, kam.pay'.nah (Latin). The pasque-flower.

Campanile not campanel, kam'.pa.nile. A bell-tower.

Latin campānile, a bell-tower. (The "i" is long.)

Campanula, kam.pan'.ū.lah. Hair-bell, blue-bell, Canterbury-bell.

Latin campānula, the blue-bell, also the woodbine (-pā long).

Campanulaceæ, kam.pan-u.lay''-se.æ. The "campanula" order.

The suffix [-a]ceæ, (in Botany) means an "order" of plants.

Campanularia, plu. campanulariæ, kam.pan'.u.lair''ri.ah, &c.

Corals with bell-shaped cells.

Latin campānula, a little bell.

Camphine, better camphene, kam'.feen, cont. of cam'phōgen.

A mineral oil, identical with rectified oil of turpentine.

Latin camphōra, Greek gēnō, I produce camphor. (Its protoxide).

Camphor, kam'.for. A gum from the camphor laurel.

Latin camphōra. Dr. Ure gives "Kamphur, Arabic."

Campion, kam'.pi.on. Both catch-fly and cuckoo-flower.

"Corn-campion," the common catch-fly; "white and red campions," lychnis or cuckoo-flower; "rose campion," bachelor's button.

Can, past tense could. This is never an auxiliary verb, but it stands in regimen with other verbs without to between them: as "I can write," "I could write." Here write is infinitive mood, being the latter of two verbs in regimen. (I ken, to write.)

Old Eng. cunnan, pres. tense can, past cūthe, past part. cūth. (The "l" is interpolated, and the "th" changed to "d.")

Canaille (French), kā.nah'.e. The rabble. (Lat. canes, hounds.)

Canal, Channel, Kennel, ka.nal', chan'.nel, ken'.nel.

"Canal" (French), an artificial river; Latin canālis.

"Channel" (a watercourse), Old French chenal, a gutter.

"Kennel," Italian canile, a place for dogs. (Latin canis, a dog.)

Cancel, kan'sel, to obliterate. Cancelled, kan'seld; can'cell-ing, can'cell-ate. (In Botany) lattice-like. (Rule iii. -EL.)

Cancellor, one who cancels. Chancellor, a dignitary, q.v.

Latin cancellō, to make like a lattice (cancelli, lattices).

When a document is cancelled a pen crosses the writing into lattices.

Cancer, kan'ser, "the CRAB" of the Zodiac. Canker, a worm.

Latin cancer, the crab, sign of the summer solstice.

"Canker," Old Eng. cancer or cancere (c=k).

Candelabrum, plu. candelabra, kan'.de.lay".brum, kan'.de.lay".bruh. (The "e" of this word is long in Latin.)

Latin candelabrum; candēla, a candle; candeo, to glow like fire.

Candid, frank. Candied, kan'.did (with sugar). See Candy.

"Candid," Latin candidus, white, sincere.

"Candied," Italian candito, candire, to candy.

Candidate, kan'.di.date. One who offers himself for a vacant post.

Latin candidātus, clothed in white; because Roman candidates dressed in white when they solicited the people's votes.

Candle, kan'.dl. (The older spelling is the better.)

Old Eng. candel; Latin candēla; candeo, to glow.

Candlemas, kan.d'l.mas. Feb. 2, when "Catholics" consecrate all the candles to be used in churches during the year.

(-mas [postfix] drops one "s": Christmas, Michaelmas.)

Candy, kan'.dy; candied, kan'.did; candy-ing, kan'.dy.ing.

Ital. candire, to candy.

Cane, kain, a reed. Cain, brother of Abel.

"Cane," Latin canna; Greek kanna, a reed, a cane.

Canicula, ka.nik'.u.lah, the Dog-star. Canicular (adj.)

(The "i" is long in the original Latin words.)

Latin canicūla, the dog-star; canicūlāris, adj. (canicūlāres dies).

Canine, ka.nine' not ka.neen', adj. of canis, a dog. (Lat. caninus.)

Canister, kan'.iss.ter. A small box for tea, &c.

Latin canistrum, Greek kanastron, a wicker basket.

Canker, to corrode; a worm. Cancer, a disease; "the CRAB."

"Canker," Old Eng. cancer or cancere (c=k), a canker.

"Cancer," Latin cancer, the crab; Old Eng. cancer, the disease.

Cannabis (Lat.), kan'nā.bis. Hemp. (Greek kannābis, hemp.)

Cannel-coal, kan'.nel cole. Corruption of Candle-coal. So called because it burns with a brilliant flame.

Cannibal, kan'.ni.bal. A human being who eats man. (Double n.)

Columbus says: "The natives live in great fear of the cannibals (that is, Caribals, or people of Cariba)."

Can'non, ordnance. Can'on, a church dignitary. It is difficult to recollect which of these two words has the double n.

A "cannon" is a reed for holding gunpowder; Greek kanna; Latin and Italian canna; French canne (all with double n).

Can'non-ade, can'non-a'ded, can'non-a'ding, can'non-eer'.

"Canon" is the Greek kanōn; Latin canon, a rod for measuring, a "rule," hence a standard or model of excellence, and hence the books admitted as our Scriptures, and a church dignitary.

Canon'-ical, canon'-ically, canon'-icals; can'on-ist, can'on-ise, can'on-ry, can'on-isa'tion (not a Greek word, R. xxxi.)

Cannot, kan'.not, familiarly contracted into can't, karnt not kint. It is in reality "ca'n't (ca = kah).

Canny, kan'.ny, cautious, knowing. Cany, kain'y, adj. of cane.

"Canny," Old Eng. cēne, from cunnan to know or ken.

"Cany," Latin cannēus, adj. of canna, a cane.

Canoë, plu. canoes, ka.noo', ka.nooz'. (Rule xlii.) This word, meaning a boat made of skins or bark, is said by Spanish historians to be of Indian origin: "Illa in terram suis lintribus, quas 'canoas' vacant, eduxerunt." (Hist. of Amer.)

Canon, a church dignitary. Cannon, ordnance. (See Cannon.)

Canopy, plu. canopies, kan'.ō.py, kan'.o.piz. (Rule xiii.)

Canopied, kan'.o.pid, can'opy-ing. To cover with a canopy.

Low Lat. canōpeum; Greek kōnōpeion, a pavilion to keep off gnats (kōnōps, a gnat). The -nō- is long both in the Gk. and Lat. words.

Cant, hypocritical whining complaints. Can't, for "cannot," q.v.

Latin canto, to repeat the same thing often, to sing.

Cantata (Italian), kan.tar'.tah not kan.tay'.tah. A poem set to music (Latin cantāre, to sing).

Canteen. A soldier's tin vessel for holding drink.

Italian, cantina, a wine-cellar.

Canter, one who cants. Canter, a Canterbury gallop. The Canterbury gallop refers to the easy pace of pilgrims.

Cantharis, plu. cantharides, kan'.thŭ.ris, kan.thar'ri.deez.

Latin cantharis, the Spanish fly; Greek kanthāros, a beetle.

Canthus, the corner of the eye. Acanthus, a thorny plant.

Greek kanthos, the corner of the eye; Latin canthus, a wheel-tire.

"Acanthus," Latin, from Greek akanthos (akantha, a thorn).

Canticle, plu. canticles, kan'.tŭ.k'l, &c. A religious song.

"Solomon's Song" in the Bible is called "The Canticles."

Italian cantica; Latin cantus, a tune, and -cle, diminutive.

Canto, plu. cantos (Italian), kan'.toze. Divisions of a poem.

Canton, kan'.ton, a territorial division. Cantle, a fragment.

"Canton," French, from the Greek kanthos, a corner.

"Cantle," French échantillon, a sample, our "scantling."

Can'vas (one s), plu. canvases, cloth. Can'vass, to solicit votes.

Can'vass, can'vasses, can'vassed (2 syl.), can'vass-er, &c.

"Canvas," French canevas; Latin cannābis; Greek kannābis, hemp.

"Canvass," Old Fr. cannabasser, to sift thro' hemp, hence to sift votes.

Cany, kay'ny, adj. of cane. Canny, knowing (q.v.)

Caoutchouc, koo.tchook' not ka.out'chouk (Indian). India-rubber prepared for waterproof cloths.

Cap, capped (1 syl.), capp-ing, capful plu. capfuls. (Rule i.)

Cap-a-pie, kap'ah pay'. From head to foot.

Spanish [de]cabeza a pies. Not French. Fr. would be de pied en cap.

Capable, kay'pā.b'l, ca'pableness, capabil'ity.

French capable; Latin capax, capācis (verb capio).

Capacity, plu. capacities, ka.pas'itiz; capacious, ka.pay'shus, capaciously, capaciousness. (Latin capācitas, capacity.)

Caparison, kā.par'ry.zon. To decorate a horse. (This word is corruptly spelt "caparison" for "caparason.")

Spanish caparazon (with a and z); French caparaçon.

Capillary, plu. capillaries, ka.pil'lariz, the extremities of arteries, fine as hairs. Capillary, adj., fine as a hair.

Latin capillāris, like a hair (capillus, a hair).

Capital (of a column), chief city. Capitol, a temple in Rome.

Cap'ital-ly, cap'ital-ist, cap'ital-ise, cap'italised (4 syl.), cap'italis-ing (s not z), cap'ital-isa'tion. (Rule xxxi.)

"Capital" (chief city; excellent), French capital; Latin capitālis.

"Capital" (of a column), ought to be capitell; Latin capitellum.

The termination is the dimin. -ellus (-el), and not the adj. -al.

"Capitol," Latin capitōlium, the temple of Jupiter, erected on the Capitoline Hill of Rome.

Capitoline, kap'itō.line not ka.pit'ō.line. (Latin capitōlinus.)

Capitular, ka.pit'ular. Member of an ecclesiastical chapter.

Capitulary, plu. capitularies, ka.pit'ulariz. The laws of an ecclesiastical chapter.

Latin capitulāris (capitulum, a chapter a summary).

Capitulate, ka.pit'ulate not ka.pit'chū.late; capit'ulated, capit'ulat-ing, capita'tion, capit'ulator.

French capitulation, verb capituler, to surrender on terms; Latin capitula, chapters; hence articles of agreement.

Capivi, ka.pee'vi or ka.piv'i, corruption of copaifer. A balsam of the copaifera officinālis of South America.

Capriccio, plu. capriccios (Italian), ka.prit'sho, ka.prit'shoze (3 not 4 syl.) In Music, a caprice. Rule xlii.

Capriccioso (Italian), ka.prit'sho'zo. In Music, "ad libitum."

Caprice (French) ka.preece', whim. Capricious, ka.prish'us capric'iously, capric'ious-ness.

Latin capra, a goat, our "caper."

Capsicum, plu. capsicums, kap'sikum, &c. The cayenne-pepper plant. (This word ought to be capsacum instead of "capsicum.")

Latin capsa, a coffer, referring to the pod which contains the seed.

Capstan (of a ship). Capstone, a fossil sea-urchin.

"Capstan," Fr. cabestan; Old Eng. cæbester; Lat. capistrum, a halter.

"Capstone," so called from its resemblance to a cap.

Capsule, kap'sule (2 not 3 syl.) The seed-vessel of a plant.

Latin capsula (capa and -ula dim.), a little chest (or pod).

Captain, kap'tin. (French capitaine; Latin caput, the head.)

Captaincy, plu. captaincies, kap'tan.siz. Rank of captain.

Suffix -cy denotes "rank," "office," "condition" (-cy, not -sy).

Caption, kap'shun. The act of taking by judicial process.

Captious, kap'shus, disposed to find fault; cap'tiousness.

Latin captio, captiosus (verb capio, capto, to entrp.).

Captivate, kap'.tivate; cap'tivated, cap'tivat-ing, cap'tivat-or, cap'tiva'tion. (-or, after t or s, is more usual than -er.)

Latin captivare, to make captive [by charms or otherwise].

Captivity, plu. captivities, kap.tiv'.titz. (Rule xlii.)

Captor, he that captures. Capture, kap'.tshur, to take prisoner.

Captured, kap'.tshurd; capturing, kap'.tshur-ing.

(-tor and -sor for agents, rarely -ter and -ser.)

French capture, verb capturer; Latin captura, a capture.

Capuccio, plu. capuccios (Ital.), ka.pute'.sho, ka.pute'.shoze.

(The plural of this word is Anglicised.)

Capuchin, kap'.ushin. A monk of the order of St. Francis.

So called from the "capuchin" or hood worn by them.

In French capucin, the monk; but capuchon, the hood;

In Italian capuccino, the monk; and cappuccio, the hood.

Cap'ut mor'tuum (Latin). What remains in a still, &c., when all the volatile matters have been driven off.

Car, a small one-horse vehicle. Char, to carbonise by fire.

"Car," Latin carrum, a cart or car; carrus, a wagon or wain.

"Char," French charrée, cinders; Latin carbo, coal.

Carafe (French), car'raf. A water decanter; not craft nor craft.

Carat, caret, carrot; kar'rat, kair'.et, kar'rot.

Carat (French), 4 grains Troy. 24 carats, standard purity.

Caret (Latin), term in Gram. "wanting," as "Vocative caret."

Carrot, a vegetable root. (French carotte.)

Car'avan' (one r). It is not derived from "carry," but from the Armenian word karawan; verb karau, to journey.

Persian karvan, a merchant; French caravane, a company of merchants travelling across deserts, &c.

- Caravansary, kar'ra.van''sa.ry. A station for caravans.
 Persian karvan sarai, a large place for travelling merchants.
- Carbine, kar'.bine, a gun. Carbon, pure charcoal.
- Car'bon, car'bonise, car'bonised (3 syl.), car'bonisa'tion.
 Latin carbo, coal, charcoal. (Rule xxxi.)
- Carbonado, plu. carbonadoes, kar'-bo.nay''-doze. (Rule xlii.)
 Spanish carbonada, a steak or chop broiled on carbon or charcoal.
- Carbonate, kar'.bo.nate. A "salt" formed by the union of carbonic acid and a base: as "Carbonate of lime," &c.
- Car'bonated, car'bonating (carbon and suffix -ate, q.v.)
- Carbuncle, kar'.bun.k'l. A gem of a deep red colour; a red ulcer.
 Latin carbo, and the diminutive -culum, a little [live] coal.
- Carburet, kar'.bu.ret. Carbon in union with some other substance, the compound not being an acid.
 (-uret, in Chemistry, denotes a "base.")
- Car'burett-ed, car'burett-ing, car'burett-er. (R. iii., T.)
 The "t" ought not to be doubled in these words. (R. iii.)
- Carcass, kar.kās, a dead body. Carcasse, a projectile.
 French carcasse, a dead body, a sort of shell, &c.
- Cardamine, Cardamom, Cardamum. (N.B.—-da not -di.)
- Cardamine. A plant called lady's smock, cuckoo-flower, &c.
- Cardamom. An Indian spice plant—the seeds are useful.
- Cardamum. Garden cress, nasturtium.
- "Cardamine," dim. of Lat. cardānum; Gk. kardāmōn, a cress.
 "Cardamom," Lat. cardāmōmum; Gk. kardāmōmum, an Ind. plant.
 "Cardamum," Latin cardānum; Greek kardāmōn, a garden cress.
 Greek kāra damaō, to afflict the head [with its acrimony].
 If spelt "-di," it would be the Greek "kardia," the heart.
- Cardiac, kar'.di.ac. Adj. of the Greek kardia, the heart.
- Carditis, kar.dī'tis. (-itis denotes "inflammation.")
 Greek kardia -itis, inflammation of the heart.
- Cardinal, kar'.di.nal. An ecclesiastical prince; 'principal.
 Latin cardinalis (cardo, a hinge); the election of the pope "hinges" on the cardinals. "Cardinal virtues," on which minor ones hinge.
- Care, cared (1 syl.), cār-ing; care-ful, care-less, care-fulness.
 Old English cear, care (verb cārian, past cārode, past part. cērod).
- Careen, ka.reen'. To lay a ship on its beam-ends for repairs.
 French carène (verb caréner); Latin carīna, a keel.
- Career, ka.reer'. A course of action. (French carrière, a career.)
 (This word ought to have a double "r.")
 Latin carrum, a car; carrus, a wagon (from curro to run).
- Caress, ka.ress'. To hug, to "dear" one; an act of endearment.
 French caresser, to caress: Latin carus, dear.
- Caret, kair'ret, wanting. Carat, Carrot. (See Carat.)

Cargo, plu. cargoes, kar'.goze. (Spanish cargo, a ship's load.)

Caricature, kar'ri.kature'. This word has no connection with Character. It is the Italian caricatura, from caricare, to load; and means to overcharge blemishes and faults.

Car'icatured' (4 syl.), car'icatūr''-ing, car'icatūr''-ist.

Caries, plu. caries, kair'ri.eez, mortification of the bone during life. Carries, kar'.rez, 3rd pers. sing. of the verb carry.

Carious, kair'ri.us, adj. of caries. Cariosity (abst. noun).

Latin caries, sing. and plu., decay of bone or wood.

Carlovingian, kar'-lo.vin''-jī.an. Adj. of Karl (German).

Carōlus (Latin). The dynasty of Charles (Martel).

Carminative, kar.min'.a.tiv. A medicine to cure flatulence.

French carminatif; Latin carmināre, to card or clean.

Carmine, kar.mine'. A brilliant crimson colour.

French carmin, from the Arabic kermes (2 syl.), an insect which gives a brilliant scarlet dye.

Carnal, kar'.nal, sensual. Charnel, tchar'.nel, animal refuse of a churchyard. (French charnier, a churchyard.)

Car'nal, car'nage, carnal'-ity; car'na'tion, flesh colour.

"Carnal," Latin carnālis, carnal (caro, carnis, flesh).

Carnelian not cornelian. A carnation or flesh-coloured stone.

Latin carneus, and lias a word used by miners for a silicious or calcareous stone. "A flesh [coloured] silicious stone."

Carnival not carneval, kar'.nī.val. The Saturnalia preceding the abstinence of meat in the season of Lent.

Latin carni vale, farewell to meat.

Carnivora (Latin), kar.niv'.ō.rah not kar'.ni.vo''-rah, flesh-eating animals. Carnivorous, flesh-eating.

Latin carnivōrus (caro, carnis, voro, to devour flesh).

Carol, kar'rol; car'olled (2 syl.), car'oll-ing, car'oll-er. (R. iii. -OL.)

Car'ol-lit'ic (in Architecture), a garlanded pillar.

Welsh carol, a love-song; Italian carola, a dance or carol.

Carotid, ka.rot'id not kar'rō.tid [artery]. An artery of the neck (there are two) to convey blood to the head.

Latin cārōtīdes, the arteries of the neck, from cārōticus, producing sleep. The ancients supposed these arteries controlled sleep.

Carouse, ka.rowz' not ka.rooze, caroused (2 syl.), carous'-er, carous'-ing, carous'-al. To revel, &c.

French carrouse, carrousel. A "carrousel" consisted of four quadrilles of mounted knights, two quadrilles against two, in a tourney.

Car'penter, car'pentry not car'pentery. A worker in wood.

Latin carpentārius, a coach-builder (carpentum, a chariot).

Car'pet, car'pet-ed, car'pet-ing (with one t. Rule iii.)

Carriage, kar'ridge. A coach. (See Carry.)

Carrier, kar'ri.er, one who carries. Career, a course. (q.v.)

Carrion, kar'ri.on. Corrupting flesh. (Ought to have only one "r.") (Latin caro, flesh.)

Carronade, kar'ro.nade. A short cannon; so called from the Carron Foundry (Scotland), where they were first made.

Carrot, Carat, Caret, kūr'rot, kārrāt, kair'.et. (See Carat.)

Car'rot-y, red like a carrot. (N.B.—Doubler, one t. R. iii.)

Carry, carries, kar'riz; carried, kar'rid; car'ry-ing, car'rier, carriage, kar'ridge. (Rule xlv.)

Welsh cario, to carry; carïwr, a carrier; Latin carrus, a cart.

Carte blanche (French), kart blānsh. A piece of paper to be filled up at discretion, the giver being responsible.

Carte de visite, plu. cartes de visite (Fr.), kart' dēv.ē.zeet', &c.

Cartload, plu. cartloads not cartload, as "two cartloads."

Carthagin'ian not Carthagenian. Adj. of "Carthage."

Latin Carthāgo, Carthag'nis, Carthaginiensis (adj.). Our "e" in "Carthage" is merely to soften the "g."

Cartilage, kar'.tī.lage, gristle. Cartilag'inous (adj.) (g=j.)

French cartilage, cartilagineux; Lat. cartilāgo, cartilāgīnōsus.

Cartouch, kar.toosh'. A cartridge-box. (French cartouche.)

Cartridge. The charge of a gun in an envelope of paper; the charge of a cannon is put into a serge envelope. When the charge contains ball, as well as powder, it is called Ball-cartridge; when it contains only powder, and no balls, it is called Blank-cartridge.

Cartridge-box. A small leather case to hold cartridges.

Cartridge-paper. The paper used for cartridges.

"Cartridge," a corruption of cartouche; Italian cartoccio.

Carve, to cut meat at meals. Calve, karve, to bring forth a calf.

Carves, third person singular of carve. Calves, karves, the plural of calf. (Rule xxxviii.)

Old Eng. ceof[an], to carve or cut; cealf[ian], to bring forth a calf; cealf, a calf; plural cealfra, calves. We have lost these distinctions.

Caryated, plu. caryatides, ka.ri.at'id, ka.ri.at'ī.deez. (In Arch.)

Female figures employed as pillars or supporters. So called from Car'æ (Peloponnesus), conquered by the Athenians. To celebrate their victory they made the supporters of the trophies represent women of Car'æ in their national costume.

Caryophyllaceæ, ka'-ri.of'.il.lay'.-ce.ēē. Clove-carnations, &c.

Latin caryophyllum, the clove gilly-flower, with the suffix -aceæ, denoting an "order" of plants; Greek karuophyllōn.

Caryophyllia, ka'-rĕ-ŏ-fil''-lĭ-ah. A section of flowery corals.

Latin caryophyllum, the clove gilly-flower, with the suffix -ia, denoting an "order" or section; Greek karuophullōn.

Caryopsis, kar'ry.op''-sis. Technical name of a corn-grain.

Greek kārŏn ōpsis, a nut in appearance.

Casava, better Cassava, kas.sah'vah. Starch of the cassava-plant.

Spanish cazabe; French cassavi.

Cascarilla, kas'.ka.ril''-lah. A tonic bark. (Span. cascara, bark.)

Case, cased (1 syl.), cās'ing. To put into a case. (Fr. caisse.)

Caseine, kay'.zĕ'n, the curd of milk. Caseous, kay'.zĕ.us, cheesy.

Latin cāsĕus, cheese; French caseine.

Cashier, kash'.eer (cash-clerk); ka.sheer' (to dismiss in disgrace).

French caissier, cash-keeper (caisse, a till).

"Cashier" (to dismiss), French casser, to break off. (Lat. cassus.)

Casino, plu. casinoes, ka.see'noze. A dancing saloon. (R. xlii.)

Italian casino or casina, a small house (casa, a house).

Cask, a tub. Casque (French), kask, a helmet.

"Cask," Spanish casco, a wine-tub. Casket, dim. of "cask."

Cassava, kas.sah'vah. Starch of the cassava plant.

Cassock, kas'.sok. A clergyman's robe worn under the gown.

French casaque, the "par-dessus" of a clergyman's official dress.

Cast, past and past part. cast, to throw. Caste, tribe.

Old Eng. cedst, strive, verb ceds[an], to fight [or throw darts].

"Caste," Portuguese casta, hereditary class distinction.

Castellan, kas'.tel.lan. Warden of a castle.

Low Lat. castellanus, Spanish castellan, warden of a castle.

Castellate, kas'.tel.late, cas'tellated, cas'tellat-ing.

Low Lat. castellatio, the building of forts (castellum, a fort).

Caster, a cruet, plu. casters, a set of cruets in a stand.

Castor. A beaver; a small wheel for furniture.

"Casters" (a set of cruets), Latin castĕra, a place for the stowage of small articles. "Casters" hold in a frame small condiments.

"Castor" (a beaver), Latin castor, the beaver.

Castigate, kas'.tĭ.gate, cas'tigated, cas'tigat-ing, cas'tigat-or. cas'tiga''tion. (Latin castigāre, to chastise).

Castle, kars.s'l not kās.s'l; castled, kars's'ld; castling, kar'.sling. (The older spelling of this word is preferable.)

Old Eng. castell, Latin castellum, a castle.

Castor, a beaver, a little wheel for furniture. Caster (see Castor).

Castor-oil, a corruption of Castūs-oil. It is not an animal oil, extracted from the castor or beaver, but oil expressed from the Palma Christi, and used in religious rites.

Latin castus, a religious rite; Castūs olcum, oil for sacred rites.

- Casualty, plu. casualties, kaz' u. al- tiz. An accident. French casualité, casualty; Latin casus, accident.
- Cat, Tom-cat (male), Tabby, plu. Tabbies (female).
 Latin catus, a cat (from catus, wily, sly, cunning).
- Cata- (prefix), Greek kata, "down," "against," "according to," &c.
- Cataclysm not cataclasm, kat' ä. klizm. Cataplasm, a poultice.
 Lat. cataclismus, a deluge; Gk. kataklusmos (kata kluzo, to wash down).
- Catacomb, kat' ä. köme. A cave for the burial of the dead.
 French catacombe, from the Greek kata kumbos, a cave underground.
- Catalepsy, kat' ä. lep. sy. - A trance, a fainting-fit.
 Greek katalēpsis (from kata lambāno, to hold down, to seize on).
- Catalogue, kat' a. log; catalogued, kat' a. logd; cataloguing, kat' a. log. ing; cataloguer, kat' a. log. er.
 Lat. catälögus; Gk. katälögos (kata lögos, [arranged] according to words).
- Cataplasm, kat' a. plazm. A plaster, a poultice. (See Cataclysm.)
 Latin catäplasma; Greek katäplasma (kata-plasso, to plaster over).
- Cataract, kat' a. ract not kat' a. rak. A waterfall; a disease of the eye.
 Latin catdracta, from the Greek kata arasso, to dash down.
- Catarrh, ka. tar'. A cold affecting the secretions of the eyes, &c.
Catarrh'-al, adj. of catarrh. (Latin catarrhus, rheum.)
 Greek katarrhōs (from kata rheō, to flow down). The "r" is repeated to compensate for the lost aspirate in ῥέω. In "catarrh," either the "h" or one "r" should have been omitted.
- Catastrophe, plu. catastrophes, ka. tas'. tro. fe, ka. tas'. tro. fiz.
 Latin catastrōphē; Greek katastrōphē (katä strēphō, to overturn).
- Catcall not catcal. Only "fill, full, still, thrall" (postfixt) drop an "l." (Rule viii.)
- Catch, past and past part. caught not catched, catch'ing, not ketch, ketch'ing.
 Low Lat. catziurus, a hunter; catziuro, to go hunting (take in hunting).
 "Caught," a contraction of catzurātus (catzurat, ca' u't).
- Catchpoll, katch. pōle, a parish constable. (Poll, the head.)
- Catchup, Ketchup, or Catsup. Extract of mushrooms.
 East Indian ketjab, soy sauce.
- Catechism, kat' e. kizm; catechist, kat' e. kist; catechizer, kat' e. kize. er; catechize, kat' e. kize; cat'echized (3 syl.), cat'echiz- ing (Rule xxxii.), catechetical, kat. e. ket'. i. kal; catechetically, kat. e. ket'. i. kal. ly. (In the Greek words the "e" of all these words is long η not ε.)
 Greek katēchismos, katēchistēs, katēchizō (from kata échō, to din into one, to teach the elements of religion orally).
- Catechumen, kat. e. ku'. men. One being prepared for confirmation.
 Latin catēchūmēnus; Greek katēchoumēnos, one learning the catechism or rudiments of religion. The plural is catechumens.

Category, plu. categories, kat'.e.gör.ry, kat'.e.gör.riz; more correctly ka.tee'.go.ry, but rarely so pronounced.

Categorical, kat'.e.gör''ri.kal, adj. of category.

(In Latin and Greek the "e" of all these words is long.)

Latin catēgōria, catēgōricus; Greek katēgōria, katēgōrikos (from kata agōreuo, to speak in public against a person, to prove).

Cater, kay'.ter. To provide food. (Norm.-French acater, to buy.)

Caterer, fem. cateress, kay'.tēr.er, kay'.tēr.ess. One who caters. Chaucer uses the word achator for caterer.

Cathartic not catharctic, ka.ṯar'.tik. A purgative medicine.

Lat. catharticus; Gk. kathartikos (kata hairō, to carry downwards).

Cathedral, ka.rhee'.drāl. A church containing a bishop's seat.

(This word shows the perversity of the English language.

We outrage quantity to throw the accent back from the penultimate, and say "castigate" for castigate, "blasphemy" for blasphēmy, "balcōny" for balcōny, "metamorphōsis" for metamorphōsis, "apothēōsis" for qpothēōsis, and hundreds more; but here, where accent and quantity favour our favourite system, we actually change short e (e) into long e (η), and say "cathēdral" instead of cath'.ē.dral, or at any rate cath.ed'.ral.)

Latin cāthēdra, Greek kathēdra (kaθῆδρα) kata hēdra, a seat.

Cathode, kath.ode. Where electricity makes its way out.

Anode, is where it makes its way in.

Greek kata hōdos, the way down or out. Ana hōdos, the way up or in.

Catholic, katl'.ō.lik, universal. Catholics, or "Roman Catholics," are those who adhere to the Church of Rome.

Catholicism, ka.thol'.i.sizm. The creed of Catholics.

Catholicity, kath'.o.lis''ī.ty. Universality.

Lat. cathōlicus; Gk. kathōlikōs (kata hōlikos, according to the whole).

Catholicon, ka.ṯhol'.ī.kōn. A panacea, or universal medicine.

Latin cathōlicum [remēdium], Greek kathōlikon [iāma], a universal remedy.

Cato, plu. Catos not Catoes, ka'.toze. (Rule xlii.)

Proper names in o add -s (not -es) to form the plural.

Catoptrics, ka.top'.tri.ks. The science of reflexion and refraction.

Greek katōptrikos (katōptron, a mirror).

Caucasian, kaw.kās'.ī.an not kaw.kay'.sī.an. (Gk. kaukāsios.)

In Latin the word is spelt both Caucasian and Causasian.

Caudal, pertaining to the tail. Candle, kaw.d'l, a sort of food.

"Caudal," Lat. cauda, a tail. "Candle," Lat. calidus, warm [food].

Caul, a membrane. Call, kawl, to speak with a loud voice.

"Caul," Old Eng. caul or cawl, a basket. "Call," Lat. calo, to call.

- Cauliflower, kol'.i.flōw.er ("flow-" to rhyme with now).
 Latin caulis flōreus, flowering cole-wort.
- Cause, caused (1 syl.), caus'-ing, caus'-er, caus'-ative.
 Cause-less, cause-lessly, cause-lessness.
- Causation, kav.za'.shun. Causality, kav.za'.i.ty. R. xxxii.
 Latin causa, causālis, causātio. The reason or cause of an effect.
- Causeway, a corruption of the French chausée. A raised way.
- Caustic, kaws'tik, nitrate of silver. Causticity, kaws.tiss'.i.ty.
 Latin causticus; Greek kaustikos (kausis, burning heat).
- Cauterize, kaw'tē.rize, cau'terized (3 syl.), cau'teriz-ing, cau'terization, cauteriz-er, but cauterism. (Rule xxxii.)
 (In the Greek and Latin words the middle "e" is long.)
 Lat. cauterizō; Gk. kautēriāzō, kautēr-ism (from kaiō, to burn).
- Caution, kaw'.shun; cau'tioned (2 syl.) To warn, a warning.
Cautionary, kaw'.shun.ā.ry; cau'tional, cautious, kaw'.shus; courteous, kor'te.us, polite, q.v.
 Latin cautio, cautionalis, cautus (from caveo, to beware).
- Cavalcade, kav'al.kade. A procession of horsemen.
 Latin caballus, a horse.
- Cavalier, kav.ā.leer', a knight. Cav'iller, one who cavils.
Cavaliers (plu.) Royalists or partisans of Charles I.
Cavalierly, kav.a.leer'.ly. Haughtily, arrogantly.
 "Cavalier," French, a horseman; Lat. caballārius (caballus, a horse).
 "Caviller," Latin cavillor (deponent verb), to cavil.
- Cavalry, kav'.āl.ry. Horse-soldiers. (French cavalerie).
 Latin caballus, a horse; caballārius, a horseman.
- Cave, caved (1 syl.), cav-ing, kay'ving; cav-ity, kav'.i.ty.
 Latin cavēa, a cave; cavitas, a cavity (cavare, to hollow).
- Cavern, kav'.ern, cav'erned (2 syl.), cav'ernous. (Lat. caverna.)
- Cavil, kav'.il, cav'illed (2 syl.), cav'ill-ing. (Rule iii., -IL.)
Caviller, kav'.il.ler, one who cavils. Cavalier (q.v.)
 Lat. cavillor, to cavil; cavillātor, a caviller; cavillation, a cavilling.
- Cavity, plu. cavities, kav'.i.tiz. A hollow. (Latin cavitas.)
- Cayenne, kay.enn'. Red pepper, from Cayenne (South America).
 -ce (suffix) Latin -ce[a], -ci[a], -ti[a], added to abstract nouns.
- Cease, sece; ceased (1 syl.), ceas'-ing, cease'-less, cease'-lessly.
Cessation, ses.sa'.shun. A pause or leaving off.
 Latin cessātio; French cesser, Latin cessāre, to leave off.
- Cedar, se'.dar, a tree. Cedry, adj. of "cedar," not cedary.
 Old English ceder; Greek kēdrōs; Latin cēdrus, adj. cēdrātus.
- Cede, seed; ceded, see'.ded; ced-ing, seed'.ing. Seed (of plants),
 "Cede," Latin cedere, to yield. "Seed," Old Eng. sæd (Lat. satum).

Cedilla, see. diſ. lah. A mark under c (ç) to indicate that it is to be pronounced like s (hard).

Spanish cedilla. It occurs only in ça, ço, and çu.

Ceil, Seal, Seel.

Ceil. To cover in the ceiling of a room with plaster.

Seal. A sea-calf; a stamp; to fasten with sealing-wax.

Seel. To close the eyes of hawks, to hoodwink.

"Ceil," Latin cælum, heaven; French ciel; Ital. and Span. cielo.

"Seal," French scelle (seeau); Latin sigillum, contracted to sig'l.

"Seel," French ciller (cil, an eye-lash; Latin cilium).

Ceiled, seeld, past and p.p. of ceil. Sealed (1 syl.), with wax.

Ceiling (of a room), ceilinged (2 syl.) Sealing (with wax).

Celandine, sel'.an.dine. Swallow-wort. A blunder for cheliðine.

Latin chelidonia; Greek chelidônion (from chelidôn, a swallow).

So called because swallows cure their young ones of blindness with this herb, according to an ancient fancy. (Plin. 25, 50.)

Celebrate, sel'.ē.brate; cel'ēbrāt-ed, cel'ēbrāt-ing, cel'ēbra''tion.

Cel'ēbrator (-or, the Latin termination for an agent).

Cel'ēbrant. An officiating priest at a religious rite.

Celebrity, plu. celebrities, se.leb'.rī.tiz. One known to fame.

Latin celebrāre, celebrātor, celebrant, celebritas, &c.

Celerity, se.ler'ry.ite. Swiftmess. (-ty added to abstract nouns.)

Latin celeritas, swiftmess (verb celerāre, to hasten).

Celery, sel'.ē.ry not sal'.e.ry, a vegetable. Sal'ary, wages.

"Celery," French céleri; German selleri; Greek selinôn, parsley.

A species of parsley (apium graveolens).

"Salary," Lat. salarium, money for salt, i.e., condiments; (pin-money).

Celestial, se.les'.ti'al not se.les'.tchal. Heavenly.

Celestials, plu. The heavenly deities of heathen mythology.

Celestially, se.les'.ti'al.ly, adv. In a heavenly manner.

Celestialise, se.les'.ti'al.ize. Celestialised (4 syl.) R. xxxi.

Latin caelestis, celestial, from cælum, heaven.

Celestine, sel'.es.tine not se.les'.tine, a mineral. Cel'estin (a monk).

"Celestine," Latin caelestis, so called from its sky-blue colour.

"Celestins," an order of monks named from Pope Celestin V.

Celibacy, sel'.i.bā.sj, an unmarried state. Celibate, sel'.i.bate.

Latin caelebs, a bachelor; celibātus, single life (from the Greek koitips, i.e., koilē leipō, I avoid the bridal-couch).

Cell (of honeycomb), a small room. Sell (for money).

Cellular, sel'.lu.lar. Cellulated, formed with cells.

Cellule, sel'.lule. A little cell.

Cellulose, sel'.lu.loze. The cell-matter of plants.

"Cell," Old Eng. cellas, cells; Latin cella (Greek koilē, a hollow).

"Sell," Old Eng. syll[an], past sealde, past part. scald, to sell.

Cellar, a room for stores underground. Seller, one who sells.

Old Eng. cellas, cells; Latin cellārium, a cellar (cella, a cell).

-celli, -cello (Ital. diminutives), -cul[us] Latin diminutive.

Celt, Kelt. "Celt," a bronze cutting instrument found in tumuli. The people, called Celts, should be called "Kelts," for distinction sake. Similarly Keltic, adj. of kelt; and Celtic, adj. of celt.

"Celt," Latin celtis, a chisel (verb celo, to carve or emboss).

"Kelt," Greek Keltai or Gálatai; Latin Gálatae; Old Eng. Celt.

Cement, se.ment' not sem'.ent (noun), but verb and noun alike.

French cement; Latin camentum (cæmenta, mortar).

Cem'etery, plu. cem'eteries (for burials). Symmetry, harmony.

Cemetery not cemetry. Symmetry not symetery (double m).

(In Greek and Latin the "e" of "cemetery" is long.)

Latin cemētērion; Greek koimētērion (verb koimāo, to sleep).

"Symmetry," Greek summetria, sun metron, [measured] with [one and the same] measure.

Cenotaph, sen'.ō.taf. A monument without the dead body.

French cenotaphe; Latin cenōtaphium; Greek kēnōtaphion (kēnōs taphōs), an empty tomb. (N.B.—ceno- not cena-.)

Censer, Censor, Censure, sen'.ser, sen'.sor, sen'.sher.

Censer. A vase for incense.

Censor. A Roman officer to enforce decorum.

Censo'rious, censo'riously, censo'riousness, censorship.

Censure, censured (2 syl.), cen'sur-ing, cen'sur-er, cen'sur-able, cen'sur-ably, cen'sur-ableness. To blame, &c.

"Censer," French encensoir; Latin incensum, incense.

"Censor," Latin censor, censorius (verb censere, to think and judge).

"Censure," Latin censura, the office of censor; and hence the judgment or blame of censors (verb censere).

Census, Censers, Censors, Censures, sen'.sus, sen'.serz, sen'.sorz, sen'.shers.

Census (Latin). Registering the number of the inhabitants.

(The other three words are the plurals of words given above.)

Cent, Scent, Sent, all pronounced alike, sent. (See Centum.)

Cent, hundred: as 5 per cent, written thus 5 %.

Scent, perfume. Sent, past and past part. of send.

"Cent," Latin centum, a hundred; French cent.

"Scent," Fr. senteur, scent. (Lat. sentire, to observe by the senses).

"Sent," Old Eng. send[an], past sende, past part. sended, to send.

Centaur. A fabulous being half man and half horse,

Latin centaurus; Greek kentauros. The centaurs were Greek bucanneers, or horsemen who hunted wild bulls. Greek kentēō tauros, to prick or spear bulls.

Centaur, sen'tau.ry, not centory, a herb. Cent'ury, 100 years.

"Centaur," Latin centaurēa, the centaur, named from the centaur (Chiron), who cured with it a wound in his foot from one of the arrows of Hercūles.

Centum. (1.) written cent. before vowels.

Centenarian, sen'te.nair''rī.an. One who is 100 years old.

Centenary, plu. centenaries, sen'tē.nerriz. The return of a period after the lapse of 100 years.

Centennial, sen.ten'ni.al. Once a century.

"Annual" suffix becomes -ennial, as biennial, triennial, &c.

Centesimal, sen.tes'i.mal, adj. Centesimally, adv.

Latin centēnārius, centēsimus (centum, a hundred).

Centum. (2.) -i- after "cent." (next letter -c, -f, -g, -m, or -pe.)

Centiceps, sen'ti.seps. Having 100 heads. (Capita, heads.)

Centifolia, -fo'li.āh. Having 100 leaves. (Folia, leaves.)

Centigrade. Having 100 degrees between the freezing and boiling point of water. (Gradus, a degree.)

Centigram. The 100th part of a gram. (French measure.)

Centime, sah'n.teem. The 100th part of a franc. (Fr. coin.)

Centimetre. The 100th part of a metre. (Fr. measure.)

Centipede, plu. centipedes, sen'ti.peeds. Insects with 100 feet. (Latin pes, pēdis, plu. pēdes, feet.)

Centum. (3.) -u- after "cent." (next letter -m, -p, or -r.)

Centumviri, sen.tum'vī.ri. Government lodged in the hands of 100 men. (Latin centum viri, 100 men.)

Centumvirate, sen.tum'vī.rate. The office of the above.

Centuple, sen'tu.p'l. A hundred fold. (Plico, to fold.)

Centuplicate, sen.tu'pli.kate. To make centuple.

Centurion, sen.tu'rī.on. Captain of 100 men.

Century, plu. centuries, sen'tu.riz. Period of 100 years.

Latin centumviri, centuplex, centuplicātus, centurion, centūria.

From centum -um must be effaced

Whenever before a vowel placed.

Cent-i appears with c, f, g,

Or when preceding m or pe;

Cent-u is reckoned better far

When joined to m, or p, or r.

As a "memoria technica" the word "Enis" (ns) will denote when e is used, and the word "Umpire" (mpir) when u is used. All other words belong to the second category.)

Cento, plu. centos. A patchwork poem, each line being from a different author, and used in a perverted sense.

Spanish centon; Latin cento, a patch or poem of patches. Greek kentrón, a patch, a cento.

Centre, sen'ter, the middle; centred, sen'terd, placed in the middle; centring, tending to the centre.

Cen'tric, cen'trical, cen'trically.

Cen'tral, cen'trally, central'ity, cen'tralism.

Cen'tralise, cen'tralised (3 syl.), centralis'-ing, cen'tralisa''tion.

French centre; Greek kētrōn, a point; Latin centrum.

(It will be seen that the word center is quite indefensible.)

Centrifugal, sen.trif'.u.gal. A force directed from the centre to the circumference, a tendency to fly from the centre.

Latin centrum fugio, to fly from the centre.

Centripetal, sen.trip'.ētal. Tending towards the centre.

Latin centrum pēto, to seek the centre.

Centuple, centurion, century, &c., see above, Centum,

Cephalic, se.fal'.ik. Pertaining to the head.

Lat. cēphalicum, cēphalicus, adj.; Gk. kēphallikos (kēphālē, the head).

Cephalopod, phu. cephalopods or cephalopida, sef'.a.lo.pods, sef'.a.lop'-i.dah. Molluscs, like cuttle-fish.

Greek kēphālē pōdoi, feet [placed round] the head.

Cepheus, Se'fuce. A constellation containing thirty-five stars.

Cepheus, husband of Cassiopeia, both made constellations.

Cerastium, se.ras'.tium. Mouse-ear chickweed.

Greek kerastion (from keras, a horn). "The horned plant," referring to the shape of the capsule (2 syl).

Cerasus, ser'ra.sus. A genus of plants containing the cherry.

Latin cērāsus; Greek kērāsos, the cherry-tree. So called from Cērāsus (now Kērāsun), whence it was brought by Lucullus.

Cerate, Serrate, Serried; see' ret, ser'rate, ser'rid.

Cerate. A thick ointment containing wax.

Cerated, see'ra.ted. Covered with wax.

Serrate (in Botany). Leaves with saw-like edges.

Serried. Compact, set in close array.

"Cerate," Latin cērātum; "cerated," Latin cērātus.

"Serrate," Latin serrātus, like a saw (serra, a saw).

"Serried," French serré, closely packed, crowded together.

Cere, seer, to cover with wax. Seer, a prophet. Sear, dry.

Cerement, seer'.ment. A waxed wrap for dead bodies.

"Cere," Latin cera, wax. "Seer," Old Eng. seōn, to see.

"Sear," Old Eng. sear[ian], to dry.

Cereal, pertaining to grain. Serial, a periodical.

Cereals, phu., all grains used for food. Serials, periodicals.

"Cereal," Lat. cereālis (Cerēs, goddess of corn). "Serial," from series.

Cerebrum, plu. cerebra, ser're.brūm, ser're.brūh. The brain.

Cerebellum, plu. cerebella, ser're.bel'-lum, ser're.bel-lāh.

The hinder part of the brain, where the animal spirits are supposed to be generated.

Latin cerebrum, the brain proper; cerebellum, the little brain, the animal not the intellectual part.

Ceremony, plu. ceremonies, ser're.mun.y, ser're.mun.iz.

Ceremonial, ser're.mō'.ni.al; cer'emo'nially, cer'emo'nious, cer'emo'niously, cer'emo'niousness. Outward forms of courtesy.

Latin cēremōnia; French cérémonie, cérémonial, &c.

Cereous, waxen (Latin cērēus). Serious, grave (Latin sērūs).

Ceres, See'reez, goddess of corn. Series, se'rreez, sequence.

"Series," Latin, sēries, a connected succession.

Certificate, ser.tif'.i.kate, certifi'cated, certifi'cat-ing, certifi'ca'-tion. A written testimony; to testify in writing.

French certifi'cat; Low Latin certifi'catorium. (See Certify.)

Certify, ser.tif'.y; cer'tifies (3 syl.), cer'tified (3 syl.), cer'tifi-er, cer'tify-ing. To attest in writing; to assure. R. xlv.

French certifier; Latin certifi'cārem facere, to make certain.

Cessation, ses.sa'.shun, a pause. Cassation (French), appeal.

Latin cessātio, cessation (from cesso, to leave off).

Cession, ses'.shun, a yielding. Session, an assize, &c.

"Cession," Latin cessio, a giving up (verb cesso, to leave off).

"Session," Latin sessio, an assize (verb sedeo, to sit).

Cesspool, ses'.pool not cispool, Receptacle for liquid filth.

Old Eng. sesse-pól, a pool settle (verb sess[ian], to settle).

Cetacea or cetaceans, sing. cetacéan, se.tay'.sē.ah, se.tay'.se.anz, sing. se.tay'.sē.an. Whales and other marine mammals.

Ceta'ceous, adjective.

Latin cete; Greek kété or kētos; adj. cetāceus, kétéios (3 syl).

Cetiosaurus, se'-tī-ŏ.saw''.rus. The fossil whale-saurian.

Greek kétéio-sau'ros, the whale-like lizard.

Cetotoliths, se.tot'.ŏ.lites. Fossil ear-bones of whales.

Greek kētos-ŏta lithos, whales'-ear stones.

Ch- represents three distinct sounds, and three distinct characters. The sounds are sh, tch, and k. The characters are c (before a, e, i and eo), ch, and the Greek χ.

(N.B.—In this dictionary "ch" is sounded "tch," unless otherwise expressed.)

All words (except two) beginning with "ch." = k, are of Greek origin. The exceptions are chem'istry (Arabic), and chia'ro-oscu'ro (Italian).

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

All native words, and two-thirds of those borrowed from the French beginning with "ch-" have the sound of tch. There are eighteen words beginning with "ch-" = sh, all of which are from the French, to which language indeed most of our irregularities are due. The eighteen words are chad, chag'rin, chaise, cham'ois, cham'pagne, champaign, champignon, chandelier, chapeau, chap'eron, charade, char'latan, chas'seur, chat'eau, chemise, chevalier, chica'nery, and chiffonier.

-ch (Old Eng. suffix of adjectives), "pertaining to": rich, Scotch.
Chafe, chāfe, to rub. Chaff, chāf not chāf, husks of grain.

Chafe, chāfed (1 syl.), chāf'-ing, chāf'-er, chāf'-ery.

Chafing, chay'-fing, rubbing. Chaffing, chāf'-fing, quizzing.

"Chafe," French échauffer, to warm, to chafe.

"Chaff," Old Eng. ceaf, chaff ("c" = ch).

Chafer, chay'-fer, a beetle. Chaffer, chāf'-fer, to haggle.

"Chafer," Old Eng. ceafor, a chafer, a beetle ("c" = ch).

"Chaffer," Ger. schacherei, chaffering (verb schachern, to bargain).

Chaff, chāfed (1 syl.), chaffing, to quiz. Chafe. (See above.)

Chaffer, chāf'-fer (noun); chāf'-fer (verb). Rule 1.

Chagrin (Fr.) shāg'-rin (n.), sha.grin' (v.). Shagreen, sha.green'.

Chag'rin, vexation: chagrin', to vex. (Rule 1.) Shagreen', a sort of leather prepared from the shagreen whale.

Chagrin', chagrined, sha.grind', chagrin'-ing (only one n).
(One of the few exceptions to a very general rule. Rule i.)

Chair, cheer, share, shear, sheer.

"Chair" (a seat), French chaire, a pulpit; Lat. cathedra.

"Cheer" (to console), French chère, cheer, welcome.

"Share" (a portion), Old Eng. scir, a part cut off.

"Shear" (to cut), Old Eng. scir[an], to cut off, to divide.

"Sheer" (entire, pure), Old Eng. scir, pure, clear, &c.

Chaise, shāze, a one-horse carriage with two wheels. Chase, hunt.

"Chaise," French chaise. "Chase," French chasser, to hunt.

Chalcedony, kal.see'.dō.ny not kal.sēd'.ō.ny. A precious stone.
(The "e" and the "o" are both long in the Greek word.)

Greek chalkēdon; Latin chalcedōnius. So named from "Chalcēdon," a Greek city of Bithinia, where the first was found.

Chaldee, kal.dee' not chal.dee'; Chaldean, kal.dee'.an.

Chaldaic, kal.day'.ik; Chaldaism, kal.day'.izm.

Latin Chaldæi, Chaldeans; Chaldaicus; Gk. Chaldaia, Chaldaios.

Chaldron, chaul'.dron not chāl'.dron. Thirty-six bushels [of coke].

Caldron, kawl'.drōn not kāl'.drōn. A large boiler.

"Chaldron," French chaldron, an old dry measure of 1308-516 litres.

"Caldron," French chaudron; Latin caldārium, a large kettle.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chalice, chāl'iss, a cup. Chalice, chal'ist, full of cups.

(This word ought not to have an "h" after the "c.")

Old Eng. calic, a goblet; French calice; Latin calix; Greek kulin.

Chalk, chawk. Calk, kawk, to fill the seams of a ship. Cork.

Chalky, chawk'y, adj. of chalk. Corky, like cork.

"Chalk," Old Eng. cealc or cālc, lime; Latin calx; Greek chalix.

"Calk," Latin calco, to tread down (from calx, the heel).

"Cork," Spanish corcho; Latin cortex, bark.

Challenge (2 syl.), chal'enged (2 syl.); chal'lenger, chal'lenging.

Chal'engeable, chal'.lenj.ă.b'l. (Only verbs in -ce and -ge retain the "e" before -able.)

Low Latin calangium, a challenge; Greek kaleo, to summon.

Chalybeate, kă.lib'.ă.at. Ferruginous water.

French chalybé; Latin chălybēus, adj. of chălybs, steel; Greek chălybē, steel, from "Chălups," one of the nations of the Chălybēs, in Pontus, famous for working in iron and steel.

Chamber, chăm'.ber, chām'bered (2 syl.), chām'ber-ing.

French chambre; Latin cămēra; Greek kămēra, a vaulted room.

Chameleon, ka.mee'.lē.on. A lizard, able to change its hue.

Latin chamaleon; Greek chamai lēon, the reptile lion.

Chamois, sham'.wor (noun), sham'.my (adj.): as "chamois-leather."

French chamois, Spanish gamuza, a species of antelope or goat.

Chamomile, kam'.ă.mile, a plant. Cal'omel, prepared mercury.

Calamine, kal'.ă.măn. Carbonate of zinc.

"Chamomile," Latin chamamēlon; Greek kamaimēlōn, the ground apple, so called ab odore mali Mariani. (Plin. 22, 21.)

(Our word is quite misspelt, and as usual we have taken the error from the French, camomille for chamēmel.)

Champaign, sham'.pain', a wine. Campaign, kam.pain' (q.v.)

Champion, cham'.pī.on, a defender. Campion, kam'.pī.on (q.v.)

"Champion," French champion, Low Latin campio (champ pion).

"Campion," both the Silēne (catch fly) and the Lychnis.

Chance (1 syl.), chanced (1 syl.), chanc'-ing. To happen.

French chance; Latin cadens, cadentia, things that occur.

Chancel, chăn'.sel (of a church). Cancel, to obliterate.

Chancellor, chăn'.sel.lor, a dignitary. Cancellor, one who cancels. Chancery, chăn'.sě.ry, a court of equity.

Latin cancelli, a chancel; cancellarius, cancellaria (from cancelli, lattices, which divided the clergy and lawyers from the laity).

Chandelier, shăn.dě.leer'. A hanging candelabrum.

Chandler, chănd'.ler not chând'.ler. A dealer in candles.

French chandelier, chandelier and chandler; Latin candēla, a candle.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Change, chānge; changed (1 syl.), chāng'-ing, chāng'-er.

Change'-able (verbs in -ce and -ge retain the "e" before -able), change'-ableness, change'-ably, change'-ful, change'-fully, change-less, change-ling. To alter, an alteration.

French changer; Latin cambiāre, to change, cambium, change.

Channel, chan'-nel; channeled, chan'-nēld; chan'-nel-ing. (R. iii.)

Canal', an artificial river. Ken'-nel (for dogs), a gutter.

"Channel" and "canal," Latin canālis; French canal.

"Kennel" (a gutter), Fr. chenal. (A dog's house) chenil (chien, a dog).

Chanter, fem. chantress, chan'-ter, chan'-tress. One who chants.

Chanticleer, chan'-tī.cleer. A corruption of cantic'ular.

Chantry, chan'-try (should be chantery). A chantry-chapel.

"Chanter," Old Eng. cantere; Fr. chanter, v.; Lat. cantare, cantātor.

"Chanticleer," Latin canticulārius, a little singer, the cock.

"Chantry," Fr. chantererie; Low Lat. cantaria (chanter, to sing).

Chaos, kay'.ōs. The materials of the world before "creation."

Chaotic, kay.ōt'ik. Adj. of chaos. (Greek and Latin.)

Chap (the cheek), not chop. Chap (to crack from cold), not chop. chap, chapped, chapt; chapp'-ing, chapp'-y. (R. i.)

"Chap" and "chop" are the same words, but "chop" is now used to signify a cut, as a "mutton chop," or to cut, as to "chop wood."

"Chap" (the cheek), Old Eng. ceaplas, the jaws; ceasel, the snout.

"Chap" (as chapped hands), Low Latin colpo; to cut; French coup.

Chapel, chāp'-el, chap'-el-ry. Chapel was originally the canopy placed over the altar when mass was performed.

Low Lat. capellus, a cap or hood, capellāria, a chapelry; Fr. chapelle.

Chapel Royal, plu. chapels royal. ("Royal," adj. no plu.)

Chaperon, shāp'.ĕ.rōne (noun); chaperone; shāp'.ĕ.rōne (verb).

Chaperone, chap'erōned (3 syl.), chap'erōn-ing.

French chaperon, a hood worn by an attendant, hence an attendant on young ladies, a guide or protector.

Chapiter, chāp'.ĭ.ter, the capital of a column. Chap'ter (of a book).

"Chapter," Latin capitellum or capitulum (caput, a head, and -ellum or -ulum, dim.; French chapiteau, a chapter).

"Chapter," Old Eng. capitol; Latin capitulum; French chapitre.

Chaplain, chāp'.lan. A clergyman to a private family, ship, &c.

Chap'laincy, chap'lainship. (It would be better chapelain.)

French chapelain; Latin capellānus (one who wears a hood, capellus).

Chaplet, chāp'.let, a wreath (Fr. chapelet; Low Latin capellus).

Chapter, chāp'.ter (of a book). Chapiter, chāp'.ĭ.ter (of a pillar); q.v.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Char, to burn to carbon. Char, chair, to work by the day at house-work (applied to women). Charr, a lake fish.

Char (to burn). Charred, chard. (Rule i.)

Charring, burning. Charing (one r), doing char-work.

"Châr" (to burn), a contraction of the French charbonner (charcoal).

"Châr," Old Eng. cérre, a turn of business (verb cérran).

("Châring" is one of the few exceptions to a very general rule. R. i.)

"Charr" (the fish), Gaelic cear, one of the salmon family.

Character, kar' rak.ter. Caricature, kar' rî.kû.ture (q.v.)

Charactered, kar' rak.terd; char'actering, char'acterless.

Char'acterize, char'acterized (4 syl.), char'acteriz-ing.

Characteristic, kar' rak.ter.îs''tik; char'acteris'tical, char'acteris'tically, char'acterism. Rule xxxii.

Greek charaktér, charaktérizo (from charasso, to impress coin); Latin charactér, charactérismus, the distinguishing of characters.

Charade (French) sha.rard'. A riddle. (See Enigma.)

Charge (1 syl.), charged (1 syl.), charg'-ing, charg'-er.

Charge-able (Verbs in -ce and -ge retain the "e" before -able), charge'-ably, charge'-ableness, charge-less.

French charger, to load, &c.; Low Latin carco, to load (our cargo).

Chargé d'affaires, plu. chargés d'affaires (French), sha'r.zja daffair. One entrusted with diplomatic business.

Chariot (French) char'rÿ.ot. A coach with only a front seat.

Charioteer, char'rÿ.ô.teer'. The driver of a chariot.

Charity, plu. charities, char'itable, char'itably, char'itableness.

French charité; Latin châritas, not cârîtas (Greek charîtês, favours).

Charlatan (French), sha'r.lû.tan, a quack. Char'latanism.

Charr, a fish of the salmon family. Char, to burn. (See Char.)

Chart, chart, a map. Cart, a two-wheeled vehicle for stores.

Charter, a royal grant in writing. Carter, one who has charge of a team.

"Chart," Lat. charta; Gr. chartês, papers. "Cart," Old Eng. cræt.

Chasable, châse'.a.b'l, that may be chased. Chas'uble (q.v.)

Chase, chûse, châsed (1 syl.), chās'-ing, chās'-er, chās'-able.

(Only verbs in -ce and -ge retain the "e" before -able.)

French chasser, to chase; Low Lat. chacea or chasea (verb chaceo).

Chasm, kâzm, a gulf. (Greek chasma, a yawning; Lat. chasma.)

Chaste, châst, châte'-ly, châte'-ness, but chās'tity.

French chaste, chasteté; Latin castus, castitas.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chasten, *chāse'.*n not *chāste'.*n; chastened, chāse'.'nd.

Chastening, chāse'.'n.ing; chastener, chāse'.'ner.

Chastise, chās.tize'.; chastised' (2 syl.), *chāstis'.*ing, chāstis'.-er, chāstis'.-able. (Not in -ce or -ge. Rule xx.)

Chastisement, *chās'tiz.*ment. Correction, punishment.

Old Fr. chastier, now châtier; Latin castigare, to correct, punish.

Chastity, *chas'.*tĭ.ty. Purity of body and mind. (See Chaste.)

Chasuble, *shaz'.*u.b'l, a priest's robe. Chasable, *chāse'.*a.b'l (q.v.)

"Chasuble," French; Low Lat. casubilla, dim. of casula, a surplice. It is worn over the alb when the priest performs mass.

Chat, chatt'.-ed, chatt'.-ing, chatt'.-er, chatt'.-y. (Rule i.)

Chatter, *chatt'.*ered (2 syl.), *chatt'.*ering, *chatt'.*erer. To prattle.

French jaser, corrupted first to châsser then to chatter.

Chateau, plu. chateaux (Fr.), *shăt'.*o, *shăt'.*oze. A country seat.

Chattels, *chat'.*t'ls. Goods in general. (Low Lat. catalla, chattels.)

Chaumontelle, *shau'.*mon.tel' not *shar'.*mon.tel'. A pear.

So called from Chaumont; in France.

Cheap, cheep; cheapen, cheep'.'n; cheapened, cheep'.'nd; cheapening, cheep'.'ning. Low in price, to lessen in value.

Old Eng. cedp, a bargain, cedp[ian], to bargain, cedpan, to buy.

Cheat, cheet. Contraction of "escheat." Escheators were officers appointed to look after the king's escheats. This gave many opportunities of overcharging and of fraud.

Cheat'er, one who cheats. Cheetar, the hunting leopard.

Old Eng. ceattia, cheats. "Chetar," or cheeta, is a Mahratta word.

Check, a restraint, to restrain. Check or cheque (for money).

Checker or chequer. To form into checks or squares.

Old Eng. ceac, a fetter; French échee, a repulse, hinderance.

"Cheque or check" (for money), exchequer, a treasury.

Cheek. Side of the face. (Old Eng. ceāca, the cheek or jaw.)

Cheer, Chair, Char, Sheer, Shear, Share.

Cheer. To gladden. (French chère, cheer, welcome.)

Chair. A seat. (French chaire, a pulpit; Latin cathedra.)

Char, chair. To do domestic work by the day. (Old Eng. cērran, to do a turn of business; cērre, a turn of business.)

Sheer. Entire, pure. (Old English scīr, pure, clean.)

Shear. To cut. (Old Eng. scīr[an], to cut off, to divide.)

Share. A portion. (Old English scīr, a part cut off.)

Chee'tah, the hunting leopard. Cheat'er, one who cheats (q.v.)

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chef d'œuvre, plu. chefs d'œuvre, shay d'urv. (In art) the best production of an artist in his particular line.

Cheir- (Greek), kire or ki'r.... The hand. Except in Zoological nomenclature, spelt chir- (q.v.)

Cheiracanthus, ki'ra.kan''thus. A fish armed with spines.

Cheirolepis, ki.roł'.ěpis. A fossil fish. (Gk. lēpis, a scale.)

Cheiroptera, ki.rop'.te.rah. Bats. (Greek ptēron, a wing.)

Cheirurus, ki.rū'.rus. A trilōbite. (Greek cheir oura, hand-tail; i.e., having a tail with five finger-like spines.)

Chelæ, kee'.lee. A claw (of a crustacean). (Gk. chēlē, a talon.)

Chelonia, kě.lō'.ni.ah. The tortoise family. Chelo'nian (n. or adj.) (Gk. chēlōnē, a tortoise.)

Chemise (French), shě.meez'. An undergarment of women.

Chemisette, shim'.e.zet'. A sort of female waistcoat.

Chemistry, chemist (e not y), kem'.is.try, kem'.ist. Chem'ic, chem'ical, chem'ically.

The same root as al-chemy, without the article al. Arabic kimia, the 'occult art. Even if taken from the Greek, the first vowel would be ē not y (chēō, to melt; not chuō).

Cheque or check. An order for money. (See Chēck.)

Cherish, cher'rish; cher'ished (2 syl.) Fr. chérir; cher, dear.

Cherry, cher'ry (ought to have only one r). A fruit.

Old Eng. cirse; Fr. cérise; Lat. cērāsus; Gk. kērāsōs (from Cerasus, on the Pontine coast, whence Lucullus imported the cherry).

Cher'ub, plu. cher'ubs (Heb. plu. cher'ubim, Chaldaic cherubin). (The Bible word "cherubims" [Gen. iii. 24] is indefensible.)

Chervil, cher'.vil, a herb. (Old Eng. cerfille; Lat. chærephyllum.) Greek chairō, to rejoice, and phullon, a leaf, an exhilarating plant.

Chest'nut not Ches'nut. (Latin castānēæ nux. Virg. Ecc. ii. 52.)

Old Eng. cisten-hnut, a chestnut. (From Castānēæ, in Thessaly.)

Chevaux de frise (French), she-vo' dē-freeze'. A military fence.

Chevaux de frise, the horse [bar] used at the siege of Frise.

Chevalier (French), shev'.ā.leer. A cavalier.

Chew, choo, chewed (1 syl.), chewing. To masticate.

Old Eng. cēow[an], past cetw, past part. cowen, to chew.

Chiaro-oscuro (Ital.), ke.ah'ro os.ku'.ro. Light and shade.

Chibouk or Chibougue (Turk.), chī.booke'. A Turkish pipe.

Chicane, shě.kain'; chicanery, shě.kain'.ěry. Trickery.

French chicane, chicanerie, pettifogging trickery.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chick or chicken, plu. chicks or chickens. (Chicken is not plural.)

Old Eng. cicn, plu. cicenu. "Chick" is a contraction of cicn.

Chide, past chode, past part. chidden [chid]. To reprove.

Chid'-er, chid'-ing, chid'-ingly.

Old Eng. ciddan, past cdd, past part. ciden, to chide.

Chief, plu. chiefs (Rule xxxix). Chief'tain (French chef).

Chiffonier, shif'fo.neer', not cheffoneer. A piece of furniture.

French chiffonnier, a rag-picker (from chiffon, a rag).

Chilblain, chil'.blain. A blain or sore from chill or cold.

Old Eng. cele-blegen or blægan, a chill blister or sore.

Child, plu. children, child, chil'.dren. Childe, a young nobleman.

"Child," Old Eng. cild, plu. cildra, later form cildre (n interpolated).

Childhood, the child period. (O. Eng. -hād, state, condition.)

Childish, like a child. (O. Eng. -isc [added to nouns] means "like," but added to adjectives is diminutive, as "blackish.")

Chiliad (Greek) kil'.i.ad, 1,000. Kilo-, used in French weights to express a multiple; mille- (Latin 1,000) to express a fraction. Thus kilo-gramme = 1,000 grammes; mille-gramme, $\frac{1}{1000}$ part of a gramme.

Chill, chilled (1 syl.), chill'-ing, chill'-er (comp.), chill'-est (sup.), chill'ingly, chill'ness, chill'y, chill'i-ness. (Rule viii.)

Chilli [vinegar]; chillies (plu.), chil'.liz, pods of Guinea pepper.

Chime, chimed (1 syl.), chīm'-ing. To make bell-music.

Danish kime, to chime; kimen, chiming.

Chimera, plu. chimeras, kī.mee'.rah, kī.mee'.ràz. A monster.

Chimerical, kī.mer'ry.kal (imaginary); chimeric'ally.

Lat. chimæra; Gk. chimaira, a lion, dragon, and goat united.

Chimney, plu. chimneys, not chimnies. Chimney-piece.

(The word "chimbley" is a common error with children.)

French cheminée; Latin cāminus; Gk. kāmīnōs, a chimney.

Chimpanzee, chim'.pan.zee'. African name for the orang.

Chin (of the face). Chine, the back-bone, a "joint" cut from it.

"Chin," Old Eng. cin. "Chine," French échine, the spine.

Chinese. Sing. a Chinese or a Chinaman, plu. Chinese (indefinite), Chinamen (definite), as 1, 2, 3, &c., Chinamen.

Chintz, plu. chintzes. Cotton prints with more than two colours.

Hindūstan'ee, chint; Persian chinz, spotted cotton cloth.

Chip, chipped (1 syl.), chipp'-ing, chipp'-er. (Rule i.)

German kippen, as kippen und wippen, kipper und wipper, applied to money-clipping and money-clippers.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chir- (Greek cheir, the hand), kī'r... (prefix), hand. (See Choir-.)

Chirography, ki.rōg' rā.fy. Art of writing.

Chirograph, kī'rō.graph. An official written document.

Chirographic, kī'ro.graf''ik, adj. Chirographer.

Greek cheir grapho, to write with the hand, hand-writing.

Chiromancy, kī'ro.man.sy. Divining by looking at the hand.

Chiromancer, kī'ro.man.ser. One skilled in the above.

Greek cheir manteia, hand-divination, &c.

Chiropodist, ki.rop'.o.dist. A corn and wart doctor.

Greek cheir podes, hand and feet (-ist, an agent).

Chis'el, chis'eled (2 syl.), chis'el-ing, chis'el-er. (Rule iii. -EL.)

French ciseler, to chisel (ciseau, scissors); Lat. cæsum (cædo, to cut).

Chivalry, shiv'al.ry; chivalric, shiv'al.rik; chivalrous.

French chevalerie (3 syl.), from cheval, a horse; Lat. caballus.

Chlorine, klo'r.in. In Chemistry -ine denotes a gas.

Chloride, klo'rid. In Chemistry -ide denotes a base. If "lime" is the base, the compound is chloride of lime.

Chlorate, klo'râte. In Chemistry -ate denotes a salt, the acid of which ends in -ic. The salt of chloric acid with a base.

Greek chlōros, pale green. Chlorine is a greenish yellow gas.

Chloroform, klo'rō.form. A compound of chlorine, carbon, and hydrogen. -form in Chemistry denotes the "ter-oxide of a hydrocarbon," which resembles "formic acid."

Chlorophyll, klo'ro.fil. The green colouring matter of plants.

Greek chlōros phyllon, the green of leaves.

Chocolate, chok'o.let. (French chocolat, Spanish chocolate.)

Choice, choic'-er (comp.), choic'-est (sup.) Worthy to be chosen.

Old Eng. ceōs[an], to choose; ceōsung, a choice.

Choir, quire. A band of singers; the place where they sing.

Old Eng. chōr; Latin chōrus; Greek chōrōs.

Choke, choked (1 syl.), chōk'-ing, chōk'-er. To block up.

Welsh cegio, to choke, (from ceg, a mouth).

Choler, kol'er, anger. Collar (for the neck).

Choleric, kol'e.rik. Irritable, passionate.

Greek and Latin cholēra. (Greek cholē rheo, flow of bile.)

"Collar," Old Eng. ceolr, a collar; Latin collum, the neck.

Cholera, kol'e.rah. A flow of bile, bile-flux. (See above.)

Choose, past chose, past part. chosen, chooz, chōze, chōzen; choos'-ing, choos'-er. Choice, choic'-er, choic'-est.

Old Eng. ceōs[an], past ceōs, past part. cōren.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chop, to cut, to exchange. Chap, the jaw-part of the cheek, &c.

Chop, chopped (1 syl.), chopp'-ing, chopp'-er. (Rule i.)

"Chop" (to cut, &c.), Low Lat. colpo, to cut; French couper, to cut.

"Chop" (to exchange), Old Eng. cedp, a bargain; verb cedp[an].

"Chap" (the jaw), Old Eng. ceaplas, the jaws.

"Chap" (to crack with cold), Low Latin colpo, to cut.

Choral, ko'-ral, adj. of choir (quire). Coral, kor'-ral (q.v.)

Chord, kord (in Music). Cord, kord, rope. Cawed, p. of caw.

"Chord," Greek chordé, the string of a lute, &c.; Latin chorda.

"Cord," French corde, string; Greek chordé; Latin chorda.

"Cawed," kord, past tense of "caw," an imitation-word; Old Eng. cor, a crow; Latin corvus; Greek corax.

Chorus, ko'-rus. Cho'-ral, adj. (Latin chōrus, Greek chōrōs.)

Chough, chuff, a jackdaw, a crow. Cuff, kuf, a blow. "Chough" was originally pronounced chow, like "though" tho'.

Old Eng. ceo = ch'ow; Fr. choucas; Lat. corvus ("caw," the cry).

"Cuff," French coup, to blow; Latin cōlūphus (Greek kōlaptō).

Chrism, krīzm, consecrated oil. Chrisom, kris'-om, a child that dies within a month of its birth.

"Chrism," Greek and Latin chrisma, ointment (Gk. chriō, to anoint).

"Chrisom," so called from the "chrism cloth," anointed with "chrism," or consecrated oil, and placed over the child.

Christ, krist; Christ-less, krist'-less. Short in the compounds:

Christmas, krist'-mas. From Dec. 25 to Jan. 6. (Rule viii.)

Christen, kris'-n not kris'-ten; christened, kris'-nd.

Christening, kris'-n-ing; christener, kris'-n-er.

Christendom, kris'-n.dom. All Christian countries.

Christian, kris'-tī.an; Christianity, kris'-tī.an'-ī.ty.

Christianize, kris'-tī.an-ize; christianized, kris'-tī.an-ized.

Christianizing, Christianism, kris'-tī.an-izm. (R. xxxii.)

Greek Christos, christiānōs, christianizō, christianismos.

Latin Christus, christianus, christianismus, christianitas.

Chromate, krō'-mate. In Chemistry -ate denotes a salt, from the union of a most highly oxidized acid with a base. Thus chromic acid and potash is the chromate of potash.

Chromite, krō'-mite. In Chemistry -ite denotes a salt, from the union of a less oxidized acid with a base. Thus chromite of iron is an oxide of chromium (inferior to chromic acid) in union with iron.

Chromium, krō'-mī.um, a metal; also called chrome (1 syl.)

Greek chrōma, colour. The metal "chrōmium" is so called because it is a powerful colouring substance.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Chromatics (plu.), kro.mat'iks, science of colours.

Chromatic Scale (Music), so called from the intermediate notes being printed in colours.

Chromatrobe, kró.ma.trōpe. An apparatus for showing a stream of colours. (Greek trōpaō, to turn round.)

Greek chrōma, colour. All sciences in -ic are plural except logic, music, and physic (French words). Gk. chrōmatikos; Lat. chrōmaticus, chromatic music.

Chronic, krōn'ik or chron'ical. Continuing a long time.

Chronicle, krōn'ī.k'l. History arranged in order of time.

Chronicled, krōn'ī.k'ld; chronicl-ing, krōn'ī.k'ling.

Chronicl-er, krōn'ī.k'ler. One who chronicles, an historian.

Greek chrōnikós; Latin chrōnicus (Greek chrōnós, time).

Chronology, plu. chronologies, krō.nōl'.ō.jiz. Science of dates.

Chronol'oger or chronol'ogist. One who arranges dates.

Chronological, krōn'.ō.lodg'ī.k'āl, chronolog'ically.

Greek chrōnōlōgia, chrōnōlōgōs (from chrōnós, time).

Chronometer, krō.nōm'.ē.ter. A watch or time instrument.

Chronom'etry. The art of making chronometers.

Greek chrōnós metron, time metre.

Chrysalis, plu. chrysalises not chrysales, krīs'.a.lis, krīs'.a.lis.ēz.

Chrysalid, plu. chrysalids, are better and more modern forms; "chrysalid" is also used as an adjective.

Greek chrysallis, gen. chrysallid[os], with double l (chrusos, gold);

Latin chrysalis, gen. chrysalid[is], one l. (See Aurelia.)

Chrysanthemum, krī.săn'.thē.mum not chrysanthenum, plu. chrysanthemums not chrysanthema. A genus of flowers.

Greek chrysanthēmōn (chrusōs anthēmōn, gold flower); Latin chrysanthemum, the yellow crow-foot, ox-eye, moon-daisy, &c.

Chrysolite, krīs'.ō.lite. The topaz of the ancients, now improperly applied to a green crystal.

Latin chrysōlithus; Greek chrusos lithós, the gold stone.

Chrysoprase, krīs'.ō.prāz not chrysophrase. A green stone.

Latin chrysōprāsus; Greek chrusōprāsōs (chrusō prāson, gold leek).

"Quod sit coloris porracei; i.e. viridis, aureis intervenientibus guttis Isid." (See also Plin. 37, 20.)

Chuckle, chuk'l; chuckled, chuk'.ld; chuckl-ing, chuk'.ling.

Corruption of the Latin cāchinno; Greek kagchaza, to laugh.

Church. Old Eng. circe = chir.che; Scotch kirk; Greek kur[ios] the Lord, with the suffix -ch, "belonging to."

Churl, a surly fellow. Curl, kurl, a ringlet.

"Churl," Old Eng. ceorl = ch'orl, a freeman of the lowest rank.

"Curl," Old Eng. circul, a circle; Welsh cwr, with dim., a little circle.

"Ch" in English words sounded as "tch," unless otherwise expressed.

Churn, to make butter. (Old Eng. cerene, a churn, verb cern[an].)

Chyle, kile. A milky fluid separated from food by digestion.

Greek chalos; Latin chylus (Greek chêo, to pour out).

Chyme, kime. Digested food before it is converted into chyle.

Greek chumos; Latin chymus (Greek chuo, same as chêo, to pour out).

Cicada, plu. cicadæ (Lat.), sī.kay'.dah, sī.kay'.dee. Tree-hoppers.

Cicatrix, plu. cicatrices (Lat.), sik'.ā.trix, sik'.a.trī.sez. A scar.

Cicatrise, sik'.a.trize; cicatrised (3 syl.), cic'atris-ing. (R.xxxi.)

In Latin the "a" of these words is long: cicātrix, &c.

Cicerone (Ital.), sis'.e.rō'.ne or che'.chēy.ro'.ne. A guide.

The "orator" or Cicero who shows over a show-place.

Ciceronian, Sis.e.rō'nī.an. A manner of writing or speaking in imitation of the style of the great Roman orator.

Cider, si'.der. Wine made from apples. (Old Eng. cider.)

Latin stēra; Greek stēra, any fermented drink except grape wine.

Ci-devant, see d'.vah'n (French). An ex-[official], former.

Cigar, sē.gàr' (Spanish cigarro, French cigare).

Cigarette, sig.ā.ret' (French). Tobacco in a paper envelope

Cilia, sil'.ā.ah, hair-like organs. Sillier, more silly.

Latin cilium, plu. cilia, the eye-lash (from cilleo, to twinkle).

"Silly," Old Eng. selig, German selig, innocent. Idiots are termed "innocents;" and Jesus Christ is called "the harmless silly babe." "Silly sheep," i.e., innocent.

Cinchona, sin.ko'.nah. Peruvian bark. So called from the Countess del Cinchon, wife of the Viceroy of Peru.

Cincture, sink'.tcher. A girdle. (Latin cinctura; cingo, to gird.)

Cinder, sin'.der. Burnt coal. (Old Eng. sinder; Lat. cīnēres, ashes.)

Cindery, sin'.de.ry, not cindry. Full of cinders.

Cineraria, sin'.e.rair'ri.a. Rag-wort; some are "ash" coloured.

Cinerary, sin'.ē.rū.ry. Applied to sepulchral urns. It ought to be cin'ery. (Lat. cīnēreus). Cinerārius means a tiring-man, or maker of wash-balls.

Cinnamon, sin'.nā.mōn. The inner bark of a kind of laurel.

Greek kinnāmon; Latin cinnamum or cinnamōmum.

Cinque- (French); sink. Used as a prefix to denote 5.

Cinque-cento. Degraded or 15th century style of art.

Cinque-foil, sink-foil. Five-leaved (French feuille, a leaf).

Cinque-ports. Hastings, Romney, Hythe, Dover, Sandwich.

Cipher, si'.fer, the figure 0; to do sums. Ci'phering, doing sums.

Arab. sifr, zero; Low Lat. ciphra; French chiffre; Italian cifra.

Circean, Sir.sec'an not Sir'.sē.an. Adj. of Circè (Lat. Circæus).

Circle, ser'.kəl; circled, ser'.k'ld; circling, ser'.k'ling; circlet.

Latin circūlus (circus, around); Greek kirkos; French cercle.

Circuit (French) ser'.kit. The route of a judge.

Circuitous, ser.ku'i.tus, round-about. Circuitous-ly.

Circular, ser'.ku.lar, adj. of circle. Circular-ly (Lat. circulāris.)

Circulate, ser'.ku.late; cir'culāt-ed, cir'culāt-ing, cir'cula"tion, cir'culator not circulater, (-ed sounded after d or t).

Latin circūlare, circulator; French circuler, circulation.

Circum- (Latin preposition), "around." Used as a prefix.

Circumambient, ser.-kūm.am"-bī-ent; circumambien-ly.

Latin circum ambio, to encompass or go all round.

Circum-ambulate, -am'.bu.late; -am'bulāted, -am'bulāt-ing, -am'bulāt-or (Rule xxxvii.), -am'bula"tion.

Latin circum ambulāre, to walk all round.

Circum-cise, circum-cised (3 syl.), -ci'ser, cir'cum-cis'ion.

Latin circum cædo (cæsum), to cut all round.

Circumference, ser.cum'.fē.rence. The line that bounds a circle.

Latin circum fero, to carry all round.

Cir'cumflex, cir'cumflexed (3 syl.) A mark (∞) over a letter.

Latin circum flecto (flectum), to bend round.

Circum'-fluent, circum'-fluence, circum'-flu-ous, flowing round.

Latin circum fluens, circumfluus, flowing all round.

Circumfuse, ser-cum.fuze', -fused', -fu'sing, -fu'sion.

Latin circum fundo, supine fusum, to pour all round.

Circumjacent, ser'-cum.ja''.sent. Lying round on all sides.

Latin circum jacens, lying all round.

Circum-locu'tion, circumlocutory, ser'-cum.lok'-ŭ-tō-ry.

Latin circum locutio, a round-about manner of speaking.

Circum-nav'igate, -nav'igāt-ed, -nav'igāt-ing, -nav'i.ga"tion, -nav'igāt-or (R. xxxvii.), circumnavigable, -nav'i.ga.bl.

Latin circum navigāre, to sail all round (navis, a ship).

Circum-scribe, -scribed', -scrib'-ing, -scrib'-er, -scrip'tion.

Latin circum scribo, to write or draw a line all round [a place, beyond which combatants must not pass], hence to limit.

Circum-spect. Cautious. (Lat. circum spectro, to look round.)

Circum-spection, -spec'-shun. Caution. (See Rule xxxiii.)

Latin circum spicio, supine spectrum, to look round.

Circum-stance, -stanced, -stanst; -stantial, -stan'shal.

Circum-stan'tials (plu.), incidents; circum-stan'tially.

Circum-stantiate, -stan'.she.ate, -stan'tiāt-ed, -stan'tiāt-ing.

Latin circumstantia, circum stans, standing all round.

"Circumstances" are the details of time, number, names, incidents, influences, qualities, &c., &c., which contribute to an effect.

- Circum-vallation, -val.la'.shun. A military trench all round.
 Latin circum vallāre, to make a vallum (trench) all round.
- Circum-vent, -vention, -ven'.shun. (See Rule xxxiii.)
 Latin circumventio, circum venio, supine ventum, to come all round, and hence to impede, to out-trick.
- Circum-volve, -volved, -volv'd; -volv'-ing, circum-volu'tion.
 Latin circum volvo, to roll all round, circumvolūtus.
- Circus, plu. circuses not circi. A circular place for equestrians.
 Latin circus, plu. circi; Greek kirkos, plu. kirkoi.
- Cirrus, plu. cirri. Curled filaments [for locomotion]. "Cirrus clouds" curly clouds. Scirrhus, skir'.rus, a tumour.
Cirrous, adj. of cirrus. Scirrhus, skir'.rus, tumourous.
 "Cirrus," Latin cirrus, a lock of hair; Greek keras, a crumpled horn.
 "Scirrhus," Latin scirrhus, a hard swelling; Greek skirrhos.
 ("Cirrhī," so often written in scientific books to denote "curl-clouds" is a mistake. The Greek "kirrhos" means yellow or flesh-coloured.)
- Cis- (Latin preposition), prefix to adjectives, "on this side."
Cis-Alpine, this side the Alps; i.e., the south or Roman side.
Cis-Padane, this side the "Padus" or Po; i.e., the Rom. side.
- Cistern, sis'.tern. A box for water. (Latin cisterna.)
- Citadel, sit'.ā.del. A fortress in or near a city.
 French citadelle; Italian cittadella (citta-della, a little city).
- Cite, site, sight; all pronounced alike.
Cite, cit'-ed, cit'-ing, cit'-er, cit'-able, cita'tion. (Rule xix.)
Sight, sight-ed, sight-ing. To come in view of.
 "Cite," Latin citāre, to quote, to call, to summon.
 "Site" (a building plot), Latin situs, a situation.
 "Sight," Old Eng. gesiht, vision (g of "sight" is interpolated).
- Citizen, sit'.iz.čn. There is no such word as citizeness.
Citizenship. State of having the privileges of a citizen.
 -en, "one belonging to"; citi-z-en, one belonging to a city.
 (As there is no "z" to Latin words, it ought to be "citisen.")
 Latin civitati (dative case) contracted to civil'i, c'i'ti, to a city.
- Citrate, sit'.rāt. In Chemistry -ate denotes a salt formed from the union of an acid ending in -ic and a base: Thus "citrate of magnesia" is citric acid united with magnesia.
- Citric. In Chemistry -ic denotes an acid most highly oxidised.
- Citron, sit'.ron. Fruit of the citron tree.
 French citron; Latin citrus (citrum, citron wood).
- City. A corporate and cathedral town. (O. Eng. cite, Lat. civitas.)
- Civet. A substance taken from the civet-cat.
- Civic, siv'.ik. Pertaining to a city. (Ci- long in Latin.)
 Latin civicus, adj. of civis, a citizen; civitas, a city.

Civil, siv'il, civ'il-er (comp.), civ'il-est (sup.); civil-ly; civilise, siv'il.ize; civ'ilised (3 syl.), civilis-ing, civiliser, siv'il.ize.er; civilisation, siv'il.i.za''shun (R. xxxi.); civility, siv'il.i.ty; civilian, siv'il.yan.

Latin civilis, courteous like a citizen; civilitas, civility.

French civil, civilisateur (civiliser), civilisation, civiliser, civilité.

Clack, clacked, kläkd. To chatter. (French claquer, to clack.)

Claim, claimed (1 syl.), claim-ant, claim-able (1st Latin conj.)
Meant originally to demand with noisy clamour.

Old Eng. hlemm[an], to make a noise; Latin clamāre, to exclaim.

Clair-voyant (Fr.), one who sees without eyes. Clair-voyance.

Clam, clammed (1 syl.), clamm-ing, clamm-y, clammi-ness.

Old Eng. clam, sticky mud, &c.; verb clæm[an], to smear. (R. i.)

Clamour, klām'er, outcry. Glamour, glām'er, a charm which acts on vision. Claymore, a Highland broad-sword.

"Clamour," (one m), Old Eng. hlemm[an], to make a noise; French clameur; Latin clāmor (verb clamāre, to clamour).

"Glamour," Scotch, same as glimmer.

"Claymore," Gael. claid mor, great-sword.

Clamp, clamped (1 syl.), clamp-ing. (The p not doubled. R. ii.)
Old Eng. clam, a bandage. To "clamp" is to fasten with clamps.

Clan, clann'-ish, clann'-ishly, clann'-ishness. (R. i.)

Clan-ship, clans-man not clanmān. One of the same clan.

Gaelic klann, children; Latin cliens, a client, a tenant, &c.

Clandestine, klän.des'tīn, clandestine-ly. In an underhand way.

Latin clandestinus, secret, private, &c. (clam, secretly).

Clang, clanged (1 syl.), clangor, klang'ger not klang'er.

"Clangor" not clangour, it is not through the French, but direct from the Latin clangor, verb clango, to cry like a trumpet, &c.

Clap, clapped (1 syl.), clapp'-ing, clapp'-er. (Rule i.)

Old Eng. clapp[an], to clap, to strike the hands together.

Claret (French), klär'ret. A red wine, the colour of the wine.

Latin vinum clarētum, clarified wine.

Clarify, klar'ri.fy; clar'ifies (3 syl.), clar'ified (3 syl.), clar'ify-ing, clar'ifica'tion. To make free from impurities.

French clarifier; Latin clārificio (clarus facio, to make clear).

Clarion, a trumpet. Clarinet, klar'ri.net, not clarionet.

("Clarionet" means a small clarion, which it is not.)

"Clarion," Ital. clarino; Low Lat. clarigarius, a herald.

"Clarinet," Spanish clarinete; French clarinette.

Class, classed (1 syl.), class-ing, to arrange in a class.

Classic or classical (adj.), class'ical-ly, class'ical-ness.

Classics, the best authors. (Latin classicus, highest of the six divisions of Roman citizens made by Servius; hence classici auctōres, the highest class of authors.)

Classify, classifies (3 syl.), classified (3 syl.), class'ifi-er, class'ify-ing, class'ifica'tion (Lat. classis-ficio [facio]).

Latin classis, one of the six divisions of Roman citizens.

Clat'ter, clattered, klăt'ierd; clăt'ter-er, clăt'ter-ing, clăt'ter-ingly. (The r not doubled. Rule ii.)

Old Eng. clatrunġ, a clatter, a drum; Welsh clewtian, to clatter.

Clay, plu. clays, clay-ey (not clay-y), clay-ish.

(There are three words which take the postfix -ey instead of -y,—viz., clay-ey, sky-ey, and whey-ey.)

Old Eng. clæg, clay; Danish kleg, loam, clay.

Claymore, a Highlander's broad-sword; Glamour, glam'er; Clamour, clam'er. (See Clamour.)

"Claymore," Gaelic claid-mor, great sword; Welsh cledd-mor.

-cle (suffix), diminutive, as parti-cle, a little piece; also written -cule, as animal-cule, a little animal; -ule, as glob-ule, a little globe or ball; -el, as satch-el, a little sack; -cle or -kle, as sic-kle [sik'kl'], a little scythe. (Latin -cul[us]).

Clean, kleen; cleaned (1 syl.), clean'er, one who cleans; clean'-ness; clean-ly, in a clean manner; clean-er, clean-est, clean-ly (adj.), klén'-ly; cleanli-ness, klén'-li-ness.

Old Eng. clæn, verb clæn[an], clénlice and clénlice, cleanly.

Cleanse, klénz; cleansed, klénzd; cleans-ing, klen'zing; cleans-er, klén'-zer. To purify, to make clean. (R. xix.)

Old Eng. clén[sian], past clénsede, past part. clénseð.

Clear, clear-er (comp.), clear-est (sup.), cleared (1 syl.), clearer (n).

Welsh clær; French, clair; Latin clarus; verb clāro, to clear.

Cleat not clate. A piece of iron for the heels of shoes and boots.

Old English cleot or clūt, a clout; Welsh clwt, a patch.

Cleave (to stick), past cleaved (1 syl.) [clavē], past part. cleaved, cleav-ing. "Clave" occurs in the Bible (Acts xvii. 34).

Old English clif[an], past cluf, past part. clisen, to adhere.

Cleave (to split), past cleaved (1 syl.), or cleft (obsolete forms "clave" and "clove"), past part. cleaved or cleft (obs. "cloven"). "Clave" (split) occurs often in the Bible (See Gen. xxii. 3). "Cloven" is used as an adj.: as "cloven foot," "cloven tongues."

Cleaver, one who cleaves, a butcher's chopper. Clev'er (q.v.)

Cleav-age, klee'vāge not cleaver-age. The act of splitting, cleavable structure. Cleav'-able. (Rule xix.)

Old English clif[an], past clēf, past part. clōfen, to split.

(The two verbs were originally quite distinct in all their parts, and it is to be regretted that the distinctions are not preserved.)

Clef, plu. clefs (of Music). Cliff, a precipice. Cleft, a crack.

(Monosyllables ending in "f" preceded by one vowel, double the f. The exceptions are "if," "of," and "clef." R. v.)

"Clef," French; Latin clavis, a key. "Cliff," Old English clif.

Cleft. A crack. (Old Eng. cleofa, verb cláf[an], to cleave.)

Clem'atis, plu. clem'atises not klēmāy'ītis. "Traveller's Joy," "Virgin's Bower," "Old Man's Beard," "White Vine."
(The "e" is long in the Latin and Greek words.)

Latin clēmātis; Greek klēmātis (from klēma, a vine twig).

"Traveller's Joy," because it decks the hedges in autumn.

"Virgin's Bower," because it climbs and overhangs, bower-like.

"Old Man's Beard," because it looks like grey hair.

"White Vine," because it is a "vine" and bears a whitish flower.

Clemency, plu. clemencies, klēm'en.siz. Gentleness, mercy,
-cy, suffix to abstract nouns. (Lat. clementia, clemens, mild.)

Clench, clinch. "Clench" (to grasp), as "he clenched my hand"; (to settle), as to "clench an argument." Clencher, a settler, a finishing stroke, as "that was a clencher."
"Clinch," to turn a nail, to rivet. We use both words.

Dutch klinken, to rivet; Danish klinke, to clinch.

Clestory, kler'ris.tōry. Corruption of the French cléristère, and generally called clear-storey.

Clergy (no plu.). A noun of multitude. (French clergé.)

Cler'gy-man, plu. clergy-men. One of the clergy. (R. xi.)

Clerical, klēr'ri.kal. Pertaining to the clergy.

Old Eng. cleric or clerc, a priest; Latin clērus, clēricus; Greek klērōs, a lot or heritage. The "church" is God's heritage (1 Peter v. 3), and the priestly tribe was "God's lot."

Clerk, klurk, a clergyman; klark, a church servant, &c.

Old Eng. clerc, a priest; Latin clērus; Greek klērōs.

Clever, klēv'er, clever'er (comp.), clever'est (super.) See Cleaver.

Old Eng. glēdw, talented, changed to glē.wā, corrupted to clever.

Clew. A hint. (Old Eng. cleowen, cliewe, clīwe or clōwē.)

Latin globus, a ball of thread, by which strangers were guided through labyrinths. Incorrectly spelt clue.

Cliff, clef, cleft, clift.

Cliff. A hill by the sea.

Clef (of Music), q.v. Cleft or Clift, a fissure, a crack.

In the Bible "cliff," "clift," and "cleft," a fissure, are used indifferently. "I will put thee into a clift of a rock" (Exod. xxxiii. 22); "To dwell in the cliffs of the valleys" (Job xxx. 6); "Thou art in the clefts of the rock" (Cant. ii. 14).

* * The distinction should be preserved thus :

Cliff, cliffs (of the sea) ; clef, clefs (of Music).

Clift, clifts (fissure) ; cleft (cut), as "cleft wood."

"Cliff," Old Eng. clif, a rock, a cliff of the sea. "Clef," Fr., q.v.

"Clift" or "Cleft" (a fissure), Old Eng. cleofa, a cleft, cluyfth, splits.

Climate, klí'măt; climatic, klí'măt'ík (adj.) (i short in Lat.)

French climat; Latin clīma, clīmālis; Greek klima, a heavenly zone. Ancient geographers divided the globe into 60 parts called "climates," 30 north and 30 south of the Equator.

Cli'max, plu. cli'maxes; Climac'teric, a crisis; Climac'terical.

Latin clīmax, climac'tericus; Greek klimax, a ladder.

Climb, past climbed [clomb], past part. climbed, climb-ing, climb-er, kline, klimed (1 syl.), klime'-ing, klime'.er (klōme). ("Clomb" and "clamb" [past] are still used in poetry.)

Old Eng. climb[an], past clamb (plu. clumb[on]), past part. clomben.

Clime. A region or tract having its characteristic climate.

Latin clīma; Greek klima. (See Climate.)

Clinch, to fix, as to "clinch a nail." Clench, to grasp (q.v.)

Dutch klinken; Danish klinke, to rivet.

Cling, past clung [clang], past part. clung; cling'-ing, cling-er not cling'-ing, clin-ger, to adhere firmly.

"Finger" (fin'ger), "Clinger" (kling'er). The root of "finger" is fin or fōn, to seize, and therefore the division of the word is fin'ger. The root of "clinger" is cling, and hence the division of the word is cling'er.

Old Eng. cling[an], past clang, past part. clongen, to cling.

Clip, clipped (1 syl.) or clipt, clipp-ing, clipp-er. (Rule i.)

Old Eng. clipp[an], past clypte, past part. clypt, to clip or clasp.

Clique (French), cleek; cliquey, cleek-y; cliqu-ish, cleek-ish.

A clique is an exclusive "set" of similar rank or tastes.

Cloak. An outer garment. (O. E. cláth, a covering, and -ock dim.)

Clock, a time-piece. (Old Eng. clucgge; Low Lat. clocca or cloca.)

Clod, clodd-ish (Rule i.) Clodhopper, a rustic, a peasant.

Old English clūd, a clod, a stone; Danish klods, blocks, clods.

Clog, clogged (1 syl.), clogg'-ing, clogg'-y, clogg'i-ness. (R. i., xi.)

Old Eng. clot, a log; Welsh cloigen, anything tied to another.

Clois'ter (of a cathedral), clois'tered (2 syl.), clois'tering.

Old Eng. clustro, a cloister; clustor, an enclosure; Latin claustrum.

Close, kloce (noun), klōze (verb), to shut, a place shut in.

Closed, klōzd; clos-ing, klōze'-ing; clos-er, kloze'-er; close-ly, kloce'-ly; close-ness, klōce'-ness; close handed, clos-er, kloce'-er (comp.), clos-est, kloce'-est (sup.) R. xix.

Old Eng. clusa, close, a prison; Latin claustrum (verb claudo, to shut).

Closet, kloz'.et. A little enclosure. (Close and -et diminutive.)

Clot, clott-ed, clott-ing, clott-y. A lump, to coagulate. (R. i.)

Cloth, klōth (noun); clothe, klōthe (verb); clothes, klōthz.

Cloth, plu. cloths, klōth, klōthz. Any woven fabric.

Clothes, klōthz, garments. Clothe, to dress in garments.

Clothes-brush, clōze-brush; clothes-basket, clōze-bas.ket.

Clothe, past and p.p. clothed (1 syl.) or clad, clōth-ing.

Clothier, klōthe'-yer. A dealer in clothes, an outfitter.

Old Eng. clāth, cloth; clāth, a garment: clāth[ian], to clothe.

Cloud, cloud'y, cloud'i-er (comp.), cloud'i-est (super.), cloud'i-ly, cloud'i-ness. The vapours of the air amassed (Rule xi.)

Welsh cluder, a heap or pile; Old Eng. clūd, a heap, a hill.

Clove. A spice, a division of a root of garlic, &c. In Bot., a bulb.

"Clove" (a spice), French clou, a nail; Latin clavus.

"Clove" (of garlic), Old Eng. clufe (from cluf[an]), to cleave.

Cloven. Divided, as "cloven foot," "cloven tongues of fire."

Old Eng. clýfer-fôte, cloven-footed, clofen, p.p. of clúfan, to cleave.

Cloy, cloyed (1 syl.), cloy-ing, cloy-less. To fill to loathing (R.xiii.)

Danish kløge, to retch, to feel sick.

Club, clubbed (1 syl.), clubb-ing, clubb-ist. (Rule i.)

"Club" (a cudgel), Welsh clob a knob, clopa a club stick.

"Club" (a society), Germ. gelubde, a body of men united by a sacred vow.

Clue. Shakespeare uses this word: (All's Well, &c., i. 2), but clew is better. (See Clew.)

Clum'sy, clum'si-er (comp.), clum'si-est (super.), clum'si-ness, clum'si-ly. Awkward, not natty. (Rule xi.)

Old Eng. clom, a bond; clom-sy, as if one's hands were tied.

Clyster. An injection for medical purposes.

Latin clyster; Greek klustér, a syringe (kluzo, to wash).

Co-. The Latin prefix con, with the n dropped. It stands before a vowel or h, as coalesce, cohabit. Before "o" it is separated by a hyphen, as co-operate. With a hyphen it is used before any letter: as co-mates, co-partner. In Mathematics it means the complement, as co-sine, co-tangent, &c. (See Con-.)

Co. Contraction of Company: as "Smith and Co."

Coach, kōch. A close carriage with front and back seats.

French coche; Latin carrūc[a], a calash.

Coadjutor, fem. coadjutrix, ko'.ad.jū'.tor, &c., a helper.

Latin co [con] adjutor (juvo, to help), a fellow-helper.

Coagulate, ko.ag'.u.late (to clot), coag'ulāt-ed, coag'ulāt-ing, coag'ulāt-or, coag'ulāt-ive (Rule xix.), co-ag'ula'tion, coag'ulant, coag'ulum, coag'ulable, coag'ulabil'ity.

Latin co-āgulāre, to curd; coāgūlātio, coāgūlatus, coāgūlum.

Coal, kōle. A black mineral used for fuel.

Collier, kōl'.yer. A ship for conveying coals, a coal labourer.

Collier-y, plu. collieries, kōl'.ye.riz. A coal-pit, coal-works.

Old Eng. cōl or cōll. The a of "coal" is to compensate for the accent.

Coalesce, ko'.ă-less' (to assimilate), coalesced, ko'.a-les't'; coalescing, ko'.a-les''sing; coalescent, ko'.a-les''sent; co'ales'-cence; coalition, ko'.a-lish'on; coalition-ist.

Lat. co [con] alesco, to grow closer and closer together (alo, to cherish).

Coarse, korse not co.orse (gross). Corse (a corpse). Course (q.v.)

Coars-er (comp.), coars-est (super.), coarse-ly, coarse-ness.

Old Eng. gorst (rough), as in goose-berry, cos-lettnee; ursinion, or cursinion, a coarse onion (corrupted to Latin allium ursinum).

"Corse," a poetical form of Corpse. "Course" (a process, a chase). French course; Latin cursus, a course.

Coast, kōst, land lying next the sea. Coastwise not coastways.

French coste now côte; Low Lat. costēra, Lat. costa, a rib or side.

Coat, kōte, coat-ed, coat-ing; coatee, kō.tee, a half-coat.

French cotte; Germ. kutte; Ital. cotta. (Our word is ill-spelt.)

Coat-of-arms, plu. coats-of-arms, not court-of-arms.

Coat-of-mail, plu. coats-of-mail, not coat-of-male.

Coax, kōæ; coaxed, kōæd; coax-ing, coaxing-ly, coax-er.

Welsh cocr, to coax; cocru, to fondle; French cocasse, funny.

Cobble, kob'.b'l (to botch); cobbled, kob'.b'ld; cobbler, kob'.ler; cobbling, kob'.ling; cobbling-ly (double b, root cob, R. i.)

Welsh cōb, a thump; cōbio, to thump; cōblyn, a thumper.

Cobra da Capello, plu. Cobras or Cobra da Capellos. Hooded snake.

Portuguese, "the hooded snake;" capello, a hood.

Cob'web; cobwebbed, kob'.webd; cob'webb-ing, cob'webby.

(The double "b" would be contrary to Rule iii., but the word was originally joined with a hyphen.)

Cob or cop, a spider; as Old Eng. atter-cop the poison-spider; Dutch spinne-kop; Chaldee kopi, a cobweb.

Coca, kō'-kah (a narcotic). Cocoa, kō'.kō (a nut), or substance prepared from the Cacao (kă.kay'.o) plant.

"Coca," the dried leaf of the Erythroxylon Coca, of Peru.

"Cocoa," the fruit of the Theobroma Cacao (West Indies).

Cochineal, kōck'.i.neel not kok'.i.neel. Crimson dye-stuff.

Spanish cochinilla, the wood louse; French cochenille, cochineal.

Cochlea, kōk'.lē.ah (part of the ear); Cochlear, kōk'.lē.ar (In Bot.)

Cochleary, kōk'.lē.ă.ry. Spiral, like a shell.

Cochleate, kōk'.lē.ate; cochleat-ed, kōk'.lē.ate'.ed. (R. xix.)

Latin cochlēa; Greek kochlās, a snail's shell.

Cock, fem. hen; cock'erel, fem. pullet. Barn-door fowls.

Cock and hen are also gender-words: as

Cock-bird, fem. hen-bird; cock-sparrow, hen-sparrow; cock-pheasant, hen-pheasant; moor-cock, moor-hen; peacock, pea-hen; turkey-cock, fem. turkey; cock-lobster, hen-lobster. Woodcock is both mas. and fem.

Old Eng. coc or cacc, and hen or henn; French cog, poule. ("Pullet," like "beef," "mutton," "veal," &c., shows that the Norman lords retained their names for the "meats," while the Saxon serfs retained their's for the living animals which they tended.)

Cockade (2 syl.) A livery worn on the hat. (French cocarde.)

Cockatrice, kŏk'.ă.tris (French cocatrix).

Cockchafer, kŏk'.chafe.er. The May-bug. (Old Eng. ceasfor.)

Cockle, kŏk'.k'l. The corn-rŏse. (Old Eng. coccel, the darnel.)

Cockle, kŏk'.k'l. Shell-fish. (Latin cochlĕa, Greek kochlŏs.)

Cockle, kŏk'.k'l; cockled, kŏk'.eld; cockling. To pucker.

French re-coquiller, to curl up, dog's-ear, or cockle.

Cockroach, kŏk'.rŏtch. A black beetle. (Old Eng. hreoce.)

Cockscomb (a plant). Coxcomb, a fop. Both kŏx'.kome.

The licensed jesters were called coxcombs, because they wore a "cock's comb" in their caps. Spelling incorrect.

Coddle, kod'.d'l. To parboil, to pamper; one pampered.

Coddled, kod'.d'ld; coddling, kod'.ling; coddler, kod'.d'ler.

Codling. A young cod.

Old English -ling, "offspring of," "young of."

Codlin. An apple fit for coddling or cooking (-in not -ing).

Latin coctil[is], fit for roasting or baking. Old Eng. cod-appel, the cooking apple. "Cod" (the fish), is a corruption of Gadus. Lat. the codfish: "hadd[ock]" is another form of the same word.

Code (of laws), codex, kŏ'.dex (Latin). An ancient manuscript.

Codicil, kŏd'.ă.cil, a supplement to a will (Lat. cŏdicillus, a little book); codicillary, kŏd'.i.cil''.lă.ry (adj. of codicil).

Codify, kŏ'.dĭ.fy; codifies, kŏ'.dĭ.fĭze; codified, kŏ'.dĭ.fĭde; co'difi-er; codify-ing; codifi-cation, kŏ'.dĭ.fĭ.ka''.shun; codist, kŏ'.dist, one who reduces laws to a "code." R. xi.

Latin cŏdex, a volume (from caudex, the stock of a tree), books being at one time made of boards (from cædo, to fell).

Coehorn, kŏ'horn. A military projectile. (See Cohorn.)

Coequal, kŏ'.qual, coequal-ly; coequality, kŏ'.e.QUAL''.i.ty.

Latin co [con] æqualis, [all] alike equal.

Coerce, ko.erse'; coerced, ko.ersi'; coerc-ing, ko.er'.sĭng; coerc-er, ko.er'.ser; coerc-ion, ko.er'.shun; coerc-ive, ko.er'.sĭv; coercive-ly; coerc-ible, ko.er'.sĭ.b'l. R. xix.

Latin coerco, co [con] arceo, to drive or press together. The word "compel" (com-pello) means the same thing.

Coessential, kŏ'.es.sen''.shal, same in essence; coessential-ly; coessentiality, kŏ'.es.sen'-shi.al''.i.ty, coessential state.

Latin co [con] essentiālis, partaking of the same essence.

Coeternal, ko'.e.ter'nal, coeternal-ly; coeternity, ko'.e.ter''.ni.ty.

Latin co [con] æternus, co [con] æternitas, equally eternal, &c.

Coeval, ko.e'val, coeval-ly. (Latin co [con] ævum, equal ages.)

Coexecutor, fem. coexecutrix, ko'.ex.ek''.ũ.tor, ko'.ex.ek''.ũ.trix.

Latin co [con] executor, &c., joint executor with [another].

Coexist, ko.ex.ist'; coexist'-ed, coexist'-ing, coexist'-ent, coexist'-ence not coexist-ant, coexist-ance.

Latin co [con] existere, to exist at the same time (followed by with.)

Coextend, ko'.ex.tend'' (to extend equally); coextend'-ed, coextend'-ing, coextent, ko'.ex.tent'; coextension, ko'.ex.ten''.shun (Rule xxxiii.), coextensive, ko'.ex.ten''.siv; coextensive-ly, coextensive-ness.

Latin co [con] extendo, supine -tensum, co-extensivus, co-extensio.

Coffee, kof'fe. The berry of the Coff'ea arab'ica, from Caffa or Kaffa, a province of Abyssinia.

French café; Spanish café; Italian caffè; Danish kaffe.

Coffer, kof'fer (a chest), coffer-ing; coffered, kof'ferd.

Coffin, kof'fin; coffin-ing, confined, kof'finnd.

(The double "f" is French, our chief source of error.)

Old Eng. cofa, a box; Low Lat. cofera or cofra; Ital. cofano; Latin cōphīnus; Greek kōphínōs, a basket.

Cog- (prefix). The Latin con- before the derivations of nascor, nosco, and nomen: as cognate, cognition, cognomen.

Cog (of a wheel), to trick; cogged (1 syl.), cogging. Cog, a boat.

"Cog" (of a wheel), Welsh cocos, cogs of a wheel.

"Cog" (to trick), Welsh coegio, to trick; coeg, a trickster.

"Cog," Low Latin, coggo, a sort of small boat.

Cogent, ko'.jent, cogent-ly; cogen-cy. Urgent, urgently, urgency.

Latin cogens, cogentis, co [con] ago, to urge together.

Cogitate, kof'.i.tate (to think), cog'itāt-ed, cog'itāt-ing, cog'itāt-ive (Rule xix.), cogitative-ly, cog'ita'tion, cogitable.

Latin cōgitāre, supine -tātum (to think); cogitatio, cogitābilis.

Cognac, kōn'.yāk, not cogniac. The best French brandy.

So called from Cognac, in Charente. (French cognac.)

Cognate, related on the mother's side; Agnate, on the father's.

Cogna'tion, relationship on the mother's side.

Agna'tion, relationship on the father's side.

An uncle on the father's side is an agnate, because he bears the same surname; an uncle on the mother's side is a cognate only, he is related by birth, but does not bear the same surname, or belong to the same "gens."

Cognisable, kōg'.nī.ză.b'l (R. xxiii.); cognisant, kōg'.nī.zant; cognisance, kōg'.nī.zance; cognisee, kōg'.nī.zee.

Latin cog [con] noscere, to know for the first time.

"To recognise," is to know not for the first time, to recall.

(These words ought not to be spelt with a "z." Rule xxxi.)

Cognoscente, plu. cognoscenti, kog'.nös.sen.te, kog'.nös-sen''.ti.
One learned in art. (Italian, from the Latin cognoscere.)

Cognomen, plu. cognomens, kög.nö'.men not kog'.nö.men.

Latin cog [con] nomen, a name with [your personal name].

Cohabit, ko.hab'.it. To live together not in a married state.

Cohab'it-ed, cohab'it-ing; cohabitation, ko.hab'.ita''.shun.

("ed," after "d" or "t" makes a separate syllable.)

Latin co [con] habito, to dwell together; co-habitatio.

Coheir, fem. coheiress, ko.air, ko.air'.ess. Cohere, ko.hear' (q.v.)

"Coheir" (joint heir), Latin co [con] hæres, heir with [others].

(Only five words have the initial "h" mule: they are heir, hour, honest, honour, and humour.)

Cohere, ko.heer' (to stick together), cohered' (2 syl.), cohēr'-ing; cohēr'-ence; cohēr'ency; cohēr'ent, cohēr'ent-ly. (R.xix.)

Cohesion, ko.he'.zhun; cohesive, ko.he'.siv, cohe'sive-ly, cohe'sive-ness; cohe'sible; cohesibility, ko.he'.si.bil''.ity.

Latin co [con] hære, sup. cohæsum, to stick together; co-hærentia.

Cohorn, ko.horn. This is the French spelling, and is better than coehorn. A mortar invented by Baron de Cohorn (Coe-horn) of Holland, called the Dutch Vauban (1641-1704).

Cohort, ko'-hort not ko'.ort. A body of soldiers. (Lat. cohors.)

Coif, koyf (Fr. coiffe). Coiffure, koyf'fure (Fr.), a headdress.

Coil, koyl; coiled, koyld. To gather a rope together in rings.

French cueillir, to coil; Latin colligere, to collect.

Coin, koyn; coined, koynd; coin-er, coin-ing, coin-age.

French coin, a wedge; Latin cunæus, a die for stamping money.

Coincide, kō.in.side'' (to agree), coincid''-ed, coincid''-ing; coincidence, kō.in'.sī.dense not ko.in.si'.dense; coinc- ident, kō.in'.sī.dent; coincident-ly (simultaneously).

Latin co [con] incidere, to fadge in together (cadere, to fall).

Coke. Coal deprived of its volatile matters by heat.

Old English colc, refuse, the core of an apple, &c.

Col- (Latin prefix). Con before "l" is so written. (See Con-)

Colander, kul'an.der. A strainer. (Latin cōlans, straining.)

"Cōlātor[ium]," not "colander[ium]," is the Latin word.

Colchicum, kōl'.chī.kum. Meadow-saffron, Naked lady.

From Colchis, on the Euxine sea, where it flourishes.

"Naked Lady," because the flowers are without leaves.

Cold, cold-er (comp.), cold-est (superl.); cold-ish, rather cold.

Old Eng. cald or ceald, cold. (-ish added to adj. is diminutive.)

Coleopter, plu. coleoptera, kōl'.ě.op''.ter, kōl'.ě.op''.te.răh, also Coleopteran, kol'.e.op''.te.ran, beetles, &c. Coleop'terous (adj.)

Gk. kōlēōs pterōn, sheath-wing. Insects with sheaths to their wings.

Col'ic not Cholic, a bowel attack. Choleric, kol'.erik, passionate.

Latin cōlicus, the colic (from Greek kōlōn, the intestine).

"Choleric," Latin cholēricus (from Greek chōlē, bile).

Coliseum; kōl.i.see'.um. The largest amphitheatre in Rome.

The same spelling is kept in "Rue de Colisée," Paris.

Colosseum is the more usual spelling in English.

The Rom. "Coliseum" was so called from the "Colossus" or gigantic statue of Nero which stood near it, as well as from its great size.

Collapse, kōl.laps', not ko.laps'; collapsed, kōl.lapst'; collaps'-ing.

Latin col [con] lābor, lapsus, to sink, or tumble all together.

Collar (for the neck). Choler, kōl'.er, anger.

"Collar," Old Eng. ceolr, from ceole, the throat; Lat. collum, the neck.

"Choler," Latin cholēra; Greek chōlē, bile, anger.

Collate, kōl.late' not ko.late'; collāt-ed, collāt-ing. (Rule xix.)

Collation, kōl.la'.shun not "Co-lation" (a very common error); collāt'-or (R. xxxvii.); Collat'-able (an error in spelling); the Latin collātāre means "to make wide."

Collat-ible is the proper derivative of conferre, collatum.

Latin con-ferro, supine col-lātum, to bring together, to compare.

Collateral, kōl.lāt'.e.ral not ko.lāt'.e.ral; collat'eral-ly.

Latin col [con] lateralis, indirect (col lātus, lātēris, the side), running on the side, proceeding from one side.

Colleague, kōl'.leeg (noun), kol.leeg' (verb); colleagued, kol-leegd'; colleagu-ing, kol.leeg'.ing. To league together.

French colleque; Latin collēga (from con lego, to gather together).

Collect, kōl'.lect (noun), kōl'.lect' (verb), collect'-ed, collect'-ing,

Collect'-ive, collect'-ive-ly, collect'-ive-ness; collect-ible,

Collection, kōl'.lec'.shūn not ko.lec'.shōn (Rule xxxiii.)

Lat. col [con] legere, -lectum, to gather together; collectio, collectivus.

Col'lege not colledge; collegian, kōl'.lee'.ji'an; collegiate, kōl'.lee'.ji'ate. A society, a superior school institution.

Latin collegium (from col [con] lego, to gather together).

Colley or collie, a cur. Cooley or colie, a porter (East Indies).

Collier, kōl'.yer; collier-y, kōl'yě.ry. (See Coal.)

Collision, kōl.lizh'.an not ko.lizh'.an. A striking together.

Latin collisio (from collido, col [con] lædo, to hurt mutually by "striking together"; so elisio (e lædo), to strike out).

Collocate, kōl'.lō.kate; col'locāt-ed, col'locāt-ing; collocation, kol'.lō.kay'.shun. A setting side by side. (Rule xxxiii.)

Latin collocatio from col [con] locare, to place together.

Collodion, kōl.lō.dī.on not ko.lō'.dī.on nor ko.lō'.dī.um. A solution of gun-cotton in ether, used in photography, &c.

Greek kolla eidos, glue-like. It was first used in surgery, because in drying it left a gluey film over wounds. (An ill-formed word.)

Colloquial, kōl.lō'.quā.al not kō.lō'.quā.al; collo'quial-ly;

Collo'quial-ism, form of expression in common use.

Colloquy, plu. colloquies, kōl.lō.kwē, kōl.lō.kwēz.

Colloquist, kōl.lō.kwist. A speaker in a dialogue.

Lat. col [con] loquor, to speak together; French colloque, conference.

Collude, to conspire in a fraud; collusion, kol.lu'.zhun (R. xxxiii.)

Collusive, kol.lu'.siv, collu'sive-ly, collu'sive-ness;

Collusory, kol.lu'.zō.ry. Of the nature of a fraud.

Latin col [con] lūdo, supine lūsum; collūdo, to play into each other's hands, with the view of deceiving a third party.

Colocynth, kōl'.ō.sīnth (only one l). The bitter-apple.

Latin cōlōcynthis; Greek kōlōkunthis, bitter-gourd.

Colon, kō.lōn. The largest intestine. A stop made thus (:).

Latin colon; Greek kōlōn, a limb or member of anything.

Colonel, ker'.nel; colonel-cy, ker'.nel.sy (-cy denotes "rank"); colonel-ship, ker'.nel.ship (-ship denotes "tenure of office.") In "Hudibras" we have "colonelling" (4 syl.) (Our pronunciation is a vulgar contraction, "Co'n-el.")

French colonel (from colonne, a column), a commander of a column or regiment of soldiers; till the reign of François I. called capitaine-colonel. Low Latin colonellus.

Colonnade, kōl'.ōn.nade. A covered walk with columns.

French colonnade (from colonne, a column). Latin columnātus.

Colony, plu. colonies, kōl'.ō.niz; col'onist; col'onise, col'onis-ed, col'onis-ing, col'onis-er (R. xix.), col'onisa'tion (R. xxxi.)

Colonial, kol.lō.ni.al (not collo'ni.al), belonging to a colony.

Latin colōnia, a colony. (In Latin the -lō- is long.)

Colophon, plu. colophons, kōl'.ō.fon. The printer's impress at the end of a book. (Greek kolophōn, a finishing-stroke.)

Cōlōphon, a city of Iōnia, the inhabitants of which were such good horsemen that they could turn the issue of a battle; hence the phrase colophōnem addēre (κολοφῶνα ἐπιτιθέναι), to put a finishing stroke to a matter.

Colosseum, kōl.ōs.sec''um or Coliseum. The great Roman amphitheatre was called "Colisæum," but as the word is from "Colossus." Colosseum is the better spelling.

Colossal, kol.ōs'.sal (not colossial); colossean, kol.ōs.sec'.an.

Lat. cōlossēus; Greek kōlossōs, kōlossaiōs. The "Colossos of Rhodes" was a gigantic statue of Apollo, near the harbour.

Colour, ku'.er; coloured, ku'.erd; col'our-able, col'our-ably.

French couleur; Latin cōlor. (Our word is neither Fr. nor Lat.)

Colporteur, kōl'.por.teur', a book hawker. Col'portage (French.)

Latin collum portāre, to carry round the neck.

Colt, fem. filly, both called foal, fōle. A young horse or ass.

Old Eng. colt; Lat. filīa, a daughter; Old Eng. folā, a foal.

Coluber, kōl'ū.ber (Latin). A genus of serpents.

Columbine, kōl.um.bīne. A plant, so called from the Latin columba, a dove. The flower resembles a dove's claw.

Columella, kōl'ū.mel''.la. The column in the capsule of mosses; the axis of fruits. (Latin columella, a little column.)

Columellia, kōl'ū.mel''.li.ah. A genus of Peruvian shrubs.

Column, kōl'.um, a pillar. Columnar, ko.lum'.nar (adj.)

Latin columna. The adjective columnar is ill-chosen, as the Latin word columnarium means a "tax on columns." The adjective of "columna" is columnātus (columnate).

Colure, plu. colures, kō.leurs'. Two great circles cutting at right angles the four cardinal points of an artificial globe.

Greek kōlourōs (kōlos oura, a mutilated tail), these circles are "cut-tailed" or cut by the artificial horizon.

Colza, kol'.zah. A variety of cabbage which affords an oil.

French colza; Old English cawl, cole-wort; Flemish kolzaad.

Com- (prefix), for con- before b, m, and p. Also in the English words comfit and comfort, in Lat. "con-ficio," "con-fort[is]."

Coma, ko'.māh, lethargy. Comber, ko'.mer, one who combs.

Comatose, ko'.mā.toze, lethargic; comatous, ko'.mā.tūs.

"Coma," Lat. cōma, lethargy; Gk. kōma (koimāo, to put to sleep).

"Comber," Old Eng. camb, a comb; Germ. kammer; Lat. cōmo.

Comate, ko'.mate, a companion. This word should be commate.

"Comate" (from the Latin comātus), should mean "hairy." If from co and mate, it ought to be joined with a hyphen. (See Co-)

Comb (b mute), combed, kōmd; comb-ing, kōme'ing; comb-er.

Old Eng. camb, a comb; Latin cōmo, to dress the hair (cōma, hair).

Combat, kom'.bāt; com'bat-ed, com'bat-ing, com'bat-ant, combative, kom'.bāt'iv; combative-ness. (Rule iii.)

French combattre; Latin com batūo, to fight together.

Combine', combined' (2 syl.), combīn'-ing, combīn-er (R. xix.), combīn-able; combination, kom'.bi.na''.shun. To unite, &c.

Lat. combināre, to combine (from com binus, two and two together).

Combustion, kom.bus'.tchun, a burning; combust'ible, not -able; combust'ibil'ity, combust'ible-ness, combust'ive (R. xxii.)

Latin combustio; combūrere, sup. combustum, to consume with fire.

Come, past came, past part. come, kum, kāme; com'-ing, com'-er (Rule xix.) To arrive at the place where we are; hence A. says to B. "I am coming to pay you a visit."

"I am going to pay you a visit," would mean I intend, I am about to...

To come about, to happen: "How did that come about?"

„ come at, to get-to, or obtain: "I cannot come-at it."

„ come of, to arise from: "What came-of it?"

„ come-off, to escape: "We came-off with flying colours."

- To come on, to proceed: "The train came-on quickly."
 „ come out, to publish: "The book came-out last month."
 „ come over, to get the better of: "You cannot come-over me."
 „ come round, to recover: "The man will come-round."
 „ come up to, to amount to: "It comes-up-to 300."
 „ come upon, to attack: "He came-upon me unawares."

Old Eng. cum[an], past com, past part. cumen; cuma, a comer.

Comedy, plu. comedies, kõm'.e.diz; Comedian, ko.mee'.dian.
 (In Latin and Greek the first two vowels are long; "cõmẽdus" [short] means "one who eats with you.")

Latin cõmœdia, cõmœdus; Greek kõmõdia, kõmõdos, i.e., kõmẽ ôdẽ, a village song, an ode sung at a village [fair].

Comely, kum'.ly. Nice-looking (applied to peasant girls, &c.); comeli-ly, kum'.li.ly; comeli-ness, kum'.li.ness (R. xvii.)

From come. So in Lat. con-vẽniens, suitable, &c., is from venio, to come.

Comestible, kõm.ess'.ti.b'l (adj.), edible. Comestibles (plu.)

French comestible; Latin comessor, to revel; Greek kõmazo, to revel.
 The proper meaning of "comestibles" (eatables) is extra foods, foods in addition to those which form the "meals."

Comet, kõm'-et, a "hairy star"; cometarium, plu. cometaria, kõm'.e.tair'rẽ.um, a machine to show how comets move.

Cometary, kõm'.ẽ.tã.ry (adj.); Com'mentary, a comment.

Cometography, kõm'.e.tog'.ra.fy, treatise on comets.

Latin cõmẽta (from cõma, hair); Greek kõmẽtẽs (kõmẽ, hair).

Most comets have some sort of "hairy" light about them; sometimes it forms a "tail," sometimes a "beard," sometimes a "nebula," &c.

Comfit, Comfort; Comfiture, Comforture; Dis- (negative).

Comfit, a seed coated with sugar. Comfort, consolation.

Comfiture, kõm'.fĩ.teur, preserved fruit (French confiture).

Comforture, kõm'for.tchur, what gives comfort.

Dis-comfit, to rout. Dis-comfort, inquietude.

Dis-comfiture, defeat. Dis-comforture, want of comfort.

Com'fort (to console), com'forted, com'forting, com'forture; comforter, fem. comfortress or comforter; com'fort-able, com'fort-ably, com'fortable-ness; com'fort-less, com'fortless-ly, comfortless-ness, absence of comfort.

"Comfit," French confit; Latin confectus (our "confection").

"Dis-comfit," "dis-comfiture," French dẽconfire, dẽconfiture; Latin dis configo, to unfasten. Both French and English are ill-formed.

"Dis-comfort," French dẽconfort; Latin dis con (fortis, strong).

"Comfort," French conforter; Latin "confortãri," to be strong.

(There is no reason why "con" should be changed to "com" before fit and fort, and it violates all analogy. At all events, "comfit" should be comfit, a "confection.")

Comic, kom'ik, droll. Com'ical, com'ical-ly, com'ical-ness; comicality, kôm'.î.kal''.î.ty, drollery.

Latin cômicus (the o long); Greek kômîkôs. (See Comedy.)

Coming, kum'ing, approaching. (See Come.)

Comma, plu. commas, kom'.mâz. A stop made thus (,). Go'ma, q.v.

Latin comma; Greek komma, a part cut off (koptô, to lop).

Command, kom.mând'; command'-able, command'-ant, command'-atory, command'-er, command'-ment. To order.

Comman'der-in-chief, plu. comman'ders-in-chief.

French commande, commandant, commander, commandement; Latin con-mandâre; to give orders with [others].

Commemorate, kom.mem'-o.rate. (Double m followed by one m.)

Commem'orât-ed, commem'orât-ing, commem'ora'tion.

Commem'orative, kom.mem'.o.ra.tiv; commem'orable.

Latin com [con] mēmōrāre, commēmōrābilis, commēmōrātiō, commēmōrāre, to call to mind with [some special act].

Commence, kôm.mense', to begin; commenced, kom.menst'; commenc'-ing (Rule xix.), commence'-ment (Rule xviii.)

("Comince" would have been better, but as usual we have followed the French, and copied their error.)

French commencer, commencement. Corruption of the Ital. cominciare; Lat. cum initio, with the beginning.

Commend', commend'ed, commend'-able, commend'-ably, commend'able-ness; commendation, kom'men.day''.shun.

Commend'er, one who praises. Commendator, kôm.men'.da.tor, one who holds a living in trust (in commendam).

Commendatory, kom.men'.dă.î.ô.ry, laudatory. Commenda'tary, one who holds a living in trust (in commendam).

("Commendatory" is often spelt commendatory, but the distinction should be observed.)

French commender to recommend; Latin com [con] mendâre, to entrust one with [a commission], (mandâre, to give to one's charge).

Commensurate, kôm.men'.sũ.rate not kôm.men'shu.rate; commen'surate-ly, commen'surate-ness; commen'surable, commen'surably, commen'surabil'ity, commen'sura'tion.

French commensurable, commensurabilit  ; Latin com [con] mensur  re, to measure a thing proportionate with [something else].

Comment, kom'ment (noun), kom'ment' (verb). Rule 1.

Comment'-ed (R. xxxvi.); comment'-ing (followed by on).

Comment, kom'ment; comment-ary. A book of comments.

Commentate, kom'men.tate, to make comments; comment  t-ed, comment  t-ing (R. xix.); commentator (not -ter), R. xxxvii.; commentator'ial, commenta'tor-ship.

French comment; Lat. comment  ri, to write comments, comment  tus, comment  rium, comment  tor (from comminiscor commentus, to call to mind many things together, miniscor, i.e., memini, to remember).

Commerce, kom' merse, trade; commercial, kom. mer' shal (adj.), comm'er'cial-ly. (French commerce, commercial.)

Latin com [con] mercō, to trade with [others], commercium.

Commingle, kōm. min' g'l; commingled (3 syl.), commingling.

Old Eng. mencg[an] or meng[ian], to mingle, with the Lat. prefix com-. It would have been better with the English prefix ge- ("gemingle").

Comminute, kōm' mī. nute. To reduce to small pieces, to pulverize. Com'minūt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), com'minūt-ing (Rule xix.); comminution, kōm' mī. nu' shun.

Fr. comminution; Lat. com [con] minuo, to break into minute parts.

Commiserate, kōm. miz' ē. rate, to pity; commis'erāt-ed (R. xxxvi.); commis'erāt-ing (R. xix.); commis'erāt-or (R. xxxvii.); commiseration, kōm' miz. ē. rāy' shun, pity. (Double m.)

Commiserative, kōm. miz' ē. rā. tīv; commis'erative-ly.

Commiserable, kom. miz' ē. rā. b'l, deserving of pity.

French commiseration; Latin commiserāri, to condole with, com-miserātio (misēreo, to pity; miser, wretched, an object of pity).

Commissary, plu. commissaries, kom' mis. sū. rīz. A person employed to provide an army with personal requisites.

Com'missary-general, plu. com'missary-generals, chief of the commissaries; com'missary-ship, office of commissary.

Commissariat, kōm' mis. sū. rī. at. Commissary department.

French commissaire, commissariat; Low Lat. commissarius; Latin com [con] missus, sent with [the army], verb mitto, to send.

Commission, kōm. mish' shun; commissioned (3 syl.), commis'sion-ing; commis'sion-er, one authorized.

Fr. commission; Latin commissio, (com mitto, to send with [orders]).

Commit', to give in charge; committ'-ed, committ'-ing, committ-al, committ-able (R. i., R. xxiii.); Committ'-ment.

Committer, one who commits. Committor, the Lord Chancellor when he commits a lunatic to a trustee.

Committee, plu. committees, kom. mit' ty, kom. mit' tiz.

French commettre, comité; Latin com [con] mitto, to send together.

Commix', commixed, kōm. mixt; commixture, kom. mix' tchur; commix'-ible not -able. (Not of the 1st Lat. conjugation.)

Latin com [con] miscere, supine commixtum, to mix together.

Commodious, kōm. mō. dī. us not kōm. mō' jus; commo'dious-ly, commo'dious-ness (Lat. commōdus, convenient, suitable), commodity, plu. commodities, kom. mod' i. tiz, wares.

Latin commōditas; French commodité, a convenience.

Commodore, kōm' mō. dōr. Commander of a detachment of ships.

Italian comandatore, a commandant; Spanish comendador.

Com'mon, com'moner (comp.), com'monest (super.), common-ly, com'mon-ness; com'mon-able, held in common; com'mon-age, right of pasturing on a common; com'mon-alty, the common people; Com'mon-er, one under the rank of a nobleman; Commons, provisions.

House of Commons, plu. Houses of Commons.

Common-council, plu. Common-councils.

Common-councilman, plu. common-councilmen (not -sel).

Commonweal, kõm.mon-weel. The public good.

Commonwealth, plu. commonwealths, kõm'.mon.welths.

French commun; Latin communis, common (munis, tied to duty).

Commotion, kõm.mõ'.shun not kõ.mõ'.shun. Disturbance.

Latin commotio (com [con] moveo, to move together).

Commune, kõm'.mune (noun), kõm.mune' (verb). Rule 1.

Communed' (2 syl.); commu'n'ing; communion, kõm.mũ'.-nũ.on; commu'n'ity; commu'n'icant (of the Lord's Supper).

Com'munist, com'munal; com'munism, com'munistic.

French commune, communal, communion, communisme, communiste; Latin communio, communion; communitas.

Communicate, kõm.mu'.nũ.kate; commu'n'icāt-ed, commu'n'icāt-ing (R. xix.), commu'n'icāt-or (R. xxxvii.); commu'n'icāt-ive, commu'n'icative-ly, commu'n'icative-ness; commu'n'icatory; communicable, kõm.mu'.nũ.kã.b'l, commu'n'icably, commu'n'icable-ness, freedom in imparting; communication, kõm.mu'.nũ.kay''.shun; commu'n'icabil'ity.

French communication, communicatif, communicabilité; Latin communicare, communicatio (communis, common).

Community, plu. communities, kõm.mu'.nũ.tĩz. Body politic.

French communauté; Latin communitas, the community.

Commute, kõm.mũte (to exchange); commu't'-ed, commu't'-ing, commu't'-er, commu't'-able, commu't'-ative (Rule xix.)

Commutation, kõm'.mu.tay''.shun; Commu'tabil'ity.

French commutation, commutatif; Latin commutare, to commute; commutatio (com [con] muto, to change with [another]).

Compact, kõm'.pact (noun); kom.pact' (adj.) Rule 1. Compact'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), compact'-ed-ly, compact'-ly.

Compaction, kõm.pak'.shun; compact'-ible (not -able).

French compacte; Latin compactus, compact; compactum, a covenant; compactio, compaction; compatilis, compatible (from com [con] pango, sup. pactum, to drive close together).

Companion, kom.pan'.yun; compan'ion-able (not a Lat. word), compan'ionably, companion-less, companion-ship.

(-ship Old Eng. postfix, meaning tenure, state, being.)

French compagnon; (cum pennon, under the same flag).

Company, plu. companies, kõm.pă.nîz. A party, a firm, &c.

("A firm" is contracted into "Co.," as "Smith and Co.")

French compagnie (not cum panis [eating] bread together, as is usually given, but cum pennon, under the same flag).

Compare, kõm.pair'; compared' (2 syl.), compār'-ing, compār'-er (R. xix.) Comparable, kõm'.pă.ră.b'l, worthy to be compared, followed by to (Lam. iv. 2); kõm.pair'.a.b'l, able to be compared with each other, as "The two things are not comparable," cannot be compared together.

Comparative, kom'.par'ra.tîv. In a more or less degree.

Comparison, kõm.par'ri.sun not comparason.

Latin comparare (com [con] paro, to make or set things together.)

(The "i" of comparison is indefensible; it is the conjugational letter, and transfers the word from comparare "to compare," to comparere "to be extant." We are alone in this outrage, which is a great stumbling block to young spellers. Latin comparativ, Italian comparazione, Spanish comparacion, French comparaison.)

Compartment. A special department or part of a machine.

French compartiment, but appartement! (Latin com pars, pârtis)

Com'pass, plu. com'passes; com'passed (2 syl.), com'pass-ing.

French compas, verb compasser, to measure; Latin com [con] passus, a stride or pace in common.

Compassion, kõm.pash'.un; compassion-ate, compassionât-ed, compassionât-ing (Rule xix.), compassionate-ly (Rule xvii.), compassion-able. (French compassion.)

Latin compassio (from com [con] pâtior, to suffer with [another]).

Compatible, kõm.pat'.i.b'l not -able (not of the 1st Lat. conj.)

Compat'ibly, compat'ibil'ity, compat'ible-ness.

French compatible, compatibilité; Lat. com [con] pêtère, to seek the same thing, not compâtior, to suffer the same thing.

Compatriot, kõm.păt'.rî.ôt. A fellow patriot. (Ital. compatriotto.)

Compeer', an equal. Compare, kom.pair', to judge by comparison.

"Compeer," French compère; Latin compar, a compeer or equal.

Compel' (to force); compelled' (2 syl.); compell'-ing, compell'-er, compell'-able (Rule i.)

Latin compellere (com [con] pello, to drive together).

("Compellable" is quite incorrect, as it would be derived from compellare, to address or accost some one. It ought to be "-ible;" and "compel" would be better with double "l.")

Compen'dium, plu. compen'diums or compendia (Latin).

Compensate, kõm'.pen.sate; com'pensât-ed, com'pensât-ing; compensator, kom'.pen.sa.tor (not -ter, Rule xxxvii.);

compensation, kõm'.pen.say''shun, amends (Rule xix.);

compensative, kõm'.pen.sa.tîv; compen'sative-ly.

Latin compensare, to make amends, compensatio; French compenser, to compensate, compensation, compensatoire.

- Compete, kôm.peet'; compēt'-ed, compēt'-ing; compēt'-er (R. xix.)
Competitor, fem. competitress, competitrix, or competitor, kôm.pet'.i.tor, kôm.pet'.i.tress; competitory; competi- tive, kôm.pet'.i.tiv; competitive-ly, by competition; competition, kôm.pe.tish'un, rivalry in merit.
 Latin compētitor, compētēre (com [con] pēto, to seek with [another]).
- Com'petence or com'petency, plu. com'petencies, -tense-ez.
Com'petent (not competant), able; competent-ly (adv.)
 Latin (see above) compētenter (adv.), compētens, gen. -tensis.
- Compile, kôm.pīl'e' (to pile or get together), compiled (2 syl.), compil'-ing, compil'-er (R. xix.); compile'-ment (R. xviii. ¶)
Compilation, kôm.pī.lay'.shun. A book compiled, &c.
 French compiler, compilation; Latin compilo, compilatio (from com [con] pilo, to pile together. Our word "pillage.")
- Complacent, kôm.play'sent. Complaisant, kôm'pla.zant'.
Compla'cent, affable; com'plaisant' (French), courteous.
Compla'cent-ly, affably; complaisant'-ly, courteously.
Compla'cence, affability; com'plaisance' (French), courtesy.
Com'placency, kom.play'sen.sy (same as compla'cence).
 Latin complācens -centis (com [con] placēre), to please altogether.
 (All the French words [com'plaisant', &c.] are wrong. If from complāceo the -a of the last syl. should be -e; if from complācēre [complācans, to pay court to one] the -s of the last syl. should be -c).
- Complain', complained' (2 syl.), complain'-ing. To find fault.
Complaint'. Dissatisfaction expressed in words.
Complain'ant, a plaintiff. Complain'er, one who complains.
 French plainte, complainant; Latin com [con] plangēre, supine planctum, to bemoan with [someone about a grievance].
- Complaisant, kôm'pla.zant'. (See Complacent.)
- Complement, kôm.plee'ment; compliment, kom'plīment.
Comple'ment. That which completes or supplies a deficiency.
Com'pliment. An expression of praise or civility.
Complement'-al or complement'-ary. Adj. of complément.
Compliment'-al or compliment'-ary. Adj. of com'pliment.
Com'pliment-ing. Supplying what completes.
Compliment-ing. Paying a compliment.
 "Complement," Latin complementum (com-plēre, to complete).
 "Compliment," French compliment (from Latin complēre). In Italian complimento and Spanish complimento, both meanings. French complément, compliment; German complement, compliment.
- Complete, kôm.pleet; complēt'-ed, complēt'-ing, complēt'-er (one who completes), complēt'-er (comp.), complēt'-est (superl.), complēt'-ory (R. xix.) (Suffix -ory, Lat. -ori[us] added to adj.), complete-ly, complete-ment, complete-ness (Rule xvii.) Completion, kom.plee'.shun, finish. (Rule xxxiii.)
 French completer, complétement; Latin compleo, complētum.

Complex, kom'plex (noun), kõm'plex' (verb). Rule 1.

Complexed, kõm'plext'; complex-ing, complex-ity, complexedness, kõm'plex'.ed.ness; complication, kom'pli.kay''shun, a mixture of several things.

French complexe; Lat. complexus (com [con] plecto, to twine together).

Complexion, kõm'plek'shun. The hue of the face.

French complexion. An old medical term, from the notion that the skin "embraced" or contained a hue corresponding to the humour or element of the body: If the element of the body is fire, the humour is bile, and the hue yellow; if air, the humour is blood, and the hue red; if earth, the humour is black-bile or "melancholy," and the hue livid grey; if water, the humour is phlegm, and the hue of the skin dead white. What contains the "key."

Complicate, kom'pli.kate (to involve); complicat-ed (R. xxxvi.); complicat-ing (Rule xix.); complicat-er (Rule xxxvii.)

Complication, kõm'pli.kay''shun. Intricacy.

Complicacy, kõm'pli.käsy not kom'plik'.äsy.

Complicative, kõm'pli.kä.tiv not kom'plik'.ä.tiv.

Latin complicare (com [con] plico, to fold together, to tangle).

Complicity, kõm'plis'.äty. Participation [in guilt].

French complicité (complice, an accomplice); Latin complicare.

Compliment, kõm'pli.ment. Complement, kõm'plee'ment (q.v.)
"Present my compliments" (salutations), not complements.

Complimenter not -tor. (It is not a Latin word.)

Complot, complott-ed, complott-ing, complott-er. (Rule i.)

Comply; complied' (2 syl.), complies (2 syl.), compli'-er, compli'-ance, compli'-ant, compli'-antly, compli'-able, compli'-ably, compli'-ableness, but comply'-ing. (Rule xi.)

Latin complicare (com [con] plico, to fold with [you], to agree).

It is not from compleo, nor yet from complaceo, generally given.

Compo'nent not compo'nant. Constituent. (Latin compōnens.)

Comport, kõm.port', to suit; comported, &c.; comport'-able.

Fr. comporter; Lat. comportare, to carry together (com [con] porto).

Compose, kõm.põzé'; composed' (2 syl.), compõs'-ing, compõs'-ible.

Composedly, kõm.põ.zed.ly, calmly; compõsedness (4 syl.)

Composure, kõm.põ'.zhur. Tranquility. (Rule xix.)

Composition, kõm'.põ.zish'on. A putting together.

Compositor, kõm.põz'.i.tor. One who sets up type in printing.

Composer, kõm.põ'.zer. One who composes.

Composite, kom'.põz.zitè. Not simple, mixt.

Compositæ, kom'.põz'.i.tæ. An order of plants.

French composer, composite, composition; Latin compōnere, compõs-istto, compõsitor (cum [con] pōno, to put together).

- Compound, kom'.pound (noun), kom.pound' (verb). Rule 1.
Compound'-ed (-ed forms a separate syl. after d or t).
Compound'-able (Rule xxiii); compound'-er.
 Latin componderāre (com [con] pondēro), to weigh out [different things for a mixture]. (Not from componēro, to put together.)
Comprehend', comprehen'sible, comprehen'sibly.
Comprehension, kõm'.pre.hen'.shun. (Rule xxxiii.)
Comprehen'sive, comprehens'ive-ly, comprehen'sive-ness.
 Latin comprehēdere, sup. -hensum (com [con] prēhendo, to grasp).
Compress, kõm'.press (noun), kõm.press' (verb). Rule 1.
Compress', compressed' (2 syl.), compress'-ing. To press close; compress'ive, compress'-ible (not -able), compress'ibil'ity.
Compression, kõm.presh'un; compressure, kõm.presh'ür.
Compress-or (not -er). That which serves to compress. (R. xxxvii.)
 Latin compressio, compressor, comprimō, sup. compressum (cum [con] primō, to press or squeeze together).
Comprise, kom'.prize' (s between two vowels = z), to include; comprised' (2 syl.), compris'-ing, compris'-al. (Rule xix.)
 French compris, past part. of comprendre; Lat. comprehensum, sup. of comprehendo (cum [con] prehendo, to seize hold of).
Compromise, kõm'.prõ.mize not kom.prom'iz, com'promised (3 syl.), com'promis-ing, com'promis-er. (Rule xix.)
 French compromis; Latin compromissum (cum [con] pro mitto, to send forth with [a bond]; i.e., to give bond to abide by arbitration).
Compt, count, an account (nearly obsolete); comptroller, kõn.trole'er, an officer to control or verify accounts.
 French compte, an account; Latin computo [comp't], to compute.
Compulsion, kõm.pul'.shun (force); compulsive, kõm.pul'siv; compul'sive-ly, compul'sive-ness. (Rule xvii.)
Compulsory, kõm.pul'.sõ.ry (adj.), compul'sori-ly (adv.)
 Latin compello, sup. compulsum (cum [con] pello, to drive together).
Compunction, kõm.punk'.shun. A pricking of conscience.
Compunctious, kõm.punk'.shus. Having quarms of conscience.
 Latin compunctio, cum [con] pungo, to prick with [remorse].
Compute' (2 syl.), compüt'-ed, compüt'-ing, compüt'-er, compüt'-able (Rule xix); computation, kom'.pu.tay'.shun.
 French comput, computation; Latin computāre, to compute.
Comrade, kõm'rad. Companion. (French camerade.)
 From camera, a chamber, one who occupies the same chamber. Our word has quite lost sight of the true meaning.
Con-; also co-, cog-, col-, com-, and cor-. (Latin prefix.)
Co-, before a, e, i, o, and h. Also before any letter with a hyphen, as "co-mate," "co-partner," "co-trustee." In Mathematics = complement, as "co-sine," "co-secant."

- Cog-, before nascor, nosco, nōmen, with their derivatives.
- Col-, before l, as "col-lect."
- Com-, before b, m, p, and u. Also with fit and fort.
- Con-, before c, s; d, l, t; q, v, f (except "fit" and "fort").
- Cor-, before r, as "cor-rect."
- Con.: As pro and con, "for" and "against" [a proposal]. In this sense, it is a contraction of contra (Latin) against.
- Con (to learn by repetition), conned, kōnd; conn'-ing (Rule i.)
Old English conn[an] or cunn[an], to know; con, can.
- Concatenate, kōn.kāt'.ē.nate; concat'enāt-ed, concat'enāt-ing.
- Concatenation, kōn.kāt'.e.nay''.shun. To link together.
(In Latin the "e" of all these words is long.)
Latin conciētēnāre, to chain together (catēna, a chain). Rule xix.
- Concave, kōn'.kāve. Hollowed out. "Bulged out" is convex.
The inside of a C is "concave," the outside is "convex."
- Con'cave, concaved, kōn'.kāvəd; concav-ing, kōn.kāvē'.ing (R.xix.)
Concavity, kōn.kāv'.ī.ty. The reverse is Convex'ity.
(When put in opposition the accent is thrown on the final syllable, as glasses for short sight are concave', for far sight they are convex'.)
Latin con-cāvus, altogether hollow; con-cāvitās (cāvus, a cave).
- Conceal, kōn.seel'; concealed' (2 syl.), conceal'-er, conceal'-able.
Latin con-cēlāre, to hide altogether (cēlo, to hide).
- Concede, kōn.seed'. One of the seven verbs in -cēde'. The three in -ceed are "exceed," "proceed," and "succeed." (R.xxvii.)
Conceded, kōn.seed'.ed; conceding, kon.seed'ing (Rule xix.)
Concession, kōn.ses'.shun. Something conceded.
French conceder; Latin con-cēdo, to go with [you], to yield to you.
- Conceit, kōn.seet'; vanity. Conceited, kōn.seet'.ed, vain. (Rule xxxvi.)
Conceit'ed-ly, conceit'ed-ness. (Italian conchetto.)
Latin concipto, sup. conceptum, a conceived [opinion of oneself].
- Conceive, kōn.seev' (to suppose, to comprehend, &c.); conceived' (2 syl.), conceiv'-ing, conceiv'-er, conceiv'-able (Rule xxiii.), conceiv-ably, conceiv'-ableness (Rule xix.)
- Conception, kōn.sep'.shun. Notion, impregnation.
("'-ceives" take e first, "'-lieves" take i first. Rule xxviii.)
Latin concipere, conceptio, (con capio, to take with [you]).
- Concentrate, kōn'.sen.trāte (to bring together); con'centrat-ed, con'centrat-ing (R. xix.); concentration, -tray''.shun.
- Concentrative, kōn.sen'.tra.tiv; concen'trative-ness.
Italian concentrare, to concentrate; concentrazione, concentration.

- Concen'tre, to bring to a point. Consen'ter, one who consents.
Concentre, kŏn.sen'.ter; concentred, kŏn.sen'.terd; concentrating, kŏn.sen'.tring not kŏn.sen'.ter.ing; concentric, kŏn.sen'.trik; concentricity, kŏn.sen'.tris.i.ty.
 French concentrer; Latin concentricus (con centrum, common centre).
Conception, kŏn.sep'.shun. Notion, impregnation.
Conceptive, kŏn.sep'.tiv. (See Conceive.)
Concern' (noun), affair; (verb) to take interest in something.
Concerned, kŏn.sernd'. Moved with interest or sympathy.
Concernedly, kŏn.ser'.ned.ly. Sympathetically.
 French concerner; Latin concernere, to separate (con cerno, to separate and put together [what belongs to each]).
Concert, kon'sert (noun), kon.sert' (verb). Rule 1.
Con'cert, a musical entertainment. Concert', to scheme.
Concerto, plu. concertos, not concertoes. (Rule xlii.)
Concertina, plu. concertinas, kŏn'.ser.tee'.nah, &c.
Concert-ed, kŏn.sert'.ed; concert-ing, kon.sert'.ing.
 French concert; Ital. concerto; Lat. con certare, to strive together.
Concession, kŏn.sesh'.ŏn, a grant; concession-ist, a granter.
Concession-ary, kŏn.sesh'.ŏn.ă.ry; concessory, kon.ses'.sŏ.ry.
 ("Concession-ery" would be more correct.)
 Latin concessio and concessum, a concession (con cedere, to give way).
Conchifera, kŏn.kif'.e.rah. The mussel, oyster, and other bivalves.
 A single specimen is a Conchifer, kon'.kif.er.
Conchoidal, kŏn.koy'.dal. Having a concave and convex surface, like a bivalve shell. (Gk. kogchē eidos, cockle-like.)
Conchology, kŏn.kŏl'.ŏ.gy. The natural history of shells.
Conchologist, kŏn.kŏl'.ŏ.gist. One skilled in conchology.
 Greek kogchē lŏgŏs, shell lore; Latin concha, a shell.
Conciliate, kŏn.sil'.i.ate, to propitiate; concil'iat-ed (R. xxxvi.); concil'iat-ing (R. xix). Conciliatory, kŏn.sil'.i.ă.tŏ.ry.
Conciliator, fem. conciliatrix, kŏn.sil'.i.ă.tor, -tris.
Conciliation, kŏn.sil'.i.ă'.shun. Reconcilement.
 Latin conciliator, conciliatrix, conciliatio, conciliare, to reconcile (con cŏlo, to call together, hence to unite or bring together).
Concise, kŏn.sise' (brief), concise'-ly, concise'-ness, brevity.
 Latin concisus (concido, to cut small; con cædo, to cut entirely).
Conclude, kŏn.klude', conclud'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), conclud-ing, conclud'-er (R. xix.). To determine, to end, &c.
Conclusion, kŏn.klū'.shun, the end (R. xxxiii.); Conclusive, kŏn.klū'.siv; conclusive-ly, conclusive-ness (Rule xvii.)
 Latin conclusio, verb concludo, supine conclūsum, to conclude (from con claudo, to shut-up altogether, hence to finish).

Concoct', concoct'-er (not -tor); concoction, kõn.kok'.shun.

Latin concoctio, con-côquo, to cook together, to concoct.

Concom'itant, concom'itance, concom'itant-ly, concom'itancy.

Latin concomitans, -tantis (con cômîtâre, to go often together).

Concord, kõn'.kord (noun), kõn.kord' (verb). Rule 1.

Concord'ance (not kon'.kor.dance). An index of words.

Concord'ant, concord'ant-ly, concord'ancy.

Concor'dat. A convention between a king and the pope.

Latin concordâ; concordâre, to agree (con corda, hearts together).

French concordance, concordant, concordat, concorder, to agree.

Con'course, not con'course. (Fr. concours, a throng; Ital. concorso.)

Latin concurus (con curro, sup. cursum, to run together).

(This is one of the puzzles of spelling: course, source. RULE.—Every word beginning with "c" is followed by "s," and every word beginning with "s" is followed by "c": coarse, corse, course, "con-course," "dis-course," "inter-course," &c.: source, "re-source," sauce, &c. The only other words in "-ce" of a similar sound are force, with its compounds "en-force," "per-force," "re-enforce," and divorce.)

Concrete, kon'.kreet (noun), kon.kreet' (verb). Rule 1.

Concrêt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), concrêt-ing, concrêt-ive (R. xix.)

Concretion, kon.kree'.shun. A concreted mass, union of parts.

Con'crete (noun), a cement; adj. having a real existence, not abstract. White is abstract, white paper concrete.

French concret, concretion; Latin concrêtum, concrêtio, a concretion (from con cresco, supine crêtum, to grow together).

Concubine, kõn'.ku.bîne. A woman who acts as a wife.

Concubinage, kõn.kû'.bîn.age; concubinal, kõn.kû'.bîn.al.

Latin concubînus, a concubine (con cûbâre, to lie together).

Concupiscence, kõn.ku'.pis.sense, lust; concu'piscient, lustful.

(The -sc- is the Latin frequentative or intensifying prefix.)

Latin concupiscentia (con cupiscens, -entis, greatly desiring).

Concur, kõn.kur', to agree; concurred' (2 syl.), concurr'-ing, concurr'-ence, concurr'-ent, concurr'-ently. (Rule i.)

Latin concurrrens, -entis (con currère, to run together).

Concussion, kon-kûsh'.on; concussive, kon.kûs'.sîv.

Latin concussio, a striking together (con quîtto, to shake together).

Condemn, kõn.dem'; condemned, kõn.demâ'; condemning, kõn.dem'.ing (not kõn.dem.ning); condemner, kõn.dem'.er; condemnation, kõn.dem'.nay'.shun; condemnable, kon.dem'.na.b'l (not kon.dem'.a.b'l), condemnable; condemnatory, kõn.dem'.nä.tõ.ry, worthy condemnation.

Latin condemnatio, condemnâre (con damno, to cast in a law-suit).

Condense', condensed' (2 syl.), condens'-ing, condens'-er (Rule xix.), condens'-ity, condens'-able, condensation, kōn'-den.say''shun. To shorten, to make more close.

Latin condensatio, condensare, to condense (con denso, to make thick). (There are nearly seven hundred words ending in "nce," and only nine in "-nse": viz., dense and condense; dispense, expense, pre-pense, and recompense; immense, sense, and tense. The larger part of the seven hundred have as much claim to "s" as these nine.)

Condescend, kōn'.de.send', to stoop (morally); condescend'-ence; condescension, kōn'.de.sen'shun (Rule xxxvii.)

Latin con descendere (de scando, to climb down, dis-mount).

Condign, kōn.dine', deserved; condign'-ly, condign'-ness.

French condigne, appropriate; Latin con dignus, wholly deserved.

Condiment, kōn'.dī.ment. (French; Latin condimentum, sauce.)

Condition, kōn.dish'on; condition-al, condition-ally, condition-ary, condition-ing; conditionality, kōn.dish'on.al'i.ty; conditioned, kōn.dish'-ond; condition-ate.

French condition; Latin conditio, conditionalis (adj.)

Condole, kōn.dole'; condoled (2 syl.); condol'-ing, condol'-er, condol'-ence (Rule xix); condole'-ment (Rule xviii.)

Latin condolentia, con dolere, to grieve with [those who grieve].

Condor, kōn'.dor. The vulture of S. America. (Span. condor.)

Conduce, kōn.duse'; conduced' (2 syl.), condūc'-ing, condūc'-ible (not -able), condūc'-ibly; conducive, kōn.dū'siv; condūcive-ly, condūcive-ness (Rule xix.) . Tending to.

Latin conducibilis, con ducere, to lead with [you], to conduce.

Conduct, kōn'.duct (noun), behaviour; kōn'.duct' (verb), to guide; conduct'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), conduct'-ing, conduct'-ive.

Conduct'or, fem. conduct'ress; conduction, kōn.duk'shun.

Conductibility, kōn.duk'.i.bil'i.ty. Capacity of transmitting.

French conduction; Latin conductio, con ducere, to lead with [you].

Conduit (French), kōn'.dwit not kun'-dit, a duct.

Latin con duco, supine ductum, to convey [by pipes, &c.]

Cone, kōne. A shape like a sugar-loaf; the fruit of a fir-tree.

Conic, kōn'ik; conical, kōn'.ik.kāl (adj.), cone-shaped.

Conics. The geometry of conical figures. (All the sciences in -ic, except "logic," "music," and "rhetoric" are plural.) (The "o" of "conic" in Latin and Greek is long.)

French cone; Latin cōnus; Greek kónōs, a cone.

Conifer, plu. conifers, kō'.nī.fērz; Coniferæ, kō.nīf'.e.rec, the cone-bearing plants. (Latin cōnus fero, to bear cones.)

Coniferous, kō.nīf'.e.rus, cone-bearing; co'niform.

Conoid, kō'.noid (Greek kónōs eidos, cone-like).

Conoidal, kō.noid'.al; conoidic, kō.noy'dik; conoi'dical.

Confabulate, kŏn.fab'ŭ.late, to chat; confab'ulāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), confab'ulāt-ing, confab'ulāt-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.)

Confabulatory, kŏn.fab'ŭ.lă'try (Rule xix.). Gossip.

Confabulation, kŏn.fab'ŭ.lay''shun. Gossip.

French confabuler, confabulation; Latin con fabulāre, to tell stories or gossip tales together, hence to chat, &c.

Confection, kŏn.fĕk'.shun; confec'tion-er, confec'tionery (not -ary). Sweetmeats, the maker or seller of pastry, &c.

French confection; Latin confectio, conficio, supine -fectum, to make with [sugar, &c.]

Confederate, kŏn.fed'.ĕ.rate, to league together; confed'erāt-ed, confed'erāt-ing (R. xix.), confed'erāt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.)

Confederation, kŏn.fed'.e.ray''shun. A league.

Confederacy, plu. confederacies, kon.fed'.e.ră.siz (R. xliv.)

(In Latin, the first "e" of all these words is long.)

Latin con federatio, a confederation (con fedus, a league).

Confer', conferred (2 syl.), conferr'-ing, conferr'-er (Rule i.)

Confer-ence, kon'fer.ence (not -ance, and only one r).

(This abnormal word is borrowed from the French.)

French conférer, conférence; Latin conféro, conférons, to confer.

Conserva, plu. conservæ, kŏn.fer'.vah, kon.fer'.vee, fresh-water plants. Conservaceous, kon'fer.vay''shus (adv.).

Conservoid, kon.fer'.void, articulated like the conservæ.

Conservite, plu. conservites, kon.fer'vites, fossil conservæ.

Latin conserva, from conserveo, to join together like broken bones.

Pliny tells us the conservæ were so called because of their efficacy in knitting together broken bones. (Pliny, 27, 45.)

Confess', confessed' (2 syl.), confessed-ly, kŏn.fes'.sed.ly.

Confess-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.) A priest who hears confessions.

Confession, kŏn.fesh'on; confess'ion-al, confess'ion-ary.

French confessor, to confess; confession, confessional; Latin confessio, confessōrius, confiteor, -fessus (con fateor, to confess).

Confide, kŏn.fide' (to rely on); confided, kŏn.fī'.ded (R. xxxvi.); confid'-ing, confid'-ingly, confid'-er. (Rule xix.)

Confidant, fem.confidante (Fr.), kon'fī.dant'. A bosom friend.

Confident, kon'fī.dent (positive); confident-ly, confidence.

Confidential, kon'fī.den''shal; confidential-ly.

(In Latin, the "i" of all these words is long.)

Lat. confidentia, confidence; confidens, -entis, confident; con-fidēre, to trust one wholly; French confidence, confident, confidant, &c.

Confine, kŏn'fine (noun), a limit; kŏn.fine' (v.), to imprison (R. l.)

Confined, kon.fīn', confīn'-ing, confīn'-er (Rule xix.), confīn'-able (Rule xxiii.), confine'-ment (Rule xviii. ¶¶).

Confinity, kŏn.fīn'.ĭ.ty, nearness. (In Lat. the "i" is long.)

French confiner, to confine; Latin confinium, confinitas, confinālis (adj.), con finīre, to finish with [some limiting boundary].

Confirm', confirm'-able, (not -ible), confirm'-ätive, confirm'-ätively; confirm'-er, one who corroborates; confirmat-or, kön.fir'.mä.tor; confirm'atöry (the "a" is long in Latin); confirmation, kön'.fir.may''.shun, corroboration.

Latin con firmāre, to make strong with [additional assurance], confirmatio, confirmator; French confirmatif, confirmation, confirmer.

Confiscate, kön'.fis.kate not kön.fis'.kate, to alienate; confiscät-ed (R. xxxvi.), confiscät-ing (R. xix.), confiscät-or (R. xxxvii.)

Confiscation, kön'.fis.kay''.shun. A forfeiting to the exchequer.

Confiscable, kön.fis'.kä.b'l; confiscatory, kön.fis'.kä.tö.ry.

Latin confiscatio; con fiscare, to confiscate (fiscus, the exchequer).

Conflagration, kön'.fla.gray''.shun (not kön'.fli.gay''.shun).

Lat. conflagratio, con flagrare, to burn wholly; Greek phlego, to burn.

Conflict, kön'.flict (noun); kön.flict' (verb), to contend (Rule 1.); conflict'-ed (R. xxxvi.); conflict'-ing, conflictive, kön.flik'.tiv; conflictive-ly; confliction, kön.flik'.shun.

Latin conflictio, conflictus, con figere, figere, to dash together.

Confluence, kön'.flü.ence. The meeting of two or more streams.

Confluent, flowing together. Conflux, a crowd, a flood.

Latin confluentia, conflüens (con fluo, sup. fluxum, to flow together).

Conform', conformed' (2 syl.), conform'-able, conform'-ably.

Confirmation, kön'.fir.may''.shun. The act of confirming.

Conformation, kön'.for.may''.shun. The act of conforming.

Conform'ity, conform'ist; non-conformity, non-conformist.

("Conform," "conformable," are followed by "to," as "Be not conformed to this world" [Rom. xii. 2]. "Conformity" may have either "to" or "with," as "In conformity with your wish," "In conformity to your order.")

"Conformare se ad [to] voluntatem..." or "mentem meam ipsa cogitatione [with]... conformabam." (Cicero.)

Lat. conformatio, conformatitas, con formare, to form like [something].

Confound' (to confuse), confound'-ed (R. xxxvi.), confound'-er.

Confuse', confused' (2 syl.), confüs'-ing, &c. (See Confuse.)

Latin con fundere, supine fusum, to pour together.

Confront, kön.front' (not kön.front'), to bring face to face; confront'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), confront'-ing; confront'-er.

French confronter, to confront; Lat. con frons, front with [front].

Confuse', confused', confüs'-ing; confused-ly, kön.fü.zed.ly; confused-ness, kön.fü.zed.ness (with -ly and -ness); confusion, kön.fü.zhon, disorder; confus-er, kön.fü.zer.

Latin con fundere, supine fusum, to pour together. (See Confound.)

Confute', confüt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), confüt'-ing, confüt'-er, confüt'-able (not -ible), confüt'-ant (R. xix). To prove wrong.

Confutation, kön'.fu.tay''.shun. Disproving, a denial proved.

Latin confutatio, con futare, to argue against [another].

Congé (French), kōné'.zja'. Leave of absence, discharge, farewell.

Congé d'élire, kōné'.zja dē-leer'. The sovereign's request to a dean and chapter to elect a bishop.

P.P.C. (pour prendre congé). To take leave. (Written on cards on leaving home.)

Congéal, kōn.jeel' (to freeze); congealed' (2 syl.), congeal'-able.

Congelation, kōn'.jē.lay''.shun (not congealation).

(The "a" of "congeal," &c, is a great error.)

Latin congēlatio, congēlābilis, con gēto, to freeze thoroughly; French congeler (= conge-ler, 2 syl.), congélable, congélation.

Congener, kōn.jee'.nēr. Of the same origin or kind. Congener'ic.

Latin con gēner, of the same stock. (The -ge- in Latin is short.)

Congenial, kōn.jee'.nī.al (social); conge'nial-ly, conge'nial'ity.

Latin con gēniālis, genial with [others], con gēniālitas.

Congestion, kōn.jes'.tchun; congestive, kōn.jes'.tīv; congest-ible.

Lat. congestio, con gērēre, sup. -gestum, to bring together, to amass.

Conglomerate, kōn.glōm'.ē.rate (one m), to amass; conglom'- erāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), conglom'erāt-ing (Rule xix), conglomeration, kōn'.glom.e.ray''.shun, a collection.

Latin conglōmērāre, to wind into a ball (glōmus, a ball).

Congratulate, kōn.grāt'.u.late; congrat'ulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), congrat'ulāt-ing, congrat'ulāt-or (not -ter, Rule xxxvii.)

Congratulatory, kōn.grāt'.ū.lā.t'ry. Expressing joy (R. xix.)

Congratulation, kōn.grāt'.u.lay''.shun. Expression of joy.

Lat. congrātūlatio, congrātūlātor, congrātūlāre, to rejoice with [you].

Congregate, kōn'.grē.gate (to assemble in a crowd); con'gregāt-ed

(Rule xxxvi.), con'gregāt-ing, con'gregāt-er (Rule xix.)

Congregation, kōn'.grē.gay''.shun; congregation-al, con- gregational-ly, congregational-ism, congregational-ist.

Latin congrēgatio, con grēgāre, to herd together (grex grēgis, a herd).

Congress, kōn'.gress, a senate; congressional, kōn.gres'.shun.al.

Latin congressus, a meeting; congrēdiōr, sup. -gressum, to meet together (con grādior, to go with [others]; grādus, a step).

Congruity, kōn.gru'.ī.ty (fitness); congruous, kōn'.gru.us, &c.

Lat. congruus, congruere, to flock together like cranes (grus, a crane).

"Birds of a feather [which] flock together," exactly meets the idea.

Conia, kō.nī'.ah. Hemlock and other plants of the same genus.

Coneine, kō.nēē'.īn. The poisonous alkaloid of hemlock.

Greek kōneion, hemlock. ("Coneine," ko.nēē.in, is not well formed.)

Conic, kōn'.īk; con'ical, like a cone; conics, kōn'.īks. (See Cone.)

Conifer, kō.nī'.fer; coniferous, kō.nīf'.ē.rus; coniferæ. See Cone.

Conjecture, kŏn.jĕk'.tchur (a surmise, to surmise); conjec'tured (3 syl.), conjec'tur-ing, conjec'tur-er; conjec'tur-al, conjec'tural-ly (Rule xix.), conjec'tur-able (Rule xxiii).

Latin conjectūra, a guess, conjectūrālis; conjectere, to surmise (con-jācĕo to cast [two and two] together [to form a guess]).

Conjugal, kŏn'.jŭ.gāl. Pertaining to marriage.

Latin conjugālis (from conjux, a husband or wife).

Conjugate, kŏn'.jŭ.gate; con'jugāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), con'jugāt-ing.

Conjugation, kŏn'.jŭ.gay''.shun; con'jugāt-or (R. xix, xxxvii.)

Lat. conjugatio, conjugātor, conjugāre (con jugo, to yoke together).

Conjunction, kŏn.junk'.shun (union); conjunctive, kŏn.junk'.tŭv; conjunc'tive-ly, conjunc'tive-ness (R. xvii.); conjuncture, kŏn.junk'.tchur, a crisis, a critical period.

Latin conjunctio, conjungo, supine junctum, to join together.

Conjure, kŭn'.jer, to play tricks; kŏn.jurĕ', to implore.

Con'jure, kŭn'.jer; con'jured (2 syl.), con'jur-ing (R. xix.), con'jur-er; conjurat[i]on, kun'.ju.ray''.shun.

Conjure, kŏn.jurĕ' (to implore); conjured' (2 syl.), conjūr-ing; conjūr-er, one who conjures; conjurat[i]on, kŏn'.ju.-ray''.shun, invocation to a prisoner to answer on his oath.

Both these are the same word. A con'jurer is one who acts with a confederate bound by oath to secrecy. A conjur'er is one who calls on another to answer on his oath.

Latin con jūro, to swear together.

Connect', connect'-ed (R. xxxvi.); connective, kŏn'.nek'.tŭv.

Connection, a junction of substances; connexion, a relative.

("Connexion" is not required, "connection" answers both meanings.)

Latin con necto, supine nectum, to bind together.

Connive', connived' (2 syl.), conniv'-ing, conniv'-er (R. xix.), conniv-ance (R. xxiv.) (Ought to be connivence.)

French connivence, conniver, to connive; Latin connivens, connivĕre (con nīveo, to wink with [the eyes], to pretend not to see).

Connoisseur (bad French), kŏn'.nis.seur'. A judge of the fine arts.

French connaisseur; Latin cognosco, to know thoroughly.

(It is surprising that the host of bad French words which disgrace our language should be suffered to remain.)

Connubial, kŏn.nŭ'.bi.al. Pertaining to wedlock.

Latin connubialis, con nubo, to marry together.

Conquer, kŏn'.kwer not kŏn'.ker; conquered, kŏn'.kwerd; conquering, kŏn'.kwer-ing; conqueror, kŏn'.-kwer-or; conquer-able, kŏn'.kwer.ă.b'l; conquest, kŏn'.kwest.

French conquerir, to conquer; Old French conqueste, now conquête.

Latin conquirĕre (quæro, to seek, to acquire, to conquer).

Consanguinity, kŏn'.san.gwin''.i.ty. Relationship by blood.

Consanguineous, kŏn'.san.gwin''.e.us. Related by blood.

Latin consanguinitas, consanguinĕus (con sanguis, same blood).

Conscience, kõn'.shĕ'ence; conscience-less; conscious, kõn.shĕ'ūs; conscious-ly, conscience-ness (Latin consciūs, conscious); conscientious, kõn'.she.en''shūs, conscientiously, conscientious-ness (French conscientieux, conscientious); conscionable, kõn'.shun.a.b'l, conscionably, conscionable-ness. "For conscience sake" (not for conscience' sake, nor for conscience's sake). "Conscience" has no possessive case. Only nouns personified, and those which denote animal life have possessive cases.

(Note the "-sc-" which are the initial letters of "science.")

Latin con scientia, knowledge with [another]. Man being supposed to be a dual being, conscience is the privacy of the "inner man" to the acts, &c., of the "outer man"; French conscience.

Conscription, kõn.skrip'.shun. Enrolment for military service.

French conscription; Latin conscriptio (which is incorrect), con scrib, supine -scriptum, to write with [other names].

Consecrate, kõn'.sĕ.krate, con'secrāt-ed, con'secrāt-ing (R. xix.), con'secrāt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii); consecration, kõn'.sĕ.kray''shun, dedication to sacred uses.

Latin consecrātio, consecrāre (con sacro, to hallow with [sacred rites]).

Consecutive, kõn.sek'.u.tiv, following in systematic order; consecutive-ly, consecutive-ness (Rule xvii.)

French consecutif, consecutive; Latin consequēre, to follow in order.

Consent, kõn.sent', to agree to, an agreement. Consent'-er.

Consentaneous, kõn'.sĕn.tay''nĕ.us, consistent with; consentaneous-ly, consentaneous-ness (suitableness).

Consentaneity, kõn.sen'.ta.nĕe''i.ty. Mutual agreement.

Consentient, kõn.sen'.she'ent; consentingly, kõn.sen'ting.ly.

Latin consensus, consensio, consentāneus, consentiens, -entis, verb consentio, sup. -sensum (con sentio, to think with [another]).

Consequence, kõn'.sĕ.kwence; consequent, kõn'.se.kwent; consequent-ly (therefore); consequential, kõn'.se.quen''shal (important); consequential-ly (conceitedly).

French consequence; Latin consequētia (con sēquor, to follow upon).

Conserve, kõn'.serv (noun), a jam; kõn.serv' (verb), to preserve.

Conserve, kõn.serv'; conserved' (2 syl.), conserv'-ing, conserv'-er, conserv'-able (R. xx.), conserv'-ant, conserv'-ancy (R. xix.); conservation, kõn'.ser.vay''shon; conservative, kõn.ser'.va.tĭv; conservative-ly, conservative-ness; conservatism, kõn.ser'.va.tizm; conservator, kõn.ser'.va.tor (R. xxxvii.); conservatory, kõn.ser''vā.tō.ry; conservatoire, kõn.ser'.va.twor (Fr.), a public school of music.

French conserver, to keep; conserve, fruit, &c., preserved in sugar. Latin conservātor, conservans, con servāre, to preserve with [sugar, &c.]

Consider, kõn.sĩd'.er (to think about); considered, kõn.sĩd'.erd; consider-ing, consider-ing-ly; considerable, kõn.sĩd'.er-a.b'l; consider-able-ness, consider-ably.

Considerate, kõn.sĩd'.e.rate; considerate-ly, considerate-ness.

Consideration, kõn.sĩd'.e.ray".shun. Mature thought.

French considerable, consideration, considerer; Latin consideratio, con siderare, to consult the stars (sĩdera, the stars), contemplate.

Consign, kõn.sĩne'; consigned (2 syl.), consign-ing, consign-er, consign-ment; consignee, kõn'.sĩ.nee, one to whom goods are consigned; consignor, kõn'.sĩ.nor', he who consigns the goods.

French consigner, to consign; Latin con-signare, to seal with [your own seal] as a voucher that the consignment is authorised.

Consist, consist-ed (R. xxxvi.), consist-ing, consist-ent, consist-ent-ly, consist-ence, consist-ency. To be made up of.

"Consist of" = composed of. "Consist with" = to be in accordance with.

French consister, to consist; Latin con sistere, to stand together.

Consistory, kõn.sĩs.tõ.ry, a "spiritual" court; consistorial, kõn'.sĩs.tõr".ri.al; consistorian, kõn'.sĩs.tõr".ri.an.

French consistoire, consistory, consistorial; Latin consistorium, a council, the private council-chamber of Roman emperors; now it is applied to the college of cardinals, the court of the bishops, &c.

Console, kõn'.sõle (noun), an ornamental bracket; kõn-sõle' (verb), to comfort; console', consoled (2 syl.), consõl-ing, consõl-er, consõl-able (R. xix.); consolation, kõn'.sõ.lay".shun, comfort; consolator, kõn.sõl'.ã.tor, one who consoles another; consolatory, kõn.sõl'.ã.tõ.ry, comforting.

Fr. consoler, to console, consolation, consolable, console (in Architect.) Lat. consolatio, consolator, con-solari, to solace with [words].

Consolidate, kõn.sol'.i.date, to form into one mass; consol'idat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), consol'idat-ing (Rule xix.); consolidation, kõn.sol'.i.day".shun, condensation, union.

French consolider, consolidation; Latin consõl'idare, to join together.

Consols, kõn.sõlz', "3 per cents." Consuls, Roman magistrates.

"Consols," i.e., consol'idated stocks. Government has borrowed money at different times from various sources, and at different rates of interest. In 1751, the several stocks were consolidated, with a uniform interest of 3 per cent.

Consonant, kõn'.so.nant (adj.), agreeable (followed by to or with).

Consonant, plu. consonants. All letters except vowels.

Consonance, concord; consonancy, kõn'.sõ.nãn.sy.

(In Latin it is followed by "to": as "sibi consonans.")

Latin consonans, -nantis, consonantia, con-sõnare, to sound together.

A "consonant" is a letter which carries in its sound another letter, thus: "B" carries with it the sound of e, and "K" the sound of a.

Consort, kõn'.sort (noun); kõn.sort' (verb). Con'cert, concert'.

Consort, kõn'.sort. Husband or wife of a crowned head.

Consort, kõn.sort'. To associate together (followed by "with").

Concert, kõn'.sert. A musical entertainment.

Consert, kõn.sert' (to league); consert'-ed, consert'-ing.

"Con'sort," Lat. consors, -sortis, a partner (con sors, same lot with [you]).

"Consort," a verb coined from the Latin consortio, partnership.

"Concert," Fr. concert; Ital. concerto; Lat. concertäre, to concert.

"Concert'," Lat. con certäre, to strive together, hence to plot.

Conspicuous, kõn.spik'ku.us (obvious); conspicuous-ly, con- spicuous-ness; conspicuity, kõn.spik.kü'.i.ty, visibility.

Latin conspicius, conspicere (con specio, to see with [clearness]).

Conspire, kõn.spire'; conspired' (2 syl.), conspir'-ing (Rule xix.)

Conspiracy, plu. conspiracies, kõn.spir'ra.siz. Plot for evil.

Conspirator, kõn.spir'ra.tor (R. xxxvii.) One of a conspiracy.

French conspirer; Lat. conspiratio, con spiräre, to breathe together.

Constable, kün'.stä.b'l, a peace-officer. Constab'ery, constabulary.

Constabulary, kün.stab'.ä.lä.ry (adj.) Pertaining to, &c.

Constab'ery, kün'.stä.b'l.ry (noun). The whole body, &c.)

Constablewick, kün'.stä.b'l-wik. A constable's district.

Lord High Constable, plu. Lords High Constable.

High Constable, plu. High Constables. Of a county.

Petty Constable, plu. Petty Constables. Of a parish.

French constable; Latin cömes stabüli, superintendent of the imperial stables, then "Master of the Horse," then "Commander-in-chief of the army" (Obsolete).

Constant, kõn'.stant (frequent); con'stancy, persistency.

Latin constantia (con stäre, to stand together, to be con-sistent).

Constellation, kõn'.stel.lay''.shun (double l), a group of stars.

French constellation; Latin constellatio (con stella, stars together).

Consternation, kõn'.ster.nay''.shun. Amazement with terror.

French consternation; Latin consternatio (cön sterno, to cast down).

Constipate, kõn'.stip.päte, constipät'-ed (R. xxvi.); constipät'-ing.

Constipation, kõn'.stip.pay''.shun, costiveness (Rule xix.)

Fr. constipation; Lat. constipatio (con stipäre, to cram together).

Constituent, kõn.stit'.u.ent (adj.), essential, elemental.

Constituent (noun). One who is an elector.

Constituency, kõn.stit'.u.en.cy. An entire body of electors.

Lat. constituo, part constituens, to constitute. A "constituent" is one who by his vote "constitutes" or elects a member of parliament.

Constitute, kõn'.stittüte (to establish); constitüt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), constitüt'-ing; constitüt'-er, one who constitutes (R. xix.)

Constitution, kõn'.stittü''.shun (frame of body, of a government, &c.); constitution-al, constitutional-ly; constitu- tional-ist, a lover of a constitutional government; constitutional-ist, one who advocates such a government.

("Constitution-al" should be "constitution-el." The French have preserved the right vowel, "constitutionnel.")

Fr. constitution; Lat. constitutio (con statũere, to set up together).

Constrain, kõn.strain' (to compel); constrain'-able (R. xxiii.)

Constrained', constrainedly, kõn.strain'.ed.ly (Rule xxxvi.)

Constraint, kõn.straint'. Restraining influence in action.

French contraindre, contrainte; Latin constringere, to bind fast.

Constrict, kõn.strict' (to bind); constrict'-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.)

Boa Constrictor, plu. Boa Constrictors, Dore Kon.strik'.tor

The serpent which with its coils binds its victim fast.

Lat. constringo, supine constrictum, to bind fast.

Construct, kõn.struct' (to make), construct'-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.)

Construction, kõn.struk'.shun, construction-al; constructive, kõn.struk'.tiv, constructive-ly, constructive-ness (R. xvii.)

French construction; Latin constructio, conductor, construere, to heap together; Greek stróo, stóreó, to spread, &c.

Construe, kõn'.stru; construed, kon'strude. (not kõn.stru', kõn.-strude'); con'strü-ing, con'strü-er (R. xix.) To translate.

Fr. construire, to construe; Lat. construere, to build, to heap together.

Consubstantiation, kõn'-sub.stan'-she.a''-shun, the Lutheran notion that the body and blood of Christ are in union with the eucharistic bread and wine.

Transubstantiation, the Roman Catholic notion that the eucharistic bread and wine are veritably changed into the body and blood of Jesus Christ.

Latin con substantia, [in union] with the substance (i.e., Christ); trans substantia, transferred into the very substance of Christ.

Con'sul, plu. Con'suls, Roman magistrates. Consols', British 3 per cents. Consular, kõn'.sũ.lar (adj.); consulate, kõn'.sũ.late, the term of a consul's office; consul-ship, the tenure of the office of consul. Consul general, plu. consul generals (not consuls general).

Latin consul, consũlo, to consult (con sũlo, i.e., si vũlo, to examine and see if each one is willing, or approves of a decree).

Consult, kõn.sult'; consult'-er; consultation, kõn'.sul.tay''.shun. "Consulter" ought to be "consultor," Latin consultor.

Fr. consulter, consultation; Lat. consultatio, consultare, to consult.

Consume, kõn.sũ.me'; consumed' (2 syl.), consũm'-ing, consũm'-er (R. xix.), consũm'-able (R. xxiii.) To devour, to burn.

Consumption, kõn.sump'.shun; consumptive, kõn.sump'.tiv, consumptive-ly, consumptive-ness (consumptive tendency).

Fr. consumer, to consume; Lat. consumptio, consumere, to consume.

Consummate, kõn.sum'mate (adj.); kon'.sum.mate (verb).

Consum'mate, complete; consum'mate-ly (Rule xvii.)

Con'summate, con'summât-ed, con'summât-ing (Rule xix.)

Consummation, kõn'.sum.may''.shun. Completion. (-mm-.)

"Consum'mate," Latin consummate, fully (summa, the sum total).

"Con'summate," Latin consummare, to sum together [all the figures].

Consumption, kõn.sump'.shun; consumptive. (See Consume.)

Contagion, kõn.tay'jun. Communication of disease by contact.

Contagious, kõn.tay'jus, contagious-ly, contagious-ness.

Fr. contagion; Lat. contagio (con tango = tango, to touch together).

Contain' (to hold), contained' (2 syl.), contain'-able (Rule xxiii).

(The spelling of all these words is indefensible.)

French contenir, to contain; Lat. continere (con teneo, to hold together).

Contaminate, kõn.tam'.inate (to defile), contam'inât-ed (R. xxxvi), contam'inât-ing, contam'inât-er (ought to be -or), R. xix.

Contamination, kõn.tam'.inay''.shun. Pollution, taint.

Fr. contaminer, contamination; Latin contaminatio, contaminator, contaminare (con tmino, to defile with [association]).

Contemn, Condemn, kõn.tẽm', kõn.dẽm' ("n" not sounded).

Contemn, to despise; Condemn, to blame, to pronounce guilty.

Contemned, kõn.tẽm'd', despised; Condemned, kõn.dẽm'd'.

Contemn-ing, kõn.tẽm'.ing; Condemn-ing, kõn.dẽm'.ing.

Contemn-er, kõn.tẽm'.er, despiser; Condemn-er, kõn.dẽm'.er.

Latin contemnere, to contemn (con temno, to despise altogether); but condemnare (con damno, to doom with penalty).

Contemplate, kõn.tẽm.plat (not kõn.tem'.plat), to meditate upon; con'templât-ed, con'templât-ing (R. xix.), con'- templât-or (R. xxxvii.); contemplation, kõn'.tẽm.play''.shun, meditation; contemplative, kõn.tẽm'.plativ; contem'plative-ly, contem'plative-ness (Rule xvii.)

Latin contemplare, to contemplate, contemplatio, contemplativus, contemplator. The Roman augurs having taken their stand on the Capitoline Hill, marked out a space called the templum. Watching on this space to see what would happen was called "contemplation."

Contemporaneous, kõn'.tẽm.põ.ray''.nẽ.ũs (not cotemporaneous) (adj.), of the same period; contemporaneous-ly, contemporaneous-ness; Contemporary, plu. contemporaries, kõn.tẽm'.põ.rã.ry, kõn.tẽm'.põ.rã.riz (not cotemporary).
("Co-" precedes a, e, i, o, and h. "Con-" precedes c, d, t; f, v, q; g, j; n and s.)

Contemporary of or with? If an article precedes, of must follow; if not, with. "He was a contemporary of mine."
"He was contemporary with me." In the former example "contemporary" is a noun, in the latter an adj.

Latin contemporaneus (con tempus, the same time).

Contempt, kön.tẽmt' (scorn); contemptuousness, -tem'.tu.us.ness.

Contempt'-ible (worthless); contempt'uous (-tu.us) scornful.

Contempt'-ibly (worthlessly); contempt'uous-ly, scornfully.

"I gave him a contemptuous look" (not contemptible).

"He treated them contemptuously" (not contemptibly).

"He is a contemptible fellow," worthless.

Latin contemptus, disdain (con temnere, sup. temptum, to scorn who'ly).

Contend' (to dispute); contention, kön.tẽn'.shun, strife.

Contentious, kön.tẽn'.shus; contentious-ly, contentious-ness.

Latin contentio, contentiosus, contendere to strain with [force].

Content, satisfaction; (Dis-)content, dissatisfaction).

Content'-ed, content'-ment. The negatives are "discontent'-ed," "discontent'-ment."

Content'-ed-ly, discontent'-ed-ly; content'-ing.

Mal-content, plu. mal-contents, persons not satisfied.

Non-content, plu. non-contents, lords who negative a "bill."

Those who approve of it are called "Contents."

Contents (no sing.) of a cask, book, &c.; i.e., what it contains.

Fr. content, contentement (3 syl.); Latin contentus, continere, supine contentum (con teneo, to hold together, to contain).

("Contentus" belongs to two verbs—contendo to stretch, and contineo.)

Contest, kön'.test (noun); kön.test' (verb). Rule 1.

Contest, kön.test' (to dispute), contest'-ed, contest'-ing, contest'-ing-ly; contest'-able (not -ible), contest'able-ness, contestation, kön'.tes.tay''.shun, strife, joint-attestation.

French contester, to contest, contestation, contestable; Lat. contestatio, con testari, to call witnesses to prove a case (testis, a witness).

Context, kon'.text. The part bearing on a "text" or quotation.

French contexte; Latin contextus, con texo, to weave together.

Contiguity, kön'.tĩ.gũ''.ĩ.ty. Proximity, contact. Cowper uses the word for "uninterrupted extent," "continuation":

Oh! for a lodge in some vast wilderness,
Some boundless contiguity of shade...

Contiguous, kön.tig'.u.us; contiguous-ly, contiguous-ness.

Fr. contiguité; Lat. contiguus, adjoining (con tangō, to touch together).

Continent, kön'.ti.nẽnt; continent-ly, continence, kön'.ti.nẽnce; continency, applied to man as "chastity" to women.

Con'tinent. A large extent of land not severed by sea.

Continental, kön'.ti.nẽn''.tal. Pertaining to the Continent.

Fr. continence, continent, continental. Latin continentia, chastity; continens-nentis, mainland; continere, to contain or restrain oneself (con tenere, to hold together, like different lands on a "continent.")

Contingent, kön.tin'.jẽnt (dependent), contin'gent-ly.

Contingence, kön.tin'.jẽnce; contingency, kön.tin'.jen.sy.

Fr. contingent, contingence; Lat. contingens (con tangere, to touch).

Continual, kõn.tin'.u.al. (See next article.)

Continue, kõn.tin'.u (to last); contin'ued (3 syl.), contin'u-ing.

Contin'u-er, one who continues; contin''ua'tor, one who continues a book or poem begun by another; contin'u-able; contin'u-al, contin'ual-ly, contin'uance, continuation, kõn.tin'.u.ã''shun; continuous, kõn.tin'.u.us; continuous-ly, continuity, kõn'.ti.nu''.i.ty, uninterrupted succession.

Fr. continuer, continuité; Latin continuans, continuatio, continuus, continuitas, continuare, to continue. (Fr. continuel is incorrect.)

Contort' (to twist), contortion, kõn.tor'.shun, a twist.

Latin contortio or contorsio, con torqueo, to twist wholly.

Contour, kõn'.toor' (not kõn.toor'). The outline of the face.

French contour, outline, turn; Latin con torno, to turn.

Contra- (Latin prefix), against, in opposition to.

Per Contra. A commercial term, used in ledgers, &c., on the "credit" side: as "Dr." (left side), "Per Contra, Cr."

Con'trabad, illicit [traffic]; contrabandist, kõn'-tra.band''-ist.

Contrabandista, kon'-tra.band-dis'-tãh, plu. -tãs. Smuggler.

Ital. contrabbando, to smuggle; Lat. contra bannus, against the edict.

Contract, kõn'.tract (noun); kõn'.tract' (verb). Rule 1.

Contract, a bargain; contract', to make a bargain, to shorten.

Contract', contract'-ed (xxxvi.), contract-or (not er), xxxvii.

Contract' (to shorten), contract'-ed, contracted-ly, contracted-ness; contraction, kõn.trac'.shun, abridgment.

Contractile, kõn.trac'.il. Able to contract itself.

Contract-ible (not -able). Capable of being contracted.

Contractility, kõn-trac.til''-i.ty. Having a contractile force.

Contractibility, kõn-trac.til'.bil''-i.ty. Having a contractible property. The opposite property is dilatability.

("Air" is contractible, but not contractile, and we speak of its "contractibility." Animal muscle has a "contractile" force, and we speak of its "contractility.")

French contracter, to contract, contractile, contractilité, contraction. Lat. contractus (contrahere, sup. tractum, to draw together).

Contradict, kõn'-tra.dict'' (to gainsay); contradict'-ed (R. xxxvi.)

Contradict'-er (not -or. Not a Latin word. Rule xxxvii.)

Contradiction, kõn'.tra.dic''.shun. A flat denial.

Contradictions, kõn'.tra.dic''.shus; contradictionous-ness.

Contradictory, kõn'.tra.dic''.tõ.ry; contradictori-ly (adv.)

French contradiction, contradictoire, contradictory; Latin contradictio, contra dicere, to say the opposite.

Contralto, plu. contraltos, kõn.trãl'.toze (Italian). Rule xlii.

"Contralto" is a low female-voice; Soprano (so.prah'.no), a high female-voice.

- Contrariety, plu. contrarieties, kŏn'tră.rî''ĕ.tiz. Antagonism.
French contrariété; Latin contrārietas, disagreement, opposition.
- Contrary, plu. contraries, kŏn'tră.ry, -riz (not kŏn'trair'ry, &c.)
Contrari-ly, kŏn'tră.rî.ly; con'trari-ness, con'trari-wise(xi.)
Contrarious, kŏn'trair'ri.us; contrarious-ly, -ness.
Contrariety, kŏn'tra.rî''e.ty, plu. -ties, -tiz. Antagonism.
French contraire; Latin contrārie (adv.), contrārius, v. contrārio.
"Contrary" is more correct, but is not in use. Shakespeare uses both:
"Had falsely thrust upon contra'ry feet."—K. J., iv., 2.)
- Contrast, kŏn'trast (noun); kŏn'trast' (verb). Rule 1.
Con'trast. The opposite. (Followed by to: "A contrast to...") Contrast'. To show the difference of things by comparison.
(Followed by with: "Contrast God's goodness with...")
Fr. contraster (v.), contraste (n.); Lat. contra stare, to set in opposition.
- Contravene, kŏn'tră.veen' (to thwart); contravened' (3 syl.), contravēn'-ing, contravēn'-er (R. xix.), one who thwarts.
Contravention, kŏn'tră.ven''shun. A thwarting, &c.
Fr. contravention, v. contrevenir; Lat. contra venio, to come against.
- Contretemps (Fr.), kŏh'n'tră.ta'h'n'. Something inopportune.
Latin contra tempus, [coming at] the wrong time.
- Contribute, kŏn'trib'ute; contribüt-ed (R. xxxvi.), contribüt-ing, contribüt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.), contribüt-able (R. xxiii.), contribut-ive, -trib'ü.tiv; contribution, kŏn'trib'u''shun.
Contributary, -trib'ü.tă.ry. Paying tribute to the same crown.
Contributory, -trib'ü.tŏ.ry. Contributing to the same object.
Fr. contribution; Lat. contribütārius, contribütio, contribütör, contribüere (con tribuo, to give with [others]).
- Contrite, kŏn'trite (penitent); contrite-ly, kŏn'trite'.lĭ (adv.)
Contrition, kŏn'trish'un (not -sion, R. xxxiii). Sorrow for sin.
Fr. contrit, contrition; Lat. contritus (con tŕĕre, sup. trĭtum, to rub together. "A contrite heart" is one broken or bruised with rubs.)
- Contrive, kŏn'trive'; contrived' (2 syl.), contriv'-ing, contriv'-er, contriv'-able, contriv'-ance (R. xix.) To devise, to plan.
Corruption of the French controuver, to find out, to invent.
- Control, kŏn'trŏle' (to keep under restraint); controlled' (2 syl.)
Controll'-ing, controll'-er (R. i.); but control'-ment (R. ii. ¶.)
Comptroller, kŏn.trolle'.er. One whose duty it is to examine tax-gatherers' accounts; an officer of the royal household.
- Comptroller of the Pipe. An échequer officer connected with the "pipe," or great roll. Both these words are now spelt controller. (Low Lat. contrarŏtülātor.) "Comptroller" is compŭtus rotülātor, keeper of accounts.
Fr. contrôle, i.e., contra rôle; Lat. contra rŏtŭlus, a counter register.
All contracts were at one time enrolled in a public register.

Controvert, kõn'.trõ.vert, to dispute; controvert-ed (R. xxxvi.)

Controvert'-er, one who disputes a statement; controvert'-ist, controvert'-ible, controvert'ibly.

(The second t in these words is an error. The root verb is not "vertēre," to turn, but "versāri," to dispute.)

Controversy, plu. controversies, kõn'.trõ.ver.sĩz, disputation.

Controversial, kõn.trõ.ver'.shal; controversial-ly (adv.)

Controversial-ist. A professional writer of controversies.

Fr. controverse (n.), controverser (v.), controvers-able; Latin contro-versia, controversāri (not controvertēre, to turn against).

Contumacy, kõn'.tũ.mũ.sy (not kõn.tũ'.ma.sy), obstinate resistance of authority; contumacious, kõn'.tu.may''.shus; contumacious-ly, contumacious-ness.

Fr. contumace, contumacy; Lat. contũmācia (con tumēre, to swell against one. Contũmas, gen. contũmācis.)

Contumely, plu. contumelies, kõn'.tũ.mě.ly, kõn'.tũ.mě.lĩz (not kõn.tũ'.mẽ.ly), insolence, affronting language.

Contumelious, kõn'.tu.mee''.lĩ.us; contumelious-ly.

Contumelious-ness. (Same root as "contumacy.")

Latin contũmēlia, contũmēliõsus, abusive (con tumēre, see above).

Contuse' (to bruise), contused (2 syl.), contūs-ing, contūs-er, contusion, kõn.tũ'.shun (Rule xxxiii.), a bruise.

Fr. contusion; Lat. contũsio (con tundo, sup. tũsum, to pound).

Conundrum, plu. conundrums. A punning riddle.

Old Eng. cunnan to know, dredm fun, "fun-knowledge." Like Dredm-craft joy-craft, i.e., music, &c.

Convalescence, kõn'.va.les''.sense. Renewal of health after illness.

Convalescent, kõn.va.les''.sent. Restored to health.

("Sc-" denotes that the action of the word is "progressive.")

Fr. convalescence, convalescent; Lat. con vālesco (vāleo to be well, valesco to grow stronger and stronger).

Convene, kõn.veen' (to assemble); convened' (2 syl.), convēn-ing, convēn-er (Rule xix.), convēn-able better convēn-ible.

(The wrong conjugation, as usual, is a borrowed French error.)

French convenir, convenable; Latin con venire, to come together.

Convenience, kõn.vee'.nĩ.ense. Something commodious.

Conve'niency; conve'nient, conve'nient-ly.

Lat. convēniens, convēnientia (con venire, to fadge together).

Convent, kõn'.vent, home for nuns [or monks]; conven'tual, (monastic); conventional, -shun.al, customary.

A "conventional phrase or manner," i.e., in vogue, usual.

A "conventual prior," &c., the prior of a convent.

Conventicle, kõn.ven'.tĩ.k'l. A dissenter's chapel (a word of contempt), it means a "little" convent or assembly.

Conventicler, kõn.ven'.tĩ.kler. A dissenter (word of contempt).

French conventicule; Latin conventicũlum (-cul, -cle, &c., dim.)

Convention, kõn.ven'.shun.: A meeting of delegates, a contract.

Conven'tion-al (customary), conven'tion-ally (adv.)

Conventionality, kõn.ven'.shun.al'i.ty. Formality.

Conven'tional-ism. Manners in accordance with the fashion.

Conventionary, kõn.ven'.shun.ä.ry. Settled by convention.

Conven'tion-er, a party in a convention. Conven'tion-ist, one who makes a contract. (See Convent note.)

French convention, conventionnel; Latin conventio, conventionalis (con venio, supine ventum, to come together).

Converge, kõn.verj', to incline to one point; converged' (2 syl.), converg'-ing, converg'-ent, converg'-ence, -ency (R. xix.)

French converger, convergence; Latin con vergere, to bend together.

Converse, kõn'.verse (noun and adj.); kõn'.verse' (verb). Rule 1.

Con'verse, a proposition turned round: thus, the converse of "every A is a B," is "every B is an A." Converse'-ly.

Conversion, kõn.ver'.shun, complete change. (See Convert.)

Converse' (to chat); conversed' (2 syl.), convers'-ing, convers'-able, convers'-ably, convers'able-ness. (Rule xix.)

Conversant, kõn'.ver.sant (not kon.ver'sant), acquainted [with an art, &c.] by familiar use; con'versant-ly.

Conversation, kõn.ver.say''.shun (chat); conversation-al, conversational-ly, conversation-ist.

French conversation, converse, converser (v.); Latin conversari, conversans, conversatio (con versor, to converse with another).

Conversazione, plu. conversazioni (Ital.) kõn'-vër-sät'-zä.õ'ne.

A party in which conversation is to furnish the amusement.

Convert, kon'.vert (noun); kon.vert' (verb). Rule 1.

Convert', convert'-ed (R. xxxvi.), convert'-er, convert'-ing.

Convert'-ible (not -able), convert'-ibly, convert'-ibil'ity.

Conversion, kõn.ver'.shun. Entire change. (Rule xxxiii.)

French convertir, convertible, conversion; Latin conversio, convertibilis, convertere (con verto, to turn completely).

Convey, kon.vay' (to transmit); conveyed' (2 syl.), convey'-ing, convey'-able (R. xxiii.), convey'-ance (R. xxiv.), convey'-anc-er, a lawyer who draws up writings for conveying property; convey'anc-ing, the business of a conveyancer.

Low Latin conveiancia, a conveyance; conveiare, to convey; Latin convehère, to convey by [horse and cart, &c.]

Convict, kõn'.vict, a felon; kõn'.vict', to prove guilty. (Rule 1.)

Convict', convict'-ed (R. xxxvi.), convict'-ing; conviction, kõn.vik'.shun, strong belief, proof or detection of guilt.

Convictive, kõn.vik'.tiv, condemnatory; convictive-ly.

French conviction; Latin convictio, v. convincere, supine convictum (con vinco, to overthrow altogether). In Latin there are two supines alike, "convivo" (to live together) and "convinco." Hence convictio means either, "a living together" or a "conviction."

Convince' (2 syl.), convinc'es (3 syl., R. liii.), convinced' (2 syl.), convinc'-er, convinc'-ing, convinc'-ing-ly, convinc-ible.

Latin convincere, to convince; same root-verb as convict (q.v.)

Hence, Jno. viii. 46: "Which of you convinces [convicts] me of sin?"

Convivial, kŏn.vĭv' ĭ.ăl (jovial); convivial-ly, convivial-ist.

Conviviality, kŏn.vĭv' ĭ.ăl' ĭ.tĭj. Festivity, social indulgence.

French convivialité; Latin convivialis, convivo, to live together.

Convoke', convoked' (2 syl.), convök'-ing, convök'-er (Rule xix.)

Convocation, kŏn'.vo.kay''shun. A clerical council.

French convocation; Latin convocatio, con vocāre, to call together.

Convolution, kŏn'.vo.lu''.shun. A fold or coil.

Latin convolutus (con volvo, to roll together).

Convolvulus, kŏn.vŏl'.vu.lus. The garden bindweed (-vu- not -vo).

Latin and French convolvulus (-ulus dim.), the little twisting plant.

Convolvulaceæ, kŏn-vŏl'.vu-lāy''sĕ.ee. The order including the above. The suffix -aceæ denotes an order of plants.

Convoy, kŏn'.voy (noun), kŏn.voy' (verb). Rule 1.

Con'voy, an attendant for defence. Convoy', to attend, &c.

Convoy', convoyed' (2 syl.), convoy'-ing. (Rule xiii.)

French convoi; Low Latin conveio; Latin convēho, to convey.

Convulse' (2 syl.), to shake emotionally; convulsed' (2 syl.)

Convuls'-ing (R. xix.); convulsive, kŏn.vŭl'.sŭ; convulsive-ly, convulsive-ness (R. xvii.) (Fr. convulsion, &c.)

Lat. convulsio, from con vello, sup. vulsum, to pluck or tear to pieces.

Coo (like a pigeon), cooes, kooz; cooed, kood; coo'-ing (R. xliii.)
An imitative word.

Cook (to dress food), cooked (1 syl.), cookery, kook'.ĕ.ry.

Old English cŏc or cŭc, verb cucc[an]; Latin cŏquo, noun cŏquus.

Cool, cool'-er (comp.), cool'-est (super.); cooled (1 syl.), cool'-ing; cool'-er (a vessel for cooling liquids; cool'-ly, cool'-ness, cool'-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim.; added to nouns it means "like," as boy-ish, like a boy).

Old English cŏl, cool; verb cŏl[ian], cŏl-nes, coolness.

Coolie, kool'.ĕy, a porter (East Indies). Cool'-ly, chilly.

Coom, koom; Coomb, koom; Comb, kŏme.

Coom. Refuse such as collects in carriage-wheels, &c.

Coomb. Four bushels (dry measure); a valley.

Comb (for the hair), verb to dress the hair.

"Coom," German kahn, mould.

"Coomb," O. Eng., a liquid measure; a valley; Gk. kumbé, a hollow,

"Comb" (for the hair), Old English camb.

Coop (a pen for fowls, to pen fowls), cooped, koopt.

Latin cŭpa, a butt, a coop; Old English cŏfa, a box, a chamber.

Cooper, kōp'.er, one who makes tubs. Cooperage, kōp'.er.age, the workshop of a cooper, charge made for cooper's work.

Latin cūpa, a butt or tub (-age something done, -ago to do).

Co-operate, kō.ōp'.ē.rāte (to work in unison), co-op'erāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), co-op'erāt-ing (R. xix.), co-op'erāt-or (not -er R. xxxvii.), co-operative, kō.ōp'.ē.ra.tīv (adj.); co-operation, kō'.ōp-ē.ray''-shun; co-op'erant (adj.)

French coopérant, concurring, cooperation, coopérer (verb); Latin coōpērātio, coōpērātor (co[con]opērāri to work with [others]).

Co-ordinate, kō.or'.dī.nāte (adj.). Of equal order, rank, or degree.

Co-or'dinate-ly. co-or'dinate-ness. Equality of rank, &c.

Co-or'dinate, plu. co-or'dinates. Lines, &c., ranged in order.

Co-ordination, kō.or'.dī.nay''-shun. Just arrangement.

French coordination, coordonner! (verb); Latin co-ordinātio, co-ordinātivus, co-ordinātus (co[con]ordināre, to arrange together).

Coot, a water-fowl; Cote, a pen for doves or sheep; Coat (q.v.)

"Coot," Welsh cwtiar, a coot (cwta, the bob-tail [bird]).

"Cote," Old Eng. cōte, a cot; Welsh cwt, a cot, sty, &c.

"Coat" (a garment), French cotte; Italian cotta; German kutte.

Copaiba, kō.pay'.bah. A balsam. (See Capivi.)

Copal, kō'.pal (not kō.pal'). A varnish. (Mex. copalli, resins.)

Co-part'ner (a joint partner); co-part'nery, or co-part'nership.

Cope, a hood; Cope, to vie with others; Coop, a pen for fowls.

"Cope" (for the head), Old Eng. cop, a cap or hood; Welsh cob, a coat.

"Cope" (to vie), Danish kappes, to vie with others.

"Coop" (for fowls), Latin cūpa, a butt or coop.

Coping, kō'.ping. The uppermost tier of a wall (cope, a hood).

Copious, kō'.pī.us (plentiful), co'pious-ly, co'pious-ness.

Latin cōpiōsus, cōpia, plenty (co[con]opis, very rich).

Copper. A metal, made of copper, to case with copper, a coin.

Cop'per-ish. Having a slight taste or smell of copper.

Coppery, kōp'.pě.ry. Containing copper, resembling copper.

Latin cuprum, i.e., as Cyprium, Cyprus brass; German kupfer.

Copperas, kōp'.pě.rās. Green vitriol. (It ought to be copperos).

Fr. couperose; Ital. copparosa; Lat. cupri ros, liquor of copper.

Coppice, kōp'.pis. A wood consisting of brushwood.

Low Lat. copicia; Gk. kōptō, to cut, so called because the trees are cut to the ground every few years, to make underwood as cover for game.

Copse, kōps. Same as Coppice. (See above.)

Copula, plu. copulas, kōp'.u.lāh, &c. The verb which unites or couples the predicate with the subject: viz., is or is not.

Copulate, kōp'.u.late (to pair sexually); cop'ulāt-ed, cop'ulāt-ing (R. xix.); copulation, kōp'.u.lay''-shun.

- Copulative, köp'.u.la.tiv, connective, as "copulative conjunctions." Copulatory, köp'.u.lă.tō.ry.
 French copulation, copulative; Latin cōpūla, cōpūlātio, cōpūlativus, v. cōpūlare, to unite, to couple.
- Copy, plu. copies, köp'py, köp'piz. A transcript, a pattern.
 Cop'y, copies, köp'piz; copi-ed, köp'pid; copi-er, köp'.i.er; cop'y-ing, cop'y-ist, cop'yright, cop'ybook, cop'yhold.
 Fr. copie, a transcript; Low Lat. cōpia, a transcript, v. cōpiāre.
- Coquet, kō.kēt' (verb), to "play" love-making. Coquette (noun).
 Coquet', coquett'-ed (R. xxxvi.), coquett'-ing (R. ii., b.)
 Coquette, kō.kēt'; coquett'-ish, coquett'-ish-ly (jauntily).
 French coqueter (v.), coquette, coquetterie (coq, [to imitate] a cock).
- Cor- (Latin prefix), con before r.
- Coracle, kör'ră.k'l, a Welsh boat; Curricie, kur'.rî.k'l, a carriage.
 "Coracle," Welsh cwrwg (cwrwg, a frame or carcass).
 "Curricie," Latin curriculus, a little carriage (-cle or -culus, dim.)
- Coral, kör'ral (a zoöphyte, the shells conglomerated).
 Corall-aceous, kör'ral.lay''.shus (adj.); corall-ine, kör'ral.in.
 Corall-iferous, kör'ral.lif'.ë.rus. Containing coral.
 Coralliform, kör'ral.i.form, resembling coral; cor'all-ite.
 Coralloid, kör'ral.loid; coralloid-al, kor'ral.loid'al.
 Greek korallion eidos, coral-like.
 ("Coral" ought to have double "l," or its compounds only one "l." R.iii.)
 Fr. corail, coraline, coralloide; Lat. cōrallium, cōrallum, or cūrālium;
 Gk. kōrallion or kourālion, coral.
- Coranach, kör'ra.năk. Lamentation for the dead.
 Gaelic cornh ranaich, crying together.
- Corbeil, kor'.bel (used in sieges). Corbel, kor'.bel (used in architecture). The base of a Corinthian pillar, the projecting knob (often carved) on which an arch rests.
 Cor'bel, cor'belled (2 syl.), cor'bellng.
 Fr. corbeille, a small basket, a corbel; Lat. corbūla, a little basket.
- Cord (string); Chord (of music); Cawed, past tense of caw.
 Cord, to fasten with cord; cord'age, cord collectively.
 French corde; Latin chorda; Greek chordē (-age suffix collective).
- Cordelier, kör'.dē.leer'. A grey friar who is girded with a rope.
 French cordelier (corde, a rope), one who wears a rope.
- Cordial (n.), kör'.dī'al. A cheering draught; (adj.) hearty.
 Cor'dial-ly, cor'dial-ness, cordiality, kör'.dī.ăl''.i.ty.
 French cordial, cordialité (Latin cor, gen. cordis, the heart).
- Cordovan, kor'.do.văn (not kor.dō.văn), Spanish leather. So called from Cor'dova (not Cordo'va), where it was first made.
- Corduroy, kord'roy. A thick ribbed cotton for trousers.
 French cord du roi, the king's cord.

Cordwainer, kord'way-ner. A worker in leather, not cord maker.

French cordouannier, now cordonnier, a corruption of cordovanier, a worker in Cor'dovan leather.

Core, Corps, Caw, kōr. Core. (Lat. cor the heart, Gk. kear.)

Core (of an apple), v. to take out the core; cored, cor'-ing.

Corps, kōr, a body of soldiers. (Fr. corps, Latin corpus.)

Caw. The cry of a crow, an imitation word.

Coreopsis, kōr're.ōp''.sīs. The tick-seeded sunflower.

Greek kōris ōpsis, a bug in appearance [referring to the seed].

Coriander, kōr'ri.an''.der. A plant famed for its seed.

Old English corion; Latin cōriandrum; Greek kōriannon or kōr'ōn (kōris, a bug). The bruised seed smells like that insect.

Cork, Calk or Caulk, Cauk. All pronounced kork.

Cork (of a bottle), v. corked (1 syl.), cork'-y, tasting of the cork; cork'i-ness, having the buoyancy of a cork.

Calk. To close the seams of a ship with oakum.

Cauk. A sulphate of bary'ta. (A miner's word.)

"Cork," German kork; Latin cortex, the bark of a tree.

"Calk," Latin calco, to tread or press (calx, the heel of the foot).

Cormorant, kōr'mō.rant. A glutton, the sea-raven.

French cormoran; Latin corvus marinus, the sea-raven.

Corn. Grain; an excrecence on the feet; to salt meat.

Corn (grain), has no plural, except when the general crop or different varieties are referred to, as "Corns are better."

Old English corn; German korn; Danish korn; Latin granum.

Corn, plu. corns (on the feet); corn-y; cor'neous, horny.

Old English corn; Welsh corn; French corne; Latin cornu, horn.

Corn (to salt meat), corned (1 syl.), corn'-ing.

German kornen, to corn or salt meat.

Cornea, kōr'.ne.ăh. The membrane in front of the eye.

French cornée; Latin cornēus, horny (cornu, horn).

Cornelian, kōr.nee'.li.an. A chalcedony. (See Carnelian.)

Cornet, kōr'.net, a cavalry ensign; a horn. Cor'net-cy (-cy denotes "rank"). Cor'net-a-piston, a musical instrument.

French cornette, a cavalry officer; cornet, a horn; cornet à piston.

The officer so called carries the "cornette" or ensign of his company.

Cornice, kōr'.nīs (not cornish, as it is very often pronounced).

The border round the ceiling of a room.

Italian cornice; Greek kōrōnis, the end or finish of anything.

Cornu-am'monis (not -ammō'nīs), the ammōnite (q.v.)

Cornucopia, kōr'-nu.cō'.pī.ăh. Emblem of abundance.

Latin cornu cōpia, horn of plenty. It was the horn of Amalthēa (nurse-goat of Jupiter) which Achēlōūs gave to Hercūlēs, Corolla, ko.röl'.läh, blossom; corollaceous, kör'.röl.lay''.shüs (adj. of corolla); corollet, kor'röl.lět, one leaf of a blossom.

Latin cōrolla, a little crown (dimin. of cōrōna, a crown).

Corollary, kor'röl.lä.ry (not ko.röl'.lä.ry nor kor'rol.lair'ry).

An inference which rises out of an inference: Suppose it is proved that matter was created, then it follows as a "corollary" that there was a creator anterior to the existence of matter, and that matter is not eternal, &c.

Latin cōrollārium, a consecatory (from cōrolla, a garland which was given invariably to an actor who had performed his part well).

Coronilla, kor'rö.näl'.lah (not coronella). A plant so called because the flowers crown the branches in a corymb.

French coronille (Latin cōrōna, with a diminutive ending).

Corona, ko.rö'.nah, a halo; the upper surface of molar teeth; the margin of a radiated compound flower; a drip, &c.

Coronal, kor'rö.näl, belonging to a crown; coronet, kör'ro.net, the crown worn by a nobleman; a downy tuft on seed.

Coronation, kor'ro.nay''.shun. The ceremony of crowning.

Coroneted, kör'ro.nēt.ed, entitled to wear a coronet; coronated, kör'ro.näy.ted, crowned; coronary, kor'ro.nä.ry.

French coronal ("coronation" is one of the very few words in -tion which is not French); Latin cōrōna, cōrōnātio, cōrōnātus.

Coroner, kor'ro.ner. So called because he has chiefly to do with "Pleas of the Crown." (Low Latin cōrōnātor, a coroner.)

Corporal, Corporeal, kor'po.räl, kor.pö.rě.äl (adjectives).

Corporal. Pertaining to the body, bodily, of the body.

Corporeal. Having a material body.

"Corporal punishment," bodily punishment; not corporeal punishment (punishment having a material body).

"Corporeal substance," "This corporeal frame," that is a substance or frame having a material body.

"Corporal pain," pain of the body; "Corporal injury."

"Corporeal rights," rights over material substances.

"Corporal" is opposed to Mental; "Corporeal" to Spiritual or Immaterial.

Cor'poral-ly, bodily. Corpo'real-ly, in a material form.

"He was present corporally," bodily, in his proper person.

"The ghost in Hamlet is shown on the stage corporeal-ly," that is, not as a spirit, but having a material form.

Corporal'ity, bodily state. Corporeal'ity, materiality.

Raleigh speaks of the "corporality of light," it should be "corporeality," meaning that light is material, according to Newton's theory; but it would be quite correct to speak of the "corporality" of the ghost, meaning his embodied state, or having his own veritable body.

Corporal. The lowest officer in a company of foot soldiers.

Corporale, kor'.po.rāle. The cloth which covers the eucharistic elements. Hence a Corporal Oath (or Corporale Oath), one taken while touching the eucharistic cloth.

(The spelling of "Corporal," for an officer is incorrect. It ought to be caporal. French caporal; Italian caporale; Spanish caporal, a chief; Latin caput, a head (head of the men under him).

"Corporal," Fr. corporal, corporalité; Lat. corpōrālis, corpōrālitas.

Corporate, kor'.po.rate, united in a corporation; corporate-ly.

Corporation, kor'.po.ray''shun. A body politic.

French corporation; Latin corpōrātio, corpōrātus (corpus, a body).

Corporeal, kor-pō'.rē.ūl. Material, opposed to spiritual.

Corpo'real-ly, corporeal'-ity, corpo'real-ism, materialism.

Corpo'real-ist, one who denies the existence of spirit independent of matter; corporeity, kor'.pō.ree'i.ty, materiality. (Corporeal or Corporal, see under Corporal.)

French corporel, corporeité; Latin corpōreus, bodily (corpus, a body).

Corps, plu. corps, kor, plu. korz. A body of soldiers. (See Core.)

Corpse, plu. corpses, korps, plu. korps'.ēz. A human dead body.

French corps; Latin corpus, a body (caro āpēre, flesh fashioned).

Corpulence, kor'.pū.lense (not corpulance), cor'pulencey, bulkiness of body; cor'pulent, stout; cor'pulent-ly, fleshily.

French corpulence, corpulent; Latin corpulentia, corpulente (adv.)

Corpuscule, plu. corpuscules or corpuscula, kor.pus'.kule, plu. kor.pus'kūlz or kor.pus'.kū.lah. A minute particle.

Corpus'cular (adj.), corpuscularian, kor.pus'.ku.lair''ī.an.

One who maintains that corpuscules were the germs of all material substances, and not the "Divine Word."

French corpuscule, corpusculaire; Latin corpuscūlum (corpus a body, and -culum a diminutive).

Correct. The degrees are: nearly correct, more nearly correct, very nearly correct, quite correct. More correct is the comparative of "incorrect;" most correct means quite correct, the most correct means that all others are incorrect.

Correct (adj.), right; (verb) to punish, to put right.

Correction, kōr.rek'.shun. Emendation, punishment.

Correc'tion-al. (This word ought to be correction-cl.)

Corrective, kōr.rek'.tiv. That which corrects.

Correct-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.). One who corrects.

French correctif, correction, correctionnel; Latin correctio, correctus, v. corrīgēre (cor [con] rego, to regulate or set quite right),

Correspond, to hold intercourse by letters; correspond'-ing, writing letters, similar; correspond'-ent, one who corresponds, something which "pairs" with something else.

Correspond'-ence. Intercourse by letters, similarity.

Correspond'-ent-ly. In a corresponding manner.

Correspond'-ing-ly, by letter; Corresponsive, kor'.res.pon''.siv.

French correspondance (incorrect), correspondant (incorrect), v. correspondre; Lat. cor [con] respondere, to answer with or to [another].

Corridor, kor'.ri.dor (French). A gallery communicating with different apartments of a house. (Latin curro, to run.)

Corrigendum, plu. corrigenda, kor'.ri.jen''.dum, plu. kor'.ri.jen''.dāh. To be corrected (Latin). Rule xlv.

Corrigible, kor'.ri.ji.b'l, capable of correction. Incorrigible, hopelessly bad, regardless of reproof.

French corrigible; Latin corrigibilis (corrigere, to correct).

Corroborate, kor.rōb'.o.rate (not ko.rōb'.e.rate), to confirm.

Corrob'orāt-ed, corrob'orāt-ing (R. xix.), corrob'orāt-or.

Corroborat-ive, kor.rōb'.o.ra.tiv; corroborant, kor.rōb'.o.rānt.

Corroboration, kor.rōb'.o.raj''.shun (not ko.rōb'.e.raj''.shun). (In Lat. "-rō-" is long; kor.rō.bō.rate would be better.)

French corroborer, corroborant, corroboration; Latin corrobōrāre (cor [con] rōbōro, to strengthen with oak, rōbur, oak).

Corrode, kor.rode' (not ko.rode'), to eat away by degrees, as by rust, &c.; corrōd'-ed, corrōd'-ing, corrōd'-ent (not -ant); corrōd'-ible (not -able), corrōd'-er (R. xix), corrōd'ibil'ity.

Corrosion, kor.rō'.shun (not ko.rō'.shun). A fretting.

Corrosive, kor.rō'.siv; corro'sive-ly, corro'sive-ness.

Corrosibility, kor.ro'.si.bil''.i.ty (not ko.ro'.si.bil''.i.ty).

Fr. corroder, corrosif, corrosion; Lat. cor [con] rōdere, to eat away.

Corrugate, kor'.ru.gate, to wrinkle; cor'rugāt-ed (R. xxxvi.)

Cor'rugāt-ing (R. xix.), cor'rugāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Corrugation, kor'.ru.gay''.shun, a wrinkling; cor'rugant (not corrugent, as many dictionaries give).

French corrugation; Lat. corrūgātio, corrūgans -antis, corrūgāre (cor [con] rūgo, to make into wrinkles with [frowning], ruga, a wrinkle).

Corrupt, kor.rup't' (not ko.rup't'), to spoil; corrupt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), corrupt'-ing, corrupt'-er (more corrupt), corrupt'-est (most corrupt), corrupt'-or, one who corrupts (R. xxxvii.), fem. corrupt'tress; corrupt'-ly, corrupt'-ness, corrupt'-ible (not -able), corrupt'ibly, corrupt'ible-ness, corrupt'ibil'ity (not kō.rup'.ti.bil''.i.ty), corruption, kor.rūp'.shun.

Fr. corruptibilité, corruptible, corruption; Lat. corruptio, corruptor fem. corruptrix, corrumpere, sup. -ruptum (cor [con] rumpo, to break).

Corsair, kor.sair', a pirate. Coarser, kor'ser. Courser, ko'r-ser.

"Corsair," Fr. corsaire (fr. Ital. corsa, a race). The word was first applied to ships of chase during war, then to the captains who had "letters of mark," and ultimately to sea-rovers and pirates.

"Coarser," comp. of coarse, q.v. "Courser," a swift horse.

Corse, Coarse, Course, Corps, Cores, Caws, Cause.

Corse, horse. Poetical for "corpse." (Latin corpus, a body.)

Coarse, ko'rse. Rough, not refined. (Old Eng. gorst, rough.)

Course, ko'rse. A race. (Latin cursus, a race.)

Corps, korz, plu. of corps, kor (French). Bodies of soldiers.

Cores, korz, plu. of core. Hearts of apples, &c. (Latin cor.)

Caws, korz, 3rd per. sing. of caw. Applied to the cry of crows.

Cause, korz. The reason or motive. (Latin causa, a cause.)

Corset, Cosset, Corslet, kor'set, kos'set, kòrs'let.

Corset (Fr). A bodice for women (corps, a body, and -et, dim.)

Cosset. A pet (Old Eng. cos, a kiss, a little thing for kisses).

Corslet. A little cuirass (Fr. corselet, corps, a body, -let, dim.)

Corsned, kor'sned. A piece of consecrated bread used for an ordeal.

Old English cornæde cors snæð, curse morsel. The person under trial said, "May this morsel prove a curse if I am guilty, and turn to wholesome nourishment if I am innocent."

Cortege, kor'taje'. A train of attendants. (French cortège.)

Latin corpus tegere, to cover the body, a body-guard.

Cortes, kor'téz (Spanish). The parliament of Spain or Portugal.

Spanish corte, a resident of a town, the representatives of towns.

Coruscate, kòr'ús.kate, to glisten; cor'uscät-ed (Rule xxxvi.), cor'uscät-ing (R. xix.); coruscation, kòr'us.kay''shun.

French coruscation; Latin cöruscatio, cöruscäre, to glisten, to flash.

Corvet or Corvette, kor.vet'. A sloop of war. (French corvette.)

Latin corbita, a hoy; corbitäre, to freight a ship.

Corylaceæ, kòr'ri.lay''së.e. An order of plants, including the oak, beech, chestnut, and hazel.

Latin corylus; Greek körülös, a hazel (-aceæ denotes an "Order").

Corymb, kò.rimb, a bunch or cluster; corymbiated, kò.rim''.bi-ä'ted (not corymbated), having berries or blossoms in clusters; corymbiferous, kò.rim.bif''.ërus, bearing clusters; corymbose, ko.rim'.bose (adj.)

Latin cörymbifer, a berry-bearer, like ivy, cörymbus, a cluster.

Greek korumbos, a cluster of fruit or flowers (kòrus, a head).

Co-secant, ko'-see''.känt. The secant of the complemental arc.

Co-sine. The sine of the complemental arc.

Latin sëans, gen. sëantis, cutting. Sinus, a curve or bay.

Cosey. Should be cosy, adv. cosi-ly, kò'.zıy, kò'.zı.ly.

(The adv. "cosily" cannot be formed from "cosey." R. xiii.)

Cosmetic, kös.met'.ic. A preparation for beautifying the face by removing freckles, &c. Also an adj.

Gk. kösmétikós, a beautifyer; kösméo, to adorn; Fr. cosmétique.

Cosmogony, Cosmography, Cosmology, Geology, Geography.

Cosmogony, kös.mög'.o.ny. An "a prióri" theory of the world's origin. (Gk. kösmös gönê, the world's generation.) Gen. i. is the Bible theory of the world's origin.

Geology, jee'.öl.ö.jy. An "a posterióri" view of the world's origin. It explains from known facts, how the rocks, &c., of the earth have been produced.

Greek gé graphê, a description of the earth, in detail.

Cosmography, kös.mög'.ra.fy. A description of the structure, figure, and order, of the world, the relation of its parts, and how to represent them on paper.

Greek kösmös graphê, description of the earth, as a whole.

Cosmology, kös.möl'.o.jy. A treatise on the elements of the earth, the laws of nature, and the modifications of material things. (Greek kösmös lögôs, treatise of the world.)

Geography, jē.ög'.ra.fy. A description of the surface of the earth, its countries, inhabitants, and productions.

Greek gé graphê, description of the earth in detail.

Physical Geography treats of climates, elevations, configurations, influence of coast, tides, winds, &c.

Cosmog'ony (v.s.), cosmog'onist. A writer of cosmogony.

Cosmo'graphy (v.s.), cosmog'rapher, a writer of cosmography; cosmographical, kös'.mo.graf''.i.kal; cosmographical-ly.

Cosmology (see above) cosmologist, a writer of cosmology; cosmological, kös.mo.löj'.i.käl; cosmological-ly.

Cosmopolite, kös.möp'.o.lite. A citizen of the world.

Cosmopolitan, kös'.mo.pöl''.i.tan (adj.)

Cos'mopol'itan-ism. A system which regards man (regardless of nationality) as a citizen of the world.

Greek kösmös pölitês, citizen of the world (-ism, doctrine, system).

Cosmorama, plu. cosmoramas, kös'.mo.räh''.mäh, plu. -mäs. A representation of the world in large panoramic pictures.

Cosmoric, kös'.mo.räm''.ik. Pertaining to the above.

Greek kösmös horāma, a view of the world.

Cosmos. The world considered as a whole. The word means the "beauty of arrangement," and was first applied to creation by Pythagoras. Cos'mical, cos'mical-ly.

Greek kösmös, the world; kösméo, to arrange.

Cossack, kös'.sük. One of the Cossacks; a Russian tribe.

Cosset, a pet lamb, brought up by hand. Corset, a bodice (q.v.)

Old English cos and -et dim. A little thing to be kissed.

- Cost, past cost, past part. cost. Ceast, kōste (of the sea).
Costly, kōst'ly; costli-ness (R. xi.), expensiveness.
Ital. costo (n.), expense; costare (v.); Lat. consto, to cost. (We say, "What did it stand you in?" [cost]; con sto, to stand.)
- Costermonger, kōs'-ter.mun'-ger. Corruption of costard-monger, a seller of "costards;" that is, apples.
Old English costard, a species of apple; monger, a dealer.
- Costive, kōs'tiv, contraction of "con'stipative"; cos'tive-ly, cos'tive-ness, having the bowels con'stipated.
Latin constipo, to cram close together (con stipo, to stuff together).
- Costume, kōs.tūme' (French). National style of dress.
- Cosy, kō'sy, snug and comfortable. Cosi-ly, kō'si.ly, snugly.
Scotch cosie. Old English cos, a kiss (not cosey).
- Cot, Cote, Ceat, Coot, kōt, kōte, kōte, koot.
Cot, a cottage; an infant's bed, &c. Cott-ar, a cottager (R. i.)
Cote. A pen for sheep, doves, &c., called sheepcote, &c.
Coat. A raiment for men or boys. (Fr. cotte, Ital. cotta.)
Ccot. A small black water fowl. (Welsh cwtiar, a coot.)
Old English cōt or cōte, a cottage, a bed, a pen.
- Co-tangent. The tangent of the complement of an arc. (See Co-)
- Cotemporary, cotemporaneous. (See Contemporary.)
- Cotillon, kō.til'.yōn. The "petticoat" dance, so called because ladies had to hold up their gown and show their petticoat.
French cotillon, a petticoat; a dance.
- Cottage, kōt'tage, a peasant's house. Cot'tag-er, cot'tier, kōt'-ti.er, a squatter, an independent peasant (Obsolete).
Low Latin cottagium, a cottage; cottarius, a cottager.
- Cotton, kot'.n, thread made from the cotton plant, a fabric made of cotton; cotton-y, containing cotton, feeling like cotton.
Cottons, cotton threads, cotton fabrics. Cotton (verb), to cling to a person fondly, as cotton clings to one's clothes.
French coton, verb cotonner; Arabic al goton, the cotton-plant.
- Cotyledon, kōt'.ī.lee'-don. The seminal leaf of plants which first appears above ground, and forms part of the embryo.
- Dicotyledons, dī'-. Plants with two seminal leaves.
- Monocotyledons, mōn'-o-. Plants with one cotyledon.
- Acotyledons, a'-. Plants without a seminal leaf.
Lat. cotyledon, the hollow of the huckle-bone; Gk. kōtūlēdon, a socket.
- Couch, kōwch (n.), a sofa; (v.) to hide, to fix a spear in its rest; couched (1 syl.), couch'-ing, couch-er, couch-ant; kōwch'-ant or koo'shong (in Her.) lying down with head raised.
Fr. couche, a bed; coucher (v.), couchant; Lat. col [con] locāre, to lay.

Cough, kŏf (n. and v.); coughed, kŏft; cough-ing, kŏf'ing.

There are twenty-five words ending in -ough, with eight distinct sounds,—viz., ok, off, uf, up; ōw, ōw, oo, er. Only two ("cough" and "trough") have the sound of off. These are both native words, coh' and trōh, guttural.

(Not one of the twenty-five words have any right to the diphthong "ou," and if the original vowels had been preserved much of the present absurdity of pronunciation would have been avoided.) (Rule xlv.)

Old English cohk, contraction of cohetan (= kof'tan), to cough.

Could, kood (to rhyme with "good"), past tense of Can, "to be able," "to know how," never an auxiliary, but it stands in regimen with other words without to between them: as "I could write." Here write is infinitive mood, being the latter of two verbs in regimen.

Our word "could" is a blunder. The Old Eng. cunn[an] "to know how to do a thing," makes can in the present tense, and cūthe in the past; but the verb cāth[ian] "to make known," has cāthode for the past tense, contracted to cū'd our "could" (l interpolated).

Council, Counsel, Councillor, Counsellor.

Coun'cil. An assembly met for consultation. (Lat. concilium.)

Coun'sel. Advice, a pleader. (Latin consilium.)

Coun'cill-or. A member of a council. (Rule iii. -IL.)

Counsell-or. One who gives advice, a barrister. (R. iii. -IL.)

Coun'selled (2 syl.), advised; coun'sell-ing, advising.

Council-board, plu. council-boards.

Æcumen'ical council, plu. Æcumen'ical councils.

The distinction may be remembered thus: Council is concilio, con calo, to call [the board] together; but counsel is consūlo, to consult. You consult a "counsellor," you call together "councillors."

Count, a foreign title, fem. count'ess. We retain the feminine, but have substituted our native word "earl" for count.

Count'ess, plu. count'esses, poss. countess's, plu. countesses'.

Count-y, plu. counties, coun'tiz. We have retained this word, and also our native word "shire," [a count's] share.

Italian conte; French compte; Latin cōmes, gen. cōmittis, a companion of the chief or leader; comitatus, a county or share of the cōmes.

Count, to reckon; counter, one who counts, base money to assist in reckoning, a shop table where accounts are paid; (adv.) the wrong way, contrary to; a prefix.

Italian contare; French compter; Latin computāre, to compute, contracted to comp't, and corrupted into count.

Counteract, kown'-ter.act'. To frustrate, to act contrary to.

Latin contra ago, supine actum, to act in opposition to.

Counterbalance, kown'-ter.bāl'-ance. (Only one l in balance.)

Latin contra bilana, [balance] against balance.

Counterfeit, kown'-ter.feet (noun), kown'-ter.fit (verb); counterfeit-er, kown'-ter.fit-er; counterfeit-ed (R. xxxvi.)

Latin contra ficere, supine fectum [facio], to make against [law], to forge, to imitate without authority or right.

Counterfoil, kown'-ter.foil. Part of a check kept by the drawer.

Latin contra folium, the corresponding leaf.

Countermand, kown'-ter.mānd'. To withdraw a command.

Latin contra mando, to command the opposite [of a command].

Countermarch, kown'-ter.march'. To march back again.

Low Latin contra marchio, to march in the opposite direction.

Countermine, kown'-ter.mine; coun'termin' (3 syl.), coun'termin'-ing, coun'termin'-er. To dig a gallery underground in search of an enemy's mine.

Low Latin contra minero, to make a mine in the contrary direction.

Counterpane, kown'-ter.pain. A bed quilt.

A corruption of the Latin culcita puncta, a quilt worked in a pattern,
French courtepointe, a counterpane.

Counterpoise, kown'-ter.poyz, to counterbalance; coun'terpoised
(3 syl.), coun'terpois-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin contra penso, to weigh against [a given weight]; French contre poise,—i.e., poids, [weights] against weights. (See Avoirdupoise.)

Countersign, kown'-ter.sine, to sign a document in attestation of a signature; countersignature, kown'-ter.sig''-nā.tchur;
countersignatories, kown'-ter.sig''-nā-tō.riz.

Latin contra signo, to sign against [another signature].

Countess, plu. coun'tesses, kown'.tess, kown'tess.ez, poss. sing.
countess's, kown'.tess.iz; poss. plu. countesses', kown'.tess.ez. The wife of an earl or of a foreign count.

Italian contessa; French comtesse; Low Latin comitissa.

Country, plu. countries (R. xi.), kūn'.trȳ, kūn'.trȳz (Fr. contrée); coun'tryman, fem. coun'trywom'an, plu. coun'trymen, countrywomen, -wīm'en; poss. sing. -man's, -woman's,
poss. plu. -men's, -women's, -wīm'en.z.
(Obs. The y is not changed to i in these words. Rule xi.)

Countrify, kūn.tri.fy (R. xi.), to give the air and mien of a rustic; countrified, kūn.tri.fide, having the air and mien of a rustic. (Latin con terra, land contiguous [to a town].)

County, plu. counties (R. xi.), kown'.ty, kown'.tȳz.

Norman French counté, French comté; Latin comitatus, a county.

Coup (Fr.), koo, a stroke. Coupé (Fr.), koo-pay', part of a coach.

Coup d'état, koo'-da-tar'. A sudden raid on political foes.

Coup-de-grace, koo'd'-gràs. The victor's last blow.

Coup-de-main, koo'd'-màh'n. A sudden attack on a fort.

Coup-d'œil, koo'.dy'e. A comprehensive view of a scene.

Coup-de-soleil, koo'd'-sò-lay'e. A sun-stroke.

Coupé (Fr.), koo-pay'. The first division of a stage coach, a private railway carriage furnished with only one bench.

French couper, to cut. A part cut off for travellers.

Couple, küp'l, a pair, to link together; coupled, küp'.l'd; coupling, küp'.ling. (Fr. couple; Lat. cōpula, a couple.)

Coupon, koo'-pone. The part of a bond presented for a dividend.

Fr. couper, to cut off; because they are cut off as the claim falls due.

Courage, kūr'rage, bravery; courageous, ko-ray'jūs; courageously, courageous-ness, boldness of heart.

French courage, courageux; Latin cor ago, to move the heart.

Courant, Curreant, Current, koo'.ràh'n, kur'rant, kūr'rent.

Au courant, o koo'.ràh'n. Posted up to the time being.

Fr. être au courant de...to be posted up in... (Lat. curro, to run.)

Cur'rant, a fruit. (Lat. uvæ Corinthiæ or Corinthiæ.)

Current, kūr'rent, running. (Lat. currentis, gen. currentis.)

Courier, koo'.rē'er. A special messenger sent with a dispatch.

(This word ought to be spelt with double "r." As it now stands its base would be cœur, the heart; or cura, care.)

French courrier; Latin corriere; Latin curro, to run.

Course, Corse, Coarse, Corps, Cause, Caws.

Course, korse. A career, to hunt. (Lat. cursus; Fr. cours.)

coursed (1 syl.), cours'-ing, cours'-er, cours'-es (2 syl.)

Corse, korse. Poetical form of corpse. (Lat. corpus, a body.)

Coarse, ko'rise. Gross, not fine. (Old Eng. gorst, rough.)

Corps (pl.), korz. Companies of soldiers. (French corps.)

Cause, kawz. The reason, a plea. (Lat. causa, a cause.)

Caws, kawz, third person sing. of caw, to cry like a crow.

Court, The royal palace, those attached to it, a place for trying criminals, &c. To woo, to strive to please, &c.

Court (a palace), courtier, kor'.tē'er, one of the court.

Court'-ly (adj.), fit for a court; court'li-ness (Rule xi.)

Courteous, kort.tē'us (not kort.tchus nor kur'.tchus), affable; cour'teous-ly, courteous-ness, kor'.tē'us.ness.

Court-plaster, kort plas'.ter (not play'.ster). Black sticking plaster, once used by court ladies for beauty-spots.

Courtesan, ko'r'.tē.zan (not kur'.te.zan, nor kort'.e.zan). A woman of immodest character. (French courtisane.) (This word meant originally a "female courtier," and tells a sad tale of the past history of courts.)

Court (of justice), Court of Equity, plu. Courts of Equity; court-martial, plu. court-martials, sessions of the same court; courts-martial, different courts (mar'.shal).

Court. A paved way. (French court, curt, a short [cut].)

Court-yard. A yard before a house. (Latin cohors, gen. cohortis, a yard with outhouses for poultry, cattle, pigs, &c.)

Court (to woo), court'-ed (R. xxxvi.), court'-ing, court'-er.

"Court" (a palace or hall of justice), Fr. cour; Ital. corte; Lat. curia (from cura, care), where the "public cares" are attended to.

"Court" (to woo), Fr. faire la cour, to make a [love] suit, courtiser.

Courtesy, plu. courtesies, kor'.tēsy, plu. kor'.tē.siz (kur'.te.sy is nearly obsolete), civility.

Courtesy, plu. courtesies, kert'.sy, kert'.siz. Woman's act of reverence. A man's is a bow (rhyme with now).

Courtesy, kert'.sy (verb); courtesies, kert'.siz; courtesied, kert'.sid; courtesy-ing, kert'.sij.ing. To make a woman's act of reverence by bending the knee.

(-sy postfix, denotes an act. A "courtesy" is an act of reverence, similar to that which is used at court.)

Cousin, Cousin-german, Cozen. All pronounced kūz'n.

Cousin. The children of my aunt or uncle are my first cousins; the children of my great aunt or uncle are my second cousins; the children of my aunt or uncle by a second marriage are my step cousins.

"Step" is the Old English steop, an orphan, one parent being lost.

Cousin-german, plu. cousins-german. First cousins.

Latin germānus, of the same stock (germen, a branch).

Cozen, to cheat. (Italian cotzerie, cheating. Halliwell.)

"Cousin" French, a male cousin; cousine, a female cousin. We want a similar distinction; Latin consobrinus, a cousin.

Covenant, kūv'.ē.nant. A stipulation on stated terms.

Covenant-er, kūv'.e.nant.er. One who joins in a covenant.

French covenant, a contract; Latin conventum, an agreement (conventio, to come together [to make terms]).

Cover, kūv'.er, to overspread; covered (2 syl.), cover-ing.

Coverture, kūv'.er.tchur. Shelter, the state of a married woman who is under the "cover" of her husband.

French couvrir, to cover; couverture, not in the English sense, but meaning a cover for a book, &c. "Coverture" in French is abr-

Covert, kūv'ert, secret. Covet, kūv'.et, to desire eagerly.

Cov'ert, cov'ert-ly, cov'ert-ness. (French couvert.)

Covet, kūv'.et (see above); cov'et-ed (R. xxxvi.), cov'et-ing, cov'eting-ly; cov'et-er, one who desires wrongfully; covetous, kūv'.ēt.ūs (not kūv'.et.chus), greedy to obtain; covetous-ly, kūv'.ēt.ūs.ly; covetous-ness, kūv'.ēt.ūs.ness; covet-able, kūv'.ēt.ā.b'l, worthy to be wished for.

(Dean Alford says covetous and covetousness are "commonly mangled by our clergy" into "covetious" and "covetiousness."—Queen's English, p. 76.)

Latin cūpidus, greedy (from cūpio, to desire).

Covey, kūv'.y. A brood of partridges, &c. (Fr. couvée, a brood.)

Cow, plu. cows or kine. Cow rhymes with now (not coo).

(Of the sixty-eight words ending in "ow," ten monosyllables and two dissyllables have the "ou" sound, like "cow," and fifty-six the "o" sound like "grow." See Rule lix.)

Old English cū, plu. cý (= ky). Kine is a collective plural, ky-ein, corrupted into kine. The plural suffix -en is seen in ox-en.

Cow (to dispirit), cowed (1 syl.), cow-ing. (Danish kue, to subdue.)

Coward, kōw'.ard; cow'ard-ly, cow'ardli-ness (Rule xi.), cowardice, kōw'.ar.dis, want of courage. (ow as in now.)

French coward, cowardise, a corruption of culvard or culvert (culver, Old English culfre, a pigeon). In heraldry, coward means an animal with its tail between its legs. Latin cūlum vertēre.

Coxcomb, kox'.kōme, a fop; coxcombry, kox'.kome.ry (not cox-combery); coxcomical, kox'.kōm'.i.kāl, foppish.

The ancient licensed jesters were called coxcombs, because they wore a cock's comb in their caps.

Coy, shy, demure; coy'-ly, coy'-ness, coy'-ish (Rule xiii.), coy'ish-ly, coy'ish-ness (-ish added to adj. is diminutive).

Fr. coi; Lat. quies (from quies, rest; Gk. kēō, to lie down to sleep).

Cozen, to cheat. Cousin. a relative, (See Cousin.)

Crab, a crustacean, a wild apple, a machine; crabb'ed (2 syl.), unamiable; crabb'-ed-ly, crabb'-ed-ness (Rule i.)

"The crustacean," Old Eng. crabba; Lat. carāb[us]; Gk. karābōs.

"A morose person," Lat. crābro, a hornet or waspish person.

Crack. Excellent, to boast, to split, to make a sharp noise.

"In a crack" (instantly), French crac; Latin crepitu digitōrium.

Cracked (1 syl.), crack'-er, a small firework.

"Crack" (excellent), Lat. crepāre, to boast; Fr. craquer, to boast.

"Crack" (to split), Old Eng. crac[ian]; Germ. krach (n.); Fr. crac.

Crackle, krak'.l (dim. of "crack"); crackled, krak'.l'd; crackling, krak'.ling, part., also the skin of roast pork.

Cracknel, krak'.nel, a brittle cake. A corruption of the French croquignole (kro.kin.yol), from croquet, crisp.

("Take with thee ten loaves, and cracknels..." 1 Kgs. xiv. 3.)

Cradle, kray'.d'l, an infant's bed, to put into a cradle; cradled, kray'.d'ld; cradling, kray'.d'ling. ("Cradel" is older.)

Old English cradel; Greek krádao, to swing.

Craft, a trade, guile, a small ship. Crafty, kráf'.ty; cráf'ti-ly (Rule xi.), cráf'ti-ness, skill in device; cunning.

Old English craft. This word, like "cunning," had originally no reference to underhand dealing, but referred to skill in workmanship, knowledge of one's trade, contrivance, &c.

Crag, cragg'-ed (2 syl.), rugged; cragg'-ed-ness (3 syl.), Rule i.; cragg'-y, of a rugged character; cragg'i-ness, a craggy state; cragg'i-er (more craggy); craggi-est (most craggy.)

Welsh crraig, a crag; Greek krach[ia], a crag or rock.

Cram, crammed (1 syl.), cramm'-ing, cramm'-er (Rule i.)

Old Eng. cramm[ian], to stuff; past crammode, past part. crammod.

Cramp, a contraction of a muscle; v. cramped, kramp't.

Crampoons, cramp-irons for raising stones; crampons (in Bot.), the roots which serve as supports to ivy, &c.

Old Eng. hramma, a cramp; Fr. crampon, a crampon or crampoon.

Cranberry, plu. cranberries, krän'.ber.riz (not cramberry).

German kranbeere, the crane-berry, so called because the fruit-stalks, before the blossom expands, resemble the head and neck of a crane.

Crane (1 syl.), a bird, a lifting machine.

Old English crán; Welsh garan, the long-legged bird (from gar, the shanks, our "galter"). Heron or hern, is a variety of the same word. Greek gérânós; Latin grus.

Cranium, plu. crania, kray'.ní.um, plu. kray'.ní.äh, the skull; cranial, kray'.ní.al, pertaining to the skull.

Craniology, kray'.ní.ol''.o.gy, now called phrenology.

Craniologist, kray'.ní.ol''.o.gist, now called phrenologist.

Lat. cranium, the skull; Gk. krān'lon ("a" short in Lat., long in Gk.)

Crank (a machine), a conceit or twist of the mind; crank'y, crank'i-ness (R. xi.), liable to be upset, crotchety-ness.

Crankle, kran'.kl; crankled, kran'.k'ld; crank'ling (dim.)

"Cranky" (weak), German kränklich (kränk, sick).

"Crank" (a machine), French cran, a cog, crank, or notch.

Cranny, a chink; crannied, krän.nid (adj.), full of chinks.

French cran, a notch; Latin crena, a notch or split.

Crantara, krän.täh.räh. The fiery cross which formed the rallying symbol of the Scotch highlanders.

Gaelic crean tarigh, cross of shame; because disobedience to the summons incurred certain infamy.

Grape. A fabric. (French crêpe, from créper, to curl or wrinkle.)

Cratch, a rack, a manger. Scratch, a slight skin-wound.

"Cratch," Ital. craticcia, a rack or crib; Fr. creiche; Lat. crates, a hurdle.

"Scratch," German, kratze, v. kratzen, to scratch.

Crater, kray'.ter. The mouth of a volcano.

Latin crāter; Greek kratēr, a cup or bowl.

Craunch or Crunch, to crush with the teeth (not scrunch);
craunched (1 syl.), craunch'-ing; crunched, crunch'-ing.

Cravat, kra.vūt' (not krav'.at). A necktie.

French cravate, said to be from the Crabats or Croats, whose linen and muslin neck bands were introduced into France in 1636. We have, however, the Danish krave, a collar, and kravet, a little collar.

Crave, to long for; craved (1 syl.), crāv'-ing, crāv'-er (Rule xix.)
Old English crāf[ian] to implore; Welsh crefu, to crave.

Craven, kray'-ven. A coward.

In former times, says Blackstone, controversies were decided by an appeal to battle. If one of the combatants cried out Craven (i.e., I crave mercy) he was deemed a coward, and held in infamy for not defending his claim to the utmost.

Craw. The crop or first stomach of a bird.

Norse kraas, the crop or craw; Germ. kragen, the neck (our "scrag").

Crawfish. A corruption of écrevisse (French), a crustacean.

Latin carābus; Greek kārābos, a crab or lobster.

Crayon, kray'.on, a chalk for drawing. Crayons, chalks for drawing, drawings done in chalk. Crayoned (2 syl.)

French crayon (from craie, chalk; Latin crēta).

Craze (1 syl.), to distract; crazed (1 syl.), crāz'-ing, crāz'-y (Rule xix.), crāzi-ly; crāzi-ness (R. xi). Fr. ecraser, to crush.

Creak, kreek, to make a grating noise. Creek, a small bay.
Creak, creaked (1 syl.), creak'-ing.

Welsh crech, a screech, creg, hoarse; French criquer, to creak.
"Creek," Old English crecca, a bay or creek; French crique.

Cream, kreem (n.) (v. to skim); creamed (1 syl.), cream'-ing, cream'-y (adj.), cream'i-ness (R. xi.), cream-faced, pale.

Old English ream; French crème; Latin crēmor, cream.

Crease, krece, a mark made by a fold, to mark by a fold, &c.;
creased (1 syl.), creas'-ing, R. xix. (Welsh creithen, a scar.)

Creasote, kre'.ā.sote. A liquid obtained from coal-tar.

Greek kreas sōzō, I preserve meat (being an antiseptic).

Create, krē.ate', to make out of nothing; creāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), creāt'-ing (R. xix.); creāt'-or (R. xxxvii.); creative, krē.ā'tiv; creative-ly, creative-ness; creation, kre.ā'.shun.

Creature, kree'.tchur. Every created animal or thing.

Latin crēatio, crēator, crēātūra, a creature; crēare, to create.

Credence, kree'dence (not -dance), belief; credential; krē.den'.shal; credentials, -shalz, letters of testimony. Creed.

Credendum, plu. credenda, krē.den'.dāh. Articles of faith.

Credence-table. A small table to hold the bread and wine before consecration. (Ital. credenza, a shelf or buffet.)

- Credible, krěd' i. b' l (not -able), worthy of belief (Lat. crēdibilis); cred'ible-ness, cred'ibly, credibility, krěd' i. bil' i. ty.
 Credulous, krěd' u. lus; cred'ulous-ly, cred'ulous-ness, Latin crēdūlus. (The "e" is long in Latin.)
 Credulity, kre. dū. li. ty. Prone to believe. (Lat. crēdūlitas.)
 Fr. crédence, crédibilité, crédulité; Lat. crēdens, crēdere, to believe.
 Credit, krěd' it, trust, to trust; cred'it-ed (R. xxxvi.), cred'it-ing, cred'it-or, cred'it-able, cred'itable-ness, cred'itably.
 Credible, worthy of belief; creditable, praiseworthy.
 Credibly, trustworthily; creditably, praiseworthy.
 Cred'ibleness, probability; cred'itableness, estimation.
 Fr. crédit, v. créditer; Lat. crēdit, he trusts, crēditor, crēdo, to trust.
 Credulous, krěd' u. lus. (See Credence.)
 Creed. Articles of religious faith. (Lat. crēdo, I believe; Fr. crédo.)
 Creek, kreek (not krík), a small bay. Creak, a harsh noise.
 "Creek," Old Eng. crecca; Fr. crique. "Creak," Welsh creg, hoarse.
 Creep, past and p.p. crept, creep'-ing, creep'-ing-ly, creep'-er.
 Old English crēpian, past crēp, past part. cropan, to creep.
 Latin repo, to creep; Greek hērpō, to crawl.
 Cremation, kre. may' shun, a burning of the dead. (Lat. crēmatio.)
 Cremona, kre. mō. nah. Violins made by the Amati family and by Stradivarius of Cremona (Milan). See Cromorna.
 Creole, krě. ole. A Spanish American born of European parents.
 French creole, a West Indian; Spanish criollo (cria, a brood).
 The word means a "little nurseling" (criar, to nurse).
 Crepitate, krěp' i. tate, to crack; crepitāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), crepitāt-ing, crepitation, krěp' i. tay' shun, a crackling noise.
 French crépitation; Latin crēpitāre, to crackle (crēpo, to rattle).
 Crepuscule, kre. pūs. kule, twilight; crepus'cular (adj.)
 French crepuscule, crepusculaire; Latin crēpusculum, twilight (from crēpera [flux], doubtful light; -culum diminutive).
 Crescendo, plu. crescendos, kre. shen'. do, plu. kre. shen'. doze (Ital.)
 A mark (<) in music, to denote that the force is to increase.
 The contrary word is diminuendo and the mark (>).
 Crescent, kres'. sent, shaped like the "horned" moon; poetical for Turkey, a crescent being the national symbol; growing.
 Latin crescens, gen. crecentis, increasing.
 Cress, plu. cresses or cress. A spring vegetable.
 Old English cerse or cressa; French cresson; German kresse.
 Cresset, krěs'. sēt. A beacon-light, so called because it was originally surmounted by a little cross.
 French croisette (dim. of croix, a cross). It was by carrying about a "fiery cross" armies were at one time assembled in these islands.

Crest. An armorial device, a bird's comb, the cone of a helmet.

French creste now crête; Latin crista, a crest.

Cretaceous, kre.tay'.ce'us, chalky. (Latin crêta, chalk.)

Crevice, Crevis, Crevasse, krěv'.iss, krě.vece', krě.vass'.

Crevice, a chink. Crevis, a crayfish. Crevasse, a huge rent in a glacier, &c.

"Crevice" and "crevasse" French crevasse, a cranny, a chink.

"Crevis," Fr. écrevisse, a crayfish; Lat. cărăbus; Gk. kărăbōs.

Crew, kroo, a ship's company; past tense of crow. (See Crow.)

Crewel, fine worsted yarn. Cruel, inhuman (both crew.el.)

(Shakespeare speaks of "cruel garters."—K. Lear, ii. 4.)

"Crewel," corruption of clewel; clew, a ball of thread; Old English clīwe, a hank or ball of worsted. "Cruel," Latin crudelis, cruel.

Crib, a stall for cattle, a bed for infants, to pilfer; cribbed (1 syl.), cribb'-ing, cribb'-er (R. i.); cribb'-age, a game at cards.

Old English crib, a stall or crib; Welsh cribdaail, pillage, extortion.

Cribble, krib'b'l, a corn-sieve; cribbled, krib'b'ld; cribbling.

(The double b [as if from "crib"] is a blunder.)

Fr. crible, a riddle; v. cribler; Lat. cribrare, to sift; cribellum, a sieve.

Crick, stiffness in the neck. Creek, a cove. Creak, a harsh noise.

"Crick," Welsh crig, a crick; Old English hræc, rheumatic pain.

"Creek," Old English crecca. "Creak," Welsh creg, hoarse.

Crick'et, an insect, a game. Crick'et-er, one who plays cricket.

"Cricket" (the insect), Welsh criciad; Fr. criquet; Lat. a-crid-ium.

"Cricket" (the game), Old English eric, a club, and -et diminutive.

Crier, kri'er, one who weeps; cries (1 syl.), cried (1 syl.), cry'-ing.

Cryer. The town-cryer or bellman. (See Cry.)

Crime, sin ("i" long in the simple, but short in all its compounds).

Criminal, krim'.i.nāl; crim'inal-ly, crim'inal'ity; criminous, krim'.i.nūs; crim'inous-ly.

Criminate, krim'.i.nate; crim'ināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), crim'ināt-ing (Rule xix.), crim'ināt-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.)

Criminatory, krim'.i.na.t'ry. Involving crime.

(In Latin the "cri-" is long in every instance.)

Latin crimen, crimīnalis, crimīnatio, crimīnātor, crimīnōsus, &c.

Crim. Con. Contraction of "Criminal Conversation," meaning adultery. Crim. Con. actions cannot now be brought.

Crimp, to frizzle; a decoy; to decoy [sailors and fleece them].

"Crimp" (to frizzle), Old English ge-crympt, curled; Welsh crimfio.

"Crimp" (a decoy), the same word, meaning "to pinch or squeeze."

To "crimp" a collar is to pinch it into little furrows.

Crimson, krim'.z'n, a colour; crim'soned (2 syl.), crim'son-ing.

Italian cremesino (from kermes, the cochineal insect).

Cringe, krɪnj, to fawn with servility; cringed (1 syl.), cring'-ing, cring'-er (Rule xix.), cringes, krɪnj'.ez.

Old English cring[an], or cring[an], to cringe, to fawn.

Crinkle, krɪn'.k'l, to run in bends. Crinkle, krɪn'.g'l, a loop.

Danish krinkel-krog, a place with tortuous ways.

Crinoline, krɪn'.o.lɪn (not krɪn'o.lɪn, nor krɪn'.o.lɛn).

French crinoline (from crin, hair; Latin crinis linum, hair linen).

(An ill-formed word, which ought to mean "reddish linen," from crinon, a reddish lily. "Crinis" cannot make crino.)

Cripple, krɪp'.p'l, one who is lame, to maim; crip'pled (2 syl.); crippling, krɪp'.plɪŋ (O. E. crepel, a creeper, v. creóp[an]).

Crisis, plu. crises, krɪ'.sɪs, krɪ'.seɪz. A decisive or turning-point.

Latin crisis; Greek krisis (from krino, to judge). Hypocrátēs said that all diseases had their tidal days, when physicians could "judge" what turn they would take. (First syllable short in Lat.)

Crisp, brittle, to curl; crisped, krɪspt; crisp'-ing, crisp'-ness.

Old English crisp; Latin crispus, frizzled.

Criterion, plu. criteria, krɪ'.tee'.rɪ.ɔn, krɪ'.tee'.rɪ.ʌh. A standard by which judgment may be formed.

Greek kritērion, means of judging (from kritēs, a judge. Short i.)

Critic, krɪt'ɪk; critical, krɪt'ɪ.kəl; critic'ally, crit'ical-ness, criticise, krɪt'ɪ.sɪz; crit'icised (3 syl.), crit'icis-ing (R.xix.), crit'icis-er; criticism, krɪt'ɪ.sɪzəm; critique, krɪ'.teek; criticisable, krɪt'ɪ.sɪz'ə.b'l, open to criticism.

Fr. critique; Lat. criticus; Gk. kritikós (from krinó, to judge).

Croak, krōke (like a frog). Crook, a shepherd's staff.

Croaked (1 syl.), croak'-ing; croak'-er, one who grumbles.

Old Eng. cracel[an], to croak; Lat. crōcio; Gk. krōzō, to croak.

Crochet, Crocket, Croquet, krō'.sha, krok'.et, krō'.ky.

Crochet, krō'.sha; crocheted, krō'.shed; crochet-ing, krō'.sha.ɪŋ, fancy-work done with a hooked needle.

Also (a term used in fortification.)

Crocket, krōk'.et (a term used in architecture.)

Croquet, krō'.ky, a game; v. croqueted, krō'.kade, &c.

"Crochet," French crochet (croc, a hook, and the dim. -et).

"Crocket," French crochet (in Arch.), a crocket.

"Croquet," French bâton armé d'un croc (Du Cange).

Crock, an earthen pitcher. Crock-ery, krōk'.e.ry, earthenware.

Old Eng. croc, a pitcher; Welsh crochan, a pot; crochem, pottery.

Crocket, krōk'.et (in Arch.) French crochet. (See Crochet.)

Crocodile, krōk'.o.dɪl (not krōk'.o.dɪll), a reptile of the lizard kind. Crocodilea, krōk'.o.dɪl'.e.əh, the crocodile order.

Crocodilean, krōk'.o.dɪl'.e.ən (adj. of crocodile).

Latin crocodilus, crocodilea; Greek krōkōdeílōs, a lizard.

("Crocodilea," not "crocodilia," which means thistles.—Plin. 27, 41.)

Crocus, plu. crocuses, krō'.kūs, krō'.kūs.ěz; croceous, krō'.se.ūs.

Lat. crōcus, plu. crōci, the saffron flower; Gk. krōkōs, the crocus.

Cromlech, krōm'.lēk. A huge stone supported by uprights.

Welsh cromlech (crom llech, an incumbent flag-stone).

Cromorna, krō.mor'.nah (not cromona). An organ stop.

Cremona, kre.mō'.nah, a violin. (See Cremona.)

French cromorne; Italian cromorno; German krump-horn.

Crone, an old woman. (Irish crion, withered; criona, old.)

Crook, a shepherd's staff. Croak, krōke (like frogs). Crock (q.v.)

Crook, to bend into a curve; crooked, krookt; crook'-ing.

Crooked, krook'.ed (adj.), not straight; crooked-ly, krook'.ed.ly; crooked-ness, krook'.ed.ness.

"Crook," Welsh croca, tortuous, crocau, to make crooked.

"Croak," Old Eng. cracel[an]; Latin crōctō, crōctio; Greek krōzō.

"Crook," Old Eng. croc, a pitcher; Welsh crochan, crochennu, pottery.

Crop, the produce of a field; the craw of a bird; to lop or reap.

Crop, cropt or cropped (1 syl.), cropp'-ing, cropp'-er (R. i.), a pigeon with large craw; crop'ful (Rule viii.); to crop-out, to shew itself on the surface; to crop up, to reappear.

Old English crop or cropp, a crop, a craw, a top, whence to lop or reap; Welsh cropa; Low Latin croppa, a crop of corn.

Croquet, krō'.ka, a game. Crochet, krō'.sha, work done with a hooked needle. Crocket, krōk'.et (in Arch.)

"Croquet," croque, croquebois, croquet: "Bâton armé d'un croc, ou qui est recourbé" (Du Cange, viii., p. 115).

"Crochet" and "Crocket," French crochet, dim. of croc, a hook.

Crosier, krō'.zher. A bishop's staff surmounted with a cross.

Low Latin crocia, crociarius, one who carries a crosier.

Cross. A gibbet, ill-tempered, to pass over, to cancel.

Cross, plu. crosses, kros'.sěz. A gibbet made thus (†, X, +).

Cross, ill-tempered; cross-ly, cross'-ness, cross-grained.

Cross (v.), crost or crossed (1 syl.), cross'-ing, cross'-es.

Crossette, krōs.set' (in Arch.); cross'-let, a little cross.

Crosswise (not crossways), adv., transversely.

Welsh croes, a crucifix, transverse; Latin crux, gen. crucis.

"Cross" (ill-tempered), contraction of the Fr. courroucé, angered.

Crotch, a hook or fork. Crutch, a staff for the lame.

Crotch, crotched (1 syl.), hooked; crotch'-et, a note in Music, a whim; crotch'-et-y, full of whims; crotch'-et-ed.

French crochet, a little hook, dim. of croc, a hook; croche, a note in music; crocheter, to make "crochets" for porters.

Crōton-Oil. Oil expressed from the Croton Tiglium.

Crouch, crouched (1 syl.), crouch'-ing. Crutch. (See Crotch.)

Welsh crwcau, to bow, crycydu, to squat. Old Eng. cruc, a crook.

Croup. Inflammation of the larynx, &c.; the buttocks of a horse.

French croup (the disease), croupe (the buttocks).

Croupier, kroo'.pi.ēr or kroo'.pi.a, the assistant of a gaming table. Crupper, krup'.per, a strap of a saddle.

"Croupier" sits at the "croup" or bottom of the table.

Crow, a bird, an iron lever, to cry like a cock, to triumph; crow, past crew [crowed, 1 syl.], past part. crowed [crōwn].

Old English crāw, a crow; Greek korónē, a crow.

"Crow-bar," Gk. kōrónē, a plough beam; Welsh croes-bar, a cross-bar.

"Crow" (verb), Old English crāw[an], past creow, p.p. crāwen.

Latin crōcio; Greek krōzō, to crow.

Crowd, krouđ (to rhyme with loud), a throng; a fiddle.

Crowd (verb), crowd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), crowd'-ing.

Old English cryđ[an], past credđ, p.p. ge-crōden; credđ, a crowd.

"Crowd" (a fiddle), Welsh crwth, a crouth or violin.

Crown (to rhyme with town), crowned (1 syl.), crown'-ing.

French couronne; Latin cōrōna; Greek kōrónē, a garland.

Crucial, krū'.sī.āl (not crū'.shē.āl), severe, crosswise.

Lord Bacon says that two different diseases may run parallel for a time, but must ultimately cross each other.

The point where they cross will tell their true nature.

Hence "crucial" means that which tests.

Crucible, krū'.sī.b'l. A vessel for melting metals, &c.

Low Latin crucibulum, the little tormentor (from crūcio, to torment), because the metals were "tortured" by fire to yield up their secrets.

Crucifix, krū'.sī.fix. (Latin crūcifixus, fixed to the cross.)

Crucify, krū'.sī.fy, to fix to a cross; crucifies, krū'.sī.fize; crucified, krū'.sī.fide; crucify-er, but crucify-ing. (R. xi.)

Crucifix; crucifixion, krū.sī.fik'.shun, hung on a cross.

Latin crūcifigo, supine crūcifixum (cruci figere, to fix to a cross); French crucifix, crucifixion, crucifier, to crucify.

Crude, krood, not complete; crude'-ly, crude'-ness;

crudity, plu. crudities, krū'.dī.tiz, immaturity (Rule xi.)

French crudité; Latin crūdus, crūdītas; Greek krūdēs, that is, krūds eīdōs, resembling cold, hence uncooked, raw, &c.

Cruel, krū'.el, inhuman. Crewel, fine worsted (see Crewel).

Cruel'-ly; cruel'-ty, plu. cruelties, krū'.el.tiz, inhumanity.

French cruel; Latin crūdēlis, cruel; crūdēlitas, cruelty.

Cruet, krū'.et. A glass "castor." (Fr. cruche, a glass vessel, -et dim.)

(There is no word in French for "cruet-stand," or a "set of castors.")

Cruise, Cruse, Crews, all pronounced krūze.

Cruise, to rove about the sea; cruised, krūzd; cruis-ing, krū'.zing; cruis-er, krū'.zer, a cruising ship. (Rule xix.)

Cruse, a small cup. (French cruche, a jug.)

Crews, plural of crew, a ship's company.

French croiser, to cruise or cross; German kreuzzug, kreuzen.

Crumb, krüm, a morsel. (The "b" is an error.) Crumbed, krümd; crumb-ing, krüm'ing, breaking into crumbs.

Crummy, krüm'my. (If "crumb" is accepted, this adj. ought to be crumb-y. Either "crumb" or "crummy" is wrong.)

Crumble, krüm'b'l, to break into crumbs; crumbled, krüm'b'ld; crumbling, krüm'bling; crumbler.

Old English crume, a fragment. (N.B. crumb means "crooked.")

German krume, a crumb; krumen, to crumble.

Crumple, krüm'p'l, to ruffle; crumpled, krüm'p'ld; crumpling, krüm'pling; crumpler, krüm'pler, one who crumples.

Old English crump, wrinkled; crumb, crooked, awry.

Crunch. To crush between the teeth. (See Craunch.)

Crupper. A strap which passes under the tail of a horse.

Croupier, kroo'.př.cr. An assistant at a gaming table.

Both from French croupe, the rump, a crupper, &c.

Crusade, plu. crusades, krü-sāde, krü-sādz. "Holy" wars.

Crusade (v.), crusād-ed (R. xxxvi.); crusād-ing (R. xix.); crusād-er; crusādo (a Portuguese coin, with a cross).

Cruse, krūze, a small bottle. Cruise, to rove about the sea.

Crews, plu. of crew. (Fr. cruche, a jug; creuset, a crucible.)

Crush, to squeeze; crushed (1 syl.), crush'-ing, crush'-er.

Italian cruscio, to crush; Latin crucio, to torment.

Crust, the external coat; crust'-ed (R. xxxvi.), crust'-ing; crust-y, hard, morose; crust'i-ly, crust'i-ness (Rule xi.)

Latin crusta, crust; verb crustāre, to cover with a crust.

"Crusty," morose, is archaic crus, wrathful; cross, corrupted into curst, a contraction of the French courroucé, angry.

Crustacean, plu. crustaceans, krūs.tay'.sč.anz, one of the "crab" family. Crustacea, krūs.tay'.se.ah, the crustacean class.

Crustaceous, krūs.tay'.sč.us (adj.); crustaceology, krus.-tay'-se.ol'-o-gy, a description of crustaceans.

French crustacé; Latin crusta [animals inclosed in] a shell.

("Crustaceology" is a vile hybrid. "Ostracology" would be a Greek compound, but "crustaceology" is half Latin and half Greek.)

If ostracian had been adopted instead of "crustacean," it would have been far better.

Crutch, a staff for the lame. Crotch, a hook, a fork; crutched-friars, krutcht fri'ars (not crotched-friars), friars badged with a cross. (Latin crux, cruciātus).

"Crutch," Ital. croccia, a crutch. "Crotch," Fr. crochet, a hook.

Cry, cries, krīze; cried, krīde; cry'-ing; cri'-er, one who weeps.

Cry, plu. cries (1 syl.), street cries; cry-er, the bellman.

Welsh cri, a cry, a clamour; French crier, to cry.

Crypt, krīpt, the underground compartment of a church; cryptic or cryptical, krīp'.tř.cāl, secret, hidden.

Latin crypta, a vault; Greek krupť (kruptó, to hide).

Crypto- (Greek prefix). Secret, concealed.

Cryptogamia, křip'-to.gám''-i.ăh (in Bot.) Plants, like mushrooms, mosses, &c., in which the stamens and pistils are not manifest. Cryptogamic, křip'-to.gám''-ik (adj.)

Greek kruptos gamos, concealed marriage.

Cryptography, křip.tög'.ră.fy. The art of writing in cypher.

Cryptographer, křip.tög'.ră.fer. One who writes in cypher.

Cryptographic or cryptographical, křip'.to.grăf''-i.kăl.

Greek kruptos graphê, secret writing.

Cryptology, křip.töl'.o.gy, secret language; cryptologist.

Greek kruptos logos, secret language.

Crystal, křis'.tal (not chrystal nor cristal) n. and adj.

Latin crystallum; Greek krustallos; French cristal (wrong).

Crystalline, křis'.tăl.lîn, clear as crystal. Milton more correctly calls the word křis.tăl.lîn. (See "Paradise Lost.")

Latin crystallinus; Greek krustallînos, like crystal.

Crystallize, křis'.tăl.lize (R. xxxii.); crys'tallized (3 syl.); crys'talliz-ing, crys'talliz-er (R. xix.); crystalliz'-able, crystallization, křis'-tal-î.zay''-shun, congelation into crystals. Greek krustallizo, to shine like crystal.

Crystallography, křis'.tăl.tög'.ră.fy, science of crystallization; crystallographer, křis'.tăl.tög''.ra.fer, one skilled in the above; crystallographic, křis'.tăl.lo.grăf'ik; crystallographical.

Greek krustallos graphê, a writing about crystals.

Crystalloid, křis'.tăl.loid. (Gk. krustallos eidos, like crystal.)

Cub, kűb, a young fox, bear, &c.; to bring forth a cub; cubbed (1 syl.), cubb-ing (Rule i.). Cube, kűbe, q.v.

Cube, kűbé, a solid body with six equal sides. A number multiplied twice into itself, as $3 \times 3 \times 3 = 27$, whence 27 is the "cube" of 3, and 3 is the "cube-root" of 27.

Cubed, kűbed (1 syl.); cub-ing, kűbé-ing (Rule xix.)

Cubic, kű.bik (adj.); cubical, kű.bî.kăl; cu'bical-ly; cubiform, kű.bî.form; cuboid, kű.boid, or cuboid'-al, an imperfect cube. (Greek kűbôs eidos, like a cube.)

Cubiture, kű.bî.tchur. The cubic contents of a body.

Latin cubus, a solid square, a die; Greek kűbôs.

Cubit, kű.bit, 20 inches, the length of a man's arm from the elbow to the end of the middle finger. Cubital, kű.bî.tăl (adj.); cubited, kű.bî.ed.

A gallows 50 cubits high (Esther vii. 9).

A gallows of 50 cubits high (Esther v. 14).

In the former of these sentences "which is" must be supplied: "Behold a gallows which is 50 cubits high." The latter is not good English.

Latin cubitum, a cubit; Greek kűbîton (cubo, to recline at table resting on the elbow, cubitus, the elbow).

Cuckoo, plu. cuckoos, kook'.ko, kook'.kōze (Rule xlii.)

French coucou; Latin cūcūlus; Greek kokkeuz, a cuckoo.

Cuckold, kūk'.kold. A husband whose wife is faithless to him.

Cuckoldy, kūk'.kōl.dy (adj.); cuckoldom, kūk'.kōl.dum, the state of being a cuckold; cuckoldry, kūk'.kōl.dry.

This word is not derived from cuckoo (Latin cūcūlus), but from cur-rūca, the bird which hatches the cuckoo's egg. The French word is cocu not coucou, a cuckoo. The Old English suffix -ol [-old] means "of the nature of," "like," "full of"; so that "cuckold" is currūc'-old, like a bird which hatches an egg not its own.

Cucumber, kū'.kūm.ber (not koo'-kūm.ber, nor kow'.kūm.ber).

French coucombre; Latin cūcūmer. (Varro.)

Cuddle, kūd'.d'l, to fondle; cud'dled (2 syl.), cud'dling, cud'dler.

Welsh cueddol, fondly loving; cuedd, fondness.

Cud'dy. A ship's cabin. (Welsh cauedig, an inclosure.)

Cudgel, kūd'.jēl, a knobbed stick, to beat; cud'gelled (2 syl.); cud'gell-ing, cud'gell-er. (Rule iii., -EL.)

Welsh cwg, a knob; cwgyn, a knuckle; with -el dim.

Cuff, a wristband, to box; cuffed, kūft; cuff'-ing, cuff'-er.

(For monosyllables in f, l, s, see Rule v.)

Welsh cwf, something put over another thing, hence cwfl, a hood.

"Cuff" (to strike); Greek koptō, to strike; kopē, a striking.

Cui bono, kī bo'.no (Lat.) What's the good of it? Who will be the better for it? Literally, "For what good?"

Cuirass, kwe.rās' (not ku.ras'). A metal breastplate.

French cuirasse (from cuir, leather, of which breastplates were originally made); Latin corium, a skin or hide.

Cuisine, kwe.zeen'. The cooking department. (French.)

Cul de sac, plu. culs de sac (not cul de sacs), kū'd sāk (French). A blind alley. "The bottom of a bag."

-cule, -cle, -kle (dim. Lat. suffix -cul[us]), added to nouns.

Culinary, kū'.lī.nā.ry (not kūl'.i.ner'ry nor kū'.nī.ler'ry). Pertaining to the cooking department.

Latin cūlīna, a kitchen; cūlinārius, culinary.

Cull, to pluck; culled (1 syl.), cull'-ing, cull'-er (Rule v.)

Fr. cueillir, to pluck; Lat. colligo (con [col] līgo, to gather together).

Cullender better colander, kūl'.an.der. A strainer.

Latin colans, straining; cōlum, a strainer. "Cullender" is quite indefensible, it is wrong in three places.

Cullis (bad French, for coulis). Strained gravy. (See above.)

Culm, kūlm. Stalk of corn, anthracite shale.

"Culm" (stalk of corn), Lat. cūlmus, straw; Gk. kālāmōs, a reed.

"Culm" (shale); Welsh cwlm; Old English cōl, coal.

Culminate, kŭl'.mĭ.nate. To reach the highest point.

Cul'mināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), cul'mināt-ing (Rule xix.)

Culmination, kŭl'.mĭ.nay''shun. The highest point.

French culmination, culminer; Latin culmen, the vertex.

Culpable, kŭl'.pă.b'l, blamable; culpably, culpable-ness; culpability, kŭl'.pa.bĭl''.i.ty, blame-worthiness.

Latin culpābilis (from culpa, fault, blame); French culpabilité.

Culprit, kŭl'.prĭt. One guilty of a crime.

Latin culpa reātus, one accused of a crime.

Cultivate, kŭl'.tĭ.vāte, to till; cultivāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), cul'ti-vāt-ing (R. xix.), cul'tivāt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.); cultivable, kŭl'.ti.va.b'le (Fr. cultiver, cultivable); cultivation, kŭl'.tĭ.vay''shun, tillage, refinement.

French cultiver; Italian coltivare, coltivazione, coltivatore; Latin cultus, tillage. "Cultivation" is one of the few words in -tion which is not French.

Culver, a pigeon. (Old English culfre; Latin cōlumba, a dove.)

Culverin, kŭl'.vē.rĭn. A long slender gun. (Fr. couleuvine.)

From couleuvre, a snake; Latin cōlūber; Italian colubrina. The resemblance of this word to "culver" is merely accidental.

Culvert, kŭl'.vert. An arched passage under a road, &c.

French couvert, formerly culvert, v. couvrir, to cover.

Cum'ber, to overload; cumbered, kŭm'.berd; cum'ber-ing, cum'ber-er; cumbersome, kŭm'.ber.sŭm (-some, Old Eng. suffix meaning "full of"); cumbersome-ness, cumbrous, kŭm'.brŭs; cum'brous-ly, cum'brous-ness.

French encombre, v. encombrer; Latin cūmŭlare, to heap up.

Cumbrian, kŭm'.brĭ.an (adj.), applied in Geol. to a system of slaty rocks developed in "Cumbria," that is Cumberland.

Cumberland, properly Combra-land or Comba-land, the land of valleys; comba, valleys or coombs (Celtic). Welsh cwm.

Cumulus, kŭm'.ŭ.lŭs (not kŭ'.mulus), applied to clouds when they look like mountains. (Latin cūmŭlus, a pile.)

Cumulo-stratus, kŭm'.ŭ.lo strā'.tŭs (not kŭ'.mu.lo strak'.-tŭse'), the cumulus cloud flattened.

Cirro-cumulus, sĭr'ro kŭm'.ŭ.lŭs, small cumulous clouds.

If cūmŭlus is from the Greek kŭma, a wave, the length of the u was changed when the word was adopted in the Latin language.

-cund (a Latin termination denoting "fulness:" as fa-cund, full of speech ("fāri," to speak); fe-cund, full of fruit ("feo," a foetus); jo-cund, full of joy ("Jove," "juvo," to delight); vere-cund, bashful ("vēreor," to fear); rubi-cund, full of redness ("ruber," red).

Cuneal, kū'.ně.ăl, wedge-formed; cuneate, kū'.ně.ate (adj.)

Cuneated, kū'.ně.ă.ted, tapering like a wedge; cuneiform, kū'.ně'.i.form, applied to certain letters made like wedges. They are found in old Babylonian and Persian inscriptions. (Latin cuneus, a wedge; French cunéiform.)

Cun'ning, artful; cun'ning-ly, cun'ning-ness. Originally these words denoted "skill derived from knowledge."

Old Eng. cunn[an], to know how and be able to do. (Ken and can.)

Cup, kŭp, a drinking vessel, part of a flower, to scarify; cupped, kŭpt; cupp'-ing, cupp'-er (R. i.); cupboard, kŭb'.b'rd; cupful, plu. cupfuls (not cupsful). Two "cups full" would mean two cups filled full; but two "cupfuls" would mean a cupful repeated twice.

Old English cuppa; Latin cupa or cuppa, a cup or tub.

Cupidity, kŭ.pŭd'.i.ty, greed. (Lat. cŭpŭditas; Fr. cupidité.)

Cupola, plu. cupolas, kŭ'.pŏ.lah, kŭ'.pŏ.làhz (not kŭ'.pŏ'.lah nor cupulo). Italian cupola, from cupo, deep.

Cupreus, kŭ'.prĕ.us (not cuprius), coppery; cuprite, kŭ'.prĭt, red oxide of copper; cupriferous, kŭ'.prĭf'.e.rŭs, yielding copper.

Latin cupreus, from cuprum, copper.

Cur, kŭr, a degenerate dog; curr'-ish (Rule i.), like a cur (-ish added to nouns means "like," but added to adj. it is dim.)

Welsh cor, a dwarf; Irish gyr, a dog; Dutch korre, a housedog.

Curable, kŭ'.ra.b'l; curability, kŭ'.ra.bĭl'.i.ty. (See Cure.)

Curaçoa, kŭ'.ra.so', a liqueur. Curassoe or Curassow, kŭ.răs'.so, a South American bird, like a turkey.

Curaçoa is made from Curaçoa oranges. The Curaçoa Islands are near Venezuela. French curaçao.

Curate, kŭ'.rate. A clergyman's licensed clerical assistant.

Curacy, plu. curacies, kŭ'.ra.sĭz. The parish, &c., of a curate.

Curator, kŭ.ray'.tor. One who has the charge of something.

Latin curātor, curātio (from cūra, care).

Curb, kurb; curbed (1 syl.), curb'-ing, curb-stone.

French courbe, a curb; courber, to bend; Latin curvus, crooked.

Curd, kurd; curd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), curd'-ing, curd'-y.

Curdle, kŭr'-d'l; curdled, kŭr'.d'ld; curdling, kurd'.ling.

Welsh crwd, a round lump; archaic crud and crudle. The old form is the more correct. (Latin crudus, crude.)

Cure, kure; cured (1 syl.), cur-ing, kŭre'.ing; cur-er, kure'.er; cur-able, kŭ'.ră.b'l; curable-ness; curability, kŭ'.ra.bĭl'.i.ty, possibility of being cured; curative, kŭ'.ra.tĭv.

French cure, curatif, curer (v.); Latin cūra, cūrābilis.

Curfew, kur'fu. A bell rung in former times at 8 o'clock p.m., to announce that it was bed-time.

French couvre-feu [time to] cover-fire. Where wood is burnt the ashes at bed-time are thrown over the logs; and next morning the whole is easily rekindled by drawing the blower down. In some places a sort of meat-cover is put over the logs.

Curious, kūr'ri.ūs, inquisitive, remarkable; cu'rious-ly, cu'rious-ness; curiosity, plu. curiosities, kūr'ri.ōs'itēz, a rarity, &c.; curioso, plu. curiosos, kūr'ri.ō'so, kūr'ri.ō'soze, one fond of collecting curiosities. (Rule xlii.)
(In the sing. num. "curiosity" means also "inquisitiveness.")

Latin cūriōsus, cūriōstas; Italian curioso (from cura, care).

Curl, curled, kurl'd; curl'-ing, making curls, a game; curl'-er, plu. curl'-ers, a player at the game called "curling," curling-ly; curl'-y; cur'li-ness (Rule xi.)

Welsh cwr, a circle, with -l dim.; Latin circūlus, a little circle; Welsh cwr; Old Eng. circul; Lat. circūlus; Gk. kirkōs, a circle.

Curlew, kur'.lu. A sort of snipe. (French courlieu.)

Curmudgeon, kur.mud'.jun. A churlish fellow, a miser.

Old English ceorl-mōdigan, churl-minded or tempered.

Currant, kur'rant, a fruit. Current, kur'rent, a stream.

"Currant," a corruption of Corinth, the "Corinthian grape."
"Current," Latin currens, gen. currentis, running [water, &c.]

Currency, kur'ren.sy, current coin; current, kur'rent, v.s.

Curricie, kur'ri.k'l. An open carriage, with two wheels.

Curriculum, kur rik'.ū.lum: A course of study.

Latin curriculum, a race course (curro, to run, and dim. -culum).

Curry, kur'ry, to dress leather; curried, kur'rid; curries, kur'riz; cur'ri-er, one who dresses leather (R. xi.), but courier, koo'ri.er, an express messenger. (Fr. courrier.)

Curry, to clean a horse; to curry favour, a corruption of curry fauvel, to clean the bay-horse; currycomb.

("Curry" ought to be spelt cory. "Currier" ought to have only one r (corier), and "courier" ought to have double r (courrier). Latin "curro," to run.)

French corroger, to curry; corrogeur; Latin cōrium, a hide.

Curry, a condiment, a food prepared with curry; curried, kur'rid; curry-ing, kur'ry.ing; curry-powder.

The mixture invented by James Curry.

Curse, kurse; cursed (1 syl.) or curst, curs'-ing. (Rule xix.)

The adjective is curst or cursed, kur'-sed; cur'sed-ly (3 syl.), cur'sed-ness (3 syl.)

Old English curs (noun), curs[ian], to curse; cursod, cursed.

Cursive, kur'siv, fluent; cursive-ly, cursive-ness. (Rule xvii.)

Cursory, kur'sōry (adj.), superficial; cursori-ly (adv.) R. xi.; cursori-ness; cursor, kur'sītor, a chancery officer.

French cursive; Latin cursōrius (from curso, to run about).

Curst, angry, a corruption of curs, cross, whence "crusty."

"Curst" cows [angry cows] have curt horns [short horns].

French courroucer, to anger; courroux, angry, cross (crouce cross, and c'urce curs corrupted into curst).

Curt, kurt, short, abrupt; curt'-ly, curt'-ness. (Latin curtus.)

Curt. A contraction of current, meaning the "present [month]."

The month past is ultimo, the month to come is proximo.

"Ultimo" and "proximo" are nouns. We say the 5th ultimo or proximo; but "current" is an adj. and must have the word "month" expressed: as the current month.

Currente calamo (Lat.) kur.rēn'te kāl'a.mo. Off hand (applied to composition). Literally "with a running pen."

Curtail, kur.tail', to cut short; curtailed' (2 syl.), curtail'-ing, curtail'-er (French court tailer, to cut short).

Curtain, kur'tin; curtained, kur'tind; curtain-ing, kur'tin.ing.

French courtine; Latin cortīna, a curtain.

Curtsy, plu. curtsies, kurt'sy, kurt'siz; curtsied, kurt'sēd; curtsy-ing, curtsi-er, one who makes a curtsy. Also spelt, but less correctly, curtsey, plu. curtseys, curtseyed (2 syl.), curtsey-ing, curtsey-er. (See Courtesy.)

French courtoisie, courtesy, the manners of the court.

Curve, a bend, to bend; curved, kurvd; curv'-ing (Rule xix.); curvature, kur'va.tchur; curvated, kur'va.tēd.

Latin curvāre, to curve; curvātūra, curvātus, bent.

Curvet, kur'vet; curvet-ed (Rule xxxvi.); curvet-ing.

French courbette; Latin curvāre, to bend. In a "curvet," the horse bends his body together and springs out.

Cushion, koosh'n (not kūsh'n), a pad to sit on; cushioned (2 syl.), cushion-ing; cushion-et, a little cushion.

French coussin, a cushion; coussinet; German kissen, a cushion.

Custard, kus'trd. A food, a slap on the hand with a stick.

"Custard" (the food), derivation uncertain, cus is a cow and may account for the first syllable.

"Custard" (a slap) is a corruption of custid, Latin custis, a club.

Custody, kūs'tōdy, protection, keeping; custodian, kūs.tō'di.an, one who has the custody of something; custos, kūs'tōs, as custos rōtūlōrum, keeper of the rolls.

Latin custōdia, custody; custos, a custodian.

Custom, kūs'tōm; custom-er, one who frequents a shop; customary, kūs'tōm.āry, usual; customari-ly (adv.)

Italian costume, costumare, customary; Spanish costumbre.

Cut, past cut, past part. cut. Cut, a wound, to wound, a print, a make-up in dress, to divide a pack of cards; cutt'-er, one who cuts, a boat, a vessel with one mast; cutt'-ing, dividing, sarcastic; cutting-ly (Rule i.)

Derivation uncertain. Perhaps a corruption of cutt, Latin curtus, short; curto, to shorten. There is the Welsh word cwtan, to shorten.

Cutaneous, kū.tay'.ně.ūs. Pertaining to the skin.

Cuticle, kū.tī.k'l, the scarf-skin; cuticular, kū.tīk'.u.lar.

French cutané, cutaneous; cuticule, the cuticle. Latin cutis, the skin; cuticula, the cuticle; cuticulāris, cuticular.

Cutlass, kūt'.lās. A sword. (French couteclas; Latin cuttellus.)

Cutler, a maker of knives, &c.; cut'ler-y, kūt'.le.ry.

French couteilier, a cutler; couteillerie (3 syl.), cutlery. Latin culler, a knife; cuttellus, a little knife.

Cutlet, kūt'.let. (French côtelette; Latin cuttello, to cut small.)

Cuttle-fish, a mollusc. (Old Eng. cudele [fisc]; Germ. kuttel-fisch.)
(From kuttel (guts), referring to the bladder under the throat.)

Cwt., that is C (100) wt. (weight), pronounced hundred-weight.

"C" is the initial letter of the Latin centum, a hundred.

-cy (French suffix -cie), added to abstract nouns.

-cy (Lat. suffix -e[us] or -t[us]), denoting "office, state, condition."

Cyanate, si'.ā.nate, cyanide, cyanite, cyanosite.

Cyanate, si'.ā.nate, a salt (cyanic acid and a base. If potash is the base, the "salt" is cyanate of potash).

(-ate denotes a "salt," from the union of an acid and a base.)

Cyanide, si'.ā.nide, a compound of cyan'ogen and a base. Thus, if iron is the base, the compound is "cyanide of iron." (-ide, Greek eidos, resembling kuānos.)

Cyanite, si'.ā.nite, an azure blue garnet.

(-ite, in Geol., denotes a stone, or something resembling a stone, as ammon-ite, cyan-ite.)

Cyanosite, si.an'.ō.site, blue vitriol, native sulphate of copper.

Greek kuānos-ite, a blue stone-like substance.

Cyanogen, si.an'.o.jen, a gas which burns with a deep blue flame (Gk. kuānos gennao, I produce a deep-blue [flame]).

Cyanosis, si.an'.ō.sīs, a disease characterized by blueness of the skin. (Greek kuānos nōsos, the blue disease.)

Cyanometer, si.ā.non'.e.ter, an instrument for measuring how blue the sky or sea is. (Greek mētrōn, a measure.)

Cyanotype, si.an'.ō.type, photographs in Prussian blue. (Greek kuānos tupos, deep-blue type).

Latin cyānus, a blue garnet, cyāneus, deep blue; Greek kuānos, a deep-blue substance, kuānos (adj.).

Cyclamen, sĭk'.lă.měn (not si.klay'.men). The plant "sow-bread."
(This word ought to be "cyclamine," sĭk'.lă.mĭn.)

Latin cyclamĭnus; Greek kuklamĭnos (from kuklos, a circle, the root being globular). The chief food of the wild boars of Italy.

Cycle, sĭ'.k'l, an ever-recurring period; cyclical, sĭk'.lĭ.kăĭl (adj.).
French cycle; Latin cyclus; Greek kuklos, a circle [of phenomena].

Cycloid, sĭ'.kloid, a geometrical curve; cycloidal, sĭ.kloy'.dăĭl; cycloidean, plu. cycloideans, sĭ.kloy'.dĕ.anz, the fourth order of fishes (Agassiz), including salmon, herrings, &c.

Greek kuklō-eidēs, like a circle. Imagine a nail in the circumference of a wheel. Let the wheel revolve and move on in a straight line. The nail would describe in the air that double motion, and the figure thus described would be a cycloid.

Cyclone, plu. cyclones, sĭ'.klone, sĭ.klōnz. A rotatory storm.

Latin cyclus; Greek kuklos, a circle, and -ōne augmentative.

Cyclopean, sĭ.klō'.pĕ.an (not sĭ.klo.pee'.an). Huge, the work of the fabled Cyclops.

Latin cyclōpes, cyclōpĕus; Greek kuklōps, kuklōpeios.

Cyclopædia, plu. cyclopædias, sĭ'.klo.pee''.dĭ.ăh, plu. -ăz, or en-cyclopædia, a dictionary of general information.

Greek kuklōs paideia, a circle of instruction.

Cyclopteris, sĭ.klōp'.tĕ.rĭs. A genus of fern-like plants.

Greek kuklōs ptĕrĭs, circle [shaped] fern; the leaflets are round.

Cygnets, sig'.nĕt (not cignet). A young swan.

Latin cygnus or cynus, a swan; Greek kuknōs (and -et dim.)

Cylinder, sĭl'.ĭn.dĕr, a drum-shaped article; cylindrical, sĭ.lĭn'.dri.kăĭl, shaped like a cylinder; cylin'drical-ly.

Latin cylindrus, a roller, &c.; Greek kăĭlindō, to roll.

Cymbal, sĭm'.băĭl, a musical instrument. Symbol, a sign or type.

"Cymbal," Lat. cymbălum; Gk. kumbălon (from kumbos, hollow).

"Symbol," Lat. symbola; Gk. sumbōlōn, a mark or token.

Cynic, plu. cynics, sĭn'.ĭk, sĭn'.ĭks, a misanthrope; cynical, sĭn'.ĭ.kăĭl, snarling; cyn'ical-ly, cyn'ical-ness; cynicism, sĭn'.ĭ.sĭzm, churlishness, the manners, &c., of a cynic.

These words are formed from the ancient sect called "Cynics," who snarled at every article of luxury (kunĭkōs, dog-like).

Cynosure, sĭ'.nō.shure. The pole-star, an object of attraction.

Latin cĭnĭdsūra; Greek kunĭsoura (from kunĭs oura, the dog's tail), meaning the star in the tail of Ursa Minor.

Cypress, sĭ'.press, a tree. Cypris, Cyprus (see below); cyprine, sĭp'.rĭn, adj. of cypress. (Properly the adj. of Cypris.)

Latin cĭpărissus; Greek kūpărissōs, kūpărissĭnōs (adj.)

Cypris, sĭp'.rĭs, one of the cyprididæ, sĭ.prĭd'.ĭ.dĕe, a genus of minute bivalves of great beauty (Greek Kupris, Venus).

Cyprus, sí'prūs. An island in the Levant', sacred to Kupris.

Cyprian, síp'ri.ăn. A woman of immodest habits.

Cypriot, síp'ri.ôt. An inhabitant of Cyprus.

Cyst, a bag containing morbid matter. Cist, a stone box for books or other valuables; a stone coffin.

Cystic, sís'tík, adj. of cyst; cysticle, sís'ti.k'l, a little cyst; cystidiæ, sís.tíd'.i.e, little bladder-like animals; cystidia, sís.tíd'.i.ah (in Bot.) sacs containing spores (1 syl.)

"Cyst," Greek kustis, a bladder. "Cist," Latin cista, a chest.

Cytherean, síth'.e.ree'.an, pertaining to Venus or love. So called from the island Cythëra, sacred to Venus.

Latin Cýthērëus (adj.), Cýthërëa, Venus.

Uzar, zar, the emperor of Russia; Czarina, za.ree'.nah, the empress of Russia. Czarowitch; zar'ro.vítz, the eldest son of the Czar; Czarevna, zǎ.rev'.nah, wife of the Czarowitch.

Czar is the Polish form of the Russian kaiser (Cæsar or emperor).

Da capo, da kah'po (in Music), from the beginning.

Italian da capo, [repeat] from the beginning [to the end].

Dab, a flat fish, a slap, a small lump; to slap, to wet, &c.; dabb'd (1 syl.), dabb'-ing, dabb'-er. (Rule i.)

Dabble, dab'.b'l, to play with water, to do in a small way; dabbled, dab'.b'ld; dabbling, dab'.bling; dabbler.

"Dab," Fr. dauber, to beat with the fist; "Dabble" dim. of dab.

Dace, a fresh-water fish; Dais, da'is, a raised floor.

"Dace," Dutch daas. "Dais," French dais, a canopy.

Dactyl, dak'.tíl, three syllables, the first being long and the other two short; dactylic, dak'.tíl.ík (adj.)

Latin dactýlus, dactýleus; Greek, daktýlōs, a finger (which consists of one long joint and two short ones; daktýlikōs).

Dad or daddy. A word for father used by the infant children of the peasantry. (Welsh tad, father.)

Dado, plu. dadoes, da'.do, da'.doze. (Italian.) A panel round the base of a room, just above the skirting board. (R. xlii.)

Dædalian, better dædalean, dē.dāl.ĕ.ăn. Cunningly contrived, like the works of Dædālus.

Latin dædālëus; Greek dailālëōs, skilfully made.

Daffodil, dǎf'.đ.díl. The Lent lily, a pseudo-narcissus.

Latin asphōdëlus; Greek asphōdëlos, the daffodil.

Dagger. A short sword, a mark in printing (+).

Low Latin daggerius, a dagger; Italian daga; French dague, a dirk.

Daggle or draggie, dag'.g'l or drag'.g'l, to trail in the wet; daggle-tailed or draggie-tailed, having the skirt of the gown bedabbled with wet and dirt.

Old English ddg, to dangle or hang in a slovenly manner.

Daguerreotype, da.gair'ro.tipe. A process of taking likenesses by sunlight, discovered by M. Daguerre. (1841.)

Dahlia, plu. dahlias; generally pronounced day'.lĭ.ăh, but dăh'.lĭ.ăh is more correct. A genus of plants.

So named from Andrew Dahl, the Swedish botanist.

Daily. Recurring every day. (Daily and gaily are exceptions to a very general rule. R. xiii.) See Day.

Dainty, plu. dainties, dain'.tĭz, something "toothsome"; dain'tily, dain'ti-ness, dain'ti-er (comp.), dain'ti-est (super.)

Welsh danteiddiol, dainty (from dant, a tooth); Latin dens, or French daintier, a venison pasty (from daine, a deer).

Dairy, plu. dairies, dair'ry, dair'rĭz, the place where milk, butter, and cheese, are made and kept in store; dairyman, dairymaid, dairywoman (with y). (When man, maid, woman; hood, like, ship; ish, ing, ism, are added, the "y" final is not changed. Rule xi.) Chaucer uses the word dey for a servant who has charge of a dairy; Sir Walter Scott speaks of "the dey or farm-servant"; and Junius says dey means "milk."

"Dairy" is the dey's ric; that is, the farm woman's room.

Dais, da'.is. That part of a banqueting hall which has a canopy, the part for honoured guests, generally raised. Days (1 syl.), plu. of day. Deys, plu. of dey (of Algiers).

French dais, a canopy; sous le dais, in the midst of grandeur: dagus Low Lat. ("a panni genere dais dicto"), chief table in a monastery.

Daisy, plu. daisies, da'.zy, da'.zĭz; dasied, da'.zĕd, covered with daisies. A corruption of day's-eye. (Rule xi.)

Old English dæges-edge, a daisy or day's-eye.

Dale, a valley; dalesman, -woman, one who lives in a dale.

Old English dedgel, obscure; dedgelnes, a solitude. Low Latin datus, a dale; German thal; Norse dal.

Dally, dăl'ly, to toy; dallies, dăl'.lĭz; dallied, dăl'.lĭd; dallying; dalli-er, one who dallies; dalli-ance. (Rule xi.)

German dahlen, to dally.

Dam, damn, dame.

Dam, a maternal quadruped; a mole to confine water; to stop the flow of water; dammed (1 syl.), damming (R. i.)

Damn, dam. To condemn. (Latin damnāre, to condemn.)

Dame, dăim. (French dame; Latin domīna, mistress.)

"Dam" (mother of a young beast), Fr. dame; Ital. dama, a lady.

A mill [dam], Danish dam, a pond or dike.

German damn, a dam; verb dammen, to dam.

Damage, dăm'idge, injury, to injure; damaged (2 syl.), dăm'aging (R. xix.); damages, dăm'.ajez (-s added to -ce or -ge forms a distinct syl., R. xxxiv.); dam'age-able (words ending in -ce or -ge retain the "e" before the suffix -able).

Old English dem, hurt; French dommage; Latin damnum, loss.

- Damask, dām'.ask, cloth with flowers wrought in it; verb damasked, dām'.askt; damask-ing.
- Damaskeen, dām'.ās.keen', to inlay steel with gold or silver; dam'askeened' (3 syl.), dam'askeen'-ing.
- Damaskins, dām'.ās.kīnz. Damascus blades.
- Damson, a corruption of "damascene" (dām'.a.seen'). A plum. (All from Damascus, in Syria.)
- Fr. damasquiner, to damaskeen; damasser, to damask, damas (n.)
- Dame (1 syl.), fem. of baronet or knight, now called "lady." The word is still used in the compound dame's-school, a school for poor children kept by an elderly woman.
- French dame (Madame); Latin dōmīna (from dōmus, the house).
- Damn, to condemn. Dam, the mother of a young quadruped.
- Damned, dāmd; damn-ing, dam'-ning (not dām'.ing like the pres. part. of dam, q.v., stopping the flow of water.)
- Damnable, dām'.nā.b'l (not dām'.ā.b'l); damnably.
- Damnation, dām.naī'.shun; damnatory, dam'.nā.t'ry.
- Latin dammāre, to condemn, damnatio, damnātorius.
French damnāble, damnation, damner (verb.)
- Damnify, dām'.nā.fy, to injure. Indemnify, to insure against injury, to repair an injury.
- Damnifies, dām'.ni.fize; Indemnifies.
- Damnified, dām'.ni.fide; Indemnified.
- Damnification, dam'-ni-fī-cay'-shun; Indemnification.
- Latin dammīficāre (damnum facio, to cause loss.)
- Damp, moist, to make moist; damped, damp't; damp'-ing; damp'-er, a contrivance to abate a draught or sound, one who damps; damp'-er (more damp), damp'-est (most damp), damp'-ness; damp'-ish, rather damp (-ish added to adj. is dim.); dampish-ly, dampish-ness.
- Dampen, to make damp; dampened, damp'.end; dampon-ing, damp'-ning; dampen-er, damp'.ner.
- German dampf, damp; dampfen, to damp; dampfer, &c.
- Damsel, dām'.zēl, a girl (Low Lat. damisella, Old Fr. demoiselle (ma-demoiselle), dim. of dame and madame, originally demoisel was applied to the sons of noblemen and kings. "Pages" were so styled (from Latin dōmīnus).
- Damson, dām'.z'n, a plum. Corruption of "damascene" (dām'.ās.seen). From Damascus, in Syria.
- Dance, danced (1 syl.), danc'-ing, danse'-ing; danc-er, danse'.er (Rule xix.) (French, danser, to dance).
- Dandelion, dan'-dē.lī-ŏn, a flower. (Fr. dent de lion, lion's tooth). Its leaves are supposed to resemble the teeth of lions.

Dandle, dan'd'l, to fondle; dandled, dan'd'ld; dandling, dan'dling; dandler, dan'dler, one who fondles.

Italian dondola, a child's doll, dondolare, to toss and swing about.

Dandriff or Dandruff. Scurf on the head.

Old Eng. tanede dref, one diseased with dirty or troublesome tetter.

Dandy, plu. dandies, dǎn'.dlz, a fop; dandy-ish, dandy-ism.

French dandy, dandin, a ninny; dandiner, to "tralpe" about.

Dane or Dansker, a native of Denmark. Deign, to vouchsafe.

Danish, day'.nish (adjective and noun). Rule xix.

Danegeld, dane-geld (not danegelt). Danish tribute.

Old English dane-geld ("geld" is tribute, but "gelt" is gift).

Danger, dain'.jēr, peril; danger-ous, dain'.jēr.ūs; dan'gerous-ly, dan'gerous-ness. (French danger, dangerieux.)

Dangle, dǎn'.g'l, to hang so as to swing about; dangled, dǎn'.-g'ld; dangling, dǎn'.gling; dangler, dan'.gler.

Dank, dank'-ish, rather dank (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like"); dank'ish-ness.

Same word as damp, with "k" diminutive.

Danubian, da.nū'.bĭ.ăn, adjective of Danube.

Daphne, dǎf'.ne. The spurge laurel. Daphne the daughter of Peneus (Pe.nee'.us) was changed into a laurel.

Dapper. Natty in dress and manners, smart. (Dutch.)

Dapple, dǎp'.p'l, spotted, to spot; dappled, dǎp'.p'ld; dappling, dap'.pling (double p). (German apfel-grau.)

Dare. To venture; to defy or challenge.

Dare (to venture, to have courage), past durst.

Dare (to defy), past dared (1 syl.), past part. dared.

He dare not is strictly correct, but he dares not is more usual. Sir Walter Scott (Waverley) says: "A bard to sing of deeds he dare not imitate." In Old Eng. the verb was [I] dear, [thou] dearest, [he] dear. "You dare not so have tempted him, should be You durst not so..."

"Dare" (to have courage). Old English dear, past dorste.

"Dared" (provoked, defied) is more modern.

Dark (noun); darken, dark'n, to make dark; dark'ened (2 syl.), darken-ing, dark'.ning; dark'-ness, dark'-ly; dark'-ish, rather dark (-ish added to adj. is dim.) dark-ling (-ling, Old Eng. means "offspring of," or is simply a diminutive).

Old English dearc, v. dearc[ian], past dearcode, past part. dearcod.

Dar'ling, noun and adjective, dear-one, dearly beloved.

Old English deorling, little dear-one (-ling, dim. or "offspring of.")

Darn, to mend; darned, (1 syl.), darn'-ing, darn'-er.

Welsh darn, a patch; v. darnio, to patch; darniad, a piecing.

Dart, noun and verb; dart'-ed (R. xxxvi.), dart'-ing, dart'-er.

French dard, v. darder; Low Latin dardus, a dart.

Dash, noun and verb; dashed (1 syl.), dash'-ing, dash'-er, dash'-board, a defence in carriages against splashes.

Danish dask, a slap; v. daske, to slap or dash.

Dastard, das'.tard, a coward; dastard-ly, dastard-ness.

Old English a-dastrigan, to terrify.

Date, a fruit, the time of an event, to give the date; dāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dāt-ing (Rule xix), date-less (Rule xvii.)

French, date, v. dater; Danish datere, to date.

Datum, plu. data, day'.tah (Latin). Things admitted as facts.

Daub, a coarse painting, to smear; daubed (1 syl.), daub'-ing, daub'-er; daub'-y, adj. (Welsh dwbio, to daub, dwb.)

Daughter, daw'.ter, a female offspring of human parents; a male offspring is the Son of his parents.

Daughter-in-law, plu. daughters-in-law.

Step-daughter, plu. step-daughters. (Old English stepan, to bereave: a daughter "bereaved of one parent.")

Old Eng. dōhter; German tochter; Danish datter; Greek, thagētēr.

Daunt (rhyme with aunt), to dismay; daunt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), daunt'-ing, daunt'-less, dauntless-ly, dauntless-ness.

French dompter, to tame (animals); Latin dōmītāre (from dōmāre).

Dauphin, fem. dauphiness, daw'.fīn, daw'.fīn.ess. Dauphin the eldest son of the king of France (1349-1830); "dauphiness," the wife of the dauphin.

So called from Dauphiné, an old province of France, given to the crown by Humbert II., on condition that the eldest son of the king assumed the word "dauphin" as a title.

Davy-lamp, day'.vy lamp. A miner's safety-lamp.

Invented by Sir Humphrey Davy, and called by his name.

Dawdle, daw'.d'l, a loiterer, to fritter away time; dawdled, daw'.d'ld; dawdling, dawd'.ling; dawdler, dawd.ler.

Dawn, day-break, to begin to grow light; dawned (1 syl.), dawn'-ing. (Old Eng. dagung, dawn; dag[ian], to dawn.)

Day, plu. days (R. xlv.); daily (not dayly, as it ought to be, R. xiii.), adj. and adv.; day by day, every day (here by means after, succeeding-to); to day, this day (Old Eng. to-dæg, this day; to-æfen, this evening); daybreak, day-spring, dawn; to win the day, to gain the victory.

Dey. The title of the governor of Algiers, before its conquest by the French.

Old English dæg, day; dæg-tīma, day-time; dæg-candel, the sun.

"Dey," Turkish dai, a title similar to senior, father, &c.

Daysman. An umpire, mediator. (Job ix. 33.)

A corruption of dais-man, a man who sits on the dais to judge.

Day-work, work by the day. Day's-work, the work of a day.

Daze (1 syl.), to stupefy; dazed (1 syl.), dāz'-ing (Rule xix.)

Old English dȳs, seen in dȳsig, foolish: dȳsig[tian], to be a fool.

Dazzle, dāz'.z'l, to overpower with light; dazzled, dāz'.z'ld; dazzling, daz'.ling; dazzling-ly, dazzle-ment.

Old English dȳsignes, dizziness; dȳsig[tian], to make dizzy.

De- (Latin prefix), motion down or back, hence "the reverse."

"DE" (prefix) denotes privation,

Diminution, and negation,

Motion from or downward states,

Reverses and extenuates.

Deacon, fem. deaconess, -dee'.kon-ess; deacon-ship, office of...

Latin diacōnus; Greek diakōnos (from diakōnō, to serve.)

Dead, dēd, lifeless; dead'-ness, dead'-ly, dead'li-ness (R. xi.); deaden, dēd'n, to numb, to abate force; deadened, dēd'n'd; deaden-ing, dēd'ning; deaden-er, death (q.v.)

Old English dēdd, dēdd[tian], past dēddode, p.p. dēddod.

Deaf, dēf (R. vi.), without "hearing;" deaf'-ly, deaf'-ness;

deafen, dēf'n, to make deaf; deafened, dēf'nd; deafen-ing, dēf'ning. (Old Eng. deaf (adj.), deafe (noun).)

Deal, deel, a large part, fir or pine wood; to distribute cards, to traffic; past and p.p. dealt, dēlt; deal'-ing, deal'-er.

To deal with A. B., to treat with A. B.

To deal by A. B., to treat A. B. well or ill.

To deal to A. B., to give the next card to A. B.

A great deal better; i.e., better by a great deal.

Deal now means a large portion, but dēl formerly meant a portion or lot (v. dēllan) to distribute; past dēdde, past part. dēddē.

"Deal" (wood), German diele, a plank or board.

Dean, deen. Title, The Very Reverend; Address, Mr. Dean.

Dean'-ery, the office, revenue, house, or jurisdiction of a dean; rural-dean, plu. rural-deans. Dene, a down, q.v.

Dean and chapter, the bishop's council, including the dean.

French doyen; Latin decānus, leader of a file of soldiers ten deep;

the head of the bishop's council, which originally consisted of ten canons and prebendaries (from Greek dēka, ten.)

Dear, beloved, expensive. Deer, a stag. (Both deer.)

Dear, dear-ness; dear'-ly, fondly, high in price.

He paid dearly for his folly (not he paid dear...)

Dear me! a corruption of dio mio (Ital.)

Old English deor, beloved, expensive; also "a deer."

Dearth, derth, scarcity.

French dear, as "length" from long, &c. So in German theuer, dear: theure zeit, dearth (dear time).

Death, dēth; death'-less, death'-like, &c. (See Dead.)

Old English dæth or deðth.

Debar, disbar; -barred, -bard; -barr'-ing (Rule i.)

Debar', to deprive, to forbid. (The Fr. debarrer is un-bar.)

Dis'bar'. To take from a barrister his right to plead.

Debase' (2 syl.), to degrade; debased' (2 syl.), debās'-ing (R. xix.), debās-er (one who debases), debase'-ment.

Debate' (2 syl.), to argue; debāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), debāt'-ing, debāting-ly, debāt'-er (Rule xix.), one who debates.

French débat, v. debattre (battre, to beat); Spanish debate.

Debauch, de.bortch', intemperance, to corrupt, to vitiate; debauched' (2 syl.), debauch'-ing; debauch'-er, one who debauches; debauchery, de.bortch'.ēry; debauch'-ment; debauchee, dēb'.o.shē'', a man of intemperate habits.

Debenture, de.bēn'.tchur, an acknowledgment of debt bearing interest to the holder; debentured, de.bēn'.tchurd, pertaining to goods on which debentures have been drawn.

French débenture (from the Latin debeo, to owe [money]).

Debilitate, de.bil'.i.tate, to weaken; debil'itāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.); debil'itāt-ing (R. xix.); debilitation, de.bil'.i.tay''.shun, state of weakness; debility, de.bil'.i.ty, weakness of health.

French débilité, débilitation; Latin debilitāre (to weaken), debilitas, debilis, weak (de habilis not habile, or of sound constitution.)

Debit, dēb'.it (n. and v.), an entry (or) to enter a customer's name on the debtors' side of a ledger; deb'it-ed, deb'it-ing.

Latin debere, supine debitum, to owe. (In Latin dē- is long.)

Debonair, dēb'.o.nair'', gentle and courteous; debonair'-ly.

French débonnaire; that is, de bon air, of good air or mien.

Debouch, de.boosh', to march out of a defile; debouched' (2 syl.); debouch'-ing, de.boosh'.ing (not de.bootch'.ing); debouch-chure, dēb'.oo.shure', the mouth of a river.

French débouché, v. déboucher, débouchement (de bouche, from the mouth.)

Debris, dū.bree'. Rubbish, fragments of rocks, &c.

French débris, plural noun (from de bris, out of the wreck).

Debt, dēt, something due; debt-or (not -er), dēl'.-ōr (b mute).

Latin debitum, debitor (from dēbēo, to owe).

Debut, da.boō'. First appearance as a public character.

Debutant, fem. debutante, dēb'.oo.tah'n, dēb'.oo.tant.

French début, débutant, débutante, v. débiter (de but, from the goal).

Deca-, dēka (Greek prefix meaning ten).

Deca-chord. A musical instrument with ten strings.

Deca-gon. A plane figure with ten angles (gōnia, an angle.)

Deca-gyn'ia. Plants with ten pistils (Gk. gunē, females).

Deca-hed'ron. A solid figure with ten sides (hedra, a base).

Deca-litre, -lêe'tr. A measure of ten "litres" (quarts).

- Deca-logue, -log. The commandments (logus, [God's] word).
- Deca-metre, -mee'tr. A measure of ten "metres" (yards).
- Dec-an'dria. Plants with ten stamens (Gk. andres, males).
- Deca-pod, plural decapods or decapoda, de.kap'.ō.dāh.
Crustaceans with ten legs (Gk. podes, feet).
- Deca-stich, dek'.a.stīk. A poem with ten lines (Gk. stikos).
- Deca-style, dek'.a.stīle. A porch with ten pillars (Gk. stulos).
- Decade, dēk'.ade, a batch of ten. Decayed, de.kade', rotten.
- Decad-al, dēk'.ā.dāl (not dē.kay'.dāl), adj. of "decade."
Latin dēcas, gen. dēcādīs, a decade (Greek dēka, ten).
- Decadence, de.kay'.dense; decadency, de.kay'.den.sy, state of decay (-cy denotes "state"); decadent, de.kay'.dent.
Fr. décadence; Lat. decadens, gen. -dentis (de cadere, to fall off).
- Decalcomanie, da'.kal'.ko.mah'.nee. The art of transferring the surface of coloured prints, &c., for decorative purposes.
French décalquer, to reverse the tracing of a drawing or engraving.
- Decamp', to remove from a camp, to depart hastily; decamped' (2 syl.); decamp'-ing; decamp'-ment, departure...
Fr. décamper, décampment (de camper, to break up an encampment).
- Decant, de.kānt', to draw off wine, &c. (not to decanter); decant'-ed (R. xxxvi.), decant'-ing; decant'-er, a bottle, one who decants. Descant, des.kant', to prate about.
"Decant," French decanter: de cantine, [to draw] from a canteen.
"Descant," Latin decantāre, to prate about.
- Decapitate, de.cāp'.ā.tāte, to behead; decap'itāt-ed (R. xxxvi.); decap'itāt-ing (R. xix.); decapitation, de'.cāp'.ā.tay''shun.
Lat. decāpītāre (from de caput, gen. capītis, [to take] off the head).
- Decarbonise, de'.kar''.bō.nīze, to deprive of carbon (R. xxxi.); decar'bonised (4 syl.); decar'bonis-ing (R. xix.); decar'-bonis-er, decarbonisation, de'.kar'.bo.nī.zay''shun.
Latin de carbo, [to deprive] of carbon.
- Decay', to rot; decayed' (2 syl.), decay'-ing, decay'-er (R. xiii.)
Latin de cado, to fall away from. (An ill-formed word.)
- Decease, de.sese', death, to die. Disease, diz.eez', sickness; decease', deceas'ed' (2 syl.), deceas'-ing (Rule xix.)
Latin decessus, departure; de cedo, sup. cessum, to go away from.
- Deceive, de.seev', to impose on one; deceived, de.seevd'; deceive'-ing, deceive'-er (R. xix.), deceive'-able (R. xxiii.), deceive'ably, deceive'able-ness.
- Deceit, de.seet'; deceit'-ful (R. viii.), deceit'ful-ly, deceit'-fulness; deception, de.sēp'.shun; deceptive, de.sēp'.tīv; decept'ive-ly, decept'ive-ness, decept'ible (not -able); deceptibility, de.sēp'.tī.bīl'.ī.ty.
French deceitif, deception; Latin deceptio, dēcēpĕre, supine deceptum, to entrap (from de capio, to take in).

December, de.sem'.ber. The tenth month, beginning with March.

Lat. december (from decem, ten; and -ber. "Bar" (Pers.), period).

Decemvir, plu. decemvirs or decemviri, de.sem'.vir, de.sem'.vi.ri. Ten magistrates, "decemvir," one of the ten.

Latin decemvir, plu. decemviri (decem viri, ten men).

Decency, plu. decencies, de'.sen.sy, de'.sen.siz. (See Decent.)

Decennary, de.sen'.na.ry (double n), a period of ten years; decennial, de.sen'.ni.äl, once in ten years; decen'ial-ly.

Latin dēcennium, the space of ten years; dēcennātis.

("Annual" becomes ennial in the compounds, bi-ennial, tri-ennial, dec-ennial, per-ennial, &c. Latin decennis.)

Decent, dē'sent, decorous. Descent, dēs.sent', lineage, &c. de'cent, de'cently; de'cency, plu. de'cencies, de'.sen.siz; de'centness. (Fr. décent, decence; Lat. decens, becoming).

"Descent" is the Latin descendo, to descend (de scando, to climb down).

Deception, de.sěp'.shun; deceptive, de.sěp'.tīv. (See Deceive.)

Decern, de.zern', to judge. Discern, dis.sern', to distinguish.

Latin decerno, to decree; but discerno, to distinguish.

Decide, de.side', to determine; decided, de.sı'.ded. (Rule xxxvi.); decı'ded-ly, decı'd-ing, decı'd-er. (Rule xix).

Decision, de.siz'.shün, determination; decisive, de.sı'.siv; decisive-ly, decisive-ness. (Note the c in these words). (Observe.—Verbs in -de and -d add "sion" not "tion".)

French décider, décisif, décision; Latin dēcidere; sup. decisum, to decide (from de cado, to cut away [what is irrelevant]).

Deciduous, de.sıd'.u.us [plants not evergreen], which shed their leaves [in autumn], decıd'uous-ness.

Latin dēciduus, subject to decay (from de cado, to fall off).

Decimal, des'.ı.mäl, numbered by tens; dec'imally (adv.)

Decimate, des'.ı.mate, to pick out every tenth; dec'imät-ed (R. xxxvi.); dec'imät-ing (R. xix.); dec'imä-tor (R. xxxvii.); decimation, dēs'.ı.may'shun, selection of every tenth.

French décimation, v. décimer; Latin dēctmare, dēctmus, the tenth.

Decipher, de.sı'fer, to unravel obscure writings; decı'phered (2 syl.); decı'pher-ing, decı'pher-er, decı'pher-able, that which may be deciphered.

Fr. déchiffrer, to decipher; Low Lat. de cıphra; Ital. decıferare.

Decision, de.siz'.shün; decisive, de.sı'.siv. (See Decide.)

Deck (of a ship), to adorn; decked (1 syl.), deck-ing; deck'er, a ship having decks, one who adorns.

Old Eng. decan, to cover; Germ. decke, a covering, v. decken, decker.

Declaim', to inveigh; declaimed' (2 syl.), declaim-ing, declaim-er; declamation, dek'.la.may'shun; declamatory, de.kläm'.ä.tö.ry, bombastic.

French déclamation, déclamatoire; Latin dēclāmatio, dēclāmātor, dēclāmātorıus, dēclāmäre (from de clamo, to speak aloud).

Declare, de.clair', to assert; declared' (2 syl.), declār'-ing, declār'-er (R. xix.), declār'-able (R. xx.), declaredly, de.clair'.ed.ly; declaration, děk'.la.ray''shun; declarative, de.clar'ry.tiv; declarative-ly; declarator, de.clar'ra.tor; declarator-y, declar'atori-ly (Rule xi.)

French déclaratif, déclaration, déclaratoire, verb déclarer.

Lat. declarātor, declarātiō, declārāre (de clarāre, to make quite clear).

Declension, de.klěn'.shun. A grammatical form of nouns, a falling off. (An ill-formed word.) See Decline.

Decline', consumption, to lean, to refuse, &c.; declined' (2 syl.), declin'-ing (R. xix.), declin'-able (1st Lat. conj.)

Declination, děk'-lī.nay''shun. Deviation.

Declension, de.klěn'.shun (of a noun). A falling off. (v.s.)

Declinator, děk'-lī.nay''-tor. An astronomical instrument.

Decliner, de.klin'.er. One who declines a noun, &c.

French déclin, déclinable, déclinaison; v. décliner, to decline.

Latin declinatio, a deviation, a declension; v. declinare.

(The supine of "declino" is declinatum, and it is quite impossible to obtain declension therefrom.)

Declivity, plu. declivities, de.cliv'.i.ty, de.cliv'.i.tiz (not decliv-ity), an inclination downwards. An inclination upwards is an acclivity, ak.kliv'.i.ty.

Declivitous, de.kliv'.i.tus, adj. (not declivatous).

French déclivité; Latin declivitas (de clivus, a downward slope).

Decoction, de.kők'.shun. The liquor containing the virtues of something which has been boiled in it.

Latin decoquo, supine decoctum, to boil down.

Decompose, dě'kəm.pōze. Discompose, dis'.kəm.pōze'.

Decompose. To analyse, to reduce to elements.

Discompose. To disturb, to ruffle, to agitate.

De'compose', de'composed' (3 syl.), de'cōmposing. (R. xix.)

de'compōs'-er, de'compōs'-able (R. xxiii.), decom'posite.

Decomposition, de'-kəm.po.zish'-on. Analysis, decay, &c.

French décomposable, v. décomposer, décomposition; Latin de com [con] pōnere, to do the reverse of putting together.

Decomound, de.kəm'.pound (noun), dě'.kəm.pound' (verb.) A de-com'pound leaf or flower (Bot.), is a compound-compound leaf or flower; that is, each part of each leaf is compound.

De'compound', to make a compound of different compounds; de'compound'-ed (R. xxxvi.), de'compound'-able. (R. xxiii.)

De is for dis (Greek), twice. It is a wretched hybrid, and ought to be bicompound. (Latin bi [bis] compōno.)

Decorate, děk'.o.rate, to adorn; dec'orāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dec'orāt'-ing (R. xix.), dec'orāt'-or, one who decorates; decoration, dek'.o.ray''shun; decorative, dek'.o.ra'tiv.

French décoration, v. décorer; Latin dēcorāre (from dēcus, beauty).

Decorous, de.kōr'rus (not dēk'.orus), befitting, seemly; decor'-ous-ly, decor'ous-ness; decorum, de.kōr'rum.

Fr. décorum, propriety; Lat. decōrum, decōrus (from decus, beauty).

Decoy', to allure; a lure, a place for catching wild-fowls; decoyed' (2 syl.), decoy'-ing (Rule xiii.), decoy'-er; decoy'-duck, a duck employed to lure wild ducks into a net or place for catching them.

A corruption of duck-coy, a duck lure; German koder, a lure.

Decrease, de'krese (noun), de.krese' (verb). Rule 1.

De'crease, diminution; decrease', to diminish; decreased' (2 syl.), decreas'-ing (R. xix.), decreas'ing-ly, decre'scent.

Lat. decre'sco, to grow less and less (de cresco, to increase; -sc-inceptive).

Decree', an edict, to determine by edict; decreed', decree'-ing; decreeer, de.kree'.er, one who decrees; decree'tal (one e), a decree, a book of decrees (also adj.); decree'tive, de.kree'.tīv, having the force of a decree; decretory, de.kree'.to.ry, judicial, decided by a decree.

French décret, décretale, verb décree'ter; Latin decrētālis, decrētōrius, decrētum (from decerno, supine decrētum, to decree).

Decrepit, de.krēp'īt (not decrep'id). Infirm from age.

Decrepitude, de.krēp'ītude. Infirmity from age.

Fr. décép'it, décép'itude; Lat. decrēp'tus (from decrēpo, to crackle like burning salt; de crēpo, to crack, hence "to break down").

Decrepitate, de.krēp'ītate, to crackle like burning salt; decrep'itāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), decrep'itāt-ing (Rule xix.); decrepitation, de.krēp'ītay".shun, a crackling.

French décép'itation, v. décép'iter; Latin decrēp'tāre (frequentative of crēpo, to rattle or crack).

Decrescent, de.krēs'sent (adj.) Becoming smaller and smaller.

(-sc- is inceptive. Latin decre'scens.) See Decrease.

Decree'tal, decree'tive, decree'tory. (See Decree.)

Decry', decries' (2 syl.), decried' (2 syl.); decri'-al, a clamorous censure; decri'-er (R. xi.), one who decries; decry'-ing (with a y, R. xi.) French décrier, to cry down.

Dedicate, dēd'.i.kate, to devote; ded'icāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), ded'icāt-ing (R. xix.), ded'icāt-or, ded'icātory; dedication, dēd'.i.kay".shun, the act of devoting or consecrating, a complimentary address prefixed to a book, &c.

Latin dēdicā'tio, v. dēdicā're, to devote (from de dicā're, to vow to).

Deduce, de.duse', to infer; deduced' (2 syl.), dedūc'-ing (R. xix.), dedūc'-ible (not -able. Not of the 1st Latin conjugation); dedu'cible-ness, deduce'-ment (R. xvii., xviii.)

Latin dedūc'ere, (to draw down from) hence, "to infer."

Deduct', to subtract, to take from; deduct'-ed (R. xxxvi.), deduct'-ing; deductive, de.dũk'.tív; deductive-ly; deduction, de.dũk'.shun, subtraction, inference.

French déduction; Latin dēductio, dēducere, sup. deductum (v.s.)

Deed, an action (Old Eng. dēd, a deed; dēdla, a doer).
Indeed, in fact; In very deed, in very fact, in reality.

Deem, to be of opinion; deemed (1 syl.), deem'-ing.

Deem'ster. A Judge in the Isle of Man and in Jersey.

Old English dēma, a judge; v. dēm[an], to deem or judge; past dēmdē (2 syl.); past part. dēmed, deemed. (-ster both genders.)

Deep, far to the bottom, cunning; (noun) the sea; deep'-er (comp.), deep'-est (sup.), deep'-ly, deep'-ness.

Deep'-en, deep''n, to make deeper; deep'-ened (2 syl); deep'en-ing, deep'-ning (2 syl).

Old English deōp, deep, profound; ; deōpnes, doppetan, to sink.

Deer, sing. and plu., the stag, &c. Dear, beloved, expensive.

"Deer," Old English deōr; "Dear," Old English deōr-e, v. deōr[an]. ("Deer," "sheep," and "swine," are both singular and plural.)

Deface' (2 syl.), to disfigure; defaced' (2 syl.), defāc'-ing (Rule xix.), defacing-ly; defāc'-er, one who defaces; deface'-ment (Rule xviii. ¶.), injury to the surface.

De face, to destroy the face or surface. (Latin facies, the face.)

Defalcation, de'fāl.kay''shun (not de'fōl.kay''shun), fraudulent deficiency; defalcator, de'fāl.kay''tor.

French défalcation; Latin defalcatio (de fals, a pruning knife).

Defame' (2 syl.), to slander; defamed' (2 syl.), defām'-ing, defām'ing-ly; defām'-er (Rule xix.), one who defames.

Defamation, dēf'-ũ.may''shun, slander; defamatory, de.-fām'.a.tō.ry, slanderously.

(The first syl. of these words in Fr. and Lat. is dif.)

French diffamation, diffamatoire, verb diffamer; Latin diffāmatio, diffāmāre (dif[de]fama, to deprive one of his fame).

Defaulter, de.fōl'.ter. A peculator.

Old French defaultte, now défaut, defect; Low Latin defaltum.

Defeasible, de.fee'.si.b'l, alienable. Indefeasible, inalienable.

Low Latin defeasibilis (Latin deficio, to undo; de facio).

Defeat, dē.fee't, to frustrate, to vanquish, a frustration, an overthrow; defeat'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), defeat'-ing.

(The -ea- of these words is indefensible.)

French défaites (de faire, to undo; Latin de factus, undone).

Defect', a fault; defection, de.fēk'.shun, a revolt; defective, de.fēk'.tív, imperfect; defec'tive-ly (R. xi.), defective-ness, defec't-ible; defectibility, de.fēk'.ti.bil''.i.ty.

Latin defectus, defectio, defectivus (de facto, to undo).

Defence', (2 syl.) a protection, a vindication; defence'-less, defence'-less-ness; defences, de.fěn'.sěz. (Rule xxxiv.) (This is one of the worst anomalies of the language. The "c" ought to have been an s, and has been preserved in the compounds. See Defensive.) See also Condense, note.
 French défense; Latin defensus, defendo, supine defensum, and also defenso (from de fendo, to drive away).

Defend', to protect, to vindicate; defend'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), defend'-ing, defend'-er, defend'-able (Rule xxiii.), defend'-ant (Rule xxv.), the person who defends or replies to a charge in a law-suit. The person who makes the charge is called the plaintiff.

French défendre, défendable, défendeur; Latin defendere.
 (As usual the wrong conjunction defendable is French.)

Defensive, de.fěn'.siv; the side or posture of defence; defensive-ly; defensible, de.fěn'.sib'l, what may be defended: defensibility, de.fěn'.sib'il'.i.ty. (See Defend.)

French défensive; Latin defendo, supine defensum, to defend.

Defer', to postpone, to submit; deferred, de.fer'd; deferring; deferr'-er, one who postpones, one who submits in opinion.

Deference, de.f'.e.rense, respect to another; deferential, de.f'.ē.ren'.shāl, respectful; deferen'tial-ly.

(In Latin these two verbs are not identical: To "postpone" is differre, to "submit" is deferre. We have borrowed our words from the French déferer, to "postpone" and to "submit," and to the same source we owe the abnormal spelling of the last four words.)

French déferer (both verbs), déférence, déferent, deferential.

Latin deferō, to defer; part. dēfērens, gen. dēfērentis; differō, to submit; part. differens, gen. differentis.

Defiance, dě.fī'.anse, menace. (See Defy.)

Deficient, de.fish'.ent, not perfect; deficient-ly (adverb).

Deficiency, plu. deficiencies, de.fish'.en.siz (Rule xlv.), state of imperfection. (-cy denotes state, &c.)

Deficit, dě.fī'.sīt. Deficiency in a money balance.

French déficient, déficit; Latin dēficiens, genitive dēficientis, verb dēficio (de facio, to reverse of "making complete").

Defile (noun), de'.file, a narrow pass; (verb) de.file' (Rule l.) to pollute, to march with a narrow front or in single file

Defile', defiled' (2 syl.), defil'-ing (both meanings), defil'-er (R. xix.), one who pollutes; defile'-ment, pollution.

"Defile" (to pollute), Old Eng. gefiſſan.

"Defile" (to march in single file), Fr. défiler; Lat. filum, a thread.

Define' (2 syl.), to explain, to circumscribe; defined (2 syl.), defin'-ing (R. xix.), defin'-er, defin'-able (R. xxiii.), defin'-ably; definition, děf'.i.nish'.un, meaning explained.

Definite, děf'î.nîť (not děf'î.nîte), precise, exact; def'î-nite-ly; def'înite-ness (Rule xvii.), exactness.

Definitive, de.fîn'.î.tîv., positive; defin'itive-ly; defin'itive-ness, preciseness, exactitude.

French définir, définîtif, définition; Latin defînîte, definitely; děfî-nîtio, defînîtivus, defînîre, to define (from finis, a limit).

Deflect, to turn aside; deflect'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), deflect'-ing.

Deflection, better deflexion, de.flěk'.shun. Aberration.

Deflexed, de.flěxt' (Bôt.). Bent down in a continuous curve.

French děflexion; Latin děflexus, deflecto, supine děflexum (de flecto, to bend downwards; to bend away from).

Deform, to distort; deformed' (2 syl.), deform'-ing, deform'-er; deformation, de'.for.may''.shun, disfigurement.

Mal-formation. Abnormal formation, misformed.

Deformity, plu. deformities, de.for'.mî.tîz. Distortion.

French děformation, verb deformer. Latin děformâtio, děformîtas; děformâre, to disfigure (de forma, the reverse of beauty or form).

Defraud, to cheat; defraud'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), defraud'-ing; defraud'-er, one who defrauds.

Latin děfraudâre (de fraudo, to cheat thoroughly; fraus, fraud).

Defray, to bear the expenses; defrayed' (2 syl.), defray'ing (R. xiii.), defray'-er; defray'-ment, payment.

Fr. děfrayer (de frais, [to cancel] a charge); Low Lat. fredum, charge.

Defunct, de.funkt', dead. (Lat. defunctus, discharged [from life].)

Defy, to dare, to challenge; defies, de.fîze; defied' (2 syl.), defi'-er (not defy-er), defi'-ance, defi'-ant, but defy'-ing.

French děfi, děfiance, defiant; v. děfier, to defy or challenge.

Degenerate, de.gen'.e.rate, to grow worse; degen'erated (Rule xxxvi.), degen'erât-ing; degeneration, de.gen'.e.ray''.shun; degeneracy, de.gen'.e.ra.sy (-cy denotes a "state"); degen'erate-ly; degen'erate-ness, degenerate condition.

French děgénération, v. děgénérer; Latin děgénérière (from děgēner, unlike his ancestors; de gens, to fall away from one's race).

Degrade, to disgrace; degrād'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), degrād'-ing, degradation, děg'.ra.day''.shun, dishonour, loss of rank; degrād'-er, one who degrades another; degrā'ding-ly.

Fr. děgradation, děgrader. Lat. de gradus, [to reduce] from grade.

Degree. A measure applied to circles, rank, relationship, &c.

By degrees. Little by little, gradually. (French děgré.)

Deify, de'.î.fy, to exalt to the gods; deifies, de'.î.fîze; deified, de'.î.fîde; deifi-er, de'.î.fî.er, one who deifies; deification, de'.î.fî.kay''.shun, exaltation to divine honours.

Deism, de'.izm, belief in a creator but not in revelation;

- deist, de'ist, one whose creed is 'deism; deistical, de'ist'ikl; deistical-ly, de'ist'iklly.
 Deity, plu. deities, de'iz. (Rule xi.)
 (Dei- is pronounced dī, except in this set of words and in the word "deign," where it has the sound of "a.")
 French déification, v. déifier, déisme, déiste, déité; Latin deitas.
 Deign, dain', to vouchsafe. Dane, a native of Denmark.
 Deign, deigned (1 syl.), deign'-ing. Dis'dain, to contemn.
 ("Deign" and "disdain" should be spelt in one way; both are from the Lat. dignus, Fr. daigner.)
 French daigner, to deign; dé-daigner, to disdain. Latin dignus.
 Deino-, dī.no- (Greek prefix meaning terrible from hugeness of size, marvellously great in bulk).
 Deinornis, dī.nor'nis. A huge fossil bird. (Gk. ornis, a bird.)
 Deino-saurus or deino-saurian, plu. deino-saurians, dī'no-saw''rus dī'no.saw''rī.an, dī'no.saw''rī.anz. A huge fossil lizard. (Greek sauros, a lizard.)
 Deino-therium, plu. deino-theria, dī'no.rhee''rī.um, plu. dī'no.rhee''rī.ah. A huge fossil animal with a trunk.
 Greek deinos thērion, a terribly-huge beast.
 (These words are sometimes spelt di- instead of dei-.)
 Deject', to dishearten; deject'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dejec'ted-ly, dejec'ted-ness, deject'-ing; dejection, de.jek'shun.
 Fr. déjection; Lat. deicere, sup. dejectum (de facio, to throw down).
 Delay, to defer; delayed' (2 syl.) not delaid. (It is not a compound of lay, R. xiv., but the supine of différo, Lat.)
delay'-ing, delay'-er (R. xiii.), one who delays.
 French délai; Latin différo, supine dilātum, to defer.
 "Defer" is from the root and "delay" from the sup. of the same verb.
 Delectable, de.lēk'ta.bl. (See Delight.)
 Delegate, dēl'ē.gate, a representative, to send a representative; dēl'egāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), dēlegāt-ing (R. xix.), intrusting a commission to another; delegation, dēl'-e.gay''shun.
 French délégation, v. déléguer; Lat. dēlegatio, v. dēlegāre (de lēgāre, to send away as ambassador or legate).
 Delendum, plu. delenda, de.len'dah (Lat.), to be erased. In printers' proofs written del or d.
 Deleterious, dēl'ē.tee''rī.ūs, hurtful; delete'rious-ly, delete'rious-ness. (The de-, in Greek, is long.)
 Greek deletērios, dēlētēr, a destroyer; dēlēōmai, to destroy.
 Delf. Coarse earthenware, originally made at Delft (Holland).
 Deliberate, de.lib'ē.rate, slow to determine, to weigh in the mind the pros and cons; deliberate-ly, deliberate-ness; delib'erāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), delib'erāt-ing (R. xix.), delib'- erāt-or; deliberation, de.lib'.e.ray''shun; deliberāt-ive, de.lib'.e.ra.tiv; delib'orative-ly, with deliberation.

French délibération, délibératif, v. délibérer; Latin dēlibērātio, deliberativus, deliberātor, v. dēlibērāre.

Delicacy, plu. delicacies, dēl'.i.ka.sy, dēl'.i.ka.siz. A dainty, weakness, tenderness, consideration for others.

Delicate, dēl'.i.ket; del'icate-ly, del'icate-ness.

French délicat; Latin dēlicātus, delicate, fine, dainty.

Delicious, de.lish'.us, delightful to the taste; delicious-ly, delicious-ness. (Fr. délicieux; Lat. dēliciā, delights.)

Delight', pleasure, to please; delight'-ed (R. xxxvi.), delight'-ing, delight'-ful (R. viii.), delight'ful-ly, delight'ful-ness; delight'-some, full of delight (-some, Old English suffix, "full of"); delight'some-ness, agreeableness.

Delectable, de.lēk'.ta.b'l; delec'table-ness; delectability, de.lēk'.ta.b'il''.i.ty; delectation, de.lēk'.tay''shun.

French délectable, délectation, v. délecter. Latin dēlectābilis, dēlectātio, v. delecto, to delight; lacto, to allure, to charm.

Delineate, de.līn'.ē.ate, to draw, to design; delin'eāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), delin'eāt-ing (R. xix.), delin'eāt-or (R. xxxvii.); delineation, de.līn'.i.a''shun, a drawing in lines or words.

French délineation; Latin delineātio, delineātor (de tinea, a line).

Delinquent, de.līn'.quent. One who commits a fault.

Delinquency, plu. delinquencies, de.līn'.quen.siz. Misdeeds.

French délinquant (wrong conj.); Latin dēlinquens, gen. -quentis, to fail in one's duty (de linquere, to leave behind).

Delirious, de.līr'.ri.us, wandering in mind from illness; delirious-ly, delirious-ness; delirium, de.līr'.ri.um, temporary aberration of mind; delirium tremens, de.līr'.ri.um tree'.mens, insanity accompanied with a trembling of the limbs, generally brought on by drunkenness.

Lat. delirium, dotage (de lira, [to get] out of the furrow in ploughing).

Delittante (no such word). See Dilettante.

Deliver, de.liv'.er, to set free, to save, to hand over, to disburden, to utter; delivered, de.liv'.erd; deliv'er-ing, deliv'er-er, deliv'er-able, deliv'er-ance, deliv'ery.

To deliver up, to surrender. To deliver over, to transfer.

French délivrance, v. délivrer, délivreur; Latin de libērāre, to liberate from [bondage] (liber, free).

Dell (R. v.), a valley. (Old Eng. dál, a dale; Welsh twll, a pit.)

Delphian, dēl'.fī.an. Dolphine, dēl'.fīn.

Delphian. Pertaining to the oracle of Delphi, in Greece.

Delphine. A French edition of the Latin classics for the use of the "Grand Dauphin" (son of Louis XIV.)

- Delphinidæ, dēl'fīn'ī.dēē. The dolphin genus.
- Delphinium, dēl'fīn'ī.um. The larkspur species of plants.
 Called delphinium, from a fancied resemblance of the unopened flowers to an heraldic dolphin.
 Called larkspur from a fancied resemblance of the horned nectary to a lark's spur.
- "Delphian," Greek Delphínios, adj. of Delphoi (oracle of Delphi).
 "Delphine," Greek delphín or delphis, a dolphin; Old Eng. dēlfīn.
 "Delphin-idæ," -idæ, a Greek patronymic, denotes a family or group.
 "Delphin-ium," -ium, a Latin termination, denotes a species.
- Delta, dēl'tāh, a triangular tract of land at the mouth of certain rivers, as the Nile, so called from the Greek Δ (d or delta).
 Deltic, dēl'tīk, adj.; deltoid, dēl'toid, somewhat resembling a delta. (Greek delta eidos, delta like.)
- Delude' (2 syl.), to deceive; delūd'-ed (3 syl., R. xxxvi.);
 delūd'-ing (R. xix.); delūd'-er, one who deludes;
 delūd'-able (R. xxiii.), easily deceived, gullible.
- Delusion, Illusion, de.lu'.zhun, il.lu'.zhun.
- Delusion is deception from want of knowledge.
- Illusion is deception from morbid imagination.
- Delusion (R. xxxiii.); delusive, de.lu'.ziv; delu'sive-ly, delusive-ness; delu'sory, de.luze'.ōry.
 Latin deludere, to cheat (de ludo, to play on [one's credulity]).
- Delve (1 syl.), to dig; delved (1 syl.), delv'-ing (Rule xix);
 delv'-er, one who delves.
- Old English delf[an], to dig; past dealf, past part. delven.
- Demagnetise, de.mag'.ne.tize, to undo magnetic influence;
 demagnetised, de.mag'.ne.tīzd; demagnetis-ing, de.mag'.nē.tize.ing (R. xix); demagnetis-er, de.mag'.nē.tize.er.
 "Magnetise" is to affect with magnetism, or to make magnetic;
de-reverses; and "de-magnetise" is to undo the former processes.
- Demagogue, dēm'a.gōg. Demigod, dēm'i.gōd.
- Demagogue. A factious mob orator.
- Demigod. A man who has rank with the gods.
- "Demagogue," French démagogue; Greek dēm-āgōgōs, a popular leader (dēmōs, the people); Latin demāgōgus.
- "Demigod," French demi, half, and our native word "God." The word healf or half is the native word for demi, as healf-clypiend, a semi-vowel, healf-tryndel, a hemi-sphere.
- Demand', a request, to claim or seek with authority; demand'-ed (R. xxxvi.), demand'-ing, demand'-er, demand'-able (not -ible); demand'ant, the plaintiff in a law-suit.
- French demande, v. demander; Latin demandāre (mādo, to order).
- Demarcation, de'mar.kay'.shun. A line of separation.
- French démarcation; Old English meare, a mark, a boundary.

Demean', to behave, to debase; demeaned' (2 syl.), demean'-ing; demeanour, de.mean'.or, behaviour.

"Demean" (to deport oneself). "De-port" is Latin dē porto, to carry; and "demean" is French dē mener, to lead or carry.

"Demean" (to debase oneself) is Old English ge-māne, common.

Demi-, dēm'-i- (French prefix), half. Demy, de-mī' [paper], q.v. Greek hēmi-, Latin sēmi- (from Greek hēmīsus, Latin sēmis, half).

Demi-god. A deified man.

This hybrid word is partly French and partly Anglo-Saxon.

Demi-lune. A term in Fort. (French demi lune, half moon.)

Demi-semiquaver, dēm'.i sēm'.i-qua'.ver. Half a semi-quaver, the shortest musical note.

This is French demi; Latin sēmi; Spanish quiebro, a trill!!

Demi-volt (Fr.) One of the seven movements in manège.

Demise, de.mize', death, to bequeath; demised' (2 syl.), demis'-ing (Rule xix.), demis'-able (Rule xxiii.)

Latin dēmittēre, supine dēmissum, to send down [to the grave], hence "death"; to send down [to heirs], hence "to bequeath."

Democracy, plu. democracies, de.mōk'.rā.sy, de.mōk'.ra.siz, a republic; democratize, de.mōk'.ra.tize, to make democratic; democratized' (4 syl.), democratiz'-ing (R. xix.)

Democrat, dēm'.o.krāt, a favourer of democracy; democratic, dēm'.o.krāt'.ik, or democratical, dēm'.o.krāt'.i.kāl (adj.); democratically, in a democratic manner.

Greek dēmōkratía (dēmōs kratēo, to govern by the people), dēmokratizo, dēmokratikōs.

(The last syllable is -cy, "state, office, rule"; not -sy. Similarly "aristocracy," "autocracy," and the hybrid "mobocracy.")

Demobilise, de.mō'.bil.ize. To "mobilise" troops is to render them liable to be moved out of their quarters to serve against an enemy. To "demobilise" them is to send them home, as not required for active service.

Demo'bilise, demo'bilised (4 syl.), demo'bilis-ing (R. xix.); demobilisation, de.mō'.bil.i.zay'.shun.

(These words came into popular use in the Franco-Prussian war, but have not yet found their way into dictionaries.)

Demolish, de.mōl.ish, to pull down; demolished (2 syl.), demol'ish-ing, demol'ish-er; demolition, de'.mōl.ish'.on.

French démolition, v. démolir; Latin demolitio, v. demoliri (mōlior is to heap up, de mōlior is the reverse of "heaping up").

Demon, dē'.mōn, a fiend; demonism, dē'.mōn.izm, belief in the active agency of demons; demonology, dē'.mo.nōl'.ogy, a systematic treatise on demons (Gk. lōgōs, discourse, &c.), demonolatry, dē'.mo.nōl'.atry, the worship of demons (Gk. latreia, worship), demoniac, dē'.mō.ni.āk, one possessed; demoniacal, dē'.mo.nī.a.kāl (adj.); demoniacal-ly; demo- nize, dě.mō.nize, to make one like a demon; de'monized (3 syl.), de'moniz-ing (Rule xix.), de'moniz-er.

French démon, démoniaque, démonographe, démonologie; Latin demon, dæmōniacus; Greek daimōn, daimōniakos, daimōnizōmai.

Demonstrate, de.mon'strate (not dēm'on.strate), to prove; demon'strated (Rule xxxvi.), demon'strāt-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii); demonstrat-ive, de.mon'stra.tiv; demon'strative-ly, demon'strative-ness; demonstrable, de.mon'stra.b'l; demon'strable-ness, demon'strably (1st Latin conj.) Rule xix. demonstration, dēm'on.stray''shun.

French démonstratif, démonstration; Latin demonstratio, demonstrativus, demonstrator, demonstrare (monstro, "to point out").

Demoralise, de.mor'al.ize, to injure the morals, to disorganize; demor'alised (4 syl.), demor'alis-ing (R. xix.), demor'alis-er; demoralisation, de.mor'al.i.zay''shun.

French démoralization, v. démoralizer; Latin de mores.

Dem'ster. A judge in the Channel Isles, and in the Isle of Man. Old English dēma, a judge; dēm[an], to judge; [-ster is not a feminine suffix, but is used in both genders].

Demulcent, de.mū'l.sent. Soothing. (Lat. demulcens, gen. -centis.)

Demur', to hesitate from doubt; demurred' (2 syl.), demurr-ing, demurr'-er (R. i.), in Law, an issue raised on some legal question in a suit, one who demurs; demurr'-able; demurr'-age, a fixed charge for the detention of trucks, &c., belonging to another railway company; an allowance made to the owners of a ship by the freighters for detention in port beyond time.

French demeure, v. demeurer; Latin dēmōrāri (mōra, delay).

Demure, de.meur', coy; demure'-ly, demure'-ness.

French des mœurs (avoir des mœurs, to have proper morals).

Demy, plu. demies, de.mī', de.mīze'. Dem'i. Demise' (2 syl.)

Demy', a size (in paper) between "royal" and "crown", a "scholarship" in Magdalen College, Oxford; demyskip, de.my'ship, the possession of a demy scholarship (-ship, Old Eng. affix, "tenure of," "state," "jurisdiction," &c.)

Demi, dēm'i (Fr. prefix), half; Lat. sēmi; Gk. hēmī.

Demise, de.mīze', death.

"Demy" [paper], that is, demi-royal 20 in. by 15, instead of 24 by 19.
"Demy" [Oxford], is a demi or inferior fellowship.

Den- (Old Eng. postfix) a valley, a wooded place: as Tenter-den.

Den, a cage for wild beasts, &c. (Old Eng. den or denu, a den.)

Denationalise, de.nash'on.āl.ize. To deprive of nationality. The Poles are denationalised, being incorporated into Russia, &c.; denationalised, de.nash'on.al.ized; denat'ionalis-ing.

Dene (1 syl.), a valley. Dean, a church dignitary.

"Dene," Old English dene. "Dean," Latin decānus.

Denial, de.ní.ál. (See Deny.)

Denizen, dén'.i.zén. A naturalised citizen.

Denizen is one made a citizen ex donatiōne regis (by royal gift or charter). A denizen was a trader within the walls of a town; a foreign was a trader without the walls (Lat. foris, abroad).

Low Latin denizenus; Old French donaison (Latin donum, a gift).

Denominate, de.nóm'.i.nate, to designate; denom'ināt-ed (R. xxxvi.), denom'ināt-ing (R. xix.); denom'ināt-er, one who denominates; denom'ināt-or, in fractions, the figure below the line, as $\frac{1}{2}$ (here "2" is the denominator because it "designates" into how many parts the unit is divided).

Denomination, de.nóm'.i.nay''shun; name, a society (chiefly applied to religious sects); denominational, de.nóm'.i.nay''shun.ál, sectarian; denomina'tional-ly; denomina-tive, de.nom'.i.na.tív.

French dénominateur, a denominator, dénomitatif, dénomination; Latin dénomminātio, dénomminātivus, dénomminātor, that which gives the name [to a fraction], dénommināre (from nōmen, a name).

Denote (2 syl.), to indicate; denōt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), denōt-ing (R. xix.), denōt-able; denotation, de'.no.tay''shun; denotative, do.nō'.ta.tív, having the power to denote.

(Fr. dénotation, v. dénoter; Lat. denōtātio, denōtāre (nōta, a mark).

Denouement (French), da'.nou.mah'n (not da.nou'.e.mong), the winding up or final catastrophe of a drama, &c.

Denounce, de.nounse', to inform against; denounced' (2 syl.), denounc'-ing (R. xix.), denounc'-er, denounce-ment. (Five words drop the final e before -ment, viz., acknowledg-ment, abridg-ment, argu-ment, lodg-ment, judg-ment.)

Denunciation, de.nun'.se.a''shun, a public denouncement; denunciator (not -ter), one who denounces; denunciatory, de.nūn'.she.a.try, containing a denouncement.

French dénoncer, dénonciation; Latin denunciātio, denunciāre, to denounce (de nuncio, to inform against).

Dense, dence, thick. Dens, denz, plu. of den; dense'-ly, closely; dense'-ness, den'sity. (Rule xix.)

French dense, densité; Latin densus, densitas, v. densare.

Dent, a notch. Dint, force, power.

"There is a dent in the [teapot]," not dint.

"He did it by dint of [kindness], by the power or force of..."

Dent (verb), dent'-ed (R. xxxvi.), dent'-ing. The more usual forms of this verb are indent', indent'ed, indent'-ing; indentation, in'.den.tay''shun (has no simple form).

Dent'-al, pertaining to the teeth; dent'-ist; den'tistry, the art and profession of a dentist; dentition, dén.tish'un, the "cutting" of teeth.

Dentate, děn'.tate (in Bot.), toothed [applied to leaves]; dentated, děn'.tā'ted (R. xxxvi.); dent'ate-ly.

Dentelle, dahn'.tell. Lace, lace-work.

Denticle, den'.tik'l, a small projecting point like a tooth;
denticulate, děn.tik'u-late (in Bot.), finely toothed;
dentic'ulate-ly; denticulation, děn.tik'u-lay''shun.

Dentifrice, děn'.ti.frīs. Tooth-powder.

Latin dentes frico, to rub the teeth.

Dentine, den'.tine (not den'.teen). The tissue which forms the body of a tooth. (-ine Lat. "substance.")

Dentils, děn'.tīlz (in Arch.). Little square projections in the bed-mouldings of cornices, &c.

French dent, a tooth; dental, dentelle, denticule, dentifrice, dentiste, dentition; Lat. dens, gen. dentis, denticulus, dentifricium, dentitio.

Denude' (2 syl), to strip; denūd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), denūd'-ing (Rule xix.), denūd'-er, denudation, de.nu'.dāy''shun, divestment.

French dénudation, v. dénuder; Latin dēnudatio, v. dēnudāre, to make entirely naked (from nudus, naked).

Denunciation, de.nun'.se.ā''shun. (See Denounce.)

Deny', to refuse, to contradict; denies, de.nīze'; denied, de.nīde'; denī'-er, denī'-able, denī'-al, but deny'-ing (Rule xi.)

French dénier, to deny; déni, a denial; Latin dēnegāre, to refuse.

Deodand, de'.o.dand. A fine on the master, when one of his chattels has caused the death of a human creature.

Latin deo dandus, given to God. As the person thus killed died without absolution, the money was given for "masses for the dead." Abolished in 1846.

Deodorise, dē.ō'.do.rīze, to disinfect, to neutralise bad odours; deo'dorised (4 syl.), deo'doris-ing (R. xix.); deo'doris-er, a disinfectant; deodorisation, dē.ō'.do.rī:zay''shun.

Latin de ōdeo, i.e. ōleo, to stink (de reverses).

Deoxidate, dē.ox'.i.date, to deprive of oxygen; deox'idāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), deox'idāt-ing (Rule xix.), deoxidation, dē.ox'.i.dāy''shun, deprivation of oxygen.

Deoxidise, dē.ox'.i.dīze, to deprive of oxygen; deox'idised
(4 syl.), deox'idis-ing, deox'idis-er, that which deoxidises.

Deoxygenate, dē.ox.ij'.e.nate, to deprive of oxygen; deoxig'enāt-ed, deoxig'enāt-ing, deoxig'enāt-er, that which deprives of oxygen; deoxygenation, dē.ox.ij'.e.nāy''shun.
(It is usual to spell these words with -xi-, but as "oxygen" is spelt with a "y," the change should never have been made.)

French de-oxydable, -oxydation, -oxyder, to deoxidise, -oxygénation,
v. -oxygèner; Greek oxus genô, to generate sour or acid [compounds].

Depart', to leave; depart'-ed (R. xxxvi.), depart'ing, departure, de.par'.tchur, a going away, death.

Department, a specific branch of a business; depart-mental, de.part.men'.tāl, limited to a department.

French départ, v. départir, département, départemental;

Latin de partire or -iri, to separate from [others].

Depend', to rely on; depend'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), depend'-ing, depend'-ent (not dependant), dependent-ly, depend'-enco (not dependance); depend'ency, plu. dependencies, de.pën'.den'.siz; depend'able (R. xxiii). Independence, in'-depend'ency, in'depend'ent, in'depend'ently (in-, neg.)

Dependent on [another]; Independent of [all others].

Pendent from [the ceiling], i.e., hanging down from.

French dépendance, dépendant (wrong conj.); Lat. dependens, gen. dependentis, v. dependere (de pendeo, to hang on or from).

Depict', to paint, to describe; depict'ed (Rule xxxvi.), depict'ing; depict'er, one who depicts. (Latin depictus, painted.)

Depilatory, de.pil'.a.to.ry, an ointment or lotion for removing hair [from the face and arms].

French dépilatoire; Latin depilare, to remove the hair (pilus, hair).

Depletion, dē.plee'.shun, exhaustion; depletive, dē.plee'.tīv.

Latin deplere (pleo, to fill, de reverses).

Deplore' (2 syl.), to lament; deplored' (2 syl.), deplor'-ing (R. xix.), deploring-ly (adv.); deplor'-er, one who deplores; deplor'-able, deplor'ably, de-plor'ableness; deplora-bility, de.plōr'.a.bil''.i.ty, deplorable state.

French déplorable, v. déplorer; Latin deplorare (plōro, to wail).

Depolarise, de.pō'.lar.ize, to deprive of polarity; depo'larised (4 syl.); depo'laris-ing (R. xix.); depolarisation, de.pō'.lar.izay''.shun. To polarise light is to split each undulation into two, each split undulation is "polarised light."

Polarity, po.lar'rī.ty, the "state of being polarised."

French polarisation, polariser, polarité; Latin polaris, polar.

Depopulate, dē.pōp'.u.late, to lay waste, to deprive of inhabitants; depop'ulāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), depop'ulāt-ing (R. xix.), depop'ulāt-or (R. xxxvii.); depop'ulation, -lay''.shun.

French dépopulation; Latin depōpulatio, depōpulātor, depōpulāre (pōpulus, people), to deprive of people, de privative.

Deport', to behave; deport'-ed (R. xxxvi.), deport'-ing; deport'-ment, behaviour. The verb deport [to behave] must be followed by a reciprocal pronoun, as oneself, himself, myself, herself, themselves, yourself, yourselves, &c.

French déporter, to banish; Latin deportare, to carry away (porto, to bear or carry). We talk of a man's bearing [way of conducting himself], his carriage [figure and bearing], &c.

Depose, de.pozé', to degrade from office (s between two vowels = z); deposed' (2 syl.), depōs'-ing (Rule xix); depōs'-er.

Deposit, de.pōz'.it, something intrusted to another, a pawn, to give something as a pledge, to lay by money in the bank; depos'it-ed (R. xxxvi.), depos'it-ing, depos'it-or (R. xxxvii.); depository, de.poz'.i.to.ry, place for deposits.

(This word ought to be depository; Fr. dépositaire; Lat. depōsitarius.)

Deposition, de'.po.zish'un. Statement made on oath.

French déposer, déposition; Latin depōsitio, depōsitor, depōsitus, depōnere, supine depōsitum (de pono, to lay [something] down).

Depôt, plu. depôts, dă.pō, dă.pōzé' (Fr.), not day'po, nor dēp'.po, a place where stores of a specific sort are kept.

Deprave' (2 syl.), to corrupt; depraved' (2 syl.), deprāv'-ing (R. xix.), deprāv'-er; depravity, plu. depravities, de-prāv'.i.tiz, moral turpitude; depravedness, de.prūv'd'.ness.

Depravation, de.pray.vay'.shun. State of moral turpitude.

Deprivation, dě.pry.vay'.shūn. Divestment.

French dépravation, v. depraver; Latin deprāvatio, deprāvare (from prāvus, crooked; de-pravo, to dis-tort).

"Deprivation," is Latin deprivatio (from privare, to take away).

Deprecate, děp'.re.kate, to blame, to curse; dep'recāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dep'recāt-ing (Rule xix.), dep'recating-ly, dep'recāt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.); deprecatory, dep'.re.ka.t'ry; deprecative, dep'.re.ka.t'iv, dep'recative-ly.

Deprecation, děp'.re.kay''.shun. A cursing; a blaming.

Depreciation, dě.pree'.sī.ā.shun. Detraction of value.

French dépréciation, dépréciatif; Latin deprecari, to pray against.

Depreciate, dě.pree'.sī.ate, to lessen in value; depre'ciāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), depre'ciāt-ing (R. xix.), depre'ciāt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.); depreciation, dě.pree'.sī.ā''.shun, detraction of value; depreciative, dě.pree'.sī.ā.t'iv; depre'ciative-ly; depreciatory, dě.pree'.sī.ā.tō.ry.

Fr. dépréciation, v. déprécier; Latin depre'ciare (pretium, the price).

Depredate, děp'.rē.date, to plunder; dep'redāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dep'redāt-ing (Rule xix.), dep'redāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); depredatory, dep''.re.da't'ry (adj.), plundering; depredation, děp'.re.day''.shun, spoliation.

French déprédation; Latin de-prædatio, prædator, prædatorius (from præda, prey, booty).

Depress', to lower in spirit or in value; depressed' (2 syl.), depress'-ing, depress'-ing-ly, depress'-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.), depression, de.presh'un, lowness, dejection, concavity.

French dépression; Latin depressio, depressor, v. deprimo, supine depressum (de premo, to press down).

Deprive', to take away, to lose; deprived', deprīv'-ing (R. xxxvi.), deprīv'-er, deprīv'-able, deprivation, dě.pri'.vay''.shun.

Latin de-privāre, to take away from; privātio.

Depth. Observe these four words, Length, breadth, depth, and height (not height, as it is often pronounced).

Deep; -th, Old Eng. postfix, converts adj. to abstract nouns.

Depurate, de.pū.rate, to free from impurities; depu'rāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), depu'rāt-ing (R. xix.); deputation, de.pū.ray''.shun; depurative, depu'.ra.tīv.

(The accent of these words is often thrown on the first syllable, but the way given is the more correct.)

French dépurer, dépuration; Latin depūratio (purus, pure, clean).

Depute' (2 syl.), to appoint; depūt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), depūt'-ing (R. xix.), depūt'-er; deputy, plu. deputies, děp'.u.tiz, persons deputed; deputation, dep'.u.tay''.shun.

French députation, v. députer; Latin depūtāre, to lop off (pūto, to prune). A "deputy" is one cut off from others for a given object.

Derange, de.rainj' (not de.rānj), to disorder; deranged' (2 syl.), derāng'-ing (R. xix.), derāng'-er, derange ment (only five words drop the e final before ment. Rule xviii. ¶).

French dérangement, v. déranger (ranger to put in rank, de reverses).

Dercetis, děr'.sě.tis. A fossil eel-like fish in the chalk formation.

Greek Derkētis, a Syrian goddess, like a mermaid, similar to Dagon.

Derelict, *der'ry.lik*t, abandoned, goods forsaken by the owner; dereliction [of duty], der'ry.lik''.shun (not derelection), neglect [of duty] involving guilt.

Latin dērelīctio, dērelīctus (de relinquer, relictus, to leave).

Deride' (2 syl.), to laugh at; derid'-ed (R. xxxvi.), derid'-ing (R. xix.), derid'-er, one who derides.

Derision, de.rizj'.un, ridicule; derisive, de.rī'.siv; deri'sive-ly, derisive-ness (Rule xxxiii.)

French dérider, dérision; Latin dēridēre supine dērisum, to laugh at; derisio.

Derive' (2 syl.), to acquire, receive, draw from a source; derivod' (2 syl.), derīv'-ing (R. xix.), derīv'-er, deriv'able.

Derivation, der'ry.way''.shun, tracing to the root, descent.

Derivative, de.riv'.a.tīv, a word formed from another, not fundamental; derivative-ly. Rule (xvii.)

French dérivatif, dérivation, v. dériver; Latin dērivātio, dērivātivus, dērivāre (de rivo [to draw] from the river or source).

Dernier ressort, derr'.ne.a res'.sor (French). The last expedient or resource. (Not dernier resort, which is one word French and one English, and ought not to be tolerated. Either say dernier ressort or the last resource.)

Derogate, der'ro.gate, to disparage; der'ogāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dero'gāt-ing; derogation, der'ró.gay".shun.

Derogator, de.rög'.a.tor, a detractor; derog'atory, derog'-atori-ly (Rule xi.); derog'atori-ness (Rule xi).

French dérégation, dérégatoire, v. déroger; Latin derógatio, derógator, dérégativus, derógatorius, derógatäre (frequentative), derógäre. ("Rogäre" is bring in a bill or propose a law; "de-rogare" is the reverse, i.e., to repeal a law.)

Der rick. A temporary crane for removing goods from a vessel. So called from Derrick, the Tyburn hangman (17th century).

Dervish or dervise, der'.vîs. A Mohammedan "monk" of great austerity. (Persian, derwesch, poor.)

Descant, des.kānt', to comment, to talk to oneself; descant'-ed (R. xxxvi.), descant'-ing, descant'-er.

(The first syllable should be dis. The word is "dis-cant.")

Spanish discantar, to descant; Latin dis cantäre, to sing apart.

Descend, de.send' (not des.send'). The word is compounded of de and scando, to climb down); descend-ed, de.send'.ed (R. xxxvi.), descend-ing, de.send'.ing.

Descendant. One proceeding from an ancestor. (This word should be "descendent;" but, as usual, we owe our error to the French.) Descendent (in Astr.), is the opposite of ascendant. (Here again is a marvellous confusion. It should be "The star is in the ascendent or descendent;" but if the French error is preferred, then take the French words ascendant and descendant, and not one right and one wrong.)

Descend'-ible (not -able); descendibility, de.send'.i.bîl".i.ty.

Descension, de.sen'.shun, a falling, hence a quarrel or falling out (verbs in -d and -de, add -sion instead of -tion, R. xxxiii.); descensional, de.sen'.shun.al (adj.)

Descent, de.sent' (not dis.sent), slope, progress down; but Dissent, dis.sent', a disagreement, to differ.

French descendant, verb descendre, descente; Latin descendens, gen. descendentis, descensio, descendere (de scando, to climb down).

"Dissent" is Latin dissentio, i.e., dis sentio, to think differently.

Describe, de.skribe' (not des.kribe). (The word is compounded of de and scribo, to write down, not des-cribo.)

Described, de.skribd'; describ-ing, de.skribe.ing (Rule xix.); describ-er, de.skribe'.er, one who describes; describable, de.skribe'.a.ble (Rule xxiii.) The negative is indescribable, that which cannot be described.

Description, de.skrip'.shun (not dis.skrip'.shun); descriptive, de.skrip'.tîv (not dis.skrip'.tîv); descriptively; descriptive-ness, de.skrip'.tîv.ness.

French descriptif, description; Latin describere, descriptio (de scribo, to write down, to limit or define).

Descry, to espy. Deery, to cry down.

Descry, des.kry' (not de.skry', nor yet dis.kry'); describes, des.krize' (not dis.krize), R. xi.; descried, des.krīde' (not dis.krīde); descri-er (not descriyer, R. xi.). des.cri.er.

(The first syl. ought to be dis- as it is usually pronounced.)

"Descry" is a corruption of the Norman discriver; Latin discerno, supine discrētum, to discern.

"Deery" is the French dé crier, to cry down.

Desecrate, dēs'.e.krāte, to profane what is sacred, the opposite of consecrate; des'ecrāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), des'ecrāt-ing (R. xix.); des'ecrāt-er, one who desecrates; desecration, dēs'.e.kray''shun, profanation. (One of the few words in -tion which is not French.)

(This word must not be confounded with execrate, "to detest," "to curse.")

Latin dēsecrāre, dēsecrātus (sacrāre, is to hallow, de reverses).

Desert, dēz'.ert; desert, de.zert'; dessert, dez.zert'.

§ Desert, dēz'.ert (noun); de.zert' (verb). Rule 1.

Desert, dēz'.ert, a wilderness, a solitude; dē.zert', to abandon; desert'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), desert'-ing, desert'-er (should be desertor); desertion, dē.zer'.shun.

§ Desert, dē.zert'. That which deserves reward or punishment.

§ Dessert (with double s). The course of fruit at dinner.

"Desert" (a wilderness, to abandon); French désert, verb désarter, déserteur, désertion; Latin desertum, a desert; desertor, desertio, desertāre (frequentative of sēro, to knit together, and de- which reverses, hence to unbind, forsake, abandon).

"Desert" (merit), Latin dēservire, supine dēservitum, contracted to desertum, something deserved.

"Dessert" (of fruit), French dessert, what is brought on after the table is cleared (desservir, to clear the table).

Deserve, de.zerve', to merit; deserved, de.zervd'; deserv-ing, de.zer'.ving (Rule xix.); deserv-er, de.zer'.ver ("s" between two vowels = z).

Deservedly, de.zervd'.ly, more often de.zer'.ved.ly.

Deserving-ly (only in a good sense).

Latin deservio, to merit for service (servio, to do a service).

Deshabille, properly pronounced days'-a-bee'-ya, but generally called dis'.a-beel, undress. (French.)

Desiccate, des'.ik.kate, to dry up; des'iccāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.) des'iccāt-ing (Rule xix.); desiccant, des'.ik.kānt, a medicine to dry a running sore; desiccation, des'.ik.kay''shun, the act of making dry, or state of being dry.

Desiccative, de.sik'.ka.tiv (adj.). Drying or tending to dry. ("Desiccation" is one of the few words in -tion not French.)

Latin desiccātio, desiccāre (sicco, to dry; siccus, dry).

Desiderate, de.sîd'.e.rate, to want; desid'erât-ed (Rule xxxvi.); desid'erâ-ting; desiderative, de.sîd'.e.ra.tîv. (These words are not much used.)

Desideratum, plu. desiderata, de.sîd'.e.ray''.tum, plu. de.sîd'.e.ray''.tûh. Something needed to supply a deficiency.

Desideration, de.sîd'.e.ray''.shun. Something required to supply a deficiency.

Latin dēsîdērâtio, dēsîdērâtivus, dēsîdērâtus, dēsîdērâre, to crave for.

Design, de.zîné', a scheme, a plan, to intend, to plan, &c.; designed, de.zînéd'; design-ing, de.zîné'îng; design-er, de.zîné'.er; designed-ly, de.zîné'.ed.ly, intentionally; design-able, de.zîné'.a.b'l; design-less, de.zîné'.less; designless-ly; design-ment, de.zîné'.ment.

(In all the examples given above the "g" is silent, but is pronounced hard in the following derivatives, and "s" is no longer = z.)

Designate, des'sîg.nate, to point out, to name; des'îgnât-ed (Rule xxxvi.); des'îgnât-ing, des'îgnât-or. (R. xxxvii.)

Designation, des'sîg.nay''.shun. A name, &c. (Rule lx.)

French désîgner, désîgnation; Latin dēsîgnâtio, designator, design[ô], to mark out (signum, a sign or distinguishing mark).

Desire, de.zîré', to wish for ("s" between two vowels = z); desired' (2 syl.), desîr'-ing (R. xix.), desîr'-er, desîr'-able, desirably, desirable-ness.

Desirous, de.zîré'.us, wishful; desîr'ous-ly.

Fr. désîr, désirable, v. désîrer, désîreux. Lat. dēsîdêre, which furnishes the verb dēsîdêre, to crave for; dēsîdêrium, desire, craving for.

Desist, de.sîst', to leave off (Rule lx.); desist'-ed (Rule xxxvi.); desist'-ing; desistance, de.zîs'.tânce, a ceasing to act.

(The first "s" in "desist" is pronounced between s and z; but in "resist" it is decidedly = z.)

French désîster; Latin desîstêre, desîstens (sisto), to continue).

Desk, a sloping table. (Old Eng. disc, a table, a board, a dish.)

Desolate, dēs'.o.late, lonesome, in a ruinous state, to lay waste; des'olât-ed (R. xxxvi.), des'olât-ing (R. xix.); des'olât-er, one who lays waste; des'olât-ly; desolatory, des'.o.la.t'ry.

Desolation, dēs'.o.lay''.shun, a state of ruin and gloom.

French désolateur, désolation, verb désoler; Latin dēsôlâtio, dēsôlâtus, dēsôlâre (from sôlus, alone).

Despair (not dispair), hopelessness, to be without hope; despaired' (2 syl.), despair'-ing, despair'-ing-ly, despair-er.

Desperate, dēs'.pe.rate, reckless, without hope; desperate-ly, des'perate-ness (Rule xvii.)

Desperation, des'.pe.ray''.shun. Recklessness, hopelessness.

Desperado, plu. desperadoes (Rule xlii.), des'.pě.ray''.doze (not děs'.pe.ráh.doze), a bravo. (Spanish.)

Latin desperātio, desperātus, despērāre (de spes, without hope).

Despatch' (not dispatch). Haste, a special message, to send on special business. Despatches (plu.), written documents sent to or from a public servant on business of state, (R. liii.), despatched (2 syl.), despatch'-ing.

Spanish despachar verb, despacho noun; Latin de spātor, to travel from [one person or place to another].

Despicable, des'.pī.kū.b'l (not des.pīk'.ā.b'l). See below.

Despise' (2 syl.), not dispize, to contemn; despised' (2 syl.), despis'-ing, despis'-er; despis'-able, contemptible; despicable, des'.pī.kā.b'l (not des.pīk'.ā.b'l), worthless, vile; despis'-ing-ly, with disdain; des'pically, contemptibly; despicable-ness, des''.pī.kā.b'l.ness (not des.pīk'.ā.b'l.ness).

Latin despicābilis, despicio (de spicio, to look down on one).

Despite, děs.pite'. An act of malice, notwithstanding. (It is never used as a verb, the verb is "to spite.")

Latin despicio, supine despectum (de specio, to look down on one).

Despoil' (2 syl.), to plunder; despoiled' (2 syl.), despoil'-ing; despoil'-er, one who despoils.

Despoliation, dě.spō'.li.ā''.shun (not despoliation).

(This noun is very little used, spoliation is used instead.)

Latin despōliāre, to pillage; spoliare, spoliatio, &c.

Despond', to fail in hope; despond'-ed (R. xxxvi.), despond'-ing, despond'-ing-ly; despond'-er, one who desponds; despond'-ent (not -ant), low spirited; despond'-ent-ly, despond'-ence, despondency, děs.pŏn'.děn.cy.

Latin despondens, gen. despondentis, despondere (spondeo is "to answer [one's expectation]," de reverses, hence de-spondeo is to disappoint one's hope, "to lose hope.")

Despot, děs.pŏt, a tyrant, an autocrat; despotic, děs.pŏt'.ik, absolute; despot'ical, despot'ic-ly, despot'ical-ly; despotism, děs'.po.tizm, autocracy.

French despote, despotique, despotism; Greek děspŏtēs, děspŏtikŏs, verb děspōzō, to obtain mastery.

Dessert, děz.zert'; desert, de.zert'; desert, dez'.ert.

Dessert, děz.zert'. A course of fruit after dinner.

Desert, de.zert'. What is deserved (good or ill).

Desert, dez'.ert. A solitude, a wilderness.

Desert, de.zert'. To abandon (q.v.)

"Dessert," French dessert, the course served after the table is cleared; desservir, to clear the table.

"Desert" (what is deserved), Latin děservio, sup. děservitum, to do one a service, hence "to deserve [payment]."

"Desert" (a wilderness), French děsert; Latin děsertum.

"Desert" (to abandon), the same. (Sero is to join, as de reverses de-sero is to disjoin, and hence "to forsake.")

Destine, děs'.tín (not des.tine), to design or purpose; destined' (2 syl.); destining, děs'.tín-ing (Rule xix.)

Destination, děs'.tí.nay''.shun. The ultimate goal.

Destiny, plu. destinies, děs'.tí.nŷ, děs'.tí.níz. Fate, doom.

French destination, destinée, v. destiner; Latin destinatio, destināre. (Greek steno to bind fast.)

Destitute, děs'.tí.tūte. Friendless, needy, without.

Destitution, děs'.tí.tū''.shun. Utter want, distress.

French destitution, destitué; Latin destitutio, destitūere (stātuo is to erect, as de reverses de-stātuo is to pull down. A "destitute" person is one "pulled down.")

Destroy' (not distroy), to demolish; destroyed' (2 syl.), destroy'-ing (Rule xiii.), destroy'-er, one who destroys.

Destruction, des.trūk'.shun (not distruccion), demolition; destructive, des.trūk'.tív; destructive-ly, destructive-ness; destructible, des.trūk'.tí.b'l (not -able), liable to...; destructibility, des.trūk'.tí.bíl'.i.ty, capable of destruction.

French destructibilité, destructible, destructif, destruction; Latin destructio, destruere (struo is to pile up, de reverses).

Desuetude, des'swe.tude. Disuse, discontinuance.

(It ought to be pronounced in four syllables, des'su.e.tude.)

Fr. désuétude; Lat. dēsuetudo. (Sueo is "to be in use," de reverses.)

Desultory, děs'ŭl.to.ry, unconnected; des'ultori-ly (R. xi.), des'ultori-ness (R. xi.), running from one subject to another.

Latin desultorius, (desŭlio, de sŭlio, to leap from one thing to another). "Desultor" was a rider who leaped from one horse to another, as a rider in a circus. An Insulter is one who leaps on you.

Detach, de.tatch', to separate; detached' (2 syl.), detach'-ing, detach'-ment, ships or troops sent to the main body.

French détachement, v. détacher; Italian de staccare, staccato in music is when each note is isolated.

Detail, de'tail (noun), de.tail' (verb), Rule l.

De'tail. Minute particulars [of a narrative].

Detail', to narrate particulars, to deal out piecemeal; detailed' (2 syl.), detail'-ing, detail'-er.

French détail, v. détailler (tailler, to cut; German theilen, to divide).

Detain', to keep back; detained' (2 syl.), detain'-ing; detain'-er, one who detains, a writ to a warder to continue to keep a prisoner in prison.

Detention, de.těn'.shun (-tion not -sion, Rule xxxiii.)

Detēneo (Latin), makes "detentum" not detensum, in the sup.

French détention, v. détenir; Latin detēneo (de tēneo, to hold back. (The pseudo diphthong -ai- is indefensible. Probably it arises from some confused notion that tain is a contraction of taken (ta'en.)

Detect', to discover; detect'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), detect'-ing, detect'-er (should be detect-or); detective, de.těk'.tīv; detection, de.těk'.shun; detect-ible.

Latin dēctor, dēctio, dētēgere supine detectum (tēgo is "to cover," de reverses, hence de tēgo is "to uncover").

Deter', to hinder by fear, &c.; deterred' (2 syl.), deter'-ing (Rule i.), deter'-er, deter'-ent (adj.), deter'-ment (one r, because -ment does not begin with a vowel).

Latin dēterrere (de terreo, to frighten from [doing a thing]).
("Deter" ought to be spelt with double "r." It is not from the verb dētēro, to bruise, but from dēterreo, to frighten).

Detergent, de.těr'.gent (n. and adj.), that which cleans, cleansing; detersive, de.těr'.siv, having the power to cleanse; deter-sion (not deter-tion), de.těr'.shun, the act of cleansing.

French détergent, v. déterger, détersif; Latin dētergens, gen. dēter-gentis, dētēgere, sup. -tersum (de tergo to scour out [a stain]).

Deteriorate, de.těr'.ri.o.rate (not de.tee'.ri.o.rate), to degenerate; deteriorated, de.těr'.ri.o.rate.ed (Rule xxxvi.); deterio-rāt-ing (Rule xix.); deterioration, de.ter're.o.ray''.shun.

French détérioration, v. détériorer; Latin dētrius (adv.) worse. Not a derivative of "de terreo," but of dē tēro, to wear away.

Determine, de.těr'.mĭn, to decide; deter'mined (3 syl.), deter'-mĭn-ing (Rule xix.), deter'mĭn-er, deter'mĭn-able.

Determinate, de.těr'.mĭn.ate (verb and adj.), to limit, limited; deter'minated (Rule xxxvi.), deter'mināt-ing (Rule xix.), deter'mināt-or (Rule xxxvii.); determinative, de.těr'.-mĭn.a.tĭv; deter'minative-ly, specifically.

Determination, de.ter'.mĭ.nay''.shun. A fixed resolution. ¹

French déterminatif, détermination, v. déterminer; Latin dēter-minātio, dētermināre (terminus, a boundary).

Detersive, de.těr'.siv, &c. (See Detergent.)

Detest', to hate; detest'-ed (R. xxxvi.), detest'-ing, detest'-er, detest'-able (not -ible, 1st Lat. conj.), detestably, detest'-able-ness; detestation, de'.tes.tay''.shun, abhorrence.

French détestable, détestation, v. détester; Latin dētestābilis, dētestā-tio, dētestāri (de testor, to bear witness against one).

Dethrone' (2 syl.), to drive from a throne; dethroned' (2 syl.), dethrōn'-ing (Rule xix.), dethrōn'-er, dethrone'-ment.

Latin de thronus, [to remove] from a throne.

Detonate, de'.to.nate, to explode; de'tonāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), de'tonāt-ing (Rule xix.); detonation, de'.to.nay''.shun.
(Very often pronounced dēt-; but the "e" is long.)

French détonation, v. détoner; Latin dē-tōnāre, to thunder mightily.

Detour (Fr.), da.toor'. A roundabout or circuitous way.

Detract, de.trăkt' (not de.trăk'), to depreciate; detract'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), detract'-ing, detract'-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.), detract'ing-ly; detract'-ive, de.trăk'.tīv, depreciative; detraction, de.trăk'.shun, depreciation.

French v. détracter, détraction; Latin detractor, detractio, de-trahère, supine de-tractum, to draw off, hence, to lessen. There is a Low Latin verb de tracto, meaning "to tear limb from limb with horses."

Detriment, dēt.rī.ment, injury; detrimental, dēt'.ri.men''.tāl.

French détriment; Latin detrimentum (detēro, sup. trilum, to bruise.)

Detritus (should be detritus, but generally called dē'.trī.tus), débris; detrition, de.trish'.un, the act of wearing away. (We perversely disregard Latin quantities, Rule lvii.)

French détrition, détritus; Latin de-tēro, sup. tritum, to wear down.

Detrude' (2 syl.), to thrust down; detrūd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), detrūd'-ing; detrusion, de.trū'.zhun (-sion not -tion, R. xxxiii.)

("De-trude" is to thrust down; "intrude," to thrust oneself in.) Latin de trudere, supine trūsum, to thrust down or away.

Detruncate, de.trūn'.kate, to lop off the limbs; detrun'cāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), detrun'cāt-ing (Rule xix.); detruncation, de.trun'.kay''.shun, mutilation.

("Detruncation" is one of the few words in "-tion" not Fr.)

Latin detruncatio, detruncāre, sup. detruncātum, to lop off.

Deuce, duse, two of cards or dice, the devil; deuced, du'.sed, devilish, very; deuced-ly, du'.sed.ly, devilishly, very.

"Deuce" (two), French deux; Latin duo, two.

"Deuce" (the devil), "quosdam demones quos 'dusios' Galli nuncupant" (St. Aug. xv. 23); Danish duus, the deuce.

Deutero-, du'.tē.ro- (Greek prefix meaning "second").

Deutero-gamy, du'.te.rōg'.a.my. A second marriage on the death of the first husband or wife. (Gk. gāmos, marriage.)

Deutero-nomy, du'.te.rōn'.o.my. The second giving of the law by Moses, the 5th book of the Bible. (Gk. nomos, the law.)

Dent - (contraction of deutero-, see above). In Chem., it indicates two equivalents of oxygen to one of the metal named: as Deutoxide, du.tōx'.ide [of copper, &c.], two equivalents of oxygen to one of copper (deuto oxide).

Devastate, de'vās.tate, to lay waste; de'vastāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), de'vastāt-ing, de'vastāt-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.); devastation, de'vās.tay''.shun, a state of ruin, havoc.

(The first syl. is often pronounced dēv-, but the "e" is long.)

French dévastation, v. dévaster; Latin dēvastatio, dēvastātor, dēvastāre (de vasto, to lay thoroughly waste).

Develop, de.vēl'.op, to disclose. Envel'op, to inclose.

(The noun envelope [for letters] has a final "e;" "develop" has no noun. Bear in mind the two verbs.)

Developed, de.věľ.ŏpt; devel'op-ing, devel'op-ment (R.iii. b).

Fr. développement, v. développer; Ital. viluppo, a bundle or intricacy; de reverses, hence de-velop is to undo a bundle or intricacy.

Deviate, de'.vi.ate, to vary, to turn from the right way; de'viāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), de'viāt-ing (R. xix.) de'viāt-er; deviation, de'.vi.a''.shun, a difference; devious, de'.vi.us; de'vious-ly, de'vious-ness.

French déviatiōn, v. dévier; Latin dēvius (de via, out of the way).

Device' (2 syl.) A contrivance, a motto, a symbol. (See Devise.)

Devil, děv'.il, Satan; dev'il-ish, maliciously wicked, very; dev'ilish-ly, maliciously, exceedingly; dev'ilish-ness; devil-ism, děv'.il.izm, devilish conduct; dev'il-ment, dev'il-ry, mischief and malice fit for a devil.

Dev'il, to grill with cayenne pepper; dev'iled (2 syl.), dev'il-ing. (Old Eng. deoul, deōfol or deōfl, deōflīc.)

Devious, de'.vi.us. (See Deviate.)

Devise, de.vīze', to scheme; device, de.vice', a scheme (R. li.); devised' (2 syl.), devis'-ing, devis'-er, devis'-able (R. xxxiii.); devisee, dě.vī.zee', the person to whom "real estate" is devised; divisor, de.vī.zor', the person who bequeaths or leaves by will. Divisor, di.vī.zōr, the figure by which a sum is divided.

Fr. devise, a motto. Ital. divisa, a coat of arms; divisare, to devise.

Devoid' (2 syl.), empty, destitute. (Lat. de viduus, wholly void.)

Devolve' (2 syl.), to become the duty of, to pass over from one to another; devolved' (2 syl.), devolv'-ing (Rule xix.), devolv'-ment; devolution, de'.vo.lu''.shun.

("Devolve" is followed by on: "The duty devolves on me.")

French dévolutiōn, the falling of property to relations in default of proper heirs. Latin devolvere, to roll down; devolutus, devolved.

Devonian, de.vō'.ni.an. The Old Red Sandstone formation; so called from Devonshire, where it is largely developed.

Devonite, dev'.o.nīte. A mineral found at Barnstaple in Devonshire ("ite" in Geo. means a "stone" or "fossil").

Old English Defene, a Devonshire man; Defena-scir, Devonshire. Latin Dumnonii, British Dynonii, the glen people.

Devote' (2 syl.), to consecrate; devōt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), devōt'-ing (R. xix.); devotion, de.vō'.shun; devo'tion-ist, devo'tion-al, devo'tional-ly; devo'tional-ist, a devotee; devo'ted (3 syl.), strongly attached; devo'ted-ly, devo'ted-ness.

Devotee, děv'.o.tee'. One abandoned to religious exercises.

Devout, pious; devout'-ly, devout'-ness.

French dévot, dévotiōn. Latin dēvōtio, dēvōtus, dēvōtare whence "devote;" dēvōvere, supine dēvōtum, whence devout.

Devour', to eat up; devoured' (2 syl.), devour'-ing, devour'-ing-ly, devour'-er. Devoirs, d'voirs (French), respects.

("I pay my devoirs to you," is a jocose civility.)

French dévorer; Latin devorāre (vōro; vōrax, voracious).

Dew, a deposition of the moisture of the air. Due, owing (q.v.); dewed (1 syl.), dew'-ing, dew'-y (adj.), dew-less, dew-drop, dew'i-ness (with i, R. xi). Germ. thau; Dan. dug.

Dexter (in Her.) The right side of a shield or coat of arms (to a person standing behind it, not to one in front of it).

Dexterity, dex.ter'ri.ty, expertness; dexterous, dex'.te.rus (not dex'.trus); dex'terous-ly, dex'terous-ness.

It means "right-handed" (Latin dexter, the right hand); "left-handed is awkward (awke, the left hand), sinister (Latin), and gauche = gōsh (French), the left hand.

Dextrine, dex'.trīn. British gum made from starch.

Latin dexter, the right hand ("ine," in Chem. denotes "a simple substance"). Dextrine is so called, because it turns the plane in polarised light to the right hand.

Dey, the native title of the governor of Algiers. Day [time].

"Dey," Turkish ādī, seignior; "Day," Old English dæg.

Di- (contraction of the Greek prefix dis-, "asunder"; and sometimes of dia-, "through"). The ordinary meaning of di- in composition is "two," "twice," "double," especially when it forms a distinct syllable: as Di-an'drian. Having two stamens.

Di-ceph'alous. Having two heads.

Di-dac'tylous. Having two fingers or toes.

Di-gyn'ian. Having two styles or pistils.

Di-hed'ral. Having two surfaces.

Di-lac'erate. To tear in two.

Di-pet'alous. Having two petals.

Di-sper'mous. Having two seeds.

Di-theist. A believer in two gods, one good and one evil.

¶ In a few cases it bears the force of dis-, "asunder": as Di-gress'. To walk asunder or wide of the path.

Di-var'icate. To stretch the legs asunder.

Di-vert'. To turn the mind asunder or aside.

¶ The original idea of "asunder" or separation, gives the meaning above (two), and also the negative force of the prefix, one example of which is Di-vest'. To uneloth.

¶ In a few examples di- represents the Greek preposition dia, "through," "throughout," "thorough": as Di-acoustics. That part of acoustics which treats of sound passing through different mediums.

Di-electrics. Substances which allow electricity to pass through them, and not over their surface.

Di-optrics. That part of optics which treats of the refraction of light in passing through glass.

Di-rect. Right throughout.

¶ In Chemistry Di- denotes a double equivalent of the base, and Bi- a double equivalent of the gas: as “Di-sulphate of silver,” = two equivalents of the base (silver) to one of sulphuric acid; but “Bi-sulphate of silver” would be two equivalents of sulphuric acid to one of the base (silver). See Dis-.

¶ Dis-. The force of dis- is almost always privative. Before “f,” dis- becomes dif-.

Dia- (Greek preposition, meaning through). In composition it means “through,” “throughout,” “thorough.”

Diabetes, dī'a-bee'teez. A disease in which saccharine urine flows too freely.

Latin diabētes; Greek dia bainō, to go through one.

Diabolic, dī'a.bōl'ik; diabolical, dī'a.bōl'ikāl, devilish; diabol'ical-ly; diabolism, dī'ab'olizm.

French diabolique; Latin diabōlicus; Greek diabolikos (diabolōs, the devil, from dia ballo, to fling-out at you, i.e., to slander).

Diachylon, dī.āk'i.lōn (not diachilum). An adhesive plaster made of oil and the oxide of lead.

French diachylon; Greek dia chūlos, through i.e. by means of a juice. It was originally made of the juices of herbs.

Diaconal, dī.āk'onal, pertaining to the office of deacon; diaconate, dī.āk'onate, the office of deacon (q. v.)

French diaconal, diaconat; Latin diacōnus, a deacon.

Diadem, dī'a.dem, a royal crown; di'ademed (3 syl.)

French diadème; Latin diadēma; Greek dēō, to bind.

Dieresis, plu. diarēses, dī.ē'rē.sis, dī.ē'rē.sēez. Separation of two contiguous vowels. The mark (·) is placed over the latter vowel: as aërial (not ærial).

Latin dierēsis; Greek di-airēsis (di-airō, to divide.)

Diagnosis, plu. diagnoses, dī.ag.nō'sis, dī.ag.nō'sēez. The art of distinguishing one disease from another. Many use the word for “symptom,” which is an error; thus “What are the ‘diagnoses’ of the case?” is nonsense. A medical man may say “My diagnosis informs me the disease is not so and so;” and also that “The diagnostic symptoms of the case are those of [measles].”

Diagnostic, dī.ag.nōs'ik, distinguishing [applied to symptoms of diseases]; diagnostics, di.ag.nōs'.tīks, the science of disease-symptoms.

Diagnosticate, di.ag.nōs'.ti.kate, to determine a disease by its symptoms; diagnos'ticāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), diagnos'ti-cāt-ing. The verb diagnose, di'.ag.nose, di'agnosed (3 syl.), di'agnōs-ing, is sometimes used.

Greek diagnōsis, discriminating; v. dia-gignōskō, to distinguish.

Diagonal, di.äg'.o.nāl, a straight line drawn through a figure with not less than four sides. The line must run from any angle to the opposite one. Diag'onal-ly.

(The "o" is omega in Greek and long in Latin.)

French diagonal; Latin diagonios; Greek dia gōnia, an angle.

Diagram, di'.a.grām. A plan or figure shown by lines.

Diagraph, di'.a.grāf, an instrument used in perspective drawing; diagraphic, di.a.grāf'ik.

French diagramme; Latin diagramma; Greek dia gramma, that which is marked out by lines, v. dia-graphō.

Dial, di'.āl. An instrument for measuring time.

Dialing, di'.al.ing. The art of constructing dials.

Latin diālis, pertaining to day (dies, a day).

Dialect, di'.a.lēkt, provincial speech; dialectic, di.a.lēk'.tīks, provincial, subtle. Dialectics, di.a.lēk'tīks, the science of arguing on ideal subjects where word-fencing is more important than physical facts. Dialectician, di.a.lēk'.-tīsh'an, a skilled arguer; dialec'tical; dialec'tical-ly.

French dialecte, dialecticien, dialectique; Latin diālectica, diālecticus, dialectos; Greek dia-lēktikē, dia-lēktikōs, dia-lēktōs (dia lēgō).

Dialogue, di'.a.lōg; plu. dialogues, di'.a.logs, generally applied to the conversations of a drama.

(The Fr. termination -ne is useless and out of character.)

Fr. dialogue; Lat. diālōgus; Gk. dia-lōgos, discourse between [persons].

Diameter, di.ām'.e.tēr, a straight line running through the centre of a circle, and bounded each end by the circumference; diametrical, di'.a.mēt'.ri.kāl; diamet'rical-ly.

Latin diamēter, diamētro [opposita], directly [opposite]; Greek diāmētrōs (a measure through [a circle]).

Diamond, di'.a.münd (not di'-mūn).

French diamant; Latin adamas; Greek a-damas, unconquerable. The diamond cannot be cut or overcome by other materials.

Diana, Di.ăn'.ăh (not Di.a'.nah). A Roman goddess.

Diandria, di.an'.drī.a (in Botany). Having two stamens.

The "stamens" belong to male plants (Greek anēr, a male).

The "pistil," or seed-bearing organ, belongs to female plants.

Diandrian (adj.) Pertaining to plants with two stamens.

French diandrie; Greek di [dis] andres, two men.

(The Greek anēr means man as opposed to woman.)

Diapason, dī'.a.pay''zōn (in Music), an octave, the whole compass of a musical instrument; an instrument for tuning organ pipes. (In Philosophy) the universe, which Pythagoras conceived to be a complete musical octave beginning from Deity and ending with man. The eight notes are Deity, the planets, and man; man touches earth and Deity, and as the planets intervene, they influence his lot. (Greek dia pāsa, through all things.)

Diaper, dī'.a.pēr, a figured linen cloth; diapered, dī'.a.perd.
French diapré, diaper work; ([linge] d'Ypres, in Flanders).

Diaphanous, dī'.āf'.a.nus. Translucent but not transparent.
Greek dia phainō, [light] shows through.

Diaphragm, dī'.a.frām. The midriff.
French diaphragme; Greek diaphragma, a partition wall (dia phrassō, to enclose throughout).

Diarrhœa, dī'.ar.ree''ah, a violent flux; diarrhœtic, dī'.ar.ree''-tik, purgative. Diuretic, a medicine to increase the discharge of urine.

Latin diarrhœa; Greek diar-roia (from dia rhœo), the "r" is doubled to compensate for the aspirate which cannot be expressed in Greek, διάρροια (not διάρροια).

Diary, plu. diaries, dī'.a.ry, dī'.a.rīz. A journal.
Latin diarium, a register of daily events (dies, a day).

Diastase, dī'.as.tūse (not di.as.tūze'). A substance which converts starch into dextrine and grape sugar.

French diastase (Greek dia histēmi, I stand apart, or separate, as yeast from new beer).

Diastole, dī'.ās'.tōle (not dī'.a.stole'). The lengthening of a syllable naturally short, the dilatation of the heart, &c.

French diastole; Latin diastōle; Greek diastōlē, dilatation (stellō, to take in sail, hence to contract. In this example dia reverses, and dia-stello is to open or dilate the heart after contraction).

Diathermal, dī'.a.ther''māl, transmitting radiant heat, as glass transmits light; diathermanous, dī'.a.ther''mā.nūs, adj.

Greek dia thermē, [allowing the passage of] heat through.

Diatom, plu. diatoms, dī'.ā.tōm, dī'.ā.tōmz (not dī'.āt'.om, di.at'.omz, it has nothing to do with the word "atom"). A sub-order of algæ; a diatom is a single specimen.

Diatomaceæ, dī'.ūt'.ōmay''-se-e. The order which contains the above sub-order.

Greek dia tōmōs, a cutting through (not di-atōmos, a double atom). These algæ are called dī'atoms, because they increase by division.

Diatonic, dī.a.tōn'.īk (in Music). By tones.

The diatonic scale is the ordinary musical scale, the chromatic scale proceeds by half-tones. The "diatonic scale" does not, strictly speaking, proceed by tones throughout, for the intervals between E and F, B and C are only half of those between C and D, F and G, A and B, but they are all called tones in ordinary speech.

Greek diatōnikōs (dia tōnōs, [proceeding] by tones).

Diatrise, dī'.a.trībe, a tedious disputation, an acrimonious harangue; diatribist, dī'.a.trī'bist, one who...

(In Gk. and Lat. the second "i" is short. French error.)

French diatribe; Latin diatribe; Greek dia tribē, a wearing away [of time or patience], (dia tribō) to wear thoroughly away.

Dibble, dīb'.b'l, an instrument used by gardeners for making holes in the earth; dib'bled (2 syl.), dib'bling, dib'bler.

Welsh tip, a point; Dutch tip; German zipfel.

Dice, plu. of die (dī), a small cube used in play; dic-ing, dice-ing, playing at dice.

French dé, corruption of "ta"; Latin talus, a die or solid cube.

Dicotyledon, dī'.cōt-y.lee''.dōn, plu. dicotylédons or dicotylédōna. Plants with two seed lobes for their embryo, "exögens."

Dicotyledonous, dī'.cōt-y.lee'-do-nus (adj.)

Gk. dī [dis] kōtulédōn, two sockets, or lobes (see Acotyledon).

Dictate, dīk'.tate (noun), dīk'.tate' (verb). Rule 1.

Dictate, dīk'.tate. A bidding, telling another what to write.

Dictate'. To order imperiously, to tell another what to write; dictāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dictāt'-ing (Rule xix.)

Dictation, dīk'tay'.shun. The act of dictating.

Dictāt'-or, fem. dictā'trix; dictātor-ship, the office of dictator (-ship, O. E. postfix, "tenure of office or state"); dictatorial, dīk'.ta.tōr''ri.āl, imperious; dictatorial-ly.

Diction, dīk'shun. Way of expressing oneself.

Dictionary, plu. dictionaries, dīk'.shun.ēr.ri, plu. dīk'.shun.ēr.rīz. A lexicon.

Dictum, plu. dicta, dīk'.tum, dīk'.tāh. A positive or dogmatic assertion.

Iipse dixit, ip'se dix'īt. Dogmatic assertion. Used in all persons as a noun (Latin).

French dictatorial, diction, dictum; Latin dictātor, dictātrix, dictātorius, dictio, gen. dictiōnis, dictiōnarium, v. dictare, supine dictatum (frequentative of dicō, to say), dictum.

Did, past tense of Do. Old Eng. present tense ic dō, past ic dyde, past part. gedōn. Modern Eng. I do, I did, done. As an auxiliary it is chiefly used in asking questions, in which case it stands before the noun or pronoun, as did [you] speak? In common speech it is used to add emphasis or force, as "I do very much wish it," "I did indeed love him." In poetry it is used without any special purpose beyond helping out the metre or rhyme.

Didactic, dī.dăk'.tîk, designed to teach; didactical, dī.dăk'.tî.kăl; didac'tical-ly, in a didactic manner.

Fr. didactique; Gk. didaktikós, fit for teaching (didaskó, to teach).

Didactylous, dī.dăk'.tî.lūs, having two toes; didactyl, dī.dăk'.tîl, an animal with two toes.

Greek dī [dis] daktûlós, two fingers or toes.

Didelphys, dī.dēl'.fîs, a generic name for such animals as have two wombs, like the opossum family; didelphidæ, dī.dēl'.fî.de, same as didelphys; didelphoid, dī.dēl'.foid, animals with an abdominal pouch less perfect than that of the true opossum. (Gk. eidos, resembling the didelphys.)

Greek dī [dis] dēlphus, double womb.

Die, a stamp, to expire; dye, tincture, to tincture (both dī).

Die (to expire), dies, dīze; died (1 syl.), dy'-ing; di-er, one likely to die soon (Rule xix.); dead, dēd, lifeless, q.v.; death, dēth, q.v. Die of disease (not from nor with).

Die, plu. dice (1 syl.) A cube with six faces marked with spots from one to six.

The die is cast. The last chance is ventured.

Die (a stamp), plu. dies, dīze (1 syl.).

Dye, tincture, (verb) to tincture; dyes, dīze; dyed (1 syl.), dy'-ing (Rule xix.), dy'-er; one who dies.

(It is a pity that the original vowels have been changed in the verb "die," thereby causing confusion between words wholly different; the anomalous spelling of die, dead, death; and the necessity of breaking Rule xix. in dyeing to distinguish it from dying.)

"Die" (to expire), Old Eng. deað[ian], past dēddode, past part. dēddod; dēdd, defunct; dēdth, death.

"Die" (a cube with six faces), French dé = day; Latin talus, a die, strictly, with four faces only. Our spelling of this word is foolish and indefensible.

"Dye" (tincture), Old Eng. deæg, v. deæg[ian], past dēdgode, past part. dēdgod.

Dialectic, dī'.e.lēk''.tîk. Dialectic, dī'.a.lēk''.tîk.

Dialectic is a body that admits the force of electricity to act through it. (Greek dī [dia] with the word electric).

Dialectic is the adj. of dialect, provincial.

Dialectics, dī'.e.lēk''.tîks. The plural of dialectic.

Dialectics, dī'.a.lēk''.tîks. The art of word-fencing, or arguing with words rather than with solid proofs; it has no scope in experimental philosophy, but its true province is in a priōri or speculative reasoning.

"Dialectic." Electric adj. from the Greek ēlēctrōn, amber, the root of our word "electricity," q.v.; dī [Greek dia] through.

"Dialectics" is from the verb dialēgo, which gives our word dialogue, and means to converse. In Platonic philosophy it means the highest kind of speculative reasoning; Aristotle uses the word to signify that reasoning which leads to probability but falls short of proof.

Diet, dī'et. Food, to feed by regimen. A German parliament.

Diet (verb), dī'et-ed (Rule xxxvi.); dī'et-ing, dī'et-er; dietary, dī'et-er-ry, rules of diet, allowance of food; dietetic or dietetical, dī.e.tēt'ik, dī.e.tēt'.i.kūl (adj.), pertaining to diet; dietēt'ical-ly (adv.)

Dietetics, rules of diet, that branch of medical science which treats of diet. (All sciences from the Greek -ika [except five] terminate in English in -ics. The five exceptions are "logic," "magic," "music," "physic," and "rhetoric," which come to us through the French. R.lxi.)

"Diet" (food), French diète, diététique; Latin dieta, diatarius, dialectica, diateticus; Greek diaita (diaitaōmai, to live).

"Diet" (a parliament), French diète (from Latin dies indicta [representatives which meet on] appointed days).

Dif- the prefix dis- before the letter "f."

Differ, dif'fēr, to disagree. Defer, de'fer, to postpone.

Differ, dif'fered (2 syl.), dif'fer-ing, dif'fer-ence, dif'fer-ent, dif'fer-ent-ly; differential, dif'.fēr-ēn''shūl (adj. and noun), a quantity too small to be represented by figures, but which nevertheless constitutes a difference; adj. measuring minute differences; differential-ly.

(The French form "différentiel" is better. We write correctly dif'fer-ence and dif'fer-ent.)

Observe the difference in the verb "Defer'," which makes deferred' (2 syl.), deferr'-ing (Rule i.) See Defer.

Differ from or with?

One person differs "with" another in opinion, but

One thing differs "from" another in quality, &c.

Different to or from?

Both forms are used: "This rose is very different 'from that,'" or, "very different [unlike] 'to' that."

Difference of or between?

Differences "of" the same articles, as "differences of opinion," "differences of sovereignty," &c.; but differences "between" different articles, as, "There is no difference between Jew and Gentile." (Romans x. 12.)

Differentiate, dif'.fēr-ēn''shē-ate, to find the difference or the "differential"; dif'feren'tiāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), dif'fer-en'tiāt-ing (R. xix.); differentiation, dif'-fer-en'-she-ā''shun, determination of difference or "differential."

French différence, différent, différentiel, différentier, to differentiate; Latin diffrens, genitive diffrentis, diffrentia, verb differre, supine dilatum (our "delay").

Difficult, dif'.fī.kūl't, not easy to be done; difficult-ly (adv.); difficultly, plu. difficulties, dif'.fī.kūl'tiz (Rule xlv.)

French difficulté; Latin difficultas, difficulter (adverb), difficilis (dif'fācilis, not easy).

Diffidence, dif'.fī.dense (Rule xxvi.), want of confidence; diffident, distrustful of oneself; diffident-ly.

Latin diffidentia, diffidens, gen. -entis (dis [dis] fīdens, not trusting).

Diffinitive, dif'.fīn'.ī.tīv (double f), or definitive (see Define).

In Latin there are the two forms definitivus, &c., from "definio," and diffinitivus, &c., from "diffinio."

Diffraction, dif'.frāk'.shun (not dī.frak'.shun), the turning aside of the rays of light; diffrac'ted (3 syl.)

Fr. diffraction; Lat. dis [dis] frango, sup. fractum, to break asunder.

Diffuse (noun), dif'.fuce', (verb) dif'.fuze'. (Rule li.)

Diffuse, dif'.fuce', not compact; diffuse-ness, dif'.fuce'.ness.

Diffuse, dif'.fuze', to spread, to circulate, to send in all directions; diffused, dif'.fuzd'; diffus-ing (Rule xix.), diffus-er, diffus-ible (not -able); diffusibility, dif'.fu'.zī.bīl'.ī.ty, capability of being diffused; diffusion, dif'.fu'.zhun, a spreading; diffusedly, dif'.fu'.zed.ly, in a diffuse manner; diffusedness, dif'.fu'.zed.ness; diffusive, dif'.fu'.sīv; diffusive-ly, diffusive-ness.

French diffus, diffusible, diffusion; Latin diffusus, diffusio, diffusor, diffundere, supine diffusum, to spread far and wide.

Dig, past dug [or digged, 1 syl.], past part. dug; digg'-ing (R. i.), digg'-er, one who uses the spade.

Danish dige, to make a ditch or dike.

Digest (noun), dī'.jēst, (verb) dī'.jēst'. (Rule l.)

Digest, a compilation of civil laws methodically arranged.

Digest', to dissolve food in the stomach, to think well on a subject and arrange it in the mind; digest'-ed (R. xxxvi.), digest'-ing, digest'-er; digestion, dī'.jēs'.tchun; digest'-ible (not -able); digestibility, dī'.jēs'.tī.bīl'.ī.ty; diges-tive, dī'.jēs'.tīv.

French digeste, digesteur, digestif, digestion; Latin digesta, Justinian's code of laws, digestio, digérere, supine digestum.

Dight, to adorn (only used in poetry). Old English dihht[an].

Digit, dij'.īt, any single figure, a twelfth part of the diameter of the sun or moon; digital, dij'.ī.tāl.

French digital; Latin digitus, the finger; digitālis.

Digitalis, dij'.ī.tay''.līs. The fox-glove.

"Digitālis," Latin, the finger-flower (from digitus, a finger).

"Fox-glove," Old English foxes-glofa.

Dignify, dīg'.nī.fy, to exalt in honour or rank; dignifies, dīg'.nī.fīze; dignified, dīg'.nī.fīde (R. xi.); dignify-ing.

Dignity, plu. dignities, rank, loftiness of mien. (R. xlv.)

Dignitary, plu. dignitaries, dīg'.nī.tērrīz, a clergyman who holds some clerical "dignity," such as prelate, dean, archdeacon, prebendary, canon, &c.

French dignitaire, a dignitary, dignité; Low Latin dignitarius; Latin dignus facio, to make worthy, to dignify.

Digress, dī.gress', to deviate; digressed' (2 syl.); digress'-ing; digress'-er; digression, dī.gresh'.un; digression-al, dī.gresh'.un.al; digress-ive, dī.gres'.siv; digressive-ly.

French digressif, digression; Latin digressio, digredior, supine digressum (dī [dis] gradior, to walk aside; gradus, a step).

Digynia, dī.gin'.i.āh (-gin hard as in "begin"), plants with two pistils or styles; digynian, dī.gin'.i.an (g hard), having two pistils. Plants with pistils are called "female," plants with stamens are called "male."

Greek di gynē, double female (or pistil). Plants with two stamens are diandria: i.e., di andres, double males (or stamens).

Dike (1 syl.), a mound, a ditch; a large mineral vein.

Old English dīc.

Dilacerate, dī.lās'.e.rate, to tear; dilac'erāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dilac'erāt-ing (R. xix.); dilaceration, dī.las'.e.ray''.shun.

French dilacération, verb dilacérer; Latin dilaceratio, dilacerāre.

Dilapidate, dī.lāp'.i.date (not delapidate), to fall to ruin; dilap'idāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dilap'idāt-ing (Rule xix.); dilap'idāt-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.), one who lays waste; dilap'idation, dī.lāp'.i.day''.shun, decay, injury. Charge for "dilapidations" charge to cover necessary repairs.

French dilapidation, v. dilapider; Latin dilapidatio; v. dilapidāre (lapido is to stone, or heap up stones; di-lapido is to remove stones, "dī" in this example has the force of de (it reverses)).

Dilate, dī.late' (not delate), to enlarge; dilāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dilāt'-ing (Rule xix.); dilāt'-er, one who dilates; dilāt'-or (applied to certain muscles of the nose); dilat-able, dī.late'.a.b'l (1st Latin conjugation); dilat-ability, dī.late'.a.bil''.i.ty; dilatation, dī'.la.tay''.shun.

French dilat-ability, dilat-able, dilatation, verb dilater; Latin dilatatio, dilatāre (lātus, broad; Greek plātus).

Dilatory, dī'.at.ō.ry, full of delay; dil'atori-ly (Rule xi.), dil'atori-ness.

French dilatatoire; Latin dilatōrius (dif-fero, to defer, sup. di-lātum).

Dilemma, dī.lēm'.mah (not delemma). A perplexity.

On the horns of a dilemma. Between two perplexities.

French dilemme; Latin dilemma, an argument that leads to two opposite conclusions: as "a Boeotian said, all Boeotians are liars." If all Boeotians are liars, the Boeotian told a lie when he said all Boeotians are liars. Query, Are they liars or not?

Dilettante, plu. dilettanti (Italian), dī'.et.tan'.te, an amateur of the fine arts but not a proficient, a dabbler in literature or the arts; dilettanteism, dī'.et.tan'.te.izm, affectation of art-loving, without any real knowledge of the subject.

Diligence, dīl'.i.jence (R. xxvi.), industry; dil'igent, dil'igent-ly.

French diligent; Latin diligens, gen. diligentis, diligentia, v. diligō, to love dearly. Diligence is working with good will.

Dill. The seed of an aromatic plant. (O. Eng. dile, dill or anise.)
 "Dill" is the Anethum Graveolens; "Anise" is the Arabic anisun.
 "Anethum," Greek anethon (and thein, to grow rapidly).

Dilute' (2 syl.), to reduce the strength of a liquid by adding something else; dilūt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), dilūt'-ing (R. xix.); dilūt'-er, that which dilutes, one who dilutes; diluent, dī.lu.ent (not dil'u.ent), that which dilutes; dil'uents, water drinks to dilute the animal fluids; dilution.

French diluer, dilution; Latin diluere, sup. dilūtum, dilūtio.

Diluvial, dī.lū'.vī.āl, pertaining to the Deluge; diluvialist, dī.lū'.vī.āl.ist, one who ascribes to Noah's flood such geological phenomena as the boulder-clay, ossiferous gravels, and so on; diluvium, dī.lū'.vī.um, earth, sand, &c., deposited by the action of running water.

Diluvian, dī.lū'.vī.ān, pertaining to the Deluge; antediluvian, prior to "Noah's Flood."

French diluvien (an error), diluvion; Latin diluvium, v. diluviare.

Dim, obscure, to obscure; dimmm'-er (comp.), dimmm'-est (super.); dimmm'-ish, rather dim (-ish added to adj. is diminutive, added to nouns it means "like"); dimmed (1 syl.), dimmm'-ing (Rule i.); dim-ly, dim-ness.

Old Eng. dim; dimlic, dimnish; dimme, dimly; dimnes.

Dimension, dī.mēn'.shun. The measure or extent of a surface.

French dimension; Latin dimensio (dimētor, to measure).

Diminish, dī.mīn'.ish, to make smaller; dimin'ished (3 syl.), dimin'ish-ing, dimin'ish-er, dimin'ishing-ly.

Diminuendo, plu. diminuendos (R. xlii.), dī.mīn'.u.en'.doze (in Music), softer and softer. (Italian.)

Diminution, dīm'.i.nū''.shun, decrease; diminutive, dī.mīn'.u.tiv; dimin'utive-ly, dimin'utive-ness.

French diminutif, diminution; Latin diminutio, diminutivum, verb diminuo (-ish added to verbs means "to make").

Dismissory, dīm'.is.sō.ry (not [letters] demisory or demissory).

French dimissoire (lettres dimissoriales); Latin dimissorius (verb di [dis] mitto, supine dimissum, to send away).

Dimity, plu. dimities, dīm'.i.ty, dīm'.i.tiz, a cloth originally woven with two threads. Similarly samite, a corruption of xamite, cloth woven with six threads.

Greek di [dis] mitos, two threads; hex mitos, six threads.

Dimorphism, dī.mor'.fizm, the property of assuming two distinct crystalline forms; dimorphous, dī.mor'.fus; dimorphic.

French dimorphe; Greek di [dis] morphe, two-fold form.

Dimple, dīm'.p'l (noun and verb); dimpled, dīm'.p'ld; dimpling, dīm'.pling; dim'ply.

Din, a confused continuous noise, to pester with repeated noise or demands; dinned (1 syl.), dinn-ing (Rule i.), dinn-er.
(See below Dine.)

Old English dȳn[ian], to din; dȳne, a din; dinung, a dinning, a tinkling. Latin tinnō, to prattle, to tinkle.

Dine (1 syl.), dined (1 syl.), din-ing (Rule xix.), dinner (this is a blunder in spelling, the word ought to be dincr, as in French), dinner-less, &c.

Old English dȳnan to dine; French diner, verb and noun.

Ding, to knock; dinged (1 syl.), ding'-ing (not din-ging).

Ding-dong. The sound of bells. (An imitative word).

Old Eng. dencg[an], past deancg, past part. doncgen, to knock or ding.

Dingle, din'g'l, a glen; dingle-dangle, hanging slovenly.

"Dingle," a glen amidst hills. Old Eng. dynig, lully (with dln.)

"Dingle," to hang loosely. Danish dingle, to dangle or bob about.

Dingy, din'je, soiled; din'gi-ness, din'gi-ly (Rule xi.)

Dinornis. (See Deinornis.)

Dinothorium. (See Deinothorium.)

Dint, effort, force. By dint of (industry), by the power of..

Dent. An indentation.

"Dint," Old Eng. dȳnt, a stroke or blow.

"Dent," Lat. dens, gen. dentis. To dent, "dentium more incidere."

Diocese, dī'osis (not diocess), the circuit over which a bishop has jurisdiction; diocesan, dī'ōs'e.sūn (not dī.o.see'sūn), a bishop, one who holds a diocese, adj. belonging to a diocese, as diocesan inspector.

French diocese, diocésain; Latin diocēsānus, diocēsis; Greek dioikēsis, administration, v. dioikēō, to administer.

(Mistled, as usual, by the French, our words are ill-spelt and ill-pronounced. They should be diocese, diocē'san.)

Diœcia, dī'ē'si.ūh, a class of plants, like the willow, having male flowers on one plant and female on another; diœcian or diœcious (adj.), dī'ē'si.an, dī'ē'si.us.

French diœcie; Greek di [dis] oikos, two houses.

Dionœa, dī.o.nœ'ah. Venus's fly-trap.

Venus was called Dionœa, and the flower is called after her from its grace and elegance.

Dioptrics, dī.op'trĭks, that part of optics which shows how light is refracted in passing through glass, air, water, &c. (Rule lxi.), dioptric (adj.)

French dioptrique, noun and adj.; Greek diōptrōn, something transparent (dī [dia] optōmai, to see through).

Diorama, dī'o.rāh'māh. Panorama, pān'o.rāh.māh.

A "diorama" is a series of pictures "seen through" an aperture. A panorama is one large picture stretched on a cylinder, the axis of which is the point of view.

(Both these words, borrowed from the French, are misspelt. They should be Dihorama and Panhorama.)

"Panorama," Greek pan horāma, a view of all [at a glance].

"Diorama," Greek dī [dia] horāma, a view through [an aperture].

Dioscorea, dī'ōs.kōr're.āh. The yam, &c.

So named from Dioscōridēs, the Greek botanist.

Diotis, dī.ō'tis. A shrub, the sea-cotton weed.

Dip, a plunge in water, the incline of a stratum, a candle made by dipping a wick in tallow, to plunge into water, to incline downwards, &c.; dipped (1 syl.) or dipt, dipping (Rule i.), dipp'-er.

Old English dipp[an], past dippede, past part. dipped.

Diphtheria, dīf'.thee'ri.āh (not dip.theria), a throat disease; diphtheritic, dīf'.the.rīt'ik, adj.

Greek diphthēra, leather. The disease is characterised by the formation of a leathery membrane in the throat.

Diphthong, dīf'.thong (not dip.thong), two vowels pronounced together with a different sound to either of them separately, as sauce, where -au- has a sound different to either "a" or "u." If two vowels are pronounced together, without producing a new sound, it is an improper diphthong, as ea in beat, where "a" serves only to lengthen the "e," and ie in believe, where the sound of e only remains; diphthongal, dīf'.thōn'.gal; diphthongal-ly.

French diphthongue; Latin diphthongus; Greek diphthoggos (dī [dis] phthōggōs, double sound; phthēggōmai, to utter a sound).

Diploe, dīp'.lō.ē. The network of bone-tissue between the tables of the skull; the cellular substance of leaves.

French diploe; Latin diplois, a doublet; Greek diploōs, two-fold.

Diploma, plu. diplomas, dī.plō.mah, &c. (not deplō'ma). A certified writing conferring a privilege.

Diplomatic, dī.plō.māt'ik; diplomat'ical, diplomat'ical-ly.

Diplomacy, dī.plōm'.a.sy, the art and practice of statecraft; diplomatist, dī.plōm'.a.tist, one employed in....

Diplomatics, dī.plōm'.a.tiks. The art of deciphering ancient documents, and determining their age and authenticity.

French diplomatique, diplome, diplomatie; Latin diplōma; Greek diplōma. Every sort of ancient charter, donation, bull, &c., was called a diploma, being inscribed by the Romans on two tables of copper folded together; in early English history, a diploma is often called "a pair of letters" (diploōs, double; duplicate).

Dipper, dipping, dipped. (See Dip.)

Diprotodon, plu. diprotodons, dī.prō'.tō.dōn. A gigantic fossil animal allied to the kangaroo, with more than one pair of incisor teeth.

Greek dī [dis] prōtos-ōdous, duplex incisors or "first teeth."

Dipteran, plu. dipterans or diptera, dīp'.tēr.an, dīp'.tēr.ănz, dīp'.tēr.ăh, insects, like the blow-flow, with only two wings; dipteral, dīp'.tēr.ăl; dipterous, dīp'.tēr.ūs (adj.)

French diptère; Greek di [dis] ptēron, two wings.

Dire (1 syl.), dreadful, dismal. Dyer, dy'.er, one who dyes; dier, dī'.er, one at the point of death.

Dire, direst, dī'.rest (most dire). The comparative form [direr] is not in use.

Dire'ful (2 syl.), dire'ful-ly, dire'ful-ness.

Old Eng. dar, injury, v. derian, to destroy, hence Shakespeare's "dearest foe" = deadliest foe; Latin dirus, dire (Diræ, the furies).

Direct', adj. straight, plain, express, verb to command, regulate, show the way; direct'-er (more direct), direct'-est (most direct); direct-ed (Rule xxxvi.), direct'-ing.

Direct-ly, immediately, openly, in a straight course; direct'-ness; direction, dī.rĕk'.shun; directive, dī.rĕk'.tiv.

Director, fem. directress, manager; direct'or-ship.

Directorate, dī.rĕk'.to.rate, the office or body of directors; directory, dī.rĕk'.tō.ry.

French direct, direction, directoire; Latin directus, directio, director (rectus, right).

Dirge, durj (contraction of the Latin dirige (3 syl.), the first word of a Latin funeral hymn), a funeral hymn.

Dirk, durk. A dagger. (Scotch durk, a dagger.)

Dirt; dirty, not clean, to defile; dirtyies, dur'.tīz; dirtied, dur'.tĕd; dirty-ing (Rule xi.), dir'ti-ness, dir'ti-er (more dirty, one who dirtyies), dir'ti-est (most dirty).

Old Eng. ge-drittan, fæces; German dreck (by transposition dereck).

Dis- (Greek and Latin prefix, meaning "asunder"). The most usual signification in English is not or the reverse of, but not unfrequently it denotes apart, sometimes it means two, and in a few examples it is simply emphatic.

Dis- and Un-; Dis- denotes separation of what has been united; Un- that union has never existed. Dis- ought to be joined only to Lat. or Gk. words, un- only to native words.

Disable, unable, un.a'.b'l (adj.) not able, dis.a'.b'l (verb), to render unable; disabled, dis.a'.b'ld; dis'abling.

Disability, dis'.a.b'il'i.ty, incapacity; disabilities, dis'.a.-b'il'i.tīz, legal disqualifications; disa'ble-ment.

Latin dis hābilis, not habile, not able.

Disabuse, (noun) dis'.a.buce', (verb) dis'.a.buze'. (Rule li.)

Disabuse (verb), to undeceive; dis'abused' (3 syl.), dis'a-būs'-ing (Rule xix.)

French désabuser; Latin dis ab-usus, to rid of abuse.

Disacknowledge, dis'ăk.nŏl''.ledge (not dis'ăk.knŏw''.ledge), to disown; disacknowledged (4 syl.), disacknowledg-ing.

Unacknowledged (4 syl.), not owned, not answered.

Old English cnawing, knowledge, with the Latin dis, ac [ad]. Un- is the better prefix for this word.

Disadvantage, dis'.ad.văn''.tage, the reverse of advantage, to injure in interest; disadvantageous, dis'.ad.văn.tay''.jūs; dis'advanta'geous-ly, dis'advanta'geous-ness.

French avantage, with dis. Latin ad venio, to come to. "Advantage" meant originally "the portion of goods which came to a child from the will of his father, or from the law's award."

Dis'affect', to alienate affection; dis'affect'-ing;

Un'affect'-ing, having no power to move the passions.

Disaffect'-ed, estranged in affection;

Un'affect'-ed, of simple unartificial manners.

Dis'afec'ted-ly, in an ill-disposed manner;

Un'afec'ted-ly, without artifice in speech and manners.

Dis'afec'ted-ness, being ill-affected and discontented;

Un'afec'ted-ness, being without affectation.

Disaffection, dis'.ăf.fĕk''.shun, want of goodwill.

French désaffection; Latin dis af [ad] fectus, ill acted on.

Disagree, dis'.a.gree', to differ; dis'agreed', dis'agree'-ing, dis'-agree'-ment, dis'agree'-able (not disagreeable as many write the word), dis'agree'ably, disa'gree'able-ness.

Un'agree'able, un'agree'ably, unagree'able-ness, indicate less aversion. Dis-agreeable means positively distasteful; un-agreeable not positively pleasing.

French désagréable; Latin dis a [ad] gratus, not pleasing to us. (The French spelling of "disagreeable" must be carefully avoided.)

Disallow, dis'.al.lŏw (-low to rhyme with 'now), dis'allowed' (3 syl.), dis'allow'-ing, dis'allow'-able; dis'allow'-ance, refusal to allow or permit.

Dis and Fr. allow; Lat. dis al [ad] locāre, to refuse to place to [your share].

Disannex, dis'.an.nex' (not dis'.a.nex'), to separate; dis'annexed' (3 syl.), separated;

Unannexed, not joined together;

Dis'annex'-ing, severing what is annexed.

Latin dis an [ad] nexus, the reverse of tying to (necto, to tye).

Disannul, dis'.an.nŭl', to abolish or annul; dis'annulled' (3 syl.), dis'annul'-ing (Rule i.), dis'annul'-ment (one l, because -ment does not begin with a vowel).

Un'annulled' (3 syl.) Not repealed.

(Disannul ought to be abolished, the prefix "dis" is quite useless, and "annul" is the better word.)

French annuller; Latin dis an [ad] nullum, [to bring] to nothing.

Disappear, dis'.ap.pear' (not dis'.a.pear'), to vanish, to cease to appear; dis'appeared' (3 syl.), dis'appear'-ing, dis'appear'-ance (ought to be disappear-ence, R. xxiv.)

Dis and French apparence; Latin dis ap [ad] pārēre, part. parens, to discontinue to appear to [sight].

Disappoint, dis'.ap.point' (not dis'.a.point'), to fail expectation; dis'appoint'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), balked in expectation;

Un'appoint'-ed, not elected or appointed.

Dis'appoint'-ing, dis'appoint'ment.

Disappointed of a thing not obtained.

Disappointed in a thing obtained.

French désappointer, désappointement (4 syl.); Latin dis ap [ad] pondus, not to add to the main sum. "Appoint" is the "odd money" of a bill, or the balance of an account. To dis-appoint is to cut off the odd money or to fail in paying the balance.

Disapprove, dis'.ap.proov (not dis'.a.pröve'); dis'approved' (3 syl.), dis'approv'-ing (Rule xix.), dis'approving'-ly, dis'approv'-al; disapprobation, dis'.äp.pro.bay''shun.

French désapprouver, désapprobation; Latin dis ap [ad] probāre, to fail to prove to [one], or to satisfy one's judgment.

Disarm', to divest of weapons of offence; disarmed' (2 syl.), divested of arms;

Unarmed, not having any weapon of offence.

Disarm'-ing; disarmament, dis'.ar''.ma.ment.

French désarmer, désarmement; Latin dis arma, deprived of arms.

Disarrange, dis'.ar.rünge' (not dis'.a.rünge'), to put out of order; dis'arranged' (3 syl.), put out of order;

Un'arranged' (3 syl.), not yet put into order.

Disarrangement, dis'.ar.ränj'.ment. (Only five words drop the final e before -ment. Rule xviii.)

French déranger, dérangement; Latin dis ar [ad] rego, to dissort what is regulatd. (-n- is not fundamental.)

Disarray, dis'.ar.ray, to put out of order, to divest of raiment; dis'arrayed' (3 syl.), dis'array'-ing, dis'array'-er (R. xiii.)

Un'arrayed' (3 syl.) Not dressed, not put in array.

Low Latin dis arraya, to put out of military array.

Disassociate or dissociate, dis'.as.so'.si.ate, dis.so'.si.ate, to dis-unite; dis'asso'ciāt-ed or disso'ciāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), separated from companions;

Un'asso'ciāt-ed, not joined to a society.

Dis'asso'ciāt-ing or disso'ciāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Fr. désassocier; Lat. dis as [ad] sociāre, to cease being a companion of one.

Disaster, dis.äs'.ter, a mischance, an accident; disastrous, dis.as'trous (not dis.as'.te.rus), calamitous; disas'trous-ly, disas'trous-ness.

French désastre; Mid. Lat. dis aströsus, not fortunate (astrum, a star); Greek düs astron, ill starred (düs always denotes evil or the subversion of good).

Disavow, dis'.a.vōw', to disclaim; dis'avowed' (3 syl.), dis'avow'-ing, dis'avow'-al, dis'avow'-er, dis'avow'-ment (-vōw to rhyme with now). Un'avowed' (3 syl.), not owned.

French désavouer; Latin dis a [ad] vōeo, to refuse to vow to [one].

Disband', to dismiss from military service; disband'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disband'-ing, disband'-ment.

French débander, débandement (3 syl.); Latin dis bandum, [to send] away from the banner.

Disbar', debar', unbar'; -barred, -bard; -barr'-ing, &c. (R. i.)

Dis-bar, to deprive a barrister of his right to plead;

De-bar, to forbid;

Unbar, to draw back a bar, as to "unbar the door."

The "bar" to which barristers are called is the rail which divides the counsel from the "laity."

Un- is a native prefix, denoting privation, opposition, or deterioration.

Disbelieve, dis'.be.leve' (R. xxviii.), not to believe a statement; disbelieved (3 syl.), dis'believ'-ing (R. xix.), not believing a statement; un'believ'-ing, not believing in Revelation.

Disbeliev'-er, one who distrusts a statement;

Unbeliev'-er, one who does not believe in Revelation.

Disbelief, dis'.be.leef', distrust in a statement;

Unbelief, scepticism, having no faith in Revelation.

Unbeliev'-able (not disbelievable), unworthy to be believed.

Old Eng. un-geledfa, un- or dis-belief; two very pretty words might be restored, viz., ungeledfsum, unbelieving, and ungeledfsumnes.

Disbowel or disembowel, dis.bōw'.el, dis'.em.bōw'.el (bōw to rhyme with now), to take out the entrails; dis- or *disem-*bowelled (-bow'.eld), -bowelling (R. iii. EL), -boweller.

Dis and French boel; Latin botellus, a gut.

Disbud', to deprive of buds; disbudd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disbudd'-ing (Rule i.) Unbudd'-ed, not budded.

Dis- and the French bouton, a bud.

Disburden, disburthen, unburden, unburthen, dis- or *un-*bur'.den, -bur'.then, to remove a load;

Disburdened or disburthened, dis- -bur'.dend, -bur'.thend, relieved of a load;

Unbur'dened or unburthened, without a load.

Disbur'den-ing, disburthen-ing, unbur'den-ing or unbur'-then-ing, removing a load.

Dis- or un- with Old Eng. byrden or byrthen (byrd, heavy, byr[an] or bér[an], to bear). Our words should have been spelt byrden or berden to preserve the derivation more correctly.

Disburse, dis.burce', to lay out money; disbursed' (2 syl.), disburs'-ing (Rule xix.), disburse'-ment (Rule xviii.), the act of paying out money; disburse'-ments, money paid out; disburs'-er, one who pays out money.

French débourse, déboursements (3 syl.), v. débourser (bourse, a purse, the [money] exchange).

Disc, disk, the face of the sun or moon, the face of a shield or any round flat body. Disk (in Botany), a ring or scale between the bases of the stamens and ovary.

Discous, dis'.kūs (adj.), broad, flat; disciform, dis'.sī.form (not dis'.kī.form), in the form of a flat round body; discoid, dis'.koid [pith], in Botany that which is divided into cavities by discs.

French disque; Latin discus, disciformis; Greek diskōs, a quoit, a round flat stone or piece of metal.

Discard, dis.kard', to reject; discard'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), discard'-ing; discard'-er, one who discards.

Spanish descartar, to discard, or reject cards; descarte, the cards rejected or thrown out of one's hand.

Discern, diz.zern', to see, to discriminate; discerned, diz.zernd'; discern'-ing, discern'-ing-ly; discern-er, diz.zern'.er; discern'-ment, discern'-ible (not -able), discern'ible-ness; discern'ibly, diz.zern'.i.bly.

Discernment and discretion are both from the same root-verb (Latin discerno), but now

Discernment means insight, and discretion, prudence.

French discernement (3 syl.), verb discerner; Latin discernere, supine discrētum (dis cerno, to sift and separate, hence to distinguish).

Discharge' (2 syl.), to dismiss; discharged' (2 syl.), discharg'-ing (Rule xix.); discharg'-er, one who discharges.

Discharged' (said of firearms), shot off;

Uncharged' (said of firearms), not "loaded."

French décharger, to unload (charger, to load); Low Latin carcare, to freight a ship. To "discharge" means to unload.

Disciple, dis.sī'p'l (not de.sī'p'l), a pupil, a follower; disciple-ship (-ship, Old English, "office," "state of being...").

Disciplinarian, dis'.sī.pli.nair''ri.ən, one strict to enforce discipline; disciplinary, dis'.sī.pli.ner ry.

Discipline, dis'.sī.plin, subjection to rules and masters, to train to obedience; disciplined (3 syl.), disciplin-ing (Rule xix.); disciplin-er, one who trains.

Disciplinable, dis.sī.pli'na.b'l; discipli'nable-ness.

French disciple, disciplinable, disciplinaire, discipline, v. discipliner; Latin discipula, disciplinābilis, discipulus, a scholar (cāpulo [in composition cipulo] is to pour liquor from one vessel into another, and a disciple is one into whom instruction is poured).

Disclaim, dis.klame', to disavow; disclaimed' (2 syl.), disclaim'-ing, disclaim'-er, disclaim'-ant. Unclaimed, not claimed.

Decaim', to spout, to recite; declaimed (2 syl.), &c.

"Disclaim," Latin dis clamāre, to refuse to call for [one].

"Decaim," French déclamer; Latin dēclāmāre, to make set speeches.

Disclose, to reveal; unclose, to open what is closed; dis- or un- closed' (2 syl.), clōs'-ing (R. xix.), disclōs'-er, one who reveals or tells some secret; disclosure, dis.clō'.zhur.

Dis and Old Eng. clusa; Latin claustrum, a prison. To dis-close is "to discharge from confinement" or secrecy.

Discolour, dis.kūl'.er, to stain; discoloured, dis.kūl'.erd, injured in its colour; uncoloured, un.kūl'.erd, not coloured; discoloration, dis'.kūl.er.a''shun.

("Discolour" would be better without the "u," which is dropped in "discoloration.")

French décoloration, décolorer; Latin dēcōlor, dēcōlorātiō, v. dēcōlorāre (cōloro, to colour).

Discomfit, dis.kūm.fīt, to defeat. Discomfort (see below).

Discom'fit-ed (Rule xxxvi.), discom'fit-ing, routing; discomfiture, dis.kūm'.fīt.chur, defeat in battle.

French déconfiture; Latin confectus, finished (con fāctō, completely done), dis- in a bad sense.

Discomfort, dis.kūm'.fort, absence of comfort, to make uneasy; discom'fort-ed (Rule xxxvi.), discom'fort-ing; discom-forture, dis.kūm'.fōr.tchur, want of comfort.

Discom'forted, made uneasy;

Uncom'forted, not consoled.

Uncomfortable, un.kūm'.for.ta.ḃ'l, not easy; uncomfortable-ness; uncom'fortably, uneasily.

French déconfort, v. déconforter; Latin dis confortāri, the reverse of being strong or comforted (fortis, strong).

Discommode. (See Incommode.)

Discompose, dis'.kōm.pozé, to unsettle; De'composo', to reduce a compound body to its elements or ingredient; dis'composed' (3 syl.), dis'compōs'-ing, dis'compōs'-er; discomposure, dis'.kōm.po''.shur, agitation.

Un'composed' (3 syl.) Chiefly applied to literary work.

French décomposer, to discompose and decompose; Latin de componēre, to de-compose, dis componēre, to discompose.

Disconcert, dis'.kōn.sert', to disturb, to put out of countenance; dis'concert'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dis'concert'-ing.

Un'concert'ed, not concerted.

French déconcert; Latin con-certāre is "to strive together," hence "to be in harmony," dis-concertāre is "to strive contrary ways," hence "to be out of harmony," "to be disturbed," &c.

Disconnect, dis'.kõn.někt', to separate; dis'connect'-ed (4 syl.), separated; un'connect'-ed, having no connection; dis'-connected-ly, unconnected-ly, disconnect'-ing, disconnect-er; disconnection, dis'.kõn.něk''.shun; disconnec-tive, dis'.kõn.něk'.tív; disconnective-ly.

Dis- and French connexion, connectif; Latin dis connecto, to unbind what is bound together (necto, to bind).

Disconsolate, dis.kõn'.so.late, sorrowful; discon'solate-ly, discon'solate-ness; disconsolation, dis.kõn'.so.lay''.shun.

The rest of these words are compounded with in- or un-.

Inconsolable, in'.kõn.so''.la.bl'; inconsol'able-ness, inconsolably, in'.kõn.so''.la.bly.

Un'consoled (3 syl.), not consoled, unconsol'-ing (R. xix.)

French inconsolable, inconsolé; Latin dis- consōlātus, &c.

Discontent, dis'.kõn.těnt', want of content; dis'content'-ed, dis'-content'-ed-ly, dis'content'-ed-ness, dis'content'-ment.

Mal'content', one politically discontented or inclined for sedition; malcontent'-ed, malcontent'-ed-ly, malcontent'-ed-ness, malcontent'-ment.

Non'content, plu. non'contents. Lords who negative a "bill." Those who approve of it are called "Contents."

French verb mécontenter, mécontentement, mécontent; Latin malē contentus, &c., dis contentus, &c.

Discontinue, dis'.cõn.tĩn'.u, to cease; discontin'ued (4 syl.), discontin'u-ing (Rule xix.), discontin'u-ance; discontinuation, dis'.kõn.tĩn'.u.a''.shun; discontinuity, dis'.kõn.tĩnũ''.i.ty; discontinuous, dis'.kõn.tĩn''.u.us.

French discontinū, discontinuation, verb discontinuer, discontinuité, discontinuance; Latin dis continuāre, &c.

Dis'cord, want of harmony; discor'dance, discor'dant; discor'dancy, plu. discordancies, dis.kõr'dǎn.siz (Rule xliv.); discor'dant-ly.

French discord, discordance, discordant; Latin discordans, genitive discordantis, discordia (dis corda, hearts asunder).

Discount, (noun) dis'.kount, (verb) dis.kount' (Rule l.)

Dis'count, abatement for ready money.

Discount', to make an abatement for ready money; dis-count'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), discount'-ing, discount'-er.

Uncount'ed, not counted.

French décompte, verb décompter = da.kõn.tay; Latin dis computāri, not to be reckoned [in the account].

Discountenance, dis.koun'.tě.nance, to discourage; discoun'-tenanced (4 syl.), discoun'tenanc-ing (Rule xix.); discoun'tenanc-er, one who discountenances.

French faveur, the countenance; défiaveur, the exact equivalent of dis- countenance. French contenance (2 syl.); Latin continens, containing, continentia. The word "countenance" means the "contents"; hence the "outline" or "contour," and by still further licence "the superficial aspect." (Our word is ill formed.)

Discourage, dis.kūr'rage, to dissuade, to dishearten; discour'aged (3 syl.), discour'ag-ing (Rule xix.), discour'aging-ly, discour'ag-er, discour'age-ment (Rule xviii.)

French découragement, verb décourager; Latin dis cor ago, to act on the heart the wrong way.

Discourse, dis.ko'rse', conversation, to converse; discoursed' (2 syl.), discours-ing (Rule xix.), discours-er; discour'sive, dis.ko'r.siv. Discur'sive means "desultory."

French discours; Latin discursus (discurro, supine discursum, to run over. A discourse is a "running over" [some subject]. A discussion is a shaking about [of some subject].

Discourteous or Uncourteous, -kor.tě'us (not -kur'.ichus), impolite; discour'teous-ness or uncourteous-ness, discour'teously or uncour'teously, rudely; discourtesy, plu. discourtesies, dis.kor'.te.siz (never un-) (not dis.kūr'.te.sy) (Rule xlv.), want of courtesy.

French discourtois, discourtoisie. (See Court.)

Discover, dis.kūv'er (not dis.kōv'er). Uncov'er.

Discover, to find out what was unknown;

Uncover, to remove a covering from some object.

Dis-, or un- covered, -kūv'erd, -cov'er-ing, -cov'er-cr, discover-able; discovery, dis.kuv'.ě.ry.

French découvrir, to discover and uncover, découvreur. Low Latin cofēra; Latin cōphīnus, a coffer. To cover is "put into a coffer."

Discredit, dis.krěd'it, disgrace, not to credit or believe; discred'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), discred'it-ing, discredit-able, (Rule xxiii.), discred'itably.

Incred'-ible, not credible; incredible-ness, incredibly; incredibility, in.krěd'.i.bil''.i.ty, state of disbelief.

Incred'ulous, not believing; incred'ulous-ness, incred'ulously; incredulity, in'.krě.da''.li.ty.

French discrédit, v. discréditer, incrédibilité, incrédule, incrédulité; Latin dis credere, incrēdibilis, incrēdibilitas, incrēditus, discredited, incrēdūlitas, incrēdulus.

Discreet, prudent. Discrete, disjoined. Both dis.kreeč'.

Discreet'-ly, discreet'-ness; discretion, dis.krěsh'un (not dis.kreeč'.shun); discretion-ary, dis.kresh''.ūn.ă.ry.

French discret, discrétion, discrétionnaire; Latin discretus, discretio, v. dis-cerno, supine discretum, to discern [right from wrong].

Discrepancy, plu. discrepancies, dis.krěp'.an.siz. (Rule xlv.) Disagreement in a statement.

Latin discrepantia (dis crepāre, to creak or jar sadly)

Discrete' (2 syl.), disjoined; discretive, dis.kree'tiv; discrete-ly. (See Discreet.)

French discret, discreet and discretive; Latin discretus, severed.

Discretion, dis.krēsh'un; discretion-ary. (See Discreet.)

Discriminate, dis.krīm'in.ate, to mark the difference of objects; discrim'ināt-ed (R. xxxvi.), discrim'ināt-ing (R. xix.); discrim'ināting-ly, discrim'ināt-or (not -er, R. xxxvii.); discriminatory, dis.krīm'in.a.tō.ry; discriminative, dis.krīm'in.a.tiv; discrimination, dis.krīm'in.a'.shun. ("Discrimination" one of the words in -tion, not Fr.)

Latin discrimen, genitive discriminis, discriminatio, discriminatus, verb discriminare; Greek dis krima, judgment between [things].

Discrown', to depose a sovereign or deprive him of his crown; discrowned' (2 syl.), discrown'-ing.

Un'crowned' (2 syl.), not crowned.

To "crown" is to invest a person with a crown as a symbol of royalty. To "discrown" is to remove from him that symbol.

Discursive, dis.kur'siv, desultory; discurs'ive-ly, discurs'ive-ness; discursory, dis.kur'.so.ry, argumental.

French discursif; Latin discurro, supine discursum (dis curro, to run hither and thither).

Discus, dis'kus, a quoit. Discous, dis'.kūs, broad, flat.

Discuss, dis.kūs'. To talk argumentatively on a subject.

"Discus," Latin; Greek diskōs, a round flat plate of metal, &c.

"Discuss," see Disc. "Discuss," see next article.

Discuss, dis.kūs', to ventilate a subject. (See Discus.)

Discussed' (2 syl.), discuss'-ing, discuss'-er.

Discussion, dis.kūsh'un, a debate; discussive, dis.kūs'siv; discutient, dis.kū.shē.ent, having the power to disperse morbid matter.

French discussif, discussion, verb discuter; Latin discussio, discussor, verb discutio, supine discussum (dis quatio, to shake thoroughly).

Disdain' (2 syl.), contempt, to scorn; disdained' (2 syl.), disdain'-ing, disdain'ingly, disdain'er, disdain'-ful (Rule viii.), disdain'ful-ly, disdain'ful-ness. (See Deign.)

French dédaigner, dédain; Italian disdegno, disdegnare; Latin dis dignare, to deem unworthy (dignus, worthy).

Disease, dis.ēze', illness. Disseize, dis.secs', to oust.

Disease is more applicable to man; distemper to brutes.

Disease' (2 syl.), plu. diseases (3 syl., Rule liii.)

Diseased' (2 syl.) . Afflicted with disease.

Uneasy, un.eē.zy, not easy, uncomfortable; uneasi-ly, uneasi-ness (Rule xi.)

Old English edth, easy; unedth, uneasy; unedthnes, uneasiness; unethelic, uneasily. French malaise. Latin dis or male otios[us].

Disembark or debark, dis'.em.bark', de.bark', to land from a ship; disem- or de- barked, -barkt, -bark-ing; disem-barkation or debarkation, dis.em- or de-bar.kay''shun; disem- or de- barkment, dis.em- or de-bark'.ment.

“Bark” (French barque, Low Latin barca, a little ship). Em or en converts nouns into verbs, hence embark, to ship or put on board (French embarquer). Dis reverses, hence dis-embark, to unship.

French débarque, débarquement, v. débarquer, formed on another principle. Low Latin de barca, [to take] out of a ship.

Disembarrass, dis.em.bar'rās, to free from perplexity; disem-bar'rased (4 syl.), disembar'rass-ing, disembar'rass-ment.

Unembarrassed, un'.em.bar'rast, not troubled with perplexities or pecuniary difficulties.

French débarras, v. débarrasser; Low Latin barra, a barrier. Em or en converts nouns into verbs, hence embarrass, to hamper with barriers. Dis reverses, hence dis-embarrass, to remove the barriers.

Disembellish, dis.em.bēll'.ish, to strip off decorations; disem-bell'ished (4 syl.), disembell'ish-ing, disembell'ish-er.

“Bell,” a beauty (Latin bellus, pretty). Em or en converts nouns into verbs, and ish added to verbs means “to make,” hence embellish, to make beautiful. Dis reverses, hence dis-embellish, to strip off that which makes beautiful.

Disembody, dis'.em.bōd''y, to free from the body; disembodies, dis'.em.bōd''.iz; disembodied, dis'.em.bōd''.id (Rule xi.), disembodi-ment (Rule xi.), but disembod'y-ing (with y).

Old English bodig, the body. Em or en converts nouns to verbs, hence embody, “to give a body, or put on a body.” Dis reverses, hence dis-embody, to put off a body, to take the body away.

Disembogue, dis'.em.bōg'', to pour out through the mouth [as a river, into the sea]; disembogues, dis'.em.bōgs''; disem-bogued, dis'.em.bōgd''; disembogu-ing, dis'.em.bōg''ing (R. xix.); disembogue-ment, dis'.em.bōg''.ment (R. xviii.)

“Bogue” (French bouche, Spanish boca), the mouth. Em or en converts nouns into verbs, hence em-bogue, to put into the mouth (French emboucher, Spanish embuchar). Dis reverses, hence dis-embogue, to put out of the mouth, to disgorge (Norman-French désemboucher, Spanish desembuchar).

Disembowel, dis'.em.bōw.el (-bōw- to rhyme with now), to take out the entrails; disembōw'elled (4 syl.), disembōw'ell-ing (R. iii. EL); disembōw'ell-er, disembow'el-ment (one l). These words are also used without the prefix dis-: as Embowel, em.bōw'.el, to take out the entrails; embōw'elled (3 syl.), embōw'ell-ing (R. iii. EL), embowell-er, embōw'el-ment (one l).

“Bowel” (French boel; Latin botellus, the gut). Em or en converts nouns into verbs, hence em-bowel, to gut, i.e., take out the entrails. In this example dis is pleonastic.

Disenchant, dis.en.chănt (not dis.en.chânt), to free from enchantment; disenchant'-ed (R. xxxvi.), disenchant'-ing, disenchant'-er (should be -or), disenchant'-ment.

French désenchanter, désenchantement; Latin dis incantāre, -incantamentum, -incantātor (canto, to sing often the same tune).

Disencumber, dis.en.kūm'.bēr, to remove an encumbrance; disencum'bered (4 syl.), disencum'ber-er, disencum'ber-ing; disencum'brance (not disencumberance).

Disencumbered, having an encumbrance taken off;

Unencumbered, un'.en.kūm'.berd, without encumbrance.

Dis and French encombre, v. encombrer; Latin in cumbere, to lie or lean upon; dis reverses.

Disengage, dis'.en.gage', to free from work or entanglement; disengaged' (3 syl.); disengag-ing, dis'.en.gāge'-ing; disengag-er, dis.en.gāge'.er; disengage-ment, disengagedness, dis'.en.gāge'.ed.ness, state of being at leisure.

Dis'engaged' (3 syl.), set free from an engagement;

Un'engaged' (3 syl.), without any engagement.

Disengāging, setting free something entangled;

Unengāging, not adapted to engage the heart of anyone.

French dégager, dégagement, verb dégager; Low Latin vadium, a pawn; German wage, a pair of scales; wägen, to weigh; money weighed out for service, hence wages; goods for which money is weighed out, hence a pawn. En converts nouns into verbs, hence engage, to pawn; therefore, "not to be free or unoccupied." Dis reverses, hence dis-engaged, taken out of pawn, free, at leisure.

Disennoble, dis'.en.nō.b'l, to deprive of nobility; dis'ennob'led (4 syl.), dis'ennob'ling. Un'ennob'led, not ennobled.

"Noble," a nobleman. En converts nouns into verbs, hence ennoble, to make noble. Dis reverses, hence dis-ennoble, to deprive one of that which gives nobility.

Disenroll, dis'.en.roll, to erase from a roll; dis'enrolled' (3 syl.), dis'enroll'-ing, disenroll'ment, generally disenrolment. Un'enrolled' (3 syl.), not enrolled. Unroll, to open something rolled; unrolled' (2 syl.), unroll'ing (R. viii.)

"Roll," a list of names. En converts nouns into verbs, hence enroll, to put a name on a roll. Dis reverses, hence dis-enroll, to take a name off a roll. ("Roll," Latin rōtula, a reel.)

Disentail, dis'.en.tail', to free land from entail; dis'entailed' (3 syl.), dis'entail'-ing, dis'entail'-ment, dis'entail'er.

French entailler, to cut off, hence to limit; Law Latin feudum tallitum, a fee curtailed or limited [to a particular heir]. Dis reverses, hence dis-entail, to abolish the limitation of entailment.

Disentangle, dis'.en.tăn'.g'l, to unravel; dis'entāng'led (4 syl.), dis'entāng'ling, dis'entan'gler, disentangle-ment.

Unentangled, un'.en.tăn''.g'ld, not entangled;

Disentangled, dis'.en.tān''.g'ld, with the tangle removed.

"Tangle," a jumble. En converts nouns into verbs, hence entangle, to make a jumble. Dis reverses, hence dis-entangle, to get rid of the jumble.

Disenthral, dis'.en.thrawl', to free from thralldom (Rule viii.); dis'enthralled' (3 syl.), dis'enthrall'-ing (Rule i.), dis'enthral'-ment (only one l).

Unenthralled, ūn'.en.thrawld', not in thralldom;

Disenthralled (3 syl.), set free from thralldom.

Thral, Old English, "a slave." En converts nouns into verbs, hence enthrall, to make one a slave. Dis reverses, hence dis-enthrall, to set free one who has been made a slave.

Disenthrone, dis'.en.throne'' or dethrone, de.throne', to depose a sovereign; dis'enthroned'' (3 syl.) or dethroned' (2 syl.), dis'enthrōn''-ing or dethrōn'-ing (Rule xix.), dis'enthrone''-ment or dethrone'-ment.

"Throne," the seat of royalty. En converts nouns into verbs, hence enthron, to place on the seat of sovereignty. Dis reverses, hence dis-enthron, to remove from the seat of royalty.

"Dethrone" is formed on another principle: de throne, [to remove] from the throne.

Disentitle, dis'.en.tī'.t'l, to deprive of title or claim; disentitled, dis'.en.tī'.t'ld; dis'entit'ling.

Untitled, without title; Disentitled, deprived of title.

"Title" (Old English titul), a denotation of rank. En converts nouns into verbs, hence entitle, to confer a title. Dis reverses, hence dis-entitle, to remove the name denoting rank.

Disentomb, dis'.en.toom' (b mute), to remove from a tomb; disentombed, dis'.en.toomd'; disentomb-ing, dis'.en.toom'-.ing; disentomb-ment, dis'.en.toom'.ment.

Untombed (2 syl.), without a tomb, not committed to a grave;

Disentombed (3 syl.), taken out of one's grave.

"Tomb" (French tombeau, Greek tumbos), a grave. En converts nouns into verbs, hence entomb, to put into a grave. Dis reverses, hence dis-entomb, to take out of a grave.

Disestablish, dis'.es.tāb''.lish, to break up; dis'estāb'lished (4 syl.), dis'estāb'lish-ing, dis'estāb'lish-ment.

Unestablished (4 syl.), not established;

Disestablished, deprived of that which gave establishment.

"Stable," a thing fixt (Latin slo, to stand or fix). En converts nouns into verbs, and -ish added to verbs means "to make," hence es [en] stablish, to make firm. Dis reverses, hence dis-establish, to unfix what was firm.

Dis'esteem', to disregard; dis'esteemed' (3 syl.), dis'esteem'-ing; disestimation, dis.ēs'.tī.may''.shun.

Latin dis aestimāre; French mésestimer (Latin male aestimare).

Disfavour, dis.fay'vör, disapprobation, to disapprove; disfa'voured (3 syl.), disfa'vour-ing, disfa'vour-er.

Other negative compounds are made with un-: as—

Unfa'vour-able, unfa'vourable-ness, unfa'vourably.

Unfa'voured, un.fay'vörd, not favoured;

Disfa'voured, spited, discountenanced.

French défaveur, défavorable; Latin dis fīvor, removal of goodwill.

Disfigure, dis.fig'er (not dis.fig'geur), to deface; disfig'ured (3 syl.), disfig'ur-ing (Rule xix.), disfig'ur-er, disfig'ure-ment (only five words drop the "e" final before -ment, Rule xviii.); disfiguration, dis.fig'.u.ray'shun.

Unfigured, not figured, plain; disfigured, defaced.

French défigurer; Latin dis figūrāre, to mar the form; figūrātio, &c.

Disforest, dis.for'est or disafforest, dis'.af.for'est, to take from a forest its royal privileges; dis- or disaf- forested (Rule xxxvi.), dis- or disaf- for'est-ing.

Old French forest, French forêt. Af converts the noun into a verb, hence afforest, to convert into a forest with certain privileges. Dis reverses, hence dis-afforest, to remove the privileges of the forest.

Disforest is to reduce a forest from being a forest.

Disfranchise, dis.frän'.chize, to take away the franchise; disfrän'chised (3 syl.), disfran'chis-ing (Rule xix.), disfrän'chise-ment, dis.frän'.shiz.mënt (Rule xviii.)

Unfranchised, not franchised;

Disfranchised, deprived of its franchise.

Dis and French franchise; Low Latin franchesia, a franchise; dis franchisātus, disfranchised.

Disgorge' (2 syl.), to yield up; disgorged' (2 syl.); disgorg-ing, dis.gorge'.ing (Rule xix.); disgorge'-ment.

Ungorged' (2 syl.), not sated or gorged;

Disgorged' (2 syl.), vomited out or ejected from the stomach.

French dégorgement, verb dégorgier, to discharge from the throat (gorge, the throat; Latin gurg[ul]ia the windpipe).

Disgrace' (2 syl.), dishonour, to be out of favour; disgraced' (2 syl.); disgrac-ing, dis.grase'.ing (Rule xix.); disgrace'-ful (Rule viii.), disgrace'ful-ly, disgrace'ful-ness.

Ungaced' (2 syl.), not embellished;

Disgraced, reduced to shame.

Ungraceful, without grace; disgraceful, shameful.

Ungraceful-ly, inelegantly; disgraceful-ly, shamefully.

Ungraceful-ness, inelegance; disgraceful-ness, shamefulness.

Ungracious, un.gray'.shus, surly; ungracious-ly.

(Un- denotes simply the absence, dis- denotes actual privation of something before possessed.)

French disgrace, verb disgracier, disgracieux, ungracious; Latin dis gratia, favour, grace, honour.

Disguise, dis.gize', a false appearance, to have a false appearance; disguised, dis.gized; disguised-ly, dis.gized'ly or dis.gize'.ed.ly; disguis-ing, dis.gize'-ing (Rule xix.); disguise-ment, dis.gize'.ment (Rule viii.)

Old French desguiser, &c.; French déguiser, déguisement.

(Old English wisā, manner, guise; Welsh gwis, mode, gwisg, dress.)

Disgust', aversion, to excite aversion; disgust'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disgust'-ing, disgust'ing-ly, disgust'-ful (Rule viii.), disgust'ful-ly, disgust'ful-ness.

Italian disgustare, disgusto; Latin dis gustāre (gustus, taste).

Dish, plu. dishes, dish.ĕz (Rule liii.), noun and verb; dished (1 syl.), dish'-ing. To dish up [dinner], to put food on the dishes ready for [dinner].

Old English disc, a plate or dish; Latin discus; Greek diskos.

Dishabille. (See Deshabille.)

Dishearten, dis.hart'.en, to dispirit; disheart'ened (3 syl.); dishearten-ing, dis.hart'.ning.

Dis and Old English heorte, the heart.

Dishevel, dī.shĕv'.el, more correctly dechev'el, to let the hair loose; dishevelled, more correctly dechev'eled (3 syl.), dishevell-ing, more correctly dechevel-ing.

(The spelling of "dishevel" is disgraceful.)

French cheveu, the hair; chevelure, the hair dressed; dé chevel, to "derange the dress of the hair" (Latin capillus); but dishevel must be either de-shevel or dis-hevel, both nonsense.

Dishonest, dis.ōn'.est, not honest; dishonest-ly, dis.ōn'.est.ly; dishonesty, dis.ōn'.est.ty.

(Only three simple words begin with h-mute: (1) heir = air, (2) honest = on'.est and honour = on'.er, (3) hour = our (Rule xlviii.); all taken from the French.)

Old French honneste, French honnête, deshonnête; Latin honestus, inhonestus. (We have avoided the French double n, but have followed the French in dropping the h.)

Dishonour, dīz.ōn'.er, disgrace, to disgrace; dishonoured, dīz.ōn'.erd; dishonouring, dīz.ōn'.er.ing; dishonour-er, dīz.ōn'.er.er; dishonourable, dīz.ōn'.er.a.b'l; dishonourableness, dīz.ōn'.er.a.b'l.ness; dishonourably, dīz.ōn'.er.a.bly.

Unhonoured, un.ōn'.erd, not honoured, disregarded;

Dishonoured, positively disgraced or discredited.

French deshonneur!! but deshonorable (one n), verb deshonorer; Latin honor, dchonestus, verb dchonestāre, to discredit.

Disincline, dis'in.kline'', not willing; dis'inclined'' (3 syl.), dis'inclīn'-ing (Rule xix.); disinclination, dis'in.klī.nay''shun, dislike, unwillingness.

Latin dis inclināre, dis inclinātio (clīno, Greek klínō, to bend), Disincorporate, dis'in.kor''.po.rate, to deprive of corporate rights; dis'inco'r''porāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dis'inco'r''porāt-ing (Rule xix.); disincorporation, dis'in.kor.po.ray''.shun.

Un'inco'r''porated, not corporated;

Dis'inco'r''porated, deprived of corporate rights.

French désincorporer, désincorporation; Latin dis incorporatio, -incorporāre (corpus, a body [corporate]).

Dis'infect'', to deodorise, to purify; dis'infect''-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dis'infect''-ing; dis'infect''-er, a person or substance that disinfects; dis'infect''-ant, a substance which disinfects; disinfection, dis'in.fēk''.shun.

Un'infect''ed, not contaminated;

Dis'infect''ed, cured of its contamination.

Uninfectious, un'in.fēk''.shus, not communicating [disease];

Disinfectious, dis'in.fēk''.shus, neutralising infection.

French désinfecter, désinfection; Latin dis infectus, -infector (inficio).

Disingenuous, dis'in.jēn''.u.us (not dis'in.jee''.ni.us), not frank; dis'ingen''uous-ly, dis'ingen''uous-ness; disingenuity, dis'in.je.nu''.i.ty, want of candour.

Latin dis ingenuitas, -ingēnus, verb ingenor, to be of good extraction or well-born. Dis reverses. "Disingenuous" is "ill-bred."

Disinherit, dis'in.her''rit, to deprive of hereditary rights; dis'inher'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dis'inher'it-ing, dis'inher'it-er (ought to be -or); disinheriton, dis'in.her''ri.sōn, the act of disinheriting; dis'inher'itance.

(The French and Latin primitive in this example is ex.)

French exhérédation, disinheriton; verb exhéredér; Latin exhæredāre, to disinherit; exhæredātor, exhæredātio, disinheriton.

Disintegrate, dis.in'.tē.grāte, to pulverise; disin'tegrāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disin'tegrāt-ing (Rule xix.); disintegration, dis.in'.te.gray''.shun; disintegrable, dis.in'.te.gra.b'l; disin'tegrable-ness.

Latin dis integrāre, -integrātio (intēger, entire and whole).

Dis'inter'', to exhume; dis'interred'' (3 syl.), dis'inter''-ing (Rule i.), dis'inter''-er, dis'inter''-ment.

Uninterred, not buried; Disinterred, exhumed.

"Disinter" should have double "r" (Latin terr[a]).

"Ter," for terra, the earth. In or en converts nouns into verbs, hence inter, to put into the earth. Dis reverses, hence dis inter, to take out of the earth.

Italian interrare, to bury; French déterrer, to exhume.

Disinterested, dis'in.ter.est''.ed, without selfish motive; dis'interes'ted-ly, dis'interest'ed-ness.

Un'interest'ed, not concerned [in the matter].

- Un'interest'-ing, dull, unable to excite the mind.
 Un'interest'-ing-ly, in a dull lifeless manner.
 French désintéressé, disinterested and uninterested; Latin interest, it concerns [me]; dis interest, it does not concern [me]; hence "unselfish," and also "unexciting."
- Disjoin', to sever; disjoined' (2 syl.), disjoin'ing.
 Disjoined' (2 syl.), severed. Unjoined', not united.
 French déjoindre and disjoindre; Latin disjungo, supine disjunctum.
- Disjoint', to put out of joint; disjoint-ing, disjoint'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disjoint'-ed-ly, disjoint'-ed-ness.
 Disjointed, put out of joint. Unjointed, not jointed Disjunct'; disjunction, dis.jŭnk'.shun, disunion, severance; disjunctive, dis.jŭnk'.tiv; disjunc'tive-ly.
 "Disjoin" and "disjoint" are from the same root-verb. A "joint" is a contrivance to join together two parts.
 French disjoint, disjonctif, disjonction, disjonctive (in Grammar). Latin disjunctus, disjunctio, disjunctivus.
- Disk (in Bot.) In a daisy the disk is the yellow eye, and the white petals are called the "rays."
 Disc. The face of the sun or moon.
 Both French disque; Latin discus; Greek diskos, a round plate.
- Dislike' (2 syl.), aversion, to feel aversion to: disliked' (2 syl.), dislik'-ing (Rule xix.)
 Unlike', not like, dissimilar; unlike'-ly, not probable; unlike'li-ness, improbability; unlike'-ness, want of resemblance; unlike'li-hood (-hood Old Eng. suf., "state").
 Dis- or un- and Old English gelte, like; *lice*d, likened.
- Dislocate, dis'.lŏ.kāte, to put out of joint; dis'locāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dis'locāt-ing; dislocation, dis'.lo.kay''shun.
 Dis'locāted, put out of joint;
 Un'locāted, not having a fixt place assigned.
 Unlocated Land (American), land not yet appropriated.
 Fr. dislocation, v. disloquer; Lat. dis locāre, to put out of place.
- Dislodge' (2 syl.), to remove from its place; dislodged' (2 syl.), dislodg'-ing (R. xix.), dislodg'-er; dislodg'-ment (one of the five words which drop the e before -ment, R. xviii., ¶).
 Fr. déloger, délogement; Lat. dis locāre, to displace (locus, a place).
- Disloyal, dis.loy'.al, or unloy'al, not loyal.
 Disloy'al denotes an active demonstration of disloyalty;
 Unloy'al denotes simply the fact of not being loyal.
 Disloy'al-ly; disloyal-ty, dis.loy'.al.ty.
 French déloyal (loi, a law); Latin lēgālis (lex, a law).
 Loyal means "obedient to law;" disloyal, disobedient to law.

Dismantle, dis.man'tl, to strip [a house, &c., of its furniture]; dismantled, dis.man'tld; dismantling, dis.man'tling.

Disman'tled, deprived of mantle or furniture;

Unman'tled, without a mantle.

French démanteler (military term); Latin dis mantle, a mantle.

Dismast', to break down or carry away the masts of a ship;
dismast'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dismast'-ing.

Old Fr. démaster; Fr. démâter; Ital. masto; Germ. mast.

Dismay, diz.may', terror, to be in terror; dismayed' (2 syl.); dismay'-ing (R. xiii.) Un'dismayed (3 syl.), not dismayed.

Spanish desmayar, to be in dismay; desmayo, dismay.

Dismem'ber, to mutilate; dismem'bered (3 syl.), dismem'ber-ing, dismem'ber-ment, mutilation, severance of limbs.

French démembrer, démembrement; Latin dis membrum, a limb.

Dismiss', to send away; dismissed' (2 syl.), dismiss'-ing, dismiss'-al; dismission, dis.mish'.ân; dismissive, dis.miss'.iv; dim'issory, granting leave to depart.

Latin dimissio, dimissorius, v. dimittère, supine dimissum (di[dis]mitto, to send away).

Dismount', to alight from a horse, to take articles from their "mountings"; dismount'-ed (R. xxxvi.), dismount'-ing.

Unmoun'ted, not mounted; dismounted, deprived of...

French démonter; Latin dis mons, gen. montis, from the mountain.

Disobey, dis'.o.bay', to act in opposition to orders given; disobeyed' (3 syl.), disobey-ing (Rule xiii.);

Unobeyed, not having done what is ordered.

Disobedience, dis'.o.bee''.dî.ence (not -ance). Non-observance of a command.

Disobedient, dis'.o.bee''.dî.ent; dis'obe'dient-ly.

French désobéissance and désobéissant (wrong conj.), désobéir; Latin dis obediens, gen. obedientis, obedientia, v. obedire.

Disoblige, dis'.o.blige', to offend by incivility; dis'obliged' (3 syl.), dis'oblig'-ing (R. xix.), dis'obli'ging-ly.

Disobli'ged, slighted by incivility; Unobli'ged, not obliged.

Disobli'ging, discourteous; Unobliging, not obliging.

French désobliger; Latin dis obligare (ob ligo, to tie or bind to one).

Disorder, diz.or'.der, want of order, to put out of order; disor'dered (3 syl.), disor'der-ing, disor'der-ly, disor'derli-ness, untidiness. Unor'dered, not asked for or ordered.

French désordre; Latin dis ordo, order, v. ordinare.

Disorganise, dis.or'.gân.ize, to derange what is organised;
disor'ganised (4 syl.), disor'ganis-ing (Rule xix.); disorganisation, dis.or'.gân.î.zay''.shun; dis'organis-er (R. xxxi.)

Unor'ganised (4 syl.), not methodised;

Disor'ganised (4 syl.), thrown out of methodical arrangement.

Or'ganised (3 syl.), having organic structure;

Inor'ganised (4 syl.), not having organic structure.

French désorganiser; désorganisation, désorganisateur; Latin organum; Greek orgānon, an organ adapted to some work or function, hence "organised" also means methodised, and "disorganised" thrown out of methodical arrangement.

Disown, diz.own', to ignore; disowned' (2 syl.), disown'-ing.

Unowned' (2 syl.), having no recognized owner;

Disowned' (2 syl.), disclaimed.

Unowed, un.owd, not owed, not due.

Old English egan, to own; undgan, to disown.

Disparage, dis.par'rage, to depreciate; dispar'aged (3 syl.), dispar'ag-ing (Rule xix.), dispar'aging-ly, dispar'ag-er, dispar'age-ment (Rule xviii.)

Latin disparāre (dis par, unequal); French parage, lineage; [dis] parage, of unequal lineage. To "disparage" meant originally "to consider another of meaner rank," hence "of meaner value," and hence "to depreciate."

Disparity, plu. disparities, dis.pär'ri.tiz (not disparaty).

Latin disparitas, adj. disparilis (par, gen. paris, equal).

Dispassionate, dis.päh'.ün.ate, without emotion, impartial; dispassionate-ly.

Unpassionate, not of a passionate temper.

Latin dis passio, without passion.

Dispatch'. (See Despatch.)

Dispel', to disperse; dispelled' (2 syl.), dispell'-ing.

(It would be better if the double l had been preserved.)

Latin dispellō (dis pello, to drive away).

Dispense' (2 syl.) not dispence, to administer, to do without; dispensed', dispens'-ing (Rule xix.), dispens'-er.

("Dispense" is one of the six words ending in -ence, between two and three hundred end in -ence, Rule xxvi.)

Undispensed, un'.dis.pens', not dispensed.

Dispense to, administer to;

Dispense with, to part with or do without.

Dispensable, dis.pën'.sa.b'l, that may be dispensed with;

In'dispens'able, that cannot be dispensed with;

Indispensably, absolutely, positively.

Dispens'ary, plu. dispensaries, dis.pën'.sa.riz (Rule xlv.), a place where medicine is dispensed;

Dispensatory, dis.pën''.sa.tō.ry, a dictionary of medical prescriptions, &c.; adj. having the power to grant dispensation.

Dispensation, dis.pën.say''.shun, exemption, a system of rules (as the Mosaic dispensation), God's mode of dealing with his creatures;

Dispensative, dis.pěn.sa.tív; dispen'sative-ly.

Fr. dispenser, dispensaire, dispensation; Lat. dispensāre, dispensatio.

Dispermous, dis.pěr'.mūs (in Botany), having two seeds.

Greek dissós sperma, twofold seed.

Disperse' (2 syl.), to scatter; dispersed' (2 syl.), dispers'-ing (Rule xix.), dispers'er, dispers'able (Rule xxiii.); dispersion, dis.per'.shun; dispersive, dis.per'.sív.

Undispersed, un'.dis.perst', not dispersed.

French disperser, dispersion; Latin dispergĕre, supine dispersum, dispersio, dispersus (spargo, to scatter).

Dispirit, dis.spir' rít, to dishearten; dispir'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dispir'it-ing, dispir'ited-ly. Un'dispir'ited, not...

Dispirited, disheartened. Unspirited, tame, without spirit.

Latin dis spirítus (spiro, to breathe).

Displace' (2 syl.), to remove from its place; displaced' (2 syl.), displác'-ing (Rule xix.), displace'-ment (Rule xviii., ¶), displace'-able (-ce and -ge retain the e final before the postfix -able, Rule xx.) Un'displaced', not displaced.

French déplacer, déplacement; Latin plātea (Greek plātus, wide).

Displant', to remove a plant; displant'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), displant'-ing; displantation, dis'.plān.tay''.shun.

Displant'ed, removed from where it was planted;

Unplant'ed, not planted, of spontaneous growth.

French déplanter, déplantation; Latin dis plantāre, dis plantatio.

Display', show, to exhibit; displayed' (2 syl.), display'-ing (Rule xiii.), display'-er. Un'displayed', not displayed.

French déployer; Latin dis plicāre, to unfold.

Displease, dis.pleez', to offend; displeased' (2 syl.), displeas'-ing (Rule xix.), displeas'-er.

Displeasure, dis.plezh'.ur; displeas'ure-able.

Unpleasant, un.plěz'.ant, not pleasant; unpleas'ant-ly, unpleas'ant-ness.

Displeas'-ing, offensive; Unpleas'-ing, not pleasing.

French déplaisant, déplaisir; Latin displicentia, displicĕre (dis placĕo, to displease).

Dispose, dis.pōze', to arrange, to feel willing; disposed', arranged, inclined; dispōs-ing' (Rule xix.), dispōs'-er, dispōs'-al, dispōs'-able (Rule xxiii.), dispōs'able-ness.

Undisposed, not disposed.

Disposition, dis'.pō.z'ish'.un. Arrangement, temper.

Indisposed, in.dis.pōzd, unwell, not inclined; indisposition; indispōs'-able, not saleable.

Undisposedness, un'-dis.pō''zēd.ness, unwillingness.

Disposed of. Parted with, sold. (See Depose.)

Undisposed of. Not parted with, not sold.

French disposer, disposition; Latin dispositio, dispositus, dispōnere (dis pono, to set aside, to distribute).

Dispossess, dis'.pōs.zēs' (not dis'.pō.zēs'), to deprive of; dispossessed, dis'.pos.zest' (not dis'.pō.zest'); dispossess-ing, dis'.pos.zēs'.ing (not dis'.pō.zēs'.ing); dispossession, dis'.pos.zēs'h''.un (not dis'.pō.zēs'h''.un); dis'possess'-or.

Dis'possessed' (3 syl.), turned out of possession;

Un'possessed' (3 syl.), not having in possession.

Fr. dépossession; Latin dis possessio, possessor, possideo, sup. posses-sum, (pos [potis] sedeo, the right of settling down. Dis reverses).

Dispraise, dis.prāze', censure, to censure; dispraised' (2 syl.), disprais-ing (Rule xix.), disprais'ing-ly, disprais'-er.

Dispraised, dis.prāzd', censured;

Unpraised, un.prāzd', not praised.

Dis and German preisen, to praise; preiser; French priser, to value; Latin pretium, price or value. To praise is "to value."

Disproof' (noun), confutation; disprovo' (verb), to confute (R. li.)

Disprove, dis.proov' (not dis.prōve), to confute; disproved, dis.proovd'; disprov-ing, dis.proov'.ing (not dis.prō'.ving, Rule xix.); disprov-able, dis.proo'.vā.b'l;

Indisprovable, not to be disproved.

Disprov-al, dis.proo'.val, refutation;

Disapproval, dis'.ap.proo''.val, displeasure.

Disapprobation, dis'.ap.pro.bay''.shun, displeasure.

Unproved, un.proovd' (not un-prōvd), not proved;

Disproved, dis.proovd' (not dis-prōvd), confuted;

Disapproved, dis'.ap.proovd', not pleased with.

Dis and Old English prof[ian], to prove; past profode, past part. profod; Latin prōbare (prōbus, honest, upright).

Disproportion, dis'.pro.por''.shun, want of proportion; disproportion-able, disproportionable-ness, disproportion-ably, disproportion-al, disproportional-ly, disproportion-ate, disproportion-ate-ly, disproportion-ate-ness.

French disproportion, disproportionel; Latin dis prōportio, proportionātus (portio, a portion).

Dispute' (2 syl.), a contention, to contend; dispūt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dispūt'-ing (Rule xix.), dispūt'ing-ly, dispūt'-er; disputable, dis'.pu.ta.b'l (not dis.pūte..a.b'l); dis'putable-ness, dis'putably, dis'putant.

Disputation, dis'.pu.tay''.shun. Controversy.

Disputatious, dis'.pu.tay''.shus. Contentious.

Disputative, dis''pu.ta.tiv; dis'putative-ly.

Undispu'ted, not disputed; undisputed-ly.

Indisputable (not un-), in.dis''pu.ta.ble, certain;

Indis'putable-ness, indis'putably, certainly.

French disputable, disputant ("Disputation" is not a French word); Latin disputabilis, disputatio, disputator, v. disputare (pūto, to prune or dress vines, to think; dis pūto, to think differently. "To think" is to prune or dress the thoughts).

Disqualify, dis.kwōl'i.fy, to render unfit; disqualifies, dis.kwōl'i.fize; disqualified, dis.kwōl'i.fide; disqualifi-er, dis.kwōl'i.fi.er (R. xi.); disqualification, dis.kwōl'i.fi.kay''shun, but disquali'fy-ing (Rule xi.)

Disqualified. Having something which destroys fitness;

Unqualified. Not having what is required.

Dis and French qualification, v. qualifier (Latin qualitas facio, to make of the quality or nature required).

Disquiet, dis.kwi'.et (not dis.kwoi'.et), uneasiness, to disturb; disqui'et-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disqui'et-ing, disqui'et-er, disqui'et-ly, disqui'et-ness; disquietude, dis.qui'.e.tude.

Unquiet, un.kwi'.et, restless; unquiet-ly, unquiet-ness.

Inquietude, in.kwi'.e.tude. Anxiety.

French inquietude; Latin inquiētudo, inquiētus, v. inquietāre. Our word is formed from (Latin) dis quies, the reverse of rest.

Disquisition, dis'.kwi.z'ish'un, discussion; disquisition-al.

French disquisition; Latin disquisitio, v. disquiro (dis quero).

Disregard, dis'.re.gard', slight, to neglect; disregard-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disregard-ing, disregard'ing-ly, disregard'-er, disregard'-ful (Rule viii.), disregard'ful-ly.

Un'regard'ed, neglected; Dis'regarded, slighted.

Dis and French regarder; Low Latin regardium, "gard" = ward (one under a guardian, one guarded or looked after). To "regard" is to look after one as a guardian, dis-regard is to neglect so doing.

Disrelish, dis.rel'.ish, a dislike of the taste, to dislike the taste; disrel'ished (3 syl.), disrel'ish-ing.

Dis'rel'ished (3 syl.), aversion to the taste;

Un'rel'ished (3 syl.), having no fondness for the taste.

Greek dis [re] leich[o], leicho, to lick; re leicho, to lick again; dis re leicho, to lick over and over again. It is a badly compounded word.

Disrespect, dis'.re.spect', want of respect, to show want of respect; disrespect-ed (R. xxxvi.), disrespect-ing, disrespect'-ful (R. viii.), disrespect'ful-ly, disrespect'ful-ness.

Dis'respect'ed, dishonoured. Un'respect'ed, not respected.

Irrespective, ir.re.spek''.tiv, without regard to; ir'respect'-ive-ly, independently of other considerations.

Dis and French respect, verb respector; Latin respicio, supine respectrum (re specio, to look back upon). Dis reverses.

Disrobe' (2 syl.), to undress; disrobed', disrōb'-ing (Rule xix.), disrōb-er. Unrobe', unrōb'-ing (same meaning).

Disrobed' (2 syl.), divested of robing;

Unrobed (2 syl.), without robes, or dress.

Dis and French robe, a state dress; Low Latin roba, a robe.

Disrupt', to burst asunder; disrupt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disrupt'-ing; disruption, dis.rŭp'.shun, fracture.

Latin disrumpo, supine disruptum (dis rumpo, to break asunder).

Dissatisfy, dis.săt'.ĭs.fy, to leave discontent; dissatisfies, dis.săt'.ĭs.fĭze (Rule xi.)

Dissatisfied, dis.săt'.ĭs.fĭde, discontented;

Unsatisfied, un'.săt'.ĭs.fĭde, not contented.

Dissat'isfy-ing, leaving discontent behind;

Unsat'isfy-ing, not contenting.

Dissatisfactory, dis.săt'.ĭs.făk''.tŏ.ry, giving dissatisfaction;

Un'satisfactory, not giving satisfaction.

Dissatisfac'tori-ly, in a way to cause dissatisfaction;

Unsatisfac'tori-ly, in a way not to satisfy.

Dissatisfac'tori-ness, a state of being dissatisfied;

Unsatisfac'tori-ness, failure to produce satisfaction.

Dissatisfaction, dis.săt'.ĭs.făk''.shun, discontent.

Unsatisfiable, un'.săt'.ĭs.fĭ''.ă.ble, not satisfiable.

Latin dis sâtisfactio, sâtisfăcere (sâtis făcio, to do enough).

Dissect, dis.sect' (not de.sect'), to anatomise; dissect'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dissect'-ing, dissect'-or (not -er), dissect'-ible (ought to be -able); dissection, dis.sĕk'.shun.

Fr. dissection; Lat. dissectio, dissĕcäre (dis sĕco, to cut to pieces).

Disseize, dis.seez', to dispossess. Disease, diz.eze', malady.

Disseized, dis.seezd'; disseiz'-ing (Rule xix.), dispossessing wrongfully; disseiz'in, the act of disseizing;

Disseiz'-or, one who takes possession unlawfully;

Disseizee, dis.sec.zee', the person disseized.

(These words are also spelt with "-s" instead of "-z," but as seize is always spelt with "z," there is no reason why its compounds should adopt a different spelling.)

Low Latin disseisina, disseisio; to disseize; disseisitor.

Dissemble, dis.zĕm'.b'l, to conceal by equivocation; dissembled, dis.zĕm'.b'ld; dissem'bling (Rule xix.); dissem'bler, one who conceals by equivocation.

- Dissimulation, dis.sĭm'.u.lay''shun, the act of dissembling.
Dis and French sembler. The French corresponding words are dissimuler, dissimulation; Latin dissimulāre, dissimulatio (simŭlo, to feign; dis in a bad sense, similis, like).
(It would have been better if we had adopted the word "dissimulate" instead of the bad French form "dissemble.")
- Disseminate, dis.sĕm'.i.nate, to scatter as seed, to diffuse; dissem'ināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dissem'ināt-ing (Rule xix.), dissem'ināt-or (Rule xxxvii.); dissemination, dis.sĕm'.i.nay''shun; dissem'inative, dis.sem'.i.na.tiv.
 French disséminer, dissémination; Latin dissēminatio, dissēmīnator, dissēmīnāre (sēmen, seed).
- Dissent, dis.sĕnt', disagreement, to disagree. Descent, dĕ.sĕnt', generation, a going down.
Dissent' (noun), dissent'-er.
Dissent' (verb), dissent'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dissent'-ing.
Dissentient, dis.sĕn'.shĕ.ent; dissension, dis.sĕn'.shun (not -tion, Rule xxxiii., -r). Assent', q.v., agreement.
 French dissension; Latin dissentiens, gen. -entis, dissensio, verb dissentire, supine dissensum (dis sentio, to think differently).
- Dissertation, dis'sĕr.tay''shun (not des'er.tay''shun), a disquisition; disserta'tion-al, dissertator, dis'ser.ta.tor.
 French dissertation, dissertateur; Latin dissertatio, verb dissertare frequentative of disĕro, supine dissertum (dis sero, to scatter seed).
- Dissever, dis.sĕv'.er, same as "sever"; dissever'ed (3 syl.), dissever-ing, dissever'er, dissever'-ance; disseveration, dis.sĕv'.e.ray''shun. (Not French).
Dissevered, dis.sĕv'.erd, separated, severed;
Unsevered, un.sĕv'.erd, not separated or severed.
Dis intensive and Fr. sevrer, to wean, to estrange. Lat. sĕpārāre.
- Dissident, dis'si.dĕnt (not dis.si.dant), one who dissents, (adj.) dissenting; dis'sidents, dis'sidence, dis'sident-ly.
 French dissidence, dissident; Latin dissidentia, dissidens, genitive dissidentis, verb dissidĕre (dis sĕdeo, to sit apart).
- Dissimilar, dis.sĭm'.i.lar, unlike; dissim'ilar-ly; dissimilarity, dis'sim.i.lār''ri.ty; dis'simil'itude.
 French dissimilaire, dissimilitude; Latin dissimīletudo (dis similis).
- Dissimulation, dis.sĭm'.u.lay''shun. (See Dissemble.)
- Dissipate, dis'sĭ.pate, to disperse, to squander; dis'sipāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dispersed, squandered, adj. dissolute; dis'sipāt-ing (Rule xix.); dissipation, dis'si.pay''shun.
 French dissiper, dissipation; Latin dissipatio, dissipāre (dis sĭpo, to scatter abroad; Greek siphōn, a siphon).
- Dissociate, dis.so'si.ate, to disunite; disso'ciāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), disso'ciāt-ing (R. xix.); dissociation, dis.so'si.a''shun.

Dissociable, dis.sō'.shă.b'l, ill-assorted;

Unsociable, un.sō'.shă.b'l, not sociable.

Unsociably, un.sō'.shă.bly, with reserve, unfriendly.

Dissociability, dis.sō'.shă.bıl''.i.ty, unfitness for society;

Unsociabil'ity, sullenness, living an unsociable life.

Unsocial, un.sō'.shăl; unsociableness, want of sociability.

French insociabilité, insociable; Latin dissociābilis, dissociātio, dis-sociāre (dis socio, socius, a companion).

Dissolute, dis'.so.lute, dissipated; dis'solute-ly, dis'solute-ness; dissolution, dis'.so.lu''.shun.

Dissoluble, dis'.so.lu.b'l. (See Dissolve.)

French dissolu, dissolution; Latin dissōlūtus, dissōlūtio, v. dissolvēre, supine dissōlutum. (See next article.)

Dissolve, dis.zōlv', to melt; dissolv'-ing (Rule xix.)

Dissolved, dis.zōlvd', melted. Un'solved, not solved.

Dissolv'er, that which melts something.

Dissolvent, dis.zōlv'.vent, that which has the property of melting something;

Insolvent, a debtor unable to pay his debts, not solvent; insol'vency, the state of being insolvent.

Dissolvable, dis.zōlv'.va.b'l (Rule xxiii.), or

Dissoluble, dis'.so.lu.b'l, capable of being melted;

Insolvable, in.sōlv'.va.b'l (Rule xxiii.), or

Insoluble, in.sol'.u.b'l, incapable of being melted;

Unsolvable, un.sōlv'.va.b'l, incapable of being solved;

Unsoluble, same as insoluble.

Dissolubility, dis'.sōlu.bıl''.i.ty, having a solvable nature;

In'dissolubil'ity, having a nature which resists solution.

Dissol'vability-ness, negative Insol'vability-ness.

French dissoluble, dissolvant (wrong conj.), insolubilité, insoluble, insolvable; Latin dissolvēre (dis solvo, to loose thoroughly; Greek sin luo, to loose altogether).

(The wrong conj. -able has been borrowed as usual from the French, but has been avoided in dissolvent.)

Dissonance, dis'.so.nanse, discord; dis'sonant, discordant.

Fr. dissonance, dissonant; Lat. dissōnans, gen. -sonantis (dis sōnāre).

Dissuade, neg. of persuade, dis.swadē', per.swadē'; dissuad'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dissuad'-ing (Rule xix.), dissuad'-er; dissuasion, dis.sway'.shun, neg. of persua'sion (R. xxxiii.); dissuas-ive, dis.swa'.siv; dissua'sive-ly.

French dissuader, dissuasion; Latin dissuāsiō, dissuāsor, v. dissuādēre (dis suādeo, Greek Ionic hadēō, to delight).

Dissyllable, dis.sil'.lä.b'l, a word of two syllables (double l); dissyllabic, dis'.sil'.läb''.ik (adj.); dissyllabification, dis'-sil.lab'-i-fi.kay''-shun, making into two syllables. (Lat. words containing a "y" are borrowed from the Gk.)

Fr. dissyllabe, dissyllabique; Lat. dissyllabum; Gk. dissōs sillabē.

Distaff, plu. distaffs (not distaves). A staff used in hand-spinning. (An exception to Rule xxxviii.)

Old Eng. distaf (thistel [stæf], a thistle resembling a bunch of tow).

Distance, dis'.tanse, remoteness, to leave behind in a race; distanced (2 syl.), distanc-ing (Rule xix.); dis'tant, remote; dis'tant-ly, remotely.

French distance, distant; Latin distantia, distans, gen. distantis (di[dis]sto, to stand apart).

Distaste' (2 syl.), dislike (followed by for: as "Many have a great distaste for cheese," not of).

Distaste'-ful (Rule viii.), distasteful-ly, distasteful-ness.

Distem'per, disease, to disorder; a preparation of colour with water (not oil) for walls, &c., to use this preparation.

Distempered, dis.tēm'.perd; distem'per-ing.

"Distemper" is used most frequently for disease in dogs, and other dumb animals. (See Disease.)

It was once thought that the body contains four "humours" that the just balancing of these fluids constitute health, and that disease is a disturbance of the balance (Latin dis temperare). The adjustment of the fluids gave rise to the expressions good and ill "temper." "Good temper" being the effect of a good or just mixture of the fluids, and "bad temper" the effect of a bad or unjust mixture. If bile prevailed the temper was "fiery," if air prevailed the temper was "sanguine," if earth it was "melancholy," if water it was "phlegmatic."

The COUNTENANCE is the facial index "containing" (Latin contenens) the outward manifestation of the "temper" or mixture of the four fluids: it is yellow if "bile" [fire] prevails, red if "blood" [air] prevails, grey if "melancholy" [earth] prevails, and dead white if "phlegm" [water] prevails. (See Complexion.)

"Distemper" (paint), Italian distemper[amento], v. distemperare, to dissolve, tempera or tempra, water colour; Latin temperare, to mix, dis temperare, to dissolve.

Distend', to stretch; distend'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), distend'-ing, distention or distension, dis.tēn'.shun; disten'sible.

French distendre, distension; Latin distendere, supine distentum or distensum, distentio, distentus or distensus (tendo, to stretch).

Distich, dis'.tik (not dis.titch'), two lines of poetry making complete sense. (Ch = "k" shows it to be from the Gk.)

Latin distichon; Greek di-stichōs, two lines, an elegiac couplet.

Distil', to let fall in drops; distilled' (2 syl.), distill'-ing (R. i.); distill'-er, one who distils; distill'-able (not -ible, 1st Latin conj.); distillation, dis'.til.lay''shun; distill'-ery, the place where distilling is carried on; distillatory; dis.til'.la.to.ry (adj.), pertaining to distillation.

("Distil" would be better with double "l.")

French distiller, distillable, distillation, distillatoire, distillerie; Latin distillatio, distill[are], stilla, a drop; Greek stazo, to drop.

Distinct', separate, hence clear, &c.; distinct'-ly, distinct'-ness; distinction, dis.tink'.shun; distinct-ive, dis.tink'.tiv; distinctive-ly, distinctive-ness. Verb distinguish, q.v.

Indistinct, not distinct. Distinct followed by from.

French distinct, distinction, distinctif; Latin distinctus, distinctio.

Distinguish, dis.ting'gwish, to note difference by certain marks (followed by between); distinguished, dis.ting'gwishd; distin'guish-ing, distin'guishing-ly, distin'guish-able (R. xxiii.), distin'guishable-ness, distin'guishably, distin'guish-ment, distin'guish-er. (See Distinct.)

Undistin'guished, un- or in- -distin'guishable.

French distinguer; Latin distinguere, supine distinctum, to notify by a mark (Greek stigma, a mark, v. stizo, to prick or mark).

Distort', to pervert; distort'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), distort'-ing, distort'-er; distortion (not -sion), dis.tor'.shun (Rule xxxiii.)

Undistorted. Not distorted.

French distorsion (wrong); Latin distortio, v. distortuere, supine distortum, not distorsum (dis torqueo, to twist away).

Distract', to harass; distract'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), distract'-ed-ly, distracted-ness, dis'tract'-ing, distract'-er, distract'-ing-ly; distraction, dis.träk'.shun; distractive, dis.träk'.tiv.

Undistracted, un'.dis.träk'.ted. Not distracted.

("Distracted" is sometimes used in poetry as past part.)

Lat. distractio, disträho, sup. distractum (dis träho, to draw two ways).

Distrain' (2 syl.), to seize chattels for debt; distrained (2 syl.), distrain'-ing; distrain't (noun); distrain'-or; distrain'-able, subject to distrain't. (Rule xxiii.)

Distress', same as distrain't, the act of seizing for debt.

Latin distringere, to strain hard (stringo, to grasp).

Distress', affliction, destitution (see Distrain); distress'-ing (part. and adj.); distressed, dis.trěst, afflicted; distress'-ful (Rule viii.), distressful-ly.

French détresse; Welsh trais, rapine; treisiant, oppression.

Distribute, dis.trīb'.üte, to dole out; distrib'üt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), distrib'üt-ing (Rule xix.), distrib'üt-er (ought to be -or); distribution, dis'.trīb'.ü'.shun; distrib'üt-able (Rule xxiii.); distribut-ive, dis.trīb'.u.tiv; distrib'utive-ly.

Undistributed, un'.dis.trīb'.u.těd, not distributed.

Indistributive, in'.dis.trīb'.u.tiv, not to be distributed.

French distribuer, distributeur, distribution, distributif; Latin distributio, distributor, distribuere (dis tribuo, to give in parts),

Distrust', want of confidence, to doubt or suspect; distrust'-ed, distrust'-ing, distrust'-ing-ly, distrust'-ful (Rule viii.), distrust'-ful-ly, distrust'-ful-ness.

Distrust'-ed, suspected; Untrust'-ed, not trusted.

Untrust'y, not trusty; untrust'-ti-ness, unfaithfulness in the discharge of a trust; untrust'worthy.

Old English untréowfast, unfaithful; untréows(ian), to deceive.

Disturb', to discompose; disturbed' (2 syl.), disturb'-ing, disturb'-er, disturb'-ance.

Perturb', to disquiet (a stronger term than disturb); perturbed', perturb'-ing; perturbation, per'.tur.bay''-shun, agitation from disquietude.

Perturbations of the planets, deviations from their usual course from some external influence.

Undisturbed (3 syl.), not disturbed; undisturb'-ed-ly (5 syl.)

French perturbation; Latin disturbatio, a disordering; perturbatio, great trouble or disturbance; disturbare, to throw into disorder; perturbare, to trouble, to turn topsy turvy (turbo, to disturb).

Disunite, dis-u.ni'té', to disjoin; disunit'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), disunit'-ing; disunit'-er, one who severs what was united.

Disunion, dis.u'.ni.on, want of union; disunity, dis.u'.ni.ty.

Disunit'ed, separated after having been united;

Ununit'ed, not united.

French désunion, désunir; Latin dis unire (unus, one).

Disuse, (noun) dis.uce', (verb) dis.uze' (Rule li., c).

Disuse (noun), neglect of use; disusage, dis.u'.sage; disuse (verb), disused, dis.ūzd'; disūs-ing (Rule xix.)

Unused, un.ūst, unaccustomed; unused, un.ūzd, not used;

Disused, dis.ūzd, the use discontinued.

Unuseful, un.use'.ful; unu'sual, unusual-ly.

Latin dis usus, v. utor, supine usus, to use; Greek eiōthós, usual.

Ditch, phu. ditch'-es (R. liii.), a trench; ditch'-er, one who makes a ditch; ditch'-ing, making a ditch.

Old English dīc, a dike or ditch, v. dīc(ian), dīcung, ditching.

Dithyramb, dīrk'.i.rām, a song in honour of Bacchus; dithyrambic, dīrk'.i.rām''.bīk (adj.)

Latin dithyrambus, dithyrambicus; Greek dithurambos.

Dittany, dīl'.ta.ny, a corruption of dic'tamny, garden ginger; the leaves smell like lemon-thyme. Also called dittander.

Lat. dictamnus; Gk. dictamnōn or dictamōn (from Dictē, in Crete).

Ditto, also written do., but always pronounced dī'to, same as above, same as aforesaid. (Italian detto, said, spoken.)
(Used in bills and books of account to save repetition.)

Ditty, plu. ditties, dīt'.tīz (Rule xlv.), a short poem intended to be sung. The word is almost limited to "love-songs."

Welsh ditio, to utter; ditiad, an utterance.

"Composition" is from the Latin compōno, "to set in order," and the Anglo-Saxon dihl-an is "to set in order," whence dihltig.

Diuresis, dī.u.rē'sis, excessive flow of urine; diā'resis, q.v., the mark (") over the latter of two distinct vowels.

Diuretic, dī.u.rēt'.īk, provocative of the flow of urine.

Fr. diurétique; Lat. diūreticus; (Gk. dia ourēo, whence "urine").

Diurnal, dī.ur'nal, daily, pertaining to a day; diur'nal-ly.

French diurne, journal; Latin diurnus (diu, dies, a day).

Divan, dī.vān', a coffee and smoking room fitted up with sofas.

French divan, a sofa-bedstead: Persian diwan, the imperial council or chamber where the council is held.

Dive (1 syl.), to plunge under water; dived (1 syl.), dīv'-ing (Rule xix.); dīv-er, one who dives; diving-bell.

Old English duf [ian], past dysfe, past part. dysfed, part pres. dysfing.

Diverge (2 syl.), to spread from the central point, to recede from each other (the opposite of Converge); diverged (2 syl.), diverg'-ing (R. xix.), diverg'-ence (not -ance), diverg'-ent; diver'gency, plu. divergencies, dī.ver'jēn.sīz (R. lxiv.); diverg'-ent-ly or diverg'-ing-ly, in a diverging manner.

French diverger, divergence, divergent; Latin divergium, the parting of a river into two streams; Latin vergens, gen. vergentis (divergo, to bend different ways).

Divers, dī.verz, plu. of diver (see Dive); (adj.) sundry.

Diverse, dī.versé', not alike, not identical.

"History supplies divers examples" (sundry), not diverse.

"Squares and diamonds are diverse forms," different.

"There are divers nations on the earth, but each one diverse from the others."

Divers-ly, dī.verz.ly, in many different ways;

Diverse-ly, not in the same way.

Diversity, plu. diversities, dī.ver'si.tīz, differences.

Diversify, dī.ver'si.fy, to vary; diversifies, dī.ver'si.fize; diversified, dī.ver'si.fide; diver'sify-ing (Rule xi.), diver'sifi-er; diversification, dī.ver'si.fi.kay'shun.

French divers, plu. diverses [personnes, &c.]. ("Diversification" is not French), diversifier, diversité; Latin diverse, in different parts, diversitas, divertère, sup. diversum (dī verito, to turn different ways.)

Divert, dī.vert', to turn aside, to amuse; divert'-ed (R. xxxvi.), divert'-ing, diver'ting-ly, dīvert'-er; diversion, dī.ver'-shun (Rule xxxiii.), amusement.

Divertisement, dī.ver'tīz.mēnt, (not dē.vair.tīz.mong).

Fr. divertir, diversion, divertissement; Lat. divertère (see above).

Divest, dī.vest', to strip, to dispossess; divest'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), divest'-ing; divestiture, dī.vēs'.tī.tchūr, the act of surrendering one's chattels (the opposite of Investiture); divesture, dī.vēs'.tchūr, the act of stripping or depriving.

Old French dēvestir; French dévetir; Italian divestire, to undress; Latin dī [dis] vestio, to deprive of clothing (vestis, raiment).

Divide, dī.vīdē', to part; divid'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), divid'-ing (Rule xix.), divi'ding-ly; divid'-er, one who divides; dividers, dī.vī'.derz, compasses; divid'-able (Rule xxiii.)

Divisible, dī.vīz'.i.b'l, what can be divided; divis'ible-ness, divis'ibly; divisibility, dī.vīz'.i.b'il''.i.ty;

Division, dī.vīzh'.ūn; division-al, divisional-ly.

Divis-or, dī.vī'.zor, the number which divides another;

Dividend, dīv'.i.dēnd, the number to be divided by the divisor, the share to each creditor of a bankrupt's effects, the interest paid on public "stock."

French divisible, v. diviser, dividende, division, diviseur; Latin dividendus, divisio, divisor, dividere, sup. divisum (dī and Etruscan idūre, to sever into two parts).

Divine, dī.vīnē', a man set apart for the sacred ministry; (adj.), sacred; (verb), to guess, to predict.

(The French spell the verb with "de," but fall back to "di" in the noun "divination.")

Divine (adj.), divin'-er (comp.), divin'-est (super.); divine'ly (adv.), divine'-ness; divinity, dī.vīn'.i.ty, theology; divinity, plu. divinities, dī.vīn'.i.tīz, deity.

("Divine" and "supine" are the only adj. in "-ine" which can be compared with the suffixes -er and -est.)

Divine (verb), divined' (2 syl.), divin'-ing, divin'ing-ly, divin'-er; divination, dīv'.i.nay''.shūn, prediction.

French divin, divinité, deviner, to predict; devineur, fem. devineresse, divination // prediction; Latin divinitas, divinus, divine, (from divus, Greek diōs, god), divinatio, divinus, a diviner; divināre, to predict (predictions being supposed to come, de divo, from deity).

Divisible, dī.vīz'.i.b'l; divis'ibly (see Divide).

Divorce, dī.vorçē' (not devorce), dissolution of marriage, to annul a marriage; divorced' (2 syl.), divorc'-ing (R. xix.), divorce'-ment, divorce'-able (-ce and -ge retain the e before -able, Rule xviii.), divorce'-less.

Divorc'-er, one who divorces; divorcee', the person divorced.

Divorce Court, plu. divorce courts; Court of Divorce; plu. courts of divorce (Rule liii.)

French divorce; Latin divortium, v. divortēre (diverto, to turn away).

Divulge, dī.vūlj', to make public, to disclose; divulged' (2 syl.), divulg'-ing (R. xix.), divulg'-er, divulg'-ence (ought to be divulge-ance). It is the 1st Latin conj.)

French divulguer, divulgation is a word we might adopt; Latin divulgatio, divulgāre (vulgus, the common people).

Divulsion, dī.vūl'.shūn, laceration; divul'sive, dī.vūl'.siv.
 ("Divulston," one of the few words in -sion not French.)

Latin divulsio, divello supine divulsum, (di vello, to pluck asunder).

Diz'zy, giddy; diz'zi-ly (Rule xi.), diz'zi-ness.

Old English dýsig, dýsignes dizziness, dýsiglice dizzily.

Djerriid, jēr'.ríd, a Turkish javelin. (Arabic.)

Do, doo, to perform an act; past did; past part. done, dūn; do-ing; pres. tense I do, thou dost, dust [or doest, doo-est], he does, duz, plu. do, doo, all persons; past tense I did, thou didst, all other persons did.

Doer, doo-er, one who performs or achieves [something].

As an auxiliary, the verb do is chiefly used in asking questions, in which case it stands before its noun, as do you wish to ride this morning?

§ As a representative verb "Do" acts the part of a pronoun, and stands for any antecedent question asked with the auxiliary, as "does Cæsar come forth to-day?" "Yes, he does" [understand come forth to-day].

§ Occasionally it is used for the sake of emphasis, as I do very much wish to go.

§ In poetry it is used with the present and past tenses merely to help the metre or the rhyme.

Doings, doo'ingz, behaviour. Pretty doings, very censurable conduct.

Done, dun, achieved, finished. Done with [it], finished with it, want it no longer.

Done up, quite exhausted.

To do for [him], to manage, (threateningly) try to ruin.

To do away, to erase.

To do with [it], to employ or use [it].

To do up, to pack up, to tie together.

How do you do? How are you in health, how do you thrive? A corruption of How do you du? [dug[an], to thrive]. (Equal to the Latin valeo.) The full question is, How is it that you do thrive [in health]?

Old English ic dó, thú dést, he déth, plu. dóth; past ic dyde thú dydest, he dyde, plu. dydon; past part. gedón; Infinitive dón, Dug[an], to thrive, makes past dóhte, later form dowed, Scotch dow.

Do., pronounce ditto, of which it is a contraction. Used in bills and account books to save repetition. It means the "same as the foregoing." (See Ditto.)

Do (to rhyme with no), the note C in Music.

Docile, dō'sīle or dōs'īle, tractable; docility, dō.sīl'.i.ty.

French docile, docilité; Latin docilis, docilitas.

Dock, a place for ships, a place where persons under trial stand in a law-court, a plant, to curtail; docked, dokt, curtail; docking. Dock'-age (2 syl.), charge for the use of a dock.

Old English docce (for ships); French dock; German docke.

"Dock" (a plant), Latin daucus; Greek daükös. This word ought to be spelt dauc or dauk (not dock).

"Dock" (to curtail), Welsh tociaw, to clip; toci, something clipped; German docken.

Docket, dök'ēt, a ticket, a label; dock'-et-ed, dock'-et-ing. To "docket" goods is to mark the contents on a label or set them down in a book, to summarise.

Welsh tocyn, a ticket; tocyniad, a ticketing; tocynu, to ticket.

Doctor, dök'tör (not docter, Rule xxxvii.), fem. doctor-ess or doc'tress; doc'torate, possessing the degree of doctor; doctor-ship (-ship Old Eng. suffix "tenure" of office or degree); doc'tor, to give medicine in illness, to adulterate, to falsify; doc'tored (2 syl.), doc'tor-ing.

Doctor of Divinity, plu. doctors of divinity (Rule liii.)

Latin doctor, doctus, one instructed (doceo, supine doctum).

Doctrine, dök'trín, a tenet, what is taught; doctrin-al, dök'trínäl (not dök.trí.näl), pertaining to doctrine, containing doctrine; doctrinal-ly.

French doctrine, doctrinal; Latin doctrína, theory, learning.

Document, dök'ku.měnt, a record; doc'ument'-al; documentary, dök'ku.men'ta.ry, certified in writing.

French document; Latin dócūmen, dócūmentum (doceo, see above).

Dodder, a parasitic weed. (German dotter.)

Dodge (1 syl.), a quibble, an artifice, to track, to evade, to quibble; dodged' (1 syl.), dodg'-ing, dodg'-er, one who dodges.

Old Eng. deóg-ol, sly, deóg [elian], to act slyly, deóg [tian], to hide.

Doe, dō (to rhyme with no), the female of a buck, also a gender-word, as doe rabbit, (male) buck rabbit, doe hare, (male) buck hare. (Old English dā. See Buck.)

Doff (Rule v.), to take off; doffed (1 syl.), doff'-ing.

A contraction of do-off; similarly "don"=do-on, "dup"=do-up.

Dog, either male or female; bitch, only a female dog; dogg'-ish, churlish, like a dog (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is diminutive), doggish-ly, doggish-ness; dogged, dog'.ged, sullenly, self-willed.

Dog, to track; dogged (1 syl.), dogg'-ing (Rule i.)

Dog-cart, a one-horse cart with a box behind for dogs.

Dog-fly, a fly very troublesome to dogs.

Dog-louse, a louse which infests dogs.

Dog-star, the Latin cānicūla (dim. of cānis, a dog).

Dog teeth, the eye-teeth of man, resembling dogs' teeth.

Dog-weary, tired as a dog after a chase.

Dog's-bane, a plant supposed to be fatal to dogs.

Dog's tail, a grass, the spikes of which resemble a dog's tail.

Dog's ear, the corner of a leaf bent down, like the ear of a spaniel, &c.; dog's eared, dogz e'ard.

¶ Dog-, meaning "worthless," "barbarous," "pretended."

Doggerel, dog'.ge.rel, pretended poetry in rhyme.

Dog-Latin, barbarous or pretended Latin.

Dog-sleep, pretended sleep.

Dog-cabbage, dog-violet, dog-wheat.

§ Dog-hole, a vile hole only fit for a dog.

Dog-trick, a vile trick, only fit to serve a dog.

¶ Dog-grass, grass eaten by dogs to excite vomiting.

Dog-rose, a rose supposed to be a cure for the bite of mad dogs (Pliny viii. 63, xxv. 6).

Dog-brier, same as dog-rose.

¶ Dog-cheap, a perversion of the Old English gód-ceáp, (French bon marché), good bargain.

Dog-watch, corruption of dodge-watch, the two short watches which dodge the routine of the watches on board ship; that is, prevent the recurrence of the same watch at the same time.

§ Gone to the dogs, gone to the bad. The Romans called the worst throw at dice canis (dog), hence the word came to signify "ill-luck," "ruin," &c.

Danish dogge, French dogue (a bull-dog); Spanish dogo, a terrier; French doguin, a puppy or whelp.

Doge, dōje, captain-general and chief magistrate of the ancient republics of Gen'oa and Venice.

Italian doge; Latin dux, gen. ducis, leader (duco, to lead).

Dogma, plu. dogmas, dog'màh, dog'màhz, a tenet, an arbitrary dictum on some matter of faith or philosophy.

Dog'matic (noun), a dogmatic philosopher.

Dogmatics (Rule lxi.), dog.măt'.îks, dogmatical theology.

Dogmat'ic or dogmatical (adj.), dog.măt'.î.kăl, dictatorial; dogmat'ical-ly, dogmat'ical-ness.

Dogmatize, dog'.ma.tize (not dogmatise, R. xxxii.), to assert dogmatically; dog'matized' (3 syl.), dogmatiz'-ing (R. xix.), dogmatiz'-ing-ly, dogmatiz'-er; dog'matist, one who speaks upon matters of faith or philosophy dogmatically; dogmatism, dog'.ma.tizm.

Greek dōgma, dōgmatizo, dōgmatikōs, dōgmatistēs; Latin dogma, dogmātizo, dogmāticus, dogmātistēs; French dogmatiser, whence, as usual, our error of spelling with s.

- Doily, doil'y, a small napkin used at dessert.
 Dutch dwaile, a towel; in Norfolk a house-cloth is called a dwi'el, and the cloth dwi'el.ing.
- Doings, doo'ingz, conduct, behaviour. (See Do.)
- Doit (1 syl.), the eighth of a penny. (French d'huit.)
- Dolce, dole'.tchě (in Music), sweetly and softly. (Italian.)
- Dolce far niente (Italian), dole'.tche far' ne.en'te, agreeable idleness [sweet doing-nothing].
- Dole (1 syl.), a share, to distribute in shares, to give grudgingly; doled (1 syl.), dol'-ing (Rule xix.), dol'-er.
 Old English dæl or dāl, a share, a portion.
- Doleful, dole'.ful (Rule viii.), dismal; dole'ful-ly, dole'ful-ness; dolesome, dole'.sum, dismal, querulous (-some O. E. suffix, "full of"), dole'some-ness (-ness denotes abstract nouns).
 French douleur, doulereux, deuille; Latin doleo, to grieve.
- Dolerite, dol'.e.rite (not dolorite), a variety of greenstone.
 Greek dōlērōs, deceitful. So called from the difficulty of distinguishing between felspar and augite (its compounds).
- Doll, a child's plaything. Contraction of idol.
 Latin idōlum, an image; Greek eidōlon (eidōs, form or figure).
- Dollar, dol'.lar, an American coin = 4s. 2d. (marked thus $, meaning scūtum). The line drawn through the "S" denotes that a contraction has been made. For a similar reason lb (a pound weight librum), has a line through it.
 German thaler = tāh.ler; Danish daler. (So called from thal, a valley; the counts of Schlick extracted from Joachim's thal or valley, the silver which they coined into ounce pieces. This money became standard, and was called valley-money or thalers.)
- Dollman, dolmen.
Dolman, plu. dolmans, dol'mānz, a long Turkish robe, the summer jacket of the native Algerian troops.
Dolmen, plu. dolmens, dol'mēnz, a cromlech.
 "Dolman," Hungarian dolmang; Turkish dolaman.
 "Dolmen," Celtic dol men, table stone. It consists of a stone superposed on two stone standards; French dolmen.
- Dolomite, dol'.o.mite (not dolemite), a magnesian limestone. So called from M. Dolomieu, the French geologist.
- Dolorous, dol'.o.rūs (not dō.lo.rus), doleful; dol'orous-ly, dol'orous-ness; dolour, dō.lōr (not dōler).
 French douloureux; Latin dolor, v. dōlere, sup. dōlitum, to grieve.
- Dolphin, fem. dolphinet, dol'fīn, dol'fī.nēt, a sea mammal.
Delphine, dēl.fīn (adj.), applied to certain French classics edited for the Dauphin or eldest son of Louis XIV.
 (Our word is a jumble of bad French and Latin.)
 French dauphin; Latin delphin or delphinus; Greek delphīn.

Dolt, a blockhead; dolt'-ish, stupid (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); dolt'ish-ly.

Old English dol, foolish; doldrunc, immersed in stupidity.

-dom (Old English suffix meaning "possession," "right," "dominion"), kingdom, the dominion of a king; freedom, the power or right of a free man; wisdom, the possession or property of a wise person.

Domain' (2 syl.) or demesne, dě.mean', estate in lands. "Domain" is also used for dominion, empire, in which sense demesne is never employed.

French domaine; Old French demaine; Latin dominium, lordship (dominus, lord and master).

Demesne is de meisan [maison], a house, and was applied to the manor-house and its lands, kept by the lord for his own use.

Dome (1 syl., rhymes with home). Doom (rhymes with room), dōme, a cu'pōla; dōmed (rhymes with foamed, 1 syl.), fitted with a dome. Doomed (1 syl.), fated, destined.

French dōma; Latin dōma, a solarium or roof terrace, where persons went to sun themselves, a gallery on the house-top.

Domesday, dooms'.day, the day of judgment.

Old English dōmdæg, judgment day.

Domesday-book, dooms'.day book. Two volumes containing a record of the estates and chattels of all the British dominions over which William the Conqueror reigned (1086). Kept in the Record Office, London.

Old English dōmboc ("liber judiciālis"), to which appeal was made in the Saxon times to settle disputed claims of property. Stow derives the word from domus-dei—"book," the book kept in the "domus dei" of Winchester cathedral; but "dome-books" were well known before the time of the Conquest.

Domestic, do.mēs'.tik, a house-servant, (adj.) pertaining to a private house, tame; domestically, do.mēs'.ti.kāl.ly.

Domesticate, do.mēs'.ti.kate, to tame, to habituate to home-life; domes'ticāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), domes'ticāt-ing (Rule xix.), domestication, do-mēs'.ti.kay".shūn.

French domestique, domestiquer ("domestication" is not French); Latin domesticus (domus, a house and home).

Domicile, dōm'.i.eile (in law), the place where a person has resided at least forty days.

Domiciliary, dōm'.i.sil'.i.ary. A "domiciliary visit" is one paid by authority in search of some person or thing.

Domiciled, dōm'.i.siled, located as resident.

French domiciliaire, v. domicilier; Latin domicilium.

Dominant, dōm'.i.nant, ruling, as the "dominant spirit," the "dominant party," the "dominant power"; (in Music) the "dominant" is the fifth from the key note: thus, in the key of C, the dominant is G.

Predom'inant, prevailing or most observable, as the "pre-dominant colour," the colour which is most observable; the "predominant passion," the master passion.

Dominate, dŏm'.i.nate, to rule. Predominate, to prevail or be most observable; dom'ināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dom'ināt-ing; domination, dŏm'.i.nay''shŭn.

Domineer, dŏm'.i.neer, to tyrannise over; dom'ineered' (3 syl.), dom'ineer'-ing.

Dominical letter, or "Sunday letter," the letter used in the "Prayer Book Calendar," &c., to denote Sunday ([dies] Dom̃ni, Lord's day).

French dominant, domination, v. dominer, dominical; Latin dŏmīnans, gen. dŏmīnantis, dŏmīnatio, dŏmīnāri, dŏmīnicālis.

Domino, plu. dominos, dŏm'.i.noze (Rule xlii.), a dress used at masquerades. (French domino, plu. dominos.)

Dominos (not dominoes), a game. (French jeu de dominos.)

Dŏn, a Spanish title of rank. In Portugal dom.

Don, fem. donna. A "don," a man of rank; in university patois the heads of colleges, fellows, and noblemen, are called "dons."

"Don," Latin dom[inus]; "donna," Latin domina.

Dŏn, to put on. Done, dun, past part. of do, finished; don (to rhyme with on), donned (1 syl.), donn'-ing (Rule i.)

Contraction of do-on; similarly "doff" is do-off; "dup" do-up, &c.

Donation, dŏ.nay''shun, a gift; donative, dŏn'.a.tiv, a vested donation; a benefice given to a clergyman without the form of presentation, institution, or induction.

Donor, fem. donatrix, dŏ'.nor, dŏn'.a.trix, the person who gives; donee, dŏ.nee', the person to whom a gift is made.

French donation, donatif; Latin dŏnatio, dŏnativum, dŏnātor, dŏnātrix, donāre, to give (dŏnum, a gift).

Done, dŭn, finished, agreed. (See Do.)

Donjon, dŏn'.jŏn, the keep or strong tower of an ancient castle, below which were the prison vaults. Dungeon, dŭn'.jon, a dark underground prison.

French donjon; Latin dominium, contracted to dom'jum, the apartment of the dominus or master. Ducange gives the Celtic dŭn, a fortified place, whence dun-ion. Old French dognon, donjon.

Donkey, plu. donkeys (Rule xlv.), dŏn'.ky, dŏn'.kiz, corruption of dunkey (-ey diminutive), the little dun [animal]. Similarly jock-ey, little Jack; monk-ey, &c.

Donna, dŏn'.nah, fem. of don (q.v.) Donor, dŏ'.nor, one who makes a gift. (See Donation.) Prima donna, prē'.mah dŏn'.nah, the best lady performer in any specific public line, as the "prima donna" of the opera.

Doom (1 syl., rhymes with room), judgment. Dōme (1 syl., rhymes with home), a cu'pōla.

Doom, to judge, to destine; doomed (1 syl.), doom'-ing.

Doomsday, doomz'.day, the last or judgment-day.

Old English dóm, trial, judgment; dómdæg, judgment-day.

Door, dō'r (not dōr) (rhymes with floor, core, gore, not with poor=poo'r, nor with for). See below.

Old English dōr, a door, a gate; German thür; Greek thura.

-dor (Spanish suffix = Latin -tor), an agent.

Door or dorr, dōr (rhymes with or, nor), an insect.

Old English dora, a drone-bee, a dor-beetle. (See Door.)

Doree, or John Dory, dōr'.y, a fish.

Either the French jaune dorée (yellow gilt), from its golden lustre, or the Gascon jan dorée (the golden cock), or sea-chicken. According to one tradition it was the fish with the stater caught by St. Peter; by another tradition that fish was a haddock.

Dormant, dōr'.mānt, latent, suspended: a "dormant peerage" is one in abeyance; dormancy, dōr'.mān.cy.

Dormer-window, dōr'.mer wīn'.dow, an attic window placed in the roof, and lighting a bed-room.

Dormitory, plu. dormitories, dōr'.mī.tōr'īz (Rule xlv.), a cubicle, the sleeping compartment.

("Dormant" should be dormient or dormitant.)

Latin dormiens, gen. dormientis and dormitans, gen. dormitantis, dormitorium, v. dormio, frequentative dormito, to sleep.

Dormouse, plu. dormice, dōr'.mouse, dōr'.mice.

French dormeuse, the sluggard [animal]. It resembles a mouse, whence the corruption, and is torpid in winter.

Dorsal, dōr'.sāl, pertaining to the back, as the dorsal fin of a fish; dorsiferous, dōr'.sīf'.erus (Botany), applied to ferns which bear fructification on the backs of the fronds.

French dorsal; Latin dorsuālis, dorsum, the back.

Dose, doze, does, does, doss.

Dose, dōce, plu. doses (2 syl., Rule xxxiv.), a quota of medicine, to give in doses, to give to satiety; dosed (rhymes with boast, coast), drenched, physicked; dos-ing, dōce'.ing (Rule xix.), dōs-er, dōce'-er.

Doze (rhymes with those, rose), to slumber; dōzed (1 syl.); doz-ing, dōze'.ing (Rule xix.); doz-er, dōze'-er.

Does, dōze, plu. of doe, the female of the fallow deer.

Does, dūz, the third per. sing. of Do, q.v.

Doss, dōs, a hassock stuffed with straw [to kneel on].

"Dose," Fr. dose; Gk. dōsis, a thing given; Lat. dōsis, a dose.

"Doze," Dan. dose; Old Eng. dwces, dull; Welsh dwys, heavy, dull.

"Does," Old Eng. dd, a doe. "Does," a post-Norm. form of doth.

"Doss," Archaic dossel, a bundle of straw; dosser, a straw basket.

Dost, düst, second per. sing. of do. A corrupt form of dèst.
Dust, dry and finely pulverised earthy matters.

Dõt, a point [as a "full stop," the mark above the letter i, &c.], to make a dot; dott'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dott'-ing (Rule i.)

Dõt (in familiar language), a dowry, a dotation.

"Dot" (a point), same as tot, a little thing; Dan. tot, a small bunch.

"Dot" (a dowry), Latin dos, gen. dot[is], a dowry.

Dotage, dõt'age, second childishness. (See Dôte.)

Dotation, dõt'tay''shun, money funded for some charity.

French dotation; Latin dôtiô, an endowment

Dote (1 syl.), to love fondly (followed by on or upon), to show the childishness of old age; dõt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), dõt'-ing, dõt'-er; dõt'-age, the childishness of old age; dõt'-ard, one in second childishness (-ard, Old Eng. suffix, "one of the species or kind," dotard, "one of the doting kind").

French radoter, to dote or talk childishly; radotage, radoteur, one in his dotage. Welsh dotian and dotio, to puzzle, to confuse.

Doth, dũth, third per. sing. of do, now does, dũz, except in poetry. Old form ic dô, thũ dêst, he dêth, plu. dôth all persons. (The substitution of -s for -th is post-Norman.)

Double, dũb'v'l, twofold, to fold, to increase twofold; doubled, dub'v'ld; doubling, dũb'ling; doubly, dũb'ly; doubler, dũb'ler; doub'le-ness.

French double, doubleur; Latin duplum (duo plico, to fold in two).

Doublet, dũb'lêt, a man's garment of former times.

(This is one of our perverted French words. In French, a "doublet" is pourpont, and the word doublet means "a false stone," Rule lxii.)

French doublure (l'étoffe dont une autre est doublé).

Doublon, dũb bloom', a French form of the Spanish word doblon, a "double pistole."

(It would be more consistent to keep the Spanish form for Spanish words, and not to disguise them by French spelling.)

Doubt, dout, uncertainty of mind, to be uncertain in mind; doubted, dout'ed (Rule xxxvi.); doubt-ing, dout'ing; doubt'ing-ly; doubt-er, dout'er; doubt-ful, dout'ful (Rule viii.); doubt'ful-ly, doubt'ful-ness; doubt-less, dout'less; doubt'less-ly.

"I doubt not but [that] you are right," is the Latin form non dũbĩto quin... but "I have no doubt you are right" is also good English. The two ideas are not identical: the former phrase means "I have no doubt [notwithstanding all that may be said to the contrary] that nevertheless you are right." The latter simply expresses the opinion of the speaker without regard to opposing statements.

A Latinised French word. French douter; Latin dūbĭto. We have borrowed the diphthong from the French, and inserted the Latin b, which is ignored in sound.

Douceur, a bribe for "place."

(We use this word in a sense almost unknown in France.

In French douceur means "sweetness," and gratification is used for "gratuity." Few Frenchmen, unacquainted with English, would understand such a sentence as: Faites cela, et il y aura quelque douceur pour vous.)

Douche bath, doosh bath, a shower bath.

French douche; Latin dūcere, to conduct or direct. (The shower is "directed" to any part of the body, to relieve local suffering.)

Dough, dōw (to rhyme with grow, low), bread, &c., before it is cooked; dough'-y, sticky, "stodgy."

Old English dæg or dāh. We have strangely combined both forms, without preserving the sound of either.

Douse (1 syl. to rhyme with house, mouse). In sailors' language, to "extinguish instantly" [a light], to "lower suddenly" [a sail]; doused (1 syl., to rhyme with soused = sōwst); dous-ing, dōwse'-ing (Rule xix.)

Greek duō (n. dusis), to sink, to set [as the sun, &c.]

Dove, dūv, a pigeon; dove-cot, dūv.cōt, a pigeon house.

Dove-tail, dūv.tale (in Joinery), to unite by a "notch" shaped like a "dove's tail"; dove-tailed, dūv taild; dove tail-ing (French en queue d'aronde).

Old English duwa = duva; German taube.

Dowager, dōw.a.ger (dow to rhyme with now, not with grow), the widow of a person of rank; if the mother of the present peer, she is termed the duchess dowager of..., the countess dowager of...; but if not the mother, she is termed "Louisa" duchess of..., or countess of...; both are referred to in common speech as the dowager duchess, the dowager countess, &c.

Queen-dowager, widow of a king, but not a reigning queen.

French douairière (douairjère) "veuve qui jouit du douaire," i.e., a jointure or dowry. "Douair," is a corruption of the Low Latin dotarium (dou'arium). Latin dos, gen. dotis, a dowry.

Dowdy, dōw.dy (dow- to rhyme with now), slovenly in dress; dow'di-er (comp.), dow'di-est (super.), dow'di-ly, dow'di-ness; dowdy-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like"), dowdy-ness.

Scotch dawdie, a dirty sloven (daw and the dim., a little sluggard).

Dower, dōw'er (dow- to rhyme with now, not with grow), property settled on a widow for life, the fortune brought by a wife; dowry, dōw.ry (same as dower); dowered, dōw'erd, having a dowry; dow'er-less.

Dowager, dōw'a.ger. (See above, Dowager.)

French douaire, corruption of Low Latin dolarium (don'arium).

Dowlas, dōw'.las (dow- to rhyme with now), a coarse linen cloth, used for towels, &c.

So called from Dourlais, in France, where it is manufactured.

Down, fine soft feathers, any fine hairy substance light enough to float in the air; (adv.) tending towards the ground, on the ground, towards the mouth of a river, into the country [from London]. Persons in the provinces go up to London; downward (adj.), tending to a lower position, as downward motion; downwards (adv.)

"Downward," used as an adverb is grammatically incorrect. It should be either adownward or downwards, "a-" being an adverbial prefix, and "s" an adverbial postfix. In the words [now] "adays," [sleep] "anights," we have the double adverbials, so that one of the signs may be omitted without affecting the adverbial form; accordingly we have in Old English dæges "daily," nightes "nightly," and Shakespeare uses anight for "anights."

Downfall (not downfal), downhill (not downhil) (Rule viii.); downfallen, dōwn.fall'n.

Down-train, the train from the provinces to London, or from some minor station to the chief terminus. Up-train, the train from London to the provinces, or from the chief terminus to some inferior station.

"Down" (feathers), German daune; Danish dun.

"Down" (adv. and prep.), Old English adūn, down, adūnweard, downwards. It is the prefix a- which converts dūn into an adverb, and this significant letter has been unwisely dropped.

Downs, dōwnz (to rhyme with towns, clowns), large open hilly sheep pastures contiguous to the sea.

The Downs, a well-known road for shipping in the English Channel, near Deal in Kent.

Old Eng. dūn, a hill; French dunes. It would have saved obscurity if we had made the following distinctions:—

Daun (feathers, called down), or "dave," French duret.

Adown (adverb), and down, preposition.

Dunes (the hilly sheep-walks and sand-hills).

Doxology, plu. doxologies, dox.ōl'ō.gīz (Rule xlv.)

French doxologie; Greek dōxōlōgia (doxa logos, glory words).

Doze, dose, does, does, doss.

Dōze (1 syl.), a nap, to take a nap; dōzed (1 syl.), dōz'-ing (Rule xix.), dōz-er; dōz'-y, do'zi-ness (Rule xi.)

Dose, dōce (1 syl.), a quota of medicine, to give medicine, to give anything so largely as to produce disgust; doses, dō'.cēs (R. xxxiv.); dōsed (1 syl.), dos-ing, dōce'.ing (Rule xxxvi.); dos-er, dōce-er. (See Dose.)

Does, dōze, plu. of doe, the female of the fallow deer.

Does, dūz, third per. sing. pres. of Do (q.v.)

Doss, dōs, a straw hassock to kneel on.

"Doze," Dan. dose; Old Eng. dwæz, dull; Welsh dwys, heavy, dull.

"Dose," French dose; Greek dōsis, a thing given; Latin dōsis, a dose.

"Does" (female deer), Old Eng. dūt, a doe. "Does," dūz (see Do).

"Doss," Archaic dossel, a bundle of straw, dosser, a straw basket.

Dozen, dūz'n, twelve [articles].

A baker's dozen, thirteen, i.e., twelve and a "vantage loaf."

French douzaine; German dutzend, contraction of the Latin duo decem (duo 'cem), duo + decem, two + ten.

Drāb, a slattern, a brownish colour, a brownish cloth; drab, drabb'-ish (Rule i.), (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is diminutive); drabb'ish-ly.

Old English drabbe, a slattern, dregs, lees of wine.

Drachm, drām, the eighth part of an apothecary's ounce. A fluid drachm is a tea-spoonful. Contraction, dr. or drm.

Dram, the sixteenth part of an ounce avoirdupoise (dr.)

(The distinction in spelling should be preserved, although the apothecaries' weight is sometimes written dram.)

"Drachm," French drachme; Latin drachma, the eighth (or rather seventh) of an ounce, $84 = 1$ lb of 12 ozs.; Hebrew drachmon.

"Dram" is the Italian dramma.

Draft, draught (both drāft, to rhyme with craft, laughed).

Draft, a cheque for money, a bill of exchange, a plan drawn in outline, a copy, an abstract; to transfer men from one company to another.

Draught, a stream of air, a portion of liquor drawn off, liquor drunk at one potation, a catch of fish, force necessary to draw, traction.

Draughts (no sing.), a game played with little flat round "men" of two colours.

Draughtsman, drāfts-mān, one of the little flat round pieces used for "men" in the game of draughts;

Draftsman, one who makes a draft or draws a plan.

(These are the distinctions usually observed, but there is no rigid rule, and the two words differ only in spelling.)

Old English drag[an], to draw; past drōg or drōh, past part. dragen. The word draught is an absurd amalgamation of drōg and drōh, disguised by the diphthong au. The final t, is a "weak" affix added to a "strong" verb.

Drag, to pull along, to trail; a cart, a harrow, a skid, an obstacle; dragged (1 syl.), dragg'-ing (Rule i.)

Old English drag[an], past drōg or drōh, past part. dragen.

Draggle, drāg'.g'l, to trail through the mire; draggled, drāg'.g'ld; draggling, drag'.g'ling; draggles-tail, a slattern who suffers her gown to trail through the mire; draggles- tailed, one dressed in a gown which has been trailed through the mire; also dagggle-tail and dagggle-tailed.

"Dragggle" is dim. of drag, and "dagggle" of dag, to dangle, but the idea is not identical. Dragggle-tail is one who drags the skirt of her gown through the mire; but dagggle-tail is one who has her gown in jags or "dags" from being trailed through the mire.

Dragoman, plu. dragomans (not dragomen; it is not a compound of "man"), an Eastern interpreter or guide.

French and Spanish dragoman; Italian dragomanno; Chaldee turgaman (turgmn), whence "targum" an exposition of the Old Test.

Dragon, drăg'on, a fabulous monster.

French dragon; Latin drăco, gen. drăcōn[is]; Greek drakōn (from derkō), to look at one [with fiery eyes]. In Welsh dragon is a commander, and pen-dragon a chief commander. Many encounters "with dragons" in ancient story were fights with Welsh dragons.

Dragon, dră'goon', a horse soldier, to persecute with violence; dragooné'd (2 syl.), dragoon'-ing.

Dragonnade, a persecution under the "tender mercies" of dragons. "The dragonnades" were a series of religious persecutions by Louis XIV., "to root out heresy."

(The double n in "dragonnade" is at variance with R. iii.)

French dragon, dragonnade. Originally a company of soldiers who fought on foot or horse, with arquebuses called dragons, because the head of a dragon was wrought on the muzzle. (The suffix -ade means "the act of," "to act with." Latin ago, actum, whence "cannon-ade," to act with cannon, "dragon[n]ade," &c.)

Drain (1 syl.), a sink or sewer, to draw off liquids, to empty, to leave dry; drained (1 syl.), drain'-ing, drain'-er, drain'-age, arrangement for draining off water; drain'-able.

Old English drenigean, to drain.

Drake, fem. duck. In common speech, ducks and drakes are all called "ducks," and as food both are termed "ducks."

"Duck" means the fowl that ducks or dives, the dipping-fowl.

"Drake" is a contraction of duck-rica (d'ric'). So in German ente is duck, and ente-rich a drake.

Dram, the sixteenth part of an ounce Avoirdupoise. Drachm, dram, the eighth part of an apothecary's ounce.

"Dram," Italian dramma. "Drachm," French drachme; Latin drachma; Hebrew drachmon.

Drama, dray'măh (is more usual than drăh-măh, and accords better with the derivatives), a theatrical piece for representation; dramatic or dramatical, dray.măt'ik, dray.măt'.i.kăl; dramati'cal-ly; dramatise, drăm'.a.tize, to adapt to the stage (Rule xxxi.); dram'atised (3 syl.), dram'atis-ing (Rule xix.); dramatist, drăm'.a.tist.

Dramatis Personæ, drăm'.a.tis per.sō'ne (not per'.so.ne), characters introduced in a drama or play.

French drame, dramatique, dramatiser; Latin drama, dramaticus; Greek drăma, drămatikōs (drao, to do or act).

Drank. (See Drink.)

Drape (1 syl.), to cover with folds; draped (1 syl.), drāp'-ing; drāp'-er, one who deals in cloth; drapery, dra'.pĕ.ry.

French drap, cloth, draper, a draper, draperie; Low Latin draparius; Spanish ropa, cloth; roperia, old clothes; ropage, drapery.

Drastic, drās'.tik, violently purgative; drastics, drās'.tiks, powerful purgative medicines.

French drastique; Greek drastērios, vigorous (drab, to accomplish).

Draught, drāft (to rhyme with craft, laughed). Draft.

Draught, a stream of air, a portion of liquor drawn off, liquor drunk at one potation, a catch of fish, traction.

Draughts (no sing.), a game played with draughtsmen.

Draft, a cheque for money, a bill of exchange, a plan in outline, a copy, an abstract; to transfer men from one company to another; draft'-ed, draft'-ing.

Draftsman, one who draws drafts or plans;

Draughtsman, drafts-man, one of the "men" or pieces used in the game of draughts.

"Draught is the amalgamated forms of dróg and dróh with t interpolated. Old English drag[an], to draw; past dróg or dróh, past part. drægen. "Draft" is a phonetic spelling of "draught."

Draw, past draw, past part. drawn, to pull, to raise [water from a well], to suck, to delineate, to take out [money from a bank], to write out [a cheque]; draw'-ing, pulling, raising [water], &c.; (noun), a picture "drawn" with pencils, &c. A drawing room, the chief reception room to which ladies "withdraw."

Drawer, draw'r, a tray which "draws" out of a frame.

Chest of drawers, a set of drawers including the frame.

Drawers (no sing.), draw'rz, linen or cotton trousers "drawn on" the legs, and worn as an under garment.

Drawer, one who "draws" with a pencil, one who "draws" a bill of exchange, &c. Drawee, draw'.ee, the person on whom a bill of exchange is "drawn."

To draw back, to retreat, to move for the sake of avoiding.

To draw in, to contract, to pull in.

To draw near, to approach.

To draw off, to decant, to draw away, to retreat.

To draw on, to put on [gloves, stockings, &c.], to bring on, to write a cheque or bill of exchange on a person named.

To draw out, to extract, to prolong, to array soldiers.

To draw together, to collect.

To draw up, to raise, to array, to compose.

Drawn [battle or game], one in which neither side wins.

Old English drag[an], to draw or drag; past dróg or dróh, past part. drægen; Latin traho. "Drag" and "Draw" are different forms of the same verb.

Dray, a brewer's cart; dray'man, dray'horse.

Old Eng. dræge, a drag (v. dræg[an]); Lat. trahea, a dray, (v. traho).

Dread, drēd, terror, to fear greatly; dread'ed (Rule xxxvi.), dread'ing, dread'er, dread'ful (R. viii.), dread'ful-ly, dread'ful-ness, dread-less, dread'less-ly, dread'less-ness.

Old English drēd, v. drēd[an], past drēd, past part. drēden.

Dream, drēme (1 syl.), noun and verb; dreamt, drēmt (not dreampt), or dreamed (1 syl.), dream'ing, dream'ing-ly, dream'er, dream'y, dream'i-ly (R. xi.), dream'i-ness, dream'-less, dream'less-ly, dream'less-ness, dream'-land.

German traum, v. träumen (träumerei would give us a new and useful word, "dreamery," the "stuff dreams are made of"). The Anglo-Saxon drēam means "joy," drēamleas "joy'less."

Drear, drēre (1 syl.), gloomy; dreary, dree'ry, dismal; dreari-ly, dree'ri-ly (Rule viii.); dreariness, dree'ri-ness. "Drear" means properly that gloom and dismal feeling which comes over us at the sight of blood.

Old English drēor, blood, gore, drēorig, bloody, gory; drēorignes, dreariness; drēorlice, drearily, &c.

Dredge (1 syl.), to sprinkle [flour on meat], to deepen a river, dredged (1 syl.), dredg'ing (Rule xix.), dredg'er, a box for dredging [flour on meat]. Drudge, a menial.

"Dredge" (to sprinkle flour), Old English dreg[an] or drig[an], to dry.

The flour sops up the moisture; Greek trugo, to dry.

"Dredge" (to deepen a river), Old English dræge, a drag, v. drag[an], to drag; Fr. draguer, draguage. (The second -d is interpolated.)

Dregs (no sing.), sediment, refuse; dregg'y (Rule i.), muddy; dreggi'-ness, drēg'i-ness; dregg'-ish, foul with lees.

Old English drægen, drawn (the part drawn off); Danish drog, rubbish; Greek trux, gen. trūgos, lees of wine.

Drench, to wet thoroughly; drenched (1 syl.), drench'ing, drench'ing-ly, drench'er.

Old English drenc[an], to drench, past drenete, past part. gedrenced.

Dress, plu. dress'-es (Rule xxxiv.), raiment, to put on clothes, to trim; past. dressed (1 syl.), past part. drest or dressed (1 syl.), dress'-ing, dress'er, one who dresses another, a bench on which food is "drest" for meals; dress'y, showy in dress; dress'i-ly (R. xi.), dress'i-ness; dress'ings, architectural ornamentation in relief, manures.

This is an example of a French word which has acquired with us quite a strange meaning. To clothe oneself in French is s'habiller, and dresser means to trim trees, dress food, iron linen, garnish a table, &c., but not to "put on clothes (see Rule lxiii.); Latin dirigo, supine directum, to set in order, to make straight (rego). We have the familiar expressions "I must go and make myself straight," "I must put myself in order" (i.e. dresser).

Dribble, drīb'b'l, to ooze in drops; dribbled, drīb'b'ld; dribbler, drīb'b'ler; dribblet, drīb'b'let, a small quantity.

To pay in dribblets, to pay piece-meal in small sums.

French drippe, drip, with dim. Old English drip[an], to drip, to distil in drops. Danish draabe, a drop.

Dried, dride (1 syl.); drier, drī'er. (See Dry.)

Drift, [snow, sand, &c.] driven in heaps by the wind, covert meaning, to drive in heaps, to float down running water; drift'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), drift'-ing.

Old English drif[an], to drive; past dráf, past part. drifen.

Drill (Rule v.), an instrument for boring holes, an instrument for sowing seed, military exercises; to pierce with a drill, to sow with a drill, to drill soldiers, &c.; drilled (1 syl.), drill-ing, drill'-er; drill-sergeant, drill sar'jént.

Old English thirl[ian], to perforate; past thirlode, past part. thirlod, thirl, a hole; German drillen, to bore holes, to train soldiers.

Drink, past drank, past part. drunk (but drank is often used), drunken (adj.), drink'-er, drink'-able, drink'able-ness;

Draught, draft, a drink, is from another word. (See Draught.)

To drink to, to salute someone in drinking, to wish well to someone by drinking to them.

Old English drinc[an], past drunc, past part druncen.

Drip, to fall in drops, that which falls in drops; dripped (1 syl.), dripp'-ing (Rule i.), falling in drops, the fat which "drips" from meat in roasting; dripping-pan, the pan which receives the drip of meat in roasting.

Old English drip[an], past dripede, past part. driped.

Drive, past drove [older form drave], past part. driven.

A drive (1 syl.), carriage exercise; to drive [horses], to guide horses, to urge on; driv'-er, one who drives [horses].

Drove (1 syl.), a herd of cattle or flock of sheep on their way to market, &c.; drōv'-er, one who conducts a drove.

Driv-ing (Rule xix.), guiding horses, urging on, tunnelling from the shaft into the mine.

To drive a bargain, to make hard terms.

To drive a trade, to carry on a trade with energy.

Old English drif[an], past dráf, past part. drifen.

Drivel, drīv'el, to slaver, to talk listlessly and sillily; driv'elled (2 syl.), driv'ell-ing (Rule iii. -EL); driv'ell-er, a dotard, one who drivels.

This is from the verb drip with -el dim.

Drizzle, drīz'z'l, fine rain, to rain in fine drops; drizzled, drīz'z'ld; drizzling, drīz'ling; drizzly, drīz'ly.

German rieseln, to drizzle, rieselregen, a drizzling rain.

Droll, drōle (not dröl, R. v.), a wag, funny; drollery, drōle'ëry (not dröl'e.ry); drollish, drōle-ish, somewhat droll (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like," added to verbs it means to "make").

French drôle; German drollig, droll.

Dromedary, drŭm.e.dŭ.ry, the Arabian camel (with one hunch); the Bactrian camel has two hunches.

French domadaire (French -ma-, English and Latin -me-); Latin drŏmedarius; Greek dromas [kamelos], the running camel.

Drone, fem. bee (both 1 syl.), the male of the honey-bee, an idler, to emit a humming noise; droned (1 syl.), drŏn'-ing, drŏn'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.), drŏn'-ish-ly, drŏn'-ish-ness.

Old English drŏn or drén, a drone.

Droop, to hang down, to flag, to languish; drooped (1 syl.), droop'-ing, droop'-ing-ly.

Old English drop[etan], to drop.

Drop, a liquid globule, the platform of a gallows, to fall in drops, to lower, to let fall; dropped (1 syl.), dropp'-ing (R. i.); droppings (noun), the excrements of birds, &c.; drop'-let, a little drop; drops, liquid medicine, mother's milk.

Old English dropa, a drop, v. dropetan or drop[ian].

Dropsy, drŏp'.sy, a disease; dropsi-cal, drŏp'.si.kāl (Rule xi.); dropsied, drŏp'.sĕd, diseased with dropsy.

A contraction of hydropsy, but the loss of the first syllable has spoilt the significance of the word.

French hydropsie; Latin hydrops; Greek hudrops (hudŏr ōps, water manifestation).

Drosky, plu. droskies, drŏs'.ky, drŏs.kĭz (Rule xlv.)

Russian drozhki, a four-wheeled open carriage.

Dross (R. v.), refuse; dross'-y, dross'i-ness (R. xi.) (Old Eng. dros.)

Drought. Neither the spelling nor the pronunciation of this word is settled. The most common pronunciation is drŏwt (to rhyme with out), but many call it draut (to rhyme with thought, taught).

Drought'-y, drought'i-ness (Rule xi.)

Another spelling of the word is—

Drouth, drouth'y, drouth'i-ness.

Sometimes we hear the words—

Dryth, dryth'y, dryth'i-ness (y long).

Old English drugath or drugoth (changed to druo'th, drou'th).

"Drought" is a double metathesis of "drugoth" (first into droughth and then into drought).

In regard to the pronunciation: every other word in the language spelt in a similar way is pronounced -ort, and uniformity is desirable. We have bought, [drought], fought, nought, ought, sought, thought, and wrought.

"Dryth": -th added to adj. converts them into abstract nouns, as long-th, bread-th, dey-th, dry-th.

Drove (1 syl.), a herd of cattle or flock of sheep on their road to market; past tense of drive; drŏv'-er, one who drives cattle to market. (See Drive.)

Drown, drōwn (to rhyme with down, noun), to kill by submersion in water; drowned (1 syl.), drown'-ing.

Norman drukne, to drown; German [er] tranken.

Drowsy, sleepy; drow'si-er (more sleepy), drow'si-est (most sleepy), drow'si-ness (Rule xi.), drow'si-ly, drow'si-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like"); drowsing, drōwse'ing. (Dutch drosen, to doze.)

Drub, to beat; drubbed (1 syl.), drubb'-ing (Rule i.), drubb'-er. Old English tribu[an], to beat; Greek tribo, to thresh.

Drudge (1 syl.), a menial, to toil; drudged (1 syl.), drudg'-ing (R. xix.), drudg'-ing-ly; drudgery, drūj'.ery, ignoble toil. Old English dreog[an], to toil; past dreag or dreah, past part. drōgen. (The d is interpolated for phonetic use.)

Drug, a substance used for medicine, an article slow of sale, to dose, to put poison into food or drink; drugged (1 syl.), drugg'-ing (Rule i.); drugg'-ist, one who deals in drugs.

French drogue, droguiste (droguerie, druggery, is a word we might adopt); Old English drig, dry. "Drugs" were once "dry herbs."

Drugget, a coarse woollen cloth. (This word ought to have only one g, it is not a "little drug," as the spelling indicates, but the French droguet.)

Druid, fem. druidess, drū'īd, drū'īd.ess, a Keltic priest; druid-ism, the rites and faith of the Druids; druidic or druidical, drū'īd'ik, drū'īd'ik.kāl.

Welsh derwydd (derw, an oak; derwen, oaken; udd, a chief; Keltic wydd, a priest; Anglo Saxon wita, a prophet or wise man).

Drum, a musical instrument, the tympanum of the ear, a package [of figs in a wooden cylindrical box], a crowded reception, to beat a drum, &c.; drummed (1 syl.), drumm'-ing (Rule i.), drumm'-er, drum'-ma'jor, kettle-drum.

German trom[mel], a drum; Norse drum, a booming sound.

Drunk, intoxicated; drunken, given to intoxication; drunk'en-ness; drunk'-ard, one of the drunken kind (-ard Old Eng. suffix, "one of a species," "of the kind." (See Drink.)

Old English drinc[an], past dranc, past part. druncen.

Drūpe (1 syl.), a pulpy stone-fruit; drupel, drū'pel, a pulpy fruit with seeds like the raspberry and blackberry; drupaceous, drū.pay'shus, producing drupes, like drupes.

French drupe; Latin drūpæ; Greek druppa, overripe olives.

Dry, dri-er (comp.), dri-est (super.) (Rule xi.), dries, drīze (1 syl.), dried (1 syl.).

Dry'-er, one who dries; dri-er, more dry; dry'-ing.

Dry-ly or dri-ly, dry-ness or dri-ness.

("Dry," "shy," and "sly," are uncertain in their spelling, but it would be well to reduce them to the general rule (Rule xi.)

Dryad, dry'äd, a wood-nymph.

French dryade; Latin dryādes; Greek druādēs (drus, an oak.)

Dual, dū'äl, a plu. consisting of only two. Duel, a fight between two.

Du'al-ist, one who believes in dualism;

Du'el-ist, one who fights a duel.

Dual-ism, dū'älizm, the system which presupposes the nature of man to be twofold, the system which presupposes that there are two reigning principles in nature.

Dualistic, dū'älis''tĭk, adj. of dualism, as the dualistic system of Anaxag'oras and Plato, who taught that there are two principles in nature, one active and the other passive; duality, dū'äl'i.ty, the state of being two, &c.

French duel; Latin duālis (dua for duo, two); Greek duas, duality.

Dub, to confer knighthood, to give [one] a title; dubbed' (1 syl.), dubb'-ing (R. i.) (Old Eng. dubb[an], to dub, to strike.)

Dubious, dū'bĭ.us, doubtful; du'bious-ness, du'bious-ly; dubiety, dū'bĭ'ĕ.ty, doubt; dubitable, dū'bĭ.tā.b'l; dubitably, dū'bĭ.tā.bly.

Latin dubiētas, dubiosus, dūbĭtābĭlis, dubius (dūbĭum, doubt).

Ducal, dū'kāl, adj. of duke. (French ducal. See Duke.)

Ducat, dūk'ät (not dū'.kät), a coin once common in Italy.

The first appeared in Venice, and bore this inscription "Sit tibi, Christe, datus, quem tu regis, iste DUCATUS." ["May this duchy [ducat-us] which thou rulest, O Christ, be devoted to thee."] The word "ducat" gave name to the coin.

Duchess (not dutchess), duch'-ess, fem. of duke; duchess's (poss. sing.), duchesses (plu.), duchesses' (poss. plu.)

French duc, fem. duchesse (Latin dux, gen. ducis, a leader).

Duck, the female of drake; duck'-ling, a young duck or drake. (-ling, Old Eng. suffix, "offspring of," or simply diminutive). When sex is not an object of the speaker both are termed ducks, when killed for table both are called ducks.

To duck, to dip, to pop down for the sake of avoiding something; ducked (1 syl.), duck'-ing.

Ducking-stool, a stool once employed for the punishment of scolding and brawling women, also called cucking-stool (chuck, to throw), the stool "chucked" into the water.

Duck-legged, dūk.lĕgd, having short waddling legs.

To make ducks and drakes, to throw stones &c., on the surface of water so that they rebound repeatedly.

To make ducks and drakes of your money, to spend it as idly as if you threw it into water for amusement.

German ducken, to duck, to dip the head. A "duck" is the fowl that "ducks" or dips its head [in water]. "Drake" is a contraction of duck-rake or rica (d'rake or d'ric), the duck master. So in German ente, a duck; ente-rich, a drake.

Duct, a tube for conveying [water]; aque-duct (not aquaduck), a duct for water. (Latin aquæ ductus, a duct for water.)

Latin ductus, a duct (v. duco, supine ductum, to lead or convey).

Ductile, dŭk'.tĭl (not dŭk'.tile), easy to draw out into lengths, like wire; ductility, dŭk'.tĭl'.i.ty.

French ductile, ductilité; Latin ductilis.

Dudgeon, dŭd'.jŏn, a sword or dagger, inward displeasure.

To take [a thing] in dudgeon, to look on it as an offence.

"Dudgeon" (a dagger), German degen, a sword, a rapier.

"Dudgeon" (displeasure), Welsh dygen, grudge, malice.

Duo, duty, owed. Dew, moisture of the air condensed. Do, doo, q.v.

Du-ly (du-ly, tru-ly, and whol-ly drop the final e before the suffix -ly, Rule xviii.)

Dues, dŭze, custom-house taxes, &c. Dews, plu. of dew.

French dû, past part. of devoir; Latin debere, perf. debui.

Duel, dŭ'.el, a fight between two. Dual, dŭ'.al, a numb. in Gram.

Du'-el-ist, one who fights a duel;

Du'-al-ist, one who believes there are two principles in nature, one who believes man to possess a twofold nature.

Du'-ell-er, du'-ell-ing. (Rule iii., -EL.)

French duel; Latin duellum (du[o] [b]ellum).

Duenna, dŭ.en'.nah, an elderly woman whose duty in Spain is to look after some young lady under her charge (Span.)

Duet, dŭ'.et, a song for two voices. Duetto, plu. duettos (Ital.)

Dug, the udder of a cow, &c.; the past tense of dig (q.v.)

Duke (1 syl.), fem. duch'ess; duke-dom (-dom = "dominion"); duch'-y; ducal, dŭ'.kål; du'cal-ly.

French duc, fem. duchesse; Latin dux, gen. ducis, a leader.

Dulcamara, dŭl'-ka.mair''ràh (not dul.kām'.a.rah), the plant called "bitter-sweet," or "woody nightshade."

Latin dulcis amarus, sweet bitter. The stalks and root taste at first bitter, but after being chewed a little time they taste sweet.

Dulcet, dŭl'.set, sweet [applied to sound].

Dulcify (-ci- not -si-); dulcifies, dŭl'.si.fize; dulcified, dŭl'.si.fide; dŭl'cify-ing.

Dulcimer, dŭl'.si.mer, an ancient musical instrument.

French dulcifier; Latin dulciferus, dulcis. (The two words "dulciloquent" and "dulcify" might be introduced.)

Dulia, dŭ.lĭ'.ah (not dŭ'.lĭ.ah, as it is generally called), the reverence paid to saints.

Latria, la.trĭ'.ah, adoration paid to God.

Latin dŭlia; Greek douleia or doulĭē, the reverence paid by a slave (doulos) to his master.

Latin latrĭa; Greek latreia, the service of a free workman (latris, a hired servant).

Dull, stupid, obscure; dull-er (comp.), dull-est (super.); dull'-ard (-ard, Old Eng. suffix meaning "species," "kind"), one of the dull kind; dull-ness, dul-ly (Rule v., b).

Dull, to make dull; dulled (1 syl.), dull-ing.

Old English dol, foolish, dollice, dully; Welsh dwl, stupid.

Duly, dū'-ly, fitly (see Due). Dully, dūl'-ly, stupidly (see Dull).

Dumb, dŭm (b silent), mute, wanting the power of speech;

Dumb-animals, all quadrupeds are so termed in contradistinction to man, who is a "speaking animal."

Dumb-ly, dŭm'-ly; dumb'-ness, dŭm'-ness.

Dumb-show, signs and gestures without words.

Dumb-waiter, a piece of furniture.

Dumfoun'der (without b), to strike dumb with amazement; dumfoun'dered (3 syl.), dumfoun'der-ing.

Dummy, plu. dummies, dŭm'-mīz, one who is dumb, an empty bottle. In three-handed whist, the hand exposed is called "dummy," and in French mort.

(Either the "b" should be struck out of "dumb," or it should be retained throughout. It is rather remarkable that "dumbness" has no "b" in the Anglo Saxon dummys.)

Old English dumb, dummys, dumbness; German dumm.

Dumps, a fit of the sullen; dump-ish, rather stupid and sullen; dum'pish-ly, dum'pish-ness.

Norse dump, dull; German dumm, stupid, sottish; dumpf, dull.

Dumpy, dŭm'-py, squat, short.

Humpty-dumpty, any person or thing small and thick-set.

Dumpling, dŭm'-pling, dough leavened with yeast and boiled. Heavy or Suffolk dumplings have no yeast. There are several varieties.

Norse dump, low, squat. (?) thumb, the short squat finger, called "dumpy." Anglo Saxon thūma; German daumen.

Dun, a brown colour, one who importunes a creditor for payment, to din, to importune for payment; dunn-ish (Rule i.), rather brown (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like").

Dun (v.), dunned (1 syl.), dunn'-ing (Rule i.)

Dune (1 syl.), a sand hill near the sea-coast.

Old English dun, a black-brown colour; dunung, a noise; dŭn[ian], to make a noise; dūn, a hill.

Dunce (1 syl.), a dolt; one backward in book-learning.

Dunsters, disciples of Duns Scotus, the schoolman, who clamoured against "the new learning" which was fatal to the quiddities of Dunsery. The new school called those who opposed them dunsters, corrupted to dunces; German duns, a dunce.

Dunderhead, dŭn'.der.hĕd, muddle-headed; dunderhead'-ed.

Norse tung, tunt, heavy, slow, lumpish, which enters into composition with hand, head, heart, speech, hearing, &c., &c.

Dune (1 syl.), a sand-hill near the sea-coast. (Old Eng. dŭn.)

Dung (noun and verb), dunged (1 syl.), dung'-ing, dung'-y, dunghill (double l, Rule viii.) (Old Eng. dung.)

Dungeon, dŭn'.jŭn, a dark dismal prison, underground; donjon, the strong keep of an ancient castle.

The prison of the ancient castles was under the donjon (q.v.)

Dunned (1 syl.), dunning, &c. (See Dun.)

Duodecimal, du'.o.dĕs''.i.māl (adj.), computing by twelves; duodecimals, cross multiplication, each lower denomination being the twelfth of the one next higher, just as a penny is the twelfth of a shilling; duodecimal-ly.

Duodecimo, plu. duodecimos (not duodecimoes, Rule xlii.), du'.o.dĕs''.i.mōze, the size of a book in which each sheet is folded into twelve leaves.

French duodecimal; Italian duodecimo; Latin dŭdĕcĭmŭs (duo + decem, two + ten).

Duodenum, du'.o.dĕe''.num (not du.od'.enum, an intestine about twelve fingers long, in the human body; duodenal, du'.o.dĕe''.nal (adj.); duodenitis, du'.o.dĕ.ni''.tis, inflammation of the duodenum (-itis, Gk. suf., inflammation).

Dup, [the door] to open, past dŭpt or dupped (1 syl.), dupping.

"Then up he rose . . . dupped the chamber door,

[And] let in the maid . . ."—Ham. iv. v.

"Dup" is Ang. Sax. do-yp, "do-open," or do-up, lift up [the latch].

Dupe (1 syl.), one deceived, to cheat; duped (1 syl.), dŭp'-ing (Rule xix.), dŭp'-er, dŭp'-ery.

French dupe, v. duper; Latin duplex, wily ("Cursus duplĭcis per mare Ulyssē," Hor. Od., 1. 6, 7, "of the wily or duping Ulysses").

Duplicate, dŭ'.plĭ.kate, a copy, a pawnbroker's ticket, to fold or double; dŭ'plicāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), dŭ'plicāt-ing (Rule xix.); duplication, dŭ'.plĭ.kay''.shun; duplĭcature, du'.plĭ.ka.tchur; duplicity, dŭ'.plĭs'.i.ty.

French duplicate, duplication, duplicatĕ; Latin duplĭcātĭo, duplĭcāre, supine duplĭcātum, duplĭcātus.

Durable, dŭ'.ra.b'l, lasting; dŭ'able-ness, dŭ'ably, durabil'ity.

Fr. durāble, durabilitĕ; Lat. dŭrābilis, dŭrābilĭtas (durus, hard).

Dura-mater, dŭ'.ra may'.ter (not māt.er), the outer membrane of the brain. The inner membrane is the pia-mater.

Latin dura-mater. Called "hard" (dura), because it is more tough than the other two membranes of the brain. Called mater or "mother" from the supposition that all the other membranes of the body were "born" out of it, or were simply elongations of it.

Duramen, du.ray'.men, heart-wood. (Latin durāmen.)

Durance, dū.rānse, imprisonment. Endurance, tolerance.

Duration, dū.ray'.shun, continuance. (Not French.)

Duress, dū.ress, constraint, restraint of liberty.

Latin durāre, to accustom to hardship; Old French duresse; Latin dūrities, dūrātio (durus, hard).

Durst, past tense of dare, to be bold to do. (See Dare.)

Dusk, dim light, partially dark; dusk'-ish, rather dusk (-ish added to adj. means rather, added to nouns like); dusk'ish-ly, dusk'-y, dusk'i-ly (Rule xi.), dusk'i-ness.

Old English dwæscan, to extinguish; past dwæscede, p.p. dwæsced.

Dust (noun and verb). Dost, dūst, second per. sing. of Do (q.v.)

Dust'-ed (R. xxxvi.), dust-ing, dust'-er, dust'-y, dust'i-ness.

To bite the dust, to fall dead in battle.

To kick up a dust, to make a disturbance.

To throw dust in one's eyes, to bamboozle. The allusion is to the Mahometan practice of casting dust into the air for the sake of "confounding" the enemies of the faith.

"When the English king pursued the Iman who had stolen his daughter for Allah, Allah threw dust in his eyes to check his pursuit." A Gori Legend.

"Dust," Old Eng. dūst, dustig, dusty. "Dost," Old Eng. dēst.

Dutch (adj.), pertaining to Holland or the Netherlands, the language of the Hollanders.

The Dutch, the people of Holland or the Netherlands.

A Dutchman, plu. Dutchmen. "Dutchmen" is the definite plu., as two, three, &c., Dutchmen, but "The Dutch" the indefinite plu. (R. xlv. ¶). Dutch-clocks, German clocks.

German Deutsche. "Dutch clocks," corruption of Deutsch clock.

Duty, plu. duties, dū.tīz; du'ti-ful (Rule xi.), du'tiful-ly, du'tiful-ness (R. viii.); du'ti-able, subject to excise duty.

Duteous, dū.teus; du'teous-ly, du'teous-ness.

("Duty" and "beauty" have this change of vowel, for which there is no sufficient reason.)

French dû, past part. of devoir; Latin debeo.

Duumvir, plu. duumvirs or duumviri, dū.ūm'.verz or dū.ūm'.vī.rī. In ancient Rome, the supreme magistracy vested in two men; duumvirate, dū.ūm'.vī.rate, the form of government or office of a duumvir; duum'viral.

Latin duumvir, plu. duumviri, duumvirālis, duumvirātus.

Dwarf, plu. dwarfs (not dwarves, Rule xxxix.), dwarf'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.), dwarf'ish-ly, dwarf'ish-ness; dwarf'-ing, keeping small; dwarfed (not dwarft-ed), hindered from growing.

Old English dwæorh or dwæorg, a dwarf.

Dwell (Rule v.), past dwelt, past part. dwelt, to live, to abide; dwel'-ing, living, abiding, a house, a residence; dwel'-er.

To dwell on [a subject], to continue talking on it.

Norse dwole, to dwell, to tarry; dvaler, a dweller, a loiterer. The Anglo Saxon dwel[ian] means "to deceive" (dwo! an error).

Dwindle, dwîn.d'l, to diminish; dwin'dled (2 syl.), dwin'dling.

Old Eng. dwin[an], to pine away, to dwindle; past dwîn, p.p. dwinen.

Dwt., pronounced penny-weight. It is D (penny, denārium), and wt (contraction of weight). Similarly Owt., hundred-weight is C (hundred, centum), and wt for "weight."

Dye, to tincture. Die, to lose life. (Both di.)

Dyes, dyed, dye-ing (violation of R. xix.), dy'-er (from Dye).

Dies, died, dy-ing (Rule xix.), di-er (from Die).

Dyes, tinctures, third per. sing. of Dye.

Dies, plu. of die, a stamp, third per. sing. of Die.

Dice, plu. of die, a cube for playing "dice."

"Dye," Old Eng. dedg, v. dedg[ian], past dedgode, past part. dedgod.

"Die," Old Eng. dedd[ian], past deddode, past part. deddid.

"Die" (a cube), Fr. dé, plu. dés.

Dyke (1 syl.), a geological term. Dike, a trench, a mound.

A "dyke" is the material which fills up a fissure in a rock.

Old English dîc, a dyke; French dyke (in mines).

Dynamics, dî.nām'iks, that science which treats of force acting on moving bodies. (All sciences terminating in the Greek -ika, except five, are plural, Rule lxi.) Dynamic or dynam'ical (adj.), dynam'ical-ly.

Dynom'eter or dynamometer, dî.na.mōm".e.ter, a (mechanical) instrument to measure the relative strength-in-draught of man and other animals;

Dynameter, an (optical) instrument for determining the magnifying power of telescopes; dynamet'ical.

Dynamite, dî.na.mite, an explosive agent, consisting of porous silica saturated in nitro-glycerine.

Fr. dynamique, dynamomètre; Lat. dynamis; Gk. dunamis, power.

Dynasty, plu. dynasties, dîn'.ūs.tîz, a race of monarchs from one common head; dynastic, dî.nūs'.tîk (adj.)

French dynastie, dynastique; Latin dynastia; Greek dunasteia.

Dys- (Greek dus-, a prefix always denoting evil, opposed to eu-, which always denotes what is good).

Dysentery, dis'.en.ter ry, severe diarrhœa; dysenter'ic.

Fr. dyssenterie, dyssentérique (double s, a blunder); Lat. dysenteria, dysentericus; (Gk. dus entēra, bad [state of] the bowels).

Dyspepsia or dyspepsy, dis.pēp'.sî.ah, dis.pēp'.sy, indigestion; dyspep'tic, one who suffers from dyspepsia.

French dyspepsie; Greek dus pepsis, bad digestion (pepto, to cook).

- Dysphagia, dis.fäg'.i.ah, a difficulty of swallowing.
 Greek dus phagein, difficulty in swallowing.
- Dyspnoea, děsp.nēe'.ah, a difficulty of breathing.
 French dyspnée; Latin dyspnoea, asthma; Greek dus pnoia, difficulty of breathing.
- Dysuria, di.sū'.ri.ah, difficulty of passing urine; dysuric.
 Fr. dysuric; Lat. dysūria, dysūricus; Gk. dus ouria difficulty of urine.

E-, Ef-, Ex-, in composition, means out of.

E- or Ex- means out of, hence
 "Privation" or "pre-eminence";
 'Tis EX- before a vowel, e,
 The aspirates, p, q, s, t;
 'Tis EF- before an f; but E-
 With liquids, c, d, g, j, v.

-ea, -æa, -ia (in Bot.), denote a genus or division.

Every word (except eager and eagle) beginning with ea- is Anglo-Saxon.

Each, ēch, every individual of a number treated separately.

Each other: as "Be to each other kind and true," that is,
 Each [one] be to [every] other one kind and true. "Each" is nominative case, and "other" objective, governed by
 to. "It is our duty to assist each other," that is, It is our duty each [one] to assist [every] other [one]. (In Latin, alter alterum adjuvāre.)

Eager, ē.gur, desirous; eager-ly, eager-ness.

Welsh egyr; French aigre; sharp, sour; Latin acer, sharp, brisk.

Eagle, ē'.g'l, a bird of prey; eaglet, ē'.glet, a young eagle.

French aigle; Latin āquila (āquillus, a dun colour).

Ear, e'er, ere, hear, year, earing, ear-ring, hearing.

Ear, ē'r, organ of hearing, appreciation of musical sounds, spike of corn, to form into seed corn; eared, ē'rd; earing, ē'r'-ing, forming into ears of corn, time of ploughing (as opposed to harvest).

"There shall be neither earing nor harvest" (Gen. xlv. 6).

Ear-ring, a ring for the ear. Hearing, perception of sound.

E'er, ē'er, a contraction of ever.

Ere, air, before in time, sooner than; erst, at first.

Hear, hē'r, to perceive by the ear.

Year, yē'r, a period of twelve months.

"Ear" (organ of hearing), Old English ēdre.

"Ear" (of corn), Old English edr or æchir.

"Earing" (time of ploughing), Old Eng. eriung, ploughing, v. erian.

"Ear-ring" (ring for the ear), Old English edr-ring.

"E'er" (ever), Old English æfer or æfre.

"Ere" (before in time), O. Eng. ear or ær, (comp.) ērra, (super.) ērest.

"Hear," Old English hȳr(an) or hēr(an), to hear.

"Year," Old English gear; German jahr.

Earl, fem. countess, url, coun'tess.

Earl'dom, the title and rank of earl (-dom, rank, estate, &c.)

Old English eorl. The title was first used by the Jutes of Kent. The Norman-French count is no English title, although we retain the words county and countess. French comté, comtesse.

Early, ur'ly; earli-er (comp.), earli-est (super.), soon, before the time; earli-ness, ur'lin'ess (Rule xi.)

Old Eng. ær, before, in time; ardlic (adj.), early; ardlice (adv.)

Earn, urn, to win by service. Urn, a vase.

Earned, urnd; earn-ing, ur'ning; earn-ings (noun) ur'ningz, wages, money earned.

Old English earn[ian] or earn[ian], to earn; earnung or earnung, earnings, wages. "Urn," Latin urna, a pitcher.

Earnest, ur'n'est, a pledge, a deposit to confirm a bargain, hansom, ardent, serious, eager; earnest-ly, ur'n'est.ly; earnest-ness, ur'n'est.ness; in earnest.

("Earnest" [money], ought to be ernes or eræst.)

"Earnest" (noun), Welsh ernes, a pledge.

"Earnest" (adj.), Old Eng. earnest, earneste (adv.); Germ. ernst.

Earth, urth (noun and verb); earthed (1 syl.), earth-ing; earth-ly, urth'ly; earth'li-ness (Rule xi.), earth-y, urth'y; earth'i-ness (Rule xi.), earth-en, made of earth; earthenware, urth'en.ware, crockery.

Which is correct:

"Day and night are produced by the earth's revolving on its axis," or

"Day and night are produced by the earth revolving on its axis"?

(In the former case, "revolving" is a verbal noun, not a participle, the sentence is Day and Night are produced by "the revolving of the earth".... Here "revolving" = revolution, and would have been better with the old spelling revolvung. Similarly we have the phrases, "by the preaching [i.e. preachment] of repentance," or "by John's preaching repentance," where "preaching" is a verbal noun. The second example is not incorrect, but it is less idiomatic, and more German than English. [The] earth-revolving-on-its-axis being all one word. The former is decidedly to be preferred.)

Earwig, ēr.wig, an insect. (Old Eng. ear wigga, ear [shaped] insect. The hind wings being in shape like the human ear.)

Earwigg-ing (Rule i.), whispering slander to gain favour.

Ease, ēze, comfort, freedom from pain; easy, ēzy; easi-ly, easi-ness (R. xi.); eased, ēzd; eas'-ing, ēzing (R. xix.); ease'-ment (only five words drop -e before -ment, R. xviii.)

Easy, ēzy; (comp.) easi-er, ē.zi.er; (super.) easi-est.

Old English edth and edthlic, easy, (comp.) edthere, (super.) edthost, (adv.) edthe and edthelice; French aïse.

Easel, ēz'l, a frame with a shoulder, used by artists.

Old English esel, a shoulder; less likely esol, German esel, an ass.

East, ēst; east-ern; easterly, ēst'ēr.ly.

Easter-ling, a native of the East.

East'-ing, the distance a ship makes good in an eastward direction. The eastward (noun), the east direction.

Eastward (adj.), eastwards (adv.)

(The use of eastward as an adverb is objectionable. It is the final -s which is the adverbial badge.)

Old Eng. east (noun and adj.), easten-wind, the east wind, eastern and eastinne, in the east, eastian, from the east, east-weard, eastward.

Easter, ēs'tēr (noun and adj.), the season commemorative of "The Resurrection" of Christ; easter-tide, easter-week.

Old English Easter, easter-dæg, easter day: easter-tid, easter-tide; easter-wuce, easter week; easter-mōndth, April.

(April was the time of the annual Scandinavian festival in honour of the moon called "Easter," "Ostar," "Eastre," etc.)

Easy, easier, easiest. (See Ease.)

Eat, past ate (not eat, nor ete), past part. eaten; eat, ēte (1 syl.); eat'-ing, eat'-er, eat'-able.

Eat'.able, fit to eat. Eatables, things to eat or for food.

Edible, ē'dī.b'l, possible to be eaten.

("Eatable" means suitable for food; "Edible," possible to be eaten, but not ordinarily used as food.)

To eat one's words, to retract them. The idea is from Proverbs xxvi. 11.

Old English etan, to eat; pres. tense ic ete, past ēt, past part eten.

"Edible," Latin edilis (ēdo, to eat).

Eaves (no sing.), ēvz, the part of the roof which overhangs the walls. Eavesdropp'-er, a sneak who listens surreptitiously to what is said in private; eavesdropp'-ing.

Old English efese, eaves; v. efes[ian], to make eaves; efes dropa.

Ebb (noun and verb), (14 monosyllables not ending in f, l, or s, double the final letter: viz., add, odd; burr, err; bitt, butt; ebb, egg; buzz and whizz); ebbed (1 syl.), ebb-ing. The reflux of the tide. The contrary of flow or flood, as ebb-tide, flood-tide, ebb and flow.

Old English ebba or ebbe, v. ebb[ian], past ebbode, past part, ebbod.

Ebony, ēb'ō.ny, a tree, the wood of the tree.

Ebonise, ēb'ō.nize, to make black like ebony; eb'onised (3 syl.), eb'onis-ing (Rule xix.), eb'on (adj.)

(The "o" of these words is a blunder. It should be "c.")

French ébène, v. ébéner, ébénier, the tree; Latin ebēnus, the tree; ebēnum, the wood; Greek ebénós, ebéninos (adj.)

Ebriety. (See Inebriety.)

Ebullition, e'būl.lish'.un, the operation or state of boiling.

French ébullition; Latin ebullitio, v. ebullio, to boil.

Ec- (the Greek suffix ek, before "c," and in one example eccentric, it represents the Latin ex.)

Ecarte, a.kàr'.tay (French), a game at cards.

Ecce Homo, ĕk'.se ho'.mo (not ĕk'.ke), a picture of Christ crowned with thorns, when Pilate said to the people, "Ecce Homo" (Behold the man).

Eccentric, ĕk.sĕn'.trĭk, strange in manner, deviating from what is customary; eccentric, ĕk.sĕn'.tri.kăl; eccentrically; eccentricity, ĕk'.sĕn'.trĭs".i.ty.

(This is the only Latin word in which "ex" is changed to ec, but there are above thirty examples of "ex" before e. It would therefore be better to abolish this solecism, altho' sanctioned by the authority of the Lat. "eccentricus.")

French excentrique, excentricité; Latin ex centrum (out of the centre).

Ecclesiastes, ĕk.klē'.sĭ.ăs".i.tĕe, one of the books of the Old Testament, also called The Preacher, from the introductory sentence, "The words of the Preacher," i. l.

Ecclesiasticus, ĕk.klē'.sĭ.ăs".ti.kŭs, a book of the Apocrypha.

Ecclesiastic, ĕk.klē'.sĭ.ăs".tĭk, a person in "holy orders"; ecclesiastical, ĕk.klē'.sĭ.ăs".ti.kăl (adj.); ecclesiastical-ly.

French ecclésiastique; Latin ecclēsiastes, a preacher; ecclēsiasticus; Greek ekklesiastēs, ekklesiastikōs (ekklesia, the church).

Echinus, e.kĭ'.nŭs (not ech'i.nus), the sea-urchin, &c., a mollusc

Echinate, ĕk'.i.nate, set with bristles. Echinite, ĕk'.i.nite, a fossil of the chalk formation. (-ate = "full of;" -ite (in Geo.) means "fossil," "stone," Greek lithos).

Echinordea, ĕk'.a.nor".de.ah, the family of radiā'ta which contains sea-urchins, &c.

Echinoderm, plu. echinoderms or echinodermata, e.kĭ'.no.derm, e.kĭ'.no der".ma.tah, a class of radiā'ta resembling star-fish and sea-urchins.

Latin echĭnus, a sea-urchin; Greek ēchĭnōs.

Echo, plu. echoes, ĕk'.o, ĕk'.oze ("o" slightly aspirated), Rule xlii. To echo, ec'hoes, ec'hoed (2 syl.), ec'ho-ing (Rule xix.); echometer, ĕk.ōm'.e.tĕr, an instrument for measuring the distances and intervals of echoes; echometry.

French écho; Latin ēcho; Greek ēchō (ēché, a sound).

Eclaircissement, a.klair'.sese.mah'n (Fr.) not eclairishment, the clearing up of a plot or any other romantic adventure.

Eclat, a'.klàh' (French), applause, renown.

Eclectic, ĕk.lĕk'.tĭk, one who adopts the best parts of different systems; eclectic or eclectical, ĕk.lĕk'.tĭ.kăl (adj.); eclectical-ly; eclecticism, ĕk.lĕk'.ti.sĭzm.

French éclectique, éclatisme; Latin eclecta, things selected; Greek ekléktōs (ek légo, to pick out).

Eclipse, ĕ.klĭps' (n. and v.); eclipsed' (2 syl.), eclips'ing (R. xix.)

Ecliptic, ĕ.klĭp'.ĭk, the apparent annual path of the sun through the heavens. So called because the moon to be eclipsed must be near this hypothetical path.

French éclipse, v. éclipser, écliptique; Latin eclipsis, eclipticus; Greek ēkleipsis (ek leipo, to leave out).

Eclogue, plu. eclogues, ĕk'.lŏg, ĕk'.lŏgz, a pastoral poem.

(The French termination of this word is foolish, seeing we have discarded this very un-English ending in a host of other words, and "log" is all-sufficient.)

French éclogue; Latin ecloga; Greek ēklōgē (ek lego, to pick out).

Economy, plu. economies, e.kŏn'.o.mĭz, careful expenditure of money. Political economy, the way of ruling a people so as to increase their wealth. Vegetable or Animal Economy, the usual operations of nature in the growth, preservation, and propagation of vegetables or animals.

Econom'ics, the science of household management.

Econom'ic or economical, e'.ko.nŏm''i.kal; economical-ly.

Economise, e.kŏn'.o.mĭze, to manage household matters with frugality; econ'omised (4 syl.), econ'omis-ing (Rule xix.), econ'omis-er (Rule xxxi.), economist, e.kŏn'.o.mĭst.

French économique, économiste, v. économiser, économie; Latin oecōnōmia, oecōnōmicus; Greek oikonomēō, to manage a household; oikōnōmia, management of a house; oikōnōmīkōs, ta oikōnōmika, economies; oikōnōmōs, economist. (There is no such Greek word as oikonomizo.) "Economy" is that frugal and careful expenditure of money which is shown in a well-managed household.

Ecstasy, plu. ecstasies (not ex- and not -ey, -cies). It is the Greek ek and stasis (a standing out [of oneself]). So apostasy is the Greek apo stasis (a standing off from [the faith]). Ecstasy, a trance, rapture, a fit.

(It is not the Latin "ex-," but the Greek "ek-," which is always written ec-. The last syl. is not -kis [-cis], but -sis.)

Ecstatic, ĕk.stăt'.ĭk; ecstatical, ĕk.stăt'.i.kăl; ecstat'ical-ly, rapturously, in an ecstatic manner.

The French forms of these words should be carefully avoided; they are extasié, extatique, part Latin and part Greek.

Latin ecstasis; Greek ekstasis, ekstatikōs.

Ecumenic or ecumenical [Council], e.ku.mĕn'.ĭk, e.ku.mĕn'.i.kăl, a general [council of the Roman Catholics].

Fr. ecuménique; Gk. oikoumēnikōs (oikoumēnē, the habitable world).

Eczema, ĕk'.zĕ.mah, a skin eruption, without fever.

Greek ēk zēma, a boiling out (zēō, to seethe).

-ed, the suffix of the past tense and past part. of verbs of the weak conj. Old English -od, -ed, Latin -et[um] or -āt[um]. In adj. it denotes the "subject of some action," as renown-ed the subject of "renown."

§ When added to a word ending in -d or -t it forms a distinct syl., as aid'-ed (2 syl.), pound'-ed (2 syl.), fit'-ed (2 syl.)

§ When followed by -ly or -ness, it generally forms a distinct syl., as confused (2 syl.), confusedly (con.fu.zed.ly, 4 syl.), blessed (1 syl.), bless.ed.ness (3 syl.)

Edacious, e.day'shūs, voracious; eda'cious-ly, eda'cious-ness; edacity, e.dās'.i.ty, voracity.

Latin edāctas, edax, gen. edācis (gluttonous).

Eddish, ēd'ish, aftermath, the grass which serves for pasture after the main crop has been removed.

Old English edisc, the aftermath, -isc converts verbs and adjectives into nouns. Ed is a corruption of et[an], to eat, hence ed-isc or et-isc, food or [grass] fit for pasturage.

Eddy, plu. eddies, ēd'.dīz, a whirl of wind or water, to form a whirl, &c.; ed'dies (third person singular, present tense); eddied, ēd'.dēd; ed'dy-ing.

Old English ethu or ythu, a wave or flood (cihan or ythian, to flow).

Edentate, plu. edentata, e.dēn'.tate, e.dēn.tay'.tah, animals like the sloth, armadillo, and anteater, which have no incisive teeth; eden'tāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), without front teeth.

French édenté; Latin edentatio, extraction of teeth, edentatus, e[ex]dentes, without teeth.

Edge (1 syl.), noun and verb. Hedge (1 syl.), noun and verb.

Edg'-ing (R. xix.), making edges, edge-trimming, outside row;

Hedg'-ing (Rule xix.), making or trimming a hedge.

Edged (1 syl.), having an edge, sharp;

Hedged (1 syl.), inclosed with a hedge.

Edge-less, without an edge. Hedge-less, without a hedge.

To edge in, to insinuate something into, to get in;

To hedge in, to surround with a hedge.

Edgewise (2 syl.), not edgeways.

Old English wis[an], direction, manner.

To edge on, a corruption of egg-on.

Old English egg[ian], to incite, to urge on.

Old English ecg, an edge; ecged, edged, sharpened; Welsh hogi, to sharpen; hogiad, a sharpening; hogal, a whetstone.

"Hedge," Old English hege, a fence; hege-rowe, a hedge-row.
(The d is interpolated in both cases.)

Edible, e'.dī.b'l, capable of being made food; Eatable, fit or suitable for food. Edibles, e'.dī.b'lz, things which may serve for food; Eatables, foods.

"Edible," Latin edēre, to eat; edilis or edulis, edulium, food.

"Eatable," Old English et[an], to eat, and -able.

Edict, a decree, a proclamation. (Latin edictum, e-dico.)

Edify, ĕd' i. fy, to instruct; edifies, ĕd' i. fize; edified, ĕd' i. fide; ed'ifi-er (R. xi.); edification, ĕd' i. fi. kay'' shun; ed'ify-ing.

Edifice, plu. edifices (Rule xxxiv.), ĕd' i. f'is, ed' i. f'is. ĭz, buildings. Applied to large public buildings.

French édification, édifice, v. édifier; Latin œdificatio, œdificium, œdificāre (œdes facio, to make a building).

Edile, ĕ' dīle, an officer of ancient Rome; edile-ship, office of edile. (-ship, Old English suffix = "office of.") Latin œdilis. This officer had charge of the streets and public buildings, supervised the sewers, weights and measures, plays and processions; regulated the price of food, &c. (œdes, sing., temple).

Edit, ĕd' ĭt, to revise a book for republication; ed'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ed'it-ing.

Ed'itor, (not -er), fem. ed'itress or ed'itor; one who revises a book for republication, one who controls the literary part of a periodical or serial; ed'itor-ship, office of editor. (-ship, Old English suffix meaning "office of.")

Edition, e. dīsh' on, a reprint of a book. An edition consists of no definite number of copies. In novels about 500, in school books about 2,000, in popular reprints about 10,000, in newspapers about 20,000, while in books of doubtful sale 100 copies, would be fair average numbers. In large reprints it is usual to state the number of copies an edition covers, as "31st edition, 157th thousand."

French éditeur, édition; Latin editio, editor, v. ēdo, supine editum, to publish. (Note—ēdo, to eat, has e short.)

Educate, ĕd' u. kate, to teach; ed'ucāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), ed'ucāt-ing (Rule xix.), ed'ucāt-or (not er, Rule xxxvii.); education, ed' u. kay'' shun; ed'uca'tion-al; ed'uca'tional-ly.

French éducation; Latin educatio, educator, educāre, supine educatum, to teach (educāre, to pilot forth).

It is curious to trace the ideas represented by words used to signify education. For example:

To edify (Lat. œdes facio), to "make a temple" of the body.

To instruct (Lat. instruo), to "cram" or "pile up" in the mind.

To educate (Latin e-ducāre, ducātor), to "pilot forth" the mind, or guide it safely through the dangers which beset it.

To train (Lat. traho), to "draw" or "drag" out the powers.

To teach (Anglo-Saxon tæcan), technical education, "to show" or teach by "showing" how things are to be done.

To learn (Ang.-Sax. læran, lār), to obtain "lore" or wisdom.

To inform (Latin informo), to "form in" the mind.

Tuition (Lat. tueor), to put the mind in a state of "defence."

School (Greek) "spare time."

Educe, e.dūse', to extract, to bring to light; educed' (2 syl.), educ'-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin educēre (not the same verb as "educate," educāre) (e-dūco, to lead forth, to draw out).

-ee (Fr. suffix), denoting the object of some action: as legatee, the object of a legacy; payee, one to whom money is paid.

Eel, heel, heal, ell, hell.

Eel, ēle (1 syl.), a fish. (Old English ēl, an eel.)

Heel, hēle (1 syl.), part of the foot. (Old English hēl.)

Heal, hēle (1 syl.), to cure. (Old English hēl[an].)

Ell = l, a measure of length. (Old English eln.)

Hell, the place of future torment. (Old English hell.)

Every word (except eager, eagle, and hearse) beginning with ea-, ce-, hea-, and hec- is Anglo-Saxon.

E'en, ēne (1 syl.), contraction of the adv. even.

-eer (Fr. suffix -ier, -ieur, termination of nouns), denotes one employed for or on a work, as engineer.

E'er, ere, air, are, ear, hear, here, hair, hare, heir, year.

E'er, air, contraction of ever. (Old English efre or æfer.)

Ere, air, before in time. (Old English ær, before.)

Air, air, atmosphere. (Latin aer, the atmosphere.)

Are, ār (to rhyme with far). (Norse plu. of Ang-Sax. beó.)

Ear, ēr, organ of hearing. (Old English eare and ear.)

Hear, hēr, to apprehend with the "ear." (Old Eng. hȳr[an].)

Here, hēr, in this place. (Old English hēr.)

Hair (1 syl., to rhyme with air), of the head. (Old Eng. hær.)

Hare, hair, an animal. (Old English hara.)

Heir, air, the next male successor. (Latin hæres.)

Year, yēr, a period of twelve months. (Old English gear.)

-ef (Latin prefix for ex-) before the letter -f.

Every word beginning with eff- (except effendi) is from the Latin.

Efface, ef.fase' (not e.fase'), to strike out, to rub out; effaced' (2 syl.), effac'-ing (R. xix.), effac'-er, efface'-able (-ce and -ge retain the final -e before -able), efface'-ment (only five words drop the final -e before -ment).

French effacer, effaçable; Latin ex facies, [rubbed] from the surface.

Effect (noun and verb), ef.fect' (not e.fect'), the result, the outcome of a cause, influence, to accomplish.

Affect, to assume, to move the affections;

Effects, chattels; in effect, really, in reality.

Effected, ef.fēk'.ted, accomplished;

Affected, af.fēk'.ted, moved in the heart, artificial.

- Effect'-ing, accomplishing; Affect'-ing, pathetic.
 Effect'-er, better effect-or; effect'-ible (not -able).
 Effective, ef.fèk'.tiv; effective-ly, effective-ness.
 Effectual, ef.fèk'.tu.al; effectual-ly.
 Effectuate, ef.fèk'.tu.ate, to accomplish, to bring to pass;
 effectuat'-ed (Rule xxxv.), effectuat'-ing (Rule xix.)
 Efficacious, èf'.fi.kay''.shus, producing the effect expected;
 effica'cious-ly, effica'cious-ness.
 Efficacy, plu. efficacies, èf'.fi.ka.sy, èf'.fi.ka.siz (R. xlv.)
 Efficient, èf'.fish.ent; efficient-ly, efficient-ness.
 Efficiency, èf'.fish'ense; efficiency, èf'.fish'en.sy.
 French effet, efficace, effectuer, efficacité, efficient; Latin effectio, effector, effectum, efficacitas, efficax, gen. efficacis, v. efficio (ef [ex] facio, to make out of).
 Effeminate, èf'.fém'.i.nate (adj. and verb), womanish, feeble, to make womanish; effem'inat'-ed (R. xxxvi.), effem'inat'-ing
 (R. xix.), effem'inat'-or, effem'inate-ly, effem'inate-ness;
 effeminacy, plu. effeminacies, èf'.fém'.i.na.siz.
 French effemine; v. effeminer; Latin effeminatus, effeminatio (femina, a woman).
 Effendi (Master), a Turkish title which follows a proper name, about equal to our Esq., as "Ali Effendi."
 Effervesce, èf'.fèr.vès', to froth up; effervesced' (3 syl.), effervesc'-ing (R. xix.); effervescence, èf'.fèr.vès'.sense;
 effervescent, èf'.fèr.vès'.sènt; effervesc'-ible.
 French effervescence, effervescent; Latin effervescens, gen. effervescentis, effervescentia, effervesco (incept. of efferveo, to grow hot).
 Effete, èf'.fèet', worn out, sterile. (Lat. effētus; fætus, offspring.)
 Efficacious, èf'.fi.kay.shus; efficacy, &c. (See Effect.)
 Effigy, plu. effigies, èf'.fi.je, èf'.fi.jiz, one's representation.
 To burn (or hang) in effigy, to burn (or hang) the image.
 French effigie; Latin effigia, v. effigiare (figo, to fashion).
 Efflorescent, èf'.flo.rès'.sent, flowering; efflorescence, èf'.flo-rès'.sense. (-sc- denotes inceptive action.)
 Effluvia, plu. (the sing. effluvium is not much used), èflu'.vi.äh, exhalation, the disagreeable smells which rise from ill-drainage and putrefying matters.
 Effluent, ef'.flu.ent; effluence, ef'.flu.ence.
 French effluence, effluent, effluve; Latin effluvium, effluentia (ef [ex] fluens, flowing out from).
 Effort, ef'.fort, endeavour, exertion; ef'fort-less.
 French effort; Latin ef [ex] fortis, the strong [thing] put forth.
 Effrontery, ef''.frön.tèrry (not e.fron'.te.ry), impudence.
 French effronterie; Latin ef [ex] fronte, out-countenancing.

Effulgence, ef.fūl'jence, lustre, splendour; effulgency, plu.-cies, ef.fūl'jěn.siz; effulgent, ef.fūl'jěnt; effulgent-ly.

Latin effulgens, gen. effulgentis (ef [ex] fulgeo, to shine out).

Effusion, ef.fū'.zhun, a spilling [of blood]; effusive, ef.fū'.ziv; effusive-ly; effuse, ef.fuze'; effused (2 syl.), effūs-ing.

French effusion; Latin effusio, effundo, sup. effusum, to pour out.

Eft or efet, ef'.ět, a newt or small lizard.

Old English efete. In Sussex, &c., called efet by the peasantry.

Eftsoons (only used in poetry), soon, soon after.

Old English eft-sōna, soon after.

Egg, one of the 14 monosyllables (not ending in f, l, or s) with the final consonant doubled (Rule vii.)

To egg (followed by on), to incite; egged, egd; egg-ing.

"Egg" (noun), Old English æg: æges hwite, the white of an egg.

"Egg" (verb), Latin egg[ian], to incite.

Eglantine, eg'.lān.tine, the sweet briar.

Fr. églantier, the tree; églantine, the flower; Lat. rosa eglanteria.

Egotist, eg'.o.tist, one who talks about himself; egoist, eg'.o.ist, one who believes nothing to be certain except that he himself exists.

Egotism, eg'.o.tizm, the habit of self-praise; egoism, eg'.o.-izm, the faith of an egoist.

Egotistic or egotistical, eg'.o.tis'.tik; eg'.o.tis''.ti.kāl, self-conceited; egotistical-ly; eg'otise, eg'otised, eg'otis-ing.

French égoïsme, égoïste; Latin ego, I (-ist Greek suffix "one who," -ism Greek suffix "system.")

Egregious, e.grē'.jē.us, supereminent (in a bad sense).

Egre'gious-ly, egre'gious-ness.

Latin egrēgius (e grēge [lectus], picked out of the flock).

Egress, e'.gress, act or right of departing. Ingress, the act or right of entering; egression, e.grēs'k'.un; ingression.

Latin egressus, egressio, v. egrēdior (e [ex] gradior, to walk out).

Egret, e'.grēt, a small white heron. (French aigrette.)

So called from the "aigrette" or plume in the head.

Egyptian, e.jīp'.shun, adj. of Egypt, Egyptian language;

Egyptology, ē.jīp.tōl''.o.jy, study of the archaeology of Egypt; Egyptologist, e'.jīp.tōl''.o.gist.

French egyptienne; Latin Ægyptius, Ægyptus; Greek Aiguptós.

Eh = a? interrogative of doubt. Is it not so?

Ah = r! exclamation of pain, surprise, &c.

Hey? What is it you say?

Ha, hāh! take care. Ha! ha! laughter.

Heigh-ho, hay.ho or hī.hō! expresses weariness.

He! or he! he! expresses scorn.

Eider [down], i'.der (not ē'.der), down of the eider duck.

German eider; French eider, édredon, eider-down.

Eight, ate, a number. Ait, ate, a river-island. Ate (1 syl.), past tense of eat. Hate, to dislike.

Eighteen, ate'.teen; eighteenth, ate'.teenth; eighteen-mo, plu. eighteen-mos (R. xlii.), ate'.teen'.moze. -mo is the last syl. of decim (ten) added to the English teen' (ten).

Either, ē'.thēr. Ether, ē'.rhēr (a volatile liquid).

Either, ē'.thēr, one of two, correlative of or.

Neither, nē'.thēr, not either, correlative of nor.

Each, ēch, both one and the other of two articles.

§ It is wrong to use either when the choice lies between more than two things.

§ Either you or I am wrong; Either you or I are wrong (?). Either you or I are wrong is the better grammar, that is, either you or I [we] are wrong [one of us]; but custom has sanctioned the rule, that the verb is to agree with the noun or pronoun nearest it: "Either you [are wrong] or I am wrong." Similarly, "Either you [...] or he is wrong;" "Either he [...] or you are wrong." In French, the same construction is observed with or, &c., as with and. "Either," Old Eng. ægther. "Neither," Old Eng. nathor or náther.

Ejaculate, e.jäk'.u.late, to call out; ejac'ulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ejac'ulāt-ing, ejac'ulāt-or; ejaculation, e.jäk'.u.lay''shun, vociferation; ejaculatory, e.jäk'.u.la.t'ry.

French éjaculer, éjaculation, éjaculatoire, éjaculateur.

Latin ejaculatio, ejaculāre (e jactūlo, to hurl out).

Eject', to cast out; eject'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), eject'-ing, eject'-or (Rule xxxvii.); ejection, e.jëk'.shun; eject-ment (in Law), a writ to recover possession of land.

Latin ejectio, ejector, eicio, supine ejectum (e jacio, to throw out).

Eke (1 syl.), to add; (noun), a piece added to a hive to hoist it and increase its capacity, (adverb) likewise; ekes, ëkz; eked (1 syl.), ek-ing (Rule xix.), ë'.king.

Old English ede, likewise; edca, an addition; edc[an], to eke.

*el, -eel, (Latin el[is], belonging to, capable of: cru-el, belonging to the cru[de], raw or fierce; hôt-el, belonging to the hôte or host; genteel, belonging to the gentry [gens].

-el (Latin ell[us] diminutive), lib-el, a little book (liber, a book).

Elaborate, e.lüb'.o.rate (adj. and verb), highly finished, complicated, to bestow much labour on; elab'orāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), elab'orāt-ing (R. xix.) elab'orāt-or, elab'orate-ness (R. xvii.), elab'orate-ly; elaboration, e.lüb'.o.ray''shun.

Fr. élaborer, élaboration; Lat. eläbörätio, eläbörätor, eläböräre (labor).

Elain or Elaine, e.lay'ân (3 syl., not e.lane' nor e.lay'ine), the liquid principle of oils and fats. Also written Olein and Oleine, ol'.e.ân. The fatty principle is Stearine, stê'.a.rîn.

"Elain," Greek elaion, olive-oil (elaia, the olive-tree).

"Olein," Latin oleum, oil with the termination -ine, which denotes a simple substance, as chlorine.

"Stearine," Greek stêar, suet, hard fat.

Elapse, e.läps, to intervene, to pass away; elapsed, elapst'; elaps'-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin elapsio, eläbor, supine elapsum (e [ex] labor, to slip away).

Elastic, e.läs'.tik, resilient; elastical, e.las'.ti.käl; elastical-ly; elasticity, e.läs'.tis''si.ty, resiliency.

French elastique, élasticité; Greek elastón, to draw out.

Elate, e.late', to puff up; elät'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elät'-ed-ly, elät'-ing (Rule xix.); elation (not elasion), e.lay'shun (not a French word), joy and pride of success.

Latin elätio (e [ex] fero, suf. e [ex] lätum, to carry out [of oneself]).

Elbow, ël'.bô, the joint of the arm between the shoulder and wrist, a turn like the arm bent, to push or jostle;

Elbowed, ël'.bode; el'bow-ing; el'bow-room, ample room.

At your elbow, close at hand.

Out at elbows, shabby, reduced in circumstances.

Old Eng. elnboga, the elbow (eln boga, bow of the arm; Lat. ulna).

Elder, ël'.dêr, a tree, a ruler of the Presbyterian church, a senior.

Eld, old. Eld, an old person (noun); old, aged (adj.)

El'der, prior in years; Older, more aged.

El'dest, first born; Oldest, most aged.

Elder and eldest have no relation to number of years, the eldest born may or may not have lived more years than the youngest. Thus "my youngest son is now twenty, his eldest brother, or my eldest son, died in infancy." Similarly: "his elder brother died in infancy," the number of days or years that the child lived is beside the question. Elder and eldest refer to priority of years; older and oldest to duration.

"Elder" [tree], corruption of Ellar. Old Eng. ellarn, the elder-tree.

"Elder" (senior). Old English eald, old; cald (an elder), yltra (comp.), yldeste (super.)

El Dorado, el do.ràh'.dô or el do.ray'.dô, a country of fabulous wealth. The country which Orellana, lieutenant of Pizarro pretended to have discovered in South America.

Spanish el dorado, the golden [country].

Elecampane, ël'.e.käm'.pain, the plant hêlén'ium. So called, says Pliny 21, 33, because it is feigned to have sprung from Helen's tears. The French call it œil de cheval.

Latin inûla (for hêlén'ium) campâna, Helen's bell-flower.

Elect, e.lĕkt', to choose. The elect, those who are chosen.

Elect'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elect'-ing, elect'-or, fem. elect'ress, one who has a right of electing, one elected to rule in a German electorate; elec'tor-al.

Election, e.lĕk'.shun; electioneer, e.lĕk'.shun-er', to use exertion to promote the election of an M.P., &c.

Elec'tioneer'-ing; elec'tioneer'-er, one who electioneers.

Elective, e.lĕk'.tiv; elec'tive-ly; electorate, e.lĕk'.to.rate.

Elite, a.leet', the flower of society. (See Eligible.)

French élection, électif, électoral, électorat, électeur, électress, élite.

Latin electio, elector, eligo (e-lego, to pick out).

Electricity, plu. electricities, e'.lĕk.tris''i.tiz; elec'tric or elec'trical (adj.), elec'trical-ly; electrician, e'.lĕk.trish'.an, one skilled in the science of electricity;

Electrify, e.lĕk'.tri.fy; electrifies, e.lĕk'.tri.fize; electrified, e.lĕk'.tri.fide; elec'trify-ing (Rule xi.); electrifiable, e.lĕk'.tri.fi''.a.b'l; electrification, e.lĕk'.tri.fi.kay''shun;

Electrise, e.lĕk'.trize; elec'trised (3 syl.), elec'tris-ing (R. xix.), elec'tris-er; electrisation, e.lĕk'.tri.zay''shun; elec'tris-able (these are French forms, Rule xxxi.)

Electrine, e.lĕk.trĕn, pertaining to amber.

Latin electrum, amber; -ine (-inus), pertaining to.

Electrode, e.lĕk'.trode, the direction of the electric stream.

Greek ēlektrōn and hōdos, the road or way [of the electric stream].

Electrolysis, e'.lĕk.trōl''.i.sis, decomposition effected by electricity. (Greek ēlektrōn and lusis, dissolution.)

Electrolyte, e.lĕk'.tro.lite, a substance which can be decomposed by electricity; elec'trolyt'ic.

Greek ēlektrōn and luomai, to be loosened or decomposed.

Electrophorus, e.lĕk'.trōf''.ō.rus (not e.lĕk'.tro.fō''.rus), an instrument for collecting or condensing electricity.

Greek ēlektrōn and phōreo, to convey or carry [electricity].

Electroscope, e.lĕk'.trō.skope, an instrument for taking the existence, character, and force of electricity; electroscopic or electroscopical, e.lĕk'.tro.skōp''.i.kāl (adj.)

Greek ēlektrōn and skōpōo, to survey, to examine [electricity].

Electrotype, e.lĕk'.trō.tipe, a deposited metallic impression obtained by electro-galvanism.

Greek ēlektrōn tūpos, a type or image [obtained by electricity].

Electrum, better electron, e.lĕk'.trōn, a natural alloy.

Electro-, -chemistry, -biology, -dynam'ics, -mag'netism, -metal'lurgy, -plā'ting.

Electrometer, e.lĕk.trōm'.e.tĕr, an instrument for measuring the tension or quantity of electric fluid; electromet'rical.

Greek ēlektrōn and mētrōn, a metre or measure [of electricity].

French électrique, électricité, électrisable, électrisation, électriser, électromètre, électrophore, électroscope; Latin electrum; Greek ēlektrōn, amber. Thales (B.C. 600) noticed the electrical property of rubbed amber in attracting small substances.

Electuary, plu. electuaries, e.lĕk'.tu.a.rĭz, an opiate confection.

Latin electuarius; Greek ek leicho, to lick up.

Eleemosynary, e'.e.e.mōs''.i.nĕr ry (seven syllables, not six).

Latin eleēmosynarius, eleēmosynaria, an almoner; Greek ēlēmosunē, pity (ēleō, to have pity).

Elegance, ĕl'.e.gance; el'egant, el'egant-ly; elegancies (no sing.), ĕl'.e.gān.sĭz, embellishments.

Fr. élégance, élegant; Lat. elĕgans, elĕgantia (e-lego, to pick out).

Elegy, plu. elegies, ĕl'.e.gĭz, a funeral or mournful song; elegiac, ĕl.ejĭ.āk (not el.ĕ.jĭ.āk); el'egist, one who writes elegies.

Elegise, ĕl'.e.jize (Rule xxxii.), el'egised, el'egis-ing.

Fr. élegie, élegiaque; Lat. elĕgia, elĕgiacus (Gk. elĕgeia, elĕgeiōs).

Element, ĕl'.e.ment, an uncompounded or simple body; el'emental, pertaining to first principles; elemen'tary, rudimentary.

The elements (of Aristotle), fire, air, earth, and water; (of alchemists) salt, sulphur, and mercury.

Out of one's element, out of one's sphere.

French élément, élémentaire; Latin elementum, elementarius.

Elemi, ĕl'.ĕ.my (not e.leē'my), a resinous substance brought from Ethiopia; elemine, ĕl'.e.mĭn, the crystallised resin of elemi sometimes used in lacquer.

French élémi; Italian, Spanish, &c., elemi.

Elephant, (male) bull elephant, (fem.) cow elephant.

Elephantine, ĕl'.e.fūn'tĭn, very large, pertaining to elephants; elephantoid, ĕl'.e.fān'toid or elephantoidal, ĕl'.e.fūn'toid'.āl, having the form of an elephant.

Elephantiasis, ĕl'.e.fūn.tĭ'.a.sĭs, a disease affecting the legs and feet which swell and look rough like an elephant's.

French éléphant, éléphantiasis, éléphantin; Latin elephantiacus, elephantiasis, elephantus; Greek elēphas.

Elevate, ĕl'.e.vate, to raise up; el'evāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), el'evāt-ing (Rule xix.), el'evāt-or, el'evātory; elevation, ĕl'.e.vay''shun, height, exaltation.

French élever, élévation, élevateur, élévatoire; Latin elevatio, elevare (e-levō, to raise from a lower state).

Eleven, e.lĕv'.en (a numeral); eleventh, e.lĕv'.enth (an ordinal), eleventh-ly (adv.).

Old English endleof, eleven; endlyfta or endlefta, the eleventh.

Elf, plu. elves (not elfs). Nouns in -lf make the plural by changing -f into -ves, as "elf" elves, "self" selves, "shelf" shelves, "calf" calves, "half" halves, "wolf" wolves (Rule xxxviii.)

Elfin, el'fin; el'fish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); el'fish-ly, el'fish-ness, elf-lock.

Old English elf, plu. elfas, elfen; French elf and elfe, plu. elfes.

Elgin marbles, el.gin (-gin as in "begin"), Greek sculptures in the British Museum collected by Lord Elgin.

Elicit, e.lis'it, to draw out; elicit-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elicit-ing; elicitation, e.lis'.i.tay''shun (not French).

Latin elicitatio, elicio, supine elictum (e [ex] lacio, to lure out).

Elide, e.lide', to "strike out" a vowel or syllable; elid'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elid'-ing (Rule xix.); elision, e.lizh'.un.

Fr. élider, élision; Lat. elasio, elidens, elidō, sup. elisum (e [ex] lādo).

Eligible, el'.i.ji.b'l, suitable, qualified; el'igibly; eligible-ness, el'.i.ji.b'l.ness; eligibility, el'.i.ji.bil''.i.ty, suitability.

French éligible; Latin eligo (e [ex] lēgo, to pick out).

Eliminate, e.lim'.inate, to cast out, to get rid of; elim'ināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elim'ināt-ing (Rule xix.), elimination, e.lim'.i.nay''shun, rejection, a getting rid of.

French élimination, éliminer; Latin elimīnatio, elimīnāre (e [ex] līmen, [to turn] out of doors).

Elision, e.lizh'.un. (See Elide.)

Elite, a.leet', the "pick" of society, the best men of the army.

French élite; Latin electus (e [ex] lēgo, to pick out).

Elixir, e.lix'.ir, a compound tincture; elix'ate, to extract by boiling; elix'at-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elix'at-ing (Rule xix.); elixation, e'.lix.ā''shun, decoction into tincture.

Fr. élixir ("elixation" is not Fr.); Latin elixir, elixāre, to seethe.

Elizabethan, e.liz'.a.beeth''.an, the style in vogue in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. (Chiefly applied to architecture.)

Elk, a moose-deer. (Old English elch.)

El, L, hell, eel, heel, heal.

El, a measure of length; L, one of the four liquids.

Hell, the place of future torment. (Old English hell.)

Eel, ēle (1 syl.), a fish. (Old English ēl.)

Heel, part of the foot. (Old English hēl.)

Heal, hēle (1 syl.), to cure. (Old English hēl[an].)

Ellipse, plu. ellipses, el.lips', el.lip'.sez (not e.lips', an oval figure).

Ellipsis, plu. ellipses, el.lip'.sis, &c. (not e.lip'.sis, &c.)

Ellip'tic or ellip'tical, pertaining to an ellipse;

Ecliptic, ek.lip'.tik, the apparent annual path of the sun.

Ellip'tical-ly (not e.lip'.ti.käl.ly).

Ellipsoid, e.lip'.soid, a solid figure formed by the revolution of an ellipse about its axis. (Gk. elleipsis eidos, ellipse-like.)

Ellipsoidal, e'.lips oi''däl, adj. of ellipsoid.

Ellipsograph, e.lip'.so.gräf, an instrument for describing a semi-ellipse. (Gk. elleipsis grapho, to describe.)

French ellipse, ellipsoïde, elliptique, ellipticité; Latin ellipsis; Greek elleipsis, a defect (el leipo, to leave behind).

Elm (1 syl., not e'l'm), a tree. (Old English elm; Latin ulmus.)

Elocution, ē'l.o.kū''shun, oratory; elocution-ist, a teacher of elocution; elocutionary, ē'l.o.kū''shun.a.ry;

Eloquent, ē'l.o.quent; eloquent-ly; eloquence, oratory.

French élocution, éloquence, éloquent; Latin elocutio, elöquium, elöquentia, elöquens, gen. elöquentis, v. elöquor, to speak out.

Elongate, e.lön'.gate, to extend; elon'gät-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elon'gät-ing; elongation, e'.lön.gay''shun.

Fr. elongation (term in Astron.), the angle at the earth made by a line drawn to the sun and some other planet; Lat. elongäre (longus).

Elope, ē.lope', to run away with a man with the view of marrying him, without the consent of parents or guardians; eloped' (2 syl.), elöp'-ing (R. xix.); elopement. ē.lope'mënt.

German entlaufen, to run away; entlaufung, elopement.

Eloquent, eloquent-ly; eloquence. (See Elocution.)

Else (1 syl.), besides, otherwise, other person or thing; elsewhere. Old English elles, else; elles-hwær, elsewhere.

Elucidate, e.lū'.si.date, to make clear, to explain; elu'cidät-ed, elu'cidät-ing, elu'cidät-or, elu'cidätory; elucidation, e.lū'.si.day''shun; elucidative, e.lū'.si.day.tiv.

French élucider, élucidation; Latin elucidatio, elucidäre (lux, light).

Elude, e.lude', to evade, to escape; elüd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), elüd'-ing (Rule xix.), elüd'-er, elüd'-ible;

Delude', to deceive, delüd'-ed, delüd'-ing, delüd'-er.

Elusion, e.lū'.shun, evasion. Delu'sion, deception.

Elusive, e.lū'.siv, evasive; elu'sive-ly. Delu'sive, deceptive.

Elusory, e.lū'.sö.ry, unreal; elu'sori-ness, unreality.

Delusory, de.lū'.sö.ry, tending to deceive; delu'sori-ness.

French éluder; Latin elüsio, elüdere, sup. elüsüm (ludo, to play).

Elvan, e'l.van (in mines), a dyke of porphyritic rock crossing or interfering with the metal.

Elves, elvz, plu. of elf. (See Elf.)

Elysian, e.liz'.i.an (not e.lizh'.an nor e.lizh'.e.an).

Elysium, e.liz'.i.äm (not e.lizh'.e.äm), the abode of bliss.

(The "y" shows the word to be of Greek origin.)

Lat. Elysium, elysius (adj.); Gk. elusion (luo, to loose [from the body]).

Em- (Latin in-, French and Greek en-), a prefix before -b-, -p-, or -m-, and meaning in, into, on.

Em- (Old Eng. prefix), means "to make," "to collect into". (Much confusion arises from the slipshod use of em- and im-, but they are widely different in meaning. "Em-" (our native prefix) means to make, to collect into; but "Im-" is either the preposition in softened before b, p, and m, or else a negative joined to an adjective.)

'em, a contraction of them.

(Look under im- for words not inserted under em-.)

Emacerate or macerate, e.mas'se.rate (q.v.)

Emaciate, e.măsh'ĕ.ate, to become thin, to lose flesh; emaciated, e.măsh'ĕ.ă.tĕd (Rule xxxvi.); emaciāt-ing (Rule xix.); emaciation, e.măsh'ĕ.ă"shun, leanness.

French émacié, émaciation; Latin emaciāre (e macer, to make lean).

Emanate, em'a.nate (not eminate), to issue from; em'anā-ted (Rule xxxvi.), em'anāt-ing; emanation, em'a.nay"shun.

Fr. émaner, émanation; Lat. emānatio (e mănāre, to flow out).

Emancipate, e.măn'.si.pate, to set at liberty; eman'cipāt-ed (R. xxxvi.); eman'cipāt-ing (R. xix.), eman'cipāt-or; emancipation, e.măn'.si.pay"shun; emancipa'tionist.

Emancipist, e.măn'.si.pist, an Australian convict who has regained his liberty and become a free man.

French émanciper, émancipation; Latin emāncipatio, emancipāre. Mancipium is manu-capio, taken in the hand as a rightful possession; e-mancipium, is "delivered out of" the hand. In Rome, a father freed his son thus: He first sold him to a stranger, whereupon he lost all rights over him, and the stranger had him as a "slave-chattel." The stranger then manumitted him as he would any ordinary slave. Hence to emancipate is "to give up possession," but manumit is to "set free" (manu mittere).

Emasculate, e.măs'.ku.late, to unman; emas'culāt-ed, emas'culāt-ing, emas'culāt-or; emasculat-ion, e.măs'.ku.lay"shun.

French émasculer, émasculat-ion; Latin emascülator, emasculāre (e mas, [to remove] from the male kind).

Embalm, em.barm', to fill a dead body with spices, &c.; embalmed, em.barmed'; embalming, em.barm'ing; embalmer, em.barm'er; embalm'-ment.

Fr. embaumer, embaumeur, embaumement; Latin im [in] balſamum, [to put] balsams or balms in [a body].

Embank', to inclose or protect with a bank; embanked' (2 syl.), embank'-ing, embank'-ment.

Old English banc, a bank, and prefix em-, "to make" [a bank].

Embargo, plu. embargoes (Rule xlii.), em.bar'goze, an order to prohibit a ship's leaving port or trading for a stated time, to put this restraint on a ship; embar'goed (3 syl.), embar'go-ing. (See Quarantine.)

(Followed by on; "There is an embargo on..." "to put an embargo on..." French mettre embargo sur...)

Spanish embargo, v. embargar; French embargo.

Embark', to go or put on board ship; embarked' (2 syl.), embark'-ing; embarkation, em'.bar.kay''.shun.

(There is no reason why the "k" should be changed to c in "embarkation.")

French embarquer, embarquement ("embarkation" is not French).

Embarrass, em.bar'rās (double r and double s), to perplex; embar'assed (3 syl.), embar'rass-ment.

French embarras, embarrasser (barre, a bar).

Embassy, plu. embassies, em'.bās.siz, the charge of an ambassador, an ambassador and his suite, an express message sent officially to a foreign nation; em'bassage (3 syl.)

(It is very inconsistent to spell "ambassador" with "a" and "embassy" with "e." See Amend, Emendation.)

Fr. ambassade, ambassador; Med. Lat. ambascia; Keltic ambact, a minister; in Italian both are spelt with a, but in Spanish with e.

Embattle, em.bāt'.t'l, to put in battle array; embattled, em.-bāt'.t'ld; embattling, em.bāt'.tling;

Embat'tle-ment, an indented parapet; embat'tlement-ed or embat'tled, furnished with battlements.

Fr. embatailler; Welsh batel with em-, "to collect into" [battle array].

Embay', to enclose in a bay; embayed' (2 syl.), embay'-ing.

Old English byge, a bay; French baie, with em-, "to make."

Embed', to lay in a bed of sand, earth, &c.; embedd-ed (Rule xxxvi.), embedd'-ing (Rule i.), embed'-ment.

Old English bed or bæd, with em-, "to collect into," [a bed].

Embellish, em.bell'ish, to beautify; embell'ished (3 syl.), embell'ish-ing, embell'ish-ment, embell'ish-er.

French embellir, embellisseur, embellissement; Latin bellus, "pretty," with em-, "to make" [pretty].

Ember days, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday of Ember weeks.

Ember Weeks, corruption of German quatember, a contraction of quat' uor tem'pōra (quat'-tempor'), four times [a year], Quadragesima Sunday, Whit Sunday, Holyrood Day in September, and St. Lucia's Day in December.

Embers (no ing.), em'.berz, cinders or ashes still hot.

Old English ēmyrie, hot ashes.

Embezzle, em.bēz'.z'l, to pilfer; embezzled, em.bēz'.z'ld; embezz'ling; embezz'le-ment, embezz'ler.

Norman embeasiler or beseler, to filch.

Embitter, em.bi't.ter, to make bitter or sad; embittered, em.-bi't.terd; embitter-ing. (Not imbitter, see Em-.)

Old English biter, bitter, with em-, "to make" [bitter].

Emblazon, em.blay'zon (not em.blāz'on), to make heraldic designs, to deck in gorgeous colours, to laud, to reveal; embla'zoned (3 syl.), embla'zon-ing, embla'zon-er, embla'zon-ment, embla'zon-ry.

French blasonner, blason (German blasen, to proclaim by herald, who announced the coat armour of each knight, hence called blasenry).

Emblem, ēm.blēm, a type; emblematic or emblematical, ēm.blē.māt'ik, ēm.blē.māt'ikāl; emblematic'al-ly.

Emblemise, em'ble.mize, to represent emblematically; em'blemised (3 syl.), em'blemis-ing (Rule xix.)

French emblème, emblématique; Latin emblemata; Greek emblēma. (There is no such Greek word as emblemizo, Rule xxxii.)

Embody, em.bōd'y, to incorporate; embod'y-ing; embodied, em.bōd'id (Rule xi.); embod'i-ment.

Old English bodig, a "body," with em- "to collect into" [a body].

Embolden, em.bōwl'den, to make bold; emboldened, em.bōwl'dend; embol'den-ing, embol'den-er.

Old English bōld, with em- "to make" [bold].

Embonpoint (French), an.bō'n.pwōin', in good plight.

Emborder, em.bor'der, to adorn with a border (not emboarder); embor'dered (3 syl.), embor'der-ing.

("Border" should be hordure. It is not an agent.)

Old English bord, a border; French bordure, with em-, "to make."

Embosom, em.booz'am (not em.būz'am nor em.bōze'ann), to surround with trees; embos'omed (3 syl.), embos'om-ing. More correctly imbos'om, imbos'omed, imbos'oming.

Old English bōsm, the bosom, with im- for in, [to hold] in the bosom. To "embosom" means to "collect into the bosom," or "to make a bosom." A church is imbosomed in trees, but children embosom flowers; i.e., collect them into their bosom.

Emboss, to ornament with stamped patterns in relief; embossed' (2 syl.), emboss'-ing, emboss'er, emboss'-ment. (Not im-.)

French bosse, a "knob" or "protuberance," with em-, "to make."

Embouchure, em'boo.shure' (in French an'boo'shūr). (As the word is quite naturalised, it is mere affectation as well as wrong to call it arm- or ang'-boo-shoor'.) The mouth of a river, the opening of a chimney, &c.

Embow (not imbow) ("bow" to rhyme with grow), to make into a bow; embowed' (2 syl.), embow'-ing.

Old English beðh, anything made into a ring, hence a "bow," with em-, "to make" [a bow or bay].

Embowel, em.bōw'əl ("bow" to rhyme with now), to take out the bowels; embow'eled (3 syl.), embow'el-ing, embow'el-er, embow'el-ment, evisceration.

An ill-formed word, from Latin e [to take] "out," and the French boel, a bowel. Débovel (de privative) would be better, for embowel can only mean "to put bowels in," and not to "take them out."

Embower, em.bōw'er ("bow" to rhyme with now), to shelter with a bower; embow'ered (3 syl.), embow'er-ing.

Old English būr, "a bower," with em-, "to make" [a bower].

Embrace' (2 syl.), to hug, to clasp in the arms; embraced' (2 syl.), embrāc'-ing (R. xix.), embrāc'-er, embrace'-ment.

French embrasser, embrassement (bras, the arm, Latin brāchtum).

Embracery, em.brace'.ery, an attempt to bias a trial by bribery: Law Lat. embraccator; Law Fr. embrasour, one guilty of subornation.

Embrasure, em.bray'.zhur, an opening in a wall designed for men to shoot through at persons outside.

French embrasure, v. embraser, to fire from.

Embrocation, em'.bro.kay''.shun, a fomentation, a lotion.

Fr. embrocation; Gk. em brēcho, to foment (brēcho, to wet the surface).

Embroider, em.broy'.der, to ornament with needlework; embroidered, em.broy'.derd; embroy'der-ing, embroy'der-er, embroi'dery, ornamental needlework.

French broder, broderie; Welsh brodio, to embroider; brodiog, embroidered; brodiad, embroidery. Em- "to make" [broderie].

Embroil (2 syl.), to involve in a quarrel; embroiled' (2 syl.), embroil'-ing, embroil'-er, embroil'-ment, disturbance.

Fr. embrouiller, embrouillement (brouiller, to throw into confusion).

Embrown', to make brown; embrowned', embrown'-ing.

Old English brūn, "brown," with em- "to make" [brown].

Embrue, em.bru' (not imbrue), to stain with blood; embru'-ing (Rule xix.); embrued, em.brude'. (See Em-.)

Greek brōtos, "gore," with em- "to make" [gory].

Embryo, plu. embryos, em'.bri.oze (Rule xlii.), the rudiments of organic bodies, a crude form, (adj.) rudimentary; embryonic, em'.bri.ōn''.ik, relating to embryos; embryology, em'.bri.ōl''.o.gy, the science which treats of embryos; embriologist, em'.bri.ōl''.o.gist, one skilled in embriology.

Greek embrūon lōgōs, a discourse about embryos.

Embryotomy, em'.bri.ōt''.o.my, a Cæsarian operation.

Greek embrūon tōmē, a cutting out of an embryo or fœtus.

Em'bryo-sac, the cellular bag which contains an embryo.

(The "y" shows that these words are from the Greek, but emphon would be more correct than "embryo," which is a phonetic spelling of the French word.)

French, Spanish, Latin embryon; Italian embryone; Greek embrūōn.

Emendation, e'.mēn.day''.shūn, correction of faults; emendator, e'.mēn.da'tor; emen'datory.

Amend', to correct faults; amend'-ed (R. xxxvi.), amend'-ing, amend'-ment, amend'-able, amen'datory.

This double form of prefix is to be regretted, the "e" form is Latin, the "a" form French. A menda means "without fault" or "faultless;" e menda means "purged of faults."

Latin emendāre, to purge of faults; French amender, amendement, amendable. The Latin prefix is to be preferred.

Emerald, ém' e.rûld (not ém' e.rûl), a precious stone (green);

Emerald Isle, Ireland, noted for its verdure.

Gk. smaragdôs; Lat. smaragdus; Ital. smeraldo; Span. esmeraldo.

Emerge, e.merjé', to rise up to the surface, to issue from;

Immerge or immerse (2 syl.), to plunge under water.

Emerge, emerged' (2 syl.), emerg'-ing (Rule xix.), emerg'ent, emerg'ent-ly; emerg'-ence.

Emergency, plu. emergencies, e.mer'.gen.siz (Rule xlv.), a special case unexpectedly "merging out of" the usual routine, a pressing necessity (not immergency).

Emersion, e.mer'.shun, a rising out of water, &c.;

Immersion, a plunging into or under water.

("Emerge" is followed by from. "Immerge," "Immerse," by in.)

French émergent; Latin emergens, gen. -gentis, emergeo, supine emersum (e.mergo, [to rise] out from a plunge under water).

Emeritus, e.mer'ry.tus (not em.e.rí.tus), one pensioned off after long services. Generally applied to college professors.

Latin emértum, a pension for service; emértus, (adj.)

Emerods (plu.), ém' e.rôdz (ought to be hêmorrhoids), bloody piles.

Gk. haimorrhoides (haimorrhoid, bloody flux, haima rhêô, to flow blood). (In compound words ending with rheo, the "h" is dropped. Thus Liddell and Scott very properly give the word αἱμορροία, and not the vicious form αἱμορροῖα, hêmorrhodís.)

Emersion, é.mer'.shun. (See Emerge.)

Emery, ém' e.ry, a hard mineral substance used for polishing metal wares. Emery paper, Emery cloth.

French émeri; Latin smiris; Greek smuris or smiris.

The rocks of Emery, cap. of Naxos (Cyclades), abound in this mineral.

Emetic, e.mét'.ík, a provocative of vomiting; emet'ically.

French émétique; Latin eméticus; Greek émêo, to vomit.

Emeute (French), á.mute', a riot, an uprising. (Latin emotus.)

Emigrate, ém'i.grate (same as mí'grate), to leave one's native place to settle in another; em'igrât-ed (Rule xxxvi.), em'igrât-ing (Rule xix); em'igrant, one who emigrates; emigration, ém'i.gray'.shun; em'igrater.

French émigrer, émigration, émigrant; Latin emigrans, gen. emigrantis, emigratio, emigrare (e.migro, to migrate from.)

Eminent, ém'i.nent, famous. Im'minent, threatening.

Em'inance, celebrity. Im'minence, an impending danger.

Eminency, plu. eminencies, ém'i.nén.siz (Rule xlv.)

Em'inent-ly, conspicuously. Im'minent-ly, menacingly.

Your Eminence, the title of address given to cardinals.

French éminent, éminence; Latin eminens, gen. eminentis, eminentia (e.mineo, to hang out conspicuously).

French imminent, imminence; Latin imminens, gen. imminentis, imminentia (in.mineo, to hang over menacingly).

Emir, ē.meer', a Turkish title. The descendants of Mahomet are called emirs. (Arabic amir, a commander.)

Emissary, plu. emissaries, em'is.sa.riz (R. xlv.), a secret agent.

Emission, e.mish'un. (See Emit.)

Emit, e.mīt', to discharge, to throw out. Em'met, an ant.

Emitt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), emitt'-ing (Rule i.); emission, e.mish'un; em'issary (q.v.)

French émettre, émission, émissaire; Latin emissarius, emissio, emitto, supine emissus (c mitto, to send forth).

Emmot, em'mēt', an ant. Emit, e.mīt', to discharge.

Old English æmete or æmette, æmete-hyll, an ant-hill.

Emolliate, ē.mōl.li.ate, to soften; emol'liat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), emol'liat-ing (Rule xix.); emollient, ē.mōl.li.ent; emolition, ē.mōl.ish'un, the act of softening.

French émollient; Latin emolliens, gen. emollientis, emollitio, emolire (mollis, to make soft, with e intensive).

Emolument, e.mōl.u.ment (only one l), profit, stipend; emolument-al, e.mōl.u.mēn'tāl.

French émolument; Latin emolumentum, profit arising from grist (emolāre, to grind thoroughly; mōla, a mill).

Emotion, e.mō'shun., excitement; emo'tion-al, sensational.

Fr. émotion; Lat. emōtio, emoveo, sup. emōtum (mōveo, to move).

Empale, em.pale' (not em-pail), to put to death by driving a stake through the body; empaled' (2 syl.), empāl'-ing (Rule xix.), empāl'-er, empale'-ment (Rule xviii. b).

French empaler empalement; Latin palum, a stake. Being French, em- is better than the Latin prefix im-. (See Em-.)

Empannel. Should be impannel (q.v.) It means [to put] in the roll or parchment. (See Em-.)

Latin pannus, cloth of any sort; Greek pēnos, with im-, "in."

Emperor, fem. empress, em'.pē.ror, em'.press (not emperess).

French empereur, impératrice; Latin impētor, impētrix, v. im-pērāre, to command (im [in] paro, to provide for [getting a thing done], hence "to give orders," "to command."

Emphasis, plu. emphases, em'.fā.sīs, em'.fā.sees, stress of voice on a word or syllable;

Emphasise, em'.fā.size; em'phasised (3 syl.), em'phasis-ing (Rule xix.), em'phasis-er (Rule xxxiii.)

Emphatic, em.fāt'ik; emphatical, em.fāt'i.kāl; emphat'-ical-ly. (The ph- points to a Greek source.)

Greek emphāsīs, emphātēkōs; Latin emphāsīs, emphāticus.

There is no Greek verb corresponding to emphasise (Rule xxxl.)

Empire' (2 syl.), em'peror, fem. empress, but imperial, imperial-ly; impe'rious, impe'rious-ly, impe'rious-ness.

Latin impērium, impētor, fem. impētrix; French empire, empereur, impératrice, impérial.

Empiric, em'.pī.rīk (ought to be em.pī'.rīk), a quack; empirical, em.pī'rī.kāl, tentative, unscientific; empirical-ly; empiricism, em.pī'rī.sizm.

French empirique, empirisme; Latin empīrice, empīricus; Greek empeirikós, empeiria, experience (em[en]peiraó, to try on [some one]).

Emplead, em.pleed', to indict, to charge with a crime.

Fr. plaid, Lat. placitum, a "plea," with em-, "to make" [a plea].

Employ, to keep at work, to use; employed (2 syl.), employ-ing (Rule xiii.), employ-ment; employ'-er, one who employs another; employee, em.ploy'.ee, or employé (French), an.plo'i.yā, one employed by another.

French employer, emploi; Latin im [in] plico, to fold in.

This word ought to be spelt with im-, but we have taken it with its faulty spelling from the French.

Emporium, plu. emporia, or emporiums, a place of trade.

Lat. emporium, an entrepôt (Gk. empōria, traffic, empōrōs, a merchant).

Empower, em.pow'.er ("pow-" to rhyme with now), to authorise; empowered (3 syl.), empower-ing.

French pouvoir, "power," with em-, "to give to one" [power].

Empress fem. of emperor, em'.press, em'.pe.ror; emp'ire (2 syl.), but imperial, im.pē'.ri.al; impe'rial-ly; imperious, im.pē'.ri.us; impe'rious-ly, impe'rious-ness.

French empire, empereur, impératrice, impérial.

Empty, plu. empties, em'.ty, em'.tīz, void, to exhaust of contents; emptied, em'.ted; emp'ti-ness (R. xi.), emp'ty-ing.

Old English æmti or emtig, v. æmt[ian] or æmtig[ian].

Empyema, em'.pī.ē'.mah, a collection of purulent matter in the cavity of the chest.

Fr. empyème; Lat. empyēma; Gk. empuēma (em[en]puon, pus).

Empyrean, em.pī-ree'.an (not em.pī'rī.an), the highest heaven, supposed by Ptolemy to be pure elemental fire.

Empyreal, em.pī're.al (ought to be em'.pī-ree'.āl):

Lat. empyreus; Gk. empūriōs [ourānōs], i.e. em[en]pur, made of fire.

Empyreuma, em'.pī.roo'.mah, the smell which rises from organic substances burnt in close vessels; empyreumatic, em'.pī.ru.māt'.īk; empyreumat'ical.

Fr. empyreume, empyreumatique; Gk. empūreuo, to set on fire (pūr, fire).

Emu or emeu, ē'mū, the ostrich of Australia.

Emulate, em'.u.late, to vie with; em'ulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), em'ulāt-ing (Rule xix.), em'ulāt-or; emulation, em'.u.lay''.shun; emulative, em'.u.la.tīv; emulative-ly.

Emulous, em'.u.lūs; em'ulous-ly, em'ulous-ness.

French émulation; Latin emūlātio, emūlātor, emūlis, v. emūlāri.

Emulsion, e.mūl'.shun, a lubricating milky liquid; emulsive, e.mūl'.siv; emulgent, e.mūl'.jēnt, the artery and vein which supply blood to the kidneys, where the ancients thought it was milked or strained.

Fr. émulgent, émulsion, émulsif: Lat. emulgere (mulgeo, to milk).

En- (a French form of the Anglo-Saxon em-), signifying "to make," "to collect;" it stands before any letter except b, p, and m. (See Em-.)

En- (a Greek and French form corresponding to the Latin in-), sometimes it is intensive, and sometimes means in or into. It should never be attached to Latin words, except they come through the French.

-en (affixed to nouns). Latin -en[us], -an[us], "one of," "one belonging to": citiz-en.

-en (affixed to verbs), denotes causation, "to make:" as fatt-en, sweet-en, length-en, short-en.

-en (affixed to adj.), means "made of": gold-en, lead-en. It is also the affix of the past part. of "strong" verbs, as "rise," risen; "break," broken.

Enable, en.a'.b'ld, to make able; enabled, en.a'.b'ld; enabling.

Latin håbilitis, "able," with en- "to make" [able].

Enact, en.act' (not e.nact') to decree, to pass into law; enact'-ed (R. xxxvi.); enact'-ing, enact'-or (R. xxxvii.); enactive, en.ac'.tiv; enact'-ment, a measure made into law.

Lat. acta, "legal acts or decrees," with en- "to make" [an act or law.]

Enamel, en.ám'.ël, a hard glossy surface resembling crystal, to coat with enamel; enam'elled (3 syl.), enam'ell-ed (Rule i.), enam'ell-er.

French émail, a composition made of calcined glass, &c., with en-.

Enamour, en.ám'.er, to charm; enam'oured (3 syl.), enam'our-ing.

French amour, "love," with en-, "to make" or create [love].

Enarthrosis, en'.ar.rhrō''.sīs, the insertion of one bone into another, so-as to make a ball and-socket joint.

Fr. énarthrose; Gk. arthrōn, "a socket-joint," with en- "to make."

Encage (2 syl.), to coop in a cage; encaged' (2 syl.) encåg'-ing (R. xix.) Better incage, to shut up in a cage. (Fr. cage.)

Encamp', to pitch tents, to dwell in tents; encamped, en.camp't'; encamp'-ing, encamp'-ment.

Latin campus, "a tent," "a camp," with en-, "to make" [a camp].

Encase' (2 syl.), to put into a case, to enclose; encased' (2 syl.), encās-ing. Incise-ment, a putting into a case or cases.

French encaisser (en caisse). Not incase, as it is a French word.

Encaustic, en.kaus'tik, a method of painting with wax burnt in with hot iron (adj.), as encaustic tiles.

French encaustique; Latin encausticus, encaustice; Greek egkaustikē (eg [en] kaiō, to burn into).

Encave' (2 syl.), to hide in a cave; encaved' (2 syl.), encāv'-ing (Rule xix.), encave'-ment. (Better incave, being Latin.)

Latin cāvea, a cave, with the Latin prefix in- not the French en-.

-ence or -ency (Latin -entia) added to abstract verbal nouns: as excell-ence, excell-ency.

-ence forms the termination of between 200 and 300 words, but there are not above half-a-dozen ending in -ense: as condense, immense, dispense, expense, *prepen-*se, and *recom-*se (Rule xxvi.)

Enceinte (French) ah'n.saint' (-nt nasal, but not ang.sangt).

Encephalon, en.sěf'.a.lŏn, the brain, the contents of the cranium.

Encephala (plu.), en.sěf'.a.lah, limpets and other molluscs with a distinct head; encephalous, en.sěf'.a.lŭs (adj.)

Encephalic, en'.se.făl''.ĭk (not en.sěf'.a.lĭk), belonging to the brain.

Encephalgia, en'.se.făl''.ji.ah, chronic pain of the head.

Encephalitis, en'.sef'.a.lĭ''.tis, inflammation of the brain (-itis, Greek termination, denotes inflammation).

Encephaloid, en.sěf'.a.loĭd, resembling the materials of the brain. (Greek egkephālŏs eidŏs, brain-like.)

French encéphale; Greek egkēphālŏs (eg [en] kēphālē, in the cranium).

Enchain', to bind with chains; enchained' (2 syl.), enchain'-ing, enchain'-ment. (Not in-, being French.)

French enchaîner (chaîne, Latin cătēna, v. cătēnāre, to chain).

Enchant', to charm, to fascinate, to bewitch; enchant'-ed (R. xxxvi.); enchant'-ing; enchant'ing-ly, delightfully; enchant'-er, fem. enchant'ress; enchant'-ment. (Not in-, being from the French.)

French enchanter, enchanteur, fem. enchanteresse, enchantment; Latin incantāre, incantātor, incantamentum.

Enchase' (2 syl.), to set in a frame, to adorn with embossed work; enchased' (2 syl.), enchās'-ing. (Not in-, being Fr.)

French enchâsser (chassis, a frame; Latin capsa, a box, v. capio).

Enchiridion or enchiridium, plu. enchiridia, en'.kĭ.rĭd''.i.ŏn (or -um), en'.kĭ.rĭd''.i.ah, a manual.

French enchiridion; Greek enchĭrĭdĭon; Latin enchĭrĭdĭum (en cheir [what can be held] in the hand).

Enchorial, en.kŏ'.rĭ.āl, applied to the ordinary writing of the ancient Egyptians. The sacred writing was in hieroglyphics, hĭ'-e-ro.glĭf''.ĭks.

Greek egchŏrŏs, domestic (chŏros, a district, a place).

Encircle, en.ser'.k'l, to surround; encircled, en.ser'.k'lĭd; encircling, en.ser'.kling.

Old Eng. cīrcol or cīrcul; Fr. cercle, with en- to make [a circle].

Enclitic, en.klī'tīk, a word joined to another so closely as to seem a part thereof: as "prithee," where the pronoun thee is thrown on the verb pray; "willy nilly," where the pronoun ye is joined to the verbs will and nil = will not. Other examples are isn't, sha'n't, wo'n't, mus'n't.

French enclitique; Latin encliticus; Greek egklitikos (eg [en] klino, to lean on another).

Enclose, en.klōze'; enclosed' (2 syl.), enclos'-ing (Rule xix.)

Enclosure, en.klō'.zhūr, envelopment, as the "enclosure" of letters in envelopes saves much trouble; that which is enclosed, as your letter with its "enclosure" came to hand this morning; that which encloses, as an envelope is the "enclosure" of a letter.

French clos. (Latin claudo, to shut up; Old English clusa, close).

Encomium, plu. encomiums (very rarely encomia), en.kō'.mi.ūmz (en.kō'.mi.āh), high praise; enco'miast; encomiastic, en.kō'.mi.ās'.tīk; encomias'tical, encomias'tical-ly.

Latin encomiastes, encomiasticus, encomium, plu. encomia; Greek egkōmion, plu. egkōmia, egkōmōs (kōmōs, a revel) in honour of [Bacchus], en kōmōs, a hymn to the victor in a [Bacchic] revel, hence a eulogy or panegyric.

Encom'pass, en.kūm'.pās (not incom'pass), to surround; encom-passed, en.kūm'.past; encompass-ing, en.kūm'.pās.ing.

French en compasser, to compass-in [on all sides].

Encore, ong.kō're' (not en.kore'), a call for a repetition, to demand a repetition; encored, ong.kord'; encor'-ing (Rule xix.)

This is one of the French words quite perverted in our language. What we call "encore," is bis in French, and encore in French means yet, still (adv. a continuation), as il n'est pas encore venu, he is not yet come; j'attends encore, I am still waiting; je ne l'attends pas encore, I do not expect him yet.

Encounter, en.koun'ter, a chance meeting, a combat, to meet unexpectedly, to meet in a hostile manner; encountered, en.koun'terd; encoun'ter-ing.

French encontre (en contre, in contrary [directions], in opposition).

Encourage, en.kūr'rage, to embolden; encour'aged (3 syl.); encour'ag-ing (R. xix.), encour'age-ment (only five words drop the e before ment, viz. acknowledg-ment, abridg-ment, lodg-ment, judg-ment, and argu-ment, Rule xviii., ¶).

French encourager, encouragement. (See Courage.)

Encrinite, en'.kri.nīte, the stone-lily, and other similar fossils; encrinitic, en'.kri.nīt'.īk, (adj.) or en'crinit'al.

Crinoidean, plu. crinoideans, crinoidea, kri.noi'.dē.an, kri.noi'.dē.anz, kri.noi'.dē.ah, fossils having a lily-shaped disc supported on a jointed stem; they are—

Encrinites, en'.kri.nītes, when the stem is cylindrical; and Pentacrinites, pen'-ta.kri.nītes, when it is pentagonal.

Greek krinon, plu. krinēa, "a lily," with -ite for lithos a stone, and the prefix en- "to make into" [a lily stone]. -oid is eidos, like.

Encroach (2 syl.), to intrude upon another's rights (followed by on or upon); encroached (2 syl.), encroach'-ing, encroach'-ing-ly, encroach'-er, encroach'-ment.

French accrocher, to hook on [something] (croc, a hook). The French prefix is preferable, and -crouch is a very vicious form of "crook."
Low Latin encroachmentum.

Encrust (should be incruster, Latin incrustāre, French incruster).

Encumber, en.kūm'.ber, to burden, to clog; encum'bered (3 syl.), encum'ber-ing, encum'bering-ly, encum'ber-er.

Encumbrance, en.kūm'.branse (not encumber-ance).

Encumbrancer, en.kūm'.bran.ser.

French encombrer; Latin incumbēre, to lie upon.

Encyclical, en.sik'.li.kūl, sent round, as the Pope's encyclical letter, the letter "sent round" to all his bishops.

French encyclique; Latin encyclius (The -y- shows it to be Greek).
Greek epikukliōs, circular (eg [en] kukloō, to move in a circle).

Encyclopedia, encyclopædia, cyclopædia, cyclopedia, en.sy'.klo.pee''-di-ah, sy'.klo.pee''-di-ah, an alphabetical summary of every branch of knowledge; ency'clope'dian (adj.) or ency'clope'dical; encyclope'dist, one who compiles an encyclopedia, one who aids in such a compilation; encyclopedism, en.si'.klo.pee''-dizm.

The better form is without the prefix en-; the word is then Greek kuklōs paidēia, a round of instruction. "Encyclopedia" means "encyclical instruction," or instruction sent round like a circular (eg [en] kuklios, revolving, going in succession, periodical). The idea is "a book or number of books containing the whole range or round of knowledge," and not an "encyclical dictionary of instruction." It is not sent round like a circular at all.

Encyst (not incyst. It is Greek not Latin), to enclose in a cyst; encyst'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), encyst'-ing, enclosed in a cyst, consisting of cysts.

Insist, insist'-ed, insist'-ing, to urge with authority.

"Encyst," Greek en kustis, a bag or pouch (the -y- shows it is Greek).
"Insist," Latin in sisto, to make a set stand on [what you say].

-end (an Anglo-Saxon termination of masculine nouns), denotes "an agent." Surviving examples very rare.

-end, Old English ende, Latin end[us], termination of active participles, as rever-end, Latin rever-endus, to be revered.

End, the finish, to finish; end'-ed (R. xxxvi.), end'-ing; end'-less, without end; end'less-ly, end'less-ness; end'wise (not endways, German weise, Old English wis, direction).

The be-all and end-all, the only state of being and its entire termination.

Old English ende, v. end[ian], past endede, past part. ended, endleas, endless; endleaslice, endlessly; endleasnes, endlessness; endmōst, endmost; endung, an ending; endwise, endwise.

Endamage, en.dām'.age, to injure; endam'aged (3 syl.), endam'ag-ing (Rule xix.), endam'age-ment (Rule xviii., ¶).

Old English dem; Latin damnum, "hurt," with en-, "to make or confer" [injury]; French endommage.

Endanger, en.dain'.jēr, to expose to danger; endan'gered (3 syl.), endan'ger-ing, endan'ger-ment.

French danger, with en-, "to make or put into" [danger].

Endear, en.dēre', to make dear; endeared' (2 syl.), endear'-ing, endear'ing-ly; endeared-ness, en.dear'.ed.ness (R. xxxvi.); endear'-ment (-ment, the "cause of," "the state of"), that which produces fondness, the state of being dear.

Old English dēor, "dear, beloved," with en-, "to make" [dear].

Endeavour, en.dēv'.or, an effort, to use effort, to attempt; endeavoured, en.dev'.ord; endeav'our-ing.

Fr. devoir, "duty," with en-, "to make;" i.e., faire devoir, to attempt.

Endemic, en.dēm'.ik [disease], a local [disease].

French endémique; Greek endēmōs, in the place, at home, v. endémō, to live in a place. In Greek the -de- is long.

Endermic, [medicine] to be applied to the skin.

Greek en derma [to be used] on the skin.

Endive, en'.div, a vegetable. (Fr. endive, Lat. intybus or intybum.)

Endorse' (2 syl.), to write on the back of a document; endorsed (2 syl.), endors-ing (Rule xix.), endors'-er, the person who writes his name on the back of a bill, and makes himself liable for its payment; endorsee, the person to whom the bill is assigned or delivered; endorse'-ment.

French endos, endosser, endossement, endosseur (dos, Lat. dorsum or dorsum, the back, [to write] on the back).

Endogens, en'.do.jenz, plants like palms, grasses, and rushes, whose growth takes place from within, and not by external concentric layers; endogenous, en.dōj'.e.nūs (adj.)

Greek endon genō, to produce within.

Endogenite, en.dōj'.e.nīte, a fossil palm, rush, &c.

Greek endon genō, with -ite; that is, lithos, a stone or fossil.

Endophlœum, en'.dō.flee''um, the inner bark.

Greek endōn phloīds, the inside bark.

Endophyllous, en.dōf'.il.lūs, evolved within a leaf or sheath.

Greek endōn phullōn, within the leaf. (Should be en.dō.fyl.lus.)

Endopleura, en'.do.plū''rah, the inner covering of seed.

Greek endōn pleura, the inner side [of the seed sheath].

Endorhizal, en'.do.rī''.zāl, applied to those rootlets which burst through the coverings of the seed before they elongate downwards. (Better without h, being a comp. word.)

Greek endōn rhiza, root within [the seed]. (See Emerods, note.)

Endosmose, en'.dōs.mose, the transmission of gases, &c., to the interior of porous substances.

Exosmose, ex'.dōs.mose, the transmission of gases, &c., to the exterior of porous substances.

Gk. endōn ōsmōs, impulsion inwards; ex ōsmos, impulsion outwards.

Endosperm, en'.dō.sperm, albumen of seeds.

Greek endōn sperma, within the sperm or embryo-sac.

Endosporous, en'.dō.spō''rus, applied to those fungi which have their spores (1 syl.), contained in a case.

Greek endōn spōra, spores [contained] in [a case].

Endostome, en'.dō.stom, the passage through the inner integument of an ovule (2 syl.) (stōma, a mouth).

-endous (Latin termination -endus), "calculated to produce": as trem-endous, "calculated to produce trembling or tremour."

Endow, en.dow' (-dōw to rhyme with now), to settle a permanent fund on [an institution], to furnish; endōw' (2 syl.), endōw'-ing; endōw'-ment, a fund settled on [an institution], talents; endōw'-er, one who endows. (See Endue.)

Norm. endoûer; Fr. douer; Lat. dos, "a dowry," with en- "to make."

Endue, en.du', to invest; endued' (2 syl.), endū-ing, R. xix. (Gk. form). Indue, indued', indū-ing, R. xix. (Lat. form.)

Greek enduo; Latin induo, to put on [clothes].

Endure (2 syl.), to bear, to suffer; endured' (2 syl.), endūr-ing, endūr-ing-ly, endur'-er, endūr'-able (1st Latin conj.), endūrable-ness, endūr'ably, endūr'ance; but Indurate, in'.dū.rate, to harden; in'durāt-ed, in'durāt-ing; induration, in'.du.ray''shun.

Fr. endurer; Lat. induratio, indurēre to grow hardened (durus, hard).

Eneid, better Æneid, e.nē'id (not Ē.nē'id), Virgil's epic poem about Æneas (E.nēe'as).

-id (a patronymic), "pertaining to," "concerning" [Æneas].

Enema, e.nēe'mah (not en'Ē.mah), a clyster, an instrument used for medical injections.

This word, being the Greek en hiēmi, "to send into," ought to be enhēma, according to our English custom of forming such words.

Enemy, plu. enēmies, en.e.mīz, a foe; en'mity, plu. enmities.

Inimical, in.im'.i.kāl, hostile; inim'ical-ly.

French ennemi (wrong); Latin inimicus, inimicitia, inimice. Our word enemy is bad, and the French word worse. As emy means "a friend" (Latin amicus), "en-emy" should mean "to make a friend," the Latin in- (negative) amicus (not a friend) is consistent.

Energy, plu. energies, en'.er.gīz (Rule xlv.), vigorous effort; energetic, en'.er.jēt''ik; energetical, en'.er.jet''i.kāl.

Energise, en'.er.gīze, to infuse vigour into; en'ergised, en'ergis-ing (Rule xix.)

Fr. énergie, énergique; Lat. energia; Gk. ergon, work. (See R. xxxi.)

Enervate, en'erv.vate (not e.ner'.vate), to enfeeble; en'ervāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), en'ervāt-ing (Rule xix.), enervation, en'ervay".shun; en'ervator (Rule xxxvii.)

French énervé, enervation; Latin enervatio, enervātor, enervāre (enervus, to deprive of nerve).

Enfeeble, en.fee'.b'l, to weaken; enfeebled, en.fee'.b'ld; enfeebling, enfeeble-ment, en.fee'.b'l.ment.

French affaiblir, affaiblissement; faible, older form foible, "feeble," with en- "to make" [feeble].

Enfeoff, en.fēf' (by lawyers), en.feef' (by others), to invest with a fee or fief; enfeoffed' (2 syl.), enfeoff-ing, enfeoff-ment, the deed which conveys a fee or fief.

French fief; Low Latin feodum, a fee or fief, feoffamentum, a feoffment, feoffātor, a feoffer, feoffātus, a feoffee. Our word is feodum, "a fee or fief," with en- "to convey" [a fee].

Enfilade, en'.fi.lāde', to rake with shot or shell lengthwise; enfilād-ed (Rule xxxvi.), enfilād-ing (Rule xix.)

French enfilade, v. enfiler; Latin filum, "a thread or line," with en- "to make" [a line with shot and shell].

Enforce' (2 syl.), to constrain; enforced' (2 syl.), enforc-ing (Rule xix.), enforc'-er, enforce'-ment, enforce'-able.

French forcer, force, with en- "to make or impart" [force].

Enfranchise, en.frān'.chīz, to invest with civil and political rights, to liberate; enfran'chised (3 syl.), enfran'chis-ing (Rule xix.), enfran'chis-er, enfran'chise-ment (R. xviii.)

French affranchir, affranchissement; Low Latin franchesia, franchisātus (francus "free," with en- "to make" [free]).

Engage, en.gāje', to occupy; engāged' (2 syl.), occupied, bespoke in a dance, promised in marriage; engag-ing, en.gāje.ing (Rule xix.); engāging-ly, engage'-ment (Rule xviii.); engaged-ness, en.gāje'.ed.ness (Rule xxxvi.)

French engager, engagement; Old English wæd, "a pledge," with en- "to make" [a pledge]; Latin vādmōnium.

Engarrison, en.gar'ri.son (a corruption of engarnison), to put into garrison, to furnish with garrison; engar'risoned (4 syl.), engar'risen-ing (double r).

French and German garrison, a "garrison," with en-, "to make," "to supply with" [a garrison]; Low Lat. garnisio; Dutch waartson; Anglo-Saxon wær, an enclosure, v. wārian, to ward or guard.

Engender, en.jēn'.der, to form, to produce: as Meteors are engendered in the atmosphere; angry words engender strife. Engendered, en.jēn'.derd; engen'der-ing, engen'der-er.

Fr. engendrer; Lat. genēre, supine, gēnitum, to beget; Gk. gēno, eg[en]gīnomai or eg[en]ginomai, to be produced in [something].

Engine, en'.jī.neer', a machine composed of several parts; engineer, en'.jī.neer', a maker of engines, one whose vocation is the construction of roads, forts, docks. &c. Military engineer, one employed on military works; Civil engineer,

- one employed on works not of a military character; en'-gineer'ing, the business of an engineer.
- Engine-man, en'-jin.man, one who works an engine;
- Jinny, contraction of engine, with -y, diminutive, a little engine; as a spinning jinny.
- French ingénieur, génie, engin; Latin ingénium, a contrivance.
- Engird', past engird'-ed, past part. engirt [or engirded], to gird.
- Old Eng. gyrd[an], past. gyrde, p. p. *gyrde*d, with en- for emb-, about.
- English, In'.glish, pertaining to England (England), the language.
- The English, the people of England.
- An Englishman, plu. Englishmen. "Englishmen" is the definite plu., as 2, 3, 4, &c., Englishmen, but The English is the indefinite plu. (Rule xlv., ¶).
- An English-woman, plu. English-women.
- Anglecise, an'.gle.size, to make English, to convert to the form and character of English words, &c.; anglecised, an'.gle.sizd; an'glecis-ing (Rule xix.);
- Anglicism, an'.gle.cizm, an English idiom.
- Anglice, an'.gli.se (adv.), in English.
- Anglican, an'.gli.kăn (adj.), English: as the Anglican Church.
- Old English Englisc, Englisc-man, Engla-land, Angol, one who lived in Anglen. It is a pity that the initial A- has been substituted for E- in these latter words, as it dogmatizes on a doubtful question.
- Engorge' (2 syl.), to swallow greedily; engorged' (2 syl.), engorg'-ing (Rule xix.), engorge'-ment (Rule xviii.)
- French gorger, to gorge; Latin gurgēs, a glutton, gurgulio, the windpipe. En gorge means [to put] into the gorge or throat.
- Engraft', better engraft, to insert a part of one tree into another; engraft'-ed, better engrafted' (2 syl.), engraft'-ing, better engraft'-ing, engraft'-ment, better engraft'-ment, engraft-er better engraft-er.
- French en greffer, greffeur, greffe (Greek graphô, to scratch). Applied originally to budding. "Greffe," being French, the prefix en- is better than the Latin prefix in-.
- Engrain' (2 syl.), to dye deeply, to dye in grain; engrained' (2 syl.), engrain'-ing, engrain'-er.
- French en grèner, to grain leather, grener, to grain; Latin granum, the coccus or scarlet dye, hence the phrase: A knave in grain, a knave though dressed in scarlet.
- Engrave, past. engraved, past part. engraved or engraven;
- Engrave' (2 syl.), to cut characters or drawings on metal, stone, or wood; engraved' (2 syl.), engrāv'-ing (R. xix.), engrāv'en, engrāv'er. An engraving, a design engraved.
- Chalcography, kăl.kög'.ra.fy, engraving on copper.
- Greek chalkos graphô, to write on brass or copper.

Glyptography, glip'.tög.ra.fy, engraving on precious stones.

Greek gluptós graphō, to write on a precious stone.

Lithography, li.rhög'.ra.fy, engraving on stone. (Gk. lithōs.)

Xylography, xy.lög'.ra.fy, engraving on wood. (Gk. xulōn.)

Zincography, zin.kog'.ra.fy, engraving on zinc.

Aquatinta, a'.kwa.tin'-tah, engraving to resemble Indian ink drawings. (Aquafortis is used instead of gravers.)

Mezzotinto, plu. mezzotintoes, med'-zo.tin'.toze, middle or half-tint engravings. (Italian mezzo tinto.)

Old English graf[an]; Greek graphein; French graver, graveur.

Engross, en.gröse' (not en.grös'), to monopolise, to copy documents in lawyers' writing; engrossed, en.gröst; engross'-ing, engross'-er, engrose'-ment.

French grosse, grossir, grossoyer (engrosser has quite another meaning). Our word is gross "large," with en- "to make" [a copy in large writing], "to make or occupy" [a large or undue share.]

Engulf (being French, en- is better than in-, which is Latin) to swallow up; engulfed', engulf'-ing, engulf'-ment.

French engouffrer, to swallow up; Latin gurgēs, a whirlpool. Our word is a total mistake. To "engouf" has nothing to do with gulf, a bay (Greek kōlpōs, a bosom), but is a French perversion of the Latin gurgēs, a whirlpool, from gūla, a gullet. Greek guliōs or gaulos, a long-necked wallet.

Enhance' (2 syl.), to increase [the value or price]; enhanced' (2 syl.), enhanc'-ing, enhanc'-er, enhance'-ment (R.xviii.)

Norman enhauncer (hauncer, to raise; French, hausser. Similarly, hunsière is the old form of haussière, a hawser.)

Enharmonic, en'.har.mön''ik (in Music), applied to notes which change their names only: thus $C\sharp = D\flat$, $G\sharp = A\flat$. On keyed instruments, these notes are identical, but theoretically $C\sharp : D\flat :: \frac{1}{1}\frac{2}{3} : \frac{1}{1}\frac{1}{2}$. (See Diatonic.)

Greek enharmonikōs [mōdōs], the enharmonic mode, which proceeded by quarter tones. The three "modes" of Grecian music proceeded (1) by whole tones, (2) by half tones, and (3) by quarter tones.

Enhydrous, en.hy'.drus, containing water;

Anhydrous, an.hy'.drus, without water.

Greek enudros, with water (ἐνὺδρος not ἐνὐδρος); anudros, without water (ἀνὺδρος not ἀνὐδρος); hudor, water has an aspirate, but it is lost in the compound, and could not be expressed.

Enigma, e.nīg'.mah, a riddle; enigmatic, e.nīg.māt''ik; enigmatical, e.nīg.māt''i.kāl; enigmāt'ical-ly, enig'mätist.

Enigmatise, e.nīg'.mä.tize, to reduce to an enigmatical form; enig'matised (4 syl.), enig'matis-er, enig'matis-ing.

Enig'ma, a riddle in which the puzzle lies in remote or obscure resemblances.

Conun'drum, a riddle in which the puzzle lies in a pun.

Charade, a word dissected, so that each syllable forms a word. If of two syllables, the first syllable is called my first, the next my second, and the entire word my whole.

Log'ograph, a word which, deprived of different letters, makes other words: as glass, lass, ass, gas, sal, gals, &c.

Re'bus, a puzzle expressed in hieroglyphics.

Riddle, a general term, including any puzzling question of a trivial nature, the solution of which is to be guessed.

Puzzle, a sensible object, the intricacy of which is to be discovered, or the parts of which are to be pieced together.

"Enigma," French énigme, énigmatique; Latin ænigma; Greek ainigma, ainigmatistês, &c. (ainôs, a fable).

"Conundrum," Old English cunnan drcdm, clever-fun.

"Charade," so named from the inventor.

"Logograph," Greek lôgôs grîphôs, a word puzzle.

"Rebus." These were political squibs by the basochiens of Paris, de rebus quæ geruntur (on the current events of the day).

"Riddle," Old English rædels, from rædan, to interpret.

"Puzzle," Welsh posiad, a questioning, v. posiaw.

Enjoin' (2 syl.), to command, to bid; enjoined' (2 syl.), enjoin'-ing, enjoin'-er, enjoin'-ment, but injunction.

French enjoindre, injonction; Latin injungo, to command, injunctio. (It would be better to retain the same prefix throughout, and write injoin for enjoin. French is our great source of error.)

Enjoy', to take pleasure in; enjoyed' (2 syl.), enjoy'-ing (R. xiii.), enjoy'-ing-ly, enjoy'-ment, enjoy'able (Rule xxiii.)

Fr. jouir; Lat. gaudeo (Ennius uses gau), with en-, "to make" [joy].

Enkindle, en.kîn'.d'l, to set on fire; enkindled, en.kîn'.d'ld; enkin'dling.

Welsh cynne, "ignition," with en-, "to make" [an ignition].

Enlarge' (2 syl.), to increase in size; enlarged' (2 syl.), enlarg'-ing (Rule xix.), enlarge'-ment (Rule xviii.)

Latin largus, "large," with en-, "to make" [large].

Enlighten, en.lite'.en, to throw light on; enlight'ened (3 syl.), enlight'en-ing, enlight'en-er, enlight'en-ment.

Old English lihtung, "lighting," with en-, "to make" [a lighting]. (The -g- is interpolated, and the term en- stands for -un' [ung].)

Enlist', to enroll; enlist'-ed (R. xxxvi.), enlist'-ing, enlist'-ment, voluntary enrollment.

Old Eng. list; Fr. liste, "a roll," with en-, "to make up" [a list].

Enliven, en.lî.vën, to cheer; enlî'vened (3 syl.), enlî'ven-ing.

Old English lif, "life," with en-, "to make, to give" [life]. The term -en is for -un' [-ung] added to verbal nouns.

Enmity, plu. enmitîes, en'.mî.tîz (Rule xi.), hostility; enemy, plu. enemies, en'.e.mîz (Rule xi.), a foe;

Inimical, în.îm'.i.kâl, hostile; inim'ical-ly.

(It is to be regretted that the Latin prefix in- has not been preserved throughout. The French have a similar inconsistency, though not in the same derivatives.)

French inimitié, ennemie (11); Latin inimicitia, inimicus (in amicus, not a friend).

Ennoble, en.nō.b'l, to make noble; ennobled, en.nō.b'ld; ennobling, ennoble-ment.

French ennoblir or anoblir, anoblissement; Latin nobilis, "noble," with en-, "to make" [noble].

Ennui, ah'n.wē (not ang'-wē nor ong'.wē), weariness.

French ennui; Italian notare, to weary.

Enormous, e.nor'.mūs, very great; enor'mous-ly.

Enormity, plu. enormities, e.nor'.mī.tīz, an atrocious crime.

French énormité, énorme; Latin enormitas, enormis ([ex] norma, out of rule.)

Enough, sufficient in quantity. Enow, sufficient in number.

Sugar enough, cups enow; tea enough, spoons enow.

(This distinction, very general 40 years ago, is now almost obsolete.)

The adverb and adj. differed in the Anglo-Saxon period, genog (adv.), genoh (adj.) "Enough" very absurdly combines both forms.

En passant, ah'n pahs'.sah'n (Fr.) in passing, cursorily.

Enquire (2 syl.), to ask; enquired (2 syl.), enquir'-ing (R. xix.), enquir'-er, enquiry, plu. enquiries, en.kwī'.rīz; better

Inquire (2 syl.), inquired (2 syl.), inquir'-ing, inquir'-ing-ly, inquiry, plu. inquiries, in.kwī'.rīz (Rule xlv.)

Inquisition, in.kwī.zīsh'.un; inquisitive, in.kwīz'.ī.tīv; inquisitive-ly, inquisitive-ness, inquis'itor, inquis'itory.

(It is far better to spell all these words with the Latin prefix in-, although we have in French the word enquérir.

Lat. inquērere, supine inquisitum, to inquire; inquisitio, inquisitor.

Enrage (2 syl.), to exasperate; enraged (2 syl.), enrāg'-ing.

Fr. enrager; Lat. rābiāre, rābies, with en-, "to make" [in a rage].

Enrapt, thrown into an ecstasy.

Enrapture, en.rāp'.tchūr, to delight greatly; enrap'tured, enrap'tur-ing (Rule xix.)

Enravish, en.rāv'.ish, to throw into an ecstasy; enrav'ished (3 syl.), enrav'ish-ing, enrav'ish-ment (generally used without the prefix en-).

Latin raptus, raptūra, rāpio, supine raptum, to ravish.

"Ravish" is from the French ravir, ravissant, ravissement.

Enrich, to make rich; enriched, enrich'-ing, enrich'-er, enrich'-ment, accession of wealth.

French enrichir, enrichissement (richesse, riches).

Enrobe (2 syl.), to array, to invest; enrobed, enrob'-ing (R. xix.)

French en robe, to put in robes; Low Latin roba.

Enroll (not enrol, Rule x.), to put on a roll or list; enrolled (2 syl.), enroll'-ing, enroll'-ment.

French enrôler, rôle; Latin rōtūla, with en-, "to make" up [a roll].

Ensanguine, en.săn'.gwin, to make bloody; ensan'guined (3 syl.), ensăn'guin-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin sanguineus, "bloody," with en- "to make" [bloody].

Ensconce, en.skönse (no word in the language ends in -onse, and only six words in -ense, Rule xxvi.), to hide, or cover behind a sconce or screen; ensconced, en.skönst; ensconc'-ing (Rule xix.)

German schanze, "a fortification," with en-, "to make" [a sconce].

-ense, the termination of only six words in the language, four of which are compounds of "pense": condense and immense; dispense, expense, pre pense, and recompense. There are nearly 300 words ending in -ence, most of which would have been better in -ense.

Enshrine' (2 syl.), to put into a shrine; enshrined' (2 syl.), enshrin'-ing (Rule xix.)

Old English scrin, with en- "to make" (the subject of a shrine).

Enshroud' (2 syl.), to put into a shroud; enshroud'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), enshroud'-ing.

Old English scrūd, "a shroud," with en-, "to make" [a shroud].

Ensign, en'.sine, the flag of a regiment, an infantry officer who carries the ensign; ensigncy, en'.sine.sy (-cy), "office".

French enseigne; Latin signum [militäre], "an ensign," with en- "to make or carry" [the ensign].

-ensis (Latin ensis, an office), as aman'uensis, a manu, one at hand; -ensis, one who holds the office of an "a manu."

Enslave' (2 syl.), to make a slave; enslaved' (2 syl.), enslāv'-ing (Rule xix.), enslāv'-er, enslave'-ment (Rule xviii.)

German slave; Low Latin sclavus, with en-, "to make" [a slave.]

Ensnare' (2 syl.), ensnared' (2 syl.), ensnār'-ing (Rule xix.)

O. E. sneāre "a snare," with en-, "to make" [one the prey of a snare]. Not being Latin, the prefix en- is preferable to in-.

Ensue, en.su', to follow; ensued' (2 syl.), ensu'-ing (Rule xix.)

Fr. ensuire; Lat. insēqui, to follow as a consequence (in sequor). Meaning "to arise out of," it is followed by from (French de). Meaning "to come next," it is followed by on.

Ensure, Insure, Assure, en.shure', in.shure', as.shure'.

En-, in-, or as-sured' (2 syl.), en-, in-, as-suring, -shure'-ing.

Ensurance, insurance, assurance, -shure'.ance.

En-, in-, as-surer, -shure'-er.

Of these three forms insure is by far the worst.

"Ensure," Fr. sur (Lat. secūrus), "sure," with en-, "to make" [sure].

"Assure," French assurer; Low Latin assurancia, v. assurāre (as [ad] secūrāre, to secure to one).

Strictly speaking the policy "holder" ensures, the policy "giver" assures; the former "makes his property sure" by taking out a policy, the latter "secures to him" certain sums of money on fixed terms. Similarly from the standpoint of a policy holder the office is an "ensurance," i. e. an office which makes him secure against loss, but from the standpoint of the actuary it is an "assurance," i.e. an office which "secures to its clients" certain sums of money in proportion to annual payments.

"Insure" is bad Latin, bad French, and bad English.

-ent, -ant (Latin participial endings), an agent: as student, informant. -ant denotes a word of the 1st Latin conj., -ent a word of some other conj., but the rule is very loosely followed, especially when we have gone to the French for our Latin. (See Rule xxv.)

Entablature, en.tăb'.la.tchur (not entablement. It is not tablet, a little table, but Latin tabŭla, contracted to tab'la), the whole top part of a pillar, including the architrave, frieze, and cornice.

Latin tăbŭlătum, a scaffold, stage, or storey; en-, "to make," hence entablature, that which makes a stage, storey, or complete part.

Entail' (2 syl.), lands, &c., fixed on certain descendants, to fix lands, &c., on certain descendants [as the eldest son]; entailed' (2 syl.), entail'-ing, entail'-ment, followed by on or upon, but in French by à.

French tailler; Low Latin talliatum [feudum], a fee-tall, tallium, "a fee-tail," with en-, "to make" [a fee-tail].

Entangle, en.tăn'.g'l, to ravel; entangled, en.tăn'.g'ld; entan'gling, entan'gler, entan'gle-ment.

Norse tang, tangle, sea-wrack, called tang in Germ., en-, "to make" [a tangle like sea-wrack].

Enter, en'tēr, to come in. Inter, in'tēr, to bury.

En'ter, en'tered (2 syl.), en'ter-ing, en'trance (2 syl.), en'try.

Inter', interred' (2 syl.), interr'-ing, inter'-ment.

"Enter," is used both transitively and intransitively: Thus we say He entered the house, or entered into the house; but when used to signify "engage in," to be "an ingredient of," it is always followed by into: as I entered into partnership with; lead enters into the composition of pewter; and when it means to "begin," it is followed by on: as I enter on my tenth year ...

French entrer, entrée; Latin intrāre, intrans.

"Inter" would be better with double r; Lat. in-terra (in the earth).

Enteritis, en'tēr'itis, inflammation of the intestines.

Gk. entēra, the bowels; -itis, denoting "inflammation" [of the bowels].

Enterprise, en'ter.prize, an adventure, an undertaking; en'ter-pris-ing (adj.), adventurous, bold; en'terprising-ly.

French entreprise; Latin inter prēhendo supine prēhensum, to take in hand with others (entre is reciprocal in composition).

En'tertain', to treat with hospitality, to amuse; en'tertained' (3 syl.), en'tertain'-ing, en'tertain'-ing-ly, en'tertain'or; en'tertain'-ment, a feast, an amusement.

French entretenir, entretien, maintenance, to hold things together.

(Our use of this word is widely apart from that in France. No Frenchman would consider "entretenir" = donner l'hospitalité, or divertir. The French idea of "keep" conveyed by this word is not complimentary, except when applied to things.)

Enthral, en.thrawl', to make captive; enthralled' (2 syl.), enthral'-ing (Rule iv.), enthral'-er, enthral'-ment.

Old English thrall, "a servant," with en-, "to make" [a thrall].
 "Inthral" is nonsense. The double l should be restored.

Enthroned, to invest with sovereignty, to install; enthroned' (2 syl.), enthron'-ing, enthronement; enthronization (R. xxxii.), en'thrō.ni.zay''shun, installation of a bishop.

Lat. thrōnus; Greek thrōnōs (thrānos, a bench, v. throā, to sit down), Enthronizo, to seat on a throne. . Our word is from the Greek.

Enthusiasm, en.rhū'.si.azm, zeal, fanaticism;

Enthusiast, en.rhū'.si.ast, one ardently devoted to some object; enthusiastic, en.rhū'.si.ās''.tik; enthusiastical, en.rhū'.si.as''.ti.kāl; enthusias'tical-ly.

Latin enthusiasmus, enthusiasta; Greek enthousiasmōs, enthousiastēs, enthousiastikōs; French enthousiasme, enthousiaste, enthousiasme (en theos -asmos, the state of being in a god, i.e. inspired.)

Enthymeme, en'.rhī.mem, a syllogism with one of the prem'isses suppressed: As, [dependent creatures should be humble]
We are dependent creatures, and therefore should be humble. The major prop. in brackets being suppressed.

French enthymème: Lat. enthymēma; Greek enthymēma (en thumos [one premiss] in the mind [only]).

Entice' (2 syl.), to allure; enticed' (2 syl.); entic-ing, en.tice'.ing; entic'ing-ly; entic-er, en.tice'.er; entic'-ment (R. xviii.)

This is a French word which has received with us quite a new meaning. In French it means to incite, not to "allure or seduce." The word is attiser, to stir a fire, or rather to "touch the burning logs to make them burn better" (tison, a burning log). Spanish atizar, to stir a fire; tizon, smouldering wood; tizonero, a poker. Italian tizzone, a firebrand. Our idea seems to be derived from the custom of enticing birds, &c., by lighted brands, i.e. [to attract] to the firebrand, at [to] or en [into] tison, [the burning brand].

Entire' (2 syl.), complete, unadulterated; entire'-ly, entire'-ness; entire'-ty, integrity, entire state.

French entier: intèger, entire (in tago or tango, not touched).

Entitle, en.tī'.t'l, to qualify, to give a title or a right to [someone]; entitled, en.tī'.t'ld; entitling, en.tī'.tling.

Old English titul, "a title," with en-, "to make or give" [a title];
 French intituler; (Latin titulus, a title).

Entity, plu. entities, en'.tī'.tīz (R. xlv.), existence, a real being.

Non-entity, plu. nonentities, what has no real being, a person of no influence (a no-one).

French entité: Latin ens, gen. entis, an entity or real being.

Ento- (Greek prefix), within.

Entozoon, plu. entozoa, en'-to.zō''-ōn, en'-to.zō''-ah (not en'.to.zoon''), an animal which lives within the body of other animals, especially in the intestines; entozoic, en'-to.zō''-ik, adj. (not en'.to.zoik).

Greek entōs zōon, an animal within [the body of other animals].

Entomology, en'.to.mōl'.o.gy, treats of the history and habits of insects; entomologist, en'.to.mōl'.o.jist; entomological, en'-to-mo.laj'-i.kāl; entomological-ly.

Greek entōmon lōgōs, a discourse about insects; French entomologie.

Entomoid, en'.to.moid, like an insect. (Gk. entōmōn eidos.)

Entomolite, en.tōm'.o.lite, a fossil insect.

Greek entōmōn lithos, an insect [of] stone, i.e. fossilised.

Entomorphāgous, en'.to.mor''.fā.gūs, insect-eating.

Greek entōmon phāgo, to devour insects.

Entomostracan, plu. entōmostracans, en'.to.mōs''.trā.kān, one of the entomostraca, pertaining to the...; en'.to.mōs''.trā.kanz; entomostraca, en'.to.mōs''.trā.kah, a sub-class of crustaceans.

It will be observed that these words beginning with ento- are not connected with the Greek prefix ento-, within, but with entōmon, an insect, which is en-temnein, to cut into [parts], as "insect" is in sectum (Latin), cut into [parts].

Entozoon, en'.to.zō'-ōn; entozoa, en'-to.zō'-ah. (See above, Ento-.)

Entrails (plu.), en'.trālz, the intestines. (Sing. rarely used.)

French entrailles; Low Latin enteralia; Greek entēra, intestines.

Entram'mel, to obstruct, to entangle; entram'melled (3 syl.), entram'mell-ing (Rule iii., -EL), entrammell-er. (These words should not have double l.)

Fr. tramail, a drag-net, with en-, "to make" [the captive of a drag net].

Entrance, en'.trānce (noun), en.trānce' (verb).

En'trance, place of entry, admission.

Entrance' better entranse', to ravish with delight; entrānced' better entransed' (2 syl.), entrānc-ing better entrans-ing, entrānce'-ment better entranse'-ment.

"Entrance," French entrer; Latin intrans, intrāre, to enter.

"Entranse." If this is from the French transe, the meaning has been quite perverted. Transe means "a panic," not an ecstasy; but probably it is the Latin transeo, transitus, another form of "transport," which is transporto. (Trans-itus, past or gone over; trans-portus, carried over.) The allusion is to the notion that the spirit in a "transe" is carried or passes out of the body. (See 2 Cor. xii., 2-4.)

Entrap', to catch in a trap; entrapped' (2 syl.); entrapp'-ing (Rule iii.), entrapp'-er.

Old English treppe or trappe, "a snare," with en-, "to make" [the captive of a snare].

Entreat, en.tree', to solicit; entreat'-ed (3 syl., Rule xxxvi.), entreat'-ing, entreat'-ing-ly, entreat'-er.

Entreat'y, plu. entreaties, en.tree'.tīz (Rule xlv.)

French en traître; Latin in tracto, to struggle for something.

Entree, ah'n'tray' (French), the 'right of entry, a "subsidiary" dish of meat handed round to the guests.

Entremets, ah'n'tr.may (French), dainty side-dishes.

In French an entrée is a relish served at the beginning of dinner to "whet the appetite;" and an entremets a relish served after the main joints have been removed (entre mets, a dish between [dinner and dessert]). Our use of these words is very slipshod.

Entrepot (French) ah'n'tr.pō, a warehouse, a storehouse.

This is entre dépôt, a half-way dépôt, lieu où l'on met en dépôt des marchandises que l'on veut porter plus loin.

Entresol, ah'n'tr.sole (French), a room between the ground-floor and the premier étage [prēm'.ě.ā ā.tarj'].

Sol, the ground-plot or floor; entre sol, between the ground-floor and the first floor or best apartment.

Entrench' (not intrench), to make a trench round [something]; entrenched' (2 syl.), entrench'-ing, entrench'-ment.

Intren'chant, not to be cut or wounded.

This last word shows that intrench should mean "not cut," and therefore never should have been used for the word entrench which is tranchée (French) "a trench," with en-, "to make" [a trench].

Entropium, en.trōp'.i.um, a turning inwards of the eyelashes.

Greek en trōpē, a turning inwards.

Entrust, to confide to another; entrust'-ed, entrust'-ing.

Old English treoth, "a pledge," with en-, "to make" [a pledge]. To "entrust," is to confide something to another "as a pledge."

Entry, plu.entries, en'.triz (Rule xlv.), a place by which persons enter, the right of entrance, registration in a book, taking possession of real property, a writ of possession.

Single Entry, a system of book-keeping in which the items are posted only once, generally under the buyer's name.

Double Entry, a system of book-keeping in which every item is posted twice, once on the Dr. side and once on the Cr. side, under reverse conditions.

French entrée (by double entry, en partie double; by single entry, en partie simple). (See Enter and Entrance.)

Eatwine, en.twinc', to wreath; entwined' (2 syl.), entwīn'-ing (Rule xix.), entwīn'-er, entwine'-ment (better with in-.)

Old Eng. twīn[an], to twine; in-twīne, to twine together.

Enumerate, e.nū'.me.rate, to reckon up one by one; enū'me-rāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), enū'merāt-ing, enū'merāt-or (R. xxxvii.); enumeration, e.nū'.me.ray''.shun; enumerative, -tīv.

French énumérer, énumération, énumératif; Latin enūmērātio, enūmērātor, enūmērāre, supine enūmērātum, to reckon up.

Enunciate, e.nūn'.sī.ate, to make known; enun'ciāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), enun'ciāt-ing; enunciation, e.nūn'.sī.a''.shun; enun'ciat-ive, e.nūn'.sī.a.tīv; enun'ciator, enun'ciatory.

Latin enunciatio, a proposition; enunciativus, enunciator, enunciare (enuncio, to announce aloud, to disclose.)

Ennure, ĕn.ūre' (better than inure), to habituate; ennured' (2 syl.), enūr'-ing (Rule xix.)

Norm. Fr. ure, "practice," with en-, "to make or effect" [by practice].

Envelope (noun), en'.ve.lope. Envelop (verb), en.vel'.ōp (R. li.)

Envel'op, envel'oped (3 syl.), envel'op-ing, envel'op-ment, to cover with a wrapper; to cover entirely. (One l, one p.)

En'velope, a wrapper for letters, &c.

French envelopper (with double p), enveloppe, enveloppement; Italian viluppo, a bundle or packet; inviluppare, to wrap up.

Enven'om, to impregnate with venom; enven'omed (3 syl.), enven'om-ing.

Fr. envenimer (!); Lat. venenum, with en-, "to infuse" [poison].

Envi'able, en'.vi.a.b'l; envious, en'.vi.us. (See Envy.)

Environ, en.vī'.ron, to encompass. Environs, en'.vi.rōnz, suburbs; envi'roned (3 syl.), envi'ron-ing, envi'ron-ment.

French environner, environs (plu.), virer, to turn round.

En'voy, plu. envoys, en'.voiz (Rule xlv.), a state messenger; en'voy-ship, the office of envoy (-ship, Old Eng. office).

En'vy, vexation at another's good, to feel vexed at another's good, to grudge; envies, en'.vīz (3rd pers. sing.); envied, en'.vīd; en'vi-er, en'vi-able, en'viable-ness, en'viably; envious, en'.vī.us; en'vious-ly, en'vious-ness, envy-ing.

French envie, envier, envieux; Latin invidia, invidiosus, v. invidēo (to see into one). "Envy" means a looking too closely into another.

Enwrap, en.rap', to cover (and tie up with string or cord); enwrapped, en.rapt'; enwrapp-ing, en.rap'.ing (Rule i.)

Old English rdp, "a cord," with en-, "to fasten" [with a cord]. The force of en- is to convert the noun into a verb.

Eocene [period], e'.o.seen (in Geol.), the earliest of the four tertiary periods, which consist of the following divisions:

Plistocene, plī'.sto.seen, nearest the earth's surface.

Greek pleistós kainós, the most recent.

Pliocene, plī'.o.seen, more recent than the group below.

Greek pleiōn kainós, more recent than the "miocene."

Miocene, mī'.o.seen, less recent than the two groups above.

Greek meiōn kainós, less recent than the "pliocene."

Eocene, ē'.o.seen, the dawn of modern [times].

Greek ēōs kainós, recent dawn; i.e., the dawn of modern times.

Eolian, ē.ō'.lī.ăn (ought to be e.ōl'.ī.an), pertaining to Æolus (E'.ō.lus), god of the winds; Æolic, e.ōl'.īk (not e.ō'.līk), pertaining to Æolia (E.ōl'.ī.ah), in Greece.

Eolipile, e.ōl'.ī.pīle, an hydraulic instrument.

Latin Eoli pila, the ball of Æolus. Its object is to exhibit the convertibility of water into steam.

-eon (Fr. termination of nouns), an instrument; as truncheon.

E'on (in Platonic philosophy), an attribute. The Platonists taught that Deity is an assemblage of eons (attributes); the Gnostics taught that eons are corporeal "out-comes" of deity, fellow-workers in creation. (Greek aión.)

Ep-, for epi- (Greek prefix before a vowel), on, upon, during.

Epact, e'.pakt, the excess of the solar over the lunar year. The annual excess is nearly eleven days.

Greek epaktós, adventitious (epi agó, to bring upon or add).

Epaulet, ep'.áw.lét, a badge worn on the shoulder; ep'aulett-ed (Rule iii., -t), furnished with epaulets.

French épaulette (épaule, Latin scápula, the shoulders).

Epergne, e'.pern', an ornamental dish for the centre of a dinner table, generally elevated and furnished with branches.

This is an example of a French word used by us in a sense quite foreign to its French meaning. What we call an "epergne," the French call a surtout; what we call a "surtout" they call a par-dessus. The word should be spelt epargne.

French épargne, parsimony, a treasury. Our epergne is a little "treasury" of sweetmeats, fruits, and flowers. Caisse d'épargne, a savings bank where very small deposits are taken. (Germ. sparen.)

Eph- (Greek prefix epi-), before an aspirate.

Ephemera (plu.), effēm'.e.rah, a fever, insect, &c., lasting only a single day; ephemeral, effēm'.e.räl, evanescent.

Ephemeris, plu. ephemerides, effēm'.e.ris, ef'.e.mer'ry.dees, an almanac of the daily positions of a heavenly body: as the ephemeris of the sun, &c.; ephemerist, effēm'.e.rist, one who studies the daily motions of the planets by means of an ephemeris. (-phe- long in the Greek.)

Greek éphēmēria, éphēmeris, plu. éphēmeridēs; Latin ephēmēris, ephēmēron, plu. ephēmēra; French éphémère, éphémérides.

Ephesian, Effē'.zhī.an, pertaining to Ephesus (Eff'fe.sus).

Ephod, ēf'.ōd, a garment worn by the Jewish priesthood.

Epi- (Greek prefix), on, upon, during, consequent on.

Ep- before a vowel: as epact (ep agó).

Eph- before an aspirate: as ephēmera (eph hēmera).

Epi- before a consonant: as epiderm (epi derma).

Epic [poem], a narrative in heroic verse: as Homer's Iliad and Odyssey (Greek), Virgil's Ænēid (Latin), Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered and Dante's Divina Comēdia (Italian), Camöen's Lusiad (Portuguese), and Milton's Paradise Lost.

Latin epicus; Greek epikós; French épique (Greek ēpós, a word).

Epicarp, ep'.i.karp, the outer skin of fruits;

Sarcocarp, sar'.ko.karp, the fleshy or edible part of fruits;

Endocarp, the stone or kernel of fruits.

Greek epi karpos, upon the fruit; sarkō karpos, fleshy fruit; endo karpos, inside the fruit.

Epicene, ep' i. seen (in Gram.), common to both sexes.

Latin epicœnus, of both genders; Greek epi koinôs, in common.

Epicure, ep' i. kure, a man addicted to the pleasures of the table; epicurean, ep' i. ku. rec'. an (not ep' i. kû'. re. an), a /j.

Epicurism, ep' i. kû'. rizm, the habits of an epicure;

Epicureanism, ep' i. ku. rec'. an. izm, the tenets of Epicûrus.

Epicurize (R. xxxii.), ep' i. ku. rize, to live like an epicure;
ep' icurized (4 syl.), ep' icuriz-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin Epicurus; Greek Epikouros, a Greek philosopher who taught that "happiness is the end and aim of life," but "happiness" has been perverted into the pleasures of the table.

Epicycle, ep. i. sî'. k' l, a little circle whose centre is on the circumference of a greater circle.

Epicycloid, ep' i. sîk'. loid, a curve described by the movement of the circumference of one circle on the circumference of another; epicycloid-al, ep' i. sî. kloid'. -âl (adj.)

Greek epi kuklôs, upon [another] circle; "epicycloid" is epicycle eidôs, resembling an epicycle.

Epidemic. Endemic. Contagious.

Epidemic, ep' i. dêm'. ik, a temporary disease attacking many persons at the same time (Gk. epi dêmos, upon the people): epidemic-al, ep' i. dêm'. i. kâl; epidem'ical-ly.

Epidemology, ep' i. de. mōl'. -ō. jy, a medical treatise on the subject of epidemics; epidemological, ep' i. dêm'. o. loj'. -i. kâl.

¶ Epidemic disease, a disease of a temporary character not limited to one locality.

Endemic disease, a temporary disease limited to a locality.

Contagious disease, a disease communicated by contact.

An epidemic is diffused by disease spores (1 syl.) in the air.

Greek ēpidēmōs, popular, general, diffused throughout the nation.

An endemic is due to bad drainage, or other local conditions.

Greek endēmos, at home, local, limited to one spot.

A contagion is communicated, like the plague, by contact.

Latin contāgio (con tago, i.e. tango, to touch together).

Epidermic. Endermic, ep' i. der'. mîk, en' der'. mîk.

Epidermic (adj.), pertaining to the outer skin or cuticle.

Endermic (adj.), something put on the skin to be absorbed by it. (Greek en derma, [put] on the skin.)

Epidermal, ep' i. der'. mâl, same as epidermic.

Epiderm or epidermis, ep' i. derm or ep' i. der'. mîs, the scarf, the cuticle (kû'. ti. k' l) or outer skin of the body.

Gk. epi derma, [the skin] upon the skin; Fr. épidermique, épiderme.

Epigastric, pertaining to the upper part of the abdo'men.

Epigastrium, ep'i.gās''.tri.um, popularly called "the pit of the stomach." (No connection with the word gas.)

Gk. epi gastēr, upon or above the paunch; Fr. épigastre, épigastrique.

Epigee, ep'i.je, same as Perigee (q.v.)

Epigenesis, ep'i.jěn''.e.sis. Evolution, e'.vo.lū''.shun.

Evolution is that theory of generation which considers the germ to pre-exist in the parent, or "Whose seed is in itself" (Gen. i. 11, 12), and this germ being "evolved" becomes an offspring.

Epigenesis, the theory which considers that the germ does not pre-exist, that "the seed is not in the parent stock," but is produced. Thus, in a flower, according to this theory, the "embryo" does not pre-exist in the parent flower, but is generated as well as evolved by the fecundating organs of the plants.

Gk. epi gēnēsts, [the germ] born after [the parent stock had existence].

Epiglottis, ep'i.glōt''.tis, the valve which covers the orifice of the windpipe when food or drink is swallowed; epiglottic. (The "o-" is long in the Greek glōttis.)

Greek epi glōttis, on [the root of] the tongue; French épiglote.

Epigone, e.pig'.ō.ne (in Bot.), the cellular layer which, in mosses, covers the young seed-case. Epigoni, e.pig'.ō.ni, the seven sons of seven Grecian chiefs, who conducted, without success, the first mythical war against Thebes.

"Epigone," Greek epi gōnē, upon the seed [case].

"Epigoni," Greek epi-gōnoi, offspring.

Epigram, ep'i.grām, a single idea in verse so contrived as to surprise the reader with a witticism or ingenious turn of thought; epigrammatic, ep'i.grām.māt''.ic (double m), of the nature of an epigram; epigrammatical (double m), ep'i.grām.māt''.i.kāl; epigrammat'ical-ly.

Epigrammatist, ep'i.grām''.ma.tist, a writer of epigrams.

Gk. epigramma (epi grapho, [an inscription] written upon [something]).

"In-scription" (Latin in scribo) and "epi-gram" (Greek epi grapho) both mean "written-on" [something].

Epigraph, ep'i.grāf, an inscription on a building, a citation heading a chapter, a motto on the title-page of a book.

Greek epi graphō, written upon [the building, chapter, &c.]

Epilepsy, ep'i.lēp.sy, the "falling-sickness"; epileptic, ep'i.lēp''.tik, affected with epilepsy; epilep'tical (-le- long in Gk.)

Greek epilēpsia, epilēptikōs (epi lambdānō, to sieze on [one]).

Epilogue, ep'i.lōg, an address in prose or verse made to the audience at the close of a drama.

Prologue, pro'.lög, an address in prose or verse preceding a poem or drama.

The vile ending of these words shows we have taken them from the French. The -ue is quite un-English and worse than useless.

French épilogue and prologue; Greek epilōgēs and prōlōgēs; Latin epilōgus and prōlōgus.

Epiphany, e.pīf'.ā.ny, a church festival held on the 6th January, to commemorate the visit of the "wise men from the East" to the child Jesus.

Greek epiphānia, the manifestation [of Christ to the Gentiles]; epi phainō, to show oneself, to present oneself to others.

Epiphyte, ep'.i.fite, a parasitic plant; epiphytic, ep'.i.fīt'.īk (adj.) A parasitic animal is an epizoon, ep'.i.zō'.on.

Greek epi phytōn, [a plant growing] on a plant.

Episcopacy, e.pīs'.kō.pā.sy, church government by bishops, the order of bishops in a country; episcopal, e.pīs'.kō.pāl, pertaining to bishops; episcopally, episcopalian, e.pīs'.-ko.pay".li.an, a member of the episcopal church of England; episcopalianism, e.pīs'.ko.pay".li.an.izm, the system of church government by bishops; episcopate, e.pīs'.ko.pate, the office, order, or rank of bishop.

Gk. ēpiskōpōs. "Episkopos," Gk. epi skōpō; "Inspector," Lat. in spīcō; and "Overseer," Eng. over see, are about equal in meaning.

Episode, ep'.i.sode, a digressive narrative interwoven into the main narrative of an epic poem, &c.; episodic, ep'.i.sōd".īk, of the nature of an episode; episodical, ep'.i.sōd".ī.kāl; episodically. (Has no connection with ode.)

Greek epeiśōdōn, an adventitious part of a narrative poem (epi eis-ōdōs). The entrances of the chorus in the ancient Greek dramas were called eisodoi (the roads in), the ep-eisode is the part between these eisodoi, hence called epi-eisodoi, or intervening matter.

Epistle, e.pīs".l, a letter; epistolary, e.pīs'.tō.lāry (adj.); epistolographer, e.pīs'.tō.lōg".ra.fer; epistolography.

Greek epistolē; Latin epistōla, epistolāris; French épistolographe.

Epitaph, ep'.i.tāf, a monumental inscription; epitaph'-ist.

Gk. epitaphiōn; Lat. epitāphium (epi taphōs, [written] on a tomb).

Epithalamium, ep'.i.rha.lām".i.um, a bridal song.

Greek epithālāmium (epi thālāmīōn, [a song] on the bridal subject).

Epithet, ep'.i.rhēt, an elucidative word; epithet'-ic.

Greek epithētōs (epi tithēmi, [a word] added to [another]).

Epitome, e.pīt'.o.me, an abridgment, a summary.

Epitomise, e.pīt'.o.mīze; epitomised (4 syl.), epitomīs-ing (Rule xix.), epitomīs-er, epitomist.

Greek ēpitōmē (epi tēmō, to cut into, to gash); Latin epitōma.

Epizoon, ep'.i.zō'.on (not ep'.i.zoon'), a parasitic animal; epizootic, ep'.i.zo.ōt".īk. A parasitic plant is an epiphyte, ep'.i.fite.

Entozoon, en'.to.zō'on, an animal which lives inside another.

Greek epi zōōn, [an animal living] upon [another] animal.

(Every word beginning with epi- is from the Greek.)

Epoch. Era. Age; e'.pōk, e'.rah, age (1 syl.)

An epoch is not continuous, but is simply that point of time marked by some important event, from which future years are counted.

An era is continuous. It starts from some epoch, and continues till a new epoch introduces a new era.

An age is a period of time distinguished by some characteristic, but not ushered in by any epoch or striking event:

Thus the birth of Christ was the epoch from which the Christian era began.

The present period is the "age of coal." We have had the golden age, silver age, iron age, and age of bronze.

Greek epōchē (epēpilechō, to hold back, to stop, to pause, because the preceding era "stops" at the new epoch, from which a new era begins); Latin epōcha; French époque.

Epode, ep'.ōde, the third and last part of an ode; epodic, ep.od'.īk.

Greek epōdē (epi adō, i.e. acidō, to sing an addition song).

Eponym, ep'.o.nīm, a race or tribe name from some founder.

Anonym, an'-o.nīm, one without a name.

Pseudonym, su'-do.nīm, a false or assumed name.

Synonym, sin'.o.nīm, a word of the same meaning as another.

(We have followed the Latin forms in these words, but it would be hard to say why ōnīma was preferred to the more regular ōnōma.)

"Eponym" is no Latin word, but is formed on the Latin type.

Greek ep[epi]ōnīma for ōnōma, from [a man's] name.

"Anonym," Lat. anōnymus; Gk. an [anēu] ōnīma, without a name.

"Pseudonym," Lat. pseudōnymus; Gk. pseudēs ōnīma, false name.

"Synonym," Greek sun ōnīma [another name] with your own name.

Epsilon, ep.sī.lōn (not ep'.sī.lōn), the Greek short e (ε).

Greek psīlōs, naked, bare; v. psīlēō, to rub quite bare.

Epsom Salt (not Epsom salts), sulphate of magnesia, originally obtained by evaporation from certain springs in Epsom (Surrey). The manufactured article is called Epsomite.

(-ite, in chemistry, denotes a salt formed from an acid with a salifiable base. Epsomite has magnesia for its base.)

Equable, ēk'.wā.b'l, even, uniform; equable-ness, equably (adv.); equability, ek.wā.bīl''ī.ty.

Equal (noun and verb), e'.kwūl; equalled (2 syl., Rule iii., -AL), equal-ly (adv.), equal-ness.

Equal-ise, e.kwūl.īze (Rule xxxi.); equal-ised (3 syl.), equalis-ing; equalisation, e'.kwūl.ī.zay'shun.

Equality, plu. equalities, e.kwōl'ī.tiz (Rule xlv.)

("Equalled" and "equalling" ought to have only one "l.")

Latin æqualis, æquālitās, æquābilis, æquābilitās, v. æquāre.

Equanimity, e'.kwā.nīm''.i.ty, steadiness of temper.

Latin æquānimitās (æquus animus, evenness of mind).

Equation, e.kwā'.shun, an algebraic process for discovering an unknown quantity. Take this very simple example: If 10 lbs. of sugar cost 5s., what is that per pound?

Let x represent a pound of sugar. Then by the terms given $10x = 5s.$, or 60d. That is the equation, and x the unknown quantity whose value is to be discovered. Divide both sides by 10, and we get $10 \div 10x = 60d. \div 10$, or $x = 6d.$ —Ans.

Equate, e.kwāte', to reduce to an equation; equat'ed (Rule xxxvi.), equat'-ing (Rule xix.)

French équation; Latin æquatio (æquus, equal).

Equator, e.kwā'.tor, the great circle which hypothetically divides the globe into two hemispheres, one N. and the other S.; equatorial, e'.kwā.tōr''.ri.āl; equato'rial-ly.

French équateur, équatorial; Latin æquātor (æquus, equal).

Equerry, an officer in a prince's household, who has charge of the horses. (Double r a blunder.)

(This is a disgraceful word, being in the first place a perversion of the French écurie, a stable; and next a blunder for ecuyer, the gentleman master of the royal stables.) Latin equus, a horse.

Equestrian, e.kwēs'.trī.an, a horseman.

Lat. equestris, pertaining to a horse; Fr. équestre. Our word is ill-chosen, because equestria (Lat.) means the benches in the theatre appropriated to the knights, and equestrian should be its adj.

Equi-, e'.kwi- (Latin æqui-), equal.

(Every word, except equip and its derivatives, beginning with equi-, is from the Latin, or has been formed of Latin elements.)

Equiangular, e'.kwi.ăn''.gu.lar, having equal angles.

Latin æqui-angulāris (æquus angulus); French équiangle.

Equidistant, e'.kwi.dīs''.tant, at equal distances.

Latin æqui-distans (ex æquo distans); French équidistant.

Equilateral, e'.kwi.lăt''.e.ral, having equal sides.

Lat. æqui-lătērālis (æquus lātus, gen. lătēris); French équilatéral.

Equilibrium, e'.kwi.lib''.ri.um, equal balance.

Latin æqui-librium (æquus libra, a balance); French équilibre.

Equimultiple, e'.kwi.mūl''.ti.p'l, an equal multiple, a number multiplied by the same multiplier as another.

This word exists neither in Latin nor French. It is compounded of æqui- and -multiple (French). Latin multiplīco, to multiply.

Equine, ēk'.wīne, pertaining to the horse. Equidæ, ēk'.wī.dee, the horse tribe. (Latin equinus; æquus, a horse.)

Equinox, e'kwĩ.nox, the time when a solar day has the sun twelve hours above the horizon, and twelve hours below (March 21st and September 23rd).

Equinoctial, e'kwĩ.nõk''shāl, occurring at the time of the equinoxes, pertaining to the equinoxes; equinoctial-ly.

Latin æqui-noctium, æqui-noctiālis; French équinoxe, équinoxial.

Equip, e.kwĩp', to fit out with all that is required; equipped' (2 syl.), equipp'-ing (Rule iv. "Qu" = kw, is treated as a consonant); equip'-ment; equipage, ẽk'wĩ.page.

Fr. équiper, équipage, équipement (esquif, a boat or skiff). It originally meant a ship furnished with its complement of boats. Roquefort.

Equipoise, e'kwĩ.poize', equilibrium, equality of weight.

This word exists neither in Latin nor French. It is compounded of equi- and pondus. French poids (weights). "Avourdupoise" shows the same word, poise for poids.

Equiponderant, e'kwĩ.põn''de.rant, being of the same weight; equiponderance, e'kwĩ.põn''de.rance, equipoise.

French équipondérante, équipondérance; Latin æqui pondēris, pondérare, to weigh [equally].

Equisetaceæ, ẽk'wĩ.se.tay''-se-e, the horse-tail and other plants of the same order; equisetum, ẽk'wĩ.sec''tum, a single specimen of the order; plu. equise'ta or equise'tums.

Equisetite, ẽk'wĩ.sec''tite, a fossil equisetum.

Latin equisetum and equisetis (equi sēta, horse's bristle). In Bot., -aceæ denotes an order of plants. In Geol., -ite denotes a fossil.

Equitable, ẽk'wĩ.tũ.b'l, just, fair; equitable-ness, equitably.

Equity, ẽk'wĩ.ty, justice even if not in conformity with the rigid letter of law; Court of equity, plu. Courts of equity, courts in which justice is administered according to previous judgments, with discretionary power in the judge.

Latin æquitas (æquis, equal); French équitable, équité.

Equivalent, e.kwĩv'.a.lent, equal in value, compensation; equiv'alent-ly, equiv'alence, equiv'alency, plu. -lencies.

Lat. æquivalentia, æquivalentis, gen. æquivalentis; Fr. équivalent.

Equivocal, e.kwĩv'.o.kāl, doubtful, bearing two meanings; equiv'ocal-ness, equiv'ocal-ly.

Equivocate, e.kwĩv'.õ.kate, to quibble; equiv'ocāt-ed (R. xxxvi.); equiv'ocāt-ing (R. xix.), equiv'ocāt-or (R. xxxvii.); equivocatory, e.kwĩv'.õ.kã.t'ry; equivoque, ẽk'wĩ.voke, a quibble; equivocation, e.kwĩv'.o.kay''shun.

Latin equivocus, equivocatio, equivocātor (æque vōco, to call two things equally [by one name]); French equivoque.

-er (termination of verbal nouns) means an agent, a doer: as ruler; (added to nouns) and meaning an agent, it is sometimes -ster: as malt-ster; (added to names of places) it means an inhabitant of that place: as London-er; (after t- and s-) the termination of verbal nouns from the Latin is generally -or: as act-or, spons-or.

-er, the comparative affix (Ang.-Sax. ær, before, superior): as great-er. (The superlative affix is -est.)

This comparative is used with almost all monosyllables capable of comparison: as full, full-er.

With most dissyllabic adjectives accented on the final syl.: as genteel', genteel'-er.

With adjectives of two syllables in which the last syllable is elided: as able, abl-er.

With many adjectives of two syllables ending in -y.

¶ If an adjective comes under Rule i., the final consonant is doubled: as red, redd-er.

If it comes under Rule xi., the -y is changed to -i: as happy, happi-er.

If it comes under Rule xix., the final -e is dropped: as polite, polit-er.

Era, epoch, age; e'rah, e'.pök, age (1 syl.)

Era, a succession of years dating from some important event.

Epoch, an important event from which an era begins.

Age, a period of time characterised by some leading feature.

The birth of Christ was an epoch, from which the Christian era begins.

The iron age is a period of history characterised by incessant wars.

Latin æra, épôcha; French ère, époque, age (Latin ætās).

Eradicate, e.răd'.i.kate, to root out; erad'icāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), erad'icāt-ing, erad'icāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); eradicable, e.răd'.i.kă.b'l; erad'icable-ness, erad'icably; eradication, e.rad'.i.kay''.shun; eradicative, e.răd'.i.kă.tiv.

Latin eradicāre, supine eradicātum (e radix, [pulled up] from the roots); French éradication.

Erase, e.race', to scratch out; erased' (2 syl.), erās'-ing (R. xix.); erās'-er; erasure, e.ray'.zhur; erasable, e.ray'.sa.b'l (Rule xxiii.); erase'-ment, effacement.

Latin erādere, supine erānus; French raser, to shave.

Ere, air; e'er, air; ear, ēr; air; are, r; heir, air; here, he'r; hear, he'r; hair; hare (1 syl.)

Ere, air, before in time, sooner. (Old English ær.)

E'er, contraction of ever. (Old English æfer.)

Ear, ēr, organ of hearing. (Old English ear.)

Air, atmosphere. (Latin aer.)

Are = r (Norse plural of the Anglo-Saxon beo).

Heir, air, the next male successor. (Latin haeres.)

Here, hēr, in this place. (Old English hēr.)

Hear, hēr, to apprehend with the "ear." (Old Eng. hȳr[an].)

Hair of the head. (Old English hēr.)

Hare (1 syl.), a quadruped so called. (Old English hara.)

Erect, e.rekt', upright, to raise, to build, to set up; erect'-ed (R. xxxvi.), erect'-ing, erect'-ness, erect'-ly, erect'-able (R. xxiii.); erectile, e.rekt'.il, that which may be erected.

Erect'-er, one who erects; erect'-or, a muscle which erects.

Erection, e.rēk'.shun, an upraising, a building, &c.

French erection, erecteur (muscle); Latin erectio, erector, erectus, v. erigere, supine erectum (e rego, to guide forth).

-erel (diminutive): as cock, cockerel, a little chanticleer.

Eremit, er're.mite, a hermit. (The -re- is long in Greek.)

Gk. erēmitēs (erēmia, a desert). "Hermit" is a perversion of eremite.

Erin, er'rin, Ireland. (Keltic Eri or Iar and innis, Western island.)

Erisa, er'i.sah, a flower.

Greek ereiko, to break. Supposed to break the stone in the bladder

Ermine, er'mīn, one of the weasel kind, a fur; ermined (2 syl.)

French hermine, i.e. d'Arménie, the animal from Armenia.

Erode, e.rodē, to gnaw away; erōd'-ed, erōd'-ing; erōd'-ent.

Erosive, e.rō'.siv; erosion, e.rō'.zhun.

French érosion; Latin erōdens, gen. erōdentis, v. erōdere, erōsio (e rōdo, to gnaw off or out).

Erotic, e.rōt'.ik, pertaining to love: as erotic poetry, love songs.

French erotique; Greek erōtikos (poetry of ērōs, love, o long).

Erpetology better herpetology, her'.pe.tōl'.ō.gy; that part of natural science which treats of reptiles; erpetologist better herpetologist, her'.pe.tōl'.ō.gist.

(The erroneous spelling, as usual, is from the French.)

French erpétologie; Greek herpētōn, a reptile (herpō, to creep), with logos, a discourse on [reptiles]; -ist, Greek -istēs, one who.

Err, to wander, to be in error. (One of the 14 monosyllables [not in f, l, or s] which double the final letter: as add, odd; burr, err; bitt, butt; ebb, egg; buzz and whizz, R. vii.)

Err, erred (1 syl.), err'-ing, err'-ing-ly, err'-er, one who errs;

Error, ēr.ror, a mistake; erroneous, ēr.rō'.nē.us; erro'-neous-ly, erro'-neous-ness; err'-or-ist.

Errand, ēr.rand, a message; errand-boy, a boy messenger.

Errant, ēr.rant, wandering; errantry, ēr.ran.trȳ.

Erratic, ēr.răt'ik, having no fixed orbit; erratical, ēr.răt'.i.kăl (not e.răt'.i.kăl); erratical-ly.

Erratic, plu. errat'ics or erratic blocks (in Geol.), boulders.

Erratum, plu. errata, ēr.ray'.tah, a printer's error.

Fr. error, errant, errante, errantry, erratum, and errata; Lat. errans, gen. errantis, errantia, erratum, and errata, errare, to wander.

Erse (1 syl.) same as Gaelic (gay'.lik), native Irish and Highland Scotch. (Erse, a contraction of Erinish, Irish.)

Erst, first (super. of ere, Ang.-Sax. ēr, erra (comp.), ērest (sup.))

Erudite, ēr.ru.dite, learned; erudite-ly; erudition, -dish'un.

French érudit, érudition; Latin eruditio, erūdire, sup. eruditum (e [ex] rudis doctus, [to convert] from ignorance to learning).

Erginuous, e.ru'.jī.nūs, resembling the rust of brass or copper.

French érugineux; Latin ærugo, rust of brass, æruginosus.

Eruption, e.rüp'.shun, an outburst of a volcano, flood, &c., a breaking out of spots or pustules on the skin; eruptive.

Irruption, a bursting in: as the sudden invasion of a country; irruptive, ir.rüp'.tīv; irruptive-ly.

French éruption, éruptif, irruption, irruptive; Latin eruptio, v. erumpo, supine eruptum (e rumpto, to burst out from); irruptio, irrumpo, supine irruptum (ir [in] rumpo, to burst in).

-ery, -ary (Latin -eria, -aria, termination of nouns), denotes a place for: as buttery, a place for butter; library.

Eryngo, ēr.ŋi'.go (not erynga), the sea-holly and similar plants.

Gk. ἐρίγγιον (éruggos, the beard of goats), referring to the thistly head.

Erysipelas, ēr'.i.sip''.ē.lūs, a fiery redness of the skin; erysipelatous, ēr'.i.sī.pel''.ū.tūs, adj. (-y- shows it is Greek.)

Greek ἐρύσις πίλας, drawing near. "Parce que cette maladie s'étend ordinairement de proche en proche."—Bouillet. Latin erysipēlas, St. Anthony's fire; French érisipele (wrong), érisipélateux.

Erythema, ēr'.ī.rhē''.mah, a superficial redness of the skin; erythematous, ēr'.ī.rhē''.ma.tus, adjective of the above.

Erythrine, ēr'.ī.rhine, a mineral of a red colour.

Erythrite, ēr'.ī.rhrite, a flesh-coloured variety of feldspar.

(The -y- shows that these words have a Greek origin.)

Greek ἐρυθéma, a blush (ἐρυθρός, red).

-es, the plural termination of nouns ending in -s, -sh, -ch (soft), and -x: as "gas," gases; "glass," glasses; "fish," fishes; "church," churches; "fox," foxes. When ch = k only -s is added: as "monarch," monarchs (not monarches).

¶ In the 3rd per. sing., pres. tense, indic. mood, the same rule holds: as to "bias," he biases; to "guess," he guesses; to "clash," clashes; to "enrich," enriches; to "box," boxes.

-as was the plural masc. of one of the two "strong" Ang.-Sax. declensions. It was changed to -es after the Conquest, in conformity with the French plural, and ultimately supplanted other forms.

Es-, the prefix en- or ex- before -p, -s, and sometimes -c, -t.

Escalade, ěs'.kǎ.ladě'', an attack on a town, &c., by scaling ladders, to scale by ladders; es'calād''-ed, es'calād''-ing.

French escalade; Latin scala, with es- [en], to attack with ladders.

Escape, ěs'.kapé', avoidance, to evade; escaped' (2 syl.), escāp'-ing (Rule xix.), escāp'-er.

Escape'-ment, a contrivance in clocks and watches by which the circulating motion of the wheels is converted into a vibratory one;

Escapade, es'.ka.pard' (not es'.ka.paid'), the "fling" of a horse, a freak involving impropriety and mischief.

French escapade, échapper, échappement; Latin e[ex] privative or negative, and cipio to take, to fail to take.

Escarp, ěs'.karp' (in Fort.), the steep slope, to form a slope; escarped' (2 syl.), escarp'-ing, escarp'-ment, ground cut away nearly perpendicularly to prevent an enemy from climbing up it into the fort above.

The noun is generally called the scarp, and is opposed to counterscarp. The scarp of a rampart slopes down to the ditch or fosse, and the counterscarp is the exterior slope of the ditch. Thus in V, the long line is the "scarp," the short one the "counterscarp," and the space between the "ditch."

Fr. escarper, escarpement; Ital. scarpa, a slope; (Lat. scalpo, to cut).

-esce (Lat. -esc[o], added to verbs) is inceptive: as effervesce.

-escence (Latin -escentia), -sc- is inceptive, and -escence added to nouns indicates an inceptive state: as convalescence, a state of health gradually improving more and more.

Escheat, es.chēte', real property which lapses to the overlord through failure of heirs or by forfeiture, to revert to the overlord or to the crown; escheat'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), escheat'-ing, escheat'-or (Rule xxxvii.), escheat'or-ship (-ship, Old Eng. "office of"), escheat'-able; escheat'-age.

French échoir; Low Latin eschata, escator, escatria, escheatorship.

Eschew, ěs'.tchu', to avoid; eschewed' (2 syl.), eschew'-ing.

German scheuen, to shun, with e, "from"; Norman eschever, to avoid.

Escort, (noun) es'.kort, (verb) ěs'.kort' (Rule l.), an attendant, a cortége; to conduct someone as an attendant, to attend on a person as a guard of honour; escort'-ed, escort'-ing.

French escorte, escorter; Latin scortca, a traveller's bag or cloak.

Escritoire. es'.krě.twor, a writing-case or desk.

French écriture (écritures; Latin scriptūra), scripturarius, v. scribo.

Esculent, ěs'.kǔ.lěnt, fit for food. (Fr. esculent; Lat. esculendus.)

Escutcheon, ēs.kūt'.shūn, the shield of coat-armour, the ornamental shield of a key-hole; escutcheoned, ēs.kūt'.shūnd.

Fr. écusson, écussonné; Lat. scutum, a shield; Gk. skutos, a hide.

-ese (French -is, -ois, -ais; Latin -ensis), means "belonging to," "a native of": as Chinese.

Esophagus, e.sōf'.ă.gūs, the gullet; esophagotomy, e.sōf'-ă.got'-ō-mŷ, the operation of cutting the gullet.

French asophage. This wretched compound is made up of the future tense of phéro [oisé, I shall carry], and phāgōs, a glutton. The meaning is "I convey food" [to the stomach], but phāgō, "I eat," has no noun like phāgōs, meaning "food."

"Esophagotomy" is asophagos temnō, to cut the esophagus.

Esoteric, ēs'.o.tēr'rik, private. Exoteric, ex'.o.tēr'rik, public; esoterical, ēs'.o.tēr'ri.kāl; esoterical-ly.

Esoterics, ēs'.o.tēr'riks, mysterious or hidden doctrines;

Exoterics, ex'.o.tēr'riks, those parts of mysteries which may be taught to the general public.

French ésotérique; Greek esōterikōs (esōtērōs, inner).

Pythagōras stood behind a curtain when he lectured. Those disciples who were admitted within the veil were termed esoteric, and the rest exoteric. Aristotle called those who were admitted to his abstruse morning lectures his esoteric disciples, and those who came to his popular evening discourses his exoteric auditors.

Espalier, ēs.pāl.yer, a fruit tree trained to stakes.

Fr. espalier; Lat. palus, "a stake," with es-[en-], trained to a stake.

Especial, ēs.pēsh'āl, chief, particular; especial-ly.

French spécial; Latin spēciālis. (The initial e- is to soften the s.)

Espionage, ēs.pē'.o.narj; espied, espies, &c. (See Espy.)

Esplanade, ēs.plā.nūde' (in Fort.), an open space outside the glacis, a promenade between the sea and the houses facing it, or between the ramparts and the town.

Fr. esplanade; Lat. planum, with es-[en-], "to make" [a level plane].

Espouse, es.pōwz' (-pouse, to rhyme with cows), to betroth, to adopt an opinion or cause; espoused' (2 syl.), espous'-ing (Rule xix.), espous'-er, espous'-al;

Espousals (no sing.), ēs.pōw'.zālz, marriage, betrothal.

French épousailles, épouser; Latin sponsālia (sponsa, a bride).

Espirit de corps, ēs'.prē dē.kōr', the spirit of clanship.

This is Eng.-Fr.; the French phrase is esprit de parti, party spirit.

Espy, ēs.py', to discern; espies, ēs.pīze'; espied, ēs.pīde'; espī'-er (Rule xi.), espī'-al, but espy'-ing.

Espionage, ēs.pē'.o.nāje or ēs.pē'.o.narje, a prying into the acts and words of others, the employment of a spy.

Fr. épier, espionnage; Ital. spiare, to spy; Lat. spēcio, to view.

-esque (French termination of adj.; Latin -iscus), "like," "after the manner of": as picturesque, picture-like,

Esquimaux, plu. Esquimaux, or Eskemo, plu. Eskemos, Es' kĕ.mō, Es' kĕ.mōze, natives of the northern seaboard.

Esquire; ĕs.kwĭr', a young gentleman attendant of a knight, to carry his shield, &c. (escu, Latin scutum, a shield); now appended to the address of the untitled younger sons of the nobility, to untitled officers of the royal court and household, to counsellors of law [not serjeants], to untitled justices of the peace, sheriffs, gentlemen holding a commission in the army or navy below captain, graduates of the universities not in holy orders, &c. By courtesy, appended to the address of lawyers, surgeons, professors, merchants, bankers, gentlemen living on their means, and to almost everyone above the lower middle class.

-ess, the female of a male animal: as lion-ess.

1. All the twenty-two nouns which add -ess to the male without change or contraction are French, and -ess = -esse (Fr.)
2. Ten of the words which contract the masculine noun by omitting the last vowel before adding -ess are French, and -ess represents -ice. The exceptions are "chantr-ess" for chanteuse, with enchantress[e], negress[e], ogress[e].
3. Three are Anglo-Saxon: huntress, mistress, and songstress.
4. Six have a common basis, to which -er or -or is added for the male, and -ess for the female: adulter-er, adulter-ess; cater-er, cater-ess; emper-or, empr-ess; govern-or, govern-ess; murder-er, murder-ess; sorcĕr-er, sorcĕr-ess.
5. The following are irregular: duke, duchess; lad, lass; marquis, marchioness; master, mistress and miss.

French -esse, -ice, and -euse; Italian -essa; Spanish -esa and -isa; Anglo-Saxon -isse; Latin -ix and -issa, &c.; Greek -issa.

Essay, (noun) ĕs'sy, (verb) ĕs.say' (Rule 1); Assay'.

Es'say, plu. es'says (Rule xlv.), a short prose composition on some practical or moral subject; es'say-ist.

Essay' (verb), to try; assayed' (2 syl.), essay'-er, essay'-ing.

Assay', to prove metals; assayed', assay'-er, assay'-ing.

French essayer, n. essai (both meanings); Latin exigo, to try, to prove; (ex ago, to drive out [what is dross, &c.])

Essence, ĕs'sence (Rule lix.), a volatile oil, the concentrated virtues of a plant, drug, &c., the real being divested of all logical accidents; essential, ĕs.sĕn'.shŭl, necessary; essen'tial-ly; essentiality, ĕs.sĕn'.shŭ.ăl'.i.ty.

French essence; Latin essentia, essentialis. Essence is the opposite of absence; the one is es [in] ens "being in," and the other abs-ens "being without." Ens is the present part. of esse, to be.

Establish, ĕs.tăb'lish, to settle, to found permanently; estab'lished, estab'lish-ing, estab'lish-ment.

French établir, établissement; Latin stăbŭlio, stăbŭlimentum,

Estate, ēs.tatē', real property, condition, caste.

French état; Latin status.

Esteem, respect, to respect; esteemed' (2 syl.), esteem'-ing.

Estimable, ēs'.tī.ma.b'l; es'timable-ness, es'timably.

Estimate, es'.tī.mate; es'timāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), es'timāt-ing (R. xix.), es'timāt-or (R. xxxvii.); estimat-ive, ēs'.tī.mā.tiv.

Estimation, es'.tī.may'.shun, regard, esteem.

French estimer, estime, estimable, estimation, estimateur; Latin æstimatio, æstimātor, æstimāre (Greek eis timō, to hold in honour).

Esthetics (no sing.), esē.ṛhēt'.iks, the perception of good taste in nature or art. (The second syllable in Greek is long.)

Greek aisthētikōs [beauty as it is] appreciated by the senses.

Estrange, ēs.trānge, to alienate; estranged' (2 syl.), estrāng'-ing, estrange'-ment (Rule xviii.), withdrawal of affection.

(Followed by from.) (Strange with es- [en], "to make".)

Estrapade, ēs'.trā.pard' (French), the violent jerking of the hind legs when a horse tries to get rid of its rider.

Estreat' (2 syl.), a duplicate of the fines, &c., in the rolls of court, to make...; estreat'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), estreat'-ing.

Latin extractum, an extract; extraho, supine extractum, to draw out.

Estuary, ēs'.tu.ǎ.ry, the mouth of a tidal river, a frith.

French estuaire; Latin æstuārium (æstuāre, to boil or rage).

-et (Latin -et[us] added to nouns), "one who," "a place where or with": as prophet, banquet.

-et (French -ette), diminutive, as locket, packet, pocket.

Et cætera, et sēl'.e.rah (written thus &c. or etc.), and so on. Put at the end of a list of articles to denote that all similar ones are to be included. (Latin, "and the rest.")

Etch, to engrave by the action of an acid; etched (1 syl.), etch'-ing, etch'-er, etching, plu. etchings, designs etched.

German aetzen, to etch, corrode, or fret.

-ete (Lat. et[us], added to adj.), "subject of an action:" complete.

Eternal, ē.tēr'.nal, everlasting; eter'-nal-ly; eternity, ē.ter'.nī.ty.

Eternise, e.ter'.nize (R. xxxi.); eter'nised (3 syl.), eter'nis-ing.

French éternel (wrong), éterniser, éternellement, éternité; æternitas, v. æternāre, æternum (ævum and the affix -turnus, as in diu-turnus).

Etesian, ē.tee'.zī.ǎn, [winds], the Mediterranean monsoons.

Artesian, ar.tee'.zī.an, [well], one made by boring till a perpetual spring of water has been reached.

Fr. étésien (wrong); Lat. etēsius; Gk. ēlēsiāi (ēteĩdsanēmōs, yearly wind). "Artesian," so called from Artesium, i.e., Artois, in France.

Ether, ē'.ṛhēr, a light volatile liquid obtained by distillation of alcohol with an acid, a fluid which pervades the atmosphere, and is supposed to be connected with light and heat; ethereal, ē.rhē.rē.āl, celestial, extremely rarefied; ethe'real-ly; ethercality, ē.rhē'.rē.āl''ī.ty.

Etherealise, ē.rhē'.rē.āl.ize; ethe'realised (5 syl.), ethe'-realis-ing (Rule xix.), etheriform, ē'.rhēr.ī.form.

Fr. éter, éthéré; Lat. æther, æthereus and æthérius; Gk. aithēr, aithérios. It will be seen that ethereal would be the better spelling.

Ethics (no sing.), eth'iks (Rule lxi.), moral philosophy.

Ethical, eth'.i.kal, pertaining to morals; eth'ical-ly.

Fr. éthique, éthiques; Lat. ethica, ethicus; Gk. ethikós (éthós).

Ethiopian, ē'.rhē.ō''pī.an, a native of Ethio'pia; Ethiopic, ē'.rhē.ōp''īk, pertaining to Ethio'pia. An E'thiop.

French Ethiopien; Latin Æthiopia, Æthiopicus, Æthiops; Greek Aithiōpta, Aithiōps (aithos ops, burnt face).

Ethnical, eth'.nī.kāl, relating to the different races of man; eth'nical-ly, eth'nic; ethnicism, eth'.nī.cizm, heathenism.

Anthropology, Ethnology, Ethnography, Archæology.

¶ Anthropology, ān'.thro.pōl''.ō.gy, the general term which embraces the other three, treats of man in his social condition. (Greek anthrōpōs lōgōs, treatise on man.)

1. Ethnology, ēth.nōl''.ō.gy, that part of Anthropology which treats of the origin and dispersion of the different races of man, their characteristics, physical features, &c.

Greek ethnōs lōgōs, treatise on nations.

2. Ethnography, ēth.nōg'.ra.fy, that part of Anthropology which treats of the works, the geographical position, the cities, literature, and laws, of the different races of man.

Greek ethnōs grapho, to describe [physically] the nations.

3. Archæology, ar'.kē.ōl''.ō.gy, treats of the antiquities of a people. (Greek archaiōs lōgos, treatise on antiquities.)

Ethnog'raphy; ethnographic, ēth'.no.grāf''īk; ethnograph-ical, ēth'.no.grāf''ī.kāl; ethnographer, ēth.nōg'.ra.fēr.

Ethnol'ogy; ethnological, ēth'.no.lōj'.i.kāl; ethnol'ogist.

French ethnique, ethnographique, ethnographie, ethnographie, ethnologie; Latin ethnicus; Greek ethnōs, a race or tribe.

Ethology, ethnology, etiology.

Ethology, ēth.ōl''.ō.gy, the science of ethics, shows the bearing of external circumstances on the character.

Greek ethōs lōgōs, treatise on manners and habits.

Ethnology, ēth.nōl''.ō.gy, treats of the human race in its social condition, or as a family of nations.

Greek ethnōs lōgōs, treatise on nations.

Etiology, ē.ti.ōl''.ō.gy, treats on the causes of disease.

Greek aitha lōgōs, treatise on causes.

Ethology; ethological, éth'.ð.løj''i.käl, adj. of ethology.

Ethnology; ethnological, éth'.nð.løj''i.käl; ethnologist.

Etiology; etiological, é'.ti.o.løj''i.käl, adj. of etiology.

Etiolate, e'.ti.ð.lâte, to blanch by exclusion of light; e'tiolât-ed (Rule xxxvi.), e'tiolât-ing; e'tiolation, é'.ti.ð.lay''shun.

French étioier, étiolement; Greek aithô, to light up, to glisten.

Etiquette, ét'.i.kët' (Fr.), the conventional forms of polite society.

The word means a ticket containing directions to be observed by those who attend court.

Etymology, plu. etymologies (Rule xlv.), ét'.i.mðl''.o.jiz, the derivation of words; etymologist, ét'.i.mðl''.o.jist; etymological, ét'.i.mo.løj''i.käl; etymolog'ical-ly.

Etymologise, ét'.i.mðl''.o.jize (Rule xxxi.), to search out etymologies; etymologised (5 syl.), etymol'ogis-ing (Rule xix.); etymon, ét'.i.mðn, the root from which a word is derived. (The -y- points to a Greek origin.)

French étymologie, étymologique, étymologiste, étymologiser; Latin etymologia, etymologicus, etymologus, etymôn; Greek etimologia, etimôn (etimos, the real word).

Eu- (Gk. prefix), good, well, easy. It is opposed to dys [dus].

Every word beginning with eu- is derived from the Greek.

Eucharist, u'kă.rist, the communion; eucharistic, u'.ka.ris''.iik.

French eucharistie, eucharistique; Latin eucharistia, eucharisticus; Greek eucharistia, an act of gratitude; (charis, gratitude, favour).

Eudiometer, ü'.di.ðm''ët.ër, an instrument for analysing atmospheric air; eudiom'etry, the usage of the eudiometer; eudiometric, ü'.di.ð.mët''.rik; eudiomet'rical.

French eudiométrie; Greek eu Δiôs mètrôn, the metre of good air.

Eulogy, plu. eulogies (Rule xlv.), ü'.lo.giz, an encomium; eulogist, ü'.lo.jist, the praiser of another; eulogistic, ü'.lo.jis''.iik; eulogistical, ü'.lo.jis''.i.käl; eulogistical-ly.

Eulogise, ü'.lo.jize (Rule xxxi.), to laud; eulogised (3 syl.), eulogis-ing (Rule xix.), eulogis-er, one who eulogises.

Eulogium, plu. eulogiums, ü.lö'.ji.ümz, same as eulogy.

Latin eulögia and eulögium; Greek eulögeo, to eulogise; eulögia, eulögös (eu lego, to speak well of one).

Eunuch, ü'.nüik, a man who has charge of the women's apartments in the East; eunuchism, ü'.nüik.izm.

"A eunuch," not an eunuch. A precedes u- or eu- pure, that is, making a distinct syl. without the aid of a consonant. In un-der, up-per, use-ful, the u- is not pure.

Euonymus, plu. euonymuses, ü.ðn'.i.müs, the spindle-tree.

Greek eu ðnoma [the plant with] the good name. The tree being poisonous, this euphemism was given to it to avert the evil omen of calling it deadly; so the "Furies" were termed euménides (the good tempered goddesses), to propitiate them by flattery; similarly a grave-yard was called a "sleeping-place" (cemetery).

Euphemism, ū'fe.mīzm, a word or phrase less objectionable used to soften down one more offensive; as a help or employé (for "a servant"); euphemistic, ū'fe.mis'ūk.

"Euphemize" (a good Greek word) might be introduced.

French euphémisme; Latin euphēmisus; Greek euphēmia, euphēmos (eu phēmed, to speak well of one).

Euphony, ū'fō.ny, an agreeable sound of words; euphonic, ū.fōn'ik; euphonical, ū.fōn'ī.kāl; euphon'ical-ly.

Euphonicus, ū.fō'nī.ūs, sounding agreeably; eupho'nious-ly.

Euphonise, ū'fō'nīze (Rule xxxi.); eu'phonised (3 syl.), eu'phonis-ing (Rule xix.), eu'phonis-er.

Fr. euphonie, euphonique; Lat. euphōnia; Gk. eu phōné, good sound.

Euphorbia, ū.for'bi.āh, the spurge.

So named from Euphorbos, physician to Juba, king of Libya.

Euphrasy, ū'frū.sy (in Bot.), the plant "eye-bright."

Greek euphraino, to give joy.

Called "eye-bright" because it once had the repute of repairing vision.

Euphuism, ū'fū.izm. Euphemism, ū.fē'mīzm.

Euphuism, high-flown diction, affected conceits in language;

euphuist, ū'fū.ist; euphuis'tic, euphuis'tical.

Euphemism, a softening down of unpleasant expressions; euphemist, ū'fē.mist; euphemis'tic, euphemis'tical.

The word comes from John Lilly's book, entitled Euphuës (graceful [phrases and periods]. Greek eu phue, well-formed [periods]).

Eureka, ū.ree'.kāh (not ū.rē.kah, as Dryden writes the word in the line: "Cries Eureka! the mighty secret's found."

A discovery made after long and laborious research. (The word should be heurēka, Greek εὑρηκα, not εὐρηκα.)

The tale is that Hēro asked Archimēdēs to test a golden crown, which the monarch believed to have been alloyed with some baser metal. The philosopher one day stepping into his bath observed that his body removed its own bulk of water. Now for the solution: As all alloys are lighter than gold, a golden crown alloyed will be larger than one unalloyed of the same weight. When this idea flashed across the philosopher's mind he is said to have exclaimed heurēka! (I have hit on it).

Euroclydon, ū.rōk'ū.dōn, a tempestuous wind in the Mediterranean Sea (Acts xxvii. 14), now called the Levan'ter.

Greek eurōkludōn (eurōs kludōn, east or south-east wave-[maker]).

The word "seems to mean a storm from the east" (Liddell and Scott).

European, ū.rō.pee'.ān, a native of Europe, pertaining to Europe.

French européen; Latin Eurōpæus; Greek Eurōpōs (eurōs for eurus ōpōs, wide-spread vision, so called because it beholds many nations).

Eury- (the Lat. spelling of the Gk, eu-ru-), broad, wide, ample.

Eurynotus, ū'rī.nō'.tūs, certain extinct fishes in the coal formations, noted for their high bream-like back.

Greek eurus nōtōs, the big-back [fish].

Eurypterite, ū.rīp'.tē.rīte, a fossil crustacean, noted for its broad swimmers; eurypteridæ, ū.rīp.ter''ry.de, the genus.

Greek eurus plērōn, wide wing, i.e., the "creature with wide oar-like feet" (-ite in Geology, means a fossil; Greek lithos, a stone).

Eustachian, ū.stay'.kī.ăn [tube], a tube which forms a communication between the back of the mouth and the ear.

So named from Bartholomew Eustachius, who discovered it in 1574.

Euterpe, ū.tēr'.pē, the muse of music and inventor of the flute.

Calliope, kāl'.lī.ō.pē (not kāl'.lī'.ō.pē, the epic muse).

Greek kallipōē [kallos ops, [the Muse with the] beautiful voice).

Clio, kli'ō, Muse of history. (Gk. kleiō [klēōs, rumour, news].)

Erato, er'ra.tō (not ē.ray'.tō), muse of love and the lyre.

Greek ērātō, from ērātōs, beloved; ērōs, love.

Euterpe, ū.ter'.pē, the Muse of music.

Greek euterpe, delightful muse.

Melpomene, mēl.pōm'.ē.nē, the Muse of tragedy.

Greek mēlpōmēnē [mousa], the singing [muse], from mēlpō, to sing.

Polyhymnia, pōl'.i.hīm''.nī.ah, the Muse of sacred poetry.

Greek pōliū-umnia (pōlus humnos, [muse of] many hymns).

Terpsichore, terp.sik'kō.rē, the Muse of dancing.

Greek terpsi chorē, delighting in the dance (terpō, to delight).

Thalia, thā.lī'.ah (not thā'.lī.ah), the Muse of comedy.

Greek thaleia [mousa], the blooming muse.

Urania, ū.rān'.ī.ah (not ū.rāy'.nī.ah), muse of astronomy.

The Latin form of the Greek ourāntia, the heavenly [muse].

Evacuate, ē.vāk'ku.ate, to empty, to quit, to eject; evac'uat-ed (R. xxxvi.), evac'uat-ing (R. xix.), evac'uat-or (R. xxxvii.)

Evacuation, ē.vāk'ku.ā''.shūn, a voiding, an emptying.

Evacuative, ē.vāk'ku.a.tīv; evac'uant, a purgative.

French évacuant, évacuatif, évacuer, évacuation; Latin evacuatio, evacuare (e vacuō, to empty out).

Evade, ē.vādē', to elude; evād'-ed, evād'-ing, evād'-er.

Evasion, ē.vay'.zhūn, a subterfuge, a slipping aside;

evasive, ē.vay'.zhū; eva'sive-ly, eva'sive-ness.

French évasif ("evasion" is not French); Latin evādēre, supine evāsūm, evāsio (e vādo, to escape from).

Evaluation, ē.vāl'.u.ā''.shūn, a complete valuation.

Fr. évaluation; Lat. evāleo, vālor, value (e- means "thorough").

Evanescence, ē.vā.nēs''.sent, fleeting; evanes'cent-ly; evanes'cence, ē.vā.nēs''.sense (only six words end in -ense, R. xxvii.)

French évanescence; Latin evanesco, gen. evanescentis, v. evanesco (all verbs in -sco are inceptive (e vanesco, to vanish wholly).

Evangelize, ē.vān'.ge.līze (not evangelise, Rule xxxii.), to convert to Christianity; evan'gelized (4 syl.), evan'geliz-ing (Rule xix.), evan'geliz-er; evangelization, ē.vān'.jē.lī.zay''.shūn; evan'gelist; evangelism, ē.vān'.jē.līsm.

Evangelical, ē.văn.jěl'.ā.kāl, orthodox; evangelical-ly evangelic, ē.văn.jěl'.āk, of gospel tenour.

French évangélique, évangile, évangéliste, évangéliser; Latin evangelicūs, evangelista, evangelium, evangelus, evangeliza; Greek euaggelia, euaggelikós, euaggelion, euaggelistēs, euaggelōs, euaggélizo (eu aggēlia, good tidings). From the announcement to the shepherds, "I bring you good tidings" (εὐαγγελίζομαι ὑμῖν).

Evaporate, ē.văp'.ō.rate (not ē.vă'.pō.rate), to pass off in vapour; evap'orāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), evap'orāt-ing (Rule xix.); evaporation, ē.văp'.ō.ray'.shŭn; evaporative, ē.văp'.ō.ră.tiv; evap'orable; evaporometer, ē.văp'.ō.rōm'.ētēr, an instrument to measure the amount of evaporation made.

French évaporable, évaporer, évaporation; Latin evaporatio, evaporare (e vāpōro, to send out vapours: vāpor, vapour).

Evasion, e.vay'.zhun; evasive, e.vă'.ziv. (See Evade.)

Eve (1 syl.); even, ē.v'n; evening, ēv'e.nŭng, from midday to sunset, in popular language the glooming which precedes night. The first half of the day is called morning. Eve (1 syl.), evening, a vigil, the evening preceding a church festival: as Christmas eve (the evening of December 24th), Midsummer eve (the evening before Midsummer day). This is because the church begins the day from sunset of the preceding day; even-tide, evening time.

Old English ēfen or āfen, āfen-tid, even-tide.

Evection, ē.vēl'.shun (in Astron.), the libration of the moon.

Latin evectio, a carrying out [of its orbit] from solar attraction.

Even, ē.v'n (noun, adj., and adv.) Even (noun), evening.

Even (adj.), level, not odd; even-ly, ē.v'n.lŭ; e'ven-ness.

(The degrees are: nearly even, more nearly even, very nearly even, quite even. "More even" and "most even" are the degrees of not even.)

Old English æfen, efen or efn; (adj.) efenlic, smooth, equal; efenes, evenly, plainly; efennes (n.), evenness. The adv. is efenlice.

Evening, ēv'e.nŭng (2 syl.), not ē.vēn.ing (3 syl.)

Evening song, &c. In this and all similar phrases, evening is not an adjective, but a noun in regimen. It is in fact the "possessive case," but as we have abolished the possessive affix, except in nouns denoting animal life and nouns personified, the 's is omitted.

Event, ē.vēnt', an incident, a result; event'-ful (Rule viii.)

Eventual, ē.vēnt'.u.āl, consequential; event'ual-ly;

Eventuality, ē.vēnt'.u.āl'.ătŭ, contingency. In Phren. it denotes a quick perception of events and their results.

Eventuate, ē.vēnt'.u.ate, to happen as a result or consequence; event'nāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), event'uāt-ing (R. xix.)

French eventuel; Latin eventus, evēnīre, supine eventum (e vēnio, to come out [as a consequence]).

Ever, ěv'ěr, always, at any time; For ever, always, eternally;

For ever and ever, duration without beginning or end.

Ever and anon, occasionally, from time to time, frequently.

Ever so, or Never so (?). Which is correct: Be he ever so wise, or Be he never so wise? Both are correct. The former states the sentence affirmatively, and the latter negatively. "He refuses to hear the voice of the charmer, charm he never so wisely," means "though he charms as no charmer ever did before," or "as never a charmer charmed before." "... charm he ever so wisely," means "though he charms as wisely as [the best] charmer ever charmed." The latter form is now the more usual, and is certainly more in accordance with English idiom.

Old English ēfer or ēfre, ever, always.

Ever- (a prefix), without intermission, never ending, perpetually.

Evergreen, ěv'ěr green, perpetually green, not deciduous.

Everlasting, endless; everlasting-ly, everlasting-ness.

Evermore, ěv'er-more (3 syl.), always.

Evert, ē-vert', to turn aside, to overthrow; evert'-ed (R. xxxvi.), evert'-ing; eversion, ē.věr'.shun; eversive, ē.věr'.siv.

Latin evertēre, supine eversum, eversio (e verto, to turn away from).

Every, ěv'ěrj, all taken one by one, each one of several.

Everyday, common, usual. Everywhere, in every place.

A compound of the Ang.-Sax. æfer and alc, ever-each, all one by one.

Evesdropper, ěv'.drop.per (is the better spelling, but eavesdropper is the more general), a sneak, a surreptitious listener.

Old English efese, eaves; efes dropa (not æfese).

Evict, ē.vikt', to dispossess by legal proceedings; evict'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), evict'-ing; eviction, ē.vik'.shun.

Fr. éviction; Lat. evictio, evictus (e vinco, sup. victum, to expel from).

Evidence, ěv'i.dense, testimony, proof; evident, ěv'i.dent; ev'ident-ly; evidential, ěv'i.děň'.shāl; ev'idential-ly.

To evidence, ev'i.dense, to show by proof; ev'idenced (3 syl.), ev'idenc-ing (Rule xix.)

French evidence, évident; Latin evidentia (video, to see).

Evil, ē'.vil (noun and adj.), wickedness, calamity, wicked, calamitous; ev'il-ly, ev'il-ness; evil-doer, a wicked person.

Evil-eye, a malicious look, a look which has an evil influence.

It was supposed at one time that certain persons possessed the power of darting noxious rays into the object glared at.

Evil-minded, wrongly disposed, malicious.

The Evil-One, the devil, Satan.

Old English æfel or ufel, ufele, evilly; ufelnes, evilness; v. ufel[ian].

Evince, ē.vínce', to make evident; evinced' (2 syl.), evince'-ing (Rule xix.); evince'-ible, evince'-ibly; evincive, ē.vín'.sív.

Latin evincere, to prove, to evince (e vinco, to vanquish wholly). The word means to show what is right by the argumentum ad absurdum, that is, by proving the contrary to be wrong.

Eviscerate, ē.vís'.se.rate, to disembowel; evis'cerāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), evis'cerāt-ing; evisceration, ē.vís'.se.ray''.shun.

Fr. éviscérer, éviscération; Lat. eviscerātor, eviscero (viscēra, bowels).

Evoke, ē.vōke', to call forth; evoked' (2 syl.), evōk'-ing (R. xix.)

Evocation, ē.vo.kay''.shun, the act of calling forth.

French évocation; évoquer; Latin evocatio, evocātor, evocāre (e voco).

Evolve, ē.vōlve', to unroll; evolved' (3 syl.), evolv'-ing, evolv'-er.

Evolution, ēv'.o.lū''.shun, (in Algebra) the extraction of roots.

The reverse process is Involution. Thus—

$\sqrt[3]{27}$, that is, find the cube root of 27 (viz., 3) is an example of Evolution; but 3^3 , that is, raise 3 to the cube or third power (viz., 27) is an example of Involution.

Evolutionary, ē.vo.lu''.shun.a.ry, pertaining to evolution.

French évolution; Latin evolvere, supine evolūtum, evolutio (e volvo, to roll out or unfold; in volvo, to roll on [itself]). In the example given, three is rolled three times on itself.

Evulsion, ē.vūl'.shun, the act of pulling or plucking out.

French évulsion; Latin evulsio (e vello, supine vulsum, to pull out).

Ewe, Yew, You (pronounced alike). Yew, a tree. You, a pron.

Ewe, pronounced ū (not yow to rhyme with grow), a female sheep.

Ram or Tup, the sire; female ewe; offspring, lamb; if a male it is a tup-lamb, fem. a ewe-lamb.

After being weaned, lambs are called hoggets [or hoggs]; the male is a tup-hogget, the fem. a ewe-hogget.

After removal of the first fleece both are shearlings.

After removal of the second fleece the male is a two-shear-tup (if castrated a wether), the fem. is a ewe.

Old English cowu, plu. cowa, a ewe; cow, you; iw, the yew-tree.

Ewer, u'.er, a toilet jug, a cream-pot. Your, u'.er (pron.)

Ewery, ū'.ry, one of the royal household who serves water in ewers after dinner, and has charge of the table-linen.

Old Eng. huer or hwer, a ewer or jug. "Your," ewer; Germ. euer.

Ex- (Lat. and Gk. prefix), out of, out; proceeding from, off of, beyond. Occasionally it is intensive. Added to the names of office it means that the office was once held by the person named, but is no longer so: as ex-mayor.

Ex- is written ef- before an "f," and e- before the liquids and the consonants c, d, g, j, and v.

The Greek prefix is written ec- before c, and in one example (eccentric) the Latin prefix is so written also.

Exact, ex.ăct', precise, to extort; exact'-ly, exact'-ness; exact'-ed, exact'-ing; exaction, ex.ăk'.shun; exact'-or.

Exactitude, ex.ăk'.tĭ.tūde, precision.

French exact, exaction, exactitude, exacteur; Latin exactio, exactor, v. exigo, supine exactum (ex ago, to drive on [to the end]).

Exaggerate, ex.aj'.jĕ.rate, to overstate the truth; exag'gerāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exag'gerāt-ing (Rule xix.), exag'gerāt-or, exag'geratory; exag'gerative, ex.aj'.jĕ.ra.tĭv; exaggeration, ex.aj'.jĕ.ray''.shun, overstatement.

French exagérer (wrong), exagération, exagératif; Latin exaggērātio, exaggērātor, exaggērāre (agger, a pile or heap). The French word is nonsense, being a compound of ager, a field.

Exalt, ex.olt', to elevate; exalt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exalt'-ed-ness, exalt'-ing, exalt'-er; exaltation, ex'.ōl.tay''.shun.

Examine, ex.ăm'.ĭn, to scrutinise, to test by trial; examined, ex.ăm'.ĭnd; exam'in-ing, exam'in-er, exam'inant.

Examination, ex.ăm'.ĭ.nay''.shun; exam'en, the tongue or needle of the beam of a balance, examination.

Fr. examination, examiner; Lat. exāmen, exāmnātio, exāmnāre.

Example, ex.ăm'.p'l, a pattern. (Fr. exemple; Lat. exemplum.) (It is a pity that this word is cut off by false spelling from its congeners.) See Exemplar.

Exasperate, ex.ăs'.pe.rate, to irritate; exas'perāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), exas'perāt-ing; exasperation, ex.ăs'.pe.ray''.shun.

Fr. exaspérer, exaspération; Lat. exasperātio, exasperāre (asper, rough).

Ex cathedra, ex kath'.ĕ.drah, with dogmatic authority.

Latin ex cathēdra; Greek ex kathēdra, from the [papal] chair.

Excavate, ex'.kă.vate, to dig out; ex'cavāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ex'cavāt-ing, ex'cavāt-or (Rule xxxvii.), one who excavates; excavation, ex'.ka.vay''.shun, a digging out.

French excaver, excavation; Latin excāvatio, excāvāre (cāvea, a cave).

Exceed, to go too far, to excel; exceed'-ed (Rule xxxvi.); exceed'-ing, going too far, excelling, (adj.) very large, (adv.) extremely; exceed'ing-ly.

Excessive, ex.sĕs'.sĭv; exces'sive-ly, exces'sive-ness; exces'sive-ly, extremely; excess', superabundance.

(Exceed, proceed, and succeed, end in -ceed, but all other compounds of cedo end in -cede. Rule xxvii.)

Latin excēdo, supine excessum (ex cedo, to go forth [too far]). French exces, excessif; Latin excessus.

Excel, ex.sĕl', to surpass; excelled' (2 syl.), excell'-ing (R. iv.)

Excellent, ex'.cel.lent; ex'cellent-ly, ex'cellence.

Excellency, plu. excellencies (Rule xliv.), ex'.sĕl.lĕn.sĭz. A title of address given to viceroys, ambassadors, &c.

French exceller, excellence, excellent; Latin excellens, gen. excellētis, excellētia, v. excellēre (ex cello, to break or go beyond).

("Excel" ought to have double -l, as it comes from the Latin cello, "to go beyond"; and not from celo, "to hide.")

Excelsior (Lat.) Longfellow's poem has given to this word the meaning of "my aim is always higher still."

Excentric (ex.sen't.trik) is the better spelling, but eccentric the more general. (See Eccentric.)

Except, ex.sĕpt', unless, without, exclusive of, to pass over, to leave out; except'-ed (R. xxxvi.), except'-ing; except'-or;

Exception, ex.sĕp'.shun, not according to rule, an objection;

Except'-ion-able (Rule xxiii.), liable to objection;

Unexcept'-ion-able, free from objection;

Except'-ion-al, forming an exception.

Except, Unless. I will not let thee go except thou bless me, or "unless thou bless me." Both these are grammatical. "I will not let thee go, Except this proviso, viz. that thou bless me." Here except is the imperative mood of the verb. "Unless" is preferable.

French excepter, exception, exceptionnel; Latin exceptio, v. excipere, supine exceptum (ex cāpio, to take out).

Excerpted, ex.serp'.ted, expurgated, selected; excerpt'-or.

Excerptions, ex.sĕrp'.shuns, [literary] selections; excerpta.

Latin excerpo, to pick out (carpo, to cull), excerptio, excerpta.

Excess', superfluity; excess'ive, ex.sĕs'.siv. (See Exceed.)

Exchange, ex.tchāng'e, to barter, to give one thing for another; exchanged' (2 syl.), exchang'-ing (R. xix.), exchang'-er.

Exchange'-able (-ce and -ge retain the -e final before -able, Rule xx.); exchangeability, ex.tchāng'e.a.bil'.i.ty.

Bill of Exchange, a written promise on stamped paper to pay a stated sum of money within a stated time.

'Change, the Royal Exchange for money brokers.

French échange, exchangeable; Latin cambiāre; Low Latin cambiāre, to exchange; cambium, a change; cambitas.

Exchequer, ex.tchĕk'.er, a treasury, (colloquially) funds in hand. Court of Exchequer, has jurisdiction in all cases affecting the public revenue; Exchequer Chamber.

French échiquier, cour de l'échiquier. "It was denominated Scaccarium, from scaccum (a chess-board), and was so called from a checkered cloth laid on the table of the court."—Madox.

Excise, ex.size' (Rule lix.), a tax on articles of home production, (adj.) pertaining to such a tax; excisable (Rule xxiii.), ex.size'.a.b'l; excised, ex.sizd'; excis'-ing (Rule xix.)

Excision, ex.sizh'.un, amputation, a cutting off.

French excise, excision; Latin excisio, excidĕre, to cut off (ex cædo).

Excite, ex.sî'te', to stimulate; excit'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), excit'-ing, excit'-ing-ly, excit'-er, excit'-able, excit'able-ness, excit'ably; excitability, ex.sî'te'.a.bîl'î.ty; excit'-ant; excitation, ex'.sî'tay''shun; excite'-ment.

French excitabilité, excitable, excitant, excitation, excitatif, exciter;
Lat. excitatio, excitans, gen. excitantis, excitare (ex cieo, to stir up).

Exclaim' (2 syl.), exclaimed' (2 syl.), exclaim'-ing, exclaim'-er.

Exclamation (not exclamation), ex'.kla.may''shûn.

Exclamative, ex.klām'.a.tîv; exclām'atory.

French exclamation; Latin exclāmatio, exclāmāre (clamo, to call).

Exclude, ex.klūde', to shut out; exclud'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exclud'-ing (Rule xix.), exclud'-er;

Exclusion, ex.klū'.zhûn; exclu'sion-ary, exclu'sion-ist;

Exclusive, ex.klū'.sîv; exclu'sive-ly, exclu'sive-ness.

French exclusion; Latin exclusio, excludo (ex claudio, to shut out).

Excogitate, ex.kôj'.î.tate, to think deeply on a subject, to think till the solution is discovered; excog'itāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), excog'itāt-ing (R. xix.); excogitation, ex.kôj'.î.tay''shun (one of the few words in -tion which is not French).

Latin excogitatio, excogitare (ex cōgito, to think out).

Excommunicate, ex'.kôm.mu''nî.kāte, to exclude from church "communion"; excommu'nîcāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), excommu'nîcāt-ing; excommunication, ex'.kôm.mu''nî.kay''shûn.

Excommunication, Interdict, Anathema.

Individuals are "excommunicated," or excluded from church privileges;

The clergy is "interdicted," or forbidden to administer to persons under excommunication, and persons excommunicated are interdicted or forbidden to receive the sacraments. A nation is laid under an "interdict," or deprived of church privileges, but not "excommunicated." "Anathema," the curse accompanying excommunication.

Lesser excommunication, prohibition to receive the eucharist.

Greater excommunication, exclusion from all the rites, ceremonies, and services of the church.

Fr. excommunication, excommunier; Lat. excommunicatio, excommunicare (communio, communion; com munus, a mutual benefit).

Excoriate, ex.kô'.rî.ate, to abrade the skin; exco'riāt-ed, exco'riāt-ing; excoriation, ex.kô'.rî.a''shun, abrasion.

Fr. excorier, excoriation; Lat. excoriare (ex corium, [loss] of the skin).

Excoriation, ex.kor'.tî.kay''shun, denudation of the bark; excoricated, ex.kor'.tî.ka.ted, stripped of its bark.

French excoriation; (Latin ex cortex, [deprived] of its bark).

Excrement, ex.krě.měnt, animal soil; excrement'al, voided as excrement; excrementitious, ex.krě.měnt.sh'ús, of the nature of excrement.

Excrete, ex.kreet', to discharge from the body; excrēt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), excrēt'-ing; excretion, ex.kree'.shun; excretive, ex.kree'.tív; excretory, ex.kree'.tǒ.ry.

Fr. excrément, excrémentitiel, excrétion, excrétoire; Lat. excrementum, excrētio, v. excernere, supine excrētum, to purge from [the body].

Excrescence, ex.krěš'.sense (not ex.kree'.sense), a tumour.

Excrescency, plu. excrescencies, ex.krěš'.sěn.siz (Rule xliv.)

Excrescent, ex.krěš'.sěnt (not ex.kree'.sěnt).

Lat. excrescens, gen. excrescentis, ex.cresco, to grow out [of the body].

Excrete, ex.creet'; excretion, ex.cree'.shun. (See Excrement.)

Excruciate, ex.krū'.s'iate, to torment; excruciāt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), excruciāt'-ing (R. xix.); excruciable, ex.krū'.s'ǎ.b'l.

Excruciation, ex.krū'.s'ǎ".shun. (Not a French word.)

Latin excruciābilis, excruciāre, sup. excruciātum (cruz, a cross).

Exculpate, ex.kūl'.pate, to exonerate; exculpāt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), exculpāt'-ing (R. xix.); exculpatory, ex.kūl.pǎ.tǒ.ry; exculpation, ex.kūl.pay".shun. (Not a French word.)

Latin exculpāre (ex culpa [to free] from blame); French disculper.

Excursion, ex.kūr'.shun, a pleasure trip; excursion-ist.

Excursive, ex.kūr'.sív; excursive-ly, excursive-ness.

Fr. excursion; Lat. excursio, excursāre (cursus, a running [about]).

Excuse, (noun) ex.kūce', (verb) ex.kūze'. (Rule li.), an apology, to pardon, to dispense with; excuse'-less, ex.kūce'.less.

Excused, ex.kūzd'; excūs'-ing (Rule xix.), excūs'-er, excus-able, ex.kūze'.a.b'l; excusable-ness, excusably.

Excuse my writing more, or Excuse my not writing more (?) Both these are correct, but the former is more agreeable to our English idiom: Excuse [dispense with] my writing more, so excuse [dispense with] my attendance; but excuse [pardon] my not writing more, excuse [pardon] my absence. The rule is excuse [dispense with] the performance; excuse [pardon] the non-performance.

French excusable, excuser, excuse; Latin excūsāre, excūsābilis (ex causa, [free] from motive).

Execrate, ex'.e.krate, to detest, to curse; ex'ecrāt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), ex'ecrāt'-ing (R. xix.); execrable, ex'.e.krǎ.b'l, detestable; execrably; execration, ex'.e.kray".shun; execratory.

French exécrable, exécration; Latin execrābilis, execrātio, execrāri (ex sacro, the reverse of "consecrate"; sacer, sacred).

Execute, ex'.e.kute, to perform, to put to death; ex'ecūt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), ex'ecūt'-ing (R. xix.); executory, ex'.ē.ku.tǒ.ry.

- Executive, ex.ĕk'.u.tĭv, the governing body; executive-ly.
- Executor, fem. executrix, ex.ĕk'.u.tor, ex.ĕk'.u.trix, one appointed to carry out the "Will" of a deceased person.
- Executor-ship, ex.ĕk'.u.tor-ship. (-ship, "office.")
- Executioner, ex'.e.kū''.shun.er, an official hangman.
- Execution, ex'.e.kū''.shun, capital punishment, performance.
 French exécution, exécuteur (executor and executioner), exécutrice, exécutif, exécutoire; Latin executio, exēctor, v. exēquor, supine executum (ex sēquor, to follow out).
- Exegesis, ex'.e.jee''.sis, a critical explanation [of a Scripture text]; exegetical, ex'.e.jēt''.i.kāl, expository; exegetical-ly.
 French exégèse, exégétique; Greek exēgēsis (exēgētēs, a guide).
- Exemplar, ex.em'.plar, something to be copied, a model;
- Exemplary, ex'.ēm'.plā.ry (not ex.em'.plā.ry), worthy of imitation; exemplari-ly (Rule xi.), exemplari-ness.
- Exemplify, ex'.ēm'.plĭ.fy, to show by example; exemplifies (Rule xi.), ex'.ēm'.plĭ.fize; exemplified, ex'.ēm'.plĭ.fide; exemplifi-er (Rule xi.), exemplify-ing (Rule xi.), exemplification, ex'.ēm'.plĭ.fĭ.kay''.shun (not a French word).
- Exempli gratia (contracted to e.g., or ex.gr.), ex.em'.pli grā'.she.a, for instance, take for example.
- Example, ex.ām'.p'l (the one exception) is ill-spelt.
 French exemplaire, exemple; Latin exemplum, exemplar, exemplāre. "Exemplify," exemplum facio [see -fy], to give an example.
- Exempt, to except, not included; exempt-ed, exempt-ing.
- Exemption, ex.ĕmp'.shun, immunity. (Followed by from.)
 French exempt, exempter, exemption; Latin exemptio, v. eximo, supine exemptum (ex emo, to buy out).
- Exequies (no sing.), ex'.ĕ.kwĭz, funeral rites. (See Obsequies.)
 Latin exequiæ (no sing.); French obsèques.
- Exercise, ex'.er.size (Rule lix.), bodily exertion to promote health, a written lesson, something to be practised; (verb) to exert, to discipline; exercised (3 syl.), exercis-ing (Rule xix.), exercis-er, exercis-able; excitation, ex'.er.sĭ.tay''.shun, practice. (Not a French word.)
 French exercice (with -ce), exercer; Latin exercitatio, exercitio and exercitium, exercĕre (ex arceo, to drive forth).
- Exergue (French), ex.erg' (in Numismatics), the lower limb of a coin or medal, separated by a line from the face, and used for the date, and other subsidiary matter.
 Greek ex ergōn, out of the work proper. (It would be far better without the French -ue, which is quite un-English, and misleads.)
- Exert, to use effort; exert-ed (R. xxxvi.), exert-ing, exert-er.
- Exertion (not exersion), ex.ĕr'shun, effort. (Not a Fr. word.)
 Latin exertāre (frequentative of exĕro, ex sero), to thrust out or put forth. This word has no connexion with exercise, although in French the two are confounded.

Exfoliate, ex.fō.li.ate, to scale off; exfo'liāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exfo'liāt-ing (Rule xix.); exfoliation, ex.fō.li.ā''shun.

Fr. exfolier, exfoliation (Lat. ex fōllum, [to throw] off leaves or scales).

Exhale, ex.hale' (not ex.ale'), to reek, to send forth vapour; exhaled' (2 syl.), exhāl'-ing (Rule xix.), exhāl'-ant.

Exhalation, ex'.ha.lay''shun (not ex'.ā.lay''shun).

French exhalation, exhaler, exhalant; Latin exhalans, gen. exhalantis, exhālātio, exhālāre (hālītus, breath, vapour).

Exhaust, ex.haust' (not ex.aust'), to expend: exhaust'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exhaust'-ing, exhaust'-er, exhaust'-less.

Exhaustion, ex.haus'.tchun; exhaustive, ex.haus'.tīv.

French exhaustion; Latin exhaustio, exaurio, supine exhaustum (ex haurio, to draw from, to draw out liquids).

Exhibit, ex.hīb'īt (not ex.īb'īt), to show, to display; exhib'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exhib'it-ing; exhibitive, ex.hīb'.īt.īv.

Exhibiter, ex.hīb'.īt.ēr (better-or, R. xxxvii.), one who exhibits;

Exhibitioner, ex'.hīb'.īsh''.ōn.ēr, a scholar's pension.

Exhibition, ex'.hīb'.īsh''.un, a public show, a pension for scholars; exhibitory, ex.hīb'.ī.tō.ry.

French exhiber, exhibition, exhibitoire; Latin exhibitio, exhibitor, exhibēre, supine exhibītum (ex habeo, to have out).

Exhilarate, ex.hīl'.e.rate (not ex.īl'.e.rate), to cheer; exhil'a-rāt-ed, exhil'arāt-ing (Rule xix.), exhil'arating-ly.

Exhilaration, ex.hīl'.e.ray''shun (not a French word); exhil'arāt-or (Rule xxxvii.), exhil'arant.

Latin exhīlērātio, exhīlērātor, exhīlārāre (hīlāro, to make merry).

Exhort, ex.hort' (not ex.ort'), to incite to good works; exhort'-ed, exhort'-ing, exhort'-er; exhortative, ex.hor'.tā.tīv.

Exhortation, ex'.hor.tay''shun; exhortatory, ex.hor'.tā.tō.ry.

French exhortation, exhortatif, exhortoire, exhorter; Latin exhortātio, exhortāri (hortor, Greek ōrio, part of the verb ornāmi, to stir up).

Exhume, ex.hume' (not ex.ume'), to disinter; exhumed (2 syl.), exhūm'-ing (Rule xix.); exhumation, ex'.hu.may''shun.

French exhumer, exhumation; Latin ex hūmare, to disinter (hūmus).

Exigency, plu. exigencies, ex'.ī.jěn.siz, a necessity; exigence, ex'.ī.jence; exigent, ex'.ī.jēnt; exigible, ex'.ī.jī.b'l.

Lat. exigens, gen. exigentis, exigēre; Fr. exigeant, exigence, exigible.

Exile, ex'.āle, one banished, place of banishment, to banish; exiled, ex'.āld; exil'-ing (Rule xix.), exile'-ment.

Fr. exiler, exil; Lat. exilium, exilāre, exul (ex solum, from the soil).

Exist, to live, to be; exist'-ed, exist'-ing, exist'-ence, exist'-ent.

Fr. exister, existant (wrong), existence; Lat. existens, gen. -entis, existēre.

Exit, plu. exeunt. "Exit," a stage direction for the speaker to leave the stage. Exeunt, ex'.ē.ūnt, more than one to leave.

Exeunt omnes, ex'.ē.ūnt om'.nēz, all the actors to leave.

Exo- (a Greek prefix), out of, on the outside, out from.

Exodus, ex'ō.dūs, a departure from a place. (Should be exhodus according to our English system.)

Greek ex hōdōs, the way out; in Greek ἐξόδος.

Ex officio (Lat.), ex of.fish'ī.o (not o.fish'ī.o), by virtue of office. As the Lord Mayor of London is "ex officio" member of the privy council.

Exogens, ex'ō.jēns, plants (like timber trees) which grow in bulk by concentric layers, each year being marked by a layer outside the previous ones.

Endogens, en'.dō.jēns, plants (like reeds) which increase in bulk by pith formed within the plant.

Exogenous, ex.āj'.e.nūs; exog'enite, a fossil plant of the exogenous structure. (-ite (in Geol.), a fossil, Gk. lithos.)

Gk. exo- gēnō, to produce from the outside; endo- gēnō, ...inside.

Exonerate, ex.ōn'.erate, to exculpate; exon'erāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), exon'erāt-ing (R. xix.); exoneration, ex.ōn'.e.ray' shun.

Lat exōnerāre (onus, a burden) "Exoneration" not French.

Exorbitant, ex.or'.bīt.tant, enormous, unreasonable; exor'bi-tant-ly, exor'bitance (4 syl.), exor'bitancy.

French exorbitant; Latin exorbitans, gen. exorbitantis, exorbitare (ex orbita, out of the way).

Exorcise, ex'.or.size (not ex.or'.size.) Ex'ercise, to practise.

Ex'orcise, to expelevil spirits; ex'orcised (3 syl.), ex'orcis-ing.

Ex'orcis-er, an exorcist; ex'ercis-er, one who exercises.

Exorcism, ex'.or.sizm, the act of exorcising; ex'orcist.

French exorciser, exorciste, exorcisme; Greek exorkizo, exorkistēs (orkōs, an oath).

Exordium, plu. exordiums (not exordia), ex.or'.dī.um, the introduction of [a speech]; exordial, ex.or'.dī.āl, introductory.

Latin exordium (ordior, to begin, from orior, to arise); Fr. exorde.

Exosmose, ex'.ōs.mōse, the transmission of a fluid to the outside of a membrane or other porous substance; exosmotic, ex'.ōs.mōt'īk (adj.)

Endosmose, en'.dōs.mōse, the transmission of a fluid to the interior surface of a membrane or other porous substance.

Gr. exo- smōs, impulsion outwards; endo- smōs, impulsion inwards.

Excstome, ex'.os.tom (in Botany), the passage through the outer integument of the ovule (2 syl.)

Greek exō stōma, out of the forāmen or mouth.

Exostosis, ex.os'.tō.sīs (not ex.ōs.tō'.sīs), a tumour of the bone,

Greek exō stō- (and the affix), a growth out of the bone.

Exoteric, ex'otēr''rīk, public; exoterical, ex'ō.tēr''ry.kāl; exotericism, ex'ō.tēr''ry.sizm. Opposed to Esoteric, ēs'.o.tēr''rīk. (The o in these words is long in the Gk.)

Pythagoras stood behind a curtain when he lectured; those admitted "within the veil" were called his esoteric disciples, those outside his exoteric.

Aristotle applied the word esoteric to the disciples who attended his abstruse morning lectures, and exoteric to those who attended only his popular evening ones.

Greek exōtērīkōs, (exōtērōs, outer); esōtērīkōs (esōtērōs, inner).

Exotic, ex'ōt'īk, foreign, applied to hothouse plants.

Indigenous, in.dij'.e.nus, native, applied to native plants.
(The -o- in "exotic" is long in the Greek.)

French exotique; Greek exōtīkōs; Latin exōtīcus, from a foreign land.

Expand', to spread; expand'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), expand'-ing.

Expanse, ex.pance', extent; expansion, ex.pān'.shun; expansive, ex.pān'.sīv; expansive-ly, expansive-ness; expansible, ex.pān'.sī.b'l; expansible-ness, expansibly; expansibility, ex.pān'.sī.b'l''ī.ty.

Fr. expansibilité, expansion, expānsif; Lat. expandere, supine expansum, expansio, expansum the firmament (ex pando, to open out).

Ex parte (Lat.), ex par'.te, one-sided: as an ex parte statement.

Expatiate, ex.pāsh'.ī.ate, to enlarge on; expatiāt-ed (R. xxxvi), expatiāt-ing (Rule xix.), expatiāt-or; expatiatory, ex.pash''.ī.ā.tō.ry; expatiation, ex.pāsh'.ī.ā''.shun.

Latin expātiāri, to wander forth; expātiator (passus, a footstep).

Expatriate, ex.pūt'.rī.ate (not ex.pū'.trī.ate), to banish; expat'riāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), expat'riāt-ing (Rule xix.); expatriation; ex.pūt'.rī.ā''.shun, banishment.

Fr. expatriier, expatriation (Lat. expātriā, [driven] from one's country).

Expect', to look out for, to hope; expect'-ed (Rule xxxvi), expect'-ing, expect'ing-ly; expect'-er, one who expects; expect'-ant, one who expects a berth; expectation, ex'.pēk'.tay''.shūn; expect'-ance; expectancy, plu. expectancies (Rule xlv.), ex.pēk'.tān.sīz.

Expect, Suspect. Expect is often misused for suspect (to be of opinion): as I expect [suspect] he is wrong. I expect [suspect] he was disappointed. ... was guilty.

Fr. expectation; Lat. expectatio, expectāre (ex specio, to look out for).

Expectorate, ex.pēk'.tō.rate, to spit out; expect'orāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), expect'orāt-ing (Rule xix.), expect'orāt-or; expectoration, ex.pēk'.tō.ray''.shūn; expectorative, ex.pēk'.tō.ra.tīv; expect'orant, a medicine to promote expectoration.

French expectorant, expectorer, expectoration; Latin expectorāre (pectus, the chest).

Expedient, ex.pē'.dī.ent, proper, necessary, a shift; expe'dience.

Expediency, plu. expediencies, ex.pē'.dī.en.sīz.

Expedite, ex'pě.dite, to hasten; ex'pedit-ed (R. xxxvi.), ex'pedit-ing (R. xix.), ex'pedite-ly; expedition, ex'pě.dish''ūn; expeditious, ex'pě.dish''us; expeditious-ly.

French expédient, expédier, expédition; Latin expeditio, v. expédire, supine expeditum (pes, gen. pēdis, a foot, "to put the foot forth").

Expel, to drive out; expelled (2 syl.), expell'-ing, expell'-er.

Expulsion, ex.pūl'.shun; expulsive, ex.pūl'.siv.

("Expel" would be better with double l, Latin pell[o]).

French expulsion, expulsif, v. expulser; Latin expulso, expello, supine expulsum, to drive out or away.

Expend, to lay out money; expended (R. xxxvi.), expend'-ing.

Expenditure, ex.pěn'.dī.tchūr, disbursement of money.

Expense (2 syl.) not expence, cost. (One of the six words in -ense, and one of the four compounds of -pense (Rule xxvi.) "Expense" is not a compound of "pence," which is a contraction of pennies. (German phennig.)

Expensive, ex.pěn'.siv; expen'sive-ly, expen'sive-ness.

Lat. expensa, expensum, v. expendere (pendo, to weigh out [money]).

Experience, ex.pě'ri.ence, practical knowledge, to know practically; experienced (4 syl.), experienc-ing. (See Expert.)

Experiment, ex.pě'ry.ment, trial, to try, to essay; experiment-ed, experiment-ing.

Experimentist, ex.pě'ry.měn'.tist, one who tries experiments;

Experimental, ex.pě'ry.men''.tal; experimen'tal-ly;

Experimentation, ex.pě'ry.měn'.tay''shun, experimental practice;

Experimentative, ex.pě'ry.měn'.tū.tiv; experimentative-ly.

Experimentum crucis (Latin), ex.pě'ry.měn'.tum krū'.sis, a crucial experiment, a severe or decisive test.

(Lord Bacon says that two diseases or sciences may run parallel for a time, but will ultimately cross.)

The weather has experienced a change is nonsense, as to "experience" is to learn by trial or personal knowledge.

French expérience, expérimente, expérimenter, expérimental; Latin experientia, experimentum, expériri, expertus (péritus, skilful).

Expert, ex'pert (n.), one skilled in deciphering...; ex'pert (adj.), skilful; expert-ly, expert'-ness.

French expert; Latin expertus (v.s.)

Expiate, ex'.pi.ate, to atone for; ex'piāt-ed (R. xxxvi), ex'piāt-ing (R. xix.); expiation, ex'.pi.ā''shun; expiative, ex'.pi.ā.tiv

Expiable, ex'.pi.ā.b'l, that may be atoned for;

Expiatory, ex'.pi.ā.tō.ry, having power to make atonement.

Expiator, ex'.pi.ā.tor, one who makes atonement.

Fr. expiation; Lat. expiābilis, expiātio, expiāre (pio, to purge).

- Expire' (2 syl.), to die; expired' (2 syl.), expir'-ing (Rule xix.);
Expiration, ex'.pī.ray''shun, exhalation, conclusion;
Expirable, ex'.pī.rū.b'l; expir'y, the end; expiratory.
Fr. expirer, expiration; Lat. expiratio, expirare (spiro, to breathe).
- Explain', to expound; explained', explain'-ing, explain'-er;
explain'-able (1st Lat. conj.), capable of being explained.
Explanatory (not explanatory), ex'.plān.ă.tō.ry.
Explanation (not explanation), ex'.plā.nay''shun (not Fr.)
Latin explanābilis, explanatio, explanāre (plānus, plain).
- Expletive, ex'.plē.tīv (not ex.plee'.tīv), a supernumerary word (oaths and exclamations are expletives); ex'pletory, -t'ry.
Fr. expletif; Lat. expletivus, expleo, supine expletum (pleo, to fill).
- Explicate, ex'.plī.kate, to explain; explicāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exp'licāt-ing; explicable, ex'.plī.kū.b'l (not ex.plīk'.ă.b'l).
Explication, ex'.plī.kay''shūn; explicative, ex'.plī.katīv.
Exp'licāt-or; explicatory, ex'.plī.kat'ry (not ex.plīk'.a.tor'ry).
Explicit, ex'.plīs'.it, distinct, plain; explic'it-ly, explic'it-ness.
Fr. explicuer, explication, explicatif, explicateur, explicite; Lat. explicābilis, explicatio, explicātor, explicit, explicāre (ex plico, to unfold).
- Explode, ex'.plō.dē, to burst forth with sudden violence; explōd'-ed
(R. xxxvi.), explōd'-ing, explōd'-er; explōd'-ible (not -able).
Explosion, ex'.plō'.shun; explosive, ex'.plō'.siv; explō'sive-ly, explō'sive-ness, liability to explode.
Fr. explosion; Lat. explosio, explōdēre, sup. explōsum (plaudo, to clap).
- Exploit' (2 syl.), an heroic deed, an achievement (Fr. Lat. explētio).
- Explore' (2 syl.), to examine; explored' (2 syl.), explōr'-ing, explōr'-er; exploration, ex'.plō.ray''shun; explorator, ex'.plor'ra.tor (not ex.plo.ray'.tor); explor'atory.
French exploration, explorer; Latin exploratio, explorātor, explorāre.
- Explosion, ex'.plō'.shun; explosive, ex'.plō'.siv. (See Explode.)
- Exponent, ex'.pō'.nēt, an interpreter, the index of a number:
thus in a^3 , 2^5 the 3, 5 are the exponents of a and 2.
Latin expōnens, gen. expōnentis (ex pōnēre, to put or spread out).
- Export, (noun) ex'.port, (verb) ex.port', goods sent to a foreign market, to send goods to a foreign market; export'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), export'-ing, export'-er, export'-able (1st Latin conjugation), exportation, ex'.por.tay''shun.
French exporter, exportation; Latin exportatio, exportāre (ex porto).
- Expose, ex'.pō.zē, to exhibit; exposed' (2 syl.), expōs'-ing, expōs'-er, one who exposes or discloses.
Exposure, ex'.pō'.zhūr; expositor, ex'.pōz'.i.tor, expōs'itory.
Exposition, ex'.pō.zīsh''.un, an interpretation, a public display.

Expositive, ex.pōz'.lītiv; exposedness, ex.pō'.zēd.ness.

Exposé, ex.pō'.za (French), a laying bare of secret acts.

Expound' (2 syl.), to interpret; expound'-ed, expound'-er.
French exposer, exposition; Latin expōsitio, expōsitor, expōnere.

Expostulato, ex.pōs'.tū.late, to remonstrate. (Followed by with); expos'tulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), expos'tulāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Expostulation, ex.pos'.tu.lay''.shun; expos'tulāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); expostulatory, ex.pōs''.tu.la.t'ry.

Latin expostulatio, expostulātor, expostulāre (postūlo, to beseech).

Expound'; exposure, ex.pō'.zhur. (See Expose.)

Express', a special railway train, a special messenger, to utter, to delineate in words or otherwise, to squeeze out;
expressed' (2 syl.), express'-ing, express'-ly, express'-ness.

Expression, ex.prēs'.shun, a mode of speech, the phaze of the countenance, the soul of music, the representation of a quantity, a squeezing out; expressive, ex.prēs'iv; express'ive-ly, express'ive-ness, express'-ible, express'ibly.

Fr. exprès, expression, expressif; Lat. expressio, exprēmo, sup. expressum (ex prēmo, to press out, to draw out, hence to pourtray).

Expulsion, ex.pūl'.shun; expulsive, ex.pūl'.siv. (See Expel.)

Expunge' (2 syl.), to efface; expunged' (2 syl.), expung'-er.

Latin expungere (ex pingo, to prick out).

Expurgate, ex'.pur.gate (not ex.pur'.gate), to purify; ex'pur-gāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), ex'purgāt-ing, ex'purgāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Expurgation, ex'.pur.gay''.shun; ex'purgatory.

Index expurgatorius, in'.dex ex.pur'.ga.tor'ri.ūs, the list of books condemned by the Roman Catholic Church.

Lat. expurgatio, expurgātor, expurgatōrius, expurgāre (purgo, to purge).

Exquisite, ex'.kwī.zīt (not ex'.kwī.zite), excellent, a dandy; ex'quisite-ly, ex'quisite-ness.

Lat. exquisitus, exquirere, sup. exquisitum (ex quero, to search out).

Exsiccate, ex.sik'.kate, to dry; exsic'cāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), exsic'cāting (R. xix.), exsic'cant, exsiccation, ex'.sik'.kay''.shun.

Latin exsiccare (ex sicco, to dry out). (See Desiccate.)

Extant, ex'.tant, in existence.

Latin extans, gen. extantis, standing out (ex stare).

Extacy (no such word. See Extasy).

Extempore, ex.tēm'.pō.re (not ex.tēm'.pore), offhand, without preparation; extemporaneous, ex.tēm'.po.ray''.nē.us; extemporaneously, extemporaneous-ness, extem'por-arily (Rule lxvi., -eously and -iously).

Extemporise (R. xxxi.), ex.tēm'.po.rize, to improvise; extem'- porised (4 syl.), extem'poris-ing (R. xix.), extem'poris-er.

Extemporality, ex.těm'.po.răl''.i.ty (Latin extemporalitas) might be introduced, the art of improvising.

Lat. extempōrāneus, -pōrārius, ex tempōrē (without time [to prepare]).

Extend', to prolong; extend'-ed, extend'-ing, extend'-er, extend'-ible; extent', size; ex'tant, in existence.

Extension, ex.těn'.shun; extensive, ex.těn'.siv; exten'sive-ly, exten'sive-ness; extensible, ex.těn'.si.b'l (not -able); exten'sor [muscle], opposed to the flex'or [muscle].

French extension, extensible, extensibilité, extenseur; Latin extendere, supine extensum, extensio, extensivus (ex tendo, to stretch out).

Extenuate, ex.těn'.u.ate, to lessen; exten'uāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), exten'uāt-ing, exten'uāting-ly, exten'uāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Extenuation, ex.těn'.u.ā''.shun; extenuatory, ex.těn'.u.ā.t'ry.

Fr. exténuation; Lat. extēnuatio, extēnuātor, extenuāre (tēnuis, thin).

Exterior, ex.tě'.r'i.or, outer, the outside. Inte'rior, inner, the inside; exte'rior-ly. Exte'riors (plu.), outward parts.

Lat. extērior (extra, on the outside); intērior (intra, within).

Exterminate, ex.ter'.mi.nate, to eradicate; exter'mināt-ed (R. xxxvi.), exter'mināt-ing, exter'mināt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Extermination, ex.ter'.mi.nay''.shun; exterminative, ex.ter'.mi.nā.tiv; exterminatory, ex.ter'.mi.nā.t'ry.

French exterminer, extermination; Latin extērnatio, extērnātor, extērnāre (ex terminus, [to drive] out of the border).

Exter'nal, outward; exter'nals (plu.), the outward parts and forms; exter'nal-ly; ex'tern, an out-patient. Internal.

Latin externus, v. externāre; French externe.

Extill' (better extill), to distil; extilled' (2 syl.), extill'-ing (Rule iv.), extill'-er; extillation, ex'til.lay''.shun (Rule viii.)

Latin extillatio, extill[āre] (ex stillo, to fall out in drops).

Extinct', extinction, ex.tink'.shun. (See extinguish.)

Extinguish, ex.tin'.gwish, to put out; extin'guished (3 syl.), extin'guish-ing, extin'guish-er, extin'guish-able.

Extinct', no longer in existence; extinction, ex.tink'.shun.

Fr. extinction; Lat. extinctio, extinguo, supine extinctum (stingo).

Extirpate, ex'tir.pate (not ex.tir'pate), to root out; ex'tirpāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ex'tirpāt-ing, ex'tirpāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); extirpatory, ex'tir.pā.t'ry; extir'pable.

Extirpation, ex'tir.pay''.shun (-tir-, not -ter-).

Fr. extirpation; Lat. extirpātor, extirpātio, extirpare (stirps, a root).

Extol', to laud; extolled' (2 syl.), extoll'-ing (R. iv.), extoll'-er. ("Extol" would be far better with double l. Lat. extoll[o].)

Extort', to wrest from; extort'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), extort'-ing, extort'-er; extortion, ex.tor'.shun; extor'tion-er, extor-tion-ist, extor'tion-ary; extorsive, ex.tor'.siv.

("Extortion" ought to be spelt extorsion.)

French extorsion; Latin extorqueo, sup. extorsum (torqueo, to twist).

Extra, ex'.trah, in addition; extras, ex'.trahz, additional charges.

Extra- (Lat. pref.), beyond, in excess, additional. (With a hyphen)

Extra-judicial, -ju.dish'.al, in excess of court business.

Extra-mundane, -mũn'.dane, not of this world.

Extra-mural, -mu'.rāl, outside the city walls.

Extra-parochial, -pa.rõ'.kĩ.āl, not of the parish.

Extra-professional, -pro.fesh'.on.āl, not professional.

Extra-trop'ical, -trõp'.ĩ.kāl, beyond the tropics.

Extract, (noun) ex'.tract, (verb) ex.tract'. (Rule 1.)

Ex'tract (noun), a tincture, a selection.

Extract' (verb), to draw out, to select; extract'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), extract'-ing, extract'-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Extraction, ex.trăk'.shun; extract'-ible; extract'ive, -tiv.

Fr. extraction, extractif; Lat. extractum (ex traho, to draw out).

Extraneous, ex.tră'.ne.us, foreign; extra'neous-ly.

Latin extraneus (extra, without, beyond).

Extraordinary, ex'.tra.or''.di.něr ry (not ex.tror'.di.něr ry), unusual; ex'traor'dinari-ly (Rule xi.), extraordinaries (plu.) ex'tra.or''.di.něr riz, extras, things very unusual.

French extraordinaire, extraordinaires; Latin extra ordinarius.

Extravagant, ex.trăv'.a.gănt, wasteful, prodigal; extrav'agant-ly; extravagance, ex.trăv'.a.gănce; extravagancy, plu. extravagancies (Rule xlv.), ex.trăv'.a.gan.siz.

Extravaganza, ex.trăv'.a.gan''.zăh, a musical or dramatic piece in which extravagant licence has been taken.

Fr. extravagant, -gance; Lat. extra vagari, to wander beyond [bounds].

Extravasate, ex.trăv'.a.sate, to get out of the proper vessels [as blood]; extrav'asăt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), extrav'asăt-ing (Rule xix.); extravasation, ex.trăv'.a.say''.shun (-tion, "a state of being" [out of the proper vessels]).

Fr. extravaser, extravasion; Lat. extra vasa, out of the [proper] vessels.

Extreme, ex.treem', furthest (extremest, ex.treem'.est, in poetry only); extremes (plu.) ex.treemz', the two extreme ends; extreme'-ly; extremity, plu. extremities, ex.trēm'.i.tiz.

French extrême, extrémité; Latin extrēmum, extrēmītas, extrēmus.

Extricate, ex'.trĩ.kate, to free from difficulties; ex'tricăt-ed (R. xxxvi.), ex'tricăt-ing (R. xix.); extricable, ex'.trĩ.kă.b'l.

- Extrication, ex'trĭ.kay''shŭn, liberation from difficulties.
 Latin extricābillis, extricātio, extricāre (trīcæ, hairs, &c., wrapped round the feet of birds to prevent them from wandering. To "extricate," to get the feet out of these trīcæ or impediments).
- Extrinsic, ex.trĭn'.sĭk, independent; extrinsically, ex.trĭn'.sĭ.kāl.ly.
 French extrinsèque; Latin extrīnsecus, acting from another source.
- Extrude' (2 syl.), to thrust out; extrūd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), extrūd'-ing (R. xix.); extrusion, ex.trū'.shun. (Not a Fr. word.)
 Latin extrūdĕre, supine extrūsum (ex trudo, to thrust out).
- Exuberant, ex.ū'.bĕrant, boisterous, luxuriant; exu'berant-ly.
Exuberance, ex.ū'.bĕrance; exu'berancy, plu. -cies, -sĭz.
 French exubérance, exubérant; Latin exūbĕrans, gen. exūbĕrantis, exūbĕrāre (uber, a dug or udder).
- Exude' (2 syl.), to issue through the pores (1 syl.); exūd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), exūd'-ing (R. xix.), exudation, ex'.ū.day''shun.
 A corruption of exsude, Latin ex sūdo, to sweat out.
- Exult', to rejoice exceedingly; exult'-ed (R. xxxvi.), exult'ing-ly; exultation, ex'.ūl.tay''shun; exult'-ant, exult'-er.
 Lat. exultantia, exultatio, exultāre (ex salto, to leap about).
- Exuviae, ex.ū'.vĕ (in Geol.), all fossil animal matter, the cast-off skins, &c., of animals. (Latin exūvia, things left off.)
- Eye, plu. eyes, i, ĭze (1 syl.), organ of sight, to watch; eyed, ĭde (1 syl.); eye-ing, ĭing. ("Eye-ing" and "dye-ing" are exceptions to Rule xix.)
 Old Eng. ēge or edge; edg-appel, the apple of the eye; edg-tōth, &c.
- Eyre, ĭr, a circuit, as Justices in Eyre, itinerant judges.
 Latin ire, to go.
- Eyrie, ĕ'ry, the nest of birds of prey. (Welsh eryr, an eagle.)
- Fable, fa'.b'l (noun and verb); fabled, fa'.b'ld; fa'bling, fa'bler.
Fabulist, fāb'.ūlist; fabulous, fāb'.ūlūs; fab'ulous-ly, fab'ulous-ness; fabulise (not -ize, R. xxxi.), fāb'.ūlize; fab'ulised (3 syl.), fāb'.ūlis-ing (R. xix.)
 French fable, fabuliste; Latin fābŭla, fābŭlāris, fābŭlāri.
- Fabric, fāb'.rĭk, texture, &c.; fabrication, fāb'.rĭ.kay''shun;
Fabricate, fāb'.rĭ.kate, to manufacture, to falsify; fab'ricāt-ed, fab'ricāt-ing (R. xix.), fab'ricāt-or (R. xxxvii.)
 French fabriquer, fabrication; Latin fābrĭcātio, fābrĭcātor, fābrĭcāre (fāber, a forger or smith).
- Facade, fa.sard' (French), the front of a building.
- Face (1 syl.), the visage, a surface. Phase, fāze, the disc of the moon, &c., the shape of a wave, &c. Face, to stand opposite, to encounter; faced (1 syl.); fac-ing, face'-ing; facial, fā'.sĭ.āl, pertaining to the face, as facial angle.

Facet, fūs'.et (not fay'.set), one of the little flat surfaces of a cut diamond. (Fr. facette, face; Lat. facies, a face.)

Facetious, fā.sē'.shūs, jocose; facē'tious-ly, facē'tious-ness.

Facetiæ, fa.sē'.shū.ē, witticisms, merry conceits.

Fr. facétie, facétieusement; Lat. facetiæ, facētōsus, facētus, merry.

Facilitate, fa.sil'.i.tate, to make easy; facil'itāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), facil'itāt-ing (R. xix.); facil'ity, dexterity; facilities (plu.) fa.sil'.i.tīz, means of reducing difficulties.

French facilité, faciliter; Latin facilitas (facilis, easy).

Fac-simile, fak.sim'.i.le (Fr.), an exact copy. (Lat. factum sim'ilis.)

Faction, fak'.shun, a cabal; fac'tion-ist, an unscrupulous opponent; factionous, fak'.shus; factionous-ly, fac'tious-ness.

French faction; Latin factio, factiōsus mutinous, (facio, to do).

Factor, fūk'.tor, an agent; fac'tor-ship (-ship, office of).

Factory, fūk'.to.ry; factorage, fūk'.tō.rage, a factor's dues.

French facteur, factorage; Latin factor (facio, to make or do).

Factotum, fūk'.tō'.tum, an employé who does all sorts of work.

Fr. factotum; Lat. fac[io] totum, to do everything.

Faculæ, fūk'.ū.lē, bright spots in the sun. Maculæ, māk'.u.lē, dark spots in the sun. (Latin facūla, a little torch.)

Faculty, plu. faculties, fūk'.ūl.tīz, capacity, skill, science.

The faculty, medical practitioners collectively considered.

French faculté; Latin facultas (facul for facilis, easy).

There are four "faculties" or sciences, viz., arts, theology, law, and medicine, but the word faculty is now restricted to the last.

Faddle, fād'.dl, to trifle; fiddle-faddle, purposeless nonsense.

Fade (1 syl.), to droop, to lose colour; fād'-ed, fād'-ing (R. xix.)

French fade, insipid; Latin vādo, to go; Greek badōs, a walk.

Fag, a drudge, to drudge. A fish-fag, a female fish-hawker.

The fag-end, the selvage, the worst end.

Fagged (1 syl.), fagg'-ing (Rule i.), fagg'-er.

A "fag," Gk. phāgōs, a great eater. "Fag-end," Ang.-Sax. fagðian, to change the colour.

Fagot, fāg'.ōt, a bundle of sticks, cakes made of pork scraps.

"A bundle," Welsh ffagot, Fr. fagot. "A cake," Gk. phāgo, to eat.

Fahrenheit, Fa'r'en hīte, the inventor of the thermometer which marks 32° as the freezing point of water, and 212° as its boiling point (difference 180°). Reaumur's thermometer, used in Germany and Russia, divides the distance between these extremes into 80 parts. The centigrade thermometer divides it into 100 deg.

Fail (1 syl.), to become bankrupt, to miss; failed (1 syl.), fail'-ing; failure, fail'.yēr, insolvency, defeat.

Welsh ffaelu, to fail or miss; ffael, a failing. Germ. fehlen, to fail.

- Fain, fane, feign (all pronounced fane, 1 syl.)
Fain, desirous. (Old Eng. fægn[ian], to desire; Fr. fain.)
Fane, a temple. (Latin fānum, a temple.)
Feign, to pretend. (Fr. feindre, Lat. fingere, to feign.)
- Faint, feint (both faint, 1 syl.) Faint, languid, to swoon; faint-ed (R. xxxvi.), faint'-ing, faint'-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns means "like"); faint'-ly.
Peint, a pretence. (Fr. feinte, Latin fingere, to feign.)
 French fainéant, sluggish (faire néant, to do nothing).
- Fair, a free market, delicate. Fare, cost of a journey, provisions.
Fear, fēr, terror. Fair; fair'ing, a present from the fair; fair'-ish, rather fair (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like"); fairish-ly, fair'ly.
 "Fair" (a free market), French foire; Latin feria, a holiday.
 "Fair" (just, beautiful), Old English fægr, fair; fæger, beauty.
 "Fare," Old Eng. fer, a journey, hence cost of a journey, provision.
 "Fear," Old Eng. fēr[an], to fear from being startled (fær, sudden).
- Fairy, plu. fairies, fair'riz. Spenser's word is Faëry [Queen].
 German fee; French fée, a fay, féerie; Persian pēri.
- Faith, fāth, belief, trust; faith'-ful (Rule viii.), faith'ful-ly, faith'ful-ness; faith'-less, faith'less-ly, faith'less-ness.
 The faith, Christianity.
 Ital. fede, fedele, faithful; Fr. foi; Lat. fides, fidelis (fido, to trust).
- Fakir, fa.keer', a Mahometan monk. (Arab, a poor man.)
- Falchion, faw' shun (not fāl-shun nor faw' shē.ōn).
 French fauchon, a curved sword; Latin falx, a reap-hook.
- Falcon, faw'.kōn (not fāl'.kōn nor faw' kōn), a female hawk;
falconer, faw'.kōn.er; falconry, faw'.kōn.ry.
 Fr. faucon, a falcon; Lat. falx, gen. falcis, a reap-hook. So called from its curved beak. The male is called a tassel or tarsel (Fr. tiercelet, a tierce, or third smaller).
- Faldstool, fald'.stool, the bishop's chair within the altar rails.
 Old Eng. fald stōl, a folding stool; Fr. fauteuil, i.e., faudesteuil;
 Low Lat. faldistorium; Germ. feldstuhl.
- Fall, fawl; past fell, past part. fallen, fawl'n; fall'-ing, fall'-er.
 ("Fall" retains double l in all its compounds: as be'fall, down'fall, wind'fall, fall'ing-in, fall'ing-sickness, &c.) (R. x.)
 Old English feall[an], past feol, past part. ge-feallen, to fall.
- Fallacy, plu. fallacies, fū' la.siz, an error; fallaci-ous, fāl.lay'-.shus (Rule xi.); falla'cious-ly, falla'cious-ness.
 Latin fallācia, fallāciosus (fallax, deceitful); French fallacieux.
- Fallible (not -able), liable to fall; fallibility, fāl.li.bil'i.ty.
 Lat. fallēre, to deceive; Gk. sphallo, to make to fall; Fr. faillible.
- Fallopian [tube], fal.lō'pī.an (not fal.lōp'i.an), so called from Gabriel-Fallopious, of Modēna (1523-1562).

Fallow, reddish bay colour, uncultivated; ploughed but not sown.

"Fallow [deer]," Old Eng. fealo, yellowish brown (fealwian, to ripen).

"Fallow land," is land left to "ripen."

False, folce, not true; false'-hood, a lie; false'-ly, false'-ness;

Falsify, fōl'sī.fy; falsifies, fōl'sī.fize; falsified, fōl'sī.fide; fal'sifi-er (Rule xi.), fal'sify-ing. (See -fy.)

Falsification, fōl'sī.fī.cay'shun, misrepresentation.

Old English false; Latin falsus, v. fallo, supine falsum, to deceive.

Falsetto, plu. falsettos (R. xlii.), fōl.set'toze (Ital.), a false voice.

Falter, fōl'ter, to hesitate; fal'tered (2 syl.), fal'ter-ing, &c.

Spanish faltar, to be at fault (falta), hence sin falta, without fail.

Fame (1 syl.), renown; famed (1 syl.), renowned; fame'-less.

Famous, fā'mus; fa'mous-ly, fa'mous-ness.

Latin fāma, fāmōsus; French fame, fameux.

Familiar, fa.mil'yer, intimate, an attendant demon; famil'iar-ly;

familiarity, plu. familiarities (R. xlii.), fa.mil'iar'ri.tiz.

Familiarise (Rule xxxi.), fa.mil'iar.ize, to accustom;

Familiarised, fa.mil'iar.izd; famil'iaris'ing (Rule xix.)

Family, plu. families (Rule xlii.), fām'ī.lē, fām'ī.liz.

French famille, familiér, familiarité, familiariser; Latin fāmlia, fāmlīaris, fāmlīārtias (fāmltus, a household servant).

Famine, fām'in; famish, fam'ish, to starve; fam'ished (2 syl.), fam'ish-ing (-ish, "to make" [hungry]). (Rule lxvii.)

French famine, fam, hunger; Latin fāmes, dearth, hunger.

Fan, (noun and verb), fanned (1 syl.), fann'-ing (R. i.), fann'-er.

Old Eng. fann, a fan; Germ. wanne; Lat. vannus, a winnowing fan.

Fanatic, fa.nāt'ik (not fān'a.tik), a visionary; fanatical, fa.nāt'ī.kāl; fanat'ical-ly; fanaticism, fa.nāt'ī.sizm.

French fanatique, fanatisme; Latin fānātīcus (fānum, a temple).

Fanatics were persons who haunted temples and pretended to utter predictions).

Fancy, plu. fancies, fān'siz, a whim, a liking, to like, to imagine;

fancied, fān'sēd; fan'ci-ful (Rule viii.), fan'ciful-ly, fan'ciful-ness, fan'cy-ing (Rule xi.) (See Fantastic.)

(The spelling of "fancy" for phansy is disgraceful.)

Gk. phantasia (phaino, to appear); Lat. phantāsia; Fr. fantasie.

Fandango, plu. fandangoes, fān.dān'.goze, a Spanish dance.

Fane, a temple; fain, desirous; feign, fane, to pretend.

"Fane," Latin fānum. "Fain," Old English fegn(ian), to desire.

"Feign," French feindre.

Fanfare (not fanfire), fān'fare (Fr.), a flourish of trumpets (Arab.)

Fang, improperly applied to the root of teeth, a pointed tooth.

Old Eng. fæng-tōth, a tusk; (fōn, to seize, the tooth which seizes hold).

Fantasia, fān.tay'zī.ah (not fān'.ta.zee'.ah), a musical composition unrestricted by rules (Ital.)

Fantastic, fän.täs'.tik, fanciful; fantas'tical, fantas'tical-ly, fantas'tical-ness; fantasy, plu. fantasies, fän'.ta.siz.

Better with ph-, Gk. phantāsea: Lat. phantāsia. (See Fancy.)

Far, (comp.) far'ther, (super.) far'thest, the most distant.

Forth, (comp.) fur'ther, (super.) fur'thest, most in advance.

Fore, (comp.) former, (super.) foremost or first, ordinal.

(A has walked farther than B, has read further, and stands first or foremost in his class.)

(Of the planets, Neptune is farthest from the Sun: one of the poles of our Earth is advanced to the Sun further than the other; the planet Jupiter is the first or foremost in size.)

"Far," Old English feor or fyr, (comp.) fyrre, (super.) fyrrest.

"Forth," Old English forth or furth, (comp.) forther furdor, furdur, furdra, (sup.) forthmost.

"Fore," Old Eng. fōr, (comp.) formdr, more to the fore, (sup.) formest.

Farce (1 syl.), a dramatic burlesque; far'cical, far'cical-ly.

Fr. farce; Lat. farcio, to stuff. (A drama crammed, i.e., exaggerated.)

fare (Old Eng. postfix), "way," "wanderer," "getting on."

Field-fare, a bird. (Feola-fer, the migratory flock.)

Thorough-fare, thūr'rūh-fare, a through way.

War-fare, war-going.

Way-farer, a way-wanderer.

Welfare, well-going, well [or ill] getting-on (Rule x.)

Fare (1 syl.), passage-money, provision, to get on (see Fair); fared, fair'd; far-ing, fare'-ing, getting on; but Fairing, fair'ing, a present from the fair.

Farewell (not farewel), May it go well [with you].

("Well" retains double l in all its compounds, except welfare, which retains its more ancient spelling with one l.)

Old English far[an], to go; fare, a journey, hence cost, provision.

Farinaceous, fär'ri.nay''shus, made of flour, yielding flour.

Fr. farinacé; Lat. fārinārius (better than "farinaceous"), fārīna.

Farm, farmed (1 syl.), farm'-ing, farm'-er.

Old Eng. feorm[ian], to procure food (feorm, food), fearm[ian], to farm.

Farrago, plu. farragoes, far.ray'.gōze (Lat.), a medley, mesceline.

A farrago is meal [far] mixed with offal, for pigs, &c.

Farrier, fär'ri.er, one who shoes horses; far'riery, the trade.

Misspelt, the first syl. is ferrum, iron, and not far, bread corn.

Latin ferrārius [faber], a worker in iron, a blacksmith.

Farrow, fär'ro, a litter of pigs, to bring forth a litter of pigs; far'rowed (2 syl.), far'rowing.

Old English færh, a litter of pigs.

Far'ther, more remote. Fur'ther, more in advance. (See Far.)

Far'thest, most remote. Fur'thest, most in advance.

Foremost (not formost), most to the fore.

Farthing, farth'ing, the fourth-part of a penny.

Old English feorthling, one of the earliest English coins.

Fascinate, fās'sinate, to charm; fascinat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), fascinat-ing (Rule xix.), fascinat-er (better -or).

Fascination, fās'sinay''shun, enchantment.

Fr. fascination; Lat. fascinatio, fascinare (fascinum, witchery).

Fascine, fās'seen (not fas.seen'), a fagot used in sieges.

French fascine; Latin fascis, a bundle (fascio, to bind with a truss).

Fashion, fāsh'ōn, the mode, to mould, to form; fashioned, fāsh'ōnd; fashion-ing, fāsh'ōn ing; fashion-er.

Fashionable, fāsh'ōn.a.b'l; fashionable-ness, fashionably.

Fashionables (plu.), fāsh'ōn.a.b'lz, persons of fashion.

French fashionable, façon; Latin facio, to make or fashion.

Fast, firm, unbroken, hence swift (without interval) secure; from swift we get dissipated (to live fast), to hold fast (secure), and hence parsimony, abstinence.

Fasten, fah's'n, to bolt, to fix; fastened, fah'sind; fasten-ing, fah's'nīng, fixing, bolting, that which fastens.

(-en added to nouns = "to make." Fasten, to make fast.)

-fast (as an affix, "firm." Stead-fast, standing firm.

Old English fast, firm; fast or fast, swift; fæsten, a fast.

Fastidious, fās.tīd'ī.ūs (not fās.tidge'us), squeamish; fastid-ious-ly; fastid'ious-ness.

Lat. fastidiōsus (fastidium, disdain, fastus, pride); Fr. fastidieux.

Fat, (comp.) fatt'-er, (super.) fatt'-est (R. i.), fatt'-y, fatt'i-ness (R. xi.), fatt'-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like"); fat'-ly, fat'-ling, fat'-ness.

Fatten, fāt'n, to make fat (-en added to verbs means "to make"); fattened, fāt'n'd; fatt'en-ing, fatt'en-er.

Old Eng. fætt, fat; v. fætt[ian], past fættede, past part. fætted.

Fata Morgana, fā.tā Mor.gar'nah, a mirage occasionally seen in the Straits of Messina, &c.

Italian fata (fairy) Morgana, sister of Arthur and pupil of Merlin. She lived at the bottom of the sea.

Fatal, fā.tāl, deadly, inevitable; fa'tal-ly; fa'tal-ist; fatalism, fā.tāl.izm, the notion that everything is fixed by fate; fatality, fā.tāl.i.ty; fatalistic, fā.tāl.is''tik (q.v.)

Fate (1 syl.), doom, lot; fated, fā.ted, doomed, allotted.

Fr. fatal, fatalisme, fataliste; Lat. fatālis, fatāliter, fātum, fate.

Father, fem. mother, both parent; far'ther, muth'-er, pair'rent.

Father-in-law, plu. fathers-in-law. The husband's father is the wife's father-in-law, and the wife's father is the husband's father-in-law.

Step-father, plu. step-fathers, the second father of a child who has lost her first father; fem. Step-mother.

Grandfather, fem. grandmother, the parents of parents are grandparents to the third generation.

Great-grandfather, &c., the parents of grandparents are great-grandparents to the fourth generation.

Godfather, fem. Godmother, sponsors at baptism.

Son, daughter [both child], offspring of father and mother.

Sire, fem. dam, father and mother of a quadruped.

Old English fæder, mōder (common to the whole Aryan family of languages), fæderlic, fatherly; steop-fæder, steop-mōder (steop[an]), to bereave, the father, &c., of a child bereaved. "Grandfather" is French grand pèrle, great grandfather. (Anglo-Saxon great.)

Fathom, a measure of six feet, to sound the sea, to penetrate; fathom, fāth'un; fathomed (2 syl.), fath'om-ing, fath'om-er, fath'om-able, fath'om-less.

Old English fæthm, a cubit; v. fæthm[ian], to fathom; fæthmrtm.

Fatigue, fa'teeg', weariness, to weary; fatigued, fa'teegd'; fatigu-ing (Rule xix.), fa'teeg'ing; fatiga'tion, -shun.

French fatigue; Latin fātigo, to weary (fātīm, overmuch).

Faubourg, fō'boo'rg, a suburb. (Old French forsbourg.)

Low Latin foris burgium, the borough beyond [the town].

Fault, fōlt, offence; faulty, fōl'ty; fault'i-ness, fault'i-ly.

French faulte, now faute; Latin fallo, to slip; fałstias, falsehood.

Faun, a woodland deity. Fawn, a young deer, to cringe.

Fauna, faw'nah, the collective animals (Flora, fł'rah, the collective plants) of any given region.

"Fauna" (Latin), the goddess of procreation. "Flora," of flowers.

Favour, fā'vor, a kindness, to befriend; fa'voured (2 syl.), fa'vour-er, fa'vour-ing, fa'vouring-ly, fa'vour-er, fa'vour-able, fa'vourable-ness, fa'vourably; favourite, fa'vor.ıt; fa'vourit-ism, fa'vour-less.

French faveur, favorable, favorite, favoritisme; Latin fāvor, fāvorā-bilis, fāveo, to befriend. (Our apology for the -u- in these words is that it marks their French origin, but the French do not interpolate u after o, and it would be far better to follow the Latin.)

Fawn, a young deer, to cringe. Faun, a woodland deity.

Fawn, fawned (1 syl.), fawn'-ing, fawn'-ing-ly, fawn'-er.

Fr. foon = fahn, a fawn; Old Eng. fægus[ian], to cringe or flatter.

Faalty, fē'ālty (not feel'ty), loyalty.

French féal, trusty; Latin fidelis, faithful.

Fear, fēr, terror, to feel terror; feared (1 syl.), fear'-ing, fear'-ful (Rule viii.), fear'-ful-ly, fear'-ful-ness, fear'-less, fear'-less-ness, fear'-less-ly; fear-nought, fe'r'nort.

Old English fēr[an], to startle; fēr, terror from sudden danger.

Feasible, fee'zib'l, practicable; feas'ibly; feasibility.

French faisable (wrong-); Latin facere, facilis, easy to do.

Feast, feest, a banquet, to eat sumptuously; feast'-ed (R. xxxvi.)

French feste now fête; Latin festum, a holiday, a banquet

Feat, feet, an exploit. Feet, plu. of foot. Fête, fate (French.)

"Feat," French fait; Latin factum, a deed. "Feet," Old Eng. fēt, plu. fēt. "Fête," i.e., feste, a festival (Latin festum).

Feather, feth'er (noun and verb); feath'ered, feath'ering.

Old Eng. fæther or fether; fethered or fethered, feathered.

Feature, fee'tchūr, the five members of the face, a characteristic.

Norman faiture; Latin factūra, the make-up of a thing (facio).

Febrile, fēb'ril (not fē.brile nor fēb'.rile), relating to fever.

Febrifuge, fēb'.rī.fūje, a medicine to mitigate fever.

Fr. fēbrite; Lat. febrilis, febrī fūga (febris fūgo, to put to flight fever).

February, fēb'.ru.ā.ry (not fēb'.u.ā.ry). Latin febrūārius.

The month, among the Romans, of the lustralia (febrūo, to cleanse).

Fecula, fēk'.u.lah, starch; fec'ulent, fectulency. (See Faculæ.)

French fécule; Latin fecūla, diminutive of fec, sediment.

Fecund, fēk'.ūnd, fruitful; fecundate, fēk'.ūn.date; fec'undāt-ed

(Rule xxxvi.), fec'undāt-ing (Rule xix.), fec'undāt-or.

Fecundation, fēk'.ūn.day'.shun; fecundity, fē.kūn'.dīt.y.

French fēconder, fēcondation, fēcondité; Latin fecunditas, secundus.

Federal, fēd'.e.rāl, leagued together. The federal's, states leagued together; fed'eral-ism, fed'eral-ist; federal-ise, fēd'.e.rāl.ize; fed'eralised (4 syl.), fed'eralis-ing (R. xix.), federative, fēd'.e.ra.tīv. Confederate, con fēd'.ē.rate.

Federation, fēd'.e.ray'.shun and Confederation, a league.

Fr. fédéral, fédéraliste, fédération, fédératif; Lat. foedus, a league.

Fee, a payment, to pay; feed, fee'-ing. Land held under an overlord; fee-simple, land not entailed; fee-tail, lands entailed; fee-farm, a farm held on payment of rent.

Old Eng. feoh, stipend, goods. "Fee = feoff," Span. fe, Ital. fede,
(Lat. fides [land] in trust), not a word of Teutonic origin

Feeble, fee'b'l, weak; fee'ble-ness, fee'bly.

French faible; Spanish feble; Italian fiavole.

Feed, past fed, past part. fed; feed'-ing, feed'-er. (See Fee.)

Old English fēd[an], past fēdde, past part. fēded, v. n. fēding.

Feel, past felt, past part. felt; feel'-ing, perceiving by touch, sense of touch; feel'ing-ly, tenderly; feel'-er.

Old English fēl[an], past fælde, past part. fēled; fēlung.

Feet, plu. of foot. Feat, an exploit. Fête, fate, a festival.

"Feet," Old Eng. fēt, plu. fēt. "Feat," Fr. fait. "Fête," Fr. fête.

Feign, fane, to pretend. Fain, desirous. Fane, a temple.

Feign, feigned (1 syl.); feigned-ly, fay'.nēd.ly; feign'-ing.

Faint, faint, a pretence. Faint, inclined to swoon.

"Feign," Fr. feindre, feint; Lat. fingere, supine finctum, to counterfeit.

"Fain," Old Eng. fægn[ian], to desire; fægnung, a desiring, a wish.

"Fane," Lat. fanum, a temple (from fari, to speak, quod pontifices a sacrando fanum "fantur," quod vocabant effari templa (Varr.)

Felicitate, fe.lis'.i.tate, to congratulate; felic'itāt-ed (R. xxxvi), felic'itāt-ing (R. xix.); felicitation, fe.lis'.i.tay'.shun.

Felicity, fe.lis'.i.ty, happiness; felicitous, fe.lis'.i.tus, lucky, happy; felic'itous-ly, felic'itous-ness.

Fr. feliciter, felicitation, felicité; Lat. felicitas, felicitāre (felix, happy).

Fell, the skin; [fell of hair], a hilly moor, cruel, to bring to the ground, did fall. Fell-monger, dealer in hides; felt.

To fell, felled (1 syl.), fell'-ing, fell'-er, one who fells wood. ("Fell" retains double l in its compounds, R. viii., as befell.)

Old Eng. fell, skin, fur; felt [for hats]: Germ. fell; Lat. pell[is], a hide.

Germ. fels, a rock, hill, cliff. Old Eng. fell, cruel; fyll, death.

(Verb) Old Eng. fell[an], to cut down; past fealde, past part. feled.

Fellow, fēl'.lo, a person. Felloe, fēl'.lo (of a wheel). Fell'er, one who fells trees. Felo de se, fel'.o de se, self murder.

"Fellow," Old Eng. felaw. "Felloe," Old Eng. felge. (See Fell.)

Felly, plu. fellies, fēl'.liz, one of the parts of the rim of a wheel. This is a better spelling than felloe. (Old Eng. felge.)

Felon, fēl'.ōn, one who has committed felony;

Felony, plu. felonies, fēl'.ō.niz, a capital offence; felonious, fē.lō'.niz; felo'nius-ly.

Felo de se, fēl'.o de se, suicide, a self murderer.

Low Lat. felonia, felo de se, felony on oneself [by suicide]: Fr. fêlon.

Fel'spar (in Geol.), a volcanic product the basis of many rocks.

German feldspath, field spar. Kirwin says fel spar, rock spar.

Felt, the hide and its fur, used for hats. Past tense of feel.

Old English fell, a hide, fur; felt, a hide with its fur.

Felucca, fe.lūk'.kah (Italian feluca), a small sailing vessel.

Female, fē'.mail, the feminine sex. Male, the masculine sex.

Feminine, fēm'.i.nin (not fēm'.i.nine), pertaining to the female sex. Masculine, mās'.kū.lin, pertaining to the male sex.

Female screw, the nut or indented spiral. Male screw, the part with the thread in relief.

Femme-sole, fēm'.sōle, an unmarried woman.

Fr. femelle, femme, a woman, féminin; Lat. fēminivis, femella or fēmina, a woman (a feminum partibus, quibus [femina] distinguitur a viro.—Isidore of Seville (Originum s. Etymolog., lib. xx).

Femoral, fēm'.o.rāl, pertaining to the thigh.

Lat. fēmur, gen. fēmōris, outside of the thigh; fēmen, gen. fēminis the inside of the thigh.

Fen, land wholly or partially covered with water; fenn'-y (R. i.)
Old English fenn, a marsh or fen; fennig, fenny, muddy.

Fence (1 syl.), a hedge, to enclose with a hedge, to fight with foils; fenced (1 syl.), fenc'-ing (Rule xix.), fenc'-er.

Latin defensio, a defence; v. defendo, supine defensum.

Fen'nel, a pot-herb. (Old Eng. fenol; Lat. fanicūlum, fœnum, hay.)

Feod, feud, fee, feoff, fief, feodal, feudal.

(At present the uncertain spelling and meaning of these words is most perplexing. The French fief is not wanted and might be discarded. Feud should be restricted to the quarrels of clans and tribes. It is a very corrupt spelling of the Old English fægth or fæthh, a deadly feud.)
The words retained and their meanings would then be—

Fee, property held for service; fee-simple, fee-tail, base-fee, conditional fee, fee-expectant, fee-farm (Law terms).
Old English fēh or feoh, property, goods, any medium of exchange.

Feod, fude, the right of a tenant to a fee; feodality, fealty; feodary, fū'.da.ry, an officer of the court of wards (abolished); feodatory, fū'.da.tō.ry, the tenant of a fee.

Feoff, fěf (same as fee, but not a law term), whence feoff-or, fěf'-or, one who gives possession of a fee; feoff-ee, fěf'.ee, one who is put in possession of a fee; feoff-ment, fěf'.ment, a deed conveying a fee.

Feud, a deadly quarrel between clans or families; feud-bote, fude.bote, money paid for engaging in a "feud" quarrel; feud'-ist, a writer on family feuds.

Feudal [system]. Unhappily the spelling is too firmly established to be disturbed, otherwise feodal would be better, and then feodal would be the adj. of feud.

Low Latin feodum, feoffamentum, feoffator, feoffatus; French féodal.

Ferment, (noun) fer'.ment, (verb) fer.ment' (Rule l.), ferment'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ferment'-ing, ferment'-able.

Fermentation, fer'.mēn.tay''.shun; fermentability, fer'.mēn'.ta.bīl''.i.ty; fermentative, fer.mēn'.ta.tīv.

French fermenter, fermentation, fermentable, fermentatif; Latin fermentatio, fermentum, fermentāre, to leaven.

Fern, a family of cryptogamic plants; fern'-y. (Old Eng. fearn.)

Ferocious (Rule lxvi.), fe.rō'.shus, savage; fero'cious-ly;

Ferocity, fe.rōs'.i.ty, inhuman cruelty, savageness.

Fer'rel (better ferrule, fěf'.rule, q.v.)

Ferret, fěf'.rēt, an animal of the weazel kind, a narrow woollen tape, to drive out of a hole, to teaze; fer'ret-ed (Rule xxxvi.), fer'ret-ing, fer'ret-er.

French furet, foreter; German frett: Old English fretan, to gnaw.
"Ferret" (tape), German floret, [band], a coarse silk ribbon.

Ferruginous, fě'r.rū'.gĭ.nus (not fe.rū'.gĭ.nus), containing the properties or colour of iron[rust]; ferruginated, fě'r.rū'.gĭ.na.ted, impregnated with iron (not fe.rū'.gĭ.na.ted).

Latin ferrūgo, iron rust (serum rubigo, rust of iron).

Ferry, plu. ferries, fě'r.rĭz, a boat for conveying passengers across a river, to convey passengers across a river in a boat; ferries, fě'r.rĭz; ferried, fě'r.rĭd; fer'ry-ing.

Old Eng. fėrian, to carry; past fėrode, past part. fėred; Lat. fėro.

Fertile, fě'r.tĭl (not fě'r.tile), more fertile (comp.), fer'til-est, or most fertile (super.); fer'tile-ly; fertility, fě'r.tĭl'.ĭ.ty.

Fertilise (not fertilize, Rule xxxi.), fě'r.tĭl.ĭze; fer'tilised (3 syl.), fer'tilis-ing (Rule xix.); fer'tilis-er, a rich manure, &c.; fertilisation, fě'r.tĭl'.ĭ.ză'.shŭn.

French fertile, fertilitė, fertiliser; Latin fertilis, fertilitas.

Ferula, fě'r.ru.lah, a small pallet of wood or leather for striking children on the hand by way of chastisement.

Latin fėrŭla, fėrio, to strike. (Ferula tristes, sceptra pędagogorum cessant.—Martial, 10, 62, 10.)

Ferrule, fer'rule, a small metal hoop for walking canes, &c.

Spanish birola; French virole.

Fer'vent, ardent; (comp.) fer'vent-er, (super.) fer'vent-est; fer'vent-ly, fer'vent-ness; fervency, fě'r.vėn.sy.

Fervour, fě'r.vor'; fer'vid, fer'vid-ly, fer'vid-ness.

Latin servens, gen. serventis; serveo, to be hot; fervidus, fervor.

Fesse (1 syl.), a band crossing an heraldic shield horizontally, and equal to one-third of its entire field. It is one of the nine honourable ordinaries. (Latin fascia, a band.)

Festival, fě's.tĭ.văl, a holiday, a time of rejoicing; festal, fě'stăl; fes'tal-ly; festive, fě's.tĭv; fes'tive-ly; festivity, plu. festivities, fes.tĭv'.ĭ.tiz; amusement.

Latin festivitas, festivus, festivare; French feste, now fête.

Festoon, fěs.toon' (noun and verb); festooned' (2 syl.), festoon'-ing.

Ital. festone (festa, a festival); Fr. feston (Lat. festum, a holiday).

Fetch, the apparition of a living person, to go and get; fetched'.

To fetch a compass, to make a circuit in order to reach a point.

Old English fec[an], to fetch. Fetich (q.v.), a kind of demon.

Fête, fate, a holiday. Fate, destiny. Feat, feet, an achievement. Feet, plu. of foot.

"Fête," French fête for feste; Latin festum, a festival.

"Fate," Lat. fatum. "Feat," Fr. fait; Lat. factum, something done.

"Feet," Old English fōt, plu. fēt.

Fetich, fě'.tish, a West African idol; fetich-ism or feticism, fě'.ti.cĭzm, the worship of a fetich.

Portug. feitiço, witchcraft; Lat. fascinum (Gk. baskānōs, witchcraft).

Fetid, fē'tīd, ill-smelling; fē'tīd-ly, fē'tīd-ness, fē'tor.

French fétide; Latin fœtidus, fœtor, v. fœteo, to smell offensively.

Fetlock, fēt'lŏk, the tuft of hair behind the pastern of a horse.

Old English fēt locc, a lock of hair [on the] feet.

Fetter, a chain for the feet. Man'acle, a shackle for the hands.

Old English fetor or feter. French manacles; Latin manica.

Feud, the quarrel of a clan or tribe. (See Feod.)

Old Eng. feōðian, past feōde, to be at enmity, fēgth or fēhth, a feud.

Feudal [system], by which lands were held for military service; feudal-ism, fū'dāl.izm, the feudal constitution; feudal'- ist or feud'-ist, one versed in feudal laws; feudality, fu.dāl.i.ty, state of being feudal; feudary, fu'dā.ry

(adj.), holding lands for service; feudatary, fu'dā.tā.ry, one who holds lands for service.

Fr. feudiste, feudataire, féodal, féodalité; Span. feudal, feudalidad, feudatario, feudista, feudo, a fief; Ital. feudatario, feudo.

Feu-de-joie (French), few'd' zjwāl', a joy-volley.

Feuilleton, fu'l.ton[g'], that part of [French] journals devoted to literary articles, as critiques, tales, and so on. (Fr.)

Fever, fē.vēr; fē'ver-ish, having a slight fever; fē'ver-ish-ly, fē'ver-ish-ness (R. lxvii.) (Old Eng. fefer; Lat. febris.)

Feverfew, fē.ver.fu, a corruption of Old English feferfuge, to drive off fever, the pyre'thrum [Parthe'nium].

Latin febrifuga. Pyrethrum (Greek purētōs, fever).

Few, (comp.) few'er, (super.) few'-est; few'-ness.

Old English few, (super.) fewwosta, fewwness, fewness.

Fiat, fī.at (Latin "let it be done"), an order to do something.

Fib, a falsehood, to tell a falsehood; fibbed (1 syl.), fibb'-ing

(Rule i.), fibb'-er. (Irish fiabbare, to tell flim-flam tales.)

Fibre, plu. fibres, fī'ber, fī'berz, the solid part of animal flesh, a hair-like root, &c.; fibrous, fī.brūs; fibrine, fī.brīn, that which forms fibre; fī'brīn-ous.

French fibre, fibrine, fibreux; Latin fibra (fiber, an extremity).

Fibula, fīb'ulāh (in Lat. fī'bŭlā), the small bone of the leg;

fīb'ular, adj. of fibula; fīb'ulated. (Lat. fībŭlāre, to button.)

Fickle, fīk'l, inconstant; fickle-ness. (Old English ficol.)

Fico, plu. ficoes (Rule xlii.), fī.kō, fī.kōze, a snap of the finger.

Italian fico, a fig, &c. I don't care a fig or fico.

Fictile, fīk'tīl, pertaining to pottery; fictor. (Latin fictilis.)

Fiction, fīk'shun; fic'tion-ist, a writer of fiction.

Fictitious, fīk.tish'ūs; fictitious-ly, fictitious-ness.

French fiction; Latin fictio, fictitiŭs. (See Rule lxi.)

Fiddle, fīd'dl, a violin, to play the violin; fiddled, fīd'dld;

fiddling, fīd'ling; fiddler, fīd'lēr; fiddle-stick, a bow for playing a fiddle, a sword, a term of contempt signifying that what is said is unworthy of notice.

Fiddle-faddle, trifling matter, much ado about nothing.

German fedel, v. fedeln, fiedler; Latin fides, a fiddle.

Fidelity, fī.dəl'ī.ty, faithfulness. (Fr. fidélie; Lat. fidēlitas.)

Fidget, fij'.ĕt, a restless person; worry, to annoy with petty annoyances; fid'get-ed (R. xxxvi.), fid'get-ing; fidgety, fij'.et.y, restless; fidgets, a fidgety fit or conduct.

German sickfacken, to fidget; sickfacker, sickfackerei.

Fiduciary, plu. fiduciaries (Rule xliv.), fī.dū'si.ā.riz, a feoffee in trust; fiduciary (adj.), bound on conditions of trust.

Latin fiduciarius, v. fiduciāre, to make conditions of trust.

Fie! fī, an exclamation to deter children from doing something disagreeable or naughty.

Fief, feef, land held on condition of military service.

This French word is not wanted. (See Feoff.)

Field, feeld, originally meant a "clearing," and was spelt fēld, that is, a place where the trees have been "felled."

Old English fēld, v. fell[an], to fell; past fealde, past part. feled.

Fieldfare (2 syl.), a corruption of feal-fare, a kind of thrush.

Old English feala-fer, the migratory flock (far[an]), past fōr, past part. faren, to travel; and feala, many). These birds flock to Britain in October, and leave in February.

Fiend, feend (not feen), the devil; fiend'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); fiend'-ish-ly, fiend'-ish-ness, fiend'-like.

Old English feond, feondlic, fiend-like (feon, to hate).

Fierce, fē'erce, (comp.) fierc'-er, (super.) fierc'-est, fierce'-ly; fierce-ness, ferocity; fierce-minded.

Fier fierce (se dit d'un lion hérissé); Latin fērus, savage.

Fiery, fī'ēry, passionate, like fire. (See Fire.)

Fife, plu. fifes (1 syl., Rule xl.), fif'-er, fif'-ing, fifed (1 syl.)

French fifre; German pfeife, pfeifer, v. pfeifen.

Fifteen, fif.teen', a numeral; fifteenth, fif.teenth', an ordinal;

Fifth, ordinal of five; fifth'-ly, in the fifth place;

Fifty, fif'.ty, five times ten; fifti-eth, fif'.tī.ĕth, its ordinal.

Old Eng. fif, 5; fifta, 5th; fiften, 15; fifteotha, 15th; fiftig, 50; fiftighæt, 50th.

Fig, a fruit, a snap of the fingers: as I don't care a fig.

Old English fīc; Latin ficus, a fig. Fico (Ital.), a fig, a snap of the fingers. Fr. Faire la figue à quelqu'un, to make a butt of one.

Fight, past fought, past part. fought, fīte, fawt; [foughten, adj.: as the foughten field, used in poetry]. fight-ing, fite'-ing; fighter, fite'.er.

Old English feohht[an], past feahht, past part. fohten.
(The -g- is interpolated, and is worse than useless.)

Fig'ment, an idle dream. (Lat. figmentum; figo, to imagine.)

Figure, fig'ūr (not fī.geur'), shape, form, to shape, to make figures; figured, fig'ūrd (not fī.geurd'); figur-ing, fig'ūr.ing; figurative, fig'gu.rā.tiv; fig'urative-ly, fig'urative-ness, fig'ur-ist.

Figurante, fig'gu.rant, a female ballet-dancer.

Fr. figurante, figuratif, figure, figuriste; Lat. figūra, figūrātivus, figūrāre (figo, to mould, to fashion).

Filament, fil'a.ment, a thread; fil'amēn'tary; filature, fil'a.tchūr, spinning [silk from the cocoons].

French filament; Latin filamenta (filum, thread).

Filbert, fil'bert, the hazel nut. Corruption of filberd.

Old English fill berd (fill-beard), so called because the nut exactly fills the cup made by the "beards" of the calyx.

Filch, to pilfer; filehed (1 syl.), filch'-ing, filch'-er.

Probably a corrupt contraction of pillage (pilge, filch).

File (1 syl.), a tool for rasping, a line of soldiers, a wire on which bills are strung, to use a file, to put a [bill] on a file, to march in file; filed (1 syl.), fil'-ing (Rule xix.), fil'-er; rank and file, the privates of the army.

French fil and file; Latin filum, a thread.

Old English feol or fyl, a file or rasp; Norse fil v. file, to file or rasp.

Filial, fil'ā.āl, becoming in a son or daughter; fil'ial-ly.

Lat. filialis (filius, a son; filia, a daughter; Gk. phileō, to love).

Filibuster, fil'i.būs'ter (not fill ..), a piratical adventurer.

Spanish filibuster; French filibustier.

Filigree, fil'ā.gree, thread-like work with gold or silver wire.

French filigrane; Spanish filigrana (the grain [made] with wire).

Fill, to make full; filled (1 syl.), fill'-ing, fill'-er.

To fill full, to fill completely; To fulfil, to accomplish.

Six words (all, thrall, full, fill, still, and mass) drop one of their double letters in those compounds which do not come under R. iv., thus fulfil, fulfil-ment, but the double l is resumed in fulfill-ed, fulfill-ing, fulfill-er, R. viii.

Old English fyll[an], past fyllde, past part. fylled.

Fill'et, an astragal; meat boned, rolled, and tied with a string; a band for the head, to bind with a fillet; fill'et-ed (not fillett-ed), fill'et-ing (not fillett-ing), Rule iii.

(Every effort should be made to reduce the irregularities of Rule iii.)

French filet, fil and dim. et, a little thread (Latin filum, a thread).

Fillibeg, fil'ā.bĕg (not philibeg), the pouch of the Scotch kilt, the kilt is also called a fillibeg.

Gaelic filleadh-beg, a little plait or fold.

Fillibuster (should be filibuster, q.v.)

Fill'ip, a jerk with finger and thumb, to give such a jerk.
Philip, a man's name. Fill'iped, fill'ipt (not fillipp-ed); fill'ip-ing (not fill'ipp-ing). Same as flip, flap, &c.

(Gossip, kidnap, and worship are the only verbs ending in "p" which absurdly violate R. fil., and they ought at once to be reduced to order.)

"Flip," a dim. variety of flap. We have a large number of these vowel changes, as pit pat, chit chat, flim flam, snick snack, flip flop, wiggle waggle, and many more.

"Flap" is allied to Latin flāpa, German klappe, Welsh llabio, clap, slap, &c.

Filly, (mas.) colt, (both) foal, fōle, the young of a horse.

Latin filia, a daughter; Old English collt and fōla.

Film, a thin skin, to cover with a film; filmed (1 syl.), film'-ing; film-y, fil'my; fil'mi-ness, R. xi. (Old English filn.)

Filter, fil'tēr, a strainer, to strain. Philter, fil'tēr, a love-potion; fil'tered, fil'ter-ing; fil'ter-er, one who filters.

Filtration, fil'tray'shūn, the process of filtering; fil'trage.

French filtrer, filtre, filtration, filtrage; Low Latin filtrum.

Filth, dirt; filthy, fil'thly; fil'thi-ly, fil'thi-ness (Rule xi.)

Old English filth or fylth, filth, impurity.

Fin (of a fish), finned (1 syl.), having fins; finn'-y (R. i.), fin'-less, Old English fin or finn, finht, finny. Finnas, the people of Finland.

Final, fi'nāl, last; fi'nal-ly; finality, fi'nāl'ity.

Finial, fin'iāl, an ornamental top to pinnacles, &c.

Finale, fi.nāl'le (not fi.nay'le, nor fi.nāl'ly), the close.

Finis, fi'nīs, the end; in fine (1 syl.), in conclusion, once for all. (French enfin.)

Finish, fin'ish, the end, to end; fin'ished (2 syl.), fin'ish-ing, fin'ish-er, (-ish in verbs means "to make").

Finite, fi'nīte, terminable; finite'-ness, finite'-less.

Infinite, in'fīnīt, without end; definite, dēf'īnīt, precise.

Indefinite, in.dēf'īnīt, not definite.

Latin finis, finitimus, finitio, finitus, finire, finalis; Italian finale (3 syl.); French final.

Finance, fi.nānce' (not fi'nānce), revenue; finan'ces, ready cash; financier, fi'nān'ser.

Fr. finances, financier; Low Lat. fināre, to fix a fine. "Finance" meant originally duty, tax (of the nature of a fine).

Finch, a singing bird; bullfinch, goldfinch. (Old Eng. finc.)

Find, (past) found, (past part.) found; find'-ing, find'-er.

Finding of the court, sentence of the court.

To find fault, to censure. How do you find yourself? In what state do you find your health? (In Latin we have: me male habēre sentio, I find or perceive myself ill.)

Old English find[an], past faund, past part. funden.

Fine (1 syl.), a forfeit, delicate, beautiful, flashy, to impose a forfeit;

Fine (adj.), fin'-er (comp.), fin'-est (super.); fin'-er, one who refines metal; finery, fi'ne.ry, flashy clothes; finary, a forge at iron mills; fine'-ly, fine'-ness.

Finesse (Fr.), fi.ness, petty artifices; finess'-ing (Rule xix.), practising petty artifices.

Fine (v.), fined (1 syl.), fin'-ing, fin'-able. (See Final.)

Low Lat. finis, a fine; fināre, to refine. Fr. fin, delicate; originally the amount of pure gold or silver found by assay; finesse.

Finger, fin'.ger (not fin'ger), noun and verb; fin'gered (2 syl.); fin'ger-ing, touching with the fingers, the right use of the fingers in playing on musical instruments. At my fingers ends (not finger's nor fingers' end), familiarly known; fin'ger-board, fin'ger-post.

Old Eng. finger, feng, a grasp, v. fōn, past feng, p. p. fungen, to seize.

Finial, fin'.i.al, a decoration. (See Final.)

Finical, fin.ī.kāl; fin'ical-ly, fin'ical-ness.

-ical (Latin termination), "pertaining to" [what is fine or elegant].

Finis, fi.nis (Lat.), the end, the conclusion. (See Final.)

Finish, fin'.ish, the end; fi'nish, rather fine (fine with the dim. -ish). Finnish, pertaining to the Finns. (See Final.)

Finn, a native of Finland. Fin (of a fish). See Fin.

Fiord, fē'.or, a bay, frith, or inlet (Norw., Swed., Dan.)

Fire, name of a tree; its timber is deal. Fur, a soft short hair.

"Fire," Old English furh-wudu, fir-wood. "Fur," Welsh ffwrw.

Fire (1 syl.), fired (1 syl.), fir'-ing, shooting, fuel; fiery, fi'.ery.

Old English fir or fyr, fyren, fiery; fyrranne, a fire-pan; fyr-scoft, a fire-shovel; fyr-tange, fire-tongs; fyr-tholle, an oven.

Firkin, fir'.kin, a quarter-barrel or nine gallons [of beer], a tub of butter containing fifty-six pounds.

Kilderkin, two firkins or eighteen gallons [of beer].

Barrel, four firkins, or thirty-six gallons [of beer].

"Firkin," German fass and kin, dim., a little barrel; or, Dutch vier with dim. a little four or quarter barrel. "Kilderkin," Dutch, a little baby [barrel or tub].

Firm, substantial, strong, a mercantile company; adj. (comp.) firm'-er, (super.) firm'-est; firm'-ly, firm'-ness.

Lat. firmus, steady; firmāmen, an establishment (Gk. herma, a prop).

Firmament, fir'.mā.mēnt, the sky; firmamen'tal.

Latin firmamentum, the prop of the fixed stars (Greek herma, a prop).

Firman, fir'.mān, a royal license or passport. (Turk. firmaun.)

First, foremost; first'-ly, a modern innovation for first (adv.)

At first, or at the first (?). If adverbially used, meaning "immediately," most decidedly, at first is to be used. It is the Anglo-Saxon adverb æt fōre (before), æt frumen at first. At first sight, here first-sight is one word like first-fruits, first-rate, first-born, and "at" is the adverbial prefix as in ætfóre.

Old English fyr, far; fyrre, farther; fyrrest or fyrst, farthest or first. Our word is a contraction of the Old English fīrnest (fīr'st), foremost.

Firth, a corruption of frith, q.v. (Lat. frētum, a frith.)

Fiscal, fīs'kāl, pertaining to revenue.

Latin fiscus, a money-bag, the money put in the bag; fiscalis.

Fish, plu. (collective) fish, plu. (partitive) fishes, fish'ēz; fish's (poss. sing.), fish'īz; fishes', fish'ēz. (Rule xxxiv.)

Fish (verb), fish'es (third per. s. pres. Ind., Rule xxxiv.); fished (1 syl.), fish'-ing, fish'-er.

Fish'-y, fish'i-ness (R. xi.), fish'ery, plu. fisheries, fish'ē.rīz.

Fish'er-man, one whose occupation is to catch fish.

Fish-woman [fishwife], a woman who sells fish by retail.

Fish-mon'ger, a fish-dealer. (Old English monger, dealer.)

Fish'-tail, to shape like the tail of a fish.

Fish's tail, the tail of a fish.

Old Eng. fisc, plu. fīscas, fiscere, a fisher; fisc-nett, fisc-huis, v. fīscian.

"Fish" (a card counter), a blunder for the French word fiche (a five sou piece). The two points allowed for the rub are called in French la fiche de consolation (see Rule lxiv.)

Fissure, fīzh'ūr, a crack or cleft. Fisher, fish'ēr, one who fishes.

"Fissure," French; Latin fissūra (fīdo, supine fissum, to cleave).

"Fisher," Old English fiscere (fīscian), to fish.

Fit, a paroxysm, a canto, suitable, to adapt, to qualify; (adj.) fit, (comp.) fitt'-er, (super.) fitt'-est, fitt'-ing, fitt'-ing-ly (Rule i.); (v.) fitt'-ed, fitt'-ing; fit'-ly (adv.), fit'-ness; fit'-ful (Rule viii.), capricious; fit'ful-ly, fit'ful-ness; by fits and starts, intermittently.

"Fit" (of illness), Fr. faite, the point or summit; paroxysm, means much the same thing, being from the Gk. oxus, pointed; oxuno, to make pointed, to sharpen; par-oxusmōs.

"Fit" (a canto), Old Eng. fitt, a song; fitt[an], to sing.

"Fit" (suitable), Fr. fait, comely, well made, as un homme bien fit, il est bien fit dans sa taille, c'est le père tout fit. (Lat. factum.)

Five, a numeral; fifth, an ordinal; fifteen, fifteenth; fifty, fiftieth (Rule xi.); five-fold, one and four times more.

Old Eng. fif, five; fīfta, fifth; fīften, fifteen; fīfteotha, fifteenth; fīfti or fīftig, fifty; fīftigthat, fiftieth; fif-feald, five-fold; &c.

Fix, to fasten; fix'-ing, fixed (1 syl.); fixed-ly, fix'.ed.ly; fixed-ness, fix'.ed.ness; fixity, fix'.ī.ty; fixture, fix'.tchūr; fixation, fix'.ā.shun; fix'-able.

French fixer, fixité, fixation; Latin figo, supine fixum, to fix.

Fizz, one of the few monosyllables (not in f, l, or s) ending with a double consonant: as add, odd; burr, err; bitt, butt; ebb, egg; buzz, fuzz; fizz, frizz and whizz (Rule vii.); fizz'-ing, fizzed (1 syl.) An imitative word.

Flab'by, flaccid; (comp.) flab'bi-er, (super.) flab'bi-est (Rule lxviii.); flab'bi-ly (Rule xi.), flab'bi-ness.

Welsh libin, flaccid, limber; lib, a flaccid state.

Flaccid, flāk'·sīd, limp; flac'cid-ly, flac'cid-ness, flaccid'ity.

Fr. flaccidité; Lat. flaccidus, flaccus, flap-eared; flaccéo, to wither.

Flag, au ensign, a water plant, a paving stone, to droop; flagged (1 syl.), flagg'-ing (Rule i.), flagg'-ing-ly, flagg'-er, flagg'-y, flagg'i-ness (Rule xi.); flag'stone, flag'ship.

To unfurl the black flag, a token of distress.

To unfurl the red flag [with the Rom.], a signal for battle.

To unfurl the white flag, to sue for quarter, to give in.

"Flag" (an ensign), German flagge; Danish flag, flagen, to flutter.

"Flag" (the water iris), so called from its resemblance to a flag.

"Flag" (a paving stone), Danish flak, flat; German flach, level.

"Flag" (to droop), Latin flaccéo, flaccus; Welsh llegu, to flag.

Flagellate, flāj'·ēl.lāte, to scourge; flag'ellated (Rule xxxvi.), flag'ellāt-ing (Rule xix.); flag'ellant, one who scourges himself; flagellation, flāj'·ēl.lay''·shun; flagel'lum.

Fr. flageller, flagellante, flagellation; Lat. flagellum, flagellāre.

Flageolet, flāj'·ō.lēt (not flāj'·ē.ō.lēt), a wind instrument.

Fr. flageolet; Gk. plagtaulos, a flute (plagtiós aulos, the cross flute).

Flagitious, fla'jīsh'·us, villanous; flagitious-ly, flagitious-ness.

Latin flagitiōsus, flagitium, flagrum [a crime deserving] a scourge.

Flagon, flag'·ōn, a tankard; the word is now chiefly employed to designate the large metal vessel which holds the sacramental wine before it is poured into the chalice.

French flacon, a small bottle, with a stopper of the same material.

Flagrant, fla'·grānt, notorious; fla'grant-ly; fla'grancy.

Latin flagrantia, flagāre, flagrans (flagrum, [deserving] a scourge).

Flail (not frail), an instrument for thrashing corn.

Latin flagellum, flagellāre, to thrash.

Flake, anything put loosely together: as a flake of snow; flāk-y, flā'·ky (R. xix.), fla'ki-ness, flāked (1 syl.), flāk'-ing.

Old English flacea, flakes of snow; Latin flocus, a flock of wool.

Flambeau, plu. flambeaux (Fr.), flām'·bō, flām'·bōze. (Lat. flamma.)

Flame (1 syl.), a blaze, to blaze; flamed (1 syl.), flām'-ing (Rule xix.), flā'ming-ly, flām'-y; flame'-less; flam'beau (q.v.)

Flemingo, plu. flamingoes (Rule xlii.), fla.mīn'·gōze, a bird

Inflam'mable (double m); inflammability, in.flām'·ma.bīl''·ī.ty; inflammation, in'.flām.may''·shun (double m).

French flamme, flambeau, inflammable, inflammabilité, inflammation. Lat. flamma, inflammatio, inflammāre (Gk. phlégma, Æol phlemma).

Flamen, flā.mēn, a Roman priest devoted to the service of one god only. It is an error to suppose that "flamen" has any connexion with flame, and that these priests were so called because they "set flame to" the sacrificial fires.

Varro says (De Ling. Lat., iv. 15) "quod caput cinctum habebant filo" (fillet), from "filum" we get filāmines contracted to f'lāmines.

Flannel (double n), not flan'ncn, a woollen cloth; flannelled, flān'.nēld; flan'nell-ing (Rule iii., -EL).

(The double n is a blunder peculiar to our own language.)

French flanelle; filum laneus, woollen thread, whence f'lan' with -el "pertaining to," "made of" [woollen thread]; Welsh gwlanen, flannel; gwlan, wool; German flanell; Spanish flanela; Italian flanella; Danish flanel or flonel.

Flap, anything which opens as it were on a hinge, as the flap of a garment, the flap of a shutter, the flap of a table, the flap of the ear, &c., a disease on the lips of horses; to flap or move the wings backwards and forwards, to hang loose; flapped (1 syl.) or flapt, flapp'-ing, flapp'-er (R. i.)

German klapp, a flap or slap; klappe, a valve; French frapper.

"Flap" (in the lips of horses), German flappe, a large hanging lip.

Flare (1 syl.), a glare, to glare; flared (1 syl.), flār'-ing (R. xix.), flar'ing-ly. (German flackern; Danish flagre.)

Flash, a sudden burst [of fire, wit, &c.], to burst suddenly on the sight; flashed (1 syl.), flash'-ing; flash'-y, showy; flash'i-ly (R. xi.), flash'i-ness, flash'-man, flash'-pipe.

French fleche, a arrow. A "flash" is a dart of light.

Flask, a bottle, a powder-horn. (Old Eng. flasc, a leather bottle.)

Flat, level, insipid, a sign in music, a storey or floor; flat'-ly, flat'-ness, (comp.) flat'-er, (super.) flat'-est (R. lxviii.), flat'-ish (-ish dim.); flat'-ed, made flat; flat'-ing (R. i.)

Flat'-en (-en means "to make" [flat]), flat'-ened (2 syl.); flatten-ing, flat'n-ing; flat'-wise (not flatways).

German platt, flat, plain; platten, to flatten; French plat.

Flatter, to praise falsely, comp. deg. of flat; flattered, flāt'.erd; flāt'-er-ing, flāt'-ering-ly, flāt'-er-er.

Flattery, plu. flatteries, flāt'.eriz, overwrought praise.

Fr. flatter, flatterie (Lat. plaudo, or falso-laudo, to praise falsely).

Flatulence, flāt'tu.lēnce, wind in the stomach; flatulency, flāt'tu.lēn-sy; flat'ulent, flat'ulent-ly, flāt'us.

Latin flatulentus (flātus, a gust of wind, flāre, to blow).

("Flatulence" and "flatulant" would be more correct. 1st Lat. conj.)

Flaunt (to rhyme with aunt, is the more general pronunciation, but -au- as in "cause" is far more analogous to the general pronunciation of this diphthong), to give one-self pert airs, to parade fine clothes; flaunt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), flaunt'-ing, flaunt'-ing-ly, flaunt'-er.

Flauto, plu. flautos (Rule xlii.), the flute, music for flutes (Ital.); flautist, flaw'.tist, a flute-player.

Flavour, flā'vēr (noun and verb); flavoured, flā'verd; fla'vour-ing; flavour-ous, flā'ver.ūs; fla'vour-less.

Corruption of savour: Lat. sāpor, relish; sāpio, sapid taste or smell.

Flaw, a blemish; flawed (1 syl.), flaw'-ing, flaw'-less.

Welsh flaw, a burst, a crack; fla, a parting from.

Flax, a plant; flax'-en, made of flax, yellow [hair], flax'-y.

Old English fleax, flax; fleaxen, flaxen.

Flay, to strip off the skin of an animal (not flee); flayed (1 syl.), flay'-ing, flay'-er (Rule xiii.)

Old English flean, to flay; past fleande, past part. fleand.

Flea, flē, an insect. Flee, to take to flight. Flay (not flee).

Fleas, flēze, plu. of flea. Flees, flēze, runs away.

Flea-bite, a spot caused by the bite of a flea, a trivial evil.

Old English flea, a flea; fledn, to flee; flean, to flay.

Fleam, fleem, a lancet for bleeding cattle. Phlegm, flēm.

Welsh flaim, a lancet. "Phlegm" (pituitous matter). Gk. phlegma.

Fledge (1 syl.), to be in feather; fledged (1 syl.), covered with feathers; fledg'-ing (Rule xix.), fledg'-ling, a young bird just fledged. (-ling Old Eng. affix, a dim., an offspring.)

Old English fleog[an], to fly; German flügge or flucke, fledged.

Flee, to run from danger. Flea, flē, an insect.

Flee, (past) fled, (past part.) fled; flē'-er (R. xix.), flee'-ing (when a word ends in two vowels it retains both before -ing: as baa-ing, see-ing, agree-ing, coo-ing, woo-ing, dye-ing, eye-ing; except -ue: as argu-ing, pursu-ing, ensu-ing).

Flee, fly. Flea, an insect. To fly is to use wings or speed quickly, to flee, to run from danger. When great speed is to be expressed, or the idea of "running away" is not indicated, we say fly not flee, as:

The "express" flies along; the boy flew like lightning; fly hence to France with the utmost speed. Even running from danger, if great dispatch is to be expressed, as "Whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands (3 Hen. V., i. 3.)

Old English fleog[an] or flig[an], to flee or fly; (past) fledh, (past part.) flogen, flugen. "Flea," Old English flea.

Fleece (1 syl.), the entire coat of a sheep; fleeced (1 syl.), coated with wool; fleec'-y (R. xix.), comp. fleec'i-er (R. xi.), super. fleec'i-est (R. lxviii.); (verb) to plunder by exactions; fleeced (1 syl.), fleec'-ing (R. xix.); fleec'-er. (The idea is "cutting off the wool," hence "plundering.")

Old English fles or flys, a fleece.

Fleet, a navy, swift, to be transient, to skim [milk]; fleet'-ly, swiftly; fleet'-ing, transient, hastening away; fleet'-ness.

"Fleet" (a navy), Old English fliet, a ship.

"Fleet" (swift, to flow away), Old Eng. fleot[an], to float or flow away.

"Fleet" (to take the cream off), Old English flet or fliet, cream.

Flem'ing, a native of Flanders; Flem'ish, pertaining to Flanders.

Flesh (noun), to flesh [one's sword], to draw blood with it for the first time; fleshed (1 syl.), flesh'-ing. Flesh'ings (plu.), flesh-coloured clothes worn sometimes by actors; flesh'-ly, carnal; flesh'-y, full of flesh; flesh'i-ness; flesh'-less.

Old Eng. flesc, flescht, fleshy; flesclie, fleshly; flesclīenes, fleshiness.

Fleur-de-lis, plu. fleurs-de-lis (Fr.), flühr d'lee, the water iris or fleur-de-luce. The French word is nonsense, as the plant in nowise can be termed a lily [lis]. From this blunder arises the erroneous emblematic term the lily of France. The word means the "flower of Louis."

Flew, the large chaps of a deep-mouthed hound, past tense of fly. Flue [of a chimney], fluff. Flewed (1 syl.)

"Flew" (large chaps), Welsh flw, a tendency to spread.

"Flew" (did fly), Old English fledh, past tense of fledgan, to fly.

"Flue" (of a chimney), formed from the Latin fluo, to flow.

"Flue" (fluff), Welsh plu' for pluf, feathers.

Flexible, flex' i.b'l, pliant; flex'ible-ness, flex'ibly; flexibility, flex' i.b'l' i.ty; flexile, flex' ile; flexion, flēk' shūn; flex'or, a muscle for contracting or bending a joint; extens'or, a muscle for extending or straightening a joint; flexuous, flex' ũ. ũs, tortuous; flexuose, flex' u. ũse (in Bot.), zigzag [stem]; flexure, flēk' shūr.

Fr. flexibilité, flexible, flexion; Lat. flexibilis, flexilis, flexio, flexuosus, flexūra, flexus, flectere, supine flexum, to bend.

Flicker, flīk' kēr, to flitter; flick'ered (2 syl.), flick'er-ing, flick'ering-ly. Flick, to strike with a smart jerk; flicked (1 syl.), flick'-ing.

Old English fliccer[ian], to flicker; flacor, a flickering.

Flier, flī' er, the regulator of a machine. Fly'-er, one that flies.

Fliers, flī' erz, stairs which do not wind. (See Fly.)

Flight, flite, hasty removal; flight'-y, eccentric; flight'i-ly (Rule xi.); flight'i-ness, eccentricity, levity.

Old English flīht, v. flīgan, to fly (-g- of flight is interpolated).

Flim-flam, mere nonsense, a worthless trifle (Rule lxix.)

Flim'sy, limp; flim'si-ness, flim'si-ly (Rule xi.)

Welsh llymsi, of fickle motion, weak.

Flinch, to shrink, to draw back [from pain or fear]; flinched (1 syl.), flinch'-ing, flinch'ing-ly, flinch'-er.

Welsh fflich, to squeal out.

Fling, (past) flung, (p. p.) flung, to cast; fling'-ing, fling'-er.

Old English flige, flying, as flige-pīl, a flying dart, v. fligan, to fling.

Flint, a stone; flint'-y, flint'i-ness (Rule xi.) (Old Eng. flint.)

Flip'pant, pert in speech; flip'pant-ly, flip'pancy.

Welsh llypanu, to make glib; llypan, a glib person.

Flirt, a coquette, to coquette, to flick; flirt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), flirt'-ing, flirt'-ing-ly; flirtation, flirtay'.shun.

Welsh fritten, a flighty girl; fritthyn, a giddy man: frit, a jerk; or Old English fleard[ian], to play the fool; fleard, folly.

Flit, to fly away; flitt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), flitt'-ing (Rule i.)

Flitt'er, flitt'er-ing, flitt'er-flutt'er (Rule lxix.)

Danish flytte, to remove: (flytteri [flittery], "the bustle and confusion of removal" would be a good word to introduce).

Flitch, the side of a hog salted and cured. (Old Eng. fliccc.)

Float, flote (1 syl.), a buoy, to be buoyed on the top of water; float'-ed (R. xxxvi.), float'-ing, float'-ing-ly, float'-able, float'-er; floatation, flō'tay'.shun; float'-age (2 syl.)

Old English flōt, a float; v. flōt[an] part. flētt, past part. floten.

Flock, a lock of wool, a collected number of sheep or birds. A collected number of large cattle is a herd, of horses [strung together] a string, of horses or oxen [driven] a drove, of hounds a pack, of bees a swarm, of whales a school, of mackerel, a shoal, of netted fish a haul or take, of human beings a crowd, of children a posse (pōs'sy), of soldiers a troop, of stars a galaxy.

Old English floc, a company. (A Christian congregation is called a flock by Dissenters, the minister being their pastor [shepherd]).

"A flock of wool," German flocke.

Floe, a mass of floating ice; an ice-berg, of stationary ice.

Old English floh, a fragment broken off.

Flog, to whip; flogged (1 syl.), flogg'-ing (Rule i.), flogg'-er.

Lat. fig[ol], to flog; flagrum, a scourge; Gk. plégē, Dor. plaga, a blow.

Flood, flūd, a deluge, to deluge; flood'-ed (R. xxxvi.), flood'-ing.

Flood'-tide, full tide; ebb'-tide, low tide.

Old English flōd, a flood.

Floor, flo'r, not flore (noun and verb); floored (1 syl.), floor'-ing (n. and part.); floor'-er, a knock-down blow.

Old English flōr or flore, a floor.

Flop, to bounce, to bob; flopped (1 syl.), flopp'-ing (Rule i.)

(Another spelling of the word flap, as "strop" is of strap.)

Flora, flō'rah, all the plants of a country. Fauna, all the animals.

Floral, flō'ral, adj. of flower; flō'ral-ly; flō'-ret, a little flower; florescence, flō'rēs'sense, the flowering of plants.

Florid, flō'rīd, highly ornamented; flō'rīd-ly, flō'rīd-ness, flō'rīd-ly; floridity, flō'rīd'ī.ty; floriferous, flō'rīf'ē.rūs, bearing flowers (flores ferens, Lat.); floriform, flō'rī'fōrm (Latin floris forma, form of a flower); flō'rist.

Floriculture, flō'rī.kūl.tchūr (Lat. cultūra), cultivation of flowers; floricultural, flō'rī.kūl'tū.rāl; flos'cule (2 syl.)

Latin Flora, goddess of flowers; flos, gen. flōris, a flower; flōralis, flōrescens, gen. flōrescentis (inceptive of flōreo, to blossom), flōridus.

Florentine, flôr'rent.in, a native of Florence, pertaining thereto.

Florid, flôr'rid (not flô'rid), flowery. (See Flora.)

Florin, flôr'rin (not flô'rin), a two-shilling silver coin.

This very un-English word was first applied to a coin struck in Florence in the thirteenth century. It had a lily on one side, and the head of John Baptist on the other. There was an English floren (value 6s.) issued by Edward III., in 1337, probably the German florin (value 2s. 6d.) suggested the word to us.

Florist, flô'rist (not flôr'rist), a cultivator of flowers. (See Flora.)

Flotage, flô'tage, the act of floating; flotation, flô'tay'shûn.

Flotsam (not flotsom), flôt'sûm, goods found floating on the sea after a wreck. Jetsam, jêl'sûm, goods cast into the sea to lighten a ship in distress. (French jeter, to cast out.)

Old English flotan, to float; flôta, anything that floats.

Flotilla, flô.til'lah, a fleet of small vessels. (Spanish flotilla.)

Flounce (1 syl.), a trimming, to bounce about; flounced (1 syl.), flounc'-ing. (Norman flunsa, to bluster.)

"Flounce" is one of the French words misspelt and missapplied. Froncis is a gather: as faire un froncis à une manche, cette chemise n'est pas assez froncée par le collet. What we miscall a flounce is volant in French.

Flounder, floun'der, a flat fish, to struggle in water.

"Flounder" (the fish), German flunder; Danish flynder.

"To flounder" is to flap about in water like a flounder.

Flour, ground corn. Flower, the blossom of a plant (both flôu'r); flour'-ing, dredging flour on; flour'-y, like flour; flower-ing, flou'r'ing, blossoming; flower-y, full of flowers. French fleur de farine, flour; fleur, a flower.

Flourish, flûr'rish, an ornamental scrawl with the pen, a salutation with trumpets, to brag, to thrive, to make a flourish; flourished, flûr'rishd; flourish-ing, flûr'rish-ing; flourishing-ly, flûr'rish-er.

Latin flōresco (inceptive of flōreo, to flourish; flōres, flowers), hence "ornament," a flourish with a pen is an ornamental scrawl, a flourish with trumpets is an ornamental turn by way of honours, to flourish a sword is to use it ornamentally not serviceably.

Flout, to mock; flout'-ed, flout'-ing, flout'ing-ly, flout'-er.

Old English flû[an], to quarrel, to wrangle.

Flow, flô, (past) flowed (1 syl.), (past part.) flowed (not flown).

Fly, (past) flew, (past part.) flown.

The river has overflowed its banks (not overflown.)

Old English flôw[an], past flôw; oferflôw[an], to overflow.

Flour, the blossom of a plant. Flour, ground corn (both flôu'r).

Flower-stalk, flower-garden; flower-y, flôu'r'ry; floweri-ness, flôu'r'ri-ness (Rule xi.); flower'-et, flôu'r'êt.

To flower; flowered, flôu'erd; flower-ing, but

Flour, ground corn; flour'-y, flour'-ing.

Welsh flur, bloom; v. fluro; Fr. fleur, fleuri; Lat. flōres, flowers,

Flown, past part. of fly. (See Fly, and note to Flow.)

Fluctuate, flŭk'.tu.ate, to waver; fluc'tuāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), fluc'tuāt-ing; fluctuation, flŭk'.tu.ā'.shŭn. (Not Fr.)

Latin fluctuatio, fluctuare [fluctuous [fluctuosus] "full of waves" or "wavy" might be introduced], fluctus, a wave (fluo, to flow).

Flue [of a chimney], fluff. Flew, the large chaps of a deep-mouthed hound, past tense of the verb to fly.

"Flue" (of a chimney); a noun formed from the Latin fluo, to flow.

"Flue" (fluff), Welsh plu' for pluf, feathers.

"Flew" (large chaps), Welsh flw, a tendency to spread.

"Flew" (did fly), Old English fledh, past tense of fleogan, to fly.

Fluent, flŭ'.ent, ready of speech, flowing freely; flŭ'-ent-ly.

Fluency, flŭ'.en.sy. Fluid, flŭ'.id; fluidity, flŭ'.id'.i.ty.

Latin fluens, gen. fluentis, fluidus, fluo; French fluide, fluidité.

Fluff, the abrasions of cloth, fine down; fluff'-y, fluff'-i-ness.

Welsh pluf, feathers. "Fluff" also called flue, q.v.

Flugelman (not flugleman), flŭ'.g'l.man, the soldier who sets the drill exercises which the rest imitate.

(Sometimes but incorrectly called a fugleman.)

German flugelmann, leader of the file (flügel, a wing).

Flu'id, fluid'ity, flŭ'.id'.i.ty. (See Fluent.)

Fluke (1 syl.); that part of an anchor which fastens in the ground, a flounder, hap-hazard, an irregular proceeding.

"Fluke" (of an anchor), German pfücken, to pick, pfug, a plough.

"Fluke" (a fish), Old English floc, a plaice or other flat fish.

"Fluke" (hap-hazard), a flounder. To flounder is to stumble about, hence a stumble. To get through an examination by a fluke is to stumble through it irregularly, to "flounder" through it.

Flummery, flŭm'.me.ry, empty compliments.

German pfäumeret, food made with plums (pfäum, a plum).

Flunky, plu. flunkies, flŭn'.kŭz, a servant in livery (a term of contempt); flun'kyism, pretentiousness, consequential airs; flun'ky-dom, the state politic of flunkies.

German flunkern, to glitter. A flunky is one gorgeously dressed.

Fluor, flŭ'.or, a menstrual flux; flu'or-spar, a mineral used for ornamental vessels. "Derbyshire-spar" is a fluor-spar; fluoric, flŭ'.ōr'ik; fluorine, flŭ'.ō.rin.

Fr. fluor, spath fluor. (In Chem.) -ine denotes a simple substance.

Flurry, commotion, to agitate; flurried, flŭr'rēd; flurry-ing.

Hurry, skurry, worry, and flurry, are cognate words.

Welsh herwa, to harry, to prowl; Lat. urgeo, to urge on (curro, to run).

Flush [of a mill], an entire suit of cards of one sort, a reddening of the face, well supplied, well adjusted, to inundate, to elate; flushed (1 syl.), flush'-ing.

German fluss, a flow, flux, or flush [at cards].

A flux of water is a flush, a flow of blood to the face, a flow of money into the pockets, &c. Carpenters call their work flush when the parts fit properly and all is level; thus a door is "flush" with the wall when it stands on the same plane. (Russian plosketi, flat.)

Fluster, to flurry; flustered, flūs'terd; flus'ter-ing, flus'ter-ex.

Fluster and bluster are cognate words: (as Latin fluo and English blow; Latin fluo and Greek bluo); blæstan, to puff; hence a "blustering wind." Fluster may be a variety of the same word, or may indicate a similar "disturbance" in water.

Flute (1 syl.), a wind instrument, channel in a pillar, to "flute" a pillar; flūt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), flūt'-ing (Rule xix.), flūt'-ist, one who plays the flute.

Fr. flûte (the musical instrument); Germ. flöte (Lat. fluo, to blow).

A "fluted" column is one with concave stripes, being like "a flute" cut in halves; a "Doric column has twenty such channels; and a Tuscan column has as many convex stripes called 'cables.'"

Flutter, to flap the wings; fluttered, flūt'terd; flut'ter-ing, flut'ter-ing-ly, flut'ter-ex; flitter-flutter (Rule lxix.)

Old English flōetan; German flattern.

Fluvial, flū'vī.āl, connected with or pertaining to a river.

Latin fluvialis, fluvius, a river (fluo, to flow).

Flux (in Metall.), anything used to promote the fusion of metals, &c.; (in Med.) a too-abundant evacuation, fusion;

Flux'-ible (not -able); fluxibility, flux'i.bīl'i.ty;

Fluxion, flūk'.shūn, the act of flowing, matter which flows;

Fluxions, flūk'.shūnz, now called Differential cal'culus;

Flux'ion-al, flux'ion-ary, fluxed (1 syl.), flux'-ing.

French flux, fluxion, fluxions; Latin fluere, supine fluxum, to flow.

Fly, plu. flies, an insect. Fly, plu. flies, a sort of hackney carriage.

Fly, the index of the mariners' compass, a sort of wheel, to move with wings, to run with great speed, to burst asunder.

To fly, (past) flew, (past part.) flown; flies, flize; fly'-ing.

To flee, (past) fled, (past part.) fled (not flown): as the man has fled, the bird has flown; flees, flee'-ing;

Fli'-er, one who flies, the regulator of a machine;

Fly'-ers, stairs which do not wind.

Fly-blown, fly-wheel, flying-buttress;

To fly in one's face, to scold insolently, to insult;

To fly in a passion, to get into a passion;

To come off with flying colours, to come off triumphantly;

To let fly, to discharge, to let loose;

To fly out, to attack with angry words; to fly at, to attack;

To fly open, to start open: as the door flew open;

The [glass] flew, cracked suddenly. Will it fly, ...crack.

Old English flēogan or fligan, to fly or flee, past flēah, past part. flōgen, flig, a fly; German fliegen, to fly, fliehen, to flee.

Foal, fōle, a colt or filly. Fool (to rhyme with cool), a simpleton.

Foal, to bring forth a foal; foaled (1 syl.), foal'-ing.

Old English fōla, a colt or filly.

Foam, fōme, surf, to froth; foamed (1 syl.), foam'-ing, foam'-ing-ly, foam'-y, foam'-less. (Old English fām, foam.)

Fob, a trouser watch-pocket, to "prig," to trick; fobbed (1 syl.), fobb'-ing (Rule i.) Also called To fub [marbles], &c.

"Fob" (to trick); German foppen, to play upon.

Focus, plu. focuses or foci, fō'.kūs, fō'.kūs.ēz, fō'.sī, the point in which light or heat rays meet; (in mathematics we talk of the foci of an ellipse, parab'ola, hyper'bola, and so on, but never of the focuses); fo'cus-ing, fo'cal (adj.)

Latin fōcus, the hearth (fō short); French focal.

Fodder, food for horses, to feed with fodder. Foth'er, 2184 lbs. of lead; foddered, fōd'.derd; fod'der-ing.

Old English fōdder or fōder (fōda, food); fother, a load, a fother.

Foe, plu. foes, fō, fōze, an enemy. Foh! an interj. of disgust.

"Foe" Old English fīh. "Foh," French pouah; German pfui.

Fœ'tus, the embryo of animals; fœtation, fē.tay'.shūn.

French fœtus; Latin fœtus (Greek phoitaō, to have pains of travail).

Fog, dense vapour; fogg'-y (Rule i.), (comp.) fogg'i-cr, (super.) fogg'i-est, fogg'i-ness, fogg'i-ly (Rule xi.)

Italian sfogo, exhalation; v. sfogare, to exhale.

Fō'gey, a prosy old man. Generally old [fogey].

The term is derived from the old pensioners of Edinburgh Castle.

Foible, foy'.b'l, a failing. (French foible, now faible, weak.)

Foil (1 syl.), a blunt sword used in fencing, leaf-metal, to frustrate; foiled (1 syl.), foil'-ing, foil'-er.

"Foil" (a blunt sword), Welsh ffwyl, a foil.

"Foil" (leaf-metal), French feuille, a leaf; (Latin folium).

"Foil" (to frustrate), French affolé, said of a "compass" when the needle points wrong.

Foist (1 syl.), to insert surreptitiously (followed by in), to palm something off upon another (followed by on); foist'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), foist'-ing. (A corruption of forced.)

Fōld, a plait, to double; fōld'-ed (R. xxxvi.), fōld'-ing, fōld'-er.

Old English fealdan, past feold, past part. ge-fealden (feald, a fold).

Foliage, fō'.lī.age, the leaf-hangings of trees; foliaceous, -a'.shūs.

Foliate, fō'.lī.ate, to beat [metal] into leaf, to cover with leaf-metal; fo'liāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), fo'liāt-ing (R. xix.)

Foliation, fō'.lī.ā'.shūn, the leafing of plants.

Folio, plu. folios (R. xlii.), fō'.lī.o, fō'.lī.ōze. In bookkeep-ing the left and right hand pages of a ledger, &c., a book of the largest size in which the paper is folded only once.

Latin foliatio, foliāccus, foliātus (folium, Greek phyllōn, a leaf

Folk, fōke, people; folk-mote, an assembly of the people.

Old English folc, folc-gemote, a popular assembly.

Follicle, fŏl'li.k'l (in Bŏt.), a dry seed-vessel opening on one side only, and having the seeds loose; folliculous, fŏl'lik'.u.lŭs, or follicular, fŏl'lik'.u.lar; follic'ulated.

Fr. follicule; Lat. folliculus (follis, a bag, purse, or seed-vessel).

Fol'low, to come after; followed, fŏl'.lowd; fol'low-ing.

Old English folgian or fyligean, past fyligde, p. p. fyliged, folgere.

Folly, plu. follies, fŏl'.liz, foolish acts; a fanciful mansion.

Ital. folia; Fr. folie; Welsh ffol, foolish; Lat. folis, a wind-bag.

"Folly" (a mansion), French folie, extravagance. (See Fool.)

Foment, fŏ.ment', to dab with a wet sponge or rag, to encourage; foment'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), foment'-ing, foment'-er;

Fomentation, fŏ.mĕn.tay''.shŭn, a lotion, its application.

Fr. fomentier, fomentation; Lat. fomentum, fomentāri, to foment.

Fond, foolish, partial; fond'-ly, fond'-ness.

Fondle, fŏn'.d'l, to caress; fondled, fŏn'.d'ld; fon'dling.

Fon'dling, a pet. Found'ling, a child deserted by its parents.

Chaucer fonne, a fool; Irish fonn, a longing. Originally "fond" meant a foolish weakness, foolishly partial.

Font, a baptismal basin, a complete set of type. Fount, the source.

Fr. fonte; Lat. fons, gen. fontis. "Font" (type), Fr. fonte, fondre.

Food (1 syl.), victuals. (Old Eng. fŏda. See Feed.)

Fool (1 syl.), a simpleton, a jester; to delude; fooled (1 syl.), fool'-ing, fool'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.), fool'ish-ly, fool'ish-ness.

Foolery, plu. fooleries, fool'.ĕrĭz, absurd acts; fool-har'dy, foolishly daring; foolhar'di-ness, foolhard'i-ly; fools'cap (not fool'scap), paper the size of an ordinary day-book, so called because originally its trade-mark was a fool's head and cap; fool's errand, a purposeless errand.

Folly, plu. follies, fŏl'.liz, foolish acts.

Welsh ffol, foolish; ffledd, folly; ffoles, a silly woman; ffoli, to delude.

Foot, plu. feet (each 1 syl.), not fŭt, nor foote to rhyme with boot, but "foot" to rhyme with put. Footfall (not footfal.)

Foot, (verb) foot'-ed, foot'-ing. Foot'-ed, having feet, as four-footed beasts. Foot'-ing, position, standing, as He has a good footing. Foot'-note, a note at the bottom of a page. To foot it, to dance. To set on foot, to originate. ("Foot" and "put" are the only two words in the language with this vowel sound. All other words in -oot have the usual diphthongal sound of -oo-: as hoot, moot, root, and shoot. "Soot" is at present vacillating, some make it to rhyme with foot, some with root, and others with hut. So with "put," it stands alone, as but, cut, gut, hut, jut, nut, slut, smut, tut, &c.)

Old Eng. fŏt, plu. fĕt; Lat. pes, gen. ped[is]; Gr. pous, gen. pod[os].

Fop, a dandy; fopp'-ish (Rule i.), like a fop (-ish added to nouns means like); fopp'ish-ness, fopp'ish-ly.

Foppery, plu. fopperies, fōp'ĕ.rĭz, over-dressiness.

Germ. fopperei; Span. guapo, spruce, foppish; Lat. vappa, a simpleton.

For- (Old Eng. prefix of verbs), privation, deterioration, against, aside, away; in former, forward, it stands for fore.

German ver and vor; Latin foris, out of doors; French hors.

For, prep. and conj., on behalf of, because; in as much as.

Old Eng. for; Germ. far; Span. por; Fr. pour; Lat. pro; Gk. pro.

Forage, for'rage (not fūr'ridge), fodder, to collect food for horses, &c., to strip of fodder; for'aged (2 syl.), for'ag-ing (R. xix.), for'ag-er, for'aging-cap, a light military cap.

Spanish foragido, robbing in woods and forests; Fr. fouillage; Lat. farrāgo, i.e. far ago, to drive or carry off provisions.

Foramen, plu. foramina, fō.ray'mĕn, fō.ram'ĭ.nah, a hole by which nerves, &c., obtain a passage through bone. (In Botany) the opening in the o'vulum; foram'inated; foraminous, fo.ram'ĭ.nūs, full of perforations.

Foraminifera, fō.ram'ĭ.nif'ĕ.rah, the rhizopoda (rĭ.zōp'ĕ.dah or root-footed animals), microscopic animals with shells having numerous chambers communicating with each other by apertures or foram'ina.

Lat. fōrāmen, plu. fōrāmina, a perforation. "Foraminifer" is foramina ferens, bearing [many] perforations.

Forasmuch as, for'.as.much'.as, because, seeing that.

Forbade, for.bād', past tense of forbid (which see).

Forbear', (past) forbore', (past part.) forborne' (not forborn), to refrain, to cease; forbear, for.bare'; forbear'-ing, forbear'-ing-ly; forbear'-ance, restraint of temper, &c.

Old English forbēran, past forbær, past part. forbōren. The idea is "to bear aside," i.e., to lay aside. (See For-.)

Forbid', (past) forbade', (past part.) forbidd'en; forbidd'-ing (R. iv.), forbidd'-ing-ly, forbidd'-er; forbade, for.bād'.

Old Eng. forbedd[an], past forbedd, past part. forboden. To bid is to command, "for" (negative), to command not. (See For-.)

Forbore, for.bōrĕ'; forborne'. (See Forbear.)

Force (1 syl.), plu. forces, for'.sez (R. xxxiv.), violence, troops, to compel, to violate; forced, forst; forc-ing (R. xix.) for'sing; forc-er, for'.ser; force'-ful (R. viii.), force'-ful-ly; forcible, for'.st.b'l; for'cible-ness, for'cibly; perforce', of necessity; by main force, by sheer force; forcemeat, force'.meet, stuffing of meat.

French force, forcer; Latin fortis, strong.

"Forcemeat," a blunder for farce-meat (Latin farcio, to stuff).

For'ceps (plu.), surgical pliers. A for'ceps, or a pair of for'ceps (not a forcep). When the two parts of a pair are inseparable the word is used in the plu. number only: as scissors, trousers, crackers, pliers, tweezers, drawers, tongs, &c.; but if the two parts are separable, the word has both numbers: as glove, gloves; sock, socks; boot, boots.

Latin forceps, tongs (formus capio, to take up what is hot).

Ford, a pass through a river, to ford a river; ford'-ed (R. xxxvi.), ford'-ing, ford'-er; ford'-able. (Old Eng. ford, a ford.)

Fore- (Old Eng. prefix), beforehand, preceding. In two instances (former and forward) the -e has been dropped, and fore-close is a blunder, the prefix being the Lat. fōr[um].

Fore, the front, the fore part; fore and aft, the fore part and hind part of a ship, from end to end.

Old English fōre; German vor.

Forearm, (n.) fōr'.arm, (v.) fōr.arm' (R. l.), from elbow to wrist, to arm beforehand; forearmed' (2 syl.), forearm'-ing.

"The forearm," Old English fore earm.

"To forearm" the Teutonic fore- joined to the Latin armo, to arm.

Forebode, for.bōde', to presage; forebōd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), forebōd'-ing (Rule xix.), forebōd'-er.

Old English fore bod[ian], to fore warn.

Forecast, (past) forecast', (past part.) forecas'ted, forecast'-er, forecast'-ing, to foresee and provide against what is foreseen. Forecast', (2 syl.), foresight, &c.

Danish fore kaste, to guess beforehand; blind kast, a rough guess.

Forecastle, for.kās'l, the short upper deck in the forepart of a ship. Ships were at one time turreted, hence the Latin phrase naves turritæ (the part before the turret).

Forechosen, for.chōze'n, chosen beforehand.

Old English fore cēosan.

Forecited, for.sī'.tēd, before said. (Latin citāre, to quote).

(An ill-compounded word, part Teutonic and part Latin.)

Foreclose (ought to be forclose), for.klōze', to compel a person to redeem a mortgage under pain of losing his rights therein; foreclosed, fōr.klōzd'; foreclōs'-ing (Rule xix.)

Foreclosure (ought to be forclosure), fōr.klō'.zhūr, a legal proceeding to compel a mortgagor either to redeem the pledge or submit to the loss of the property mortgaged.

To foreclose a mortgage (i.e., to shut out a mortgagee from redress) is nonsense, although not unfrequently used.

We foreclose a mortgagor, not a mortgage.

(This prefix is the Latin fōr[um], a law-court.)

Latin forclusio (e föro clusio, exclusion from the law-courts).

Foedoom, for.doom', to doom beforehand; foedoomed' (2 syl.), foedoom'-ing. (Old Eng. fore dōm, judgment beforehand.)

Forefather, for'.far'ther, an ancestor. (Old English fore fæder.)

Forefinger, for'fing'ger, the finger next the thumb.

Old English fore finger.

Forefoot, plu. forefeet, for'.foot, for'.feet, one of the front feet of an animal with more than two. Forfeit, for'fit, q.v.

Old English fore fōt, fore fēt. "Forfeit," Welsh fforfed.

Forego, (past) forewent' [not in use], (past part.) foregone; for-go-ing, för.go', för.gön', för.go'.ing.

Old English fore gān, past part. fore gangen.

Forgo, to "go away from," would express the idea more simply, but fore-go means to "go before you enjoy a thing," hence to give it up.

Foreground, för'.grownd, that part of a picture which is supposed to be nearest the spectator. (Old Eng. fore grund.)

Forehead, för'rēd (not före.hēd), that part of the face which lies between the eyebrows and the scalp-hair.

Old English fore-heafod.

Fore'horse (2 syl.), the leader of a team. (Old Eng. fore hors.)

Forehand, for'.hand, more frequently beforehand, in anticipation.

The idea is that it is in hand or ready before it is required.

Foreign, för'rĭn (not für'rĭn), belonging to another nation.

Fr. forain, foreign; Lat. fōris, from abroad (Gk. thura, the door).

Forejudge, för'judge', to judge before the facts are proved.

(This hybrid ought to be dropped. Prejudge (French préjurer) is sufficient.)

Foreknow, för.nōw' (-now to rhyme with grow); past foreknew, för.new'; (past part.) foreknown, för.nown' (-now to rhyme with grown); foreknow'-ing; foreknowledge, för.nōl'.idge (not for.no'.leje).

Old Eng. fore cniw[an], past -cneow, past part -cniwen, fore cniwincg.

Foreland, för'.lānd, a point of land which juts into the sea.

Old English fore land, land in advance of the general coast.

Forelock, for'.lōk [in a horse], the hair which hangs over the forehead. In man, a lock left on the forehead when the head is nearly bald. Take Time by the forelock, make the best of the present opportunity.

The idea is taken from the picturesque representations of old Time with one "forelock" on his bald pate. (Old English fore locc.)

Foreman, plu. foremen; fem. forewoman, plu. forewomen; för'.mān, för.mēn; för.wo'mān, for.wīm'n, the principal employee, from whom others take their directions. The "foreman of a jury" is the name first called, this man sits first and makes the report.

Old English fore mann, plu. -menn; fore wifmann, plu. -wifmenn.

Foremast, för'.mast, the mast nearest the bow of a ship.

German fockmast, focksegel, foresail; fockstag, forestay, &c.

Foremost, för'.most, first in rank or repute. (Old Eng. formest.)

Forenamed, för' nāmd, mentioned before. (Old Eng. fore naman.)

Forenoon, för' noon', from morning to midday. (Old Eng. fore nōn.)

Forensic, fō.rěn'.sīk, pertaining to the law courts. (Lat. fōrensis.)

Foreordain, för'.or.dūne', to predestinate; fore'ordained' (3 syl.), fore'ordain'-ing; foreordination, för'.or.di.nay''shun.

(These are ill-formed, fore- being Teutonic and -ordain Latin. "Pre-ordain" and "preordination" are better compounds.)

Forepart, för' part, the first part (fore-, Teut.; pārs, partis, Lat.)

Forerun, (past) foreran, (past part.) forerun, för.rūn', för'run'; forerunn'-ing (Rule iv.); forerunn-er, för.rūn'.er, one sent before to announce the coming of another, a courier.

Old English fore-renn[an], past fore-ran. fore-rynel, a forerunner.

Foresaid, för'.sēd, mentioned before, set forth in the previous part.

Old English fore-sēd, past part. of -sæg[an], past sēde.

Foresee, (past) foresaw, (past part.) foreseen, för.see', för.saw', för.seen', to see beforehand; foresee'-ing (R. xix., -ing); foresee-er, för.see'.er (R. xix.), one who sees beforehand.

Old Eng. fore-seēn, past -sedh, past part. -ge-segen, foreseēnd, a foreseer.

Foreshadow, för.shād'.o, to typify; foreshad'owed (3 syl), foreshad'ow-ing, foreshad'ow-er. (Old Eng. fore sceādo.)

Foreshow, (past) fore-showed, for.shōwd' (not fore-shew), (past part.) fore-shown' or fore-showed', to predict; foreshow'-ing, foreshow'-er (-show- to rhyme with grow).

Old English forescedw[ian], past -sceadwode, past part. -sceadwod.

Foreship, för'.ship, fore part of a ship. (Old English fore scip.)

Foreshorten, for.short'n, to draw objects in an oblique direction (the fore part being shortened): foreshortened, för'.short'nd; foreshorten-ing, for.short'ning.

Old English fore scort[ian].

Foresight, för'.sīte, prevision. (Old English fore ge-siht.)

Forest, för' rēst, land covered with trees.

For'ested, covered with forests. Affor'ested, converted into a forest and protected by forest laws. Disfor'ested or dis'affor'ested, deprived of its forest privileges.

Forester, för' rēs.ter, a forest warder or keeper.

Forestry, för' rēs.try, the right of foresters; for'esty.

Forestage, för'rēs.tāge, service paid to the king by foresters. (All these words are spelt with one r, not double r.)

French forest now forêt, forestier; Latin forāre, to pierce [with darts] forests being set apart in feudal times for hunting purposes.

Forestall (not forestal, Rule viii.), för.stawl', to anticipate; forestalled' (2 syl.), forestall'-ing, forestall'-er.

To "forestall" is to buy up goods before they are brought to the market-stall. (Old English fore stal[an], stæl, a stall.)

Foretaste, (noun) för'.tāste, (verb) för.tāste' (Rule 1.), a taste in anticipation, to taste before possession is obtained, to anticipate; foretāst'-ed (R. xxxvi.), foretāst'-ing (R. xix.)

Fore added to taste. Germ. tasten, to feel; Fr. taster now tâter; Ital. tastare, to touch; Lat. tactum, to touch; Gk. thiggano, pronounced thingano, contracted to thing'o; Lat. tango, sup. tactum.

Foretell (not foretél, R. viii.), to predict; (past) foretold, (past part.) foretold, för.tëll', för.töld'; foretell'-ing, foretell'-er.

Old English fore tell[an], past fore-tealde, past part. fore-ge-teald.

Forethought, för.rhort, provident foresight. (Old Eng. fore thóht.)

Foretoken, för.tö'k'n, an omen or sign beforehand, to foreshow; foreto'kened (3 syl.), foreto'ken-ing. (Old Eng. fore tæcen.)

Foretooth, plu. foreteeth, för.tooth, för'.teerh, a tooth in the fore-part of the mouth. (Old Eng. fore tóth, fore téth.)

Forever, för.év'.er, always. (Old English for æfer.)

Forewarn, för.worn', to give notice beforehand.

Old English fore warn[ian].

Forewoman, plu. forewomen, för.wo'man, wim'en, chief woman in a shop, from whom others take their directions.

Old English fore wifmann, fore wifmenn. (See Foreman.)

Forfeit, för'.fät, a fine, to lose through fault; forfeit-ed, forfeit-ing, forfeit-er, forfeit-able; forfeiture, för'.fä.tchür.

Fr. forfait, forfaiture; Low Lat. forisfactura, alienation of a thing.

Forge (1 syl.), a smithy, a furnace, to form by the hammer, to counterfeit; forged (1 syl.), forg'-ing (R. xix.), forg'-er.

Forgery, plu. forgeries, för'.jě.riz. (Fr. forge, forger, forgeun.)

Forget, (past) forgot, (past part.) forgott'en; forgett'-ing (R. iv.), forgett'-er; forget'-ful, forget'ful-ly, forget'ful-ness.

Old English for-gif[an], past för-geat, past part. for-gefen.

To "forget" is to get out of or away from [the mind or memory].

Forgive, för.giv'; (past) forgave, for.gäve'; (past part.) forgiven, för.giv'n; forgiv'ing forgiv'ing-ly, forgive'-ness.

Old English for-gif[an], past för-geaf or gaf, past part. for-gifen.

To "forgive" [an offence] is to give it away, not to keep it; in Latin re-mitto, to remit, to send it back or away.

Fork, an instrument with prongs, to divide into two branches;

Forked (1 syl.), fork'-ing; forkedness, för'.kěd.ness; fork-edly, för'.kěd.ly; forktail, a salmon in its fourth year.

Old Eng. fore; Lat. furca, a fork. "Fork out," sece[an], to draw out.

Forlorn', forsaken, solitary; forlorn'-ly, forlorn'-ness, forlorn hope (ought to be spelt forelorn).

Old English for lioran, to send away, hence to forsake.

"Forlorn Hope" is fore-lioran haufe, the troop sent forward.

In German haufe = a multitude as ein haufe freunde, a troop of friends; haufen gehen, they troop to their standards, &c.

Form, shape, to shape; formed (1 syl.), form'-ing, form'-er.

Form-al, done in due form, ceremonious; form'al-ly, ceremoniously; for'mer-ly, in times past.

Formality, plu. formalities, for.mül'.i.tiz, ceremony; formalism, for'.mül.izm; for'mal-ist.

Formation, for.may'.shün; formative, for'.mü.tiv.

Formalise, for'.ma.lize; for'malised (3 syl.), for'malis-ing (Rule xix.), for'malis-er (Rule xxxi.)

Fr. forme, former, formel (wrong), formaliste, formalisme, formalité, formation; Lat. forma, formālis, formālitās, formātio, formātor.

For'mer, prior, one who forms; for'mer-ly, in times past; for'mal-ly, ceremoniously; foremost, for'.most, first.

Our word "former" is compounded of fore mdr, more [to the] fore; and "foremost," most [to the] fore; both words ought to have the e in fore. In Anglo-Saxon fyr, far, made fyrre, farther, fyrest, fyrest, fyrst, and fyrmest, farthest; from furth, forth, was furdor, furdur, furdra, furma, first; from forth, was forther, forthor, forthmost, foremost; from foremdra, illustrions, was foremdrest; from feor, far [v. feran, to go a journey], feorrest or farst.

Formic, for'.mikh, pertaining to ants; formic acid, an acid originally obtained by bruising red ants in water.

Formica, for.mī'.kah, the ant genus.

Formicidæ, for.mī'.si.dē, the family containing the Formica genus (-idæ, a group or family, a Greek patronymic); formication, for'.mī.kay'.shün, a sensation like that of ants crawling over the skin.

Latin formica, an ant; formicatio (Greek murmēx, an ant).

Formidable, for'.mī.dū.b'l, dreadful; for'midable-ness, for'-midably. (Latin formidābilis, formido, fear.)

Formula, plu. formulæ or formulas, for.mū'.lah, plu. for'mū.lē or for'.mū.lahz, a pattern rule.

Formulary, plu. formularies, for'.mu.lä.riz, a book of forms, a ritual; formulate, for'.mū.late, to reduce to a formula; for'mulāt-ed, for'mulāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin formula, a rule, a pattern (forma, a form).

Fornicate, for'.nū.kate; fornication, for'.ni.kay'.shun; for'-nicāt-or (not -er, Rule xxxvii.), fem. for'nicātr-ess.

Latin fornicatio, fornicātor, fornicātrix, fornicāre (Greek pornikos, pornē, a harlot).

Forsake' (2 syl.), (past) forsook', (past part.) forsa'ken, for-sāk'-ing (Rule xix.), to desert.

Old Eng. for [negative] sēc[an], to seek, past sōhte, past part. gesōht.

Forsooth, in truth. (Old English tosóthe, truly; sóth, truth.)

Forswear, for.swāre'; (past) forswore', (past part.) forsworn', forswear'-ing; forswear'-er. To swear falsely.

Old English forswer[ian], past forswórn, past part. forswóren.

Fort, a fortified place. Forte (1 syl.), special faculty. Fought, fort, did fight. Forte, for'.te, loud. For'ty, a numeral.

Fort, a small fortified place for security or defence.

Fort'ress, a natural fort strengthened by art, like the fortress of Gibraltar; fortressed, for'.trěst, having a fortress.

Fort'let, a small fort. Fortalice, for'.tă.lis, a small fortress.

Fortifica'tion, all the works erected in defence of a place. It may include the other four terms. (See Fortify.)

French fort, forteresse; Low Latin fortalitium (Latin fortis, strong).

"Forte" (a strong point), French fort: as la critique est son fort.

"Fought," Old English feohht[an], past feahht, past part. fohten.

Forte, for'.te (Ital.), loud. Forty, for'.ty, a numeral.

Fortissimo (Ital.), loud as possible. (Forty, O. Eng. feowertig.)

Forth, forward, abroad. Fourth, forth, an ordinal.

Forthcoming, forth-kum'.ing, soon about to appear; forth-with, forrh'.with (not forrh.wirh), without delay.

Old English forth, forthcuman, forth with. "Fourth," feowertha.

Fortify, for'.tă.fy; fortifies, for'.tă.fize; fortified, for'.tă.fide; fortify-ing; fortification, for'.tă.fi.kay''.shŭn. (See Fort.)

Fr. fortification, fortifier; Lat. fortificatio, fortificare (fortis facio).

Fortitude, for'.tă.tŭde, strength of mind. (Latin fortitudo.)

Fortnight, fort'.nite, not fort'.nŭt (contraction of fourteen night[s]), two weeks. Day was reckoned by the ancient Britons from sunset to sunset. Hence also se'nnight, se'n'ăt, that is, seven nights or one week.

Tacitus says of the Britons: Non dierum numerum, ut nos, sed noctium compŭtant.

Fortress, for'.tress, a natural fort aided by art. (See Fort.)

Fortuitous, for.tŭ'.ă.tŭs, accidental; fortu'itous-ly, fortu'itous-ness; fortuity, plu. fortuities, for.tŭ'.ă.tiz.

Latin fortuitus (fors, chance); French fortuit.

Fortune, for'.tchŭne, chance, portion, fate; for'tune-less.

Fortunate, for'.tchu.nate, lucky; for'tunate-ly.

French fortune; Latin fortŭna, fortunātus (fors, luck).

Forty, numeral; for'ti-eth (Rule xi.), ordinal, 4 × 10.

Old English feower, four; feowertyne, fourteen; feowertig, forty.

Forward, for'.werd, advanced, in the front, to promote, to send on; for'ward-ed (R. xxxvi.), for'ward-ing, for'ward-ness, for'ward-er. Forwards (adv.), onwards.

(The prefix ought to be fore-, Old English foreweard.)

Foss or fosse (1 syl.) In Fort., the moat between the scarp and counterscarp; V the long line is the scarp, the short one the counterscarp, and the space between the fosse.

French fosse; Latin fossa, a moat or trench.

- Fossil, fös'sil, the petrified remains of plants and animals; fossiliferous, fös'silif''äräs, containing fossils; fös'silise (not fossilize, R. iii., -il); fös'silised (3 syl.), fös'silising (R. xix.), fös'sil-ist; fossilisation, fös'sil.izä'.shün, the process of converting to a fossil.
Fr. fossile; Lat. fossilis (fodio, sup. fossūm, to dig [out of the earth]).
- Fos'ter, nursing or nursed, to nurse, to bring up; fös'tered (2 syl.), fös'ter-ing, fös'ter-er; fös'ter-ling, a foster-child.
Foster-child, a child nursed and brought up by one not its parent. Foster-mother, the nurse who brings up the child. Foster-father, the nurse's husband. Foster-brother, foster-sister, the foster-child is foster-brother or foster-sister to the children of its foster-mother.
Old English föster, föster-cild, -bróthor, -sweostor, -fædor, -módor.
- Fother, fóth'er, 2184 lbs. of lead. (Old English fother.)
- Fought, fort, did fight. Fort, a fortified place. Forte, fort, a special faculty. (See Fort, Fight.)
- Foul, filthy, to defile. Fowl, a bird.
Foul-er, more filthy. Fowl-er, a sportsman who pursues wild fowls. Foul'-est, most foul.
Foul-ing, defiling Fowl-ing, pursuing or taking wild fowls. Foul'-ly, foul-ness. Fowling-piece, a light gun.
"Foul," Old English fül, v. füllian, past fülode, past part. fülod.
"Fowl," Old English fugel; fugelere, a fowler.
- Found (1 syl.), did find, to cast metal, to endow, to lay a foundation; found'-ed (R. xxxvi.), established, &c.; found'-ing;
Found'-ling (not fond'ling, q.v.), a child "found," its parents being unknown (-ling Old Eng. dim., an "offspring").
Foundery, founderies, or foundry, foundries, foun'.äriz.
Foundation, foun.day'.shün, the base of a building, &c.
Foun'der, fem. foun'dress (not founder-ess), one who endows [an institution, &c]. Foun'der, to sink as a leaky ship, to lame a horse by hard riding.
"Found" (did find), Old Eng. find(an), past fand, past part. funden.
"Found" (to establish), Latin fundare, fundatio; French fondation.
"Found" (to cast metal) and "founder" (to sink or lame), Lat. fundere.
- Fount, the spring, the source, contraction of fountain, foun'.t'n; fountain-head; fount, better font, a complete set of type of any one size, with all the usual points and accents, about 100,000 characters in all; w.f., wrong font.
"Fount" (fountain), French fontaine; Latin fons, gen. fontis.
"Fount or font" (type), French fonte, v. fondre, to melt or cast.
- Four, fö'r, a number. Fore, for, before. For, prep. and conj. Fourth, fö'rth, a cardinal. Forth, out, forwards; four-fold. Fourteen, fö'r.teen', a numeral; fourteenth, a cardinal. Forty, for'te, a numeral; fortieth, for'tē.ēth, a cardinal. Forte, for'te (in Music), loud.

Old English seower, four; seowertha, fourth; seowerfeald, fourfold; seowertyne, fourteen; seowerthat or seowerteotha, fourteenth; seowertig, forty; seowerthat or seowertigotha, fortieth.

Fowl, a bird. Foul, impure. Fowl'ing, catching or shooting birds; fowl'-er, one whose trade it is to catch or kill birds; fowling-piece, fowl'.ing-pēce, a light fowling-gun.

Old English fugel, a fowl; fugelere, a fowler. "Foul," fūl.

Fox, fem. vixen (for fixen) or dog fox, bitch fox; fox'y.

Foxglove (2 syl.), a plant called digitalis (dij'.i.tay''.līs).

Old English fox, fixen, foxglofa, a corruption of folcesglofa, fairy-glove; the Latin digitalis is from digitus, a finger.

Fracas, fra.kak', a brawl. (Fr. fracas, a crash; Lat. fractus).

Fraction, frāk'shūn, a broken part, part of a unit; frac'tion-al, frac'tional-ly; fractions, frāk'.shunz, an arithmetical rule for the treatment of broken numbers.

Fractionous, frāk'.shūs, fretful; frac'tious-ly, frac'tious-ness.

Fracture, frāk'.tchūr, a break, to break; frac'tured (2 syl.), frac'tur-ing (Rule xix.)

Fr. fraction, fracture; Lat. fractio, fractūra, frango, sup. fractum.

Fragile, frāj'.il (not frāj.āle, nor fray'jīl), brittle; (comp.) more fragile, (super.) frag'il-est or most fragile.

Fragility, frāj.jīl'.i.ty, brittleness; frag'ile-ly. (See Frail.)

Fr. fragile, fragilité; Lat. fragilis, fragilitas (frago for frango).

Fragment, an imperfect part; fragment-al, fräg.mēn'.tāl; fragmental-ly; fragmentary, frag'mēn.tā.ry.

Fr. fragment, fragmentaire; Lat. fragmentum (frango, to break).

Fragrant, fray'.gränt (not fräg'gränt), sweet-smelling; frā'-grant-ly; fragrance, fray'.grānce (not fräg'grānce); frā'grancy, plu. fragrancies, fray'.grān.siz.

Latin fragrans, gen. fragrantis, fragrantia (fragro, to smell sweet).

Frail, a kind of rush, hence frail basket, a basket of raisins about 75 lbs., weak, one who yields to temptation.

Frailty, plu. frailties, frail'.tiz; frail'-ly. (See Fragile.)

Flail (not frail), for thrashing corn.

French fréte (contraction of fragile); Latin fragilis, fragilitas.

Fraise (in Fort.), fraise, a chevaux de frise, a frieze.

Fr. fraise; Ital. fregio, a frieze: (See Chevaux de frise.)

Frame (1 syl.), a border, a state of mind, to enclose in a frame, to feign, &c.; framed (1 syl.), frām'-ing (R. xix.), frām'-er.

Old English fremm[an], to frame, past fremmede, past part. fremmed. "Frame" (to pretend), Old Eng. fremed, foreign, artificial, not genuine.

Franc, frank, a French silver coin, worth about 10d. Frank, q.v.

Franchise, frän'.chize (not frän'.shēze), freedom to vote for members of parliament. The verb is Enfranchise.

French franchise; Low Latin franchesia (francus, free).

Franciscan, frän.sis'.kän, the order of "Grey friars," so named from St. Francis, of Assisi, the founder, 1209.

Frangible, frän'.jī.b'l, easily broken; frangibility, fränjī.bīl'x.ty.
Latin frangere, to break.

See Fragile and Frall, from frāgo, the older form of frango.

Frank, a Christian name, one of an ancient tribe which settled in Gallia (France); the Turks call all the inhabitants of Western Europe "Franks"; open, candid; to exempt from postage; franked' (1 syl.), frank'-ing. Franc, a coin.

German Franke, a Frank, a Franconian; frank, free.

Frankincense, fränk'.ın.sense, a gum resin which exhales a fragrant odour when sprinkled on hot ashes.

An English compound, meaning "free-incense."

Frantic, frän'.tik, furious, distraught; fran'tic-ly or fran'tical-ly. (Ought to be phrenetic or phentic.)

Frenzy, frēn'.zy, violent agitation of mind; frenzied, frēn'.zēd, affected with frenzy. (Properly phrenzy.)

Latin phrēnēsis, phrēnēticus; Greek phrēnēsis, phrēnētikos.

French frénésie, frénétique (Greek phrēn, gen. phrēnos, the mind).

Fraternal, fra.ter'nāl, brotherly; frater'nal-ly, frater'nity.

Fraternise (Rule xxxi.), fra'ter.nize, to treat as comrades; fraternised (3 syl.), fra'ternis-ing (Rule xix.), fra'ternis-er. Fraternization, fra'ter.nī.zay''shun. (Not Fr.)

Fraternel, fraternité, fraterniser; Lat. frāternitas, frāternus (frāter).

Fratricide, fra'tri.side, brother-murder; fra'tricidal.

French fratricide; Latin fratricida, fratricidium (frater cædo).

Fraud, frāwd, crafty dishonesty; fraud'-ful (R. viii.), fraud'-ful-ly, fraud'ful-ness; fraudulent, fraw'.du.lent; frau'dulent-ly; fraudulence, fraw'.du.lence; frau'dulency.

Fr. fraude; Lat. fraus, gen. fraudis, fraudentia, fraudentus.

Fraught, frawt, filled, laden. (See Freight.)

Fray, a brawl, to frighten, to wear away by friction; frayed (1 syl.), fray'-ing (Rule xiii.)

"Fray" (a brawl), Low Latin affraia; French fracas.

"Fray" (to frighten), French effrayer, to frighten.

"Fray" (to rub away), French frayer; Latin fricāre.

Freak, freak, a whim, a prank; freak'-ish, capricious (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); freak'ish-ly, freak'ish-ness. (A saucy or rude trick.)

Danish fræk, impudent, rude; German frech, saucy.

Freckle, frēk'.k'l, a spot on the skin, to spot with freckles; freckled, frēk'.k'ld; freckling, frēk'.ling; freck'-ly.

Welsh brychu, to freckle; brychni, covered with freckles; brych.

Free, (comp.) fre'-er, (super.) fre'-est, freed (1 syl.), free'-ing, free'-ly, free'-ness; free'-hoo'ter, one who roves about for plunder; free'boo'ting, pillaging; free'-dom.

Free'-man, one who enjoys civic or political franchise;

Freed'-man, a slave set at liberty.

Free-school, a school free to a given number of the sons of freemen; free-mind'ed, free-mas'on; free'-stone, a variety of sandstone, easily or freely cut; free'-think''-er, a sceptic; free-trade', commerce with home and foreign customers without duty or restriction; free'-will, liberty of obeying the will independent of predestination or fate.

To make free [with...], to take without permission.

Old English frēd, frēd-bearn, free-born; frēddóm, frēdlíc, liberal; frēdlíce, freely; frēdmann, frēdnes, freeness; v. frēon, to free.

Freeze (1 syl.), to congeal with cold. Frieze, freeze, a coarse woollen cloth, that part of an entablature which lies between the architrave and the cornice.

Freeze, (past) froze (1 syl.), past part. fro'zen, freez'-es (R. xxxiv.), freez'-ing (R. xix.), freez'-able. Frost (q.v.)

Old English freos[an], past freas, past part. frozen (our froze).

"Frieze" (cloth), French frise (sorte d'étoffe de laine à poil frise).

Also a cloth "qui vient de la province de Frise en Hollande."

"Frieze" (in Architecture), French frise; Italian fregio.

Freight, frate, cargo of a ship, to load a ship with "goods"; freight'-ed, (past part.) freight'-ed and fraught, frort; freight'-ing, freight'-er, freight'-age, freight'-less.

German fracht, frachter; French fret, fréter, affréteur.

French, the language spoken in France, adj. of France.

French leave, taking without leave, the allusion being to the raids of French soldiers in their numerous wars.

French'man, plu. French'men, or The French, the former is partitive, as two, three, four, some Frenchmen, the latter collective (R. xlvii.); Frenchwom'an, plu. -women.

Land of the Franci ("the freemen"), a confederacy of German tribes.

Frenzy, frén'-zy, distraction allied to madness: frenzied, frén'-zēd; frén'-zy-ing. Frantic, frān'.tik; fran'tic-ly, fran'tical-ly. (Ought to be spelt with ph.) See Frantic.

Latin phrēnēsis, phrēnēticus; Greek phrēnēsis, phrēnētikos.

As usual our error arises from copying the French frénésie.

Frequent, (adj.) fré'.quent, (verb) fre.quent' (Rule 1.)

Frequent', to visit often; frequent'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), frequent'-ing, frequent'-er. Frequentative, fre.quēn'.ta.tiv.

Fré'quent, often; fré'quent-ly, fré'quent-ness; fréquence, fré'.quence; frequency, fré'.quēn.cy.

French fréquence, fréquence, fréquent, v. fréquenter; Latin fréquens, gen: fréquentis, fréquentāre, supine fréquentātum.

Fresco, plu. frescoes (Rule xlii.), frēs'.kōze, a method of painting on walls; frescoed, frēs'.kōde, adorned with frescoes.

Al fresco, in the open air. (Italian, in the cool.)

Italian disegnare a fresco, to paint on fresh [plaster].

Fresh, new, not stale, not salt, cool, brisk; fresh'-ly, fresh'-ness.

Fresh'en, to make fresh (-en converts nouns into verbs); freshened, fresh'-end; freshen-ing, fresh'-ning.

Fresh'et, an overflow of river-water; fresh'man, a university student of the first year. (Old Eng. fersc, fresh.)

Fret, to vex, to eat away; frett'-ed (R. xxxvi.), frett'-ing (R. i.), frett'-er, fret'-ful (R. viii.), fret'-ful-ly, fret'-ful-ness.

Old English fret[an], to gnaw; past fræt, past part. freten.

Friable, frī'.a.b'l, easy to be crumbled; fri'able-ness; friability, frī'.a.bil'.i.ty, the state of being easily reduced to powder.

French friable, friabilité; Latin friābilis (friāre, to crumble).

Friar, Monk, Nun.

Fri'ar, a member of one of the Mendicant Orders: viz., Francis'cans (Grey friars), Car'melites (3 syl., White friars), Domin'icans and Augus'tines (3 syl., Black friars); friarly (adj.), frī'.ar.ly.

Monk, munk, a hermit or member of a monastery.

Nun, a woman who lives in a nunnery or cloister.

"Friar," French frère; Latin frater, a brother.

"Monk," Greek monachos (monos, alone); Old English munuc.

"Nun," Old Eng. munne; Fr. nonne; Low Lat. nonna, a penitent.

Fribble, frīb'.b'l, a trifle, to trifle; fribbled, frīb'.b'ld; fribb'ling, fribb'ler. (French frivole; Latin frivōlus, frivolous.)

Fricassee (French), frīk'.ās.see', meat stewed in a frying-pan, to make a fricassee; fric'asseed, fric'assee'-ing. (Words which end in two vowels retain both when -ing is added Rule xix.), fricandeau (French), frīk'.ān.do', a ragout of veal larded. (Latin frigo, to fry; Gk. phrugo.)

Friction, frīk'.shūn, resistance produced by bodies rubbing against each other, attrition; fric'tion-al, fric'tion-less.

Latin frictio, fricāre, to rub; French friction (medical term).

Friday, frī'.day. (Old English frīge-dæg, Friga's day.)

Friend, frēnd': friend'-ly, friend'li-ness (Rule xi.), friend'-less, friend'less-ness, friend'-ship, attachment (-ship, state of.)

Old Eng. frēond, frēondleas, friendless; frēondlice, -ly, frēondscipe.

Frieze, freeze, a coarse woollen cloth. Freeze, to congeal.

"Frieze," French frise (étoffe de laine à poil frise), also toil de Frise.

"Freeze," Old English freos[an], past freas, past part. frozen.

Frigate, frīg'.ate, a ship larger than a sloop or brig. (Fr. frégate.)

Latin aphractus, Greek aphractus (a phractus, not fortified), a ship without hatches, similar to those used by the ancient Rhodians.

Fright, frite, sudden terror; fright'-ful (R. viii.), fright'-ful-ly (R. xi.), fright'-ful-ness. A fright, an untidy person.

Fright-en, frite'n, to terrify; frightened, frite'nd; fright-en-ing, frite'n-ing (-en converts nouns to verbs).

Affright, af.frite' (not a.frite'), to startle with fear; affright'-ed (R. xxxvi.), affright'-ing (not a.fright-ing).

Old English forht, forhtfull, forhtian, forhtlice, frightfully; afryht, changed by metathesis to afryht (the -g- is interpolated).

Frigid, frīj'əd, cold; frig'id-ly, frig'id-ness. The frigid zones, that part of our earth enclosed by a circle, the centre of which is one of the poles, and the radius $23\frac{1}{2}$ deg.

Frigorific, fri.go.rīf'ik, that which produces cold.

Latin frigidus, frigorificus (frigor, gen. frigoris ficio [for facio]).

Frill (Rule v.), a ruffle, to ruffle with cold [as a hawk does]; frilled (1 syl.), frill'-ing.

Welsh fril, a trifling thing; v. frill, to twitter.

Fringe (1 syl.), a border, to adorn with a fringe; fringed (1 syl.), fring'-ing (Rule xix.), fringe'-less.

French frange, v. franger, to fringe.

Frippery, plu. fripperies (R. xlv.), frip'.pč.rīz, finery, triviality.

French fripierie, fripier, a dealer in old clothes (friper, to rumple).

Frisk, to gambol; frisked (1 syl.), frisk'-ing, frisk'-y, frisk-i-ness (Rule xi.), frisk'i-ly. (French frisque, frolicsome.)

Fris'ket, the light frame which holds the sheet of paper on the tympan of a printing press. (French frisquette.)

Frith, the opening of a river into the sea, as the Frith of Forth.

Lat. frētum, a strait between two seas (ferveo, fretum, to boil).

Fritter, a small fried pudding, to waste on trifles; frittered, frit'terd; frit'ter-ing, frit'ter-er. (Fr. friture, a frying.)

Lat. frictus, fried; frigo, sup. frictum, to fry; Gk. phrugo, to broil.

"To fritter," is to lose by dicing; Latin fritillus, a dice-box (from fritinnio). A corruption of fritil, should have only one -t.

Frivolous, frīv'.ō.lūs, trifling; friv'olous-ly, friv'olous-ness.

Frivolity, plu. frivolities, frīv'vōl'.ī.tīz, acts of folly or trifling.

Latin frivōlus; French frivolité, frivole.

Frizz, to curl; frizzed (1 syl.), frizz'-ing; frisure, frīz'zhēr.

Frizzle, frīz'z'l, to curl; frizzled, frīz'z'ld; frizz'ling, frizz'ler.

("Frizz" is one of the monosyllables (not ending in f, l, or s) which double the final consonant: as add, odd; burr, err; bitt, butt; ebb, egg; buzz, fuzz; fizz, frizz, and whizz, Rule viii.)

French frizer, to curl; Greek phrisso, to bristle, to ruffle.

Fro (not a contraction of from), back, backwards. To and fro, there and back, backwards and forwards.

Norse fra, Danish, Norwegian, &c., fra.

Frock, a dress; frocked (1 syl.), dressed in a frock; frock'-less.

Frock'-coat, a man's garment; smock'-frock, a carter's slop.

To unfrock, to suspend a clergyman for ill-conduct.

French froc; Low Latin froccus, corruption of floccus, woollen.

Frog, a reptile, a foot and tongue disease of horses, a coat-tassel; frogged (1 syl., Rule i.)

"Frog" (a reptile), Old English froega or froga.

"Frog" (a tassel), Low Latin froccus (floccus, a lock of wool).

"Frog" (disease), German frosch, lampass [of horses], &c.

Frolie, fröl'ik, fun, to play; frolicked fröl'ikt; frol'ick-ing; frol'ic-some, full of fun (-some, Old Eng. affix, "full of"), frol'ic-some-ly, frol'ic-some-ness. (The -k- is inserted to prevent the c from coming before e and i, in which cases it would have the sound of s.)

German fröhlich, gay, merry; frohlocken, to rejoice.

From (preposition). Old English fram.

From hence, from henceforth, from thence, from whence.

"From" in these phrases is redundant, but nevertheless is too well established to be wholly dislodged.

Similar pleonasm exists in Latin: as ex-inde and de-inde, "from thence"; ab-hinc and de-hinc, "from hence," &c.

Fronde, a union of leaf and stem, as in ferns and palms; frondescence, frön.dës'sense; fron'dose.

Fr. fronde; Lat. frons, gen. frondis, a green bough with its leaves.

Front, frünt (not frönt), the forepart, to face, to stand foremost; front'-ed (R. xxxvi.); front-ing, frünt'-ing (not frönt'-ing); front'ing-ly; front-age, frünt'.āj (not frönt'.āj), the front of a building; front-less, frünt'.less; front-view.

Frontispiece (ought to be frontispice), frön'.tis.peece (not frün'.tis.peece), the "view" or picture in the front page of a book; front-let, frünt'.let (not frönt'.let).

"Frontispiece" is a blunder. It is the French word frontispice, Latin frontispicium [frons specio], the view in the front [page]; and not the hybrid frontis-piece, the piece of the front [page].

Frontier, frön.teer', border-land; frontiered' (2 syl.)

Fr. front, frontal, frontière, frontispice; Lat. frons, gen. frontis, the front, the forehead; frontispicium, the "view" in a title-page.

(There is no sufficient reason why the "o" of the last three words should have a different sound to the "o" in the other seven.)

Frontigniac [grape], frön.tin'.yāk (not fön'.tin'.yāk), from the valley of Frontignan, between Montpellier and Agde.

Frost, frost'-ing, the sugar composition on the outside of cakes; frost'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), frost'-y, frost'-i-ly (Rule xi.), frost'-i-ness; frost-bitten, fröst'.bīt'n, affected by frost.

Freeze (verb), past fröze, past part. frozen, frö'.z'n; freeze'-ing (Rule xix.), freez'-able.

Old English frost, frostig, v. freos[an], p. freas, p. p. froren.

Froth, foam, to throw up froth; frothed (1 syl.), froth'-ing, froth'-y, froth'-i-ly (Rule xi.), froth'-i-ness, froth'-less.

Greek aphros, spume; Latin frētum; Scotch frith.

Frouzy, frōw'-zy (frōw- to rhyme with now), musty, dirty, and untidy; frou'zi-ness. (Dutch vrouw, a slattern.)

Froward, frōw'-ard (frōw to rhyme with grow), perverse; frow'ard-ly, frow'ard-ness. (Old English fraweard.)

Frown (to rhyme with clown, not with grown), a wrinkle in the forehead expressive of displeasure, to make a frown; frowned (1 syl.), frown'-ing, frown'-ing-ly.

French re-frogné[ment], v. se refrogner, to knit the brows.

Froze (1 syl.), frozen, frō'-z'n. (See Freeze, Frost.)

Fructify, frūk'-tī fy, to make fruitful; fructifies (Rule xi.), frūk'-tī fize; fructified, frūk'-tī fīde; fruc'tify-ing.

Fructification, frūk'-tī.fī.kay''shūn, fecundation.

Fructuation, frūk'-tu.a''shun, fruit, produce of plants.

Fructiferous, frūk'-tif'.e.rūs, producing fruit.

Fructuous, frūk'-tu.ūs, fertile, impregnating.

Fructescence, frūk'-tes'.sense, the time when the fruit of a plant reaches maturity, and its seeds are ripe. (See Fruit.)

French fructification, fructifier; Latin fructificāre, fructuosus (fructus, fruit). Fructuary [Latin fructuārius], "produce which yields a profit," might be introduced.

Frugal, frū'.gāl, economical; fru'gal-ly; frugality, froo.gāl'i.ty.

French frugal, frugalité; Latin frūgālis, frūgalitus (frugi, thrifty).

Frugiferous, frū.jīf'.ē.rūs, fruit-bearing.

Frugivorous, frū.jiv'.ē.rūs, fruit-eating.

Latin frūgifer (fructus ferens), fruit-bearing.

"Frugivorous," Fr. frugivore; Lat. frūges vorans, fruit-devouring.

Fruit, frute; fruit'-ing [season]; fruit'-age, the fruit produce of a season; fruit'-ful (Rule viii.), fruit'-ful-ly, fruit'-ful-ness, fruit'-less, fruit'-less-ly, fruit'-less-ness.

Fruitery, plu. fruiteries, frute'.ē.rīz, a place for keeping fruit; fruiterer, frute'.ē.rēr, a fruit-merchant.

Fruit'-y, juicy, like fruit; fruit'-i-ness. (See Fructify.)

French fruit, fruitier, fruiterer; Latin fructus, fruit.

"Fruiterer" is ill-formed, "fruit-er" would be a fruit-agent, and "fruiter-er" is about as absurd as hatter-er, glover-er, printer-er, &c.

Fruition, frū.ish'.ūn, the pleasure of possessing. (Latin fruor.)

Fruementaceous (Rule lxvi.), frū'.men.ta''shūs, made of wheat, resembling wheat. Frumentarious, frū'.mentair''rī.ūs, pertaining to wheat. Frumety, frūm'.e.ty (for frumenty), a food made of new wheat boiled in milk.

Frumentation, frū'.mēn.tay''shūn, a gift of corn made to the ancient Romans to prevent bread-riots.

Latin frumentum, frumentaceus, frumentārius, frumentatio; French froment (la meilleure espèce de blé).

Frustrate, frūs'.träte, to defeat, to render futile; frus'trät-ed (R. xxxvi.), frus'trät-ing (R. xix.), frus'trät-or (R. xxxvii.)

Frustration, frūs.tray'.shün; frustratory, frūs'.trät.tö.ry.

Latin frustratio, frusträre, supine frusträtum (frustra, in vain).

Fry, a swarm of small fish, a swarm of young children, to dress meat in a frying-pan; fries, frize; fried, fride (R. xi.); fry-ing, fry-ing-pan; fritt'er, a fried pudding.

Out of the frying-pan into the fire, from bad to worse.

French frire, friture; Latin frigere, to fry; Greek phrugo, to broil.

"Fry" (fish), French frai, spawn; Italian fregolo.

Fuchsia, fū'.shě.ah (not foo'.shah), a flowering shrub.

Named after Leonard Fuchsius, a German botanist (died 1596).

Fucus, fū'.kūs, sea-weed; fucoidal, fū'.koi'.dal (adj.)

Fucoid, plu. fucoides, fū'.koid, fū'.koi'.deze, fossil sea-weed.

Fucoi'dea, the generic name for fossil sea-weeds.

(As Geological terms are Greek, these words should have been spelt phukus, phukoid, &c.; "fucoid" is part Latin and part Greek.)

"Fucoid," Gk. phukos eidos, like sea-weed; Fr. and Lat. fucus.

Fuddle, fūd'.d'l, to make tipsy; fuddled, fūd'.d'ld; fuddling, fūd'.ling. (Norse fuld, full to repletion.)

Fudge (1 syl.), an exclamation to express incredulity, blague, to vamp up; fudged (1 syl.), fudg'-ing (R. xix.), fudg'-er.

Welsh flug, pretence; flugiad, a disguising; flugtur, a fudger.

Fu'el, fire-food, to supply fuel; fu'elled (2 syl.), fu'ell-ing (Rule iii., EL), fu'ell-er.

French feu, fire; Latin focus, v. focillo, to warm.

Fugacious (Rule lxvi.), fū.gay'.shūs, fleeting; fuga'cious-ness; fugacity, fū.gūs'.i.ty, the act of flying away, uncertainty.

Fugitive, fū'.jī.tiv, apt to fly; fu'gitive-ly, fu'gitive-ness.

French fugace, fugitif; Latin fugācter, fugax, gen. fugācis.

Fugleman, plu. fuglemen, fū.g'l.măn, fū.g'l.měn (a corruption of flugelman), the leader of a line of soldiers on march, drill, &c. (German flügelmann, flügel, a wing.)

Fugue, fūge (in Music), a piece where the parts follow or chase each other; fugist, fū'.gīst, a composer of fugues.

These French forms are quite unsuited to our language, fuge would be far better; Latin fuga; Spanish fuga; Italian fuga; &c.

Fulcrum, plu. fulcrums [or fulcra], fül.krüm (ful- to rhyme with dull). (Latin fulcrum, v. fulcio, to prop.)

Fulfil', to accomplish (better fulfill), fulfilled (2 syl.), fulfill'-ing (Rule viii.), fulfill'-er, fulfil'ment (better fulfillment).

The second l has been restored of late years to such compounds as be-fall, be-fell, recall, &c., and there is no reason why fill, still, and thrall should not follow suite. There may be some little difficulty with full, as it is often followed by -ly, but this does not apply to the other three words. As for still-y, the affix is not -ly but -y.

Fulgent, fŭl'jĕnt (fŭl- to rhyme with dull), shining; fulgency, plu. fulgencies, fŭl'jĕn.siz; ful'gent-ly.

Latin fulgens, gen. fulgentis, fulgeo, to shine bright.

Fulgurite, plu. fulgurites, fŭl'.gu.ritz (fŭl- to rhyme with dull), sand vitrified into tubes by lightning.

Latin fulgur, lightning. "Fulgorite" is quite incorrect, as fulgor means glittering brightness or sheen.

Full (like bull and pull, rhymes with wool, but all other words in -ull have short u: as cull, dull, gull, hull, lull, mull, null, skull, trull, &c.)

Fool (a simpleton), rhymes with tool, not with wool.

Full, (comp.) full'-er, (super.) full'-est.

In all its other compounds "full" drops one "l": as—

Ful'-ly, ful'-ness, spoon'ful, brim'ful, care'ful, &c.

Added to "fill," each word drops an "l": as—

Ful-fil', (the "l" of fill is restored in) fulfilled (2 syl.), fulfill'-ing, fulfill'-er, but not in fulfil'-ment.

When joined by a hyphen, the double "l" is retained: as—

Full-age, full-blown, full-bod'ied, full-dress, full-drive, full-length, full-pay, full-size, full-soon, full-speed, &c.

Full (verb), to thicken cloth, to gather into plaits or puckers, to whiten; retains the double l always; fulled (1 syl.), full'-ing, full'-er, full'er's-earth, &c.

"Full" (adj.), Old English full, in composition ful- and -ful.

"Full" (verb), Old Eng. full[ian], to full, to whiten; fullere, a fuller.

Fulminate, fŭl'.mĭ.nate (fŭl- to rhyme with dull), to send abroad denunciations, to censure; ful'mināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ful'mināt-ing (Rule xix.), ful'mināt-ory;

Fulmination, fŭl'.mĭ.nay'.shŭn; fulminant;

Fulminator (Rule xxxvii.), fŭl'.mĭ.nay.tor.

French fulminer, fulmination, fulminant; Latin fulminātor, fulminātio, fulmināre (fulmen, a thunderbolt).

Fulsome, fŭl'.sŭm (ful- to rhyme with dull, not fullsome, with ful- to rhyme with wool), obsequious, nauseous; ful'some-ness, ful'some-ly. (No compound of full.)

Old English fŭl, foul, corrupt, and -some, full of [what is foul].

Fumble, fŭm'.b'l, to handle much and listlessly; fumbled, fŭm'.b'ld; fum'bling, fum'bling-ly, fum'bler.

Norse famle, to fumble; Low German fummelen.

Fume (1 syl.), smoke, fuss, perturbation, to fume; fumed (1 syl.), fŭm'-ing (Rule xix.), fum'ing-ly, fŭm'-er, fŭm'-y, fŭmi'-ness (Rule xi.), fŭmi-ly; fume'-less.

Fumigate, fŭ'.mĭ.gate, to disinfect or purify by smoke; fŭ'migāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), fŭ'migāt-ing (R. xix.), fŭ'migāt-or,

Fumigation, fū'.mī.gay''.shŭn; fumigatory, fū'.mī.gā.t'ry.

French fumer, funiger, fumigation; Latin fūmīgātio, fūmīgātor, fūmīgāre, to perfume a place; fūmdre, to smoke (fūmus, smoke).

Fūn, sport; funn'-y (Rule i.), comp. fun'ni-er, super. fun'ni-est, fun'ni-ly (Rule xi.), fun'ni-ness, oddity.

German wonne, mirth, delight.

Function, fŭnk'.shŭn, faculty, special office or work.

Functionary, plu. functionaries, fŭnk'.shun.ă.ry, plu. fŭnk'.shŭn.ă.riz, an official; func'tion-al, func'tional-ly.

Latin functio, v. fungor, to discharge an office.

Fund, a store, to place money in the public funds; funds, available money; the funds, money lent to government on interest; fund'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), fund'-ing.

French fonds, money, the public purse; Latin fundo, to found.

Fundament, fŭn'.da.ment; fundament'-al, essential, a primary principle; fundament'al-ly.

Lat. fundamentum (fundāmen, a foundation); Fr. fondamental.

Funeral, fū'.nĕ.răl; funereal, fū.nĕ'.re.ăl, gloomy; funereal-ly.

Latin fünĕrāle, fünereus, fünĕrāre, fünus, a corpse.

Fungus, plu. fungi [or funguses], fŭn'.gŭs, fŭn'.jī, a mushroom, a toadstool, and similar plants.

Fungi, fŭn'.jī, an order of plants containing the above;

Fungia, fŭn'.jī.ăl, the genus containing the fungi;

Fungoid, fŭn'.goid, a plant resembling a true fungus;

Fungous, (adj.) fŭn'.gŭs, spongy, fungus-like.

Lat. fungus, plu. fungi, fungōsus; Gk. sphoggos; Fr. fungus.

Fun'nel, a vessel used in decanting liquids, a chimney-flue.

"Funnel" (for decanting), Latin fundulus, fundo, to pour out.

"Funnel" (of a chimney), Welsh fynnonell, an issue, a vent-hole.

Funny, fŭn'.ny, odd, curious. (See Fun.)

Fur, soft short hair. Fir, a tree, the timber of which is deal.

Fur, to line with fur; furred (1 syl.), furr'-ing, furr'-y.

Furrier, fur'ri.er (furri- to rhyme with hurry).

Furriery, fur'ri.e.ry, fur mongery.

The tongue is furred, furd, covered with morbid matter.

The fur of a kettle, a deposit of boiling water.

"Fur" (hair), Welsh ffwrw; Fr. fourrure, v. fourrer, to line with fur,

"Fur" (of the tongue and kettle), Latin furfur, scurf, bran, &c.

"Fir," Old English furh-wudu, fir-wood; Welsh pyr, fir.

Furbelow, fur'.bĕ.lo, a sort of flounce, originally made of "fur."

Corrupted into French fulbalas, Italian and Spanish falbala.

The word is fur below, at the lower part of the dress, a fur-flounce.

Fur'bish, to rub to brightness. Fur'bish-up, to mend, clean, and make serviceable; fur'bished, fur'bish-ing, fur'bish-er.

French fourbir, fourbisseur, fourbissure; Latin furnus (from furrus), a furnace. Furbish, like bran-new, means "made bright by burning heat," the two words illustrate each other.

Furcate, fur'.kate, to fork or branch off; fur'cāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), fur'cāt-ing (R. xix.); furcation, fur.kay'.shūn.

Latin furca, a fork. "Furcation" is not a French word.

Furious, fu'.ri.ūs; fu'rious-ness. (See Fury.)

Furl, to roll up a sail; furled (1 syl.), furl'-ing, furl'-er.

French ferler, to furl; a variety of fermer, to close.

Fur'long, half-a-quarter or the eighth of a mile.

Old English fur-lang, furrow-long, the length of a furrow.

Furlough, fur'.lo, leave of absence from military duty.

Danish forlov, leave of absence; German urlaub.

Fur'nace (2 syl.), an enclosed fireplace, where great heat is required. (Latin furnus; French fournaise.)

Fur'nish, to fit out; fur'nished (2 syl.), fur'nish-ing; fur'nish-er; furniture, fur'.nū.tchūr.

Low Latin furnitura; French fournir, fourniture (Rule lxiii.)

In French, fourniture means "provision," "trimmings," house furniture is meubles; so fournir means to supply soldiers with their kit, &c., and to stock a house with furniture is garnir (Rule lxiii.)

Furrier, fur'ri-er (fur'ri- to rhyme with hurry). See Fur.

Furrow, fur'.ro (not fur'.rer), a ridge made by ploughing; to form a furrow; fur'rowed (2 syl.), fur'row-ing.

Old English fur or furh, a furrow (fōr, a short journey).

Fur'ther, more distant, to promote. Fur'thest, most distant.

Fur'ther-more (adv.), besides, moreover.

Fur'ther-most, utmost (not often used).

Further (verb), fur'thered (2 syl.), fur'ther-ing, fur'ther-er.

Furtherance, helping forward.

"Further," "furthest," comp. and super. of the obsolete "furth;" the positive "forth" remains, but its comp. "forther" is obsolete. The original distinctions of the following words are lost, and the several words are now almost interchangeable.

"Far" (a long way off), comp. far'ther, sup. far'thest.

"Fyr" (of old), comp. fyrre, super. fyrrest or fyrst [first].

"Fore" (in front), comp. for[er]-mer (i.e., more), super. foremost.

To these add fōremāra, more illustrious; super. fōremārest.

Furtive, fur'.tīv, by stealth; fur'tive-ly.

Latin furtivus, furtive (fur, a thief); French furtif.

Fury, rage. The Furies (class. mythol.), three avenging female deities; fu'rore, an ardent admiration or fashion.

Furioso, fu'.ri.o''so (in Music), with vehemence.

Furious, fu'.rī.ūs; fu'rious-ly, fu'rious-ness.

Infuriate (not enfuriate), in.fu'ri.ate, to enrage; infuriat-ed (R. xxxvi.), infuriat-ing (R. xix.), infuriat-or. (Being Latin, the Latin prefix in-, and not the English, French, and Greek prefix en- should be employed.)

Latin fūria, Fūria, fūriōsus, in-fūriāre; French furie, furor.

Furze (1 syl.), gorse. Furs, plu. of fur. Firs, plu. of fir.

Furzy, fur'zy, like furze, full of furze. Fuzz'y, fluffy.

"Furze," Old English fyrz, furze or brambles.

"Furs," Welsh ffwrw, hair. Latin furfur, scurf [fur of kettles].

"Fir," Old English fyrh-wudu, deal or fir-wood.

"Fuzz," German aufzusen, faseln, to fease or unravel.

Fuse, fūze, a tube filled with combustible matter for blasting and firing shells, to liquefy metal, to blend by heat; fused, fūzed (1 syl.); fus-ing, fūze-ing; fūs-er (R. xix.)

Fusion, fū.shun, the act of melting, the state of being melted.

Fusible, fūze'i.b'l, able to be melted by heat; fusibility, fū'zi.bil'it.ti, the property of being fusible.

Fusee, fū.zē, a small firelock, a fuse, the cone round which the chain of a clock or watch winds.

"Fuse" (to melt), Latin fundo, supine fūsum, to cast or melt metal.

"Fuse" or "Fusee," French fuser, fusee; Latin fusus, a spindle.

Fusil, fū.sil, a fusee or light musket; fusilier, fū'sil.ier, a soldier armed with a fusil. The word still remains in our army, as The Scotch Fusiliers (the third of the three household regiments of Foot-Guards), and The Royal Fusiliers (the seventh regiment of the line).

French fusil, fusilier (from the Italian focile; Latin focus, fire).

Fusion, fū.shun, the act of melting or joining by heat, the state of being melted or joined by heat. (See Fuse.)

Füss (Rule v.), ado about trifles; füss-y, interfering and bothersome about trifles; fuss-i-ness, fuss-i-ly (Rule xi.)

Greek phūsao, to snort, to puff and blow, to be inflated.

Füst, mouldiness, to become mouldy; füst-ed (Rule xxxvi.), füst-ing; fusty, fūs.ty, musty; fus'ti-ly, fus'ti-ness.

French fust, now fût, a cask or barrel, the taste of the cask, fust.

Fustian, fūs'tchūn, a strong cotton cloth, bombast.

We use the names of many cloths to express styles of writing: as shoddy, sleazy compilations; fustian, inflated composition; stuff, rubbish; silken words, &c.

Span. fustan (name of a place); Ital. fustagno; Fr. futaine for fustaine.

Fusus, fū.sūs, a genus of shells, as the red-whelk, &c.

Fusulina, fū.sū.li'nah (in Geol.), a genus of foraminifera,

Lat. fusus, a spindle. The fusulina, so called from their cell-growths.

Futile, fū.til, trifling; fu'tile-ly; futility, fū.til'it.ti.

French futile, futilité; Latin futilis, futilitas (futio, to pour out).

Futtocks, füt' tōks, the curved ribs of a ship between the floor and the top timbers.

Old English fōt hōc. "Hōc," a curved stick or piece of iron, the curved timbers at the foot or bottom of a ship.

Future, fū'tchūr; futurity, fū.tū' rity, the time to come.

French futur; Latin fūtūrus, v. fuo, to be.

Fūzz, light particles, to fly off in minute particles; fūzzed (1 syl.), fūzz'-ing; fuzz'-ball, a kind of fungus full of dust.

Fizz, to froth, to go off with a whizz.

Furze, gorse; furzy, like gorse; fuzz'y, fluffy.

Fuzz is one of the few monosyllables (not in f, l, or s) with the final consonant doubled, like add, odd; burr, err; bitt, butt; ebb, egg; buzz, fuzz; fizz, frizz, and whizz.

"Fuzz," a corruption of fease, ravelins; German faseln, to unravel.

"Fizz," German pfetze, to whistle or whizz.

"Furze," Old English *fyr*s, brambles, gorse.

-fy (Latin termination "to make"), contraction of fic' that is fac', for facio in composition becomes ficio (to make or do).

Fy! an exclamation of reproof. Fy upon you! Fy! for shame! German pfui, pfui schāme dich, fy upon you!

G is sounded like j before e, i, and y; otherwise it retains its normal sound, except in the word gaol = jail.

Before e in the following examples, and their derivatives, "g" is not sounded like j: viz., ganig'-er, gear, gecko, geese, Gehenna, geld, gemara, gemote, get, geum, and gew-gaw.

Before i in the following examples, and their derivatives, "g" is not sounded like j: viz., gibberish, gibbous, gibeline, giddy, gift, gig, giggle, giglot, gild, gills [of a fish], gilt, gimlet, gimp, be-gin, gingham, gird, girdle, girl, girth, gittern, give, and gizzard.

Before "y," gye and gypsum are pronounced both ways, but the g hard sound is more usual than the g soft or j sound.

In words derived from the Greek ge- ought to be hard, as geography, geology, &c., but custom has willed it otherwise, and we must submit to its dictates.

Gab, clack, to clack; gabbed (1 syl.), gabb-ing (Rule i.)

Gabble, gab' b'l, chatter, to chatter; gabbled (2 syl.), &c.

Danish gab, the mouth; gabflab, a chatterbox; French gaber.

Gād, to rove about; gadd'-er, gadd'-ing, gadd'-ed (Rule i.)

"Gad" (a goad or wedge), Old English gād, hence gad-fly.

"Gad" (verb), Old English gader[ian], to assemble a crowd.

Gaelic, gay'lik (not gàk'lik), Erse. Gar'lic, a plant.

The Scotch Highlanders call themselves gaidheal, and their language gaelig. The Irish they call Gael.

Gaff (R. v.), a spar. (Old Eng. gaflas, spars; Fr. gaffe, a boat-hook.)

Gag (noun and verb), gagged (1 syl.), gagg'-ing, gagg'-er (R. i.)
 Welsh cegio, to choke; ceg, a mouth.

Gage (1 syl.), a pledge, to pledge. Gauge, gage, an instrument;
 gaged (1 syl.), gāg'-ing (Rule xix.), gāg'-er; gauged, gaged (1 syl.); gaug'-ing (Rule xix.), gaug'-er.
 French gage, jauge, a gauge, jauger (Low Latin radium).

Gaiety, gay'.e.ty; gaily, gay'.ly. (See Gay.)

These two words, with daily, are exceptions to Rule xiii.

Gain (1 syl.), profit, to acquire; gained (1 syl.), gain'-ful (Rule viii.), gain'-ful-ly; gains, earnings.

Old English gyn[an]; French gain, gagner; Low Latin guadagium.

Gain'say, to contradict; gain-said, gain'sēd (Rule xiv.), gain'-say'ing, -say'-er. (Old English gean, opposite.)

To "say the opposite." It has no connexion with the verb gain.

Gait (1 syl.), manner of walking. Gate (1 syl.), a door.

"Gait," Old English gāth, from gān, to walk or go.

"Gate," Old English gāt or gēd, a gate or door.

Gaiter, gaiters. When a "pair" can be separated, one of the articles can be spoken of in the sing. number: as a glove, a stocking, a shoe; but if the pair is joined together there is no sing.: as longs, trousers, nippers, &c.

French guêtre, i.e. güestre; Latin vestis; Greek esthés.

Galaxy, plu. galaxies (Rule xlv.), gāl'.ax.iz, the milky way.

Greek galaxias [kuklos], from gāla, milk.

Galbanum, gāl'.bā.num (not gāl'.bay'.num), a resin. (Latin.)

Gale [of wind]; Gall, gawl, bile. (See Gall.)

Danish kule, to blow; kuling, a breeze. Norwegian gal, frantic.

Galiot (not galliot), gāl'.i.öt, a small Dutch vessel.

French galiote; German galcote; Spanish galeota.

Gall, gawl, bile, to fret. Gaul, a native of ancient Gallia.

"Gall" (bile), Old English gealla (gæle, saffron).

"Gall" (the oak nut), French galle (noix de galle); Latin galla.

"Gall" (to fret), French galer (Latin galea, a helmet).

Gallant, gal'.lant, brave; gallant', courteous. (Rule l.)

Gallantry, gal'.lan.try, bravery; gallant-ly; gallan'ted, escorted; gallant'-ing, escorting ladies.

Gallavant, gal.la.vant' (a corrupt variety).

French galant, both senses, galanterie (one l.).

Galleon, gāl'.lē.ön. Gallon, gal'.on. Galloon, gāl'.loon'.

"Galleon," Spanish galeon; French galion, a large ship (one l.).

"Gallon," French gallon. "Galloon," French galon, a ribbon.

Gallery, plu. galleries (Rule xlv.), gāl'.lē.riz.

German gallerie; French galerie.

Galley, plu. galleys (not gallies, Rule xlv.), gāl'.liz.

The old Venetian galleys had thirty-two banks of oars, and each oar was managed by six slaves, hence the term galley-slaves. Italian galera; French galère (only one l.).

Gallipot, găl'.li.põt, an earthen pot used by druggists.

Dutch gley-pot, a clay-pot (French pot de faïence).

Gallon, gal'.lon, four quarts. Galleon, găl'.lě.õn, a ship.

French gallon (measure de litres 4.543458).

"Galleon," Spanish galeon; French galion (with one l).

Galloon, găl'.loon', a narrow ribbon, for shoe-strings, &c.

French galon (tissu étroit, croisé, et très-épais).

Gallop (does not double the final letter, Rule iii., b), gal'loped (2 syl.), gal'lop-ing, gal'lop-er.

Galopade, găl'.o.pard, to dance the gallop; galopad'-ing.

(Only three words ending in p with the accent not on the final syllable violate the rule, and ought to be reduced to conformity with it. Gossip, gossipp-ing, &c.; kidnap, kidnapp-er, &c.; worship, worshipped, worshipp-er, &c.)

French galop, galoper, galopade (danser le galop) one l.

Gallows, plu. gallowses, găl'.loze, găl'.loze.ěz (not gal'.lerz).

Old English galga, a gallows or gibbet; galga-treow, a gallows-tree.

Galoche, ga.losh', an overshoe. (Fr. galoche; Span. galocha.)

Galvanism, găl'.văn.izm; galvanic, găl'.văn'.ik.

Galvanise (Rule xxxi.), găl'.văn.ize; gal'vanised (3 syl.), gal'vanis-ing (Rule xix.), gal'vanis-er, galvanom'eter.

So called from Galvani, of Bologna, the discoverer, 1790.

Gamble, gam'b'l, to play for money. Gam'bol, to frisk.

"Gamble," a dim. of game. Old English gaming, gamerung.

"Gam'bol," French gambiller, to swing the legs about.

("Carol" and "gambol" are the two examples of words in -ol, not accented on the last syllable. "Carol" violates Rule iii., and "gambol" conforms to it. Thus:—

Car'ol, car'olled, car'oll-ing, car'oll-er, but

"Gam'bol," gam'boled, gam'bol-ing, gam'bol-er.

Game, play, animals protected for sport, to gamble; game'ster (Rule lxii.); game-some, game'sũm (-some, "full of" play); gamed (1 syl.), gām'-ing (Rule xix.)

Old English gam[ian], to sport; gaming, gamen sport.

Gam'mon (of bacon). Gam'in, a French street Arab.

"Gammon" (of bacon), French jambon (Greek kampē, Roquefort).

"Gammon" (to hoax), Old English gamen, sport, scoff, jest.

Gam'mut (not gamut). The word is gamma ut (γ-ut).

In the eleventh century the musical scale was extended one note below the old Greek scale. The new note was termed gammā. The Sol-Fa notation begins with 'ut,' and starts from the new note gamma, so the scale is that of ut beginning from gamma.

Gander, fem. goose, plu. geese, offspring gosling. Except when gender is specially referred to, both the male and female are spoken of as goose or geese.

Old English gandra, fem. gós, plu. gés, gós-ling (-ling, offspring).

Gang'way, a passage way. (Old English gang, a passage.)

"Gang" (a company), comes from the custom of combining for safety on journeys, as in caravansaries (gang, a journey).

Gangrene, gan'.green, an eating ulcer; gan'gred (2 syl.), gan'grēn-ing (Rule xix.); gangrenous, gān'.grēnūs.

Fr. gangrène; Lat. gangrena; Gk. gagraina (graino, to feed on).

Ganoid; gān'.oid, fish, like the sturgeon, with shiny scales.

Greek gānōs eidos (having horny plates), spendour-like.

Gantlet (better than gauntlet), garnt'.let, a military glove; gant'let-ed (Rule xxxvi.), not gauntlett-ed (Rule iii.)

French gantelet, dim. of gant, a glove. Words in -et, not accented on the last syl., are very irregular: Thus we have "carburet," carburetted; "épaulet," epaulett-ed, &c., which ought to be deprived of the second t. On the other side we have carpet-ed, banquet-ed, coronet-ed, closet-ed, gantlet-ed, gar'ret-ed, &c.

To run the gantlet (a corruption of gantlope, or running-passage formed by soldiers drawn up in two lines).

German gang-laufen (gang, passage; laufen, to [be] run). The corresponding German word is gassen-laufen (gasse, a street or lane). The French say passer les baguettes (the sticks).

Gaol, jail (the only exception to g hard before a); gaol'-er.

Spanish jaula; French geôle; Low Latin gaola, gaolarius, a jailer.

Gape, gāpe (not garp), to yawn; gaped (1 syl.), gāp'-ing (Rule xix.), gāp'-er. (Old English geāp[an], to gape.)

Garbage, gar'-baj, offal (a contraction of garble-age).

Garble, gar'.bl, to sift, hence to mutilate by omissions; garbled, gar'b'ld; gar'bling, gar'bler.

Spanish garbillar, to garble (garbillo, a sieve).

Garden, gard'n (not gar'.dēn); garden-ing, gard'ning; garden-er, gard'ner (not gar'.dīn.er); gardened (2 syl.)

Welsh gardd, a garden; garddwr, a gardener; German garten; French jardin; Spanish huerta; Latin hortus.

Gargle, gar.g'l, a wash for the throat. Gargoyle, gar'.goil.

"Gargle," French gargariser; Latin gargarizo; Greek gargarizo.

"Gargoyle" (a water-spout made like the head of a monster), so called from the gargouille, or great dragon from the Seine which ravaged Rouen, and was slain by St. Romain in the 7th cent.

Garrot (not garot), gar.rōt', to strangle; garrott'-ed (R. xxxvi.), garrott'-ing (R. iv.), garrott'-er.

Spanish garrote; French garrotte, v. garrotter.

Gar'ret, gar'ret-ed (not garrett-ed); so clos'et, clos'et-ed (R. iii.)

Corruption of French galetas, a garret.

Garrison, gar'ri.s'n, a fortified place, a body of soldiers in a garrison; gar'risoned (3 syl.), gar'rison-ing.

Corruption of Fr. garnison; Low Lat. garnisio; Old Ger. wahren.

Garrulous (not garfilous), gar'ru.lūs, talkative.

Garrulity, gar'ru'.lī.ty; gar'rulous-ly.

Latin garrulus, garrulitas, garrulare (garrio, Greek gérno).

Gas (one of the sixteen exceptions to Rule v.), gäss; gasalier, gäs'.i.leer'; gaseous, gäs'.e.us (not gay'.she.üs).

Gasify, gäs'.i.fy; gasifies, gäs'.i.fize; gasified, gäs'.i.fide (Rule xi.), gasification, gäs'.i.fi.kay'.shun.

Coined by Von Helmont (Saxon gast; German geist, spirit).

Gasconade, gäs'.ko.nade'', to boast; gas'conād'-ed (R. xxxvi.), gas'conād'-ing, gas'conād'-er. (To boast like a Gascon.)

Gastric, gäs'.trik, pertaining to the belly; gastrōn'omy.

Gastritis, gäs.tri'tis, inflammation of the stomach. (-itis denotes inflammation.) Greek gastēr, the belly.

Gastropod (better than gasteropod), gas'.tro.pōd, plu. gastropods or gastropida, gäs'.trōp''.o.dah, slugs, snails, and other molluscs which walk by a ventral disc.

Greek gastēr, gen. gastērōs or gastērōs pōdēs, belly-footed.

(In composition the Greeks always use gastro and not gastero.)

Gate (1 syl.), a door. Gait, gate, a manner of walking.

"Gate," Old Eng. gāt or geāt. "Gait," Old Eng. gāth, from gān, to walk.

Gau'dy, showy, (comp.) gau'di-er, (super.) gau'di-est, gau'di-ly, gau'di-ness. A gau'dy, a feast day.

Latin gaudium, joy, v. gaudeo, to rejoice.

Gauge, gage, a measure, distance between the rails, a workman's tool, a mixture for ceilings and mouldings, to measure liquids with a gauge; gauged, gaged (1 syl.); gaug-ing, gage'-ing; gaug-er, gage'er; gaug'-able. (-ge and -ce retain the final e when -able is added.) See Gage.

French jauge, v. jauger (Latin jaculum, a stick, the gauge being "une verge de fer ou de bois pointue," which is thrust into the cask, and the part wetted indicates the quantity contained).

Gauntlet. (See Gantlet.)

Gauze, a thin fabric of linen or silk. Gorse, furze.

"Gauze," Fr. gaze; (Lat. gossypinus, made of cotton, whence gausape).

"Gorse," Old English gorst, gorse or furze.

Gavel, gav'.el, tribute. Gavial, ga'.vi.al, the Asiatic crocodile.

"Gavel," Low Lat. gabellā, tax on goods. "Gavial," an Indian word.

Gawk, a cuckoo, a simpleton; gawk'-y, long-limbed, ungainly.

Old English geac, a cuckoo, a beardless boy, a simpleton.

Gay (comp.) gay'-er, (super.) gay'-est (Rule xiii.); gay'-ness.

Gaiety, gay'.ety; gaily, gäy'-ly. (These two words and daily are exceptions to Rule xiii. French gai, gaieté.)

Gazania, ga.za'.ni.ah (not ga.zin'.i.ah), a flower.

Gazelle (French), ga.zel', a species of antelope. (Arabic gazal.)

Gazette, ga.zet', a journal; gazet't-ed, officially announced.

Gazetteer, gaz'.et.teer'' (not gez'.e.teer''), a dictionary of geographical names. (Italian gazetta; French gazette.)

"Gazette" de gazetta petite pièce de monnaie de Venise, prix de chaque numéro d'un journal qui paraissait en cette ville au commencement du XVII^e siècle. (Dictionn. Universel des sciences, &c.)

Gear, gēr (not jeer), tackle. Jeer, to scoff. Gear-ing. (This is one of the exceptions to g = j before e.)

Old Eng. gearwa, preparation, dressing; gearw[ian], to make ready.

Gelatine, djēl'.a.tin (the principle of animal jelly), djel.a.teen' (animal jelly); gelatinous, dje.lăt'.i.nūs, resembling jelly.

Fr. gélatine, gélatineux; Lat. gelare, supine gelātum, to congeal.

Gem, djēm, a precious stone, to bespangle; gemmed (1 syl.), gemm'-ing (Rule i.) (Old Eng. gim, a precious stone.)

Gender is formed in three ways: (1) By employing a different word for the two sexes; (2) by adding a gender-word to one or both of the sexes; (3) by a gender suffix. Only Anglo-Saxon words come into the 1st class, and most of the 3rd class are borrowed from the French, the suffix being -ess added to the masculine to make the feminine.

Genealogy, plu. genealogies, djēn'.e.ăl''.o.jiz, pedigree; genealogical, djēn'.e.a.ləj''.i.kāl; gen'ealog'ical-ly; genealogist, djēn'.e.ăl''.o.jist; gen'eal'ogise (Rule xxxi.)

French généalogie, généalogiste; Greek gēneālōgōs, v. gēneālōgos.

General, djēn'.e.rāl, usual, a military officer; gen'eral-ly.

General'ity, plu. generalities, djēn'.e.rāl''.i.tiz.

Gen'eralise (Rule xxxi.), gen'eralis-ing, gen'eralisa'tion.

Generalissimo, plu. generalissimos, djēn'.e.rāl.is''si.mōze (Rule xlii.) The general, the common people.

Gen'eral officer, plu. general officers.

Lieutenant general, plu. lieutenant generals.

Major general, plu. major generals (not majors general).

French générale, généralité, généraliser, généralisation, général, lieutenant-général; Italian generalissimo; Latin gēnērālīs.

Generate, djēn'.e.rate, to produce; gen'erāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), gen'erāt-ing (Rule xix.), gen'erāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); generative, djēn'.e.ra.tiv; generation, djēn'.e.ray''.shun.

French génération, génératif; Latin gēnērātio, gēnērātor, gēnērāre.

Generic, djēn'er'rik (not jēn'.e.rīk), relating to gēnus; generical, dje.ner'ri.kāl; gener'ical-ly.

French générique; Spanish generico; Latin gēnus.

Generous, djēn'.e.rūs, liberal; gen'erous-ly, gen'erous-ness.

Generosity, djēn'.e.rōs''.i.ty, liberality. (French générosité.)

Latin generōsitas, gēnērōsus. ("Generosity" is the conduct of a gentleman, or one belonging to the "gens," or patrician class.

Genesis, djēn'.ē.sīs. The Book of Genesis, or The Book Genesis (?).

Both are correct, but the former is more idiomatic: thus we say, the city of London, the continent of Europe, &c., but we also say, the River Thames, and not the River of Thames. "Of" in these examples is adjectival: thus, the nation of France = the French nation, the continent of Europe = the European continent, so the city of London = the London city, the Book of Genesis, &c.

If not adjectival, "of" stands for of the name of, and then the phrases the city of London, the Book of Genesis, mean "called by the name of" (vulgo vocato).

Geneva, dje.ně.vah, gin, a town in Switzerland.

Genevan, djě.ně.van (not jěń'.e.văn), adj. of Geneva.

Genevanism, djě.ně.văn.izm (not jěń'.e.văn.izm), Calvinism.

Genevese, djěń'.e.veze, a native of Gene'va.

The Genevese, the inhabitants collectively considered.

Genial, djě.ni.ăl, social; geniality, djě'.ni.ăl''.i.ty.

Latin geniālis, geniālitās (genius, pleasantness).

Genii, djě'.ni.ĩ, fairies. (Arabic jinnce, m, jinniyeh, f.)

Genitive, djěń'.i.tiv. Only nouns denoting animal life and nouns personified have a genitive case in English, and this is expressed by the addition of ('s) in the singular, and of (') only in the plural, as genitive boy's, plural boys'.

The double Genitive. The double genitive is used when the latter is partitive, the first genitive being made by of, and the second by the suffix, as A bust of Cicero's (partitive), one of Cicero's busts; a bust of Cicero would mean a bust representing Cicero. How many hired servants of my father's, how many of my father's hired servants.

Genius, *plu. geninse*s (people of talent), genii, fairies, djě'.ni.us, djě'.ni.ūs.iz, jě'.ni.ĩ. (Latin genius, see Genii.)

Genus, plu. genera, djě'.nūs, djěń'.e.rah, a group.

Genoese; djěń'.o.eze, a native of Gen'oa. The Genoese, the inhabitants of Gen'oa collectively considered.

Genre [painting], zhàr'n, representation of every-day life.

French genre, man, his customs, habits, and ways of life.

Genteel, djěń.teel, polite, refined; genteel'-ly; gentility, djěń.til'.i.ty; gen'tleman, fem. gen'tlewoman, plu. gen'tlemen, gen'tlewomen, djěń'.t'ł.vim'n, both gentlefolks, collectively considered the gentry.

Gentleman-at-arms, plu. gentlemen-at-arms.

Gentleman-usher, plu. gentlemen-ushers.

Gent., a contraction of gentleman, means one with the "show," but not the "birth" and position of a gentleman.

Latin gentīlitās, gentiles (gens, "family"). A "gentleman" means a man of family, a man of good birth.

Gentian, djěń'.shăn, an herb named from Gentius, king of Illyria, who discovered its medicinal virtues.

Gentile, djĕn'.tĭle, not a Jew, a heathen. Gentle, djĕn'.t'l.

Latin gentilis. The whole world is divided into two classes, viz., our own nation and the other nations (gentes), Christians and the rest of the world (heathens).

Gentle, djĕn'.t'l, (comp.) gent'ler, (super.) gent'lest; gent'ly.

"Gentle," mild, not rough, means "like a gentleman," q.v.

Genuflection, djĕn'.u.flĕk'.shĭn, a bending of the knee.

Latin genusflectio, v. genusflecto; French genuflexion.

Genuine, real, not adulterated, not a forgery. Authentic, not a fiction. Genuine [book], one written by the person who professes to be its author. Authentic [book], one whose statements are facts.

Latin genuinus (Greek geino[mai], to beget), a genuine book is be-gotten by the person who fathers it.

"Authentic," Latin authenticus (Greek authentēs [autos entēs], the self-same instruments), an authentic book contains the self-same facts or statements as really occurred.

Genus, plu. genera, djĕ'.nis, djĕn'.ĕrah, the group containing species. Family or Order, the group containing genus.

Genius, a person of talent, plu. geniuses, genii, fairies.

Latin gĕnus, plu. gĕnĕra (Greek gĕnōs), a general or collective term.

Latin genius, plu. genii (gigno, to beget), a birth-endowment.

Geodesy, djĕ.ōd'.e.sy, the science of surveying and mapping.

Latin geodæsia; Greek gēdaisia (gē dato, to divide the earth).

Geography, plu. geographies, dje.ōg'.ra.fiz; geog'rapher.

French géographie (Greek gē graphē, a description of the earth).

Geology, djĕ.ōl'.ōjy; geological, djĕ'.ō.lōj'.i.kāl; geologise, djĕ.ōl'.ō.jize; geol'ogis-ing (Rule xix.)

(French géologie (Greek gē lōgōs, a discourse on the earth). Technically, "geography" describes the external features of the earth's surface; but "geology" the phenomena beneath its surface.)

Geometry, djĕ.ōm'.e.try, the properties of lines, surfaces, and volumes. Originally it meant "measurement of the earth."

Latin geometria; Greek gēmetria (gē mētrō, to measure the earth).

Georgic, djōr'.djĭk, a poem on husbandry, pertaining to agriculture.

Lat. georgica; Gk. gēorgikos (gē ergōn, earth work).

("Georgic" ought to be in three syl., dje.ōr'.djĭk, but it has taken its pronunciation from George, the proper name.)

Geosaurus, djĕ'.ō.saw''.rūs, a gigantic fossil earth-lizard.

Greek gē sauros, an earth [or terrestrial] lizard.

Geranium, pelargonium, dje.ra'.nĭ.um, pĕl'.ar.go''.nĭ.um, the stork-bill, plu. geraniums, pelargoniums. Pelargoniums are greenhouse geraniums. (Not palargonium.)

Latin gerānĭum (Greek gērānōs, a crane). So called because the beak of the fruit resembles a crane's bill.

"Pelargonium" (Greek pēlargos, the stork), the stork-bill.

Gerfalcon, djĕr.faw'.kōn, the large "vulture" falcon.

German geier falkē, the vulture or hawk [-billed] falcon.

Ger'man, of the same stock. Germain, djer.mane, appropriate, Cousin-german, plu. cousins-german, first cousins.

Germain or german [to the subject] à propos.

French germain (both senses); Latin germānus, of the same stock.

German, plu. Germans, natives of Germany. (Lat. Germānus.)

Probably both words are from germīno, to sprout out, for the Germans looked on themselves as indigenous, but some derive the word from ger (war), and others from heer- (a multitude).

Gerund, djēr'rund, a verbal noun. It may be the subject or object of a verb, may have an article before it, may be qualified by an adjective, may govern a noun, or be governed by a preposition: Seeing is believing, the tolling of the bell, in defending myself, the quoting of authors. If the comes before a verbal noun, of must come after it, otherwise not: as by the preaching of repentance, or by preaching repentance.

Gesture, djēs'.tchūr, a significant movement of the limbs, features, or body. (Latin gestus, v. gero, to behave.)

Get (not git), past got, past part. got [or gotten], gett'-ing (R. i.), gett'-er. To fetch, to obtain with effort, to induce.

To get head, to advance. To get ahead, to overtake.

To get along, to manage with difficulty. Get along, move on.

To get asleep, to fall asleep with difficulty.

To get at, to reach after having employed effort.

To get away, to free from entanglement. Get away, be gone.

To get between, to insert with effort or difficulty.

To get clear, to disengage after effort made.

To get drunk, to drink to inebriety.

To get by heart, to learn by rote.

To get home, to reach home after effort made.

To get in, to bring under shelter, to enter, with effort.

To get loose, to disengage oneself with difficulty.

To get near, to advance close, to approach with effort.

To get off, to escape with difficulty, to remove.

To get on, to progress, to put on with effort.

To get out, to liberate, to free oneself with effort.

To get over, to surmount, to climb over, to wheedle.

To get quit or rid of, to part with, after effort.

To get the day, to win after contest.

To get through, to pass with difficulty, to succeed.

To get to, to reach after overcoming obstacles.

To get together, to amass with toil or effort.

To get up, to rise from bed, to mount.

Gew'gaw, a showy trifle. (Old Eng. gegaf, vile; Fr. jonjou.)

Geyser, gay'.zër, spouting hot springs of Iceland.

Icelandic geysa, raging, roaring.

Ghastly, gàst.ly, death-like, pale, dreadful; gha'st'li-ness (R. xi.)

Old English gàst, a ghost. The interpolated h is useless.

Ghaut, gort, a mountain pass, two mountain chains of India, stairs descending to the Ganges. (Hindostani ghât.)

Ghebers, ga'.berz, Persian fire-worshippers. (Persian ghebr.)

Ghee, gē (not jē), clarified butter. (Hindostani ghi.)

Gherkin, gër'.kîn (not jër'.kîn), a small cucumber fit for pickling.

German gurke, cucumber.

Ghibelline, gîb'.èl.lîn (not jîb'.èl.line), the Imperialists of Italy and Germany, opposed to the Guelfs or papal faction.

At the battle of Weinsberg, in Suabia (1140), Conrad, duke of Franconia, rallied his followers with the war-cry hie Waiblingen, while Henry the Lion, duke of Saxony, used the cry hie Welfe (the family names of the rival chiefs).

Ghost, gōst; ghost'-ly, ghō'st'li-ness (Rule xi.), ghost'-like.

Old Eng. gūst, gāstlic, ghostly; gāstlice (adv.) h interpolated.

Ghoul, gool, a demon supposed to feed on human dead bodies.

Persian ghul, a mountain demon.

Giant, fem. giantess, djî'.ant, djî'.an.tess; gigantic, djî.gân'.tik, in size like a giant; gigan'tical-ly.

French géant, gigantesque; Latin gigas, gen. gigantis, gigantēus.

Giaour, djow'r (Turkish), one not of the Mohom. faith.

Gib, djîb, a male cat, to shy; gibbed (1 syl.), gibb'-ing, gibb'-er.

Jib, the foremost sail, to shift the boom-sail.

Gibe, djibe, sarcasm, to mock; gibed (1 syl.), gib'-ing.

"Gib" (a cat), Germ. gilbert, a male cat. "Gib" (to shy), Dan. gibbe.

"Jib," Dan. gibbe, to jib a sail. "Gibe," Old Eng. gabb[an], to scoff.

Gibber, djîb'.ber, to prate inarticulately; gib'bered (2 syl.), gib'ber-ing, gib'ber-er. (Some pronounce the g hard.)

Gibberish, gîb'.ber.ish (not jîb'.ber.ish), unmeaning words.

Geber was the chief alchemist of the eleventh century, and wrote several treatises in cryptogram to evade persecution.

Gibbet, djîb'.bet, a gallows, to hang; gib'bet-ed, gib'bet-ing.

French gibet (de l' arabe djebel (montagne), parce qu' autrefois les exécutions se faisoient ordinairement sur les lieux élevés).

Gibbous, gîb'.bus (not jîb'.bus), the moon in the second and third quarter is so called. (Lat. gibbus, humped; Fr. gibbeux.)

Gibe, djibe, a sarcasm, to ridicule; gibed (1 syl.), gib'-ing, gib'-ing-ly; gib'-er, djî'.ber, a snarler. Gibb-er, one that shies.

Old English gabb[an], to scoff; French gaber

Giblets, djib'.lětz, the off-parts of a goose, duck, turkey, &c.; giblet [pic], made of giblets. (Fr. gibier, with dim. let.)

Giddy, (comp.) gid'di-er, (super.) gid'di-est, gid'di-ly (R. xi.), gid'di-ness. Heedless, a swimming in the head.

Old English gidig. (The g is hard.)

Gift (g hard, not jift), a present; gift'-ed, talented; v. give, g'v, (past) gave, (past part.) given, g'v'n; g'v'-er, g'v'-ing.

Old Eng. gift, v. gif[tian]. The e of "give" does not lengthen the i.

Gig (g hard), a two-wheeled open carriage. Jig, a dance.

Fr. gigue, v. giquer, to frisk about; very similar to cabriolet, a little caperer, French cabriole a scamper (cabri, a kid). "Jig," the same.

Gigantic, dji.găn'.tik, very large; gigan'tical-ly, giant (q.v.)

Latin gigas, gen. gigantis, a giant, gigantēus; French gigantesque.

Giggle (g hard), g'g'.g'l, to titter; giggled (2 syl.), giggling, gig'gling-ly; giggler, gig'.ler. (Old Eng. geagle, wanton.)

Gild (g hard), past gild'-ed, past part. gilt, to overlay with gold leaf; gild'-ing, gold-leaf, overlaying with gold-leaf, the finished work; gild'-er, one whose trade is to gild.

Guild (g hard), gild, a city company.

Guilt (g hard), gilt, criminality.

Old English gild[an], past gildede, past part. gilded; gilden, gilt.

"Guild," Old English gild. "Guilt," Old English gylt.

Gill, djil, a quarter of a pint. Gills (g hard), the lungs of a fish.

Lat. gillo, a gill, a small drinking vessel. "Gills," A. S. geaft, the jaws.

Gillyflower, djil'.i.flow'er (not a corruption of July-flower, but of the French giroflee. (Latin caryophyllum, a clove.)

Gilt (g hard), overlaid with gold-leaf. Guilt, criminality. (See Gild.)

Gimlet (g hard), a small auger. (French gibilet, a gimlet.)

Gin, a trap, to trap, a drink; ginned (1 syl.), ginn'-ing (Rule i.)

"Gin" (a trap), contraction of engine; so "spinning-jenny" is a little spinning engine.

"Gin" (a spirit). A contraction and corruption of Fr. genièvre, Lat. juniperus, juniper-berry; these berries by fermentation make gin and hollands, but oil-of-turpentine is generally used instead.

Gingham (g hard), ging'.ăm, a cotton cloth dyed in the yarn.

French guingan or guingamp, so called from Guingamp (Brittany).

Gipsy, plu. gipsies, djip'.siz. (A corruption of Egyptian.)

The Fr. call them Bohemians, Danes Tatars, Ital. Walachians.

Giraffe, djě.ràf', the camelopard. (Span. girafa, Ital. giraffa.)

Girandole, jir'răn.dole, a candelabrum, whose branches turn round.

Italian girandola; Latin gyrāre, to turn round.

Gird (g hard), to bind; gird'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), past part. girt.

Girdle, gwr'.d'l, a zone or belt; gird'led (2 syl.), gird'ling.

("Girdel" is the more ancient and better spelling.)

Old English gyrd[an], past gyrde, past part. gyrded; gyrdel,

Girl (g hard), fem. of boy, both child; girl-ish, like a girl; boy-ish, like a boy (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.), girl'ish-ness, girl'ish-ly.

Latin gérula, a nursemaid (géro, to carry [infants] about).

"Boy," Old English býre, a son: v. byr[ian], to raise or rear.

Girondist, djirön'.dist, a political party in the French revolution. So called from the department of La Gironde, in France.

Girth, a horse's girdle. Girt, girded; girt'-ed. (See Gird.)

Old English gyrd[an], gyrdel; German gurt, gurtel, v. gurten.

Gist, djíst, the drift of an argument. Grist, corn for grinding. French gist, now git (C'est là que git le lièvre), v. gésir, to turn.

Give (g hard), gív, (past) gave (gāve, not gāv), (past part.) given, gív'n; gív-ing, gív'-or; gift.

To give away, to bestow gratis;

To give back, to restore; To give chase to, to pursue;

To give ear to, to hearken to; To give forth, to announce;

To give in, to yield; To give in to, to adopt;

To give off, to let out; To give out, to declare publicly;

To give over, to cease, to abandon, to submit;

To give up, to relinquish; To give up oneself to, to addict;

To give way, to let pass; To give way to, to yield to.

Old Eng. gift, v. gif[an], past geaf or gaf, past part. gífen, gífa, a giver. (It is a pity that we have substituted v for f in the verb, and the e final is worse than useless, it positively misleads.)

Giz'zard (g hard), the strong muscular stomach of a bird.

Welsh glasog; Fr. gesier; Lat. gigéria, the gizzard (digère, to digest).

Glacial, gläs'.i.äl (not glay'.she.äl), icy.

Glacier, gläs'.x.ertz (not glä'.she.ertz), a field of snow-ice.

The rents of a glacier are called crev'asses, the mounds of debris deposited by the moving mass are moraines.

Glaciers, gläs'.x.ers, plu. of glacier. Glacieres, gläs'.x.airz (in Geol.), caves full of ice found in Alpine mountains.

Glacis, gläs'.is (in Fort.), a smooth gentle slope.

French glacial, glacier, glacières, ice-houses; glacis (glace, ice); Latin glaciālis, glacies, ice; v. glaciāre, to freeze.

Glad, pleased. Glade, glāde, an opening in a wood, &c.

Gladd'-en, to delight (-en added to adj. means "to make");

gladdened, glād'.end; gladden-ing, glād'-ning (Rule i.);

gladden-er, glād'.ner; glad'-some (-some means "full of"); glad'-ness (-ness, a suffix added to abstract nouns).

Old Eng. glæd, glædlic (adj.), glædlice (adv.), glædmōdnes, gladness.

Gladiator, glād'.i.a.tor (not glay'.di.a.ter), a sword-player.

Gladiatorial, glād'.i.a.tō.ri.äl; glad'iatory.

Latin glādiator, glādiatorius (glādīus, a sword).

Gladiolus, glăd'.i.ô.lus (not glăd.i.ô'.lus), the sword-lily.

Lat. glădiolus, a little sword. So called from the shape of the leaves.

Glair (1 syl.), the white of eggs. Glare (1 syl.), strong light.

"Glair," Fr. glair. "Glare," Old Eng. glere; Dan. glar, glass.

Glamour, glam'.er, a deceptive charm. Claymore, cla'.mor, a Scotch broad-sword. Clamour, clam'.er, noise.

Glamour allied to gleam, a shoot of light.

"Claymour," Gaelic claid'-more, great sword; Welsh clêd'-mo.

"Clamour," Lat. clāmor, v. clāmare, to clamour; Fr. clameur.

Glance, a slight view, to have a glance; glanced (1 syl.), glance-ing (Rule xix., glăn'.sing), glance-ing-ly.

German glanz, v. glanzen.

Gland, an excretory or secretory vessel. Glans, a nut in bracts.

Glandule, glan'.dule, a small gland (-ule dim.)

Glancers, a disease in horses; glandered, glăn'.derd.

Glandulation, glăn'.du.lay''.shun. Glandular, containing glands. Glandulous, pertaining to glands.

Fr. glande, glandulaire, glanduleux; Lat. glans, gen. glandis, a corn.

Glare (1 syl.), dazzling light, to shine with a glare. Glair, white of egg; glared (1 syl.), glār'-ing (R. xix.), glar'ing-ly.

"Glare," Old English glere. "Glair," French glair.

Glass (noun), glaze (verb). So "grass," v. graze; "price," prize; "cicatrice," cicatrize (R. li.); glass'-y, glass'i-ness (R. xi.), glass'i-ly; glazed (1 syl.), glāz'-ing (R. xix.)

Glazier, glā'.zhēr, one who puts glass into windows.

Glass'-ful, plu. glass'fuls, two, three, &c., glassfuls means a glassful repeated twice, thrice, &c., but two, three, &c., glasses-full means two, three, &c., distinct glasses, all filled. "Glass" (Rule v.), unlike "mass" (Rule viii.), retains the double s in all its compounds: as glass'-y, glass'-ful, glass'-house, glass'-wort, crown'-glass, flint'-glass, plate'-glass, &c. "I'singlass" is no compound of glass, but takes double s from sound-analogy.

Old Eng. glæs, glass; glæsen, made of glass; Lat. glastum, woad.

Gleam, gleem, a ray of light, to shine. Glimmer, a faint light, to shine faintly. (Old Eng. gleam; Germ. glimmer.)

Glean, gleen, to pick up corn after the crop has been carried.

Welsh glân, clean; French glaner, glaneur.

Glebe (1 syl.), the soil; gleb-y, glee'.by, cloddy. (Lat. gleba.)

Gleditschia (not gledeshia), gle.dee'.she.ah, a flower.

So called in honour of Dr. Gleditsch, of Berlin (died 1786).

Glee, merriment, a song in three or more parts; glee'-man, a minstrel; glee'-some (-some, full of), glee'-ful, glee'-ful-ly.

Old English gleo, mirth, a song; gleo-mann, gleo-mæden.

Glib, smooth; glib'-ly; glib'-ness, volubility, smoothness.

Lat. glaber, smooth; v. glabreo (Gk. glāphō, whence glāphūrōs, smooth).

Glide (1 syl.), to slide; glid'-ed, glid'-ing, glid'-er (Rule xix.)

Old English glid[an], past glidd, past part. gliden.

Glim'mer, to send forth a feeble light. (See Gleam.)

Glisten, glis'n (not glis'ten), to sparkle; glistened, glis'n'd; glisten-ing, glis'ning; glisten, glis'ter (not glis-er); glis'tered (2 syl.); glis'ter-ing.

Old English glisten[ian]; German gleischen, glistern.

Glitt'er, to sparkle; glitt'ered (2 syl.), glitt'er-ing.

Old English gliten[an], glitin[ian], and glit[ian], to glitter.

Gloaming, glōme'-ing, twilight. (O. E. glomung, a interpolated.)

Gloat, glōte, to gaze earnestly (followed by on); gloat'-ed, gloat'-ing, gloat'-ing-ly, gloat'-er. (German glotzen.)

Globe, Orb, Sphere, Ball, Globule.

Globe (1 syl.), a solid sphere, this earth, an artificial sphere representing the earth, or the starry heavens.

Sphere, sfēr, a poetic and scientific word for globe.

Ball, a round mass, as a ball of cotton, a cricket ball; a globe is a ball, but a ball is not of necessity a globe.

Orb, a circle, hence the disc of a planet, and hence a planet.

Globule, glob'bule, a little ball. (-ule, diminutive.)

"Globe," Latin glōbus, a bowl, a globe, glōbāre; glōbūlus.

"Sphere," Lat. sphara, same as "globus"; Gk. sphaira, v. sphairōō.

"Ball," German ball; French balle; Latin pila, a pill, a ball.

"Orb," Latin orbis, any round thing, a wheel, a circuit, a circle, &c.

Glomerate, glōm'.e.rate, gathered into a head or heap; glom'erāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), glom'erāt-ing (Rule xix); glomeration, glōm'.e.ray''shun. (See Conglomerate.)

Latin glōmērātio, glōmērāre (glōmus, a ball of yarn, &c.)

Gloom, obscurity; gloom'-ing, becoming obscure. Gloaming, glō'ming, twilight. Gloomy, glōo'my; glōo'mi-ly (R. xi.), glōo'mi-ness. (Old Eng. glōm, gloom; glomung, twilight.)

Glory, plu. glories, glōr'rīz (not glō'rīz), honour, to honour; (verb) glories, glōr'rīz; gloried, glōr'red; glor'y-ing;

Glorify, glōr'rī.fy; glorifies, glōr'ri.fize; glorified, glōr'ri.fide; glor'ifi-er (Rule xi.), glor'ify-ing.

Glorification, glōr'ri.fī.kay''shun, act or state of glory.

Glorious, glōr'ri.ūs; glor'ious-ly, glor'ious-ness.

French glorification, glorifier; Latin glōriōsus, glōr'ifico, glōria.

Gloss, lustre, a comment. Gloze, to flatter. Glows, shines with heat.

Gloss'y, (comp.) gloss'i-er, (super.) gloss'i-est, gloss'i-ly.

Gloss (Rule viii.), a comment; gloss'ary, plu. glossaries, glōs'.a.rīz, a dictionary of antiquated words; glossarial, glōs.sair'ri.āl; gloss'arist.

"Gloss" (lustre), Old English glæs, glass.

"Gloss" (comment), Germ. glosse; Old Eng. gles[an]; Lat. glossa.

Glottis, glōt'.tīs, the narrow opening at the upper part of the windpipe. Epiglottis, ēp'-i.glōt'-tīs, the valve of the glottis.

Glottitis, glōt.tī'.tīs, inflammation of the tongue. (-itis, inflam.)

Fr. glotte, epiglote; Lat. epiglottis; Gk. glōtta (long o), the tongue.

Gloucester, Glōs'.ter: (Old English Gleaw-ceaster.)

Called by the Britons Cacr-glou; glou in Latin became glor, glor-um. The Saxons added castra, and the word became Glou-ceaster or Gleaw-ceaster. "Gleaw," wise, skilful.

Gloze, to flatter. Glows, shines with heat. (See Gloss.)

Glucine, glu'.sīn, the oxide of glucinum. Glucinum, glu.sī'.num, the metallic base of glucine. Glucose, glu'.kose, grape sugar; glucic acid, glu'.sīk, acid obtained from grape sugar. (Gk. glukus, sweet; Fr. glucine. (See Glycerine.) (These words retain the Gk. "u," generally changed to y.)

Glue, glu; glued (1 syl.), glu'-ing. (All words ending with a double vowel (except -ue) retain both of them before -ing R. xix.), glu'-er, glue'-y; gluey-ness, glu'.i.ness (R. xiii.)

Gluten, glū'.t'n, a gluey substance obtained from wheat and other grain. Glutton, glūt'n, a great eater;

Glutinous, glū'.t'nūs, viscous. Gluttonous, glūt'n.us, greedy; glut'inous-ness. Glutinate, glū'.ti.nate; glu'tināt-ed (R. xxxvi.), glu'tināt-ing (R. xix.), glutinative, glū'.ti.na.tiv; glutination, glū'.ti.nay''shūn.

Fr. glu, bird-lime, v. gluer, gluten, glutinatif; Lat. gluten, glue.

Glūt, to gorge; glūtt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), glūtt'-ing (Rule i.)

Glutt-on, glūt'n, a great eater; glutton-ous, glūt'n.us, greedy; glutt'onous-ly; gluttony, glūt'n.ŷ.

Gluttonise, glūt'n.īze (Rule xxxi.); glutt'onised (3 syl.), glutt'onis-ing (Rule xix.), glutt'onis-er.

Latin gluto, gen. glutōnis, a glutton; glutio, to swallow; gluttus, the gullet; French gloutonne, gloutonnerie.

Gluten, glū'.t'n. Glutinous, glū'.ti.nūs. (See Glue.)

Glutton, glūt'n. Gluttonous, glūt'n.us. (See Glut.)

Glycerine, glīs'.e.rīn (not glīs'.e.reen), the sweet principle of oils and fat; glyceric [acid], glīs'.e.rīk.

Nitro-glycerine, nī'tro glīs'.e.rīn, a powerful blasting oil.

Greek glukus, sweet. (These words convert the Greek u into y, and therein differ from their congeners Glucine, q.v.)

Glyptography, glīp.tōg'.ra.fy, the art of engraving gems.

Greek gluptos graphē, a treatise [on] the art of carving.

Glyptodon, glīp'.tō.dōn, a huge fossil armadillo.

Greek gluptōs odontēs, having carved, i.e. fluted, teeth.

Gn- G or K before n at the beginning of a word or syllable is silent. All these (except gnu) are Teutonic or Greek.

Gnarled, narld, knotted like the oak. (Danish knoldet, knotty.)

Gnash, nash, to grind the teeth. (Germ. knirschen, to gnash.)

Gnat, năt. (Old Eng. gnat.) Natt'y, spruce. (Ital. netto.)

Gnaw, (past) gnawed, (past part.) gnawn, naw, nawd, nawn, to pick with the teeth; gnaw'-ing (not nôr'ring), corroding, painful, picking with the teeth; gnaw'-er (not nôr'-rer), one who gnaws or picks with the teeth.

Old English gnagan, past gnôh, past part. gnagen.

Gneiss, nice (not ně'iss), a slaty rock, differing from granite in having its crystals broken. Nice, as it should be.

"Gneiss," German gneiss. "Nice," Old English hndsc, tender.

Guome, nôme, a sylph who guards a mine. (Greek gnômê.)

Gnomon, nō.môn, index of a dial. (Gk. gnômon, an indicator.)

Gnostics, nôs'.tiks, the knowers as opposed to the believers. A sect which tried to fuse Christianity and Platonism; gnosticism, nôs'.ti.sizm; gnostic, nôs'.tik (adj.)

Greek gnôstikôs (v. gignôskô, to know; Latin nosco, to know).

Gnu, nū, a South African ox. (The only word beginning with gn- which is neither Teutonic nor Greek.)

Go, (past) went, (past part.) gone, gôn; go'-ing. "Went" is from the verb to wend; goes, goze; go'-er.

To go under the name of, to be called by a pseudonym.

So the story goes, so says common report.

It will go against him, will tell to his disadvantage, will be in his disfavour. To go against a town, to besiege it.

It will go hard with them, there's danger of a fatal issue.

A go-between, a middle man, a mediator.

Go about your business! mind your own affairs, and don't interfere with mine. To go by, to pass by or near.

To give one the go-by, to give one the slip, to shuffle off.

Go and Come. We go away from the place and come to the place where we are [for the speaker is].

Plants come up, and come into leaf or flower, but go out of flower and go to seed; because their leafing and flowering is coming to be with us, but their seeding and decay is going away from us.

The ship went to pieces. The jug came to pieces. Because the ship was away at sea, but the jug in our hand.

The sun goes behind a cloud, but comes out from it. It "goes" out of sight or away from us, but "comes" into sight and therefore where we are or where we can see it.

The sun goes down, but comes forth as a bridegroom to run his race; because at sun-set it "leaves" us, but at sunrise it "comes" into our hemisphere.

Go away, leave this place. Come away, leave that place.

Go to! a broken sentence meaning Go to — or get along with you. Do not talk so for I do not believe it.

When he came to, recovered from a fit. When he came to himself, recovered his senses. In the fit the "spirit" had left, but on recovery it returns back.

It wo'n't go down, it is not to be swallowed or believed.

It wo'n't come down, descend or yield to force.

To go on, to proceed, to fit [as a garment]. To come on, to grow [as a plant].

To go over to, he went over [to the other side or opinion].

To come over, to wheedle, to come to our side or opinion.

To go through, to undergo suffering or trouble. To come through, to get free from, to pass through.

EXCEPTION.—We use the word come [to the place where you are], when we reply to an invitation, or direct the idea to the act to be performed or effort to be made, rather than to the intention formed in the mind of doing what is referred to at some future time.

In reply to an invitation: "Come here." Ans. "I will come [i.e., to you] directly." "When will you come and see me?" Ans. "I will come [i.e., to you] next week." "Will you come and dine with me to-morrow." Ans. "I shall be happy to come and dine with you to-morrow."

The stress on the act and not on the intention: "I am coming to pay you a visit on Monday," i.e., I will undertake the act of a journey to your house; but "I am going to pay you a visit on Monday" refers more to the intention formed, than to the journey to be made.

Effort to be made. This is a slight variation of the preceding idea; when our Lord was told about the Centurion's son, he replied, "I will come [i.e., to your house] and heal him." Here the main stress of the idea is on the effort Jesus was willing to make to heal the sick child. If he had said, "I will go and heal him," the main force would have been directed to the healing and not to the condescension of Jesus undertaking the mission.

Goad, gōde (noun and verb). Good (adj.) God, deity.

Old English gād, a goad; gód, good; god, deity.

(These examples will show some of the shifts we have resorted to to represent the accent so unwisely discarded.)

Goal, gôle, the winning post. Ghoul, gool, a vampire. Gaol, jail, a prison. Gale, a high wind.

"Goal," French gal, gaule, a pole. "Ghoul," Persian ghul, a mountain demon. "Gaol," French géole. "Gale," Norse kule.

Goat, he-goat, fem. she-goat, (familiarly) Billy-goat, fem. Nanny-goat; goat'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like").

Old Eng. gât, a goat; gât-hyrde, a goat-herd; gâta-hûs, a goat-house.

Gobble, gôb'·l, to devour fast and noisily; gob'bled (2 syl.) gobb'ling, devouring. Gob'lin, a spirit. Gobelin, gôb'·lin [tapestry]. See below. (French gober, to swallow.)

Gobelin, gôb'·lin [tapestry]. Gob'lin, a spirit. Gobbling, v.s.

Gobelins, a famous manufacture of tapestry near Paris, so called from the brothers Gobelin who established it.

Gob'lin (see above). (Fr. gobelin; Germ. kobold; Gk. kôbâlôs.)

God, fem. godd-ess (R. i.); god'-less; god'-ly, pious, piously; god'li-ness (R. xi.), god'li-ly or god'-ly, god'less-ly.

Old English god, god-bearn, a god child; god-modor, god-sunu, &c.

Gofer, gô'fer, to crimp, a cake baked in a go'fering iron; go'fer-ing, crimping. Gopher, gô'fer, the wood of which the ark was made, a species of turtle.

"Gofer," French gaufre, v. gaufre. "Gopher [wood]" Hebrew.

Goitre, goi'tr (French), a large tumour in the neck; goitered, goi'terd; goitrous, goi'trus. (Latin guttur, the throat.)

Golden Reinette (not -Rennet), gôld'n rain'.et.

French Rein-ette, a little queen [of apples].

Golosh, go.lôsh', an overshoe. (Ought to be galoch.)

Fr. galoches; Span. galocha, a clog; Ger. galosche; Lat. gallice.

Gondola, gôn'.do.lah (not gôn.dô'.lah), a Venetian pleasure-barge; gondolier, gôn'.do.leer', the barge-man.

Good, (comp.) better, (super.) best (from the obsolete positive bet, v. bet[an], to improve); good'-ly, good'li-ness (R. xi.), good'li-est; good'y, mistress; good-man, master.

Good-bye, -bi (God be with you), farewell.

Good-looking [person], or Well-looking (?). "Good-looking" is sanctioned by usage and analogy; thus we have good-humoured, good-natured, good-tempered, &c. "Looking" is not a participle, but a verbal noun, and should be written lookung, but the termination -ung has been unhappily converted into -ing, thereby confounding verbal nouns with participles.

Old English gôd, betera, betest or best; gôdnes, gôdlic, gôdleas.

Goose, plu. geese, (male) gan'der, (offspring) gosling (-ling denotes offspring). (Old English gôs, plu. gês.)

Gooseberry, plu. gooseberries, goos'.bèrriz (no connection with goose). Gooseberry fool (a corruption of gooseberry foulé mashed. The French have foulé de pommes, foulé de raisins, foulé de groseilles, &c.)

A compound of gorst and berie, the rough berry. The French groseille is from the Latin grossula.

Gopher, gō'fēr (Heb.), the wood of which the ark was made.

Gofer, gō'fēr, to crimp, a cake baked on a gofering iron.

French gaufre, v. gaufrier.

Gordian knot, gor'.dī.ăn nôt, an inextricable difficulty.

The leather harness of Gordius, king of Phrygia, was tied into a knot so intricate, that an oracle said whoever untied it should become master of the world. Alexander cut the knot with his sword.

Gordonia (not gardonia), gor.dō'.ni.ah, a plant.

So called from James Gordon, of Mile End, near London.

Gore, clotted blood, to wound with horns, a gusset; gory, gō'r'ry.

Old English gór; (to wound) gdr, a dart; (a gusset) Welsh gor.

Gorge, a defile, to cram; gorged (1 syl.), gorg'-ing (Rule xix.)

Gauge, gage (not gorge), to mete the contents of a cask.

Fr. gorge (Lat. gurgus, a glutton). "Gauge," Fr. jauge, v. jauger.

Gorgeous, gor'je'us, showy (should be gaudious); gor'geous-ly, gor'geous-ness. (An exception to Rule lxvi.)

Latin gaudium, joy; gaudialis, gaudeo, to delight.

Gorilla, go.ril'.lah, a large ape. (An African word.)

Gor'mand; gormandise, gor'măn.dize (R. xxxi.), gor'mandised (3 syl.), gor'mandis-ing (R. xix.), gor'mandis-er.

Gor'mand, a glutton; gourmet, gour'.may', a high feeder.

French gourmand, gourmet, gourmandise; Latin gumia, a glutton.

Gorse (1 syl.), furze. Gauze (1 syl.), a thin transparent cloth.

"Gorse," Old Eng. gorst. "Gauze," Fr. gaze, made at Gaza, in Syria.

Gos'hawk, the goose-hawk. (Old Eng. gós-hafoc, goose-hawk.)

Gosling, gōz'.ling, a young goose. (Old English gós, -ling dim.)

Gospel, gōs.pēl; gospell-er (ought to be gospeler; (Rule iii.)

Gospelled, evangelized; gos'pell-ing. (These two words ought to be abolished.) Gos'pel-ise (R. xxxi.), gos'pelised (3 syl.), gos'pelis-ing (R. xix.), gos'pelis-er.

(The double l of "gospeller," &c., ought to be abolished, or else gospel should have its double l restored to it.)

Gospel for Gods-spel, Old English godspell, v. godspell(tian), godspel-ere, a gospeller; (spell, story, tidings) good tidings. The Greek word is eu-aggēlion, good tidings.

Gossamer, gōs'.sa.mer (not gossimer), a fine web.

Old English Gos [god's] scāmere, god's tailor. The tradition is that gossamer is a ravelling of the Virgin Mary's winding sheet, which fell away when she was carried up to heaven.

Gos'sip, a tattler, a sponsor, a neighbour, to chat; gos'sipped (2 syl.), gos'sipp-ing, gos'sipp-er, gos'sipp-y, chatty.

Old English Godsibb (sib-, related, as sibling, a related child).

(If one p is dropped in gossip, it ought to be omitted in all of its derivatives. The same remark applies to "worship," Rule iii.)

Got past tense of get. Much foolish prejudice exists against this very useful word. Has means the simple fact of possessing, but got implies that the possession has been obtained by effort, exposure, gift, &c. Thus "I have a cold" states a fact only, but "I have got a cold" implies that it is the effect of exposure or bad weather. "I have the hammer" states a fact, but "I have got the hammer" implies either I have fetched it, or I have taken it in possession [without your knowledge or consent].

No doubt the word is often used in a very slipshod manner as may be inferred by the following sentence: "I got on horseback immediately I got your message, and got to the train by ten o'clock, but got such a cold, as I shall not get rid of in a hurry. However, when I got home, I got my supper, and got to bed, got nicely warm, and soon got into a sound sleep. Next morning I got up and got dressed, and scarcely had I got into the breakfast room, when I got a telegram, and got the boy to get a little refreshment, while I got ready my answer, which I hope you will get in good time."

Gonge, gooj (not gōrj), a chisel for cutting grooves, to scoop out; gougéd (1 syl.), goug'-ing, goug'-er.

Fr. gouge, from the Low Lat. gugia, a gouge; Span. gulia.

Gourd, go'rd (not gōrd), a plant. Gored, gōrd, wounded.

French gourde and courge; Latin cucurbita, a cupping-glass, &c.

Gout, a disease. Gouty, gout'i-ness (R. xi.) Gout, goo, relish.

French goutte (the disease), so called because it was thought to proceed from a goutte or drop of acrid matter in the joints.

"Gout" (relish), French gout; Latin gustus; Italian gusto.

Governor, a ruler, whether male or female; governess, a fem. teacher; governante, go'ver.nānt, a lady who has charge of young girls of quality; gov'ernor-ship, the office of a governor (-ship, Old Eng.; office); gov'ern-able, gov'ern, gov'ernéd (2 syl.), gov'ern-ing, gov'ern-ment.

French gouverner, gouvernement, gouvernemental, gouvernante; Latin gubernāre; Greek kubernao, to guide or govern.

Gown (to rhyme with crown), gownsman (not gownman), a university student; a silk-gown, a Q.C.

Welsh gwn, a gown; v. gwnio, to sew.

Grab, to pilfer; grabbed (1 syl.), grabb'-ing (R. i.), grabb'-er.

Grabble, grab'l, to grope; grabbed, grab'ld; grabb'ing.

Welsh cribiddail, pillage; Danish gribe, to seize (grib, a vulture).

Grace, favour, elegance, to adorn, to honour; graced (1 syl.), grac'-ing (R. xix.); gracious, grā'.shūs; graciously, graciously-ness, grace'ful, grace'ful-ly, grace'ful-ness.

Gra'tis, for nothing. Gratify, grat'.i.fy. (See Gratify.)

French grace, gracieux; Latin gratia, gratiosus, gratis.

Grade (1 syl.), a degree, promotion; gradient, grā'.dl.ent, the slope or incline of a rail-road; grad'ual, grad'ual-ly, grad'nate (3 syl.), grad'nāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), grad'uate-ship.

Gradation, gra.day'.shun, a series; graduation, grad'.u.a''-shun; a marking into degrees, reception of a degree.

French graduel, graduier, graduation, gradation; Latin gradatio (gradus, a step; gradior, to go step by step).

Graft (Rule v.). The older and better spelling of graft.

Graft, a part of one tree inserted into another, to insert a graft graft-ed (R. xxxvi.), graft'-ing, graft'-er. (Fr. griffe.)

Grain, gran'ary (not grain'ery), a grange; granivorous, grān'.iv'.o.rūs; granulate, grān'.u.late; gran'ulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), gran'ulāt-ing (Rule xix.), gran'ular, gran'ule (2 syl.), a little grain (-ule dim.), granulous, grān'.u.lūs.

(The blunder of i in "grain" (seed), we have taken from the French, but it is not perpetuated in its derivatives.)

The derivatives of "grain," to imitate the grain of wood, retain the i throughout: as Grained (1 syl.), grain'-ing, grain'-er. Grains, refuse of malt after brewing. Grain, purple dye.

French grain, granuler, granulation, granule; Latin grānum, grān-nārium, grāntifer. "Granivorous" is grānum voro, to eat grain.

Gramineous (not graminious, Rule lxi.), gra.mīn'.e.ūs, grassy; graminivorous, grām'.in'.iv'.o.rūs, grass-eating.

Graminaceæ, grām'.in'.ā''.se.ē, the order of plants called grasses (-aceæ (in Bot.), denotes an order of plants).

Lat. grāmen, gen. grāminis, grāminēus, "graminivorous" (voro, to eat).

Gram'mar (double m), gramma'rian, grammat'ical, grammat'ical-ly, grammat'icise (Rule xxxi.), &c.

Fr. grammaire, grammatical; Lat. grammaticus (Gk. gramma).

Grampus, plu. grampuses, Rule xxxiv. (not grampi), a fish.

A corruption of French grand-poisson, great fish (grampoise).

Granary, plu. granaries, grān'.a.riz; gran'ulate. (See Grain.)

Grand-father, -mother, plu. grand-fathers, -mothers. Parents' parents to parents' children.

French compounds adapted: grand-père, grand-mère.

Latin grandis, remote, as cœvum grande, a remote age.

Grandson, -daughter, plu. grand-sons, -daughters. Sons and daughters children to sons' and daughters' parents.

The French say "petit": petit fils, petite-fille.

Grandchild, plu. grand-children, -tchil'.drën.

Formed on the same model; no corresponding word in French.

Grand-jury, plu. grand-juries, -jũ'.rîz, the jury which decides whether or not there is sufficient prima facie evidence of guilt in an accused to be worth "trial."

Petit-jury, plu. petit-juries, pet'.ty jũ'.rîz, an ordinary jury.

Special jury, plu. special juries, a jury for a special cause.

Grandee, grăn.dě'. (Spanish grande, a nobleman.)

Grandeur, grăn'.djür, elevation. (French grandeur.)

Grandiloquent, grăn.dil'.o.quent, pompous in language; grandiloquent-ly; grandiloquence, grăn.dil'.o.quence.

Lat. grandiloquentia (grandis loquens, gen: loquentis, grand talking).

Granite, grăn'ît, so called from its granular-crystalline composition and appearance; granitic, grăn'ît'îk.

French granit, granitique; Latin grānum, grain.

Granular, grăn'.u.lar; gran'ulate, &c. (See Grain.)

Graphic, grăf'îk, life-like, delineated; graphical, grăf'.i.kal; graphical-ly. (The -ph- points to a Greek word.)

Latin graphicus; Greek grăphikos (grăpho, to write or draw).

Graphite, grăf'.ite, black-lead, or rather carburet of iron.

Grapholite, grăf'.o.lite, slate fit for school uses.

-ite, like stone; -lite, stone; Greek lithos, grapho, to write or draw.

Grapnel, grăp'.něl, a small anchor with four or five flukes.

Grapple, grăp'.p'l, to struggle [followed by with]; grap'pled (2 syl.), grap'pling, grappling-irons, grap'pler.

French grapin or grappin, a grapnel, a struggle.

Grass (noun), grāze (verb), to feed on grass; similarly glass, glaze (Rule li.); plu. grass'-es (Rule xxxiv.), grass'-y, grass'i-ness (Rule xi.)

Grass, to cover with grass; graze (1 syl.), to feed on grass; grassed (1 syl.), grass'-ing; grazed (1 syl.), grāz'-ing; grazier, grā'.zhěr, one who pastures and rears cattle.

Old English gæs or græs, grass; gras[ian], to graze; græs-hoppa.

Grate (1 syl.), a fire-stove, to rasp. Great, grāte, large.

Grāt'-er, a rasp, one who grates. Greater, grā'.těr, larger; grāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), grāt'-ing (Rule xix.), grāt'-ing-ly.

"Grate" (a stove), Ital. grata; Lat. crātes, a hurdle, crate, or grate.

"Grate" (to rasp), French gratter, to scratch. (See Rule lxiii.)

Grateful, grate'.ful (R. viii.), thankful, agreeable; grate'ful-ly.

Gratify, grāt'.i.fy, to please; gratifies, grāt'.i.fize; gratified, grāt'.i.fide; gratifier, grāt'.i.fi.ěr; grat'ify-ing; gratification, grāt'.i.fi.kay''shñ, pleasure, satisfaction.

Gracious, grā'.shūs, kindly disposed; gra'cious-ly, -ness.

Gratitude, grāt'ī.tūde, thankfulness. (See Gratis.)

Latin gratus, gratificatio, gratificari, gratiosus, gratitudo.

Gratis, grū'.tiss, for nothing; gratuitous, grā.tū'.ī.tūs, free [gift]; gratu'itous-ly, without compensation, without proof.

Gratuity, plu. gratuities, grā.tū'.ī.tīz, a donation.

Lat. gratuitus, grātis (i.e., grātus, for thanks only); Fr. gratis.

Grauwacke, the German way of writing graywacke (q.v.)

Gravamen, plu. gravamina or gravamens, grā.vay'.mēh, plu.
grā.vay'.mī.nāh or grā.vay'.mēnz, cause of complaint, chiefly used in ecclesiastical matters.

Latin gravāmen, plu. gravāmēna, a grievance (gravis).

Grave (1 syl.), a place of interment, solemn, to carve.

Grave (noun), plu. graves (1 syl.) Graves, food for dogs.

Greaves, greevz, leg-armour. Grieves, greevz, laments.

Grave-clothes, grave-digg'er, grave-stone, grave-yard.

Grave (adj.), grāv'-er (comp.), grāv'-est (super.), grave'-ly, grave'-ness. Gravity, plu. gravities, grāv'.ī.tīz. "Gravity" (seriousness) has no plural. (See Gravitate.)

Grave (verb), graved (1 syl.), grāv'-ing, grāv'-er, a tool for engraving, one who engraves. Engra'ving, a picture engraved, using a graving tool. Grāv'-en (adj.), chiefly used in conjunction with "images": as graven images.

"Grave" (for interment), Old English græf, also a graving-tool.

"Grave" (adj.), French grave, gravité; Latin grāvis, grāvitas.

"Grave" (verb), French graver; Latin graphis, the art of engraving; graphium, an Iron pen; (Greek grápho, to write, &c.)

Grav'el (noun and verb); gravelled, grāv'.eld; grav'ell-ing, grav'elly, R. iii., -EL. (Fr. gravier, gravelle, the malady.)

Graves (1 syl.), should be greves, refuse of a melting pot, made into dogs' food. Greaves, greevz, armour for the legs.
Grieves, greevz, laments (3rd sing. pres. ind. of Grieve);
Graves. (See Grave.)

"Graves" (dogs' food), Danish grever, residuum of tallow, fibrous remains of lard. "Grave," Anglo-Saxon græf.

"Greaves" (leg armour), Spanish grevas. "Grieve," French grief.

Gravitate, grāv'.ī.tate, to tend towards a material body by attraction; grav'itāt-ed, grav'itāt-ing; gravitation, grāv'.ī.tay'.shūn; grav'ity, plu. gravities, grāv'.ī.tīz.

Fr. graviter, gravitation, gravité; Lat. grāvitas (gravis, heavy).

Gravy, plu. gravies, grū'.vǝj, grū'.vīz, the juice of cooked meat.

Same as graves (dogs' food). Danish grever, residuum of lard.

Gray or Grey, (comp.) gray'-er, (super.) gray'-est, gray'-ish (-ish added to adj. is diminutive, added to nouns it means
"like"); gray'-beard, gray'-ness. (Old Eng. græg, gray.)

Grayhound (better than greyhound), the hound that hunts the gray or badger without being trained to do so.

Graywacke, gray.wāk'y, a kind of sandstone. (Germ. grauwacke.)

Graze (1 syl.), to pasture; grazed (1 syl.), grāz-ing; grāz'-er, an animal sent to graze; grazier, grāz'.zhēr, one who pastures and rears cattle. Glazier, see Glass.

Old English grās[ian], to graze. (See Grass.)

Grease, (noun) greece; (verb) greaze (Rule li.), fat, to smear with grease; greas-y, gree'-zy (not gree'-cy); greas'i-ness, greas'i-ly (s = z). Greece, the country so called.

French graisse, graisser; Latin crassus, fat (Greek krās).

Great, large. Grate, a stove, to rasp. Greet, to salute.

Great, grate (not greet), comp. great-er, super. great'-est.

Old English great, greatnes, greatness.

"Grate" (to rasp), Fr. gratter. (A stove), Ital. grata, Lat. crates.)

"Greet" (to salute), Old English grēt[an], to bid welcome.

Greaves, greevz, lég-armour. Grieves, greevz, laments.

Graves (better greves), dog's food. Graves (1 syl.), places for interment. (See Grief.)

"Graves" Spanish gravas. "Grieves," French grief.

"Graves" (dog's food), Danish grever, residuum of fat. "Graves," Anglo-Saxon græfas.

Green, a colour; green'-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim.), green-ness (double n). Greens (no sing.), cabbages dressed for food; green-gage (2 syl.), a sort of plum; green-sward, a grassy lawn; green-tea; Scheele's green, a pigment; green-grocer, a dealer in fruits and vegetables.

Old English grēne, grēnnes, greenness; v. grēn[ian].

Greet, to salute. Great, grate, large. Grate, a fire stove.

Greet'-ed (R. xxxvi.), greet'-ing, greet'-er. Greater, larger.

"Greet," Old English grēt[an], past grette, past part. grēt, grétung.

Gregarious, grē.gair'ri.ūs, living in herds (-ious not -eous, because "herd" is an abstract noun), gregariously, &c.

Latin grēgārius (græ, gen. grēgis, a flock or herd).

Gregorian, grē.gōr'ri.ăn, adj. of Gregory.

Grenade, grē.nāde', an instrument of war; grenadier, grēn'.a.-deer' (not grān'.a.deer'), one of the Grenadier Guards, so called because at one time employed to throw grenades.

Grenado, plu. grenadoes, grē.nah'.doze. (A blunder for the Spanish granada, plu. granadas.)

(Fr. grenade, grenadier; Ital. grenata, grenadiere; Span. granada.)

Grey or gray. (comp.) grey'-er or gray-er, (super.) grey'-est or gray-est, grey'-ish or gray'-ish. (Anglo-Saxon græg.)

The following are spelt with "c," not "a."

Grey-hound (the canis grāius). Old English grig-hūnd.

This is a blunder for Grayhound, the badger-hound, so called because (unlike other dogs) it will hunt the gray or badger without being trained to do so.

The Scotch Greys or The Greys, the 2nd dragoons. So called because they are mounted on grey horses.

Grey-wethers, -weth'rs, huge boulders near Avebury.

Grey Friars, Franciscan friars (who wear a grey habit).

Gridiron, grīd'iron, a grated frame for broiling food.

Welsh greiddell, a griddle, of which "gridiron" is a corruption.

Grief, greef (Rule v.), sorrow; plu. griefs (Rule xxxix.)

Grieve, greev, to mourn (Rule li.); grieved, greevd; griev'-ing (Rule xix.), griev'-er, griev'-ance; grievous, gree'vūs; griev'ous-ly, griev'ous-ness.

French grief; Latin gravis, heavy; v. grāvāre, to put to pain.

Griffon or griffin, grīf'fin, a fabulous animal.

French griffon; Latin gryps or gryphus; Greek grups, gen. grupos.

Grill (Rule v.), a grate, to broil; grilled (1 syl.), grill'-ing.

French griller, to broil (gril, i.e., un treillis de fer).

Grilse, grīls, a salmon not fully grown. (Scotch.)

Grim, fierce-looking; (comp.) grimm'-er, (super.) grimm'-est (Rule i.); grim'-ly, grim'-ness. Grime (1 syl.), dirt.

Old English grīn or grīmm, horrible in aspect; grīmlīc, grimly.

Grimace, grī.mace' (Fr.), a distortion of face, to make a grimace; grimaced' (2 syl.), grīmāc'-ing (R. xix.), grīmāc'-er.

Grimalkin, grī.māl'.kīn, an old cat.

"Malkin," a Moll or female cat, the male being Tom. When the cat mews, the Witch in "Macbeth" calls out, "I come, Gray-malkin." (i. 1.)

Grime (1 syl.), dirt, to foul with dirt; grimed (1 syl.), grīm-ing (Rule xix.); grim-y, grī'my; grī'mi-ly, grī'mi-ness.

Old English hrūm or hrym, soot; hrūmig or hrymig, sooty.

Grin, grīn, a snarling smile, to smile scornfully; grinned, grīnd. grinn'-ing (R. i.), grinn'-ing-ly, grinn'-er. (See Grind.)

Old English grinn[ian], past grinnode, past part. grinnod.

Grind, grīnd, (past) ground, (past part.) ground; grīnd'-ing, to reduce to powder by friction, to rub [the teeth] together; grind-er; grind-stone, often called grīnd-stone.

Old English grīnd[an], past grand, past part. grunden.

Grip, grīp, a grasp, to fast hold, to give a grip; gripped, grīpt; gripp'-ing (Rule i.), gripp'-ing-ly, gripp'-er.

Gripe, grīpe (R. li.), to grasp; griped, grīp'-ing, grīp'-er.

"Grip," Old Eng. griop[an], to lay hold of; past griopte, p. p. griopt.

"Gripe," Old Eng. grip[an], past grāp, past part. gripen; n. grīpa.

Grisette, grē.zēt' (French), jeune ouvrière coquette et galante.

It means one who wears a gray or russet gown (grisette).

- Grisly, griz'.ly. Grizzly, griz'.ly. Gristly, gris'.ly.
 Grisly, hideous. Grizzly, grayish. Gristly, cartilaginous.
 Grisly; grisli-ness, gris.li.ness, hideousness.
 Grizzly; grizzli-ness, a stubbly state of half-gray hair.
 Gristle; gristli-ness, the state of being cartilaginous.
 "Grisly," Old English gristlic. "Grizzle," French gris, gray.
 "Gristle," Old English gristel.
- Grist, grist, corn for grinding. Bringing grist to the mill, bringing gain or profitable work. (Old English grist.)
- Gristle, gris'l, cartilage; gristly, gris'.ly, cartilaginous; gristli-ness, gris'.li.ness (Rule xi.) (See Grisly.)
 Old English gristel, gristel-bdn, the gristle-bone.
- Grit, grit, the coarse part of meal, sand; gritt'-y (R. i.), gritt'i-ness (R. xi.) Grits, gritz, prepared barley for ptisan.
 Old English gryt, fine flour, mill-dust; grut, wheat or barley meal.
- Grizzle, griz'.z'l, grey [hair] mixed with black; grizzled, griz'.z'ld.
 Grizzly, somewhat gray. Grisly, griz'.ly, hideous.
 Grist-ly, gris'ly, cartilaginous. Grizzli-ness. (Fr. gris.)
- Groan, grōne, a cry of anguish. Grown, increased in size.
 Groan, to utter a cry of anguish; groaned, grōnd; groan-ing, grōne.ing; groan'ing-ly, groan-ful (Rule viii.)
 Old English grān[an], past grānade, past part. grāned; grānung.
- Groat, grawt, an ancient piece of silver coin worth fourpence.
 Our modern coins are called "Four-penny bits or pieces."
 German grot (4d.), a great penny, because prior to the coining of groats by Edward III. our largest silver coin was a penny.
 "Groat" (a small sum), Old English grót or greót, a particle, atom.
- Groats, grōtz, also called grits, oats prepared for ptisan.
 Old English grūt, wheat or barley meal; gryt, fine flour.
- Grocer, grō'.cer, a dealer in grocery. Grosser, grō'.cer, coarser.
 Grocery, phu. groceries, grō'.sē.riz, housekeeper's stores.
 Green-grocer, a dealer in fruits and vegetables.
 German grossirer, a wholesale merchant; French grosserie, wares.
- Grog, grög, spirit and water, originally applied to rum and water cold without sugar; grogg'-y (Rule i.), tipsy; grog'gery.
 Admiral Vernon was called Old Grog because he wore on deck in rough weather a program cloak. He was the first to serve water in the rum on board-ship, and the mixture acquired his nickname.
- Grogram, a coarse stiff taffety. (Ital. grossagrana, Span. gorgoran.)
- Groin, groyn, part of the human body; groined (1 syl.), having an angular curve formed by the intersection of two arches.
- Groom (1 syl.), one who has charge of a horse, to tend and clean a horse; groomed (1 syl.), groom'-ing. Groom of the Stole, keeper of the royal state robes. (Gk. stolē, a robe.)
 Old Eng. guma, a man. Gum-cynn, mankind; Low Lat. grometus.

Groove (1 syl.), a furrow, to furrow. Grove, grōve, a small forest; grooved (1 syl.), groov'-ing (Rule xix.)

Iceland. groof; Old Eng. groue, a grave. "Grove," Old Eng. groef.

Grope, grōpe, to search by feeling. Group, groop, to arrange in batches. Grōped (1 syl.), felt in the dark; grouped, groopt, arranged in a group. Grōp'-ing (R. xix.), searching in the dark; grouping, groop'-ing, arranging in groups. Grōp'-er, one who gropes; group'-er, one who groups.

Old English grōp[ian], past grōpede, past part. grōped.

"Group," French groupe, v. grouper.

Gross, grōse (not grōs), fat, thick, coarse, unrefined, whole or entire, twelve dozen; grōss'-ly, grōss'-ness.

A Gross, 12 doz.; A great Gross, 112 doz.

To sell or buy in the gross, the whole lot just as it comes; by the gross, one whole lot where there are several lots.

Gross weight, the entire weight including casks, dross, &c.

Tare, the weight of casks, packages, and so on.

Trēt, the weight of dross and refuse.

Nēt, the real weight with tare and tret deducted.

To buy or sell wholesale in large quantities [to sell again], as a whole pipe of wine, a whole cargo of goods.

To buy or sell by retail, in small quantities [for use].

Fr. gros; Span. grosero; Ital. grosso; Low Lat. grossum: (venditio in grosso, selling by wholesale); Lat. crassus, fat, thick.

Twelve dozen, French grosse, demi-grosse, six dozen.

Grot, grōt or Grotto, plu. grottos, grōt'.tōze, a garden cave.

Old English grut; Italian grotta; French grotte.

Grotesque, grō.těsk' (French), whimsical, outré; grotesque-ly; grotesque-ness, grō.těsk'.ness.

Outré ornaments such as were employed in the thirteenth century to ornament garden caves and bowers.

Ground (1 syl.), the earth, did grind, to lay on the ground, to stick fast [as a ship in shallow water], to teach the first principles, (in Paint.) the first colour; ground'-ed, ground'-ing; ground'-age, toll for lying in port; ground'-ling, a fish that keeps to the bottom of the water, hence the dregs of the people; ground'-less, without foundation; groundless-ly, groundless-ness. Grounds, dregs, landed property, land in occupation (no sing.)

Ground-floor, the basement floor of a house. The first-floor, all the rooms above the basement floor. The second floor, the flat over the first-floor.

In France the ground-floor is called "le rez-de-chaussée"=le rēl shō'.sy, above which is a low flat called the "entre-sol," and the floors (étages) begin from the entre-sol. Thus persons who live "au premier" (o prēm'.e.ay) occupy the first flat above the entre- sol; those who live "au second" (o s'kōne) occupy the second flat above the entre-sol, and so on.

A floor is also called a storey (stōr'ry), but great diversity of opinion exists on the use of this word. Some, like the Americans, call a house with ground floor and a flat above, a "two storey house," and a house with three tiers of windows (above the ground) a "three storey house," while others begin the storey with the first floor, and call a house with two rows of windows a "one-storey house," and a house with ground floor and two flats above it, a "two-storey house." Probably the majority would reckon every row of windows between the basement and the eaves a "storey" (but not a flat.).

To gain ground, to advance. To lose ground, to recede.

Old Eng. grund; grundleas, groundless; groundleaslice, groundlessly.

Groundsel, ground'sēl (not groundsil), the plant sēnēcio.

Old English grund-swelige, the ground-swiller, so called because it greatly infests and impoverishes the soil. Called in Latin senēcio (from sezer, an old man), because of its downy head.

Group (1 syl.), a cluster, to form a groupe. Grope, to feel one's way in the dark; grouped (1 syl.), arranged in group; group-ing, group-er. Groped, grōpt, searched for in the dark; grōp'-ing (Rule xix.), grōp'-er.

French groupe, v. grouper. "Grobe," Old English grōp[ian].

Grouse, grōuce, the heath-cock. Grows, grōze, doth grow.

Grout, coarse meal, plaster for walls, to grout; grout'-ing.

Old English grūt, wheat or barley meal, grout.

Grove, grōve, a small forest. Groove, grōov, a channel.

Old Eng. groef; Low Latin grova (a grove). Icelandic groof, a groove.

Grovel, grōv'l, to act meanly; grōv'elled (2 syl.), grōv'ell-er, grōv'ell-ing (R. iii.), part. and adj., mean in character.

Icelandic gruva; Chaucer uses groff, flat on the ground.

Grōw, (past.) grew, (past part.) grown. Groan, grōne [of pain].

Grōw, to increase in size, to vegetate; grow'-ing, grow'-er.

Grōwth, increase from growing.

Old Eng. grōw[an], past grew, past part. grōwen, grownes, growth.

Grōwl, an angry snarl, to grumble; growled (1 syl.), growl'-ing, growl'-ing-ly, growl'-er. (French grouiller, to rumble.)

Grub, a maggot, food (slang), to dig with the hands; grubbed (1 syl.), grubb-ing (Rule i.); grubb'-er.

German grube, a ditch; gruben, to make holes, to dig.

Grudge (1 syl.), reluctance, to feel reluctance; grudged (1 syl.), grudge'-ing (Rule xix.), grudge'-ing-ly, grudge'-er.

Welsh grwgnachu, to murmur; grwgnachiad, a murmuring.

Gruel, grū'ēl (not grüle), oatmeal porridge. (Welsh grual.)

Gruff (R. v.), harsh, surly; gruff-ly, gruff-ness. (Welsh gruff.)

Grumble, grŭm'.b'l, to murmur; grumbled, grŭm'.b'ld; grum'-bling, grum'bling-ly, grum'bler.

Welsh grum, a murmur, with dim. French grommeler, grommelleux.

Grumous, grŭ'.mŭs, clotted. (Fr. grumeleux; Lat. grŭnus.)

Grunt (noun and verb), grunt'-ed, grunt'-ing, grunt'-er.

Old English grun[an]; Welsh grung, to grunt.

Gryphæa, grī.fee'.ah, a sub genus of fossil oysters.

Gryphite, grī'.fite, a specimen of the above sub-order.

Latin gryphites; Greek grupōs, hooked. The beak of the shell is curved (-æa in Geol. denotes a sub-genus).

Guaiacum, gwaī'.a.kŭm, better gwa.ā'.kŭm. (Spanish guayaco.)

Guano, gwāh'.no, the dung of sea-fowls. (Spanish.)

Guarantee, gŭ'rŭn.tee' (occasionally guar'anty), one who warrants to perform a promise, the promise itself, to make the promise; guaranteed, gŭ'rŭn.teed'; guar'antee'-ing. (Words ending with any two vowels, except -ue-, retain both when -ing is added. Obs. only one r.)

A disgraceful French-looking word. We ought to have,

Guarantor, the person who stipulates, the warrantor.

Guarantee, the person to whom the promise is made.

Guarant, the assurance, the warrant.

Guaranty, guarantied, guaranty-ing, the verb.

French garantie, v. garantir.

Guard, gard, defence, a body of men for defence, to protect; guard'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), guard'-ing, guard'-ed-ly.

Guardian, gar'.dī.ăn; guard'ian-ship; guard'-able.

The Guards, the household troops; guards-man, a soldier of The Guards. Van-guard, the guard in advance of the army; Rear-guard, the guard behind the army.

Ital. guardare; Span. guardar; Old Eng. weard, v. weard[ian].

Guava, gwāh'.vah, a tropical fruit. (Spanish guayaba.)

Gudgeon, gŭd'.jŭn, a small fish. (French goujon.)

Guelder-rose, gĕl'.dĕr rōze (not gil'.der), the snowball tree.

The rose de Geldres, i.e., of the ancient duchy of Guelderland (Holland).

Guelphs and Ghibellines, Guelphs and Gib'.ĕl.linz, two factions of Italy (11th to 14th century). The former espoused the papal cause, and the latter the imperial.

At the battle of Weinsberg, in Suabia (1140), Conrad, duke of Franconia, rallied his followers with the war-cry Hie Waihtingen! while Henry, the Lion, duke of Saxony, used the cry of Hie Wolfe (the family names of the two chiefs).

Guerdon, gur'.dŏn, reward. (French guerdon, v. guerdonner.)

Guerilla, gwe.ril'.lah, [war] by skirmishes. (Should be guerrilla.)

Spanish guerrilla, a skirmish (guerra, war, v. guerrear).

Guess (Rule v.), a conjecture, to conjecture; guessed, gĕst (Guest, a visitor); guess'-ing, guess'-ing-ly, guess'-er.

Danish gisse, to guess; Old English gesecg[an], to explain.

Guest, gĕst, a visitor. Guessed, gĕst, discovered by guessing.

Gest, jĕst, a feat. Jest, a joke.

Old Eng. gest, gæst, or gyst; Welsh gwest, a visit; gwestai, a visitor. "Gest," Fr. geste; Lat. gesta. "Jest," Span. chiste, fun, witticism.

Guide, gĭde, a director, to direct; guid'-ed (R. xxxvi.), guid'-ing (R. xix.), guid'-ance, guid'-able; guide-book, guide-less.

Fr. guider; Low Lat. guida; Germ. [weg]weiser, a guide, a leader.

Guild, gĭld, a corporate body. Gild, to cover with leaf-gold.

Old English geld or gild, a society (geldan, to pay). "Gild," gild[an].

Guilder, gĭl'.dĕr, a Dutch "florin." Gilder, one who gilds.

Guile, gĭle, deceit; guile'-ful (Rule viii.), guile'-ful-ly, guile'-ful-ness, guile'-less, guile'-less-ly, guile'-less-ness.

Old English wile, craftiness.

Guillotine, gĭl'.lo.teen (not guilotine), a decapitating machine, to decapitate therewith; guil'otined (3 syl.), guil'otin-ing.

So named from Dr. Joseph Ignace Guillotin, who, in 1791, greatly improved the old Italian mannaja.

Guilt, gĭlt, crime. Gilt, covered with leaf-gold. Guilt-y, gĭlt'.y; guilt'i-ness (Rule xi.), guilt'i-ly, guilt'-less, &c.

"Guilt," Old English gylt, gyltig, guilty. "Gilt," gildede and gilden.

Guinea, gĭn'ny (g hard). A gold coin = 21s., not in use.

Guinea-pig, gĭn'.my pig; guinea-hen, guinea-fowl.

The gold pieces coined of the gold-dust from the Cape Coast Castle, in Guinea (Africa), captured from the Dutch by Sir H. Holmes, 1666.

Guipure, gĭp.pure' (not gwe.pure'), an imitation old lace; guipeuse, gĭp.puze', one who makes guipure; guiper, gĭp'.pĕr, to make guipure; guip'ered (2 syl.), guip'er-ing.

A French corruption of the English word whip.

Guise, gĭze, deceptive dress; guisards, gĭ'.zerts, masqueraders.

French guise; Welsh guisg, dress.

Guitar, gĕ.tar', a stringed instrument of music.

French guitare; Italian chitarra; Latin cithara; Greek kithara.

Gules (1 syl.) In Her. denotes red (represented by upright lines).

French gueules, red; Latin gula, [red like] the gullet.

Gulf, plu. gulfs. (All other words in -lf form their plural by changing -lf to -ves: as "calf," calves; "half," halves; "elf," elves; "self," selves; "shelf," shelves; "wolf," wolves; Rule xxxviii.)

French golfe; Greek kolpos, a bosom or bay.

Gull (Rule v.), a sea-bird, a simpleton, to cheat; gulled (1 syl.), gull'-ing, gull'-ible; gull-ibility, gŭl'.i.bŭl''.i.ty. (-able and -ability would be more consistent.)

Welsh gwylan, a gull or sea-mew. "Gull," to cheat, is very similar to the German bejan (yellow beak), meaning a greenhorn.

Wilbraham says all unfledged nestlings are called gulls, from their yellow skin and beaks. (Anglo-Saxon geolo, yellow.)

Gullet, gŭl.lět, the inside of the throat. (Fr. goulet, Lat. gŭla.)

Gully, gŭl'.ly, a channel for running water; gullied, gŭl'.lid, worn by running water; gully-hole.

French couler, to run; couloir, a strainer, a drain.

Gulp, to swallow in large portions. Gŭlf, a bay.

Gŭlp'-ing, gulp'-ing-ly; gulped, gŭlpt.

Danish gulpe, to gulp, n. gulf. "Gulf," a bay, Greek kōtḗpōs.

Gum, a resin, to smear with gum; gummed, gŭmd; gumm'-ing (Rule i.); gumm'-y, gumm'i-ness (Rule xi.)

The Gums, the fleshy part out of which the teeth protrude.

Latin gummen or gumen, also gummi and gummi.

"The gums," Germ. gaumen, the roof of the mouth; Dan. gumme.

Gün, a fire-arm; gun-bar'el; gun-carriage, -car'ridge; gun-cotton; gun-boat, -bōte; gun-shot, gun-smith, gun-tackle, gun-powder; gunwale, gun'.ēl.

Gunn'-er (Rule i.), one appointed over guns; gunn'-ery.

To blow great guns, to blow very violently.

Welsh gun; Low Lat. gunna; Lat. canna; Gk. kanna, a reed.

Gunter's chain, a surveyor's measure, 66 feet long, (4 poles), divided into 100 links; 100,000 of which forming each side of a square would inclose a acre of land.

So named from Edmund Gunter, of Hertfordshire (1586-1626).

Gurgle, gur'.g'l, to purl; gurgled, gur'.g'ld; gur'gling.

Gargoyle, gur'.goyl, a fantastic stone waterspout.

Italian gorgoglio, a purling; Latin gurgēs, a whirlpool.

"Gargoyle" or gargoyle, French gargouille. (See Gargoyle.)

Gŭsh, a sudden irruption, to rush [as water] suddenly and violently; gŭshed (1 syl.), gush'-ing, gush'-ing-ly.

Gust, a sudden irruption [of wind]; gust'-y.

German gicssen, to gush down.

Gusset, gŭs'.sēt, a triangular gore let into garments.

Welsh cwysed, a gore or gusset; French gousset, a fob or gusset.

Gŭst, a sudden blast of wind, sense of relish; gust'-y, windy; gust'i-ness (Rule xi.), gust'i-ly.

Gust (relish), gŭst'-able; gustatory, gŭs'.ta.tō.ry, pertaining to the organs of tasting. Gusto, gŭce'.to, relish.

Welsh cwthwn, a gust or squall.

"Gust" (relish), Fr. goust now gout; Lat. gustus; Italian gusto.

Gūt, the intestinal canal, to take out the intestines; gūt't-ed (Rule xxxvi.), gūt't-ing (Rule i.); gūts, the stomach.

Old English gut or gutt; German kuttel.

Gutta percha, gūt'tah pēr'tchah (not pēr'kah), a gum resembling caoutchouc (kā.tchook').

Lat. gutta, a drop [from the island] of Pulo Percha.

Gutta serena, gūt'tah sēr'ec'nah, amauro'sis or blindness arising from palsy in the retina.

It was once thought to be due to a transparent watery humour distilling on the optic nerve.

Gutter, gūt'ter, a channel for water; to run down [like the tallow or wax of a candle], to form a gutter; guttered, gūt'terd; gut'ter-ing.

French gouttière (goutte, a drop; Latin gutta).

Guttural, gūt'tur.āl, formed in the throat, a letter formed in the throat (as k, with c and g before a, o, u, as call, cot, cut; gall, got, gun. The sibilant sound of c and the j sound of g before e, i, was introduced by the French after the Conquest; guttural-ly.

French gutturale; Latin guttur, the throat.

Guy, plu. guys (gi, gize), a rope to guide and steady a body while hoisting or lowering, an effigy of Guy Fawkes, one dressed in a ridiculous fashion.

Spanish guia, a guide; v. guitar. The other is from Guy [Fawkes].

Guzzle, gūz'z'l, to drink greedily; guzzled, gūz'z'ld; guzz'ling, guzz'ler. (Ital. gozzoviglia, v. gozzoviglione.)

Gymnasium, djīm.nay'si.um, a school for athletic exercises.

Gymnastics, djīm.nūs'tiks, athletic exercises (Rule lxi.)

Gymnas'tic (adj.), gymnas'tical-ly (adv.)

Gym'nast, one who teaches gymnastics; gymna'siarch.

Latin gymnasium, gymnastic, gymnasticus, from the Greek gymnasion, gymnasiēs, gymnastikōs, gymnasiarcha (gymnos, naked, because these exercises were performed naked).

Gymnosperm, djīm'no.sperm (in Bot.) Applied by Linnæus to certain plants, the seeds of which he erroneously thought to be naked or without pericarp; gymnosper'mous.

Greek gymnos sperma, naked seed.

Gymnotus, djīm.nō'tūs, the electric eel of South America.

Greek gymnos nōtos, naked-back. They have no dorsal fins.

Gynandrian, djīm.ăn'dri.ăn (in Bot.), having stamens inserted in the pistils; gynandria, djīm.ăn'dri.ah, that class of plants which have stamens and pistils consolidated into a "column" (-ia in Bot., a class or order); gynander, djīm.ăn'der, a plant of the above order.

Linnaeus called "stamens" andria, the male organs of plants, from Greek anér, man; the "pistils" he called gynia, the female organs of plants, from Greek guné, woman.

"Gynandria" is guné and anér combined, meaning that the pistils and stamens are consolidated or combined in one column.

Gypsum, djip.süm, plaster of Paris or sulphate of lime.

Lat. gypsum, white lime; Gk. gūpsos. (The y shows it to be Greek.)

Gypsy, ph. gypsies. (See Gipsy.)

Gyrate, dji'.rate, winding, to revolve round a central point; gyrāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), gyrāt'-ing (Rule xix.)

Gyration, dji.ray'.shun, circular motion.

Gyratory, dji'.ra.t'ry, moving with circular motion.

Latin gŕus, a circle; Greek gŕos. (The y shows it to be Greek.)

Gyrfalcon, dji'r'.faw'.kŏn, the large vulture-like falcon.

German geier-fauk, the vulture hawk.

Gyrodus, dji'.rŏ.dŭs, a genus of thick-toothed fossil fishes.

Greek gŕos odous, [the fish with] round teeth.

Gyromancy, dji'.ro.män.sy, divination by walking round and round in a circle.

Greek gŕos manteia, circuit divination.

Gyroscope, dji'.ro.scope, an instrument to exhibit the effects of rotary motion.

Greek gŕŏs skŏpŏs, rotary [motions] I exhibit.

Gyves, dji.vz, fetters; gyved, dji.vd, fettered. (Welsh gefyn.)

- II. The initial h is wholly mute in only three simple words in the language, viz., (1) heir, (2) honest and honour, (3) hour. It is almost mute in three other sets of words, viz., human, humour, and humus.

The three simple words give birth to twelve compounds, in all of which the h is quite mute: thus

1. Heir, heir-ess, heir-less, heir-loom, heir-ship. (See Heir.)

2. Honest, honesty, honestly, with the neg. dis-honest, &c.

Honour, honorary, honourable, honourably, with the neg.

3. Hour, hour-glass, hour-hand, hour-ly.

The three in which the h is almost mute give birth to sixteen or seventeen derivatives in all of which the h is almost mute: for example

1. Human, human-ly, human-ity, human-itarian.

Humane, humane-ly, human-ise.

2. Humour, humour-less, humour-ist, humour-ous, &c.

Humour-some, humoursome-ly, &c., humoral.

3. Humus, humate, humic, humulin.

¶ When h follows initial w, the w is slightly aspirated as in whale, wharf, what, wheel, wheat, wheel, wheeze, whelm, whelp, when, whence, where, wherry, whet, whether, whey, which, who, whom, why, &c.

The loss of the h, like so many other of our irregularities, is due to French influence. There was no mute initial h in the language before the Norman Conquest. Half a century ago many words were similarly emasculated, but good taste has been gradually restoring the aspirate.

Ha! exclamation of surprise. Ha! Ha! laughter. Hah-hah, haw-haw [hedge], a sunk fence.

Old English ha!, ha! ha!, and hæge, a hedge.

Habeas Corpus, hă'.bĕ.əs cor'.pŭs, a writ in law, beginning with these words, one of the greatest securities of liberty.

It provides that the person addressed in the writ shall produce the body of the person accused within twenty days, and prefer a charge against him of having broken some law of the land. If bailable, the person accused may be set free on finding bail, and if the charge is merely vexatious he may be at once released.

Haberdasher, hăb'.er.dash''.er, a dealer in woollen, linen, and other cloths; haberdashery, hăb'.er.dash''.e.ry.

From hapertas, a cloth, the width of which was settled by Magna Charta. A hapertas-er is a seller of hapertas-erie.

Habergeon, hă.ber'.jĕ.ŏn, a coat of mail formed of rings.

French habergeon, from German *hals-bürge*n, to guard the neck.

Habiliment, hă.bĭl'.i.ment, clothing; habiliments, garments.

French habillement, v. habiller, to dress; Latin hăbĭtus, dress.

Habit, hăb'.it. Custom. Habit is the effect of custom, and custom is that repetition which confirms a habit.

Habitual, hă.bĭt'.u.ăl; habit'ual-ly, habit'ual-ness.

Habituate, hă.bĭt'.u.ătĕ; habit'uât-ed (Rule xxxvi.), habit'uât-ing (Rule xix.); habituation, hă.bĭt'.u.ă''.shŭn; habitude, hăb.i.tude.

French habit, habituel, habituate, habitude; Latin hăbĭtus, hăbĭtudo (from hăbĕre, to have). "Custom," French coutume.

Habitable, hăb'.i.ta.b'l, that may be lived in; hab'itable-ness; habitation, hăb'.i.tay''.shŭn; hab'itat, the natural locality of a plant or animal; hab'itancy, legal settlement.

French habitable, habitation; Latin hăbĭtare, hăbĭtatio, hăbĭtat.

Hack, a horse kept for hire, anything used in common, to cut into small pieces, to notch, to mutilate an author's meaning; hacked (1 syl.), hack'-ing, hack'-er.

Hackney, plu. hackneys (not hacknies, Rule xiii.), a horse kept for hire, to use overmuch; hackneyed, hack'.neyd, common, worn out; hack'ney-ing; hack'ney-coach.

French haquenée, a cob-horse. The French were at one time accustomed to let out their cob-horses for hire, and these horses, at a later period, were harnessed to a plain vehicle called a coche-à-haquenie. (Romance haque, a horse; Latin equus.)

"To hack," Old English hacc[an], past haccode, past part. haccod.

Had, did have. (See Have.) Add, to sum together.

I had rather. I had as lief be... These are corrupt forms of I'd rather (I would rather); I'd as lief be... (I would as lief be...). Latin malo (magis-volo), I would rather.

Old English hæfde and hæfd (of habban). "Add," Latin addo.

Haddock, häd'.dök, a fish of the cod kind.

Cod with -ock dim. : Latin gadus, a cod.

Hades, ha'.deez, the abode of the dead in Greek mythology.

Greek Hadēs (from aidēs, invisible; a eidō, not to see).

Our word "hell" is Old English hællan, to be out of sight.

Hadj, häj, the pilgrimage to Mecca or Medina; hadji, häj'i, a Mohammedan pilgrim. (Arab. hadjdj.)

Hadrosaurus or hadrosaurian, plu. hadrosaurians, häd'.ro.saw''.rüs or häd'.ro.saw''.ri.än, plu. häd'.ro.saw''.ri.änz, a huge herbivorous fossil reptile, first discovered in the chalk-marls of Haddenfield, New Jersey, in 1858.

Greek hadrōs saurōs, large or huge lizard.

Hæma- or hema- (Greek prefix), haima, blood.

Hæma-chrome, hē.ma.krome, colouring matter of blood.

Greek haima chrōma, blood colour.

Hæmanthus, hē.män'.thüs, the blood lily.

Greek haima anthōs, blood flower.

Hæmat-emesis, hē.ma.tēm''.e.sis, blood-spitting.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs emēsis, blood vomiting.

Hæmat-ine, hē.ma.tin, the colouring principle of logwood.

Logwood is called hæmatoxylin, blood-wood, from its colour. -ine (in Chem.) signifies a simple substance (haima, blood).

Hæmat-ite, hē.ma.tite, blood-stone, native oxide of iron.

Gk. haima, gen. haimätōs, blood, with -ite, stone-like (Gk. lithos).

Hæmato-cele, hē.ma.to.seel, a bloody tumour.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs kélé, blood tumour.

Hæmato-crya, hē.ma.tök''.ri.ah, cold-blooded animals.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs kruōs, blood-cold [animals].

Hæmato-logy, hē.ma.töl''.o.gy, description of the blood.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs lōgōs, discourse on the blood.

Hæmatos-ine, hē.ma.to.sin, colouring principle of blood.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs, blood, with -ine (in Chem.) a simple principle. The o is short in Greek.

Hæmatos-is, hē.ma.to.sis, the formation of blood.

Greek haimätōs, to make blood. The o is short in Greek.

Hæmato-therma, -to.rher''.mah, warm-blooded animals.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs thermōs, blood-warm [animals].

Hæmato-xyline, hē.ma.tōx''.i.lin, the colouring principle of logwood; hæmatoxylin, hē.ma.tōx''.i.lön, logwood.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs xylōn, blood [coloured] wood.

Hæmat-uria, hē.ma.tu''.ri.ah, discharge of bloody urine.

Greek haima, gen. haimätōs ourōn, blood urine.

- Hæmoptysis, hē.mōp'.tī.sīs, blood expectoration.
 Greek haimo-ptuō, to spit blood (haima, blood).
- Hæmorrhage, hēm'.o.rage, a bleeding or discharge of blood.
 Greek haimorrhagēs, violent bleeding (haima rhēgnūmi, to burst).
 In the compound word the h of rhēgnūmi should be dropped.
 The Greek word is αἱμορραγῆς not αἱμορραγῆς.—(Liddell & Scott.)
- Haft, a handle. Aft, the stern. Halved, harvd, divided.
 "Haft," Old Eng. hæft, from habb[an], to hold; past part. hæfd.
 "Aft," Old Eng. æft, after. "Halved," Old Eng. healf or half.
- Hag, an ugly old woman; hagg-ish (Rule i.), like a hag (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); hagg-ish-ly, hagg-ish-ness. Hagg'is, minced lamb's fry.
 Old English hægesse, a witch; Welsh hagr, ugly. (See Haggis.)
- Hag'gard, gaunt and worn out; hag'gard-ly.
 French hagard (Greek hagios, holy), like a "holy man."
- Haggis, häg'.gīs, a food made of minced lamb's fry.
 Haggish, häg'.gish, like a hag. (See Hag.)
 Scotch haggis; French hachis, hash or minced meat food.
- Haggle, häg'.gl, to chaffer; haggled, hag.g'ld; hagg'ling, hagg'ler. Same as Higgle.
- Hagiographa, häg'.i.ög''.ra.fah, Old Testament "writings"; hagiographal, häg'.i.ög''.ra.fäl; hagiographer, häg'.i.ög''.ra.fēr, a sacred penman; hagiographist, häg'.i.ög''.ra.fist, one versed in sacred scriptures; hagiography, häg'.i.ög''.ra.fy, sacred "writings" [of the Jews].
The Jews divided the Old Testament into three parts, (1) the Law or five books of Moses; (2) the Nevim or prophets; and (3) the Cetuvim or "writings," called in Greek hagiographa.
 Greek hagiographōs, ta hagiographa [biblia], (hagios graphō).
- Hail, Ail. Hale, Ale. Haul, Awl. Hall, All.
Hail, hale, rain frozen in descent, to salute, to call [a coach], to call to, to pour down hail; hailed (1 syl.), hail'-ing, hail-fellow, a companion; hail-stone, hail-storm;
Ail, to be affected with some illness. (Old Eng. egl, v. eglan.)
Hale, healthy, to drag forcibly; haled (1 syl.), hāl'-ing;
Ale, malt liquor. (Old English eala or ealo.)
Haul, hawl, to drag; hauled (1 syl.), haul'-ing, haul'-er;
Awl, a tool for piercing holes. (Old English eal or æl.)
Hall, hawl, the entrance of a house, a mansion;
All, awl, every one, the whole. (Old English æl.)
 "Hail," Old English hagol, hægel, or hagl, hagol-stán.
 "Hale," Old English hāl, healthy, sound; French haler, to drag.
 "Haul," Fr. haler, "Hall," Old Eng. heal, a mansion, a house.
- Hair, Air. Hare, Are. Here, Ere. Hear, Ear. Heir, E'er.
Hair, hare, a sort of wool; hair, a single filament, plu. hairs,

- a definite number of filaments; hair-y, adj. of hair; hair'i-ness; hair-dye, -powder; -sieve, siv; -splitting; Air, the atmosphere; air-y, air'i-ness. (Fr. air; Lat. aer.)
- Hare, a quadruped. (Old English hara.)
- Are, r (not air), Norse plu. of the verb To be.
- Here, hēr, in this place. (Old English hēr or hēr.)
- Ere, air, before in time. (Old English ēr.)
- Hear, hēr, to apprehend by the ear. (Old English hēran.)
- Ear, ēr, the organ of hearing. (Old English ēar.)
- Heir, air, successor to real property. (Latin hæres.)
- E'er, air, contraction of "ever." (Old English ēfre.)
- Hake (1 syl.), a fish, an iron hook. Ache, ake, pain.
Old English hacod, a hakot; and hæcce, a hook.
"Ache," Old English æce or ece, pain.
- Hakeem or Hakim, ha'keem (Arab.), a wise man, a physician.
- Halberd or Halbert, hōl'berd or hōl'bert, a battle axe mounted on a long pole; halberdier, hōl'ber.deer'.
French hallebarde, hallebardier; German hellebarde, hellebardier.
- Haleyon, hāl'sē'on, the kingfisher; hal'cyon days, days of prosperity and calm.
According to Sicilian legend, the kingfisher incubates fourteen days, seven before and seven after the winter solstice, during which time the sea is perfectly tranquil.
Latin halcyon; Greek halkuōn (hals kuō, to breed on the sea).
- Hale (1 syl.), healthy, robust. (Old English hāl.)
- Hale, to drag by force; haled (1 syl.), hāl'ing (Rule xix.), or Haul, hawl; hauled, haul'-ing. (French haler.)
- Ale, malt liquor. (Old English eala or ealo.)
- Hail, rain frozen, to salute. (Old English hægl or hagol.)
- Ail, to be in suffering. (Old English egl, v. eglan.)
- Hall, hawl, a mansion, entrance of a house. (O. E. heal.)
- All, awl, every one, the whole. (Old English æl.)
- Awl, a tool for piercing holes. (Old English eal or el.)
- Half, plu. halves, harf, harvz. (Nouns in -af and -lf form the plural by changing "f" into ves. The only exception is "gulf," gulfs (Rule xxxviii).)
- To halve, harv, to divide; halved, harvd; halv-ing, har'ving.
- Halfpenny, plu. halfpence and half-pennies, hay'pēn.ny, hay'pence, hay'pēn.nīz. "Half-pence" means copper money, either penny or halfpenny pieces; "half-pennies" means two or more half-penny pieces.
- Half and half, a mixture of beer and porter, or ale and porter.
- Half-boarder, a pupil who dines at school, but goes home to sleep. Half-bound, the back and corners in leather.

- Half-blood, born of the same father or mother, but not both.
Half-bred, a mongrel. Half brother, half sister, a brother or sister related by one parent but not both.
Half-caste, half European and half Hindú in parentage.
Half-cock, the lock of a gun raised half-way.
Half-crown, a silver coin equal to 2s. 6d.
Half-dead, -dēd, almost dead, greatly exhausted.
Half-holiday, a school holiday from dinner time to tea.
Half-moon, the moon when half its disc is illuminated.
Half-pay, a reduced pay given to naval and military men.
Half-price, reduction of price to one half.
Half-seas-over, nearly intoxicated.
Half-sovereign, a gold coin worth 10s.
Half-tint, an intermediate tint.
Half-witted, weak in intellect.
Half-yearly, every six months.
 Old Eng. healf, thridde healf, three halves; healf cwic, half alive.
Halibut, hāl' .i. büt, a large flat sea-water fish. (Germ. heilbutte.)
Hall, hawł. Haul, hawł. Awł. All, awł.
Hall, a mansion, entrance to a house; hall-mark, the stamp on gold and silver articles. (Old Eng. heal.)
Haul, to drag by force; hauled (1 syl.), haul'-ing. (Fr. haler.)
Awł, an instrument for piercing holes. (Old Eng. eal or æl.)
All, awł, everyone, the whole. (Old English æl.)
Hallelujah, hāl' .le. lu'' .yah (Heb. halalu Jah, praise ye God).
Halliards, hāl' .yardz, tackle for hoisting and lowering masts.
 A compound of hale, to drag, and yards.
Halloo, Hallow. Holla, Hollo, Hollow. Halo.
Halloo, hāl' .loo', a shout to dogs, to shout...; halloosed (2 syl.), halloo'-ing. (Verbs ending in any two vowels, except ue, retain both when -ing is added, R. xix.) Span. haloo.
Hallow, hāl' .lo, to keep or make holy. (Old Eng. hālgian.)
Holla, hōł' .lah, shout. (French holà; Spanish kola.)
Hollo, hol' .lo', a call to a fellow to stop. (German halloh.)
Hollow, hol' .lo, a mere case, to excavate. (O.E. hol, v. holian.)
Halo, hay' .lo, a luminous circle, "a glory." (French halo.)
Hallow, hāl' .lo; halloved, hal' .lode or hāl' .o.ed; hal'low-ing.
Halloo', halloosed', halloo'-ing, to dogs. (Spanish haloo.)
Hallo, hal' .ler, or hollo, hol' .ler, to shout to; halloed, hāl' .lerd, or holloed, hōł' .lerd; hallo-ing, hāl' .lēr.ing, or hollo-ing, holler.ing (followed by to or after), to call to one with a shout. (German halloh.)

Halloween, hăl'.lo.een', holy eve; Hal'lowmas (Rule viii.)

All Hallows, awl hăl'.loze, i.e., All Saints, Nov. 1. (See Halloo.)

Old English hălgian, past hălgode, past part. hălgod, hălgung.

Hallucination, hăl.hu'.si.nay''.shŭn, delusion of mind.

French hallucination; Latin hallucinatio (hălluz, the great toe).

Halm or haum, harm or horm, a stalk. Harm, injury.

Germ. halm; Fr. chaume; Lat. culmus, a stalk. "Harm," O. E. hearn.

Halo, hay'.lō, a "glory," a luminous circle; haloed, hay'.lode, encircled by a halo. Hallo, hăl'.lō, to call to.

"Halo," Fr. halo; Lat. hălo; Gk. halōs. "Hallo," Germ. halloh.

Halt, hălt, lame, to stop; halt'-ing, limping, stopping; halt'-ed (R. xxxvi.) (Old Eng. healt, v. healt[ian], to limp.)

"Halt" (to stop), French halte; German halte, v. halten.

Halter, hălt'.er, a rope [for horses, for hanging criminals].

Alter, ol'.ter, to change. Altar, ol'.tar, [for sacrifice, &c.]

"Halter," Germ. halter, [a rope] for holding. "Alter," Fr. alterer (Lat. altér, another. "Altar," Lat. altäre (alta ara) Isid.)

Halve, harv, to divide into two equal parts; halved, harvd; halv'-ing (Rule xix.), har'-ving; halves, harvz.

Half, plu. halves, harf, harvz, a moiety. (Old Eng. healf.)

Hăm, the back part of the thigh. Am, part. of the verb to be.

Ham'string, to cut the sinews of the leg; ham'strung, ham'string-ing. Ham'strings, sinews of the thigh.

Old English ham or hamn; ham-elan, to hamstring.

Hamadryad, ham'.a.dri.ad, a tree nymph; plu. ham'adryads or hamadryades, ham'.a.dri'.a.dēez.

Latin hămadryas, plu. hămadryades (Greek hama drus, so called because they are born with their tree and perish with it).

Hamburgh [grapes], Ham'.bur.rak. The city is Hăm'.burg.

Homburg, hŏm'.burg (in Bavaria).

Hamlet, hăm'.let, a small village. (Old Eng. hām, dim. -let.)

Ham'mer, an instrument for driving nails, to hammer; hammered, ham'.merd; ham'mer-ing, ham'mer-er.

Ham'mer-cloth, the cloth which covers a coach-box.

To bring to the hammer, to sell by auction.

Old English hamor, hamor-wyrt, hammer-wort, a herb.

Hammock, hăm'.mŏk, a hanging bed on board ship.

An Indian word: Columbus says, "A great many Indians in canoes came to the ship . . . to barter thoir . . . hamacas or nets, in which they sleep." German hange-matte.

Ham'per, a basket, to perplex, to shackle; hampered, hăm'.-perd; ham'per-ing, ham'per-er.

Low Latin hanaperium, a hanaper; German hapern, to impede.

Hand, the palm with its five fingers. And, a conjunction.

Hand, a suit of cards dealt to one "hand" or player, to deliver; hand'-ed (R. xxxvi.), hand'-ing, hand'-y, (comp.) hand'-er, (super.) hand'-est; hand'-iness, hand'-ily; hand-bill, hand-book; hand's-breadth, four inches; hand-loom, hand-mill, hand-rail, hand-writing.

Hand'ful, plu. handfuls (not handsful), two, three, handfuls means a handful repeated twice or thrice, but two, three, ... handsful means two or three hands all full.

Off hand, impromptu, without delay.

On hand, in the process of being done.

On all hands, on every side.

Come to hand, arrived, received.

To have a hand in, to be partaker in.

To lend a hand, to assist. To strike hands, to confirm.

To take in hand, to undertake.

Old Eng. hand, hand-bræd, hands-breadth; handfull. And, and.

Hand-cuffs, manacles; handcuff, to confine the hands with handcuffs; handcuffed, hand'.kuff; hand'cuffing.

"Handcuffs" has no singular. The rule is this: if a pair is separable, each may be spoken of in the singular number, as a glove, a stocking, a shoe; but if the two articles are joined together there is no singular, as trousers, nutcrackers, handcuffs.

We see feet-warmers announced at the railway stations. As well talk of hand-cuffs, eyes-glasses, and books-binder.

Handicap, hand'.i.căp; the weighting of horses differing in age, &c., in order to place them in a race on an equality.

The word is borrowed from a game of cards somewhat similar to Loo, only the winner is weighted with extra stakes.

Handicraft, hand'.i.krăft, work done by the hand; hand'icraftsman, an artisan; hand'-i-work, work of skill.

Old English handcraft, handicraft; handcraftig, mechanical.

Handkerchief, plu. handkerchieves, hand'.kêr.chief, plu. hand'.kêr.checz. This wretched compound is half French and half English, and the plural is a foolish exception to a general rule, Rule xxxix.

We had an excellent word in the language, handsecate or handscyte, hand napkin, which in every respect is to be preferred.

Old English hand and French couvre chef (ancien mot qui signifie bonnet, chapeau, coiffe de toile de paysanne; bandage pour envelopper la tête. Fleming et Tibbins).

Handle, hănd'l (noun and verb); handled, hănd'ld; hand'ling, hand'ler. (Old Eng. handle, v. handlian, to handle.)

Handsel, hănd'sêl, earnest money, to pay earnest money; handselled, hănd'.sêld; hand'sell'-ing (Rule iii., -EL).

Old Eng. handselen, handsylen, v. handsyllan, to give into the hand.

Handsome, hand'sŭm, beautiful; hand'some-ly, hand'some-ness,

Handy, ready; (comp.) hand'i-er, (super.) hand'i-est; hand'i-ly, hand'i-ness, R. xi. (Old Eng. hand with the adj. suffix -y.)

Hang, to suspend on a gallows; (past and p. p.) hanged (1 syl.)

Hang [nôt on a gallows], (past and p. p.) hung; hung [beef]; hang'-ing. Hang'ings (no sing.); house drapery.

Hang'-er, a short broadsword; hang'er-on, a dependant; hang'man, the public executioner.

Old English hôn, past heng, past part. hangen, to suspend, to crucify.

Hang-nail (corruption of ang-nail), a sore near the nail.

Old English ang-nægle, sore of the nail (ange, a sore, a trouble).

Hanker, to long for. Anchor [of a ship]. Anker [of brandy].

Hän'ker, han'kered (2 syl.), han'ker-ing. (Followed by after or for: "I hanker after fruit" or "for fruit.")

"Hanker," German [nach] hanger, to hanker after.

"Anchor," Latin anchōra (Greek agkūlōs, hooked).

"Anker," a Dutch liquid measure, about thirty-two gallons.

Hän'sard, the books which contain the official printed records of the proceedings of Parliament.

These are printed and published by the Messrs. Hansard. Luke Hansard, the founder, came from Norwich, in 1752.

Hanseatic [league], hän'.se.ät''.ik, a German trade union established in the 13th century, and virtually dissolved in 1630.

The triennial diet was called the Hansa, its members Hansards, from am-see, [towns] on the sea. The league was first called amsee-staaten, free-cities on the sea.

Hau'sel, a reward, gift, bribe, the first money received in a day.

To hansel, to use for the first time; han'selled (2 syl.), han'sell-ing. Han'sel Monday, Monday of the new year.

A corruption of handsyl. Old English handsylen, a giving into one's hand, v. handsyllan, to deliver into one's hand.

Hap, chance, to befall; happed (1 syl.); hap'-ly, by chance; by hap-haz'ard, by mere accident, at random.

Happen, hăp'n, to befall; happened, hăp'.n'ed; happen-ing, hăp'.ning. (Welsh hap, luck, chance; v. hapiaw.)

Hap'py, (comp.) hap'pi-er, (super.) hap'pi-est (Rule xi.); hap'pi-ly, felicitously; hap'ly, fortuitously.

Hap'i-ness (-ness abstract noun), state of enjoyment.

"Happy" means lucky. It is an adjective formed from hap, luck.

Haraŋgue (Fr.), hă.răŋg', a set speech, to make a set speech; harangued, hă.rang'd'; harangu-ing, hă.răŋg'.ing.

(Verbs ending in any double vowel, except -ue, retain both when -ing is added, R. xix.); harangu-er, hă.rang'.er.

Harass, to torment (only one r). Arras, a tapestry curtain.

Harass, har'răs; harassed, har'răst; harass-ing, har'răs-ing; harassing-ly; harass-er, har'răs.er.

French harasser; Greek arassô, to strike against, to dash on.

Harbinger, har'.bîn.djër, precursor, to precede; harbingered, har'.bîn.djerd; harbinger-ing, har'.bîn.djer.ing.

A "harbinger" is one sent forward to provide for an army on the march. Old English here-bergan, to lodge the army.

Harbour, har'.bôr, a haven. Ar'bour, a bower.

Har'bour, to shelter; har'boured (2 syl.), har'bour-ing, har'bour-er; harbourage, har'.bôr.age.

Old English here-beorga, a station where an army on march rested, v. here-byrgan, to harbour, to shelter an army on the march.

Hard, (comp.) hard'-er, (super.) hard'-est. Ar'dour, zeal.

Hard, not soft, difficult; hard'-ly, scarcely; hard'-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns means "like.")

Hard'-ness, firmness, solidity. Har'di-ness, boldness.

Hard'-ship (-ship, state of being [hard]); hard-earned, -urnd; hard-fought, -fort; hard-headed, -hëd'.ed; hard-hearted, -har'.tëd; hard-mouthed; hard-ware, metal household goods; hard-water, hard-won, -wûn.

I don't hardly know: Should be I hardly know.

I can't hardly tell: Should be I can hardly tell.

Old English heard, heardë, adv.; heard-heort, hard-hearted; heard-heortnes; heardlic, hardish; heardlice, hardly; heardnes.

Harden, hard'n, to make hard (-en, converts adj. to verbs); hardened, hard'n'd; harden-ing, hard'.ning; harden-er, hard'.ner. (Old English heard[ian], to harden.)

Hard'y, strong in health; (comp.) hard'i-er, (super.) hard'i-est (R.xi.); hard'i-ly, stoutly; hard'i-ness, hard'i-hood (-hood, state, a hardy-state), daring, effrontery. (French hardi.)

Hare, Are; Hair, Air; Here, Ere; Hear, Ear; Heir, E'er.

Hare (1 syl.), a quadruped; (male) buck, (fem.) doe, dō;

hare-bell, the blue-bell of Scotland, the squill;

hare-brained, -braind, giddy, heedless;

hare-lip, a cleft lip; hare-lipped, -lipt;

hare's-foot, hare's-ear, hare's-tail grass, hare-wort (plants).

Old English hara, a hare; hare-fōt, hare-wyrt, &c.

Are, r (not air), Norse plural of the verb To be.

Hair, a sort of wool. (Old English hær.)

Air, the atmosphere. (Fr. air; Lat. aer; Gk. aër.)

Here, hë'r, in this place. (Old English hær or hër.)

Ere, air, before, in time. (Old English ær.)

Hear, hë'r, to learn by the ear. (Old Eng. hýran, hëran.)

Ear, ë'r, the organ of hearing. (Old English cār.)

Heir, air, the successor of real property. (Latin hæres.)

E'er, air contraction of "ever." (Old Eng. æfre, æfer.)

Harem, hair'm, the female apartments in Eastern families, a seraglio. (Arab. harama, to forbid.)

Haricot, har'ri.kō, the French kidney-bean, a ragout.

Fr. haricot (petite fève, ragoût fait avec du mouton et des navets).

Hark, listen (imper. mood). Ark, a coffer, Noah's ship.

Contraction of hearken, Old English heoren[ian].

Harlequin, har'.le.kwīn, the companion of Columbine in pantomimes; harlequinade, har'.le.kwīn.ade', a pantomime especially for harlequin.

French arlequin, arlequinade; Italian arlecchino.

Harlot, a wanton woman, at one time applied to males as well as females, "He was a gentle harlot (stripling) and a kind," Chaucer; harlotry, har'.lo.trī, lewdness.

Welsh herlawd, a tall stripling (lawd, a lad).

Harm, injury, to injure. Arm [of the body], to equip for fight; harmēd (1 syl.), injured. Armed (1 syl.), equipped...; harm'-ing, injuring. Arm-ing, equipping for fight; harm'ful (Rule viii.), injurious. Armful, as much as the arms will hold; harm'ful-ly, harm'ful-ness; harm'-less.

Arm-less, without arms. Harm'less-ly, harm'less-ness.

"Harm," Old English hearm, v. hearm[ian]. "Arm," earm or arm.

"To arm," French armer; Latin armo, n. arma.

Harmattan (Arab.), the hot dry wind of the great desert.

Har'mony, plu. harmonies, har'.mo.nīz, concord.

Harmonise, har'.mo.nīze (R. xxxi.), to agree, to adjust in musical harmony; har'monised (3 syl.), har'monis-ing (R. xix.), har'monist; harmonic, har.mon'īk; harmoni'-cal, harmoni'-cal-ly; harmonics, har.mon'īks (R. lxi.); harmonica, har.mon'ī.kah, a musical instrument.

Harmonious (R. lxvi.), har.mo'ni.ūs; harmoni'-ous-ly, &c.

French harmonie, harmonique, harmonica, harmonieux, harmoniste; Latin harmōnia, harmōnicus.

Har'ness, equipments for horses, armour, to harness [a horse]; har'nessed (2 syl.), har'ness-ing, har'ness-er.

Welsh harnais, v. harneisiaw, harnestwr, a harnesser.

Harp, a musical instrument, to play the harp; harped (1 syl.); harp'-ing, playing the harp, talking constantly on one subject; harp'-er, a minstrel; harp'-ist.

Old English hearp[ian], past hearpode, past part. hearpe; hearp, a harp; hearpere, a male harper; hearpestre, a female harper; hearpstreng, a harp-string; hearpung, a harping.

Harpoon, har.poon', a spear for whaling, to use the harpoon; harpooned' (2 syl.), harpoon'-ing, harpoon'-er.

French harpon, harponner, harponneur.

Harpisichord (not harpsicord), harp'.si.kord, the clavecin.

- Har'py, ply, harpies, har'piz, fabulous winged monsters. NOTE II
 French harpie; Latin harpyia; Greek harpia (harpazo, to ravage).
- Harquebus, harquebuss, harquebuse, and arquebuse, har'kwe-büs or ar'kwe.buz, a fire-arm; arquebusier, ar'kwe.bu-seer', one armed with an arquebuse; arquebusade, ar'kwe.bu.zade', the shot of an arquebuse.
Eau de arquebusade, a lotion for gunshot wounds.
 French arquebuse, arquebusade, arquebusier; Italian arcobugio (arco-buso, a bow pierced with a hole).
- Harridan, har'ri.dän, a worn-out licentious woman.
 French haridelle, a jade, a haridan.
- Harrier, har'ri.er, a dog for hunting hares, a kind of hawk.
 Old English hara, a hare. The word should be haraer.
- Har'row, an instrument used in farming. Ar'row, a dart.
Harrow, har'ro, to rake land with a harrow, to distress acutely; har'rowed (2 syl.), har'row-ing, har'row-er.
 Latin äro, to till land; Greek aröo, to plough or till.
- Har'ry, to pillage, to torment; harried, har'röd; har'ry-ing.
 Old English herian or hergian, past herode, past part. herod.
- Harsh, rough; harsh'-ly, harsh'-ness. (German harsch.)
- Hart, Heart, Art.
Hart, fem. roe, (both) deer, (offspring) fawn.
 Old English heort, the hart; rd, the roe; "fawn," French faon.
Heart, hart, part of the animal body. (Old Eng. heorte.)
Art, a work of human skill. (Latin ars, gen. artis.)
- Harum-scarum, hair'am skair'am, a young scape-grace.
- Har'vest, ingathering of crops, to gather in crops; har'vest-ed (Rule xxxvi.), har'vest-ing, har'vest-er, har'vest-man; harvest-home, harvest-feast; harvest-moon, the full moon when the sun is crossing the equator in the autumn.
 Old English harfest or herfest. Ear'ing, the time of sowing.
- Has (poetical hath), verb have. As, conj. (Greek hös).
 Old English ic habbe thú hafast or hæfst, he hafath or hæfth.
Has is a later form, but goes as far back as the eleventh century.
- Hash, mince, to mince. Ash, a tree. (Old Eng. æsc, an ash.)
Hashed (1 syl.), hash-ing. (French hachis, v. hacher.)
- Hasp, a fastening, to fasten with a hasp. Asp, a venomous worm.
Hasped (1 syl.), hasp'-ing. ("Asp," Lat. aspis; Gk. aspis.)
 Old Eng. hæps, a hasp; v. hæps[ian], past hæpsode, p. p. hæpsod.
- Hassock, häs'sök, a doss. (Welsh hesg, sedges; and -ock dim.)
- Häst, second sing. ind. pres. of have. Häste, hurry.
 Old English ic habbe, thú hafast or hæfst, whence hæ'st, hæ'st.

Hāste (1 syl.), hurry, to hurry; hāst'ed (Rule xxxvi.), hāst'-ing (Rule xix.); hāst'-y, hāst'i-ly (Rule xi.), hāst'i-ness.

Hasten, hāce'n, to make haste (-en converts adj. to verbs); hastened, hāce'n'd; hasten-ing, hāce'ning; hasten-er.

Hasty-pudding, -pood'-ing, flour dropped into hot milk.

French haste now hâte, haster now hâter; German hast, hasten.

Hāt, a covering for the head. At, prep. (See Hate.) Hätt'-er (Rule i.), a seller of hats. Häter, one who hates.

Hätt'-ed, wearing a hat. Hated, hāte'.ed, detested.

"Hat," Old English hæt. "At," æt. "Hate," hætan, n. hête.

Hāth, a brood, to bring forth a brood, to plot; hatched (1 syl.), hatch'-ing, hatch'-er. (See Hatchet.)

Hatches, hāth'-ēz, the coverings over the hatchway.

Hatch'way, an opening in deck to afford a passage up and down. Hatch-bar, a bar for closing the hatches.

German hecke, a brood, v. hecken, [aus]hecken.

"Hatches," Old English hæca, a bar.

Hāth'et, a small axe; hatchet-faced, gaunt with big features.

To take up the hatchet, to make war.

To bury the hatchet, to make peace.

Fr. hachette, figure à hache, hatchet-face; Lat. ascia; Gk. axinē.

Hāth'ment (corruption of achievement), a funeral escutcheon.

French achèvement, from achever, to achieve.

Hāte (1 syl.), detestation. Ate (1 syl.), did eat. Ait, an isle.

Hate, to detest; hāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), hāt'-ing (Rule xix.)

hāt'-er, hate'ful (Rule viii.), hate'ful-ly, hate'ful-ness.

Hā'tred. (See Hat.)

Old English hête, hêtellece, hatefully; v. hæ[ð]ian, hating, a hating.

Hatter, hāt'-er, a maker or seller of hats. (See Hat, Hate.)

Hauberk, haw'-berk, a ringed mail-armour tunic.

Old English healsborga, a shirt of mail (heals, the neck).

Haughty, hor'-ty, (comp.) haught'i-er, (super.) haught'i-est, haught'i-ly, haught'i-ness; hauteur (French), hō.tūr'r.

French hautain (haut, lofty, Latin ortus, from orior, to arise).

Haul, a catch [of fish], to drag by force. Awl, an instrument.

All, adj. Hauled (1 syl.), haul'-ing, haul'-er. (See Hale.)

"Haul," French haler. "Awl," Old English æ[ð]el or awel. "All," æ[ð]el.

Haum, hawm, a stalk. (See Halm.) Harm, injury.

Haunch, harnsh or hawnsh, the part between the ribs and the thigh. (French hanche, the hip; Low Latin ancha.)

Haunt, harnt, a place of frequent resort. Aunt, a parent's sister or sister-in-law. Ant, änt (not aunt), an insect.

Haunt, to resort often to a place, to visit [as ghosts]; haunt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), haunt'-ing, haunt'-er.

"Haunt," Fr. hanter. "Aunt," Lat. amita (am't). "Ant," em't.

Hautboy, hō'boy, a large strawberry, a wind instrument; plu. hautboys, hō'boyz. The instrument is also written oboe.

Fr. haut bois (haut bois, long stalk); Ital. oboe, the mus. inst.

Hauteur (French), hō.tūr'r, insolent haughtiness.

Haut-gout (French), hō'goo', high relish, rich flavour.

Have, hāv, (past) hād, (past part.) hād, hāv'-ing (Rule xix.), to possess, also an auxiliary.

I had rather, a corruption of I'd rather (I would rather, Latin malō, i.e., magis volo).

Old English habb[an], past hæfde, past part. hæfed or hæfd.

Haven, hay'v'n, a harbour. Heaven, hēv'n, paradise.

Old English hæfen, a haven; heofon, heaven.

Haversack, hāv'er.săk, a soldier's knapsack.

French havre-sac (dans lequel les soldats portent leurs hardes).

Havoc, hāv.ŏk, devastation. (Welsh hafog.)

Haw, Awe. Hoar, Oar, O'er, Or. Whore. Horehound.

Haw, the hawthorn berry. (Old Eng. haga, hagathorn.)

Awe, fear arising from reverence. (Old English ége.)

Hoar, hō'r, white with frost or age. (Old English hár.)

Oar, ō'r [of a boat]. (Old English ár.)

O'er, ō'r, contraction of over. (Old English ober or ŏfer.)

Or, conjunction. (Old English oththe.)

Whore, hō'r, a harlot. (O. E. hóre, häre; Welsh huren.)

Hore-hound, corruption of hara-hune, hare's honey.

Hawk, a falcon, a plasterer's tool, to peddle, to clear the throat.

Hawk'ing, sport with hawks, clearing the throat of phlegm, peddling goods; hawked (1 syl.), hawk'-er.

"Hawk" (a falcon), Old English hafoc, hafocere, a fowler.

"Hawk," Welsh hoch, a hawking of phlegm; v. hochi.

"Hawk" (to peddle), German hocken, to take on one's back.

"Hawk" (a plasterer's tool), German hocker, inequality. It is a tool to rub down inequalities and make the plaster smooth.

Hawse, hawz. Hoarse, hō'ree. Horse. Whores, hō'rz.

Hawse, the position of the cables before a vessel moored;

hawse-hole, the hole through which the cable runs;

hawser, haw'zer, a large rope for towing, warping, &c.

"Hawse-hole," Old English hals hole, a neck hole.

Hoarse, having a rough voice from a cold. (Old Eng. hás.)

Horse (1 syl.), a quadruped. (Old English hors.)

Whores, hō'rz, prostitutes. (O. E. hóre, häre; Welsh huren.)

Hawthorn, the hedge thorn. (Old English haga-thorn.)

Hawthorn-dean, haw'.thorn.deen', a species of codlin [apple].

So called from Hawthorn Dean, Roslin, near Edinburgh.

Hay, dried grass. Hey? what say you? Ha! exclamation of surprise. Aye, ā, always. Ay, ah'ē, yes.

Hay-cock, a pile of hay partly made; hay-rick, a hay stack.

"Hay," Old Eng. hæg. "Hey?" Fr. hein? "Ha!" Fr. ha!

"Aye," Old Eng. ā, always. "Ay," Teutonic jā = ya; Fr. oui.

Hazard, hāz'ard (only one z), accident, to adventure; haz'ard-ed (Rule xxxvi.), haz'ard-ing; hazardous, hāz'ar.dūis; haz'ardous-ly, haz'ardous-ness. (Fr. hasard, hasarder.)

Hāze, mist; hāz'-y (Rule xix.), hāz'i-ness, hāz'i-ly.

Welsh hws, a covering; or Old English haso, a livid colour.

Hazel-nut, hay'zēl nūt, nut of the hazel tree.

Old English hæsel-hnut or hæst-hnut, the hazel or cap nut.

He, (poss.) his, (object.) him; fem. she, (poss.) hers, (obj. her; plu. of both, they, (poss.) theirs, (object.) them.

(His, her, their, possessive pronouns used as adjectives.)

He, she, are also used as gender-words: as he-ass, she-ass; he-bear, she-bear; he-devil, she-devil; he-goat, she-goat; she-cat, she-fox or vixen.

He, him; they, them. Unhappily, in our pronouns we have departed from a general rule. The obj. case being different from the nom. has led to endless perplexities.

In the following examples the wrong cases are used.

(1.) He for "him."

Let he that looks after them [mind this]. (Scott.)

All is now made up between you and he (between him).

I saw you and he in the park yesterday (saw him).

Did you know it to be he (it [obj. case]..him).

I always suspected it to be he (it [obj. case]..him).

(2.) Him for "he."

No mightier than thyself or him.

She suffers more than him.

If there is one character baser than another it is him w^{ho}.. (Sir Sydney Smith).

There were thousands who could do as well as him (Nepier).

That must be him, I am sure.

(3.) Them for "they," and vice versa.

A fool's wrath is heavier than them both. (Prov. xxvii. 3.)

They that honour me I will honour (honour..them).

In regard to "but" (except.) and "than," it is quite certain that at one time they were used as prepositions, thus the expressions "than whom," "than me," "than her," "than him," "no one but me," &c., are to be found in our very best authors.

Old Eng. he, gen. his, dat. him, acc. hine. "She," heo, gen. hire, dat. hire, acc. hi. Plu. nom. hi, gen. hira, dat. hem, acc. hi.

(It will be seen that our obj. case is the dat. not the acc.)

Head, hēd, part of the body, to lead. Heed, caution.

Head-ed, hēd'.ed, led. Heed'-ed, regarded.

Head-ing, hēd'.ing, leading. Heed'-ing, regarding.

- Head-less, hĕd'less. Heed'-less, regardless.
- Head-piece, hĕd-piece; head-ship (-ship, office or state); headsmān, hĕdz'mān, an executioner; head'mān', foreman; head'-strong, obstinate; head'-way, movement in advance; head'-wind, contrary wind; [so many] head of cattle, [so many] cattle; head of the table, at the top; neither head nor tail, no consistency [of account]; over head and ears, quite overwhelmed; make head-way.
- Head-y, hĕd'y, affecting the head. Eddy, a whirl.
- Head'i-ly, head'i-ness, obstinacy, rashness.
- head, -hood, suffixes meaning "state," "office," or "personality"; god-head (the god personality); maiden-head (maiden state); child-hood, man-hood, priest-hood, &c.
- Block-head is one who has a "wooden" [stupid] head.
- Fore-head is the "fore" or front part of the head.
- Old English heafod, heafod-mānn; -hād (suffix), -head, -hood.
- Heal, to cure. Heel, of the foot (both heel). Eel, a fish.
- Healed (1 syl.), heal'-ing, heal'-ing-ly, heal'-er.
- Old English hǣlan, past hǣlde, past part. hǣled, hǣling. "The heel," Old English hēl. "Eel," Old English ēl, ēl-nett.
- Health, hēlth; health'-ful (Rule viii.), health'-ful-ly, health'-ful-ness. Health'-y, conducive to health; health'-i-ly (Rule xi.), health'-i-ness. (Old English hǣlth.)
- Heap, heep, a mass, a large quantity, to pile up, to amass; heaped, hept; heap'-ing, to heap up.
- Old English heap, v. heap[ian], past heapode, past part. heapod.
- Hear, Ear; Here, Ere. Heir. (See Hare.)
- Hear, hēr; (past and p. p.) heard, hurd. Herd [of cattle].
- Hear'-ing, hear'-er, hear-say. (See Harken.)
- Ear, ēr, the organ of hearing. Ear'-ing, seedtime. Ear'-ring, ring for the ear. (Old English cār, cār-hring.)
- Here, hēr, in this place. (Old English hēr.)
- Ere, air, before in time. (Old English ēr.)
- Heir, air, the successor of real property. (Latin hæres.)
- Old English hȳr[an], to hear; past hȳrde, past part. hȳred.
- Hearken, hark'n, to listen; hearkened, hark'nd; hearken-ing, hark'ning; hearken-er, hark'ner.
- Old English heore[n]ian, heorenung, a hearkening, &c.
- Hearse, hurse, a carriage to convey coffins to sepulture.
- French herse, a harrow, a frame with spikes to hold candles, one of the hurses mounted on wheels. "Erse," Gaelic.
- Heart, hart, [of the body]. Hart, a male deer. Art, skill.
- Heart-less, hart'-less, without heart. Art'-less, without art.
- Heartless-ly (art'less-ly); heartless-ness (art'less-ness).

Heart-y, har'ty; heart'i-ness, heart'i-ly (Rule xi.)

Heart-ache, har't-ake; heart-sick, heart-sick'ness.

To learn by heart, by rote; by heart, in the memory.

Old English heorte, the heart; heort-ece, heart-ache; heort-seoc, -sick.

"Hart," Old English heort, heort, "Art," Latin ars.

Hearth, harth (not herth'), the stone floor in front of a fire-place; hearth-rug, the carpet for the hearth; hearth-stone, a chalky stone for whitening a hearth. (Old Eng. heorth.)

Heat, heet, warmth; to make warm. Eat, to masticate. Heat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), heat'-ing, warming. Eat'-ing, feeding.

Heat'-er, an iron [for tea-urns, &c.]. Eat'-er, one who eats.

Höt, heated; hüt'-ly, hüt'-ness.

Old English hāt, v. hāt[ian], past hātode, past part. hātod.

Heath, heeth, a plant, a large open waste; heath-y. (Old Eng. hæth.)

Heathen, hē'thēn, a pagan; heathenise (R. xxxi.), hē'thēn.ize; heathenised, hē'thēn.izd; heathenis-ing (Rule xix.);

heathen-ish, hē'thēn.ish (-ish added to nouns means "like");

heathenish-ly; heathenism, hē'thēn.izm, paganism.

Old English hæthen, hæthenise (hæth, a heath), dwellers on the heaths.

"Pagans," dwellers in the villages (Latin pāgus).

Heather, hēth'er, the heath-plant; heathery, hēth'ēry, abounding in heather. (Old English hæth.)

Heave, (past) hove, (past part.) hove [in sight], i.e., appeared.

Heave, (past and p. p.) heaved, [a sigh]. Eve, evening.

To heave-to, heev-too', to bring a ship's head to the wind and stop her motion; (past and past part.) hove-to.

Old English hebb[an], past hóf, past part. hafen, to heave.

Heaven, hēv'n; Haven, hay'v'n; Even, ē'v'n.

Heaven, paradise; heaven-ly, hēv'n.ly; heavenli-ness

(Rule xi.), hēv'n.li.ness; heaven-ward, hēv'n.wr'd (adj.), heaven-directed; heaven-wards (adv.)

Haven, hay'v'n, a harbour. (Old English hæfen.)

Even, ē'v'n, level; evening. (Old Eng. efen, both meanings.)

Old English heofon, heaven (from heofen, elevated or vaulted).

Heavy, hēv'y, weighty; heavi-ly (R. xi.), hēv'i.ly; heavi-ness, hēv.i.ness. (Old English hefig, hefiglic, hefiglice, heavily.)

N.B.—It will be observed that every word (except hearse) beginning with hea- belongs to our native language.

Hebrew, hē'brew; Hebraic, he.bray'ik (adj. of Hebrew);

Hebraical-ly, hē.bray'i.kāl.ly; Hebraicise, hē.bray'i.size;

to convert into Hebrew; Hebraicised, hē.bray'i.sizd;

Hebraicis-ing (Rule xix.), hē.bray'i.size.ing; Hebraism, hē.bray.izm, a Hebrew idiom; Hebraist, hē.bray.ist, a Hebrew scholar; Hebraistic, hē.bray'is'tik (adj.)

"Hebrew," either from Abraham, or Eber great grandson of Shem.

Gk. Hebraïds; Hebraisti (adv.); Lat. Hebraeus; Fr. Hébreu.

Hecatomb, hĕk'.a.tōme, the sacrifice of 100 oxen at a time.

Latin hēcátombe; Greek hēcátōn bous, 100 oxen.

Hectic, hĕk'.tik, a feverish red blush on the cheeks.

Latin hectica; Greek hĕktiké; French hectique.

Hector, hĕk'.tōr, a bully, to bully and bluster; hec'tored (2 syl.), hec'tor-ing. (From Hector, the Trojan hero.)

(It is hard to imagine how this modest, noble-minded patriot came to signify a bully and braggart like Ajax.)

Hedge, a field fence, to make a hedge. Edge, a border.

Hedged (1 syl.), hedg'-ing (Rule xix.) Edged, edg'-ing.

Hedg'-er, hedg'e-less. Edge-less, blunt.

Hedg'e-hog, hedg'e-row, hedg'e-spar'row.

Old Eng. hege, hedg'e-rowe, v. hegian, past hegede, past part. heged.

Heed, care, to regard with care; heed'-ed (R. xxxvi.), heed'-ing, heed'-less, heed'less-ly, heed'less-ness, heed'-ful (R. viii.), heed'ful-ly, heed'ful-ness. (See Head.)

Old English hēd[an], past hēdde.

Heel [of the foot]. Heal, to cure. Eel, a fish.

Heel, to put a heel on a boot, &c., to lie over on one side (said of a ship); heeled (1 syl.), heel-ing.

Heal, to cure; healed (1 syl.), heal-ing, heal'-er.

At one's heels, close by. To take to one's heels, to run off.

Old Eng. hēl. Hēl-heart, heel-hearted, i.e., fearful. (A good word.)

"Heel" (to lay a ship on its side), O. E. hyld[an], to incline, to bend.

"Heal," Old English hæ[an]. "Eel," Old English ēl.

Hegemony, hĕ.gēm'.o.ny, the leading influence of one state over others. (Greek hēgēmōnia, hēgēmōn, a leader.)

Hegira, hĕ.djī'.rah, the epoch of the Mahometan era.

Arabic hadjara, to remove, referring to the flight of Mahomet from Mecca, July 16th, A.D. 622.

Heifer, hĕf'.fēr, a young cow. Steer, a young ox, both calf.

The sire a Bull, the dam a Cow. A steer, 3 years old, Ox.

Old English heafor, steor, bulluca, cū, cūlf.

Heigh-ho! hī'.hō', an exclamation expressive of weariness.

Height, hīte. Length, breadth, depth, but height (not height), elevation from the ground. Hight, hīte, called.

High, hī, elevated; high'-ly, high'-ness.

Heighten, hīte'.n, to make high; heightened, hīte'n'd; heighten-ing, hīte'.ning; heighten-er, hīte'ner.

Old English heāh, high; heāhtice, highly; heāhnes, highness; heātho or hēthe, height. (Our word should be heighth.)

"Hight" (to call or name), Old Eng. hāt[an], past hätte, p. p. hätt.

Heinous, hay'.nūs (not hē'nūs), atrocious; heinous-ly, hay'-.nūs.ly; heinous-ness. (French haineux, haine.)

Heir, (fem.) heir-ess, air, air'-ess. (One of the three simple words which lose the initial h, the others are honest and honour, with hour (R. xlviii.); heir'-ship (-ship, state or office); heir-loom, something which descends to heirs.

Heir-appa'rent, a direct heir. Heir-presumptive, an indirect heir who will succeed if there is no direct heir.

In the following derivatives the h is resumed.

Heritage, hēr'ri.tage, what is due to an heir.

Heritable, hēr'ri.ta.b'l; heritor, hēr'rī.tor.

Hereditable, he.rēd'.i.ta.b'l; hered'itably; hereditament, her'ri.dit''.a.ment; hereditary, he.rēd'.i.ta.ry; hered'ity.

Inherit, in.hēr'rit; inher'it-ed, inher'it-ing, inher'itor.

Inheritance, in.her'ri.tance, what an heir inherits.

Latin heres (from hæreo, to stick). Heir-loom is hybrid, "loöm" being the Anglo-Saxon getōma, household goods.

French héritage, héréditaire, hériter, hérétique.

(The same irregularity exists in the French words, thus the "h" is aspirated in héritage, hériter, not in héritier, hérédite, &c.)

Heliacal, he.lī'.a.kāl, emerging from or passing into the sun's light; heli'acal-ly. (Lat. hēliācus; Gk. hēlios, the sun.)

Helianthus, hē'.li.an''.rhūs, the sun flower.

Greek hēlios, anthōs, the flower [picturing] the sun.

Helical, hē'l'.i.kāl, spiral; hēl'ical-ly.

Greek hēlix, gen. hēlikōs, spiral; v. hēlissō, to turn round.

Helio-centric, hē'.li.o.sēn''.trīk, concentric with the sun.

Greek hēlios kētrōn, [having for centre] the sun's centre.

Heliotrope, hē'l'.i.o.trōpe (should be hē'.li.o.trope), a turnsole, supposed at one time to turn always towards the sun.

Greek hēlios trépō, to turn to the sun.

Hēll, the place of future torment. Ell, a measure of length.

Hell'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); hell'ish-ly, hell'ish-ness, hell-hound.

Old English hell, v. hēlan, to conceal. "Hades" is the same, being the Greek aïdos (not haïdos), a-idēs, not seen.

Hellebore, hē'l'.e.bōre, the Christmas-rose, aconite, &c.

Greek hēlēbōrōs (elein bōra, to destroy pasture).

Hellenes, hēl.lee'.neez (not hē'l'.lēn.ēez), the Greeks.

Hellenic, hēl.lee'.nik, adj. of Helle'nes.

Hellenism, hēl.lee'.nīzm (not hē'l'.lēn.īzm), a Greek idiom.

Hellenize, hēl.lee'.nīze (not hē'l'.lēn.īze, Rule xxxii.), to imitate the Greeks; hellenizing, hē'l'.lēn.īze'.ing.

Hellenistic, hē'l'.lēn.īs''.tīk, pertaining to Greek.

Hellenistically, hē'l'.lēn.īs''.tī.kāl.ly, in Greek style.

Greek hēllēnēs, hēllēnikōs, hēllēnizō, hēllēnistēs.

Helm, a rudder, a helmet. Elm, a tree. (Old English ellm.)

"Helm," Old English helma, a rudder; helm, a helmet.

Helmet, hĕl'mĕt; hel'met-ed (Rule iii.), wearing a helmet, v.s.

Helot, hĕl'ot, Spartan serfs; helotism, hĕl'otizm, slavery, the condition of helots; hel'otry, the body of helots.

Greek Heilōtēs, heilōtera, serfdom (from haires, to overpower).

Help, (past) helped or helped, (past part.) helped or helped [holpen, hō'pĕn], assistance, to assist; help'-er, help'-ful (Rule viii.), help'ful-ly, help'ful-ness, help'-less, help'-less-ly, help'less-ness; help-mate, one who renders help to another; help-meet, a wife, I will make a help-meet for him (Genesis ii. 18).

Old English help, v. help[an], past help, past part. holpen.

Helter-skelter, in tumultuous confusion.

Helve (1 syl.), the handle of a hatchet; helved (1 syl.), furnished with a helve. (Old English helf.)

Hem, the edge of a garment sewed down, to sew down the edge, to confine (followed by in), an exclamation.

Hemmed (1 syl.), hemm'-ing (Rule i.), hemm'-er.

Old English hem, a hem or border.

Hema-. See Hæma- for words derived from Greek haima.

Hem'i-, half. (Greek hēmi-; Latin sēmi-; French dem'i.)

Hemicarp, hĕm'i.karp (in Bót.), one portion of a fruit which spontaneously divides into halves. (Greek hēmi-karpos.)

Hemicrania, hĕm'i.kray'nī.ah, pain on one side of the head.

Greek hēmi-krānion, half the head.

Hemicycle, hĕm'i.sī.k'l, a half cycle. (Greek hēmi-kuklōs.)

Hemigamous, hĕ.mig'.a.mūs (in Bót.), having two florets in the same spike, one neuter and the other uni-sexual.

Greek hēmi-gāmōs, half marriage.

Hemiptera, hĕ.mīp'.tĕ.rah, an order of insects including cockroaches, locusts, bugs, grasshoppers, lantern-flies, &c.

Hemipter, plu. Hemipters, hĕ.mīp'.ter, one of the above; hēmip'teral or hemipterous, hĕ.mīp'.tĕ.rūs.

Greek hēmi-ptērōn, half-wing, because half of the upper wings is membranaceous and half crustaceous.

Hemisphere, hĕm'i.sfere, a half sphere; hemispherical, hĕm'i.sfēr'ri.kāl; hem'ispher'ical-ly.

Greek hēmi-sphairā, a half-sphere or ball.

Hemistich, hĕm'i.stīk (often called hĕm'i.stitch), half a stanza, two lines of poetry [in rhyme].

Greek hēmi-stīchōs, half a row or verse.

Hem'lock (corruption of the Old Eng. hemleac, "leac" meaning a herb, whence leactān, a herb garden, leac-wēard).

Hemp, a plant, the fibres thereof; hemp'-en, made of hemp.

Old English heneþ or hæneþ; Latin cannābis, hemp.

Hēn, fem. of cock. In domestic fowls both called poultry; a young hen is a pullet, a young cock is a cockerel. A "pullet" is sometimes called a poult, and a "cock" a bird.

Hen and cock (suffixed or affixed) are also used as gender-words: as cock-bird, hen-bird; cock-pheasant, hen-pheasant; cock-sparrow, hen-sparrow; moor-cock, moor-hen; peacock, pea-hen; turkey-cock, turkey, &c.

Hen-coop, a coop for hens when rearing their young;

Hen-pecked, hēn-pēkt, domineered over by a wife.

Old English hen or henn, coc or cocc. French poulet.

Henbane, hēn'-bane, the hyoscyamus plant.

A corruption of Old English henbelle, belene, belone, or belune. There is no such word as hen-bana, hen-murderer, and the notion of the seeds being fatal to poultry arose from a misapprehension of the word. The Greek word hyoscyamus (huos kūdmōs), hog-bean, throws no light on the meaning.

Hence (1 syl.), from this place. Hens, hēnz, female birds.

Hence'-forth, hence-for'ward, from this time onwards.

From hence, from henceforth; from thence, from thenceforth; from whence. ("Hence," O. E. heonan, hinan.)

"From," in the phrases given above, is redundant, but well-established. There are similar Latin examples: as ex-inde and de-inde; ab-hinc and de-hinc, &c.

Hench'man, a servant. (Old English hīna or hīne, a domestic servant, whence hinemann, a henchman.)

Hepatic; hē-pāt'-īk, pertaining to the liver.

Hepatitis, hē'-pa.tī'-tīs, inflammation of the liver (-itis denotes inflammation).

Latin hēpar, the liver; hēpāticus; Greek hēpar, hēpātikos.

Hepatica, hē-pāt'.i.kah (not hepetica), liver wort.

Gerard says, "It is singular good against the inflammation of the liver." (Latin hēpar; Greek hēpar, the liver.)

Hēp'ta-. (Greek prefix for seven.)

Hēp'ta-chord, a instrument with seven strings. (Gk. chordē.)

Hēp'ta-gōn, a figure with seven angles (Greek gōnia); heptagonal, hēp.tag'.ō.nāl (long o in Greek).

Hēp'tandria, hēp.tān'.dri.ah, plants with seven stamens (Linnaeus called stamens andres, men or the male organs of plants); heptan'drian.

Heptan'gular, a hybrid which should be abolished.

Heptagon is good Greek, and septangular good Latin.

Heptarchy, the seven Saxon kingdoms of England.

Greek hēpta archē, sovereignty [under] seven [rulers].

Her, object. case of She; also a poss. pron., used as an adj. (Nom.) she, (poss.) hers, (obj.) her; plu. (Nom.) they, (poss.) theirs, (obj.) them; herself, (mas.) himself, (plu. both genders) themselves. (See He.)

Old English heo, she; gen. hire, dat. hire, acc. hi; plu. nom. hi, gen. hira, dat. hem, acc. hi. (Our obj. is the old dative.)

Herald, hēr'rald, one to make state proclamations, to proclaim; her'ald-ed (Rule xxxvi.), her'ald-ing, herald-ship.

Heraldry, hēr'rāl.dry, the science of coat-armour.

Heraldic, he.rāl'.dik, pertaining to coat-armour.

Heraldical-ly, he.rāl'.di.kāl.ly, adv.

French héralut, héraldique; Old French hérault; German heralt.

Herb (not erb), a plant with a succulent deciduous stalk; herbage, hēr'.bāge (not ēr'.bage), grass, pasture; herbal, hēr'.bāl, a book about herbs; her'bal-ist, a collector or cultivator of herbs; herbarium, plu. herbaria, hēr.bair'ri.um, hēr.bair'ri.ah, an album or collection of dried plants; herbary, hēr'.ba.ry, a garden of herbs; herbaceous, her.bay'.shus (-e- before "-ous" of concrete nouns, -i- before "-ous" of abstract nouns, R. lxvi.); herbes'cent.

Herbivora, hēr.biv'.o.rah, eaters of herbs; herbivorous, hēr.biv'.o.rūs. Herborise, hēr'.bo.rize (Rule xxxi.), to search for herbs; her'borised (3 syl.), her'boris-ing (R. xix.), her'boris-er; herborisation, hēr'.bo.ri.za''.shūn.

French herbe, herbace, herboriste, herborisation, herboriser; Latin herba, herbaceus, herbārius.

Herculean, her.kū'.le.ăn (not her.ku.lee'.ăn), very great.

Hercules, hēr'.ku.leez, type of strength.

Herculanean, hēr'.ku.lay''.ne.ăn, Hercules-like.

Latin Hercūles, hercūlēs, hercūlāneus; Greek Hēraklēs.

Herd [of beasts]. Heard, herd [v. hear]. Erred, erd [v. err].

A herd of bucks, bullocks, camels, cattle, deer, elephants, harts, horses, oxen, stags, swine, rabble.

A flock of birds, goats, sheep.

A drove of cattle, sheep, horses, going to market.

To herd together, to associate together, like cattle; herd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), herd'-ing; herds'man.

Old English heorde, same word as hoard; v. heord[an].

"Heard," Old English hȳrd[an], past hȳrde, past part. hȳred.

"Erred," French errer; Latin erro, to err, to wander.

Here, hēr; Hear, Ear; Heir, E'er; Hair, Air; Hare, Are.

Here, hēr, in this place; *here-about*s, here-after, here-by, here-in, here-of, here-to (-too), here-unto, here-on; here-upon; here-with, here-withal. (Old Eng. hēr.)

Ere, air, before in time. (Old English ær.)

Hear, hēr, to apprehend by the ear. (Old Eng. hȳr[an]);

Ear, ēr, the organ of hearing. (Old English eār.)

Heir, air, the successor of property. (Latin hæres);

E'er, air, contraction of ever. (Old English æfer.)

Hair, a sort of wool. (Old English hær or hēr);

Air, the atmosphere. (French air; Latin aer.)

Hare (1 syl.), a quadruped. (Old English hara);

Are, r, Norse plu. of the pres. ind. of to be.

Hereditary, hēr.ēd'ī.ta.rī, descending by heirs; hereditari-ly (Rule xi.); hereditable, hēr.ēd'ī.ta.b'l; hereditament, hēr'ri.dīt'.a.ment, any property which may be inherited; her'itage; her'itor, owner of parish lands (Scotland).

Inherit, in.hēr'rit; inher'it-or, inher'itrix, inher'it-able; inheritance, in.hēr'ri.tance, property inherited.

In the above the "h" is aspirated. In the following it is dropped:

Heir, air; heir'-ess, heir'-less, heir'-ship, heir'-loom.

Latin hereditarius, hereditas, hæres. The same irregularity prevails in French: "H" is aspirated in héritage and hériter, but not in héritier, hérédite, héréditaire.

Heresy, plu. heresies, hēr'ri.sīz, heterodoxy; heretic, hēr'ri.tīk; heretical, hēr.ēt'.ī.kāl; heret'ical-ly.

French hérésie, hérétique; Latin hæresis, hereticus; Greek hairesis, hairetikos (haireo, to choose for oneself, not to receive by faith).

Her'itable, her'itage, her'itor. (See Hereditary.)

Hermaphrodite (not hermophradite), hēr.māf'.ro.dite, a living creature uniting in one the two sexes.

Fr. hermaphrodite; Gk. hērm-aphrōdītōs (Hermes and Aphrōdītēs).

Hermeneutics, hēr'.me.nū''.tīks (R. lxi.), the science of exposition; hermeneutical, hēr'.me.nū''.tī.kāl; hermeneu'tical-ly.

French herméneutique; Greek hērmēneutikōs (hērmēneus, an interpreter, from Hermēs, Mercury).

Hermet'ical, chemical. Hermit'ical, hermit-like.

Hermet'ical-ly sealed, -seald, closed up [like a glass-tube] by fusion; hermet'ic. (French hermétique.)

Hermēs (Mercury) is the fabled inventor of chemistry.

Her'mit (corruption of Eremit), fem. her'mit-ess.

Hermit'ical, hermit-like. Hermet'ical, chemical.

Hermitage, hēr'.mī.tage, the dwelling of a hermit.

French hermite, hermitage; Latin erēmīta, erēmiticus; Greek ērē-mītēs (from ērēmōs, a desert.) Our error is from the French.

Hernia, hēr'.nī.ah, a rupture of some organ through the skin; her'nial (adj.) (Latin hernia, a rupture.)

Hero, plu. heroes, hē'roze (Rule lxii.), fem. heroine, hēr'ro:in; heroism, hēr'ro:izm; heroic, hē.rō'ik; heroidal, hē.rō'ī.kāl; hero'ical-ly, he'ro-wor'ship, idolising celebrities.

French héros, héroïne, héroïsme, héroïque; Latin hērōs, hērōina, hērōicus; Greek hērōs, hērōnē, hērōikōs.

Heron, hēr'rōn, or hern, a game-bird. Her'ring, a fish.

Her'onry, a place where herons congregate and breed.

Hernshaw, the hern at which hawks were flown.

Not to know a hawk from a hernshaw, to be without discrimination, Not to know a "hawk" from the "hern" at which it flies.

French héron. Archaic hernshaw, hearneſew, hernsue, herunſew.

Herpes, hēr'pez, a skin disease, the shingles; herpet'ic.

French herpes, herpétique; Latin herpes (Greek herpo, to creep).

Her'ring, a fish. Err'ing, wandering. Heron, a bird (q.v.)

Old English herring, a herring or shoal of fish (here, an army).

"Erring," French errer; Latin erro. "Heron," French héron.

Hers, poss. case of She, (obj.) her. Mas. his, n. he, obj. him.

Hersé (French), hearse, herse, a carriage for the dead.

Hesitate, hēs.i.tate, to doubt, to stammer; hes'itāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), hes'itāt-ing (R. xix.), hes'itāt-ing-ly; hesitation, hēs.i.tay''shūn; hesitancy, plu. hesitancies, hēs.i.tan.siz.

French hésiter, hésitation; Latin hæsītātio, hæsītāre.

"Hesitnde," a state of doubt (Latin hæsītūdo) might be introduced.

Hēt'ēro- (Greek prefix), dissimilar, irregular, diverse.

Het'ero-cephalus, -sēf'.a.lūs (in Bot.), having male and female flower-heads on the same plant. (Greek kēphālē.)

Het'ero-cer'cal, [fishes] having a tail unequally lobed: as dog-fish and sharks. (Greek kērkhōs, a tail.)

Heteroclite, hēt'.e.rōk''.lite, anything anomalous, varying from the ordinary rule. (Greek klītus, a slope.)

Het'ero-dox, heretical; het'ero-dox'ical, not orthodox; het'ero-dox'y, heresy. (Greek dōxa, opinion.)

Heterogamous, hēt'.e.rōg''.a.mūs, where the florets in the same truss are of different sexes; (in grasses) where the parts of fructification are on different spikelets of the same plant. (Greek gāmos, marriage.)

Hetero-geneous, hēt'.ē.ro-djē'nē.ūs, dissimilar; het'ero-ge'neous-ly, het'ero-ge'neous-ness; het'ero-geneity, -djē.nee' i.ty, opposite of homogeneity.

French hétérogène, hétérogénéité; Greek hētērōs gēnōs, another kind.

Hew, Hue, Hugh, Yew, You, Ewe, U.

Hew, you; (past) hewed (1 syl.), (past part.) hewed or hewn, to cut; hew'-ing, hew'-er. Hewn stone,

Hue, you, colour, tint. (Old English heaw or hūw.)

Hugh, you, proper name (Dutch for "high"),

Yew, u, a tree. (Old English iw, the yew-tree.)

You, u, plu. nom. and obj. of Thou. (O. E. ge, dat. ēow.)

Ewe, u (not yōw), a dam among sheep. (O. E. ēowu.)

Old English hēow[an], to hew; past hēow, past part. hēdweni.

Hexa- (Greek prefix for "six"). Greek hex, six.

Hex'a-chord, an inst. with six strings. (Gk. chorda, a string.)

Hex'a-gōn, a figure with six sides and angles; hexagonal, hex.äg'.o.nāl; hexag'onal-ly. (Greek gōnia, an angle.)

Hexa'gynian, hex'.a.gin''.i.an (in Bot.), having six pistils or female organs. (Greek hex gūnē, six female [organs].)

Hexa-hedron, hex'.a.hēd''.ron, a cube or figure with six equal sides; hexa-hed'ral. (Greek hedra, a side, seat, base.)

Hexameter, hex.ām'.e.ter, a verse with six "feet" or poetic beats. (Greek hex metron, six measures.)

Hexandrian, hex.ām'.dri.an (in Bot.), having six stamens; hexandria, hex.ām'.dri.ah. (Greek hex anēr, six men.)

Hexangular, hex.ām'.gu.lar, half Gk. and half Lat., hex'agon is good Gk., sexangular good Lat. (with six angles).

Hexa-petalous, -pēt'.a.lūs, having six petals. (Gk. petālōn.)

Hexapla, hex.āp'.lah, six versions in six different languages of a book. (Greek hex-haplōs, six-fold.)

Hexa-pōd, plu. hexa-pods, animals with six feet; hexapoda, hex.āp'.o.dah, the genus. (Greek pous, gen. pōdos.)

Hey? what say you? Hay, dried grass. (Old Eng. hēg, hīg.)

Heyday! an exclamation of pleasurable surprise, frolic, wildness: as the heyday of youth.

"Heyday!" German heida. "Heyday" (frolicsome time), heiditid, the festive-tide, the joyous time [of youth].

hhd, contraction for hogshead; i.e., h [hog], hd [head].

Hiatus (hi.ā'.tus) [in a MS], a gap from loss in the continuity, a difficulty of pronunciation produced by the concurrence of vowels. (Latin hiātus, hiāre, to gape.)

Hibernate, hi'.bēr.nate (not hi.bēr'.nate), to pass the winter in a dormant state or in seclusion; hi'bernāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), hi'bernāt-ing (R. xix.); hibernation, hi'.bēr.nay''.shūn; hiber'nal. (Latin hiberna, v. hibernāre, hibernus.)

Hibernian, hi.ber'.ni.an, Irish, an Irish man or woman.

Hibernicism, hi.ber'.ni.sizm, an Irishism.

Latin Hibernia, Ireland (Iernia); Celtic Iar or Eri, western.

"Erin" is Eri-innis or Iar-innis, western island.

Hiccough (better hiccup), hik'.up (noun and verb); hiccupped, hik'.upt; hiccuph-ing, hik'.up-ing (Rule lxxv.)

Dutch huckup; French hoquet, an imitation word.

Hidal'go (Spanish), a nobleman of the lowest class.

- Hide (1 syl.), the skin of a beast, a measure of land, to conceal.
Ides, between the calends and nones (Rom. calendar).
Hide, to conceal, (past) hid, (past part.) hidd'-en; hid'-ing (Rule xix.), hid'-er. Hied (v. hie). Eyed (v. eye).
 Old English hȳd, a skin, or a measure of land; v. hȳd[an], to conceal.
Hideous, hid'.e.us, horrible; hid'eous-ly, hid'eous-ness.
 Archaic hidous; Norman hidous; French hideux.
 (The -e- of "hideous" was interpolated when the fashion prevailed of pronouncing "d" like "j," as "dew" = jew; "odious" = o.jus, so "hideous" = hid.jus, etc.)
Hie, hi, to hasten. High, hi, elevated. I, pron. Eye, i.
Hied, hide, hastened. Hide (a skin). Eyed, ide (v. eye); hie-ing, hi'-ing. (Verbs ending in any two vowels, except -ue, retain both when -ing is added.) Eye-ing.
 Old Eng. "To hie," hig[an]. "High," htg or heah "Eye," ēge.
Hierarch, hi'.e.rark, chief priest; hierarchy, hi'.e.rar.ky, the church dignitaries; hierarchal, hi'.e.rar.kāl; hierāt'ic; hierarchism, hi'.e.rar.kizm; hieroc'racy (not -sy).
 Latin hierarcha, hierarchia, hierarchicus (Greek hiērōs archē).
Hieroglyphic, hi'.e.ro.glif''ik (not hi'.ro.glif''ik), a sacred symbol, emblematic; hieroglyphical, hi'.e.ro.glif''i.kāl; hieroglyphical-ly; hieroglyphist, hi'.e.rög''.lɪ.fist.
Hieroglyph, hi'.e.ro.glif, a sacred symbolic word.
 Latin hieroglyphicus; Greek hiērōs gluphō, to carve sacred [words].
Hierogram, hi'.e.ro.gram, a species of sacred writing; hierogrammatic, hi'.e.ro.grām.māt''ik; hierogrammat'ical, hierogrammat'ical-ly; hierogrammatist, -grām''.ma.tist.
 Greek hiērōs gramma, a sacred letter.
Hierophant, hi'.e.ro.fānt, a Greek priest; hierophan'tic.
 Greek hiērōphantēs, hiērōphantikos.
Higgle, hīg'.g'l, to chaffer; higgled, hīg'.g'ld; hig'gling.
Higgler, hīg'.lēr, a hawk of eatables, a caviller.
 Welsh hic, hiced, hoced, a cheating, a tricking; v. hiciaw, hocedu.
Higgledy-piggledy, all in disorder (Rule lxix.)
High, hi, elevated. Hie, hi, to hasten. I, pron. Eye, i.
High, (comp.) high'-er, (super.) high'-est. Hire, hi'r, to borrow. Ire, i'r, anger.
High-ly, hi'.ly; high'-ness; high'-way or high-road, the turnpike; high'-lows, lace-boots; high-treason.
Lord High Admiral, plu. Lords High Admiral.
High Admiral, plu. High Admirals.
High'-way-man, plu. highwaymen, a robber on the high-road.
 Old English htg or heah, heahlice, highly; heahnes, highness.
Highlands, hi'-lands, a district of Scotland. Islands, i'lands;
Highlander, hi'.lān.dēr, a native of the Highlands.

Hilarity, hīl.lər'ri.ty, mirth; hilarious, hīl.lair'ri.ūs, not hīl'.la.rūs (-i-ous for adj. formed from abstract nouns; -e-ous for those formed from concrete nouns, Rule lxvi.)

Latin hilaritas, hilaris, v. hilarare, to make merry.

Hilary term, hīl'.a.ry, a law term beginning about the time of St. Hilary's day, Jan. 13.

Hill, an elevation of land less than a mountain. Hill, not well.

"Hill" retains its double "l" in all compounds except hil-ly.

Hill'-ock, a small hill. (-ock, Old English diminutive.)

Hil'-ly (adj.), hill'-side. (Old English hyll.)

Him, obj. sing. of he the pronoun. Hymn, hīm, a sacred lyric.

Him, (fem.) Her, (nom.) She; (plu. of both) They, (obj.) thēm.

Him-self, fem. herself, (plu. of both) thēmselves.

(For errors of speech see He and I.)

"Him," "her," and "them" are the dative not the acc. cases of the original pronouns: Nom. he, Gen. his, Dat. him, Acc. hine; plu.

N. hi, G. hira, D. him, Ac. hi. So heo, she, G. hire, D. hire, Ac. hi.

"Hymn," Old Eng. hymen; Low Latin hymnus; Greek hymnos.

Hind, fem. of Stag, both Red-deer, a field labourer, (adj.) the back part; hind'-er [part], the part behind (hīn'der, to obstruct); hind'-most, hinder'-most.

Old Eng. hynd, a fem. stag. Hinder, behind. Hind, a labourer.

("Hinder," Ang.-Sax. "hinder," "behind," not the comp. of "hind.")

Hinder, hīn'der, to obstruct; hind' er, the back part; hindered, hīn'derd; hīn'der-ing, hīn'der-er; hinderance, hīn'der-ance, an obstruction.

Old English hīndrian, means to keep back; hinder, back, behind.

Hindoo or Hindū, hīn.doo', a native of Hindūstan.

Hindūism, hīn.doo'.izm, the religion of the Hindūs.

Hindūstani, hīn'.doo.stān'ni, the language of Hindūs.

Hind (Persic). Sind (Sanskrit), black. "Indla," the black country.

Hinge, a joint on which a door or lid moves. To hinge on, to turn on; hinged (1 syl.), hing-ing, hīnj'-ing (Rule xix.)

The Anglo-Saxon word is heor, but our word seems to be derived from the verb hang[an], to hang; German hange, a hinge.

Hinny, a mule, to whinny; hinnied, hīn'.nīd; hīn'ny-ing.

Latin hinnio, to neigh or whinny; hinnus, a mule; Greek ginnōs.

Hint, an indirect allusion, to intimate indirectly; hint'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), hīnt'-ing, hīnt'ing-ly, hīnt'-er.

Hip, the fleshy part of the thigh, the fruit of the dog-rose, an exclamation, as in hip! hip! hurrah (hu.ray').

Hipped, hīpt, melancholy with the meagrimis. (Corruption of hypped, from "hypochondriac.")

Hipp'ish, rather hipped (-ish diminutive).

Old Eng. hyp, the hip; hypbān, the hip-bone. Heope, the hip berry.

Hipomæa, no such word. It is Ipomæa, a sort of bindweed.

Hippocrass, hîp'.po.krās, a spiced wine cordial.

So called from "Hippocrates Sleeve" or woollen bag used as a strainer. (Hippocrates, physician, born at Cos, B.C. 460.)

Hippo- (Greek prefix), a horse. (Greek hippōs, a horse.)

Hip'po-drōme, a horse circus. (Greek dromos, a course.)

Hip'po-griff, half a horse and half a griffin. (Gk. grups.)

Hip'po-pathology, -pā.thōl'.ō.gy, the science of horse diseases. (Greek pathōs lōgōs, disease-treatise.)

Hippophagi, hîp.pōf'.a.gî, eaters of horse-flesh; hippophagous, hîp.pōf'.ā.gūs. (Greek phāgō, to eat.)

Hip'po-pōt'amus, plu. hip'po-pōt'āmi, the sea or river horse. Greek hippōs pōtāmōs, river horse.

Hip'po-therium, plu. hippo-theria, hîp'.po-rhē'rî.um, plu. hîp'.po-rhē'rî.ah, a fossil beast allied to the horse.

Greek hippos thērion, horse-beast.

Hippurites, hîp'.pu.rîtes (better hip.pu'rîtes), fossil bivalve molluscs; hippu'ric [acid]; hip'purite [limestone], limestone abounding in the above

(The -u in these words, representing Greek -ou, is long.)

Greek hippōs oura, horse-tail (-ile, a fossil, Greek tilhos).

Hippuris, hîp.pū'ris, mare's tail. (Greek hippos oura.)

Hire, hîr, wages. Higher, hîr, more high. Ire, îr, anger.

Hire, to borrow on a consideration; Let, to lend on a consideration; hired, hîrd; hir'-ing (Rule xix.), hir'-er; hire'-ling, a mercenary.

Old Eng. hȳr, hire, v. hȳr[ian], past hȳrode, past part. hȳrod, hȳrling. "Higher," Old Eng. hȳra. "Ire," Lat. ira.

Hirsute, hîr'.sûte, covered with hairs, hairy; hirsute'-ness.

Latin hirsutus, hairy.

His, hîz, poss. pers. pron., fem. her, plu. their. Hiss (q.v.)

Hiss, to express disapproval by a dental aspiration; hissed, hist; hiss'-ing, hiss'-er. Hist, silence! His, hîz, pron.

Old Eng. hys[ian], to hiss. "His," hys. "Hist," Norse hysse, to hush.

Hist! hush (Norse hys!). Hissed, hist (v. hiss).

History, plu. histories, hîs'.to.rîz, chronicle of events.

Historian, hîs.tōr'rî.an; historic, hîs.tōr'rîk; historical, hîs.tōr'rî.kāl; histor'ical-ly.

Historiographer, hîs'.to.rî.ōg''.ra.fēr, one employed by a sovereign to write the current history of the realm.

Latin histōria, histōricus, histōriographus (Greek histōria).

Histrion'ic, relating to the stage; histrionical, hîs'.tri.ōn''.i.kāl; histrion'ical-ly; histrionism, hîs'.tri.ō.nîzm.

Latin histrionicus, histrion, an actor; French histrion.

Hobgoblin (not hopgobbling), hɔb.gɔbb'lin, a bogey.

Hobnail, hɔb'.nāle, a nail for shoeing horses or for peasants' highlows. (German hufnagel, a hoof-nail.)

Hɔb'nɔb, to fraternise in drinking; hob'nobbed (2 syl.), hob'nobb'ing. (The b is doubled because "nob" is treated as a monosyllable, Rule i.)

Hɔck, a Rhenish wine, the ham, to cut the hamstring; hocked, kɔkt; hock'-ing. Also spelt hough, hɔk.

Old English hoh or hɔ, the hock or ham.

Hocus, hɔ'.kūs, to cheat; hocused, hɔ'küst; ho'cuss-ing; hɔ'cus-pɔ'cus, a juggling trick, to impose by trick.

An exception to R. iii. Welsh hocusedus, a juggler; hocusedu, to trick. "Hocus-pocus" is said to be a corruption of hoc est corpus, the words used in the Roman Catholic Church in the eucharist.

Hɔd, a dorsel for carrying bricks. Odd, not even.

Hɔd'-man, a labourer who carries the hod.

Germ. holle; Fr. hotte, a hod or dorse. "Odd," Ang.-Sax. other.

Hɔd'den-gray, a coarse cloth of undyed wool.

Hɔd'ge'-pɔd'ge (2 syl.), a medley, a stew of odds and ends.

French hochepot (ragoût fait de bœuf haché, et cuit sans eau dans un pot avec des marrons).

Hoe, hɔ, a garden and field tool. Ho! stop! How (A. S. hú).

Hoe, hɔ (verb), hoed (1 syl.); hoe-ing, hɔ'-ing (verbs ending in any two vowels, except -ue, retain both before -ing); hɔ'-er (R. xix.) (Fr. houe, v. houer. "Ho," Welsh and Fr.)

Hog, a male pig. Boar, the sire. Sow, the dam. Litter, the brood. Farrow, a "litter," to bring forth a litter. Porkers, young pigs for slaughter. Pork, the flesh of pigs.

Hogg'-ish, filthy (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); hogg'ish-ly, hogg'ish-ness.

Hogg'-et, a boar of the second year, a weaned sheep.

Welsh huch, a swine. "Boar," Old Eng. bār. "Sow," O. E. sīg. "Swine," O. E. swīn or swīn. "Litter," Fr. litière (lit, a bed; Lat. lectus), "Farrow," O. E. feorh. "Pork" and "porker," Fr. porc, Lat. porcus, a pig. Hogget, Welsh hogyn, a stripling.

Hogmanay, hɔg'.mā.ny, December; hogmany-night, New-year's eve. (Old English hālig-monāth, holy month.)

Hogshead (written hhd.), a Dutch measure of liquids.

Hoiden, hɔy'dɛn, a boisterous romping girl; hoi'deu-ish, rather boisterous and rude [said of girls].

Welsh hoeden, a flirt, a coquette.

Hoist (1 syl.), to raise, to lift; hoist'-ed (R. xxxvi.), hoist'-ing.

"Hoist" (a corruption of hoise), Fr. hausser, to raise; Germ. hissen.

Hɔity-toity, hɔy'.ty toy'.ty, an exclamation to check over exuberance, or noisy ill-temper, Höld, a grasp, to cling to. Old, advanced in age.

Höld, a grasp, the keelson of a ship, to grasp, to support, to forbear; (past) hëld, (past part.) hëld [höl'den].

Höld'-ing, a tenure, grasping, supporting, &c.

Höld'-er, hold'-fast, höld on, cling to, continue.

Old English heald[an], past heold, past part. healden.

"Hold" (of a ship), Old English hol, a hollow, a cavity.

Höle (1 syl.), an excavation. Whole, hôle, all.

Old English hol, a cavity. "Whole," Old English walg; Greek hōlōs.

Holiday, höl'ī.day, a festival, release from work. Holy-day, hō'.ly.day, a day set apart for religious observances.

Both the same compound word: Old English hālig-dæg.

Holiness, hō'.li.ness, sacredness. His Holiness, the title of the pope. (Old English hālignes. See Holy.)

Holland, höl'.lānd, the Netherlands; Hol'lander, a Dutchman; hol'lands, a superior kind of gin; hol'land, fine linen, originally bleached in Holland.

Holla, Holloa, Hollo, Holloo, Hollow, Halo.

Holla or holloa, höl'.lah, to shout; holloaed, höl'.lard; holloa-ing, höl'.lah-ing. (Verbs ending in any two vowels, except -ue, retain both before -ing.)

Hollo, höl.lō', a shout of surprise, a call. (Fr. ho! là, hola!)

Halloo'! a shout to incite dogs to run after game.

Hollow, höl'.lō, a cavity. (Old English hol.)

Halo, hay'.lo, a luminous ring. (French halo; Latin hālo.)

Hollow, höl'.lō, a cavity, an outside with no solid inside, false, to excavate; höl'lowed (2 syl.), höl'low-ing; höl'low-ness, höl'low-ly, hol'low-eyed. (See Holla.)

Old Eng. hol, a hollow, v. hol[ian], past holede, past part. holed.

Holly, höl'.ly, Wholly, hōle'.ly. Hole'-ly. Holy, hō'.ly.

Holly, höl'.ly, an evergreen. (Old English holegn or hōlen.)

Wholly, hōle'.ly, entirely. (O.E. walg; Gk. hōlōs, the whole.)

Hole'-ly, full of holes. (Old English hol or hole.)

Holy, hō'.ly, sacred. (Old English hālig.)

Hol'lyhock, a tall flowering plant. (Old English holi-hoc.)

Holm, hōlm or hōme, the evergreen oak. Hōme (1 syl.), abode.

Holm or holme, hōme, a river islet: as Stockholm.

"Holm" (the oak), Old English holegn or hōlen, holly or holm.

"Holm" (a river island), Old Eng. holm. "Home," Old Eng. hām.

Holo-, höl'.o- (Gk. prefix), the whole. (Gk. hōlōs, the whole.)

Hōl'o-caust, -korst, a burnt-offering in which the whole was consumed. (Greek hōlo-kaustos, the whole burnt.)

- Höl'o-graph, -gräf, a deed written by the hand of the grantor. (Greek hōlo-graphē, wholly [in] writing.)
- Holoptychius, hōl'ōp.tīk'.i.ūs, a genus of fossil fishes.
Greek hōlo-ptūchē, wholly wrinkled or corrugated.
- Holster, hōl'.ster, a leather case in a saddle for pistols, holstered, hōl'.sterd, provided with holsters.
- Old English heolster, a hiding place.
- Hölt (Ang. Sax.), a wooded hill, a cover. (In names of places.)
- Holy, hō'.ly; Wholly, hōle.ly; Hole'-ly, Holly, hōl'.ly.
- Holy, hō'.ly, sacred; hō'li-ness (Rule xi.), hō'li-ly; hō'ly-day, a sacred day. Holiday, hōl'i.day, a festival, a day of release from business; plu. holidays, hōl'i.dāze.
- Holy of Holies, hō'.ly ōv hō'.līz, part of the Jewish temple.
- Holy Ghost, hō'.ly gōst, the Holy Spirit.
- Holyrood, hō'.ly.rood, a crucifix over the rood-screen.
- Wholly, hōle.ly, entirely. (Old Eng. walg; Gk. hōlōs.)
- Hole'-ly, full of holes. (Old English hol or hole.)
- Holly, hōl'.ly, an evergreen. (Old English holegn.)
Old English hālig, holy; hāligdæg, hālignes, holiness; hālig-water.
- Homage, hōm'.age (not ōm'.age), reverence.
Low Latin homagium (hōmo, a man); French hommage (homme).
- Hōme (1 syl.), place of abode; hōme-ly, plain, like home; home'li-ness (Rule xi.), home'-less, home'less-ness; hōme'brēd, reared at home. Home'-made bread (-brēd), bread made at home. Home'-farm, the fields, &c., contiguous to the farm-house. Home'-sick, pining for home; home-sick'-ness. Home'-spūn, plain, spun at home. Home'-brewed, beer made at home.
- Home-Sec'retary, plu. Home-Secretaries, -sēk're.tū.rīz.
- Home'-stead, -stēd, the ground on which a farm-house stands, the farm-house itself.
- Home-ward, hōme'w'rd (adj.), towards home.
- Home-wards (adv.), in a homeward direction.
Old English hām, hāmes, at home: hāmstede, homestead; hāmweard.
- Homeopathy, hōm'.e.ōp'.a.thī (no compound of home); home-opathist, hōm'.e.ōp'.a.thīst, one who practises homeopathy or curing disease on the principle of "like cures like": as heat to cure a burn, &c. The other system of medicine is Allopathy, āl'.lōp'.a.thī (no compound of all).
"Homeopathy," Greek hōmoios pathōs, [medicine] like the disease.
"Allopathy," Gk. allōs pathōs, [medicine] one thing, disease another.
- Homer, hō'.mer, the great Greek epic poet, his two epics.
- Hōmeric, hō.mēr'rik, like Homer.

Homicide (not homocide), hŏm' i. side, a manslayer; homicidal, hŏm' i. sĭ'' dŭl, murderous.

Latin hŏmĭcida, hŏmĭcidium (hŏmo, gen. hŏmĭnis).

Hŏmo- (Greek prefix), "the same." (Greek hŏmŏs.)

Hŏm'o-centric, -sĕn'. trĭk, having the same centre.

Greek hŏmŏs kĕntrŏn, the same centre.

Hŏm'o-cercal, -ser'. kŭl, having, like herrings and cod-fish, both lobes of the tail alike. (Greek kerkŏs, a tail.)

Hŏm'o-chromous, -krŏ'. mŭs (in Bot.), having all the flowerets of one colour. (Greek chrŏma, colour.)

Hŏm'o-geneous, -djĕ'. nĕ. ŭs, having a uniform structure; hŏm'o-ge'neous-ness; hŏm'o-geneity, -djĕ'. nec'. i. ty, uniformity of structure throughout.

Greek hŏmŏgĕnĕs, hŏmŏs gĕnŏs, the same kind throughout.

Homologous, hŏm. ŏl'. ŏ. gŭs, parts constructed on one uniform plan, but each having its proper function; homological, hŏm'. ŏ. lŏdj'' i. kŭl; homolog'ical-ly.

Greek hŏmŏs lŏgŏs, the same analogy.

Hŏm'o-nym, -nĭm, a word like another in sound, but not in meaning. (Greek ŏnŭma for ŏnŏma, a name.)

Hŏm'o-petalous, -pĕt'. ŭ. lŭs, having all the petals formed alike. (Greek pĕtālŏn, a petal, a leaf.)

Hŏne (1 syl.), a whetstone. One, wŭn, a unit.

Old English hŏn, a whetstone. "One," Old English ĕn or ĕn.

Honest, ŏn'. ĕst, morally upright. (One of the three simple words which drop the h: as heir=air, hour=our, R. xlviii.)

Honest-ly, ŏn'. ĕst. ly; honest-y, ŏn'. ĕs. ty.

(This loss of the h is due to French influence.)

French honneste, now honnĕtĕ; Latin hŏnestas, hŏnestus.

Honey, hŭn'. ĭ, a syrup collected by bees; honeyed, hŭn'. ĭd (not honied), sweet: as honeyed words; honey-comb, hŭn' i. kŏme, the waxen cells in which bees deposit their honey; honey-combed, hŭn' i. kŏmd, punctured all over; hon'ey-moon, the first month after marriage; honey-suckle, hŭn' i. ŭk' l, a climbing plant; honey-wort, hŭn' i. wŭrt.

Old English hunig, hunig-camb, honey-comb; honig sucle.

Honorarium, plu. honoraria, hŏn'. o. raĭr'' rĭ. ŭm, hŏn'. o. raĭr'' rĭ. ah, a douceur to a professional man.

Latin hŏnŏrĕrĭum, a gift to a consul when he came into his province, the "footing" paid on entering office.

Honour, ŏn'. ĕr, rank, rectitude, to respect; honoured, ŏn'. ĕrd; honour-ing, ŏn'. ĕr. ĭng; hon'our-er (Rule xlviii.)

Honorary, ŏn'. o. ra. ry, without emolument. Onerary, ŏn'. e. ra. ry, fitted for burdens.

Honourable, ŏn'. o. ra. bl, deserving honour (Rule xlviii.)

The Right Honourable, title given to cabinet ministers, to earls and countesses, viscounts and viscountesses, barons and baronesses, chief justices, lord mayors, &c.

The Honourable, title of address given to puisne judges, to the younger sons of earls, and to all the sons of viscounts and barons.

Honourably, ɔn'.er.a.b'ly; hon'ourable-ness (Rule xlviii.)

Honours, ɔn'.ɛrz, university final-examination distinction.

Honours of war, the privilege granted to the vanquished of marching past their conquerors with military insignia.

Debt of honour, one incurred by gambling, betting, &c., not recoverable in courts of law.

French honneur !! honorer, honorable; Latin honor, hōndrāpilis.

Hood (to rhyme with good not with food), a covering for the head, to cover the head with a hood; hood'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), hood'-ing, hood'-less.

Hood'-wink, to bamboozle; hood'-winked (2 syl.), hood-wink'-ing. (Old English hōd, "wink" winc[ian]).

-hood (a native suffix), state, condition: as man-hood, priest-hood, child-hood. (Old English hād, state, degree, sex.)

Hoof, plu. hoofs (R. xxxix.), the horny part of the feet of horses, oxen, sheep, &c.; hoofed (1 syl.), having hoofs. (O. E. hōf.)

Hook, a crome, to catch on a hook; hooked (1 syl.), hook'-ing. By hook or by crook, by one way or another, by fair means or by foul. (Old English hōc, hōciht, hooked.)

(N.B. -ook [except in hookah] is always short: as book, brook, cook, crook, hook, look, nook, rook, shook, took.)

Hookah, hoo'.kah, a Turkish pipe.

Hoop, a band for casks. Whoop, a war cry. Hōpe, Ope.

Hooped (1 syl.), furnished with hoops; hoop'-er.

(N.B. Unlike -ook, -oop is always long: as coop, droop, hoop, loop, poop, scoop, sloop, stoop, swoop, troop, whoop.)

"Hoop," O. E. hōp. "Whoop," wōp. "Hope," hopa. "Ope," open.

Hooping-cough, hoo'.ping-kōf (should be whooping-cough), a cough with a whoop. (Old English wōp or hwēōp.)

Hoot, a shout of contempt, to shout in contempt; hoot'-ed (R. xxxvi.), hoot'-ing, hoot'-er. (Welsh hwchuw, a hoot.)

(N.B. Except in "foot" and "soot," -oot is always long: as boot, coot, hoot, moot, root, shoot. "Foot" rhymes with put, and "soot" is uncertain, being a rhyme to foot, cut, or hoot.)

Hōp, a jump on one leg, a dance, a plant, to jump on one leg; hōp, (past) hopped, hōpt; hōpp'-ing (Rule i.), hōpp'-er.

Old English hopp[ian], to hop or dance; hoppere, a hopper.

"Hop" (plant), German hopfen; French houblon.

Hōpe (1 syl.), expectation, to expect. Ope (1 syl.), to open. Hōp.

Hoped (1 syl.), hōp'-ing (Rule xix.), hōp'-er (of hope).
 Hopped, hōpt; hōpp'-ing (Rule i.), hōpp'-er (of hōp).
 Hōpe'-ful (Rule viii.), hōpe'ful-ly, hōpe'ful-ness.

Old English hōpa, hope, v. hop[ian], past hopode, past part. hopod.
 "Hop," Old English hopp[ian], past hoppede, past part. hopped.

Hopper, hōp'-pēr, the funnel through which grain passes into a mill; so called from its hopping or jerking motion.

Horal, hōr'.al, pertaining to hours. Oral, or'.al, by word of mouth.

Hor'ary, noting the hours. Or'rery, an astronomical toy.

Latin hōra, the hour, hōrārius; Greek hōra.

"Oral," French oral (Latin ōs, gen. ōris, the mouth).

"Orrery," so called in compliment to C. Boyle, earl of Orrery.

Horde, hōrd, a migratory tribe. Hoard, hōrd, a store.

French horde; German horde. "Hoard," Old English heord, a store.

Horehound, a plant. (Old English hara-hunig, hares' honey.)

(There are many similar compounds: as hara-fōt, haresfoot; hara-mint, hare-mint; hara-wyrt, hare-wort, &c.)

Horizon, hō.rī'.zōn (not hōr'rī'.zōn), the line of view where sky and earth seem to meet.

Latin hōrizon (Greek hōrīzō, to mark a boundary, hōros).

Horizontal, hōr'ri'.zōn''.tāl, on a line with the horizon; hori-zon'al-ly; hor'izontal'ity. (French horizontal.)

Hörn, a hard substance projecting from the head of some animals, a musical instrument. Awn, the beard of grass.

Hörn-y; horned, hōrnd or hōr'-nēd; horned-ly, hōr'.nēd.ly;
 horned-ness, hōr'.nēd.nēss; hörn'-er, a worker in horn;
 horn'-ing (said of the moon). Awn'-ing, a cloth cover to protect goods from the sun or weather.

Old Eng. horn, hornleas, hornless. Awn, Lat. arēna; Gk. achnē.

Hornblende, hōrn.blēnd, a mineral. (German hornblende).

Hornet, a large wasp-like insect. (Old English hyrnet.)

Horology, hō.rōl'.o.gy, science of clock-making.

Horologist, hō.rōl'.o.jist; horological, hō.ro.lōdj''.i.kāl;
 horologe, hō'.ro.lōdje, a time-piece; horog'raphy.

Latin hōrologium, hōrōlōgicus; Greek hōra logcs.

Horoscope, hō'r'o.skōpe (in Astrol.), the aspect of the planets at a given time [as at the birth of a child]; horoscopy, hō'rōs.ko.py, divination by horoscopes.

French horoscope; Latin hōroscōpus, hōroscōpium; Greek hōra skōpein, to investigate the hour [of nativity].

Horrible, hōr'rī'.bl (not hōr'rüb b'l), dreadful; horribly, hōr'ri.bly (not hōr'rüb b'ly); hōr'rible-ness.

Horrid, hōr'rid, disagreeable; hor'rid-ly, hor'rid-ness.

Horrify, hōr'rī'.fy, to strike with horror; horrifies, hōr'rī'.fize; hor'rifed, -fide; hor'rify-ing; horrific, hōr'rīf'.ik.

Horror, hōr'ror (not horrou), dread; horrors, a disease so called; horror-stricken, hōr'ror-strik''n.

Latin horribilis, horridus, horrificus, horror (horrere, to set the hair on end); French horrible.

Hors de combat (Fr.), hōr' d' kōne.bah'', disabled in battle.

Horse, hōrce, a quadruped. Hoarse, hō'rse, rough in voice.

Horse, the animal irrespective of sex. Stallion, stāl'yūn, the sire. Mare (1 syl.), the dam. Foal, the infant offspring irrespective of sex. Colt, Filly, male and fem. foal.

Horsed, hōrst, mounted on horseback; horse-shoe, -shoo.

Horse'-laugh, hōrce.lahf, a loud vulgar laugh; horse-leech.

Horse-whip, hōrce.whīp, a whip for a horse, to flog; horse'-whipped, whīpt; horse'-whipp-ing (Rule i., "whip" is treated as a monosyllable), horse'-whipp-er.

Horsemanship, hōrce'.man.ship, the art of a horseman.

The Horse Guards, (sing. "One of the Horse Guards" or "In the Horse Guards,") cavalry household troops.

Old Eng. hors, hors-stēal, a horse-stall. "Hoarse," Old Eng. hās.

"Stallion," Welsh ystalwyn.

"Mare," Old English mære or myre.

"Foal," Old English fola. "Colt," Old English coll. "Filly,"

French filie; Latin filia, a daughter.

Horse-radish, hōrce.rad'-ish (not -rēd'.ish), a pungent root.

The word horse enters into the name of several plants, as horse-bramble, horse-cucumber, horse-mint, horse-vetch, horse-parsley, horse-chestnut. The Greek hippos, a horse, is used also for anything large and coarse, as hippo-krémnos, a horse-cliff, i.e., very steep, &c.; so in Latin hippo-lapathum, hippo-marathrum, wild fennel; hippō-selinum, horse or wild parsley. Compare also horse-play, horse-laugh, horse-faced (having a large coarse face), &c.

Horticulture, hōr'.ti.kūl''.tchūr, the art of gardening; horticultural, hōr'.ti.kūl''.tchūr.āl; horticulturist, hōr'.ti.kūl''.tchūr.ist, one skilled in garden plants.

Fr. horticulture, horticultural. (Lat. hortus cultura, garden culture.)

Hortus siccus, hōr'.tūs sīk'.kūs, a collection of plants dried and sorted. (Latin hortus seccus, a garden of dried plants.)

Hosanna, hō.zān'.nāh, an "Io triumphe!" to Jehovah.

A Hebrew word, meaning "Save, I beseech thee!" but it is now used to signify "Praise!" "Glory be given!"

Hose, hōze. Hoes, hōze, plu. of hoe, a tool. Owes, ōwz (v. owe).

Hose, hōze, stockings. (The plu. hosen, hō'.zen, not in use.)

Hosier, hō'.zhēr, a dealer in stockings. Osier, ō'.zher, willow.

Hosiery, hō'.zhě.ry, stocking-goods.

"Hose," Old Eng. hose, plu. hosan. "Osier," Fr. osier; Gk. oisua.

Hospice, hōs'.pīs, an Alpine convent where travellers are entertained. (Fr. hospice; Lat. hospitum, an inn; hospes, a host.)

Hospitable, hōs'.pī.tā.b'l (not hōs.pī't'.ā.b'l); hospitably, hōs'.pī- tă.b'ly (not hös.pit'.ă.bly); hospitable-ness, hös'.pi.tă.b'l-ness (not hös'.pit'.ă.b'l.ness).

Hospitality, plu. hospitalities, hös'.pi.tăl'.i.tiz.

Hospital, hös'.pi.tăl, an infirmary.

Latin hospitālis, hospitālitās (hospes, a guest); French hospitalité.

Hospodar, hös'.pō.dār (not hospidar), a vassal prince of Turkey.

Höst, fem. hōst'ess, the entertainer of guests. Host, an army, a multitude; the consecrated wafer in the papal church.

Hostel, hös'.těl, now hotel; hostelry, hös'.t'l.ry, an inn.

French hoste, now hôte, a landlord. "Host" (an army), Latin hostes.

"Hostel," Low Latin hostilaria; French hostel, now hôtel.

Hostage, hös'.tāge, a pledge. (French ostage, now otage.)

Hostile, hös'.tīle, inimical; host'ile-ly, hös'.tīl.ly (adv.)

Hostility, plu. hostilities, hös'.tīl'.i.tiz, enmity.

French hostile, hostilité; Latin hostilis, hostilitās.

Hostler, hös'.ler (not ös'.ler), the man who takes charge of the horses at an inn. (Fr. hosteler, now hôteler, the innkeeper.)

Höt, warm; (comp.) hött'-er, (super.) hött'-est (Rule i.)

Hött'-er, warmer. Otter, öt'.tēr, an animal. Ottar [of roses].

Höt-ly, höt'-ness, höt'-house; hot-pressed, höt-prēst.

Heat, heet; heat'-ed, heat'-ing, heat'-er. Eat, &c.

Old Eng. hāt, heat, hot; v. hāt[ian], past hātode, past part. hātod.

"Otter," O. E. ōter. "Ottar," Arab. "Eat," O. E. āt; "eater," āta.

Hotch-potch, a medley. (See Hodge-podge.)

Hotel, hō.těl, a large inn. (French hôtel, for hostel.)

Hottentot, höt'.tēn.tōt, a native of South Africa.

Hough, hök (not höff), the ham, to cut the sinews of the ham. (Of the words in -ough, three are pronounced -ok, viz., hough, lough, and shough, two -off, five -uff, three -ōw, and three -ōw, Rule lxxv.); houghed, hökt; hough'-ing.

Old English hō or hoh, the hough or ham. The word should be pronounced "hōh," slightly guttural, not hök.

Hound, a dog that hunts by scent and gives tongue upon trail or drag. Grayhound (not greyhound), is a dog which will attack a gray or badger without being taught so to do. "Grayhounds" do not use their nose in coursing, like hounds, but their eyes. Harrier, a dog for hares (Old Eng. harra, a hare). Terrier, a fox-dog, &c., so called because it will follow game even to the burrow or earth-hole. (Fr. terre; Lat. tērra; Old Eng. hānd, a hoind.)

Hour, our, sixty minutes of time. Our, belonging to us.

Hour-ly, our'.ly; hour'-hand, hour'-glass.

(This is one of the three simple words in which, from Fr. influence, the h is wholly dropped: as in heir, honour, and honest, R. xlviii.) French heure = eur; Latin hōra; Greek hōra.

Houri, hoo'ry, plu. houris [or houries], hoo'riz, a nymph of paradise in Mahometan mythology. (Arabic huri.)

House, (noun) houce, (verb) hōwz (Rule li.)

House, houce, a dwelling-place; house'-less, house'-hold; house-holds, flour for domestic use; house-maid; house-leek, house-keeper; house-breaker, brāker; house-wife; house-wifery, hūz'if.ry, economical domestic management. Huzzy, a house trull.

House, hōwz, to place under the shelter of a house; housed, hōwd; hous-ing, hōwz'-ing.

Old English hūs, hūs-brice, house-breaking; hūsa, a housemaid.

Housel, hōw'zēl, to give or receive the eucharist; houselled, hōw'zēld; hou'sell-ing (Rule iii.)

Old English hūsel[ian], past hūselode, past part. hūselod, to give or receive the eucharist; hūsel, the eucharist.

Housing, hōw'zīng, depositing in a house, a cloth laid over a saddle; housings, hōw'zīngz, horse-trappings.

"Housing" (in a house), Old English hūs, a house, v. hūs[ian].

"Housing" (a covering), Welsh hws, a housing or covering.

Hōve (1 syl.), as hove in sight, appeared in sight, past tense of heave in seaman's language. (O. E. hóf, past t. of hebban.)

Hovel, hōv'el (not hūv'el), a mean hut; hovelled hōv'ēld, put into a hovel; hōv'ell-ing (Rule iii. -EL).

Old English hóf, a house, with -el, diminutive; Welsh hogyl, a hovel.

Hover, hōv'ēr (not hūv'ēr), to flutter over, to hang about; hovered, hōv'ērd; hov'er-ing, hov'ering-ly, hov'er-er. (Followed by over or about.)

Welsh hōfio or hofian, to hover; hof, that which hovers.

How (to rhyme with nōw, not with grōw), in what manner?

How do you do? i.e., how do you du? (Old Eng. dug[an] valēre = "Quamodo vāles," how do you thrive?)

Howbeit, hōw.bc'it, nevertheless; however, how so; howsoever, hōw'.so.ēv''.er (not hōw'.sām.ēv''.er.)

Old English hū, how; hūgeares, however; (geares, certainly, ever).

Howdah, hōw.dah, a seat fixed on an elephant's back for two or more riders. (Hindūstani haudah.)

Howitzer, hōw.ūt'.zer, a mortar with the trunnions at the middle of the piece, and not at the end.

A corruption of the German haubitze, a howitzer.

Howker, hōw.ker, a Dutch fishing-boat. Hookah, hoo'.kah, a Turkish pipe. Hooker (to rhyme with looker.)

Hōwl (to rhyme with cōwl, not with bōwl.) Owl, a bird.

Hōwl, the cry of a dog, to cry like a dog; hōwled (1 syl.), howl'-ing, howl'-er. (German heulen; Greek hulao.)

How'let, the grey or brown owl. Ow'let, a young owl.

"Howlet," Fr. hulotte. "Owlet," Old Eng. ūle; Lat. ulula.

Hoy! (interjection), stop! a small Dutch vessel.

"Hoy" (a boat), Dutch huy; French heu.

Hoya, hoy'yah, a hothouse wall-flower called the wax-plant, from its waxy appearance. It is of the order Asclepiadaceæ.

Hubbub, hūb'būb, uproar. (Welsh uban, a hubbub, v. ubain.)

Huckaback, hūk'a.bāk (not huckerbuck), toweling.

Hucklebone, hūk'l.bōne, the hip bone. (Germ. höcker, a knob.)

Huckster, hūk'stēr, a pedlar; huck'ster-ing. (-ster, Rule lxi.)

Archaic hucche, a hutch or chest, with -ster.

The German word is hōke, a higgler, v. hōken.

Huddle, hū'd'l, to crowd promiscuously (followed by together); huddled, hū'd'd'l; huddling, hū'd'ling; hudd'ler.

German hudler, a huddler; v. hudeln, to bungle, to muddle.

Hudibrastic, hū'di.brās'tik, in the style of Hu'dibras.

Hue, Hew, Hugh, all hue. You, Yew, Ewe, U, all u.

Hue, hue, tint; hued, heud, tinted; hue'-less.

Hew, to cut; hewed, heud; hew'-ing; hew'-er.

Hugh, hue, a proper name. (Dutch for "high.")

You, nom. and obj. plu. of thou. (Old English cow.)

Yew, a tree. (Old English iw. The ash-tree is cow.)

Ewe, the dam of sheep. (Old English cowu.)

"Hue," hūw or hiow. "Hew," hedw[an], past hedw, past part. hedwen.

Huff, plu. huffs, hūfs (Rule xxxix.), ill-temper, to offend, to fine your adversary at "draughts" for omitting to take a "man"; huffed, hūft; huff'-ing, huff'-er; to take huff, ...offence.

Span. chufar, to mock or bully; O. Eng. hwearf, to make an exchange.

Hūg, an embrace, to embrace; hugged, hūgd; hugg'-ing (Rule i.), hugg'-er. (Welsh ug, that is enveloping.)

Hūge (1 syl.), vast; huge'-ly, huge'-ness. Hugh, a man's name.

Old Eng. hou, a mountain; Germ. hugel, Hugo; Dutch hugh, lofty.

Hūg'-ger-mūg'-ger, in disorder; In hugger-mugger, clandestinely.

Danish hug, to squat; smug, privately, clandestinely ("smuggle").

Huguenot, hew'gue.nōt, protestants of France; hu'guenot-ism.

French huguenot, huguenotisme; German hugenott.

Hūlk, the body of a ship, anything unwieldy, to loiter about; hulk'-y, heavy, stupid; hulk'-ing, unwieldy, loitering about; The Hulks, old ships once used for convicts.

Old English hulc, a cabin; hulce, a light ship.

Hūll, the body of a ship, a husk, to shell, to throw; hulled, hūld; hull'-ing. (Old Eng. hule, a husk; hulc, a ship.)

Hulla-baloo, hūl'.lah ba.loo', an uproar, a confused noise.

French hurle-berlu (hurler berlu, to yell [like] a crazy man).

Hūm, a murmur, a falsehood, to deceive, to sing with the mouth shut, to murmur; hummed, hūmd; hum'm-ing (Rule i.), hum'm'-er; hum'-drum', without animation.

Humble-bee, the buzzing (not the lowly) bee.

German hummen, to hum, to buzz; hummel-bee, the humble-bee.
 "Hum" (a falsehood, to deceive), a contraction of humbug, q.v.

Human, you' man (R. xlviii.), pertaining to mankind; hu'man-ly.

Humane, you' main' (R. xlviii.), compassionate; humane'-ly.

Humanise, you' mā-nīze, to civilise; hu'manised (3 syl.), hu'manis-ing (Rule xix.); hu'manis-er (Rule xxxi.)

Humanity, you' măn.i.ty, benevolence, kindness.

Humanity Studies, -stūd' iz or Humanities, you' măn' i.tiz, classic literature (lit'era humanio' res), so called in opposition to divinity (or lit'era divine).

French humain, humanité, humaniser; Latin hūmānitas, hūmānus.

Humble, hūm' b'l (not um' b'l), lowly, to debase; humbled, hūm' b'ld; hum'bling, hum'bling-ly, hum'ble-ness, hum'bly (not ūm' b'l.ness, ūm' bly). Humble-bee, v. Hum.

Humility, you' mīl' i.ty, lowliness of mind, modesty.

Humiliate, you' mīl' i.āte, to degrade; humil'iāt-ed, humil'iāt-ing (Rule xix.), humil'iāt-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Humiliation, you' mīl' i.ā' shūn, an abasing.

French humble, humilité, humiliation; Latin hūmilitas, hūmiliatio, hūmiliator, v. hūmiliare, hūmilitas.

Humbles, hūm' b'lz for Umbles, ūm' b'lz, the heart, liver, &c., of deer, the huntsman's perquisite; hum'ble-pie for umble-pie, pie made of umbles.

To eat umble-pie, to be humiliated (to be sent from the master's "venison" to the servant's "pie of umbles.")

Latin umbilicus, the insides of anything, the navel.

Humbug, hūm' būg, a pretender, a deceiver, to hoax; hum'-bugged (2' syl.), hum'bugg-ing, hum'bugg-er. (This word is treated as if bug were a separate word, Rule i.)

Irish uim-bog = umbug, soft copper, worthless money, a mixture of bad copper and brass, issued by James I., whence umbug is the opposite of sterling or genuine (F. Crossley).

Humeral, you' mē.rāl. Humoral, you' mō.rāl.

Humeral, pertaining to the hu'mērūs or shoulder;

Humoral, pertaining to the humours or fluids of the body.

Humerus, you' mē.rūs, from the shoulder to the elbow;

Humorous, you' mō.rūs, full of humour or fun.

"Humeral," Fr. huméral, humérus; Lat. hūmērus; Gk. ōmōs.

"Humoral," French humeur; Latin humor, moisture.

Humic, you' mīk [acid], obtained from humus or mould,

Latin humus, mould, moist earth.

Humid, you'.mīd, moist; humid'ity, dampness.

French humide, humidité; Latin hūmidus, hūmiditas.

Humiliate, you.mīl'.i.ate; humil'iāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), humil'iāt-ing (R. xix.); humiliation, you.mīl'.i.a.shŭn; humil'ity.

Humite, you'.mīte, a precious stone of a brown-red tint.

So named after Sir Abraham Hume. (-ite, a stone, Greek lithos.)

Hummock, hŭm'.mŏk, a hillock, a mass of floating ice.

Hammock, hām'.mŏk, a swing bed [on board ship].

"Hummock," hump with dim. -ock: Latin umbo; Greek ambŏn.

"Hammock," Indian hamacas, nets for sleeping on.

Hummums, Persian sweating-baths. (Persian hamman.)

Humour, you'.m'r, moisture, temper, fun, to indulge; humoured, you'.merd; hu'mour-ing, hu'mour-er;

Hu'mour-less, hu'mour-ist; hu'mour-some, you'.mor.sŭm. (-some, Old English "full of.") Hu'mourous, jocose. Hu'merus, from shoulder to elbow; Hu'mourous-ly, you'.mor.ŭs.ly; hu'mourous-ness.

Latin humor, moisture. According to an old theory, there are four principal "humours" in the body, on the due proportion and combination of which a man's temper and disposition depend. The four humours are blood, choler, phlegm, and melancholy.

Hŭmp, a protuberance [on the back]; hump'-back, one with a protuberance on the back; hump-backed, hŭmp-băkt.

Latin umbo; Greek ambŏn. (In Danish humpe is "to hobble.")

Humus, you'.mus, black mould. (Latin hŭmus, mould.)

Hunch, a hump, to elbow; hunched (1 syl.), hunching; hunch-backed, -băkt. Hunk or hunch [of bread], a large slice.

Lat. uncus, bowed; Gk. ogkos, bulk, mass (v. ogkob, to enlarge).

Hundred, hŭn'.drĕd (not hŭn'.derd), ten-times-ten; hun'dredth, hun'dred-fold; hun'dred-weight, -wait (marked cwt., that is, c for centum, a hundred, and wt.), 112 lbs.

Old English hundred, hundrath, hund, hundseald, hundtig.

Hŭng, suspended; hanged, hăngd [on a gallows]; hung-beef, beef salted and dried. (O. E. hang[ian], hangede, hanged.)

Hunger, hŭng'ger, desire for food, to crave food; hungered, hŭng'gĕrd; hunger-ing, hŭng'ger-ing.

Hun'gry, feeling a craving for food; hun'gri-ly (Rule xi.)

Old English hungu, v. hungr[ian], hungrig, hungry.

Hŭnks, a sordid man, a niggard. (Welsh onc.)

Hŭnt, a chase, to chase; hŭnt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), hŭnt'-ing.

Hŭnt'-er, fem. huntress, one who hunts; hunt'-er, a horse for hunting; huntsman (not huntman).

Hunting, Coursing. "Hunting," the pursuit of game by horses and a pack of hounds. "Coursing," searching for

- hares and rabbits chiefly on foot with two hounds held in leash and slipped together.
- Old English huntath, a hunting; huntere, v. hunt[ian], past huntode, past part. hunted, hunted, a hunting.
- Hurdle, hur'dl, twigs twisted into a frame for a fence, to fence with hurdles; hurdled, hur'dld; hurdling.
- Old English hyrde (hyrde, a guard, a guardian, a keeper).
- Hurdy-gurdy, a stringed inst. worked by a wheel and handle.
- "Hurdy," Ital. ordigno, a machine; "gurdy" is guitar with dim.
- Hurl, to cast. Earl, url, an English peer next in rank to a duke.
- Hurled (1 syl.), hur'ling, hur'-er. (Old Eng. hweafa.)
- Hurly-burly, uproar. (Fr. hurli-berlu, yelling of madmen.)
- Hurrah! hoo.ràh! a shout of exultation. (German hurrah!)
- Hurricane, hūr'ri.kain, a storm of wind; hurricano, hūr'ri.kāh.no, plu. hurricanes, hūr'ri.kah.nōze (Rule xlii.)
- This is not a comp. of hurry cane (to carry off the sugar canes rapidly), but the Span. hurican; Ital. oragano; Fr. ouragon (orage, a storm).
- Hurry. Haste. "Hurry" implies haste with confusion or agitation. "Haste" simply implies speed and dispatch.
- Hurried, hur'rid, hastened and flustered; hurries, hur'riz; hurried-ly; hur'ri-er, hurry-ing, hurry-skurry.
- Welsh gyriad, a racing, a forcing on, gyrol, gyru, to hurry on.
- hurst, a copse, a thicket. Erst, formerly.
- Ang. Sax. hyrste, a copse. "Erst," erst, for érest, super. of ér.
- Hurt, injury, to injure; (past) hurt, (past part.) hurt; hurt-ing, hurt'-er; hurt'-ful (R. viii.), hurt'-ful-ly, hurt'-ful-ness.
- Old English hyrt (Italian urto, a blow, v. urtare, to strike).
- Hurtle, hur'tl, to clash together, to jostle; hurtled; hur'tld; hurtling. (French hurter, to run foul of each other.)
- Hurtle-berry, the whortle-berry. (Germ. heidel beere, heath-berry.)
- Husband, fem. wife (1 syl.); (verb) to manage frugally; hus'-band-ed (R. xxxvi.), hus'-band-ing; hus'-band-man, a tiller of the soil. Hus'-band-less, hūz'-band-less.
- Husbandry, hūz'.bān.dry, tillage, domestic economy.
- Old English hūsbonða, not the house band, but the house proprietor or house holder. "Wife," Old English wif.
- Hush, to silence; hushed (1 syl.), hush'-ing. (German husch.)
- Husk, a shale; hūsk'-y, full of husks, hoarse; hūsk'-i-ly (Rule xi.), hūsk'-i-ness. (German hülse, a sheath, a husk.)
- Hussar, hoo.zar', one of the hussars or light cavalry. Huzza!
- "Hussar," Fr. hussard, from the Hungarian housz-ar (20-pay), because to form this corps the Hungarian nobles equipped at their own expense one man out of every twenty families.
- Hussif, hūz'.if, a case to contain needles, cotton, &c. (house.wife).
- Hussite, hūz'.ite, a follower of John Huss of Bohemia.

- Hussy, hűz'.zy, a slattern. (Old English hűsa, a maidservant.)
- Hustings, hűs'.tings, a booth where votes are taken, a platform.
Old English hűsting, a husting, a place of council.
- Hustle, hűs's'l, to push together, to elbow out; hustled, hűs'.s'ld; hustling, hűs'.ling; hustler, hűs'.lěr.
Dutch hutselen, to shake about; Danish husere, to act violently.
- Huswife, hűs'.wife, a thrifty female house manager.
- Hussif, hűz'.if, a needle and cotton case. (O. E. hűs wif.)
- Hűt, a mean cottage, a temporary dwelling, to place in hűts;
hűtt'-ed (Rule i.), hűtt'-ing. (Germ. hutte; Fr. hutte.)
- Hűtch, a rabbit coop, a slight wooden chest. (French huche.)
- Huzza, hoo'zàh', a shout of joy or triumph, to shout with joy;
huzza-ing, huzzaed' (2 syl.) Hűssar', a horse soldier.
"Huzza," German hussah! "Hussar," Bohemian housz-ar.
- Hyacinth, hű'a.sínth, a bulbous flowering plant; hyacinthine, hű'a.sín''thín, purple, like a hyacinth.
French hyacinthe; Latin hyacinthus; Greek huakinthűs.
According to Grecian fable, Hyacinthos was a Laconian youth greatly beloved by Apollo, but accidentally killed by him with a discus.
- Hyads or Hyades, hű'.adz or hű'.ă.deez, a cluster of seven stars, the rising of which (with the sun) was supposed to indicate rain. (Lat. hyădes; Gk. huădēs, v. huű, to rain.)
- Hybrid, hű'.brűd, a mongrel, [applied to words] compounded of different languages as bi-monthly; hybridous, hű'.brűd.űs; hybridism, hű'.brűd.izm.
Hybridise, hű'.brűd.ize; hybridised (3 syl.), hy'brűdis-ing (Rule xix.), hybridisation, hű'.brűd.i.zay''shűn.
French hybride; Latin hybrűda (Greek hubris wanton violence).
- Hydatids or hydatides, hű'.ďă.tűd or hű'.ďăt'.i.deez, small vesicles of water (supposed to be animals) found in dropsical patients, the simplest kind of intestinal worms.
Greek hudătis, plu. hudătűdēs, vesicles of water (hudűr, water).
- Hydr- before vowels, hydro- before consonants (Latin form of the Greek prefix hudr, hudro-); hudűr, water.
- Hydra, hű'.drah, a water-snake. (Lat. hydra; Gk. hudra.)
- Hydr-acid, hű'.drűs'.űd, an acid containing hy'drogen as an essential element. (Greek hudr-; Latin acidus.)
(This hybrid ought not to be tolerated, "aquacid" would be good Lat.)
- Hydr-angea, hű'.drűnge'.ah (the e is to soften the g), a shrub.
Greek hudűr aggos, a water pitcher, which the seed-vessel resembles.
- Hydrant, hű'.drűnt, a pipe for the discharge of water.
Greek hudrainű, to sprinkle water, to irrigate.
- Hydr-ate, hű'.drűte, a compound containing water in chemical combination: thus, slaked lime is a "hydrate of lime."
- Hydraulics, hű'.draw'.űks (R. lxi.), the science which treats of water in motion, the laws by which the motion is regulated; the machines employed, and the effects produced. The science which treats of water at rest is Hydrostatics.

Hydraulic, hī.drauw'.līk (adj.): as hydraulic-press.

Greek hudraulis or hudraulikōs (hudōr aulōs, a water pipe).

Hydro- before consonants, same as hy'dr-. (Gk. hudōr, water.)

Hy'dro-cephalus, -sēf'.a.lūs, water in the head; hy'dro-cephalic, -sēf'.āl''īk. (Gk. hudōr kephālē, water in the head.)

Hy'dro-dynamics, -dī.nām'.īks, the science which treats of water as a force; hy'dro-dynam'ic (adj.)

Greek hudōr dunāmis, water [as] a force.

Hydro-gen, hī'dro.djēn, the gas most prevalent in water.

(Water consists of two volumes of hyd. to one of oxy.)

Greek hudōr gennao, to generate water.

Hydropathy, hī.drōp'.a.ṛhē, the water cure; hydropathist, hī.drōp'.a.ṛhēt; hydropathic, hī.dro.pāth'īk.

Greek hudōr pathos, water [the cure of] disease.

Hydro-phobia, hī.dro.fō'.bī.ah, canine madness.

Greek hudōr phōbōs, water-dread, the dread of water.

Hy'dro-statics, -stāt'.īks (R. lxi.), the science which treats of water at rest: its weight, pressure, specific gravity, &c. (See Hydraulics, Hydrodynamics.)

Greek hudōr stātikōs, water static or at rest.

Hydro-zoa, hī'dro-zō'.ah, living creatures in water.

Greek hudōr zōa, living animals in water.

Hyena or hyæna, hī.ē'.nah, a wild beast of the dog family.

Latin hyæna; Greek huaina (hus, a hog, so called from its mane).

Hygiene, hī'.djēen (not hī'.djeen), health, how to preserve and how to restore it; hygienic, hī'.djē.ēn''īk; hygieist, hī'.djē'.ist. Hygieia, hī'.djē'.ah, the goddess of health.

Greek hugieia, health; hugieinos, pertaining to health.

Hy'gro- (Greek prefix, moist). Greek hugros, moisture.

Hygrometer, hī.grōm'.ē.tēr, an instrument for measuring the quantity of moisture in the air; hygrometry, hī.grōm'.ē.try; hygrometric, hī'.gro.mēt''īk; hygrometrical, hī.grō.mēt'.rī.kāl; hygromet'rical-ly.

Greek hugrōs mētrōn, the measure of moisture.

Hygrology, hī.grōl'.o.gy, treats of the phenomena due to the moisture of the atmosphere, their causes and effects.

Greek hugrōs lōgōs, a treatise on [atmospheric] moisture.

Hygro-scope, hī'.gro.skōpe, an instrument to show the dryness and moisture of the air; hy'gro-scopic, -skōp'.īk.

Greek hugrōs skōpēō, to look at the moisture.

Hygro-statics, hī'.gro-stāt'.īks (Rule lxi.), the science of comparing degrees of moisture.

Greek hugrōs stātikōs, moisture static or at rest.

Hylæo-saurus, hī'.lē.ō.saw''rūs, a fossil wood-lizard.

Greek hylē sauros, wood-lizard. It should be Hylesauros or Hylosaurus. Dr. Mantell's compound is not a good one.

Hylism, hī'.līzm, the theory which regards matter as the principle of evil. (Greek hylē, wood, raw material, matter.)

Hylo-theism, hī'.lo.rhee''īzm, the belief that matter is God; hylo-theist, hī'.lo.rhee''īst, one who believes in hylotheism.

Greek hylē theōs -ism, the doctrine that matter is God.

Hy'lo-zoism, -zō'.īzm, the belief that life is only material organism; hy'lo-zoist, -zō'.īst. (Greek hylē zōē, matter [is] life.)

Hymen, hī'.mēn, the god of wedlock; hymeneal, hī'.mē.nee''āl.
Greek Humēn, Hymen; hymēnaios; Latin Hymen.

Hymenoptera, hī'.mēn.ōp''tē.rah, an order of insects with four membranous wings, like bees, wasps, &c.; hymenop'ter, one of the above order; hymenopterous, hī'.mēn.ōp''tē.rūs.
Greek humēn pteron, membrane wing.

Hymn, hīm, a sacred lyric. Him, obj. sing. of He.

Hymnal, hīm'.nal, a collection of hymns; hymnol'ogy.

Hymn, to praise in hymns; hymned, hīmd; hymn-ing, hīm'.īng; hymnic, hīm'.nīk. (The y points to Greek.)

O. E. hymen; Lat. hymnus; Gk. humnōs, v: humnō, to praise in song.

Hyoscyamus, hī'.ōs.sī''.a.mūs, henbane. (Old Eng. henne-belle).
Latin hyoscydmus (Greek hūs kuāmōs, hog-bean).
Bane is a corruption of Old English belene, betune, or belone.

Hyper-, hī'.pēr- (Gk. prefix), over, above, beyond. (Gk. hyper.)

Hy'per-æsthesia, -ēs.rhee'.zī.ah, morbid sensibility.

Greek hyper aisthēsis, over sensibility.

Hyperbola, hī'.pēr'.bo.lah. Hyperbole, hī'.pēr'.bo.lē:

Hyper'-bola, one of the conic sections or curves;

Hyper-hole, hī'.per'.bo.le (not hī'.per'.bole), exaggeration.

Hyper-boloid, hī'.pēr'.bo.loid, a geometrical solid formed by the revolution of an hyperbola about its axis.

Hyperbolic, hī'.pēr.bōl''āk; hyperbolical, hī'.per.bōl'.i.kāl, exaggerated; hyperbol'ical-ly.

Hyperbolism, hī'.pēr'.bōl'.īzm; hyper'bolist;

Hyperbolise, hī'.pēr'.bo.līze (Rule xxxi.); hyper'bolised (4 syl.), hyper'bolis-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin hyperbole, hyperbolicus (Greek hyper-ballō, to overshoot).

Hyper-borean, hī'.per.bō'.rē.ān, far north.

Latin hyperboreus; Greek hyperbóreios, in the extreme north, [where the "hyperboreans" were supposed to live].

Hy'per-critical, -krīt'.i.kal, over critical; hy'per-crit'ic; hyper-criticism, hī'.per-krīt'.i.sīzm, petty criticism;

Hypo-critical, hîp'.o.krî't'.i.kâl, deceitful; hypo-critical-ly, French hypercritique; Greek hyper kritikôs. (See Hypocrisy.)

Hyper-dulia, hî'.pěr.du'.lî.ah (better -du.lî'.ah), a special service to the Virgin Mary.

Greek hyper douleia or doulia, extreme servitude. "Dulia," in the Roman Catholic Church is an inferior adoration paid to saints, in contradistinction to "latrî'a," the worship paid to deity only.

Hyphen, hî'.fĕn, a short line to join together two parts of a word: as mess-mate; hyphened, hî'.fĕnd, joined by a hyphen.

Lat. hyphen (Gk. hup'hēn, "under one," both belonging to one word).

Hypo-, hîp'.o- (Gk. prefix), under, less in quantity. (Gk. hupō.)

Hypo-chondria, hîp'.o-kôn'.dri.ah, the spaces each side of the epigastric region; hyp'o-chondriac; hypo-chondriasis, hîp'.o-kôn'.dri'.a.sîs, melancholy; hyp'o-chondriac, -kôn'.dri.ăk, one affected with melancholy; hyp'o-chondriacal, -kôn'.dri'.a.kâl; hyp'o-chondriacal-ly; hypo-chondriacism, hîp'.o-kôn'.dri'.a.sîzm, the disease of melancholy.

Greek hupo chōndrōs, under the cartilage or spaces each side of the epigastric region, supposed to be the seat of melancholy.

Hypocrisy, plu. hypocrisies, hî.pōk'.ri-sîz, dissimulation; hypocrite, hîp'.o.krî't, a dissembler.

Hyp'o-crit'ical, deceitful. Hyper-crit'ical, over critical; hyp'o-crit'ical-ly, deceitfully. Hyper-crit'ical-ly.

Latin hypōcrisis, hypōcrita; Greek hupō-krisis, hupō-kritēs, hupō-kritikôs, hupō-krisia (v. hupō-kritōnai).

Hypo-gastric, -gās'.trîk, pertaining to the hypo-gastrium, hîp'.o-gās'.tri.um, or paunch.

Greek hupō-gastrîon, the paunch (hupo gastēr, under the abdomen).

Hypo-phosphite, fōs'.fî't, a compound of hypo-phosphorous acid with a base (-ite [in Chem.] a salt formed from an acid ending in -ous not -ic); hy'po-phosphorous, -fōs'.fō.rūs [acid], an acid which contains less oxygen than "phosphorous acid," and phosphorous, fōs'.fō.rūs [acid] contains less than phosphoric acid (-ic [in Chem.] denotes the highest possible quantity of oxygen).

Greek hupo, an inferior quantity, with phosphite, &c.

Hypostasis, hî.pōs'.tā.sîs, distinct personality combined with perfect union (applied to the Trinity); hypostatic, hî.po..stāt'.îk, individual but united; hypostatical, hî.po.stāt'.i.kâl; hy'postatical-ly.

Latin hypostāsis; Greek hupo-stāsis, subsistence, reality, essence (v. huphistamai, to subsist or remain when everything else is gone).

Hypo-sulphate, -sŭl'.fate, a compound of hypo-sulphuric acid with a base; hy'po-sulphite, -sŭl'.fî't, a compound of hypo-sulphurous acid with a base; hy'po-sulphuric, -sŭl'.fu'.rîk [acid], an acid containing less oxygen than sulphu'ric acid, but more than sul'phurous acid; hy'po- sulphurous, sŭl'fu.rŭs, a compound containing less oxygen than sulphurous acid.

Greek hypo-, inferior in quantity. -ate denotes a salt formed by the union of an acid in -ic with a base. -ite denotes a salt formed by the union of an acid in -ous with a base. -ic, the highest state of oxygenation; -ous, an inferior state.

Hypothenuse, hŭ.pŏth'.e.nuce, the longest side of a right-angled triangle, or the side opposite the right-angle. (This word ought to be hypot'enuse.)

Latin hypotenusa (Greek hupoteinō, to subtend); French hypoténuse; German hypotenuse; Spanish hipotenusa.

Hypothecate, hŭ.pŏth'.e.kate, to assign in pledge as security; hypoth'ecāt-ed (Rule xxxvi); hypoth'ecāt-ing (Rule xix.), hypoth'ecāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); hypothecation, hŭ.pŏth'.e.kay''.shun; hypoth'ec, a lien on movables.

Lat. hypothēca, hypothecarius; Gk. hupo-thēkē; Fr. hypothèque.

Hypothesis, plu. hypotheses, hŭ.pŏth'.ē.sŭs, hŭ.pŏth'.ē.sēz, a supposition, something assumed for argument-sake; hypothetic, hŭ'.po.thēt''.ĭk, assumed without proof; hypothetical, hŭ'.po.thēt''.ĭ.kāl; hypothet'ical-ly.

Latin hypothēsis; Greek hupo-thēstis (hupo-tithēmi).

Hyson, hŭ'.sŭn, best green tea. (Chin. hi-tshun, first gathering.)

Hyssop, hŭss'ŭp, a plant. (Latin hyssopus; Greek hussōpos.)

Hysterics, hŭss.tēr'riks, mother-fits; hysteria, hŭss.tēr'ri.ah; hysterical, hŭss.tēr'ri.kāl; hyster'ically.

Latin hysterica (Greek hustērōs, the womb).

Hythe, hithe, a staith, a landing place. (Old English hyth.)

I, Eye, i. High, hŭ. Hie, hŭ.

I, pron., (poss.) mine, (obj.) me. Plu. we, ours, us.

My, our, are possessive pronouns.

Anglo-Saxon ic, gen. min, dat. me, acc. mec.

Plu. we, gen. ŭser, dat. is, acc. ŭsic.

(It will be seen that our "obj." is the "dative" case, not the acc.)

Errors of Speech.—I for Me.

Let you and I set them a better example. (Let me.)

Let's you and I go. (That is, let us, viz., you and me go.)

Between you and I, there is not a word of truth in it.

For you and I it has no sort of interest. (For me.)

They can do nothing without you and I to help them.

This is for you and I. (For you and for me.)

It has long puzzled a good many, you and I among the number.

Me for I.

Who's there? It is only me. Only you and me are left.

Who calls? Me. (I call.) Who told him? Me.

Better you than me. Sooner you than me.

It is quite certain that neither you nor me had any hand in it.

Eye, the organ of vision. (Old English ēge or eāge.)

High, hŭ, elevated. (Old English heāh.)

Hie, hŭ, away, to make haste. (Old Eng. hig[an], to hie.)

- ia (Lat.), things pertaining to: rega'lia, insignia.
- ia (in Bot.), denotes a class or order: as monogyn'ia.
- iad (Greek suffix, -iades, a patronymic), belonging to, about: Luciad, Dunciad, Baviad, Rosciad, Henriade (Fr.), &c.
- Ibidem, i.bi'.dēm (Lat.), in the same place; ibid., i'.bid.
- Ibis, i'.biss, an African bird. (Latin ibis; Greek ibis.)
- ible (Latin i-bil-is) adj., liable to, able to, full of, fit for: risible, fit for laughter; mixible, able to be mixed.
(Words from Latin verbs not of the first conj. add -ible, those from the first conj., with all native words, and those coined by ourselves, add -able. For exceptions see Rule xxiii.)
- Iberis, i'.bē.ris, the candy-tuft (from Ibēria, Spain).
(The e- is long in Latin and Greek ἰβηρία, ἰβηρος.)
- ic (Latin -ic-us), adj., pertaining to: civ'ic, gigantic.
- ic, -ics (Greek -ik-a), added to names of sciences.
(Except in the five words borrowed from the French, [arithmetique, logique, magique, musique, and rhétorique], the plural "-ics" is employed, as it ought always to be: conics, optics, &c.)
- ic (Greek -ik-os) in Pathology, "in an excited state"; tetan'ic.
(In Chem.) an acid containing the largest possible quantity of oxygen: as ni'tric [acid].
- ical (Latin -i-cal-is), adj. "pertaining to": astronom-ical.
- Ice (1 syl.), frozen water, to cover with ice or sugar; iced (1 syl.); ic-ing, ice'-ing (Rule xix.); icy, i'.sy; i'ci-ly, i'ci-ness; icicle, i'.sī.k'l, a pendent of ice; ice'-berg, a mountain of ice; ice'-floe, -flo, a small mass of floating ice; ice'-house, a place for storing ice; ice-pack, broken and drifting ice again united into an irregular mass.
Old English ts or tsz, tsigcel, an icicle.
- Icelander, ice'.län.dēr, a native of Iceland; Iceland'ic.
- Ich dien, ee'k' deen', "I serve." The motto of the Prince of Wales.
(This motto was first adopted by the Black Prince, 1346.)
- Ichneumon, ik.new'.mōn, a sort of weasel (common in Egypt).
Ichneumonidæ, ik'.new.mōn''i.dee (-idæ, a group or family).
Ichneumonidan, ik'.new.mōn''i.dän, pertaining to the ...
Latin ichneumon (Greek ichnos, a footstep, so called because it follows the footsteps of the crocodile).
- Ichor, i'.kor, the blood of gods, the pus of ulcers; ichorous, i'.kōr.ūs, like ichor. (Greek ichôr.)
- Ich'thyo-, ik'.thē.o- (Greek prefix), fish; ichthus, fish.
Ichthyo-graphy, ik'.thē-ōg'.rā.fy, treatise on fishes.
Greek ichthus graphê, a description of fishes.
Ichthyo-logy, ik'.thē-ōl'.ō.gy, a history of fishes.
Greek ichthus lōgōs, a treatise on fishes.

Ichthyo-graphist, ik'.rhě.og''.ra.fist; ichthyol'ogist. I

Ichthyo-lite, ik'.rhě.ō.lite, a fossil fish.

Greek ichthus lithos, a fish [of] stone.

Ichthyo-saurus, ik'.rhe.ō.saw''.rūs, the fish-lizard.

Greek ichthus sauros, the fish-lizard or saurian.

Ichthiosis, ik'.rhě.ō''.sīs, a thickening of the skin.

Greek ichthus, [scaly like] a fish. I

Iceicle, i'.sī.k'l; i'ci-ness, i'ci-ly. (See Ice.)

Icono-, ī.kōn'.o- (Greek prefix), image; eikōn, an image.

Icono-clast, ī.kōn'.o.klast, a breaker of idols or images.

Icono-clasm, ī.kōn'.o.klazm. (Greek klastēs, klaō, to break.)

Icosahedron, i'.kō.sā.hěd''.rōn, having twenty equal sides;

icosahedral, i'.kō.sā.hěd''.rāl. (Gk. eikōsi, twenty, hēdra.)

Icy, i'.sy, full of ice, cold as ice, consisting of ice. (See Ice.)

I'd, i'd, contraction of I would.

id., contraction of idem (Latin), the same.

-id (Lat. -id-us), nouns, something subject to an action: acid.

-id (Gk. -idēs, patronymic), "of the race," "about": Æne'id.

-id (Gk. -eidos), nouns. (In Chem.) preceded by -o-, and indicating "likeness," "resemblance to": alkaloid, spheroid.

(We pronounce -oid in these compounds as one syllable, but the French have preserved the proper separation, and we should have done the same: al'.ka.lo.id and sphē.ro.id would be far better than al'.ka.loid and sphē.roid.)

-idæ (Gk. -idēs, patronymic), a group or family: cani'dæ.

-ide (1 syl., Gk. -eidos), like, (in Chem.) bases, combinations of oxygen not forming acids: oxide, chloride.

Idea, ī.dee'.ah, a mental conception; ide'a-less; ideal, ī.dee'.āl; ide'al-ly; ideal-ism, ī.dee'.āl.izm; idealise (Rule xxxi.), ī.dee'.āl.ize; ide'alised (4 syl.); ide'alis-ing (Rule xix.), ide'alis-er; idealisation, ī.dee'.āl.i.zay''.shūn; ideality, ī.dee'.āl''.i.ty, enthusiasm from ideas; ide'alist. The ide'al, the imaginary standard of perfection. Beau ideal (Fr.), bō ī.dee'.āl, imaginary standard of the beautiful.

Ideology (q.v.) Ideography (q.v.)

Latin idea; Greek idēa (from eido, to see).

Identical, ī.dēn'.ti.kāl, the self-same; iden'tical-ly;

Identify, identifies, ī.dēn'.ti.fize; identified, ī.dēn'.ti.fide;

iden'tifi-er, iden'tify-ing (Rule xix);

Identification, ī.dēn'.ti.fī.kay''.shūn; iden'tity.

French identique, identification, identifier, identité (Latin idem).

Ideography, īd'.ē.ōg''.ra.fy, the representation of ideas by symbols; ideographic, īd'.ē.ō.grāf'.ik; ide'ograph'ical-ly.

Greek idēa graphē, idea picturing or drawings.

Ideology, id' e.öl' .o.jy; mental philosophy; ideologist, id' .ě.öl' .o.jst; ideological, id' .ě.ö.łödj' .i.käl; ideological-ly.

Greek idéa logos, treatise about ideas.

Ides (1 syl.), between the calends and the nones in the Roman calendar. (Latin idus [Etruscan iduäre, to divide]).

-ides, -i'.deez (Greek -idēs, patronymic), a "family," a "group."

Idio-, id' .i.o- (Greek prefix), individual, special.

Idio-crazy, id' .i.ök' .ră.sy. Idiosyncrasy, -sîn' .kră.sy.

Idiocracy, personal speciality. Idio-syncrasy, a craze.

Idio-cratic, -krăt' .ik; idio-syncratical, -sîn.krăt' .i.käl.

Greek idîōs krâsis, personal or individual craze.

Greek idîōs sun krâsis, an individual with a craze.

Idiom, id' .i.ôm, that construction which characterises and individualises a language; idiomatic, id' .i.o.măt' .ik; idiomat'ical, idiomat'ical-ly.

(We want the word "idiotism" (Latin) for idiomatic phrases.)

Latin idiōma; Greek idiōma (idîos, one's own, individual).

Idio-pathic, id' .i.o-păth' .ik. Symptomati'c (in Medicine).

A symptomatic disease is one which proceeds from some prior disorder: as symptomatic fever which follows the fracture of a limb. An idiopathic disease is one which does not proceed from a prior disorder.

Greek idîōs pathos, special disease, a disease of its own.

"Symptomatic," Greek symptōma (sun pîpto, to fall with or after another [disease], &c.)

Idio-syncrasy, plu. idio-syncrasies, id' .i.o-sîn' .kră.sřz, a craze or morbid notion held by an individual; idio-syncratic, id' .i.o-sîn.krăt' .ik.

Greek idîōs sun krâsis, a craze peculiar to an individual.

Idiot, id' .i.öt, one of imbecile mind; idiotic, id' .i.öt' .ik; idiotical-ly, id' .i.öt' .i.käl-ly; idiotism, id' .i.ö.třzm; idiotey, id' .i.öt.sy.

Greek idîōtēs, a private man, one who has no part in public affairs: hence ignorant, incompetent.

Idle, i'.d'l, doing nothing, lazy. Idol, i'.döl, an image adored.

Idling, i'.d'ling, frittering time away; i'dler; i'dly.

Idleness, i'.d'l.ness. (The older spelling is idel.)

Old English idel, idellic, idellice, idly; idelnes, idleness.

Idol, i'.döl, an image adored. Idle, i.d'l, lazy (see above.)

Idolater, fem. idolatress, i.döl'.a.těř, i.döl'.a.trěss.

Idolatrous, i.döl'.a.trăs; idol'atrous-ly.

Idolise, i'.dö.lize, to dote on; i'dolised (3 syl.), i'dolis-ing (Rule xix.); i'dolis-er, one who "idolises" another.

Latin idolatra, idolatrix, idolum; Greek eidōlon, eidōlo-latreia, idol-worship; eidōlo-latrēs.

Idyll (double l), ī.dil, a pastoral poem; idill-ic, ī.dil'ik.

Latin idyllum; Greek eidullōn (eidōs with dim.)

If, provided that, supposing that. "If" for whether is not agreeable to modern usage; hence the following sentences are not to be imitated:—

Uncertain, if [whether] by augury or chance (Dryden).

Noah sent forth a dove...to see if the waters were abated. Gen. viii. 8.

(This use of if is according to Latin idiom, "visam si domi sis," "sinito ambulare si foris, si intus volent" (Plaut. Capt. 1, 2, 5)

-iff (Latin suffix -iv-us) nouns, "one who is": as plaintiff.

ig-, the prep. in. There are ten examples of this prep. before no-, five have ig-, and five in- for prefix:—

ig-noble, ig-nominious, ig-noramus, ig-norance, ig-nore; in-nocent, in-nocuous, in-nominate, in-novate, in-noxious.

Igneous, ig'.nē.ūs (Rule lxvi.), containing fire, resulting from the action of fire: as igneous rocks. (Latin ignēus, burning.)

Ignis fatuus, plu. ignes fatui (Lat.), ig'.nīs fāt'.u.ūs, plu. ig'.neez fāt'.u.i, Will o' the whisp, Jack o' lantern.

Ignite, ig.nīte', to set on fire; ignit'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ignit'-ing (Rule xix.), ignit'-er, ignit'-ible (not -able.)

Ignition, ig.nīsh'.ōn, the act of setting on fire. Combustion, com.būs'.tchūn, the act of burning after ignition.

Igneous, ig'.nē.ūs (R. lxvi.), containing fire. (See Igneus.)

Latin ignire, ignitus (ignis, fire); French ignition.

Ignoble, ig.nō'.b'l, the contrary of noble; igno'ble-ness, igno'bly.

Latin ignōbilis (ig[in]nōbilis), in- negative; French ignoble.

Ignominious, ig'.no.mīn''.ī.ūs (R. lxvi.), the contrary of renowned;

ignomin'ious-ly, ignomin'ious-ness; ign'ominy.

Latin ignōmīnia (ig[in]nōmen), in- negative; French ignominie.

Ignora'mus, plu. ignora'mus-es (not ignorami, because "ignora-mus" is not a Latin noun, but a verb, and means "we are ignorant"), one wholly unversed in a matter.

Ignorant, ig'.no.rānt, the contrary of knowing; The ig'no- rant; ign'orant-ly. Ignorance, ig'.no.rānce.

Ignore, ig.nōr', the contrary of acknowledge; ignored' (2 syl.), ignōr'-ing (Rule xix.), ignōr'-er.

French ignorant, ignorance, ignorér; Latin ignorantia, v. ignōre (ig[in]gnarus, knowing), in- negative.

Iguana, ig'.u.ah''.nah, a genus of the lizard family.

Iguanidæ, ig'.u.ān''.ī.dee, the family of the above genus (-idæ, Greek -idēs, a group, a family, &c.)

Iguanidon, ig'.u.ān''.ī.dōn, a fossil reptile with teeth like the iguana.

Cuvier calls iguana a "St. Domingo word," hiuana = ig.o.ah'.nah.

Bontius says it is Japanese, leguan, the monitor.

(It will be observed that every word, except the last, beginning with "ig-" is from the Latin.)

-il, -ile (Latin -il-is), adj., "capable of," "belonging to": civ-il, the manners belonging to a citizen; host-ile, &c.

Il- for in-, before words beginning with l: as il-legal, il-liberal; il-luminate, il-lustrate.

Iliad, il' i.ăd, Homer's epic about the siege of Ilium (Troy).

Greek Ιλιάς, gen. Ιλιάδος (Ilias poiēsis, a poem about Ilias gé, the land of Ilium); Latin Iliās malōrum, a world of troubles.

Ilk. In Scotch it is put after a man's name when the place of his estate is of the same name as his own: as Balfour of that ilk; that is Balfour of Balfour.

Anglo-Saxon ælc, each [alike].

Ill, Hill. I'll, ile. Isle, ile. Aisle, ile.

Ill, not well. Hill, an elevation of earth. Ill'-ness.

I'll, ile, a contraction of I will. Isle, ile, an island.

Aisle, ile, the wing of a church. (French aile, a wing.)

Ill retains the double l in all its compounds: as ill-nature, illtimed, illtemper, illwill, &c.

"Ill." Old English usel, evil. "Hill," Old English hyl.

Illapse, il.lăps', Elapse, e.laps'.

Illapse, a gradual slipping of one thing into another.

Elapse, to glide away, to transpire.

Illapsed' (2 syl.), illăps'-ing (R. xix.) Elapsed, elapsing.

Latin illapsus (il[In]lapsus, sliding into something).

Latin elapsus (e[ex]lapsus, sliding out or away).

Illative, il' la.tiv, inferential; il'lative-ly, by inference.

"Illative" is Latin il[In]fero, il-lātus; whence it will be seen that infer-ential and illat-ive are parts of the same verb.

Illegal, il.lē.găl, the contrary of legal; ille'gal-ly; illegalise, il.lē.găl.ize; illē'galised (4 syl.), illē'galis-ing (Rule xix.)

Illegality, il.lē.găl' i.ty.

French illégal, illégalité; Latin il[In]legālis, against the law.

Illegible, il.ledge' i.b'l, not legible; illeg'ibly; illegibility, il.ledge' i.b'il' i.ty, the state of being illegible.

Latin il[In]legibilis, not easy-to-be-read (lêgo, to read).

Illegitimate, il' le.djīt' i.mate, not legitimate, base-born; illegit'imate-ly; illegit'imate-ness; il'legitimāt-ed, proved to be base-born; illegit'imat-ing (Rule xix.); illegitimacy, plu. illegitimacies, il' le.djīt' i.mā.siz.

Latin illegitimus (il[In]legitimus, not legitimate).

Illiberal, il.lib' ē.răl, the contrary of liberal; illib'eral-ly;

Il-liberality, il.lib' ē.răl' i.ty, meanness.

Latin iliberālis, iliberālitās (il[In]liberālis, not liberal).

Illicit, il.lis' it, unlawful; illic'it-ly, illic'it-ness.

Latin illicitus (il[In]licitus, not allowed-by-law).

Illimitable, il.lim'.i.tă.b'l, not having a limit; illim'itable-ness, illim'itably, Unlim'ited, not limited (Rule lxxii.)

French illimitable (Latin il[im]limitāre, not to limit).

Illiterate, il.lit'.ē.rate, the contrary of literate; illit'erate-ly, illit'erate-ness; illiteracy, il.lit'.ē.ră.sŷ, ignorance.

Unlettered, un.lēt'.terd, not able to read (Rule lxxii.)

Latin il[im]litrātus, not skilled-in-letters.

Illness, il'nēs, sickness, suffering from ill-health. (See III.)

Illogical, il.lodge'.i.kăl, not logical; illog'ical-ly, illog'ical-ness.

Latin il[im]lōgica, not logic.

Illude, il.lūde'. Elude, e.lude'. Delude, de.lude':

Illude, to deceive the sight;

Delude, to deceive the mind or imagination;

Elude, to escape by artifice.

Illūd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), illūd'-ing (Rule xix.)

Illusion, il.lū'.shūn. Delusion, dē.lū'.shūn:

Illusion, ocular deception; Delusion, mental deception;

Elusion, evasion, an escape by artifice.

Illusive, il.lū'.siv; illu'sive-ly, illu'sive-ness.

Illusory, il.lū'.sō.ry, deceptive to the eye.

Latin il[im]lūdēre, to play on one [to deceive his sight]; de ludere, to cheat the imagination or mind; el[ex]ludēre, to slip away.

Illuminate, il.lū'.mī.nate, to throw light on, to adorn with illuminated letters, &c., to light up a place with lamps, &c.; illu'mināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), illu'mināt-ing (Rule xix.), illu'mināt-or (Rule xxxvii.), illumina'ti, those who belong to a clique assuming to be in advance of the age; illuminative, il.lū'.mī.na.tiv.

Illumination, il.lū'.mī.nay'.shūn. Illume, il.lume', to adorn, to enlighten; illumed' (2 syl.), illūm'-ing (R. xix.)

Latin illuminatio, illuminātor, v. illumināre (il[im]lumināre; here in is intensive); French illumination, illuminer.

Illusion, il.lū'.shūn, ocular deception. Delu'sion, mental deception. Illusive, il.lū'.siv; illu'sive-ly, illu'sory.

Latin illusio (il[im]lusio, a playing on [one to deceive his sight]).

Illustrate, il'.lūs.trate (not il.lūs'.trate), to explain by pictures; il'lustrāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), il'lustrāt-ing (Rule xix.); il'lustrāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); illustration, il'.lūs.tray'.shūn; illustrative, il.lūs'.tra.tiv; illus'trative-ly.

Illustrious, il.lūs'.trī.ūs, celebrated; illus'trious-ly, illus'trious-ness; illustratory, il.lūs'.tra.tō.ry.

Latin illustris, illustratio, v. illustrāre (il[im]lustrāre, to shine or throw light on something); French illustration, illustrer, &c.

(It will be observed that every word, except "ill" and its compounds, beginning with "ill-" is from the Latin, "il-" representing "in-".)

Im-, the Latin prep. "in," prefixed to words beginning with the labials b, m, p: as im-bibe, im-mortal, im-perfect.

(If a word is not found under "Im-" look under "Em-".)

-im, the Chaldaic plu. suffix: Cherub-im, Seraph-im.

I'm, i'm, contraction of I am.

Image, im'age, an idol, a statue, a personal likeness; (verb) im'aged (2 syl.), im'ag-ing; imagery, im'age.ry.

Imagine, im mädj'.in; imag'ined (3 syl.), imag'in-ing (Rule xix.); imagin-able, im mädj'.in.ä.b'l; imag'inable-ness, imag'inably; imaginary, im mädj'.i.nü.ry; imagination, im mädj'.i.nay''shün; imaginative, im mädj'.in.a.tiv, possessed of imagination, fanciful; imag'inative-ly.

Lat. imāginārius, imāginātio, imāginātivus, v. imāgināre (imāgo).

Imago (Latin), imay'.go, the third or perfect state of insects.

The first state is the Larva, the second the Pupa.

Imbecile, im.bě.seel, weak, infirm; imbecility, im'.bě.sil''.i.ty.

French imbécile, imbécilité; Latin imbecillus, imbécilitas (im[in]bacillo, [leaning] on a staff [from infirmity]).

Imbed (better embed), to collect into a bed. (O. E. em-bæd.)

"Im-," "Em-," prefix. "Im," Lat. in, into, not; Eng. in, into. "Em-," prefix of native words, "to make," "to collect into."

Imbibe, im.bibe', to drink in; imbibed' (2 syl.), imbib'-ing (Rule xix.), imbib'-er. (Latin im[in]bibō, to drink in.)

Imbitter (better embitter), to make bitter. (O. E. em-biter.)

Imbricate, im'.brī.kate (in Botany), to overlap like roof-tiles; im'bricat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), im'bricat-ing (Rule xix.)

Imbrication, im'.brī.kay''shün.

Latin imbricāre, imbrex, a roof-tile (imber, [protection from] rain).

Imbroglia, plu. imbroglios (Rule xlii.), im.brō'.li.ōze (not embroglio), a complicated embarrassment (Italian).

Imbrown (better embrown), to make brown. (O. E. em-brūn.)

Imbrue (better embrue), to make gory. (Gk. em bro[τος], gore.)

Imbrute, im.brūte (not embrute), to degrade to the state of a brute; imbrüt-ed (R. xxxvi.), imbrüt-ing (R. xix.)

Lat. im[in]brūta. It is an Eng. made word, but from Lat. sources.

Imbue, im.bū, to saturate; imbued' (2 syl.), imbu'-ing. (Verbs ending with any two letters, except -ue, retain both before -ing, Rule xix.); imbument, im.bū'.mēnt.

Latin im[in]buo, to stuff or swell in, to soak, to saturate.

Imitate, im'.i.tate, to copy; im'itāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), im'itāt-ing (Rule xix.), im'itāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); imitation, im'.i.tay''shün; imitative, im'.i.ta.tiv; imitative-ly, im'itativeness; imitable, im'.i.ta.b'l (not imitatable); imitability, im'.i.ta.bil''.i.ty. Neg. In-im'itable, &c.

Latin imitābilis, imitatio, imitator, v. imitari; French imitable, imitation, imitatif. (Only one m.)

Immaculate, im.măk'.ă.late, without spot, unstained; immac'ulate-ly, immac'ulate-ness. Immaculate Conception, the dogma that the Virgin Mary was born without sin.

Latin im[ini]măcŭlātus, not spotted.

Immanation, im'.ma.nay''.shŭn (better Emanation), flowing out from. (Latin manāre, to flow.)

Immanent, im'.ma.nent, inherent. Im'minent, threatening.

Latin im[ini]manens, gen. manentis, remaining in; im[ini]minuens, gen. minentis, [hanging] threatening over.

Immanuel, im.măn'.u.ěl. In the Bible Emman'uel (Isa. vii. 14, compare Matt. i. 23), Jesus, the Messiah.

Immaterial, im'.ma.tee''.rĭ.ăl, not material; immate'rial-ly.

Immateriality, im'.mă.tĕ.rĭ.ăl''.ĭ.ty; immate'rial-ist.

Immaterialism, im'.ma.tĕ''.rĭ.ăl.izm; immate'rialised, im'.ma.tĕ''.rĭ.ăl.ized; immate'rial-ness.

Latin im[ini]materialis, not material; French immatĕriel (wrong), immatĕrialism, immatĕrialiste, immatĕrialitĕ.

Immature, im'.mă.tŭ'r, not mature; immature'-ly, immature'-ness, immatured' (3 syl.); immatu'urity, unripeness.

Unmatured, un'.ma.tŭ'rd, not ripe (Rule lxxii.)

Latin im[ini]mătŭrus, not mature; imătŭritas

Immeasurable, im.mĕzh'.ă.r.ă.b'l, not measurable; immeas'urable-ness, immeas'urably. (See Immense.)

Unmeasured, un.mĕzh'.erd, not measured (Rule lxxii.)

Lat. im[ini]mensurābilis, not measurable (mensūra, a measure).

Immediate, im.mĕe'.ăi.ate (not im.mĕe'jit), without delay; imme'diate-ly, directly; imme'diate-ness.

Latin immediatē; French immĕdiat (Latin in mĕdius, without a medium, whence "direct," directly or without delay).

Immemorial, im'.mĕ.mō''.rĭ.ăl, beyond the reach of memory; immemo'rial-ly. Immemorable, im.mĕm'.ō.ră.b'l.

Lat. im[ini]mĕmōrĭa, beyond the reach of memory, -mĕmōrābilis.

Immense, im.mĕnse', not to be measured; immense'-ly.

Immensity, im.mĕn'.sĭ.ty, unbounded extent.

Immensurable, im.mĕn'.sŭ.ră.b'l. Immeasurable, q.v.

Latin im[ini]mensus, not [to be] measured, -mensurābilis.

Immerge, im.mĕrge', to plunge under [water]. Emerge', to rise out of... Immerged (2 syl.), immerg'-ing. Emerged, &c.

Immerse, im.mĕrse', to plunge into [water], to be deeply engaged in business; immersed' (2 syl.), immers'-ing (R. xix.)

Immersion, im.mĕr'.shŭn, the act of plunging into [water];

Emersion, ĕ.mĕr'.shŭn, the act of rising out of [water].

Immersible, im.mĕr'.sĭ.b'l (not -able). Emersible.

Unmerged, un.mĕrge'd', not sunk (Rule lxxii.)

Latin im[ini]mergo, supine mersum, to plunge into [water].

Latin e[ex]mergo, supine mersum, to rise out of [water].

Immethodical, im' mē.rhōd' .i.kāl, not methodical; immethodical-ly. (Latin im[in]mēthōdicus, not methodical.)

Immigrate, im' mī.grate. Emigrate, em' i.grate.

To emigrate, to leave one's country for residence elsewhere

To immigrate, to enter a new country to settle there.

Im'migrāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), im'migrāt-ing, im'migrant.

Immigration, im' mī.gra'' shūn. Emigrat-ed, &c.

Latin im[in]migrāre, to migrate into [another country];

ex migrāre, to migrate out of [your own country].

Imminent, im' mī.nēnt, threatening. Im'manent, inherent.

Eminent, em' i.nēnt, illustrious. (Lat. e-minens, hanging out.)

Latin im[in]minens, gen. minentis, [hanging] threatening over; im[in]manens, gen. manentis, remaining or abiding in.

Immixable, im' mīx' .ā.b'l, not mixable. (Rule xxiii.)

Unmixed, un' mīxt', not mixed (Rule lxxii.)

Latin im[in]miscere, supine mixtum, not to mix.

Immobility, im' mo.bīl' .i.ty, steadfastness, permanency.

Immobile, im' mo.beel' (not im' mo.bīl'). French.

Immovable, im' moo' vā.b'l; immo'vable-ness, immo'vably.

Latin im[in]mōbilis, not movable; mōbilitas; French immobilité.

Immoderate, im' mōd' .ē.rate, not moderate; immod'erate-ly.
immod'erate-ness. Immoderation, im' mōd' .ē.ray'' shūn.

Unmoderated, un' mōd' .e.rā.tēd, not moderated (Rule lxxii.)

Latin im[in]mōdērātus; not moderate; immōdērātio.

Immodest, im' mōd' .est; not modest; immod'est-y, immod'est-ly.

Latin im[in]modestus, not modest; immōdestia; French immodeste.

Immolate, im' mō.late, to sacrifice; im'molāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), im'molāt-ing (Rule xix.), im'molāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); immolation, im' mō.lay'' shūn.

Latin immōlātio, immōlāre, to sacrifice. (In mōla, in meal-flour, referring to the meal and salt thrown over the victim.)

Immoral, im' mōr.rāl, not moral; immor'al-ly, indecorously.

Immorality, plu. immoralities, im' mo.rāl' .i.tiz.

Latin im[in]mōrālis, not moral; mōrālitās; French immoral.

Immortal, im' mōr.tāl, not mortal; immor'tal-ly.

Immortality, im' mor.tāl' .i.ty; immortalise (Rule xxxi.), im' mōr.tāl.ize; immor'talised, immor'talis-ing (R. xix.)

Immortalisation, im' mōr.tāl.i.za'' shūn.

Immortelle (French), im' mor.tell', a wreath of "everlasting flowers" to decorate the grave of a person deceased.

Latin im[in]mōrtālis, not mortal; immōrtālitās; French immortel (!) immortalité, immortalisation, immortaliser.

Immovable (not immoveable, R. xx.), im' moo' vā.b'l, not movable; immo'vable-ness, immo'vably, fixedly, steadfastly.

Immovables, im.moo'.vǎ.b'łz, fixtures, houses and lands.

Immobility, im'.mo.bil''ǎ.ty. (See Immobility.)

Unmoved, un.moovd', not moved (Rule lxxii.)

"Immovable" (Rule xxiii.); Latin im[in]mōvērī, not to be moved.

Immunity, plu. immunities, im.mū'.nǎ.tǐz, exemption [from toll].

Latin im[in]munus, not [obliged to make] a gift; immūntas, immūnis, free. French immunité.

Immure, im.mūre', to enclose in a wall; immured' (2 syl.), immūr'-ing, Rule xix. (Latin im[in]murus, in a wall.)

Immutable, im.mū'.ta.b'ł, not mutable; immuta'ble-ness, immuta'bly. Immutability, im.mū.tǎ.bil''ǎ.ty.

Lat. im[in]mūtābilis, not mutable; immutābilitas. Fr. immutable. (N.B.—All but three words beginning with "im-" [before m] are Latin, and in two-thirds of the examples "im-" is negative.)

Imp, a scion, a child; now it means "a little devil," to eke a hive by an extra piece; imped, imt; imp'-ing.

Old Eng. imp[an] (to eke, to graft), past impode, past part. impod.

Impact, im'.pǎkt, collision; impact'-ed, driven close together; impaction, im.pǎk'.shǔn, the act of striking against.

Impinge, im.pǐnge', to striko against something; impinged' (2 syl.), imping'-ing (Rule xix.), imping'-ent (not -ant.)

Latin impactus, impactio, v. im[in]pingere [pangere], supine factum, to strike on or against; French impact ("impaction" is not French).

Impair, im.pair', to injure; impaired' (2 syl.), impair'-ing, impair'-er. (Should be empair, Fr. empirer, Lat. pejor.)

Impale, im.pail' (better empale, q.v.) (Fr. empaler, empalement.)

Impalpable, im.pǎł'.pǎ.b'ł, not palpable; impal'pably.

Impalpability, im.pǎł'pa.bil''ǎ.ty, intangibility.

Fr. impalpable, impalpabilité (Lat. im[in] palpāre, not to stroke).

Impannel, im.pǎn'.nēł, to enter the names of a jury in a panel or piece of parchment; impanneled (3 syl.), impan'nel-ing, impan'nel-er (Rule iii., -EL).

Latin im[in]pannus, [written] on "pannus" or cloth (Greek pénos.)

Impart, to communicate; impart'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), impart-ing, impart'-er, impart'-ible (not -able, R. xxii.), impartibility.

Latin im[in]partire, to divide or part to (partitio, pars).

Impartial, im.par'.shǎł, not partial or biassed; impar'tial-ly.

Impartiality, im.par'.shě.ǎł''ǎ.ty, fair dealing; justice.

French impartial, impartialité (Latin im[in]pars, not a part).

Impass'able, not to be passed. Impass'ible, not subject to pain; impass'able-ness, state of being impassable; impass'ably.

Impass'ible, impass'ible-ness; impassive, im.pǎss'.iv; impassive-ly; impassive-ness, insusceptibility of pain; impassibility, im.pǎss'.ǎ.bil'.ǎ.ty, state of being impassive.

"Impassable," French impassabilité, impassable (im passer).

"Impassible," Latin impassibilis, impassibilitas (im patior).

Impassion, im.păsh'ôn, to affect with passion; impassioned, im.păsh'ônd; impassion-ing, im.păsh'ôn.ing; impassion-able, im.păsh'ôn.ă.b'l; impassionably, im.păsh'ôn.ă.bly.

French impassionner, im- Intensive (Latin passio, passion).

Impatient, im.pay'shënt, not patient; impatient-ly;

Impatience, im.pay'shënce, want of patience.

Latin impatientia, impatiens (im[in]patiens, not patient).

Impeach, im.pecch, to charge with crime; impeached' (2 syl), impeach'-ing, impeach'-er, impeach'-able, -ment.

Low Latin impetilio, impetere; Law Latin impecciare. It is not from the French empêcher, to hinder, but im[in]petere, to seek for legal redress against a person; (petitio, the charge of a plaintiff).

Impeccable, im.pëk'.kă.b'l, not peccable; impec'cably;

Impeccability, im.pëk'.ka.b'l''ă.ty; impec'cancy.

Latin im[in]peccabilis, not peccable, impeccabilitas.

Impede, im.peed', to hinder; impêd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), impêd'-ing (R. xix.); impediment, im.pêd'.ă.mënt; impediment''-al.

Latin impêdimentum, impêdio (im[in]pedes, [clogs on the feet]. The idea is taken from the custom of fastening "traces" or hair round the legs of chickens to keep them from roaming).

Impel', to urge forward; impelled, im.pêld'; impell'-ing (Rule iv.), impell'-er, impell'ent. Impel, better impell.

Impulsive, im.pŭl'.siv; impul'sive-ly, impul'sive-ness;

Impulse, im'.pŭlce; impulsion, im.pŭl'.shŭn.

Latin impellere, supine impulsum, to drive forward.

Impend', to hang over; impend'-ed (R. xxxvi.), impend'-ing;

Impend'-ent (not -ant, R. xxii.); impence, im.pën'.dënce; impendency, im.pën'.dënsy, the state of impending.

Latin impendens, gen. impendentis, im[in]pendere, to hang over.

Impenetrable, im.pën'.ë.tră.b'l, not penetrable; impenetrably.

Impenetrability, im.pën'.ë.tră.b'l''ă.ty, obduracy.

Unpenetrated, im.pën'.ë.tră.tëd, not penetrated (Rule lxxii.)

Latin impenetrabilis, im[in]penetrabilis, not penetrable.

Impenitent, im.pën'.ă.tënt, not penitent; impen'itent-ly.

Impenitence, im.pën'.ă.tence; impenitency, im.pën'.ă.tën.sy.

Lat. impenitens, gen. impenitentis; Fr. impénitent, impenitence.

Imperative, im.për.ră.tiv, absolutely indispensable; imper'a-tive-ly; imperious, im.pë'.ră.ŭs. (See Imperial.)

Latin imperātivus (imperāre, to command with authority).

Imperceptible, im'.për.sëp''ă.ble, not perceptible (Rule xxii.), impercep'tible-ness, impercep'tibly, impercep'tibil'ity.

Unperceived, un.per.ceevd', not perceived (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. imperceptible, imperceptibilité (Lat. im[in]perceptio, not to perceive).

Imperfect, im.per'fect, not perfect; imper'fect-ly, imper'fectness; imperfection, im'.per.fek''shūn.

Lat. im[īn]perfectus, not perfected; imperfectio; Fr. imperfection.

Imperial, im.pec'.rī.āl, royal, supreme; impe'rial-ly.

Imperialism, im.pec'.rī.āl.izm; impe'rial-ist.

Imperative, im.pēr'rā.tiv; imper'ative-ly (q.v.)

Imperious, im.pec'.rī.ūs, dictatorial, arrogant; impe'rious-ly; impe'rious-ness, arrogance, haughtiness.

Emperor, fem. empress, ēm'.pē.ror, ēm'.press. (We owe the irregularity of "emperor" to the French.)

Latin impēriātis, impēriōsus, impērātor, impērātrix, v. impērāre, to command; French empereur || imperatrice.

Imperil (only one r), im.pēr'rīl, to endanger; imper'illed (3 syl.), imperill-ing, R. iii., -EL. (Would be better with one l.)

Fr. péril, with im- to verbalise the word (Lat. pēricūlum, danger).

Imperious, im.pē'.rī.ūs. (See above, Imperial.)

Imperishable, im.pēr'rish.ā.b'l, not perishable (Rule xxiii.), imper'ishable-ness, imper'ishably, imperishabil'ity.

Unperished, un.per'rishd, not perished (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. impérissable, impérissabilité (Lat. im[īn]perire, not to perish.)

Impermeable, im.per'.mē.ā.b'l, not permeable; imper'meably, imper'meable-ness; impermeability, im.per'.mē.ā.bīl''ī.ty.

Unpermeated, un.per'.mē.ā.tēd, not permeated (Rule lxxii.)

Latin im[īn]permeābilis, not permeable (per mēāre, to go through).

Impersonality, im.per'.sō.nāl''ī.ty, without distinct personality.

Impersonal Verbs, verbs with only the 3rd per. sing. of each tense. (These verbs have it for their nom. case: as It rains, it snows, it irks me, it behoves you); imper'sonal-ly.

Latin im[ip]ersonālis; French impersonel (wrong).

Impersonate, im.per'.sō.nate, to personify; imper'sonāt-ed; imper'sonāt-ing; impersonation, im.per'.sō.nay''shūn.

Lat. persōna, a person, an actor (with im- to verbalise the word).

Impertinent, im.per'.tī.nent, not pertinent, rude, impudent; impertinent-ly. Impertinence, im.per'.tī.nence.

Latin im[īn]pertinens, gen. impertinentis, not pertaining to (pertinēre, to pertain to; per teneo, to hold throughout).

Imperturbable, im'.per.tur''.bā.b'l, not to be disquieted; imper'turbably; imperturbability, im'.per.tur''.bā.bīl''ī.ty;

Imperturbation, im.per'.tur.bay''shūn, calmness.

Unperturbed, un'.per.turbd', not perturbed (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. imperturbable, imperturbabilité; Lat. imperturbātus (im[īn]perturbāre, not thoroughly disturbed).

Impervious, im.per'.vī.ūs, not penetrable; imper'vius-ly, imper'vius-ness, impassibility.

Latin impervius (im[īn], not, per via, a way through).

Impetuous, im.pēt'.u.ūs, hasty, violent; impet'uous-ly, impet'-uous-ness; impetuousity, im.pēt'.u.ūs'.ī.ty.

Impetus, im'.pēt.ūs, impulsive force.

Latin impetuosus, impētus; French impétuosité.

Impiety, plu. impieties, im.pī'.ēt.iz, profanity; impious, im'.pī.ūs, profane (unpious, not pious); im'pious-ly, im'pious-ness.

Latin impietas, im[in]pius, not pious; French impiété.

Impinge, im'.pīnge', to strike against; impinged' (2 syl.), imping'-ing (Rule xix.), imping'-ent. Impact' (q.v.)

Latin impingo, supine impactum (im[in]pango, to strike against).

Impious, im'.pī.ūs; im'pious-ly. (See Impiety.)

Implacable, im.play'.kā.b'l (not im.plāk'.ā.b'l), not to be appeased; implā'cable-ness, implā'cably; implā'cability, -b'il'.ī.ty.

Latin implacabilis, implacabilitas (im[in]plācāre).

Implant', to plant in [the mind]; implant'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), implant'-ing; implantation, im'.plān.tay''.shūn.

Old Eng. plant[ian], to plant, past plantode, past part. plantod.

Implead, im.plēd', to prosecute; implead'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), implead'-ing; implead'-er, one who prosecutes.

Implead is to state the plaintiff's case.

Plead, to state the defence or answer to the charge.

French plaider, to plead (pléé, a defendant's answer).

Implement, im'.plē.mēt, a tool. (Low Latin implementa, plu.)

Implicate, im'.plī.kate, to involve; im'plicāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), im'plicāt-ing; implicative, im'.plī.kā.tiv; im'plicative-ly; implication, im'.plī.kay''.shūn.

Latin implicatio, im[in]plicāre, to fold in, to involve.

Implicit, im'.plī.sīt or im.plīs'.īt, entire, implied; implicit-ly, im.plīs'.īt.lī; implicit-ness, im.plīs'.īt-ness.

Latin implicitus (im[in]plicitto, freq. of plīco) v.s.

Implore, im.plōr', to entreat; implored' (2 syl.), implōr'-ing (Rule xix.), implor'-ing-ly, implōr'-er.

Latin im[in]plōrāre, to beg or entreat for [something].

Imply', to mean, to hint at; implied' (2 syl.), R. xi., imply'-ing.

Latin im[in]plicāre, to fold in.

Impoison (better empoison), im.poi'.zōn, to infect with poison; impoi'soned, impoi'son-ing. (French empoisonner.)

Impolitic, im.pōl'.ī.tīk, not politic; impol'itic-ly.

French impolitique; im[in]pōliticus, not politic.

Impolite, im'.po.līte, not polite; impolite'-ness, impolite'-ly.

Latin impolitus; im[in]pōlitus, not polished.

Imponderable, im.pōn'.dē.rā.b'l, without weight.

Imponderables, im.pōn'.dē.rā.b'lz, whatever has no sensible weight, as light, heat, electricity, and magnetism.

Imponderability, im.pŏn'.dĕ.ră.bĭl''.ĭ.ty; impon'derous.

French impondérabilité, impondérable (Latin pondus, weight).

Import, (noun) im'.port; (verb) im.port' (Rule 1.) Export.

Im'port, something brought into a country from abroad;

Ex'port, something sent out of a country into foreign lands.

Import', to bring something into a country from abroad;

Export', to send something out of a country into foreign lands; import'-ed, import'-ing, import'-er, import'-able.

Importation, im'.por.tay''.shŭn. Exportation, -'tay''.shŭn.

Im'port, meaning that which is imported by words.

Import'ant, of great consequence; import'ant-ly;

Importance, im.pŏr'.tănce; serious consequence.

French importer, importable, importance, important, importation, exporter, exportation; Latin im[in]portāre, to carry into a place.

Importune, im'.por.tune', to tease with entreaties; importuned' (3 syl.), importŭn'-ing (Rule xix.), importŭn'-er;

Importunity, plu. importunities, im'.por.tu''.nĭ.tĭz;

Importunate, im.pŏr'.tu.nate, annoyingly urgent;

Impor'tunate-ly; impor'tunate-ness.

Latin importŭnitas, importŭnus (im[in]portŭnus, not quiet).

Impose, im.pŏze' (followed by on or upon), to lay [a duty on one], to practise [on one's credulity]; imposed' (2 syl.), impŏs'-ing (R. xix.), impo'sing-ly, impŏs'-able. Im'post.

Imposition, im'.pŏ.zĭsh''.ŏn, a fraud. Imposition of hands, the laying on of hands in ordination and confirmation.

Impostor, im.pŏs'.tor; a cheat. Imposture, im.pŏs'.tchŭr, deception. (Lat. impŏsĭtio, impostor, impostura; Gk. pono.)

Impossible, im.pŏs'.sĭ.b'l, not possible; impos'sibly;

Impossibility, plu. impossibilities, im.pŏs'.sĭ.bĭl''.ĭ.tĭz.

Lat. im[in]possibilis (im, not; posse, to be able); Fr. impossibilité, &c.

Imposthume, im'.pŏs.tume, an abscess. A corrupt spelling of aposthume. (Lat. apostĕma, Gk. apostĕma, an abscess.)

Imposture, im.pŏs'.tchŭr. Impos'tor (see Impose).

Impotent, im'.pŏ.tĕnt (not im.po'tent), not potent or strong; im'potent-ly. Impotence, im'.pŏ.tense; im'potency.

Latin impŏtens, gen. impŏtentis, impŏtentia (im, not, pŏtens, able).

Impound', to shut up in a "pound," to keep back; impound'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), impound'-ing, impound'-er, impound'-age (—age [Latin agĕre], the act of), the act of impounding.

Old English pynd[an], to pound, to shut up.

Impoverish, im.pŏv'.er.ish, to pauperise; impŏv'erished (4 syl.), impŏv'erish-ing, impŏv'erish-er, impŏv'erish-ment.

Italian impoverire, (Latin paupĕro, to make poor; pauper).

Impracticable, im.prāk'.tī.ka.b'l, not practicable; imprac'ticable-ness, imprac'ticably; impracticability, im.prāk'.tī.kā-bīl''.ī.ty. (French impracticabilité, impracticable.)

Latin practicus; Greek pratto, to do; with im [in] negative.

Imprecate, im'.prē.kate, to curse; im'precāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), im'precāt-ing (Rule xix.), im'precāt-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Imprecation, im'.prē.kay''.shūn; im'precatory.

Latin imprecatio (im [in] precāre, to pray against a person).

Impregnable, im.prēg'.na.b'l, not to be taken by force (R. xxiii.), impreg'nably; impregnability, im.prēg'.nā.bīl''.ī.ty.

(The "g" in these words is a gross blunder. See below.)

Fr. imprenable, imprenabilité; Lat. im [in] prehendi, not to be taken.

Impregnate, im.prēg'.nate, to fecundate, to saturate; impreg'nāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), impreg'nāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Impregnation, im.prēg.nay''.shūn, the act of impregnating.

French imprégner, imprégnation (Latin prægnatio; Greek gennaō).

Imprescriptible, im'.pre.scrip''.tī.b'l, inalienable, not to be lost on the plea of prescription; imprescrip'tibly.

Unprescribed, un'.prē.skrijb'd'', not prescribed (Rule lxxii.)

French imprescriptible; (Latin im [in] prescribo, prescriptio.)

Impress, (noun) im'.press; (verb) im.press' (Rule l.), a stamp, to stamp; impressed, im.press't; impress-ing, impress'-ible, impress'ibly; impressibility, im'.press.sī.bīl''.ī.ty.

Impression, im.prēsh'on, a mark, a notion, an indistinct remembrance. Impressive, im.prēs'.siv, exciting attention; impress'ive-ly, impress'ive-ness.

Impress'-ment, the act of forcing men into the army or navy.

Latin impressio, imprimō, supine impressum, to imprint.

Imprimis, im.prī'.mis, in the first place. (Latin imprimis.)

Imprint, (noun) im'.print, (verb) im.print' (Rule l.)

Im'print, name and address of printer attached to books, &c. Imprint', to fix on the mind, to stamp; imprint'ed (Rule xxxvi.), imprint'-ing. Imprimā'tur.

Ital. imprimere, to print; Fr. imprimer; Lat. imprimere, to engrave.

Imprison (better emprison), im.priz'.ōn, to put into prison; imprisoned, im.priz'.ōnd; impris'on-ing, impris'on-er; imprison-ment, im.priz'.ōn.ment. (Fr. emprisonner, &c.)

Improbable, im.prōb'.ā.b'l, not probable; improb'ably;

Improbability, plu. improbabilities, im.prōb'.ā.bīl''.ī.tiz.

Latin im [in] probābilis, not probable; French improbable, &c.

Improbability, im.prōb'.ī.ty, dishonesty. (Latin im [in] probūitas.)

Improficiency, im'.pro.fīsh''.ēn.sy, want of proficiency.

Latin im [in] proficiens (im [in] pro fūcto, not to make progress).

Impromptu (French), im.prŏmp'.tu, offhand, without study.

Latin im[in]promptus, not drawn out (prŏmo, to draw out).

Improper, im.prŏp'.er, not proper; improp'er-ly.

Impropriety, plu. improprieties, im'.pro.prī''.ĕ.tīz.

Improper Fraction, a fraction in which the denominator or divisor is not greater than the numerator: as $\frac{3}{3}$ or $\frac{3}{2}$.

Lat. im[in]proprius, not proper, impropietas.

Impropriator, im.prŏ'.pri.ā.tor, a layman who "enjoys" ecclesiastical revenues; impropriation, im.prŏ'.pri.ā''.shŭn, secularisation of church property.

Latin im[in]proprius, for [the use of] a private person or layman.

Impropriety, plu. improprieties, im'.pro.prī''.ĕ.tīz. (See Improper.)

Improve, im.proov' (not im.prŏve), to ameliorate; improved, im.proovd'; improv-ing (Rule xix.), im.proov'.ing; improv-ing-ly; improv-er, im.proov'.er; improv-able, im.proo'.vā.b'l (R. xx.); improv'able-ness; improvably, im.proo'.vā.b'ly; improvability, im.proo'.va.bīl''.ī.ty.

Improvement, im.proov'.ment, amendment.

(Of the sixteen words in "-ove," only two (move, prove) are pronounced -oov; four (dove, glove, love, shove) are pronounced -ue, and the rest are pronounced -ŏve, Rule lxxi.)

Latin pro-vehō, to carry or travel forwards.

Improvident, im.prŏv'.ī.dent, not provident; improv'ident-ly;

Improvidence, im.prŏv'.ī.dence, want of foresight.

Latin im[in]providens, gen. -providentis, not fore-seeing.

Improvise, im'.pro.vīz' (not im'.pro.veez'), to compose [poetry] offhand; improvised' (3 syl.), improvis-ing (Rule xix.)

Improvisator, plu. improvisators, im'.pro.vīz''.ā.torz; fem. improvisatrice, im'.pro.vīz''.ā.trīs.

Improvisatore, plu. improvisatori, im'.pro.vīz'.a.tō.ry, plu. im'.pro.vīz'.a.tō.rī (Eng.-Ital.), improvisator, &c.

Improvisation, im.pro.vī.za'.shŭn, the art of improvising.

French improvisation, improvisatrice; Italian improvisatore, improvisatori, improvisare, to make rhymes extempore.

Imprudent, im.prŭ'.dent, not prudent; impru'dent-ly; imprudence, im.prŭ'.dence, indiscretion.

Latin im[in]prudens, not prudent; imprudētia.

Impudent, im'.pu.dent, not modest; im'pudent-ly, rudely.

Impudence, im'.pu.dence, effrontery, want of modesty.

Latin im[in]pudens, not modest; impudētia.

Impugn, im.pūn', to call in question; impugned, im.pūnd'; impugn-ing, im.pū'ning; impugn-er, im.pū'ner; impugn-able, im.pū'.nā.b'l, subject to be impugned.

Archaic Fr. impugner, to impugn; Lat. impugnare, to fight against.

Impulse, im'pũlse, without reflection; impulsive, im.pũl'siv, energetic and thoughtless; impul'sive-ly, impũl'sive-ness.

Impulsion, im.pũl'shũn, the force given to a body in motion by another striking against it.

Impel, im.pẽl; impelled' (2 syl.), impell'-ing, impell'-er, Rule iv. ("Impel" would be better with double l.)

Latin impello, supine impulsum (im[in]pello, to drive against).

Impunity, im.pũ'nĩ.ty, without punishment.

Latin impũnitas (im[in]punire, not to punish).

Impure, im.pũre', not pure; impure'-ness, impure'-ly.

Impurity, plu. impurities, im.pũ'rĩ.tĩz.

Latin im[in]pũrus, not pure; impũritas; French impureté (!)

Impute, im.pũtẽ', to attribute (followed by to); impũt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), impũt'-ing (Rule xix.), impũt'-er, impũt'-able, imput'able-ness, imput'ably.

Imputation, im'pu.tay''shũn. Imputative, im.pũ'ta.tĩv; impu'tative-ly, by imputation.

French imputable, imputation, imputatif, imputer.

Latin im[in]putare, to charge against, to think ill of.

(Of the eighty or ninety words beginning with "im-p.." only three [imp, im-plant, im-pound] are native words, two of which have been tampered with, the rest are Latin or Gallic-Latin. In rather more than half the number "im-" is negative, in ten examples it verbalises a noun, and in thirty-one examples it stands for the prep. "in.")

In- (negative) does not belong to native English words, our proper negative prefix is un- or on-, in one example (inability) changed to in-.

In- is the Latin negative, equivalent to un-. Dis- is Latin and Greek. Both these have been adopted in the French and English languages.

In- and un- signify the absence of the thing referred to.

Dis- signifies severance from the thing referred to.

In- (not negative) belongs to our native words as well as to Latin and French words. Its meaning is in, into, within, against, and in some instances it simply intensifies.

In- before nó- in five instances is written ig- (always in a negative sense), but in a similar number of examples it is written in-. Before the labials "b," "m," "p," it is written im-. Before "l" it is l-, and before "r" it is ir-.

In a negative sense in- should never be written en-, although as a preposition it is not unfrequently so written in words borrowed from the French, and always so in words derived from the Greek.

When en- is prefixed to native words it means "to make," "to collect," or it verbalises a word.

In (prep.); inn'-er (R. i.), in'ner-most, in'most. Inn, an hotel. "Inner-most" is not most inner, but a corruption of inne-most or inne-mest.

Inability, in' a.bil' .i.ty, absence of ability. Disabil'ity, loss of ability. (The idea of "separation" is shown better in disable.) (Old English in-, neg.; abal, ability.)

(This is the only example of in-, neg. [for un-] with a native word.)

Inaccessible, in.ak.sēs' .sī.b'l (not un-, being from the Latin; not -able, because not of the first conj.), inapproachable; in'acces'sible-ness, in'acces'sibly.

Inaccessibility, in.āk.sēs' .sī.bīl' .i.ty, unapproachableness.

French inaccessible, inaccessibilité; Latin in-accessus, not accessible.

Inaccurate, in.āk' .kū.rate (not un-, as it is from the Latin), incorrect; inac'curate-ness, inac'curate-ly.

Inaccuracy, plu. inaccuracies, in.āk' .kū.rā.siz.

Latin in-accūrātus, -accūrātiō (v. in ac[ad]curāre, not to care for).

Inaction, in.āk' .shūn, absence of action, idleness, rest;

Inactive, in.āk' .tīv; inac'tive-ly; inactivity, -ak.tīv' .i.ty.

French inaction, inactif, inactivité. Latin in-activus, not active.

Inadequate, in.ād' .ē.kwātē (not un-, being from the Latin), insufficient; inad'equate-ly, inad'equate-ness;

Inadequacy, in.ad' .ē.kwa.sy, insufficiency.

Fr. inadéquate. Lat. in, ad-aquātus, not equal to, v. ad-aquare.

Inadmissible, in' .ād.mīs' .sī.b'l (not un-, being from the Latin; not able, because not of the first conj.); in'admissibil'ity.

Fr. inadmissible, inadmissibilité. Lat. in, ad-missus, not admitted to.

Inadvertent, in' .ad.ver' .tent, not intentional; inadver'tent-ly;

Inadvertency, plu. inadvertencies, in' .ad.ver' .tēn.siz; inadvertence, in' .ad.ver' .tēnsē, an unintentional error.

French inadvertant (wrong), inadvertance (wrong). Latin in, not, ad-vertens, gen. vertentis, turning to (in ad vertēre, not to turn to).

Inalienable, in' .āl' .ī.ē.nā.b'l (not un-, not being from the Latin), not alienable; inal'ienable-ness, inal'ien-ably.

Unalienated, un.āl' .ī.e.nate.ed, not estranged (Rule lxxii.)

French inalienable; Latin in alienāri, not to be alienated.

Inamorato, plu. innamoratos, in' .ām.ō.rak' .tōzē, a man in love; fem. innamorata, plu. innamoratas, in' .ām.ō.rak' .tah, plu. -tarz, a woman in love. (Eng.-Ital. for innamorato, &c.)

Inane, in.ain', vapid, void of energy; inane-ly, stupidly;

Inanity, plu. inanities, in.ān' .ī.tiz, vanities, sillinesses.

Inanition, in' .a.nīsh' .ōn, feebleness from starvation.

Latin inānis, inānitas, v. inānīre, to make void, to empty.

Inanimate, in.ān' .i.mate, destitute of life or animation;

Inanimation, in' .ān.ī.may' .shūn, lifelessness, spiritlessness.

Unanimated, un' .ān' .ī.ma.tēd, not animated (Rule lxxii.)

(The past part. in Fr. is negatived by peu or non, and in Eng. by un-.) Latin in-anīmus, without mind or life, inānimātus; French anime.

Inapplicable, in.ap'.pli.kũ.b'l (not un-, being Latin), not applicable; inap'plicably; inap'plicabil'ity. (Double p-.)

Unapplied, un'.ap.plide', not applied (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inapplicable, inapplicabilité; Lat. ap[ad]plicāre, to fold together.

Inappreciable, in'.ap.pree''.she'ũ.b'l (not in'.a.pree''.sha.b'l), not appreciable, invaluable, inestimable, not perceptible;

Inappreciably, in'.ap.pree''.she'a.bly. (Double p-.)

Unappreciated, un'.ap.pree''.shẽ.ũ.tẽd, not valued (R. lxxii.)

Fr. inappreciable; Lat. in ap[ad]preciātus, not prized to [its value].

Inapprehensible, in'.ap.pre.hẽn''.sĩ.b'l, not intelligible.

Unapprehen'ded, not understood (Rule lxxii.)

Lat. in, not, ap[ad]prehendẽre, supine apprehensum, to lay-hold on.

Inapproachable, in'.ap.prõch''.ũ.b'l, not to be approached.

Fr. approcher, to draw nigh (proche, near; Lat. proxime), with in-, neg.

Unapproached, un'.ap.proched', not approached (R. lxxii.)

Inappropriate, in'.ap.prõ''.pri.ate (not in'.a.prõ''.pri.ate), not appropriate; in'apprõ'priate-ly, in'apprõ'priate-ness.

Unappropriated, un'.ap.prõ''.pri.ũ.tẽd, not appropriated.

(The past part. is negated in Fr. by peu or non, and in Eng. by un-.)

French approprier; Latin in ap[ad]propriāre, not to appropriate.

Inapt, in.ap't (not un-, being Latin), unfit; inapt'-ly, inapt'-ness. Inaptitude, in.ap'.tĩ.tũde, unfitness.

French inaptitude; Latin in aptus, not apt.

Inarticulate, in'.ar.tĩk''kũ.late (not un-, being Latin), not articulate; inartic'ulate-ly, inartic'ulate-ness.

Inarticulation, in'.ar.tĩk''kũ.lay''.shũn, indistinct speech.

Unarticulated, un'.ar.tĩk''.ũ.lāte.ẽd, not articulated.

French inarticulation; Latin in artĩculātus, not articulated.

Inartificial, in.ar'.tĩ.fĩsh''.ũl (not un-, being Latin), not artificial; inartific'ial-ly, artlessly.

French inartificiel (wrong). Latin in, not; artificialis (arte factus).

In-as-much-as, in'.az.mũch''.az, seeing that, because.

Inattentive, in'.ũt.tẽn''.tĩv (not in'.a.tẽn''.tĩve), not attentive; inatten'tive-ly; inattention, in'.ũt.tẽn''.shũn.

Unattentive should be discarded. (Double t-.)

French inattention, inattentif. Latin in, not; attentus, attentive, -attentio (at[ad]tendo, to stretch [the mind] to something).

Inaudible, in.aw'.dĩ.b'l (not un-, being Latin; not -able, because it is not of the first conj.), not audible; inau'dible-ness, inau'dibly; inaudibility, in.aw'.dĩ.bĩl''.ĩty.

Latin in auditus, not heard; v. audire, to hear.

Inaugural, in.aw'.gũ.rũl, made at inauguration.

Inaugurate, in.aw'.gu.rate, to invest with office; inau'gu- rāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), inau'gurāt-ing (R. xix.), inau'gurāt-or (R. xxxvii.); inauguration, in.aw'.gū.ray''.shūn.

French inaugural, inaugurer, inauguration; Latin inaugūrāre, inaugūrātio (augur, a soothsayer. To consult a soothsayer);

Inauspicious, in'.aus.pīsh''.ūs (not un-, being Latin), not auspicious; inauspic'ious-ly, inauspic'ious-ness.

Latin in auspicūm, not [favoured by] the auspices (avis spēcio, to observe the birds [in augury]).

Inborn', innate. (Old English in boren, past part. of bēr[an].)

Inbrēd', inherent. (Old Eng. in brēd, past part of brēd[an].)

Incalculable, in.kāl'.ku.lū.b'l, not calculable; incal'culably.

Uncalculat-ed, un.kāl'.ku.lātē.ed, not reckoned up.

(The past part. in Fr. is negatived by non or peu, and in Eng. by un-.) French incalculable; Latin in[not]calculātus, calculated.

Incandescent, in'.kăn.dēs''.sent, glowing with white heat.

Incandescence, in'.kăn.dēs''.sense, the glow of white heat.

French incandescent, incandescence; Latin incandescēre.

Incantation, in'.kăn.tay''.shūn, the words used by enchanters,

French incantation; Latin in-cantāre, to enchant or charm.

Incapable, in.kay'.pa.b'l, not capable; incapably.

In'capabil'ity. Incapacity, in'.ka.pās.i.ty.

Incapacious, in'.ka.pay''.shūs; incapa'cious-ness.

Incapacitate, in'.ka.pās''.ī.tate, to disqualify; incapac'i-tāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incapac'itāt-ing.

Fr. incapable, incapacité; Lat. in capax, not capable (v. capio).

Incarcerate, in.kar'.se.rate, to imprison; incar'cerāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incar'cerāt-ing; incarceration, -se.ray''.shūn.

Lat. incarcērātio, incarcērāre (carcer, a prison); Fr. incarcération.

Incarnate, in.kar'.nate, embodied in flesh [said of deity];

Incarnation, in'.kar.nay''.shūn, assumption of a form of flesh.

Latin incarnātio, incarnāre (in caro, gen. carnis, in the flesh).

Incautious, in.kaw'.shūs, not cautious; incau'tious-ness, incau'tious-ly. (Latin incautus, not cautious.)

Incendiary, plu. incendiaries, in.sēn'.dī.a.riz, one who maliciously sets fire to [buildings], or inflames the public mind;

Incendiarism, in.sēn'.dī.a.rizm. (Lat. incendiārius, incendēre.)

Incense, in'.sēnse, odoriferous exhalation. Incense', to provoke; incensed, in.sēn't; incens'-ing (Rule xix.), provoking to anger; incens'-er; incens-ive, in.sēn'.siv, provocative.

(As a rough rule, if "c" and "s" occur in the same syl. "c" is followed by "s," and "s" by "c," R. lix. "Sense" is an exception.)

Lat. incensum, incense; incensus, provoked (incendēre, to inflame).

Incentive, in.sēn'.tīv, a stimulus. (Latin incentivum.)

- Incertitude, in.ser'.ti.tude, want of stability; in.ter'z.z (These forms are established but cannot be commended.)
Uncertain, un.ser'.t'n, not sure; uncer'tain-ness;
Uncertainty, plu. uncertainties, un.ser'.t'n.tiz. (These forms are established but cannot be commended.)
 French incertitude, incertain; Latin incertitudo, incertus.
Incessant, in.sēs'.sānt, without cessation; inces'sant-ly.
 Latin incessanter (in cessāre, not to cease); French incessant.
Incest, in'.sēst; incestuous, in.sēs'.tū.ūs; incestuous-ly.
 Latin incestum, incestuosus (in castus, not chaste); French inceste.
Inch, the twelfth part of a foot in length. (Old English incc.)
Incidence, Incidents. Accidence, Accidents.
Incidence, in'.sī.dence, a term in optics, as the line or angle of incidence, opposed to the line or angle of reflexion. The two angles being always equal.
Co-incidence, "a chance concurrence of similar events," is used, but incidence is not used to signify "a chance occurrence."
Incident, plu. incidents, in'.sī.dentz, an occurrence.
Accidence, ak'.sī.dence, a rudimentary grammar;
Accident, plu. accidents, ak'.sī.dentz, a mishap.
Incidental, in'.sī.dēn'.tal, casual; inciden'tal-ly.
 French incidence (in Geom.), incident, incidentel; Latin incidens, gen. incidentis, v. incidēre (in-cādo, to fall on).
 French accident; Latin accidens, gen. accidentis (ac[ad]cādo).
Incipient, in.sīp'.i.ent, rudimentary; incip'ient-ly.
 Lat. incipiens, gen. incipientis, v. incipere (Old Lat. cepio, to begin).
Incisive, in.sī'sīv, cutting; inci'sive-ly. Incisor, a front tooth.
Incision, in.sīzh'.un, a cutting into [something].
 Latin incisio, incisōres [dentes] (in-cādo, to cut into).
Incite, in.sīte', to stir up; incit'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incit'-er (Rule xix.), incit'-ing, inciting-ly, incite'-ment.
Incitation, in'.sī.tay''shūn, an incentive, a strong motive.
Insight, in'sīte, a discriminating knowledge, a glance.
 Latin institatio, institāmentum, v. institāre, to spur on.
Incivility, plu. incivilities, in'.sī.vīl'.i.tiz, discourtesy.
Unciv'il, not civil; unciv'il-ly, not civilly.
Uncivilised, un.civ'.īl.īzd, not civilised (Rule lxxii.)
 (The past part. in Fr. is negatived by peu or non, and in Eng. by un.)
 Fr. incivilité, incivil; Lat. incivilis (in, not; civilis, like a citizen).
Inclement, in.klēm'.ent, not mild; inclement-ly, rigorously;
Inclemency, in.klēm'.en.sy, severely cold [weather].
 Lat. inclementia (in clemens, not mild); Fr. inclemence, inclement.
Incline, in.klīnē', to slope, to feel disposed; inclined' (2 syl.), inclin'-ing (Rule xix.), inclin'-er, inclin'-able;
Inclination, in'.klī.nay''shūn, willingness, slope.

Un-inclined not disposed [a passive state]. Dis-inclined, positively averse; disinclination, aversion, unwillingness.

Latin inclinabilis, inclinatio, in-clināre; French inclination.

Inclose, in.klōze', to shut up one thing in another: as a letter in an envelope; inclosed' (2 syl.), inclōs'-ing (Rule xix.); inclōs'-er, one who incloses; inclosure, in.klō'.zhūr, something inclosed. ("Enclose" is the French form, enclos.)

Include, in.klūde', to comprise; includ'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), includ'-ing; inclusive, in.clū'.siv, comprehending;

Exclusive, not comprehending, leaving out.

Inclū'sive-ly; Exclusive-ly.

Inclusion, in.klū'.zhūn, the act of including, the state of being included. Exclusion, the state of being left out.

Old Eng. clusa, a prison; Lat. inclusio, v. inclūdo, supine inclūsum, to include; excludo, supine exclūsum, to exclude.

Incognito, plu. incognitos (Rule xlii.), fem. incognita (Italian), in.kōg'.nī.tōze, in.kōg'.nī.tah. Contracted form incog', in disguise, in privacy. Incognisable, in.kōg'.nī.za.b'l, not recognisable. (Latin incognitus, unknown.)

Incoherent, in.kō.hē'.rent, not coherent; incoherent-ly;

Incoherency, plu. incoherencies, in.kō.hē'.rēn.siz;

Incoherence, in.kō.hē'.rence, want of coherence.

Fr. incohérent, incoherence; Lat. in, co[con]hæreo, not to stick together.

Incombustible (not -able), in'.cōm.būs'.tī.b'l, not combustible; incombustible-ness, incombustibly, incombū'stibility.

French incombustible, incombustibilité; Latin in-combūrere, supine combustum (con-buro [Old Latin], uro, to burn together).

Income, in'.kūm, annual amount of property arising from interest, business, pay, &c. (German einkommen, income.)

Incommensurable, in'.kōm.mēn''.su.ra.b'l, not having a common measure; incommensurably, incommen'surability.

Incommensurate, in'.kōm.mēn''.su.rate, disproportionate.

Fr. incommensurable, incommensurabilité (Lat. in, com, mensūra).

Inconmode, in'.kōm.mōde' (not in'.kō.mode'), to inconvenience; incommōd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incommōd'-ing (Rule xix.)

Inconmodious, in'.kōm.mō''.dī.ūs (not in'.kō.mō''jūs), inconvenient; incommo'dious-ness, incommo'dious-ly.

Lat. incommōdāre, incommōdus; Fr. inconmode, v. incommoder.

Incommunicable, in'.kōm.mu''.nī.kā.b'l, not able to be communicated; incommu'nicable-ness, incommu'nicably.

Incommunicative, in'.kōm.mu''.nī.kā.tīv, reserved.

Uncommu'nicated, not communicated (Rule lxii.)

Uncommunicative, un'.kōm.mu''.nī.kā.tīv.

French incommunicable, incommunicabilité, peu communicatif.

Latin incommunicabilis; in, not; communicare (communis).

Incommutable, in'.kõm.mũ'' .ta.b'l, indefeasible; incommu'table-ness, incommu'tably. Uncommut'ed (Rule lxxii.)

French incommutable; Latin in-commutābilis (in, com, mutāre).

Incomparable, in.kõm'.pũ.ra.b'l (not in kõm pair'.a.b'l), not to be compared together; incom'parable-ness; incom'parably, infinitely, beyond all comparison.

Uncompared, un'.kõm.paird', not compared together.

(The past part. in Fr. is negatived by peu or non, and in Eng. by un-.) Latin incomparābilis (in, comparāri, not to be compared).

Incompatible (not -able), in'.kõm.pũ'' .i.b'l, not consistent [with]; incompat'ible-ness, incompat'ibly. Incompat'ibles (in Chem.), salts which in contact decompose each other.

Incompatibility, in'.kõm.pũ'' .i.b'il'' .i.ty, unsuitability.

French incompatible, incompatibilité (Latin in, com petēre).

Incompetent (not -tant), in.kõm'.pẽ.tent, not competent; incom'petent-ly, incom'petence, incom'petency.

French incompétent, incompétence; Latin incompētens, gen. -pētentis.

Incomplete, in'.kõm'.pleet' (not un-, being Latin), not complete; incomplete'-ness, in an unfinished state; incomplete'-ly.

Uncompleted, un'.kom.pleet'.ed, not completed (Rule lxxii.)

French incomplet; Latin in, not; complere; supine completum.

Incomprehensible, in.kõm'.pre.hẽn'' .sĩ.b'l (not -able), beyond human understanding; incomprehen'sibly;

Incomprehensibility, in.kõm'.pre.hẽn'' .sĩ.b'il'' .i.ty.

Incomprehensive, in.kõm'.pre.hẽn'' .sĩv.

Uncomprehended, un.kõm'.pre.hẽn'' .dẽd, not understood.

Fr. incompréhensible, incompréhensibilité; Lat. incomprēhensibilis.

Incompressible, in'.kom.prẽs'' .sĩ.b'l, not to be reduced in size by pressure; incompressibility, in'.kõm.prẽs'' .sĩ.b'il'' .i.ty.

Uncompressed, un'.kõm.prest', not pressed together (R. lxxii.)

French incompressible, incompressibilité. Latin in, not; comprimere, supine compressum (in, con, pressus, not squeezed together).

Inconceivable, in'.kõn.see'' .vũ.b'l, not to be imagined; inconceiv'able-ness, inconceiv'ably (Rule xxviii.)

(“-able,” the wrong conj., Rule xxiii. This error, as usual, is French.) French inconcevable. Latin in, not; concipere (con capio).

Inconclusive, in'.kõn.klu'' .zĩv, not conclusive; inconclu'sive-ly, inconclu'sive-ness. Unconcluded, not finished (R. lxxii.)

Fr. non conclu. Lat. in, not; concludo, sup. conclusum (con claudo).

Incondensable, in'.kõn.dẽn'' .sũ.b'l (not -ible, being the 1st conj., Lat.), not to be condensed; inconden'sably, inconden'sabil'ity. Also uncondensable, uncondensability.

French non-condensible, non-condensibilité. French non and peu are represented by un-. Latin in, condensari, not to be condensed.

Incongruent, in.kõn'.gru.ent, not suitable; incon'gruent-ly;

Incongruous, -gru.üs, not in keeping; incon'gruous-ly;

Incongruity, plu. incongruities, in'.kõn.gru''ä.tiz.

French incongruité; Latin incongruus, incongruens, gen. -entis, incongruitas (in, con, gruere, not to flock together).

Inconsequential, in.kõn'.sě.kwěn''.shäl, not following from the premises, of small moment; incon'sequen'tial-ly.

Latin inconsēquens, gen. -sequētis, inconsēquentia (in, con, sequor).

Inconsiderable, in'.kõn.sĩd''.ě.ra.b'l, not important; -sid'erably;

Inconsiderate, in'.kõn.sĩd''.ě.rate, thoughtless, rash; inconsid'erate-ly, inconsid'erate-ness, thoughtlessness;

Inconsideration, in'.kõn.sĩd''.ě.ray''.shŭn, negligence.

Unconsidered, un'.kõn.sĩd''.erd, not duly thought about.

French peu considéré. Our un- represents the French peu, mal, non.
Lat. inconsideratio, inconsiderāre, not to consider; Fr. inconsideration.

Inconsistent, in'.kõn.sīs''.tent, not consistent; inconsis'tent-ly;

Inconsistency, plu. inconsistencies, in'.kõn.sīs''.těn.sĭz;

Inconsistence, in'.kõn.sīs''.tense, incongruity.

Latin in, con, sistere, not to bide together.

Inconsolable, in'.kõn.sõ''.la.b'l (not -ible, being the 1st. conj., Lat.), not to be solaced; inconsolably, in'.kõn.sõ''.la.bly.

Disconsolate, dis.kõn'.so.late, lost to comfort, unhappy; disconsolate-ly, discon'solate-ness.

Unconsoled, un'.kõn.sõled'', not solaced (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inconsolable; Lat. inconsolābilis (in, con, solari, not to be solaced).

Inconstant, in.kõn'.stant, not constant; incon'stant-ly; inconstancy, in.kõn'.stān.sy, fickleness, want of persistency.

French inconstant, inconstance; Latin inconstans, gen. -constantis, inconstantia (in, con, stans [stare], not to stand firmly).

Inconsumable, in'.kõn.su''.mä.b'l, not able to be consumed.

Unconsumed, un'.kõn.sumed'', not consumed (Rule lxxii.); unconsum'-ing [fire], fire which burns without consuming.

Latin in, consumere, not to consume (con sumo, to take wholly).

Incontestable, in'.kõn.tēs''.ta.b'l, indisputable; incontest'ably.

Uncontested, un'.kõn.tēs''.tēd, not disputed (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, contestari, not to be proved by witnesses (testis).

Incontinent, in.kõn'.tĭ.nent, not chaste; incon'tinent-ly.

Incontinence, in.kõn'.tĭ.nence; incon'tinency.

French incontinence, incontinent; Latin incontinens, gen. -tinentis, incontinentia (in, con, teneo, not [able] to contain [oneself]).

Incontrovertible, in.kõn'.tro.ver''.tĭ.b'l, indisputable; incontro-ver'tibly, incontrovertibil'ity, indisputability.

Uncontroverted, un.kõn'.tro.ver.ted, not called in question.

Uncontrovertible, not to be changed from one form to another: gold is uncontrovertible.

French incontrovertible, non-controverti, non-controvertible, non being represented by un-. These words are ill-formed. The Latin verb is controversāri, to dispute. The French have evidently taken vertere (to turn) for versāri (to converse), and we have copied the error.

Inconvenient, in'.kōn.vē'nī.ent, not commodious; inconvenient-ly; inconvenience, in'.con.vē'nī.ence, that which deranges, to derange; inconvenienced (5 syl.), inconveniencing (Rule xix.), incommoding.

Inconveniency, plu. inconveniencies, in'.con.vē'nī.ēn.siz.

Latin inconvēniens, gen. -vénientis (in, con, vèniens, not coming together [amicably]); French inconvenient.

Incorporate, in.kor'.pō.rate, to unite into one body, to intermix; incorporat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incorporat-ing (Rule xix.)

Incorporation, in.kor'.pō.ray''shūn.

Incorporeal (not incorporal), in'.kor.pō''rē.āl, not having a material body. Incorporeal-ly (not incorporal-ly), in'.kor.pō''rē.āl.ly, immaterially, without a material body.

Incorporeity, in.kor'.pō.rē''ī.ty, immateriality.

Incorporealism, in'.kor.pō''rē.āl.izm, spiritual existence.

Latin incorporāre, incorporātio; French incorporer, incorporation.

Latin incorporālis or incorporeus; French incorporel, incorporeal.

Latin incorporālitās; French incorporalitté, incorporeality.

Fr. incorporeité (Lat. in corpus, without body). See Corporeal.

Incorrect, in'.kor.rekt', not correct; incorrect-ly, incorrect-ness.

Uncorrected, un'.kor.rēk''tēd, not corrected (Rule lxxii.)

(The past part. is negated in Fr. by non or peu, and in Eng. by un-).

French incorrect; Latin incorrectus (in, corrigere, supine -correctum).

Incorrigible, in.kor'ri.jib'l, not able to be reformed; incorrigible-ness; incorrigibly, beyond the hope of reform.

Incorrigibility, in.kor'ri.ji.bīl''ī.ty, an incorrigible state.

Fr. incorrigible, incorrigibilité; Lat. in corrigi, not to be corrected.

Incorrodible, in'.kor.rō''dī.b'l, not possible to be corroded;

Incorrodibility, in'.kōr.rō'.dī.bīl''ī.ty.

Uncorroded, un'.kor.rō''dēd, not corroded (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. corroder; Lat. corrodere (in, cor[con], rodere, not to gnaw away).

In'corrupt', not subject to decay. Un'corrupt', not depraved.

Incorrupt'ed, not turned to corruption.

Uncorrupted, not morally depraved.

Incorrupt'-ible, not liable to decay. Uncorrupt'ible, not liable to be morally corrupted (1 Cor. xv. 52).

Incorrupt'ible-ness, incorrupt'ibil'ity, the quality of not being subject to material corruption;

Uncorrupt'ible-ness, uncorrupt'ibil'ity, the quality of not being subject to moral corruption (Titus ii. 7).

Incorruption, in'.kor.rŭp''.shŭn, the state of not being subject to material corruption (1 Cor. xv. 50);

Uncorruption, un'.kor.rŭp''.shŭn, the state of not being subject to moral corruption.

Fr. in corruptible, in corruptibilit  ; Lat. in corruptibilis, in corruptio.

Increase, (noun) in'.kr  se, (verb) in'.kr  se' (Rule 1.)

In'crease, augmentation: Increase', to get larger; increased', increas'-ing (Rule xix.), increas'ing-ly, increas'-able.

Latin increscere, to grow larger and larger. Verbs in -sco are inceptive.

Incredible, in'.kr  d'   .b'l, not credible; incred'ible-ness, incred'-ibly; incredibility, in'.kr  d'   .bil''.i.ty;

Incredulous, in'.kr  d'   .l  s, unbelieving; incred'ulous-ness, incred'ulous-ly. Incredulity, in'.kr  d'  l''.i.ty.

Uncredited, un'.kr  d'   .ed, not believed, not trusted.

Uncred'itable-ness, quality or state of not being trustworthy.

Discred'itable, base, ruinous to one's reputation.

Discredit, dis.kred'   , dishonour, disgrace.

French incr  dible, incr  dibilit  , incr  dulit  , discredit; Latin incr  dibilis, incr  dibilitas, incr  ditus, incr  d  ltas, incr  d  lus.

Increment, in'.kr  ment, increase. (Latin incrementum.)

Incriminate, in'.kr  m'   .nate, to charge with fault; incrim'in  t-ed (R. xxxvi.), incrim'in  t-ing. (In Lat. the second i is long.)

Latin incrimin  re, to incriminate; French incriminer.

Incrust, in'.kr  st' (not en-, being Latin), to form a hard crust; incrust'-ed, incrust'-ing. Incrustation, -tay''sh  n.

French incrustation, incruster; Latin incrust  tio, incrust  re.

Incubate, in'.k  .bate, to brood; in'cub  t-ed (Rule xxxvi.), in'cub  t-ing (Rule xix.), in'cub  t-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Incubation, in'.k  .bay''sh  n; incubative, in'.k  .b  .t  v.

Incubus, in'.k  .b  s, a night-mare, a mental oppression.

Latin incub  tio, incub  tor, inc  bus, incub  re; French incubation.

Inculcate, in'.k  l'.kate (not in'.k  l.kate), to teach; incul'c  t-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incul'c  t-ing, incul'c  t-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Inculcation, in'.k  l.kay''sh  n, indoctrination.

Latin in culc  re (in calco, to tread in; calx, a heel), in culc  tor.

Inculpate, in'.k  l'.pate, to criminate; incul'p  t-ed (Rule xxxvi.), incul'p  t-ing (Rule xix.); inculpatory, in'.k  l'.pa.t  .ry.

Inculpation, in'.k  l.pay''sh  n, censure.

Inculpable, in'.k  l'.pa.b'l, unblamable; incul'pably; inculpability, in'.k  l'.pa.bil''.i.ty, freedom from blame.

French in culpable, in culpation, in culper; Latin in culp  bilis, in culp  re. (In all these cases the in- is negative.)

"Inculpate," to blame, is directly opposite to the Latin in culpare (to hold blameless), and the French in culper.

We have opposed it to the English-Latin word ex-culpate, but having a fixed meaning in Latin it ought not to be reversed:

Incumbent, in.kũm'.bent, a clergyman with a "living," obligatory; incum'bency, plu. incum'bencies, in.kũm'.bẽn.siz.

Latin incumbens, gen. incumbentis (in-cumbere, to lie upon).

Incur, in.kur', to become liable; incurred' (2 syl.), incurr'-ing, Rule iv. (Latin in-curro, to run into.)

Incurable, in.kũ'.rã.b'l, not to be cured; incũ'erable-ness, in-cũ'rably; incurability, in.kũ'.rã.bil''ĩ.ty.

French incurable, incurabilité; Latin in, not, cũrabilis, v. cũrãre.

Indebted, in.dẽt'.ed (not en-, being Latin), to owe; indebtedness, in.dẽt'.ed.ness. (Latin indebitus.)

Indecency, plu. indecencies, in.dẽe'.sẽn.siz, indecorum.

Inde'cent, offensive to modesty; inde'cent-ly.

French indẽcent, indẽcens; Latin indẽcens, gen. -entis (in dẽceo).

Indecision, in'.dẽ.sizh'.ũn, want of decision; indecisi'ive, in'.dẽ.sĩ'.sĩv; indecisi've-ly, indecisi've-ness.

Undecided, un'.dẽ.sĩ'.dẽd, not decided (Rule lxxii.)

French indẽcision; Latin in, not, dẽcidẽre, sup. decisum (de cãdo).

Indeclinable, in'.dẽ.kli''.nã.b'l, not declinable.

Undeclined, un'.dẽ.klind', without case-endings (R. lxxii.)

Indecorous, in'.dẽ.kõr'rũs (not in.dẽk'õ.rũs), not decorous; indecor'ous-ly; indeco'rum, impropriety of conduct.

Latin indẽcõrum (in, not, dẽcor, decent, v. dẽco, to be fit).

Indeed, in fact, is it possible? (Old English in dẽd, in fact.)

Indefatigable, in'.dẽ.fãt'.ĩ.gã.b'l, persistently industrious; indefat'igable-ness, indefat'igably, indefat'igability.

Latin indẽfãtigãbilis, in, dẽfãtigãri, not to be wearied.

Indefeasible, in'.dẽ.fee'.zã.b'l, inalienable; indefea'sibly.

Indefeasibility, in'.dẽ.fee'.zã.bil''ĩ.ty, imprescriptibility.

Low Latin in, not, dẽfẽsibilis (Latin de-ficio [facio], to undo).

Indefensible, in'.dẽ.fẽn'.sĩ.b'l, not to be defended; indefen'sibly;

Indefensibility, in'.dẽ.fẽn'.sĩ.bil''ĩ.ty.

Undefended, un'.dẽ.fẽn'.dẽd, not defended (Rule lxxii.)

Lat. in, not, dẽfẽdẽre, supine dẽfensum; Fr. indẽfẽndable (wrong).

Indefinite, in.dẽf'.ĩ.nĩt (not in.dẽf'.ĩ.nĩte), not definite; indef'inite-ly, indef'inite-ness, indef'in'ity; indefinitive, in'.dẽ.fĩn'.ĩ.tĩv; indef'in'itive-ly.

Indefinable (Rule xxiii.), in'.dẽ.fĩ''.nã.b'l; indefi'nably.

Undefined, un'.dẽ.fĩnd', not defined (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, dẽfĩnĩre, dẽfĩnĩtivus; French indẽfĩnissable (wrong).

Indeliberate, in'.dẽ.lib''.ẽ.rate, without due consideration; indelib'erate-ly. Undelib'erated (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, dẽlibẽrãre, to deliberate (libra, a balance).

Indelible, in.dēl'.i.b'l (not -able), not to be erased;

Indelibly, in.dēl'.i.b'il''i.ty.

(These words are disgraceful and ought to be corrected into indeble, indebly, and indebility. The verb is dēleo, not delio.)

Fr. indéléble, indélébilité; Lat. indēlebilis (dēleo, to blot out).

Indelicate, in.dēl'.i.kate, not refined; indel'icate-ly, indel'icate-ness; indel'icacy, plu. indel'icacies, in.dēl'.i.ka.siz.

French indélicat; Latin in, not, dēlicātus, delicate, dainty.

Indemnify, in.dēm'.nī.fy, to secure against loss; indemnifies, in.dēm'.nī.fize; indemnified, in.dēm'.nī.fide (Rule xi.); indem'nifi-er, indem'nify-ing. Indemnification, in.dēm'.nī.fī.kay''shūn, security against loss.

Indemnity, plu. indemnities, in.dēm'.nī.tiz.

Fr. indemnité; Lat. indemnīs facere [facere], to secure from loss.

Indemonstrable, in'.dē.mōn''.strā.b'l, not to be demonstrated.

Undemonstrated, un'.dē.mōn''.strā.ted, not proved (R. lxxii.)

Latin indemonstrābilis (in, not, demonstrāri, to be demonstrated).

Indent', to mark with indentations, to make an indenture; indent'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), indent'-ing;

Indentation, in'.dēn.tay''shūn, a jag, a dent;

Indenture, in.dēn'.tchūr, a written contract, to bind by an indenture; indentured, in.dēn'.tchūrd; inden'tūre-ing.

These are ill-formed words. The Latin in-dent(atus) means without teeth, and "indent" in English means to make teeth or jags.

Latin dens, gen. dentis, a tooth; Greek ódous, gen. ódontós.

"Indentures" are so called because they were originally made in duplicate on one skin. The skin being divided with an indented or zigzag edge, the two parts of which could be fitted together.

Independent, in'.de.pēn''.dent (noun), a "dissenter," (adj.) not dependent; independ'ent-ly. Independence, in'.de.pēn''.dence, private means, self-reliance, self-confidence; independency, plu. independencies, in'.de.pēn''.dēn.siz.

Dependent on [another], "hanging on" another.

Independent of [another]. Of unites the two nouns in regimen: so exclusive of, irrespective of.

French Indépendant (wrong), indépendance (wrong); Latin in, not, dependens, gen. dependentis, dependere, to hang from or on.

Indescribable (R. xxiii.), in'.dē.skri''bā.b'l (not in'.dēs-krī''bā.b'l), not able to be described; indescr'ibably.

Undescribed, un'.dē.skribd, not described (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, de-scribere, to write down or describe.

Indestructible, in'.dē.strūk''tī.b'l (not in'.dēs.trūk''tī.b'l), imperishable; indestruc'tibly, indestructibil'ity.

Undestroyed, un'.dē.stroid', not destroyed (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. indestructible, indestructibilité; Lat. in, de-struere, to pull down.

Indeterminate, in'.dē.ter''.mī.nate, indefinite; indeter'minate-ly;

Indeterminable, in'.dē.ter''.mī.na.b'l; indeter'minably;

Indetermination, in'.dē.ter''.mī.nay''.shūn, irresolution;

Undetermined, un'.dē.ter''.mī.nd, not fixed (Rule lxxii.)

Indeterminate [quantities], those which cannot be known.

Undetermined [quantities], those which are capable of being known; but have not yet been determined.

Fr. indéterminable, indétermination; Lat. in, not, determināre.

Index, plu. indexes [of books], indices [of figures], in'.dī.sēz;

Indices, in'.dī.sēz, exponents: in 3^2 ; a^3 , the little figures 2, 3 are the indices to point out to what power the figure is to be raised; "3" is to be raised to the square or second power, $3 \times 3 = 9$; and a to the cube or third power.

Index (verb), to make an index; indexed, in'.dēx; index-ing, index'ical, index'ical-ly.

Index Expurgatorius, ex.pur'.gū.tōr''.rī.ūs, the list of books which Roman Catholics are forbidden to read till the objectionable parts are expurgated.

Index Libro'rum Prohibito'rum, the list of books wholly forbidden to the faithful in the Roman Catholic church.

Index-finger, the first finger (). (See Indicate.)

Fr. index; Lat. index, plu. indices, inventory of a book, the forefinger.

Indian, in'.dī.ān, pertaining to India, a native of India;

Indian-corn, Indian-red, Indian-yellow;

Indian-ink, or India-ink, in'.dī.ink;

India-rubber, in'.dī.rūb'.er; India-paper, in'.dī.pā'.per;

India-man, in'.dī.man; a large merchant ship for trading to India. (Persian hind; Sanskrit sind, black.)

Indicate, in'.dī.cate, to point out; indicat'ed (Rule xxxvi.), indicat-ing (R. xix.), indicat-or (R. xxxvii.), indicat'ory.

Indication, in'.dī.kay''.shūn, a premonstration.

Indicative, in'.dik'.a.tiv; indicat'ive-ly. (See Index.)

French indication, indicatif; Latin indicatio, indicativus, v. indicare (indictum, a discovery; index, a discoverer).

(This is not a compound of dicere, to show or speak, but of dicāre.)

Indict, in'.dī.te, to charge with crime. Indite', to write.

Indict-ed, in'.dī.te.ed; indict-ing, in'.dī.te'ing; indict-able, in'.dī.te'.ā.b'l, what may be legally indicted.

Indictment, in'.dī.te'.ment, a formal charge in writing.

Indict-or, in'.dī.tor, the person who indicts another.

Indict-ee, in'.dī.tee, the person indicted.

Latin in-dico, supine in-dictum, to speak against, to denounce. "Indite" is from the same Latin verb meaning "to write out."

Indiction, in.dik'.shŭn, the reckoning by cycles of fifteen years.
(This system was introduced by Constantine, A.D. 312, in connection with the payment of tribute.)

Latin indictio, declaration [of a tax prior to its being collected].

Indifferent, in.dif'.fē.rent, regardless; indifferent-ly, not well.

Indifference, in.dif'.fē.rence, absence of interest in a matter.

French indifférent, indifférence; Latin indifferens, gen. -differentis, indifferentia (in, not, differo, to distract [oneself]).

Indigenous, in.didg'ē.nŭs, native to a place.

Latin indigēna, a native (indu geno [in-gigno], born within).

Indigent, in'.dī.djēnt, needy; indigent-ly, indigency.

French indigent, indigence; Latin indigentia, indigeo, to want.

Indigestion, in'.dī.djēs''.tchŭn, constipation; indigestible (not -able), in'.dī.djēs''.ā.b'l; indigestibly.

Undigested, un'.dī.djēs''.tēd, not digested (Rule lxxii.)

French indigestion, indigestible; Latin indigestio, indigestibilis, in, not, digere, supine digestum, to dissolve, to digest.

Indignant (not indignent), in.dig'.nant, scornfully angry; indignant-ly. Indignation, in'.dig.nay''.shŭn;

Indignity, plu. indignities, in.dig'.nī.tiz, insult.

Latin indignatio, indignitas; v. indignari; French indignation, &c.

Indigo, plu. indigos (Rule xlii.), a blue dye, a plant.

Fr.; Ital., Span., indigo; Lat. indicum, the Indian plant.

Indirect, in'.dī.rēkt, not direct; indirect-ly, obliquely; indirect-ness. (Fr. indirect; Lat. indirectus, rectus, right.)

Indiscernible, in'.diz.zer''.nī.b'l (not -able), imperceptible;

Undiscerned, un'.diz.zernd' (not un'.de.zernd'), Rule lxxii.

Latin in, not, discernere, to sift [flour], to discern.

Indiscoverable, in'.dis.cŭv''.ēr.ā.b'l, not to be found out;

Undiscovered, un'.dis.cŭv''.erd, not discovered.

French in, not, découvrir. Low Latin cofera, a coffer; de-cofera, to take out of a coffer; in, de, cofera, not to take from its coffer.

Indiscreet, in'.dis.kreet', imprudent; indiscreet-ly, -creet-ness;

Indiscretion, in'.dis.krēsh''.ān (not in'.dis.kree''-shŭn).

French indiscrétion, indiscret; Latin in, not, discernere, supine discrētum, not to sift or separate [right from wrong].

Indiscriminate, in'.dis.krīm''.ī.nate, promiscuous; indiscriminate-ly; indiscrimināt-ing, not making any distinctions;

Indiscrimination, in'.dis.krīm''.ī.nay''.shŭn;

Indiscriminative, in'.dis.krīm''.ī.na.tiv; -native-ly;

Undiscriminated, un'.dis.krīm''.ī.nā.tēd, not sorted (R. lxxii.)

Lat. in, not, discriminare; Gk. dis-krima, judgment between [things].

Indispensable, in'.dis.pēn''.sa.b'l, absolutely necessary; indispensably, indispensable-ness, indispensability.

Undispensed, un'.dis.penst, not dispensed (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. indispensable, indispensabilité; Lat. in, not, dispensare.

Indisposed, in'.dis.pōzed', not in health, disinclined;

Indisposed towards, averse to.

Indisposition, in'.dis'.pō.zish''ān, ill-health, reluctance.

Undisposed of, un'.dis.pōzed' or, not sold (Rule lxxii.)

French indisposer, indisposition; Latin disponere, to set aside, hence to put in order; in-disponere, to put out of order, hence to be disordered or unwell; not set aside, hence not parted with.

Indisputable, in'.dis'.pū.tā.b'l' (not in'.dis.pū''.tā.b'l'), without dispute; indisputable-ness; indisputably, beyond all doubt.

Undisputed, un'.dis.pū''.tēd, not disputed (Rule lxxii.)

French indisputable; Latin in, not, disputābilis, disputāre.

Indissoluble, in'.dis'.zō.lū.b'l' (not in'.dis.zōl''.ā.b'l'), not capable of being melted; indissoluble-ness, indissolubly.

Indissolubility, in'.dis'.zō.lū.b'il''ī.ty.

Indissolvable, in'.dis.zōl''.vā.b'l', not able to be dissolved.

Undissolved, un'.dis.zōl.vā', not dissolved (Rule lxxii.)

French indissoluble, indissolubilité; Latin in, not, dis-solvere, to loose thoroughly; Greek sen luo, to loose altogether.

Indistinct, in'.dis.tīnct', not distinct; indistinct-ness, indistinct-ly. Indistinction, in'.dis.tīnk''shūn.

Indistinguishable, in'.dis.tīn''.gwīsh.ā.b'l', not able to be distinguished. (An ill-formed word, the Latin corresponding one is indistinguiibilis [in'.dis.tīn.gwi.b'l']).

Undistinguished, un'.dis.tīn''.gwīsh't, not distinguished.

Fr. indistinct, indistinction; Lat. in, not, distinctio, distinctus, distinguere, distinctum, to notify by a mark (Gk. stigma, a mark).

Indite, in'.dīte', to write. Indict, in'.dīte', to accuse; indit'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), indit'-ing (Rule xix.), indit'-er.

Latin in-dicere, supine indictum, to set forth in writing. Hence Cicero says "non idem loqui est, et dicere" [to write].

Individual, in'.dī.vīd''.u.āl' (not in'.dī.vī''.jū.āl'), one person or thing; individ'-ual-ly; individuality, in'.dī.vīd''.u.āl''ī.ty;

Individualise (R. xxxi.), in'.dī.vīd''.u.āl.īze, to particularise; individ'-ualised (6 syl.), individ'-ualis-ing;

Individualisation, in'.dī.vīd''.u.āl.ī.zay''shūn;

Individualism, in'.dī.vīd''.u.āl.īz'm;

Individuate, in'.dī.vīd''.u.ate; individ'-uat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), individ'-uat-ing; individuation, in'.dī.vīd''.u.ā''shūn.

Fr. individuel (!), individualité, individualisation, individualiser; Lat. individuus (in, not, dividi, to be divided).

Indivisible, in'.dī.vīz''.ī.b'l' (not -able), not capable of being divided; indivisibles, in'.dī.vīz''.ī.b'lz' (in Mathematics); indivisibly, in'.dī.vīz''.ī.b'ly, inseparably;

Indivisibility, in'.dī.vīz''.ī.b'il''ī.ty, inseparability.

Undivided, un'.dī.vī''.dēd, not divided (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. indivisible, indivisibilité; Lat. indivisibilis (in-dividere).

Indocile, in.dōs'āle, not docile; indocility, in'.dō.sil'ī.ty.

French indocile, indocilité; Latin indocilis, indocilitas.

Indoctrinate, in.dōk'tri.nate, to instruct; indoc'trināt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), indoc'trināt-ing; indoc'trination, -nay''shūn.

As the Latin word in-doctus is "un-learned," endoctrinate (French endoctriner) would have been a better form.

Indolent, in'.dō.lent, slothful; indolent'-ly, listlessly;

Indolence, in'.dō.lence, laziness, sluggishness.

Latin indolentia (v. in-dōlere, not to feel pain, not to grieve), a state in which there is no grief, "labour" being trouble.

Indomitable, in.dōm'ī.tā.b'l (not -ible, the first Latin conj.), untamable, persistent; indom'itably, persistently.

Fr. indomptable (!!) Lat. indomābilis (in, not, dōmare, to tame).

We have taken the freq. v. dōmīlare, to tame, to weary.

Indoors, in'.dōrz (not indoor, in the house. (It is the -s [-es] which gives the adverbial form, as in backwards, northwards, anights, adays.) Old English in dōr [in-dōres].

Indorse, in.dorce', to write one's name on the back [of a bill, cheque, &c.]; indorsed' (2 syl.), indors'-ing (Rule xix.)

Indorse'-ment (only five words omit e before -ment, R. xviii.)

Indors'-er, the person who indorses a bill, &c.

Indorsée', the person to whom a bill of exchange is assigned by indorsement; indors'-able.

Latin indorsāre, to put on the back (dorsum, the back).

Indubitable, in.dū'bī.tā.b'l, beyond all doubt; indū'bitable-ness; indū'bitably, doubtlessly.

French indubitable; Latin indūbīlābilis, in-dūbītāre, not to doubt.

Induce, in.dūce', to persuade; induced' (2 syl.); induc-ing (Rule xix.), in.dūce'ing; induc-er, in.dūce'er.

Induce'-ment (Rule xviii.); induc-ible, in.dūce'.i.b'l.

Latin in-dūcere, to lead into [a scheme], to persuade.

Induct, in.dūkt', to put formally into possession [of a "living"]; induct'-ed (R. xxxvi.), induct'-ing, induct'-or (R. xxxvii.)

Induction, in.dūk'.shūn, introduction into a benefice, the drawing of inferences from given data;

Inductive [philosophy], in.dūk'.tīv, the science of drawing general conclusions from given data; induc'tive-ly; induction-al, in.dūk'.shūn.āl, adj. of induction.

(In the following examples the prefix is negative.)

Inductile, in.dūk'.til, [metal] not capable of being drawn out into threads; inductility, in'.dūk.til'ī.ty.

French induction, inductile; Latin inductio, inductor (indūcere).

It is most undesirable to blow hot and cold with the same prefix.

Indue, in.dū', to invest. Endue, en.dū', to endow.

Indued' (2 syl.), indu'-ing. (Verbs ending with any two vowels, except -ue, retain both before -ing, Rule xix.)

Latin induere, to put on [a garment]; Greek enduo.

Indulge, in.dūl'ge', to humour, to cookey; indulged' (2 syl.), indulg'-ing (Rule xix.); indulg'-er; indulg'-ent, indul'-gent-ly; indulgence, in.dūl'.jence.

Fr. indulgent, indulgence; Lat. indulgentia, indulgens, gen. -entis.

Indurate, in'.dū.rate, to harden; in'durāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), in'durāt-ing (Rule xix.); induration, in'.dū.ray''.shūn.

Latin induratio, indurare (dūrus, hard); French induration.

Industry, in'.dūs.try (not in.dūs'.try), diligence in work; industries, manual trades; industrial, in.dus'.trī.āl; indus'trial-ly; industrial school, where trades, &c., are taught; industrious, in.dūs'.trī.ūs (not in.dūs'.trūs), hard-working; indus'trious-ly, diligently.

French industrie, industriel; Latin industria, industrius.

Indweller, in.dwell'.er, an inhabitant; indwell'-ing.

Norse in dwæle, to dwell in; dwæler, a dweller.

-ine (Latin -in[us]), adj., pertaining to, as canine (canis, a dog).

-ine (Latin -in[us]), nouns, (in Chem.) a gas or simple substance.

-ine (Latin -ina), feminine termination, as hero-ine.

Inebriate, in.ē'.brī.ate, to make drunk; inē'briāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), inē'briāt-ing (R. xix.); inebriety, in'.ē.brī''.ē.ty.

Inebriation, in.ē'.brī.ā''.shūn, intoxication.

Lat. inebriatio, inebriator, v. inebriare (in intensive, ebrius, drunk).

Inedited, in.ēd'.it.ēd, not published. (Latin inēditus.)

Ineffable, in.ēs'.fū.b'l, unspeakable; inef'fably.

French ineffable; Latin ineffabilis (in, not, fārī, to speak).

Ineffaceable, in.ēs'.face'.ū.b'l (only -ce and -ge retain the e before -able, Rule xx.); not to be effaced; inefface'ably.

Fr. ineffaçable (Lat. in, ef[ex]facies, not [wiped] from the face).

Ineffectual, in'.ēs'.fēk''.tū.āl (not in'.ēs'.fēk''.tehū.āl), failing to produce the desired result; ineffec'tual-ly.

Ineffective, in'.ēs'.fēk''.tīv; ineffec'tive-ly, ineffec'tive-ness.

Inefficacious, in'.ēs'.fī.kay''.shūs, inadequate; inefficacious-ly, ineffica'cious-ness, inefficacy, in.ēs'.fī.kū.sy.

Inefficient, in'.ēs'.fīsh'.ent, not sufficient for the purpose; ineffic'iently; inefficiency, in'.ēs'.fīsh''.ēn.sy.

Lat. inefficax, gen. -efficacis, without potency (in, ef[ex]facio [facio]).

Inelastic, in'.ē.lās''.tīk, not elastic; inelasticity, in'.ē.lās'.tīs''.sī.ty, not possessed of elastic power.

Non-elastic, non-elasticity. (Fr. forms non-élastique, &c.)
French in, not, élastique, élasticité (Greek elaínō, to draw out).

Inelegant, in.ē'l.ē.gānt, not elegant; inel'egant-ly; inelegance, in.ē'l.ē.gānce; inelegancy, in.ē'l.ē.gān.sy.

Ineligible, (with -li- not -le-), in.él'.i.gi.b'l, not eligible; inel'igibly; ineligibility, in.él'.i.gi.bil''.i.ty.

French inélégance, inélégant, inélégible, inélégibilité; Latin inēlgantia (in, not, e[ex]ligo [lēgo], to pick out).

An "elegant" thing is something "picked out" for its beauty.

An "eligible" person is one "picked out" for his suitability.

(If we had not Cicero's assurance of the fact, the derivation of elegant from eligens, gen. eligentis, would be quite incredible.)

Inequality, plu. inequalities, in'.ē.kwōl''.i.tiz, want of equality.

Inequitable, in.ēk'kwī.tā.b'l, not just or impartial.

Unequal, un.ē'.kwāl, not equal; unequal-ly, unequaled.

Latin in, not, equalitas, aequitas (aequis, equal).

Ineradicable, in'.ē.rād''.i.kā.b'l, not to be rooted out.

Uneradicated, un'.ē.rād''.i.kā.tēd, not uprooted (R. lxxii.)

Latin in, not, e[ex]radicare, to root out (radix, a root).

Inert, in.ert', slow to act, sluggish; inert-ly, inert'-ness.

Inertia, in.er'.shē.ah, the reluctance of material bodies to change motion for rest, or rest for motion.

French inerte; Latin iners, gen. inertis, inertia, sluggishness.

In esse (Lat.), in.ēs'.sy, in actual existence, in actual possession;

In posse (Lat.), in.pōs'.sy, in expectancy, what may be.

Inestimable, in.ēs'.tī.mā.b'l, invaluable; ines'timably.

Unesteemed, un'.ēs.teemd', not esteemed (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inestimable; Lat. inestimabilis, estimare (Gk. eis timō).

Inevitable, in.ēv'.i.tā.b'l, not to be avoided; inev'itable-ness, inevitably; inevitability, in.ēv'.i.tā.bil''.i.ty.

Unavoided, un'.ā.void'.ēd, not avoided; unavoid'-able.

Fr. inévitabile; Lat. inevitabilis (in, e[ex]vitāri, not to be avoided).

Inexact, in'.ex.act', not exact; inexact'-ness; inexact'itude.

Unexactd, un.ex.ak'.ted, not exacted or insisted on.

Fr. inexacte, inexactitude; Lat. in, exactus, not exact (exactus, done throughout; ex-ago, to do to-the-end).

Inexcitable, in'.ex.sī''.tā.b'l, not excitable; inexcit'able-ness; inexcitability, in'.ex.sī''.tā.bil''.i.ty, insensibility.

Unexcited, un.ex.sī'tēd, not excited (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. in, not, excitable, excitabilité; Lat. excitare (ex cito, to stir up).

Inexcusable, in'.ex.kū''.sā.b'l, not to be excused; inexcus'ably, inexcusable-ness. Unexcused, un'.ex.kūsed', not ...

Fr. inexcusable; Lat. inexcusabilis (in, ex, causa, not free from motive).

Inexhausted, in'.ex.haus'.tēd, not exhausted; inexhaustible, in.ex.haus'.tā.b'l (not -able); inexhaus'tible-ness, inexhaus'tibly; inexhaustibility, in'.ex.haus'.tā.bil''.i.ty.

Unexhausted, un'.ex.haus'.tēd, not exhausted (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, exhaurio, supine exhaustum (to draw [all] out).

Inexorable, in.ex'ō.rā.b'l, not to be appeased; inex'orably, inex'orable-ness; inexorability, in.ex'ō.rā.b'il''ī.ty.

French inexorable; Latin inexōrābilis (in, ex orārī, not to be induced by prayers not-to-do a thing).

Inexpedient, in'.ex.pē''dī.ent (not -ex.pee'jēnt), unfit, undesirable; inexpe'dient-ly; inexpedience, in'.ex.pee''dī.ence; inexpediency, plu. inexpediciencies, in'.ex.pee''dī.ēn.siz.

French in, not, expédient; Latin in-expēdire (in, ex, pede, not to put the foot forth, i.e., not to bestir oneself, not to expedite).

Inexpensive (Not connected with pence), in'.ex.pēn.siv, not costly; inexpen'sive-ly, inexpen'sive-ness.

Unexpended, un'.ex.pēn''dīd, not all spent (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, expendo, sup. expensum (pendo, to weigh out money).

Inexperience, in'.ex.pē''rī.ence, want of experience; inexpe'rienced (5 syl.) or Unexperienced (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inexpérience; Lat. in, not, experientia, v. expēiri (peritus).

Inexpiable, in.ex'pī.ā.b'l, not atonable; inex'piably.

French inexpiable; Latin inexpiabilis, -expiāre (pio, to purge).

Inexplicable, in.ex'plī.kā.b'l. Unexplainable, un.ex.plain'.a.b'l.

Inexplicable, impossible to be explained from mysterious obscurity, hence we say an inexplicable mystery.

Unexplainable, impossible to be explained for moral or physical reasons, thus the processes of algebra are unexplainable to young children and rustics.

Inexplicable-ness, inexp'licably; inexplicability, in.ex'.plī.kā.b'il''ī.ty (not in'.ex.plīk'.ā.b'il''ī.ty).

Unexplained, un'.ex.plaind', not explained (Rule lxxii.)

French inexplicable; Latin inexplīcābilis, inexplānābilis, in, ex-plīcāri, not to be unfolded (plīca, a fold or plait); in, ex-plānāri, not to be smoothed out or made level.

Inexplicit, in'.ex.plīs'īt, not clear; inexplic'it-ly.

Latin inexplīco, supine -explīctum, not to unfold or reveal.

Inexplorable, in'.ex.plōr''rā.b'l, not able to be explored.

Unexplored, un'.ex.plōrd', not explored (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, explōrāri, not to be explored (ploro, to bewail, to burst into tears. The connection is not manifest).

Inexpressible, in'.ex.prēs''sī.b'l (not -able), indescribable; inexpres'sibly. Inexpressive, in'.ex.prēs''siv; inexpres'sive-ly, inexpres'sive-ness. Unexpressed, un'.ex.prest'.

Lat. in, not, exprīmēre, sup. expressum (ex prēmo, to press or draw out).

Inextinct, in'.ex.tīnkt', not extinct.

Latin inextinctus, not extinguished.

Inextinguishable (Rule xxiii.), in'.ex.tīn''.gwīsh.ā.b'l.

Unextinguished, un'.ex.tīn''.gwīsh, not quenched (R. lxxii.)

Latin in, not, extinguēre, supine extinctum (stīnguo, to quench).

Inextricable, in.ex'.trĩ.kũ.b'l, not to be disentangled; inex'tric-able-ness, inex'tricably. Unex'tricated (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inextricable; Lat. inextricabilis (in, not, ex trica, out of the "hair leggings" wrapped round the feet of fowls to prevent their roaming).

Infallible (not -able), in.fũl'.ĩ.b'l, not liable to err; infall'ibly.

Infallibility (double l), in.fũl'.ĩ.bĩl''ĩ.ty; infall'ible-ness.

Lat. infallibilis (in, fallere, to deceive; Gk. ophallo, to make to fall).

Infamous, in'.fũ.mũs (not in.fũ'.mũs), shameful; in'famous-ly.

Infamy, in'.fũ.my, public disgrace, extreme baseness.

Lat. infamia, infamis (in fāma, the reverse of fame); Fr. infamie.

Inf'ant, a babe. Infante, in.fũn'.ty (in Spain or Portugal), any royal prince except the eldest. Infanta, in.fũn'.tah, any royal princess except an heiress-apparent to the throne.

Infancy, in'.fũn.cy. Infanticide, in.fũn'.ĩ.side, infant murder. Infantile, in'.fũn.tĩle; infantine, in'.fũn.tĩne.

Infantry, in'.fũn.try, foot soldiers. Cavalry, horse soldiers.

Fr. infant, infanticide; Lat. infantia, infanticidium, infantiles (in-fans, gen. -fantis, not able to speak).

"Infantry," the servants of the knights. They went on foot, while the knights rode on horseback. ("Infant" = Latin puer, a boy or servant = French garçon = Italian fante, a serving-man.) Italian fanteria; Spanish infanteria; French infanterie.

Infatuate, in.fũt'.ũ.ate, to bewitch; infat'uāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), infat'uāt-ing (Rule xix.) Infatuation, in.fũt'.ũ.ũ'.shũn.

French infatuer, infatuation; Latin infatuatio, v. infatuare (fatuus, a fool; in-fatuus, to make a fool of one).

Infect', to taint; infect'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), infect'-ing, infect'-er.

Infection, in.fẽk'.shũn. Infectious, in.fẽk'.shũs; infect'ious-ness, infect'ious-ly; infect-ive, in.fẽk'.tiv.

Infectious disease, one communicated by the air.

(Latin inficio [fācio], supine infectum, to unmake, to deprave.)

Contagious disease, one communicated by contact.

(Latin con-tago [tango], to touch together.)

Epidem'ic disease, one not restricted to a locality.

(Greek epi-dēmos, on [all] the people, popular.)

Endem'ic disease, one restricted to a narrow locality.

(Greek en-dēmos, at home, local.)

Infer', to deduce; inferred, in.fẽr'd'; infern'-ing, Rule iv. (with double r). Infer'-able, Rule xxiii. (better infern'-ible).

In'fer-ence; infer-ential, in'.fer.rẽn''shũl; infern'tial-ly.

Latin inferre, to bring in, to infer; infernens, gen. inferentis.

Inferior, in.fẽ'.rĩ.or, of lower rank or quality.

Infe'rior plan'ets, those which have their orbits nearer to the sun than our own. Superior planets, those which have their orbits further from the sun than our own.

Inferiority, in.fẽ'.rĩ.ũr''ri.ty. (Lat. infernior; Fr. inferniorité.)

- Infernal, in.fer'nāl, diabolical, pertaining to hell; infer'nal-ly.
 French infernal; Latin infernalis (infra, below).
- Infertile, in.fer'tile, not fertile; infertile-ly, in.fer'til.ly.
Infertility, in.fer.til'i.ty, sterility, barrenness.
 French infertile, infertilité; Latin infertilis.
- Infest', to annoy, to haunt [as vermin, weeds, beggars, thieves, &c.]; infest'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), infest'-ing, infest'-er.
 Latin infestare (in, festus, not joyful); French infester.
- Infidel, in'fī.dēl, a disbeliever in the national religion.
 In England, one who does not believe in the "atonement."
 In Turkey, one who does not follow the Mahometan faith.
Deist, one who does not believe in revelation.
Atheist, ə.thē.ist, one who does not believe in a God.
- Infidel'ity, de'ism, a'theism, the notions of infidels, deists, and atheists respecting God and the Bible.
 Fr. infidèle, infidélité; Lat. infidelis, infidelitas (fides, faith).
- Infiltrate, in.fil'trate, to enter through the pores; infil'trat'-ed, infil'trat'-ing (R. xix.); infiltration, in'fil.tray'shūn.
 French infiltration, v. infiltrer (in sentire, [strained] through felt).
- Infinite, in'fī.nīt (not in'fī.nīte), endless; in'finite-ly.
Infinitive, in.fīn'ī.tiv [mood], part of a verb in Grammar;
infīn'itive-ly. Infinitude, in.fīn'ī.tude.
Infinitesimal, in'fīn.ī.tēs'ī.māl, infinitely small.
- Ad infinitum (Lat.), ad in'fī.nī'tūm, for ever, without end.
 French infinite, infinitésimal, infinitif; Latin infinitus, infinitus, infinitus modus (in finis, without end).
- Infirm', feeble. Unfirm, not steady; infirm'-ly, unfirm'-ly.
Infirmity, plu. infirmities (Rule xlv.), in.fīr'mī.tīz.
Infirm'ary, plu. infirmaries, in.fīr'mā.rīz, a hospital.
 French infirme, infirmerie (wrong), infirmité; Latin infirmus, infirmarium, infirmitas (in firmus, not firm or strong).
- Inflame' (2 syl.), to kindle; inflamed' (2 syl.), inflām'-ing (Rule xix.), inflām'-er. (The verb should have been inflamm.)
Inflammable, in.flām'mā.b'l; inflam'mable-ness, inflam'mably. Inflammatory, in.flām'mā.tō.ry.
Inflammability, in.flām'mā.bil'ī.ty.
Inflammation, in.flām'may'shūn (not in'flū.may'shūn).
 French inflammable, inflammabilité, inflammation, inflammatoire; Latin inflammatio, v. inflammare (flamma, a flame).
- Inflate' (2 syl.), to puff out; inflāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inflāt'-ing (R. xix.), inflāt'ing-ly, inflāt'-er. Inflation, in.flay'shūn.
 Lat. inflatio ("inflation," not Fr.), inflare, to blow or puff out.
- Infect', to bend; infect'-ed, infect'-ing; inflective, in.flēk'tīz;
Inflection, in.flēk'shūn; inflec'tion-āl, inflec'tionāl-ly.

Inflexed, in.flɛxt', bent; inflex'-ible (not -able), inflex'ible-ness, inflex'ibly; inflexion, in.flɛk'shŭn;

Inflexibility, in.flɛx'x.bɪl'x.ty, obstinacy, stiffness.

Latin infectio, v. infectĕre, supine infectum, infectio, inflexibilis, inflexibilitas (in-flecto, not to bend); French inflexible, inflexibilité, inflexion. (The other forms are not French.)

Inflict', to impose (followed by on); inflict'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inflict'-ing, inflict'-er; inflict-ive, in.flɪk'.tɪv;

Infliction, in.flɪk'.shŭn, a hardship, a calamity.

French inflexion, inflexif; Latin in-fligĕre, supine inflexum.

Inflorescence, in'.flɔ.rɛs''.sense, a flowering, a mode of flowering.

Fr. inflorescence; Latin inflorescere, frequent. of floro, to flourish.

Influence, in'.flʊ.ɛnce, authority, social or moral power, to induce, to affect by social or moral force; in'fluenced (3 syl.), in'fluenc-ing (R. xix.), in'flu'enc-er; influential, in'.flʊ.ɛn'shəl; influential-ly, in'.flʊ.ɛn''.shəl-ly.

Influenza, in'.flʊ.ɛn''.zah, an epidemic catarrh or cold.

In'flux, an impouring, a large number of strangers arrived.

French influence, v. influencer; Latin influentia, influens, in-fluere, supine -fluxum, to flow in. (The idea is that one liquor affects another by flowing into it.) "Influenza" (Ital.), an aström. notion that the disease is under the "influence" of the stars.

Infold' (not en-fold). It is to "fold in," not to "make" a fold), infold'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), infold'-ing, infold'-ment.

Old Eng. in, in, feald[an], past -feold, past part. -gefealden, to infold.

Inform', to instruct, to tell; informed' (2 syl.), inform'-ing.

Inform'-ant, one who tells another a piece of news or gossip.

Inform'-er, one who tells a magistrate of persons who violate the laws, one who prosecutes a law-breaker.

Information, in'.for.may''.shŭn. To inform against, to accuse.

Inform'-al, irregular; inform'al-ly; informal'-ity.

Fr. informatton, v. informer; Lat. informatio, informāre (forma, form).

Infraction, in.frāk'.shŭn. (See Infringe.)

Infrangible, in.fran'.gɪ.b'l, &c. (See Infringe.)

Infrequent, in.frɛ'.quent, Unfrequent, un.frɛ'.quent, seldom; in-or un-frɛ'quent-ly; in-or un-frɛ'quency;

Unfrequent, un.fre.quent'.ted, rarely visited (Rule lxxii.)

Latin infrēquens, gen. -frequentis, infrēquentia, infrēquentatus.

Infringe' (2 syl.), to violate, to encroach on; infringed' (2 syl.), infring'-ing, infring'-er infringe'-ment (Rule xviii.);

Infrangible, in.fran'.gɪ.b'l, not to be violated or broken; infran'gible-ness, infran'gibly, infrangibil'ity.

Infraction, in.frāk'.shŭn, a violation, a breach.

Latin infringere [frango], fractum, to break in pieces, to violate; infractio, infrangibilis. French infraction, infrangible.

Infuriate, in.fū.rī.ate, to enrage; infuriat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), infuriat-ing; infuriate (adj.), enraged; infuriat-er.

Latin in, intensive, furiāre, to madden, furiātus.

Infuse, in.fūze, to steep in water without boiling (followed by in), to instil (followed by into); infused (2 syl.), infus-ing, infus-ible (not -able); infusibil-ity.

Infusion (R. xxxiii.), in.fū.zhūn. Decoction, de.kōk'.shūn.

Infusion is maceration without boiling: as tea;

Decoction is a boiled infusion: as gruel and barley-water.

Infusive, in.fū.siv; infusive-ly (in- meaning "in").

(In the following examples the prefix "in-" is used negatively, and the same words are used in a directly contradictory sense.)

Infusible, able to be infused, or not able to be infused.

Infusibil-ity, capacity of being made into an infusion (see above), incapacity of being made into an infusion.

(Some other negative prefix, as "non-," ought to have been employed.)

Infusoria, in.fu.zōr'.rī.ah, minute animal organisms in impure water. Obtained from infusions of vegetable matter, after being exposed to the air; infusorial; infusory, an order of infusoria, containing infusoria.

French infusible, infusibilité, infusion, infusoire, infusoires; Latin infusorium (a cruse), infusio, v. infundere, sup. infusum.

-ing (native suffix), the pres. part. (representing -ende or -inde), as "he is coming" [cum-ende].

-ing (native suffix), in verbal nouns (representing -ung), as "the preaching" [predic-ung]. It is much to be regretted that this termination has been discarded.

-ing (native suffix), a patronymic, originating from. Common in the names of places, with or without -ham, -ton, den, &c.

Ingenious, in.gee'.nī.ūs, skilful. Ingenuous, in.gēn'.ū.ūs, frank.

Ingēnious-ness, ingēnious-ly. Ingenuity, in.gēnu'.ī.ty.

Latin ingēnōsus, ingēnūtas (ingēnium, talent); French ingénuité.

Ingenuous, in.gēn'.ū.ūs, frank, candid. Ingēnious, skilful.

Ingēnuous-ness, ingēnuous-ly, candidly.

Latin ingēnūus, honest, frank (becoming a gentleman, gens)

Inglorious, in.glor'.rī.ūs (R. lxvi.), ignominious; inglorious-ly, inglorious-ness. (Latin inglōrius, inglōriōsus.)

Ingraft. (See Engraft.)

Ingratiate, in.grā'.shē.ate, to secure the goodwill and favour of a person. (Followed by with before the person concerned); ingratiat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ingratiat-ing.

(In the following examples "in-" with gratia is negative.)

Ingratitude, in.grāt'.ī.tude, want of gratitude. Ingrate.

Ungrateful, un.grāte'.fūl; ungrate-ful-ly.

Fr. ingrat, ingratitude; Lat. ingrātūd, ingrātus (gratia, thanks).

Ingredient, in.grec'.dī.ent (not in.grec'.djent), one of the items of a mixture, a component part.

In'gress, entrance; E'gress, exit. Ingression, in.grēsh'.un.

French ingredient; Latin ingredior [gradior], to enter in.

Ingulf. (See Engulf.)

Inhabit, in.hāb'īt, to occupy as a residence, to dwell in; inhab'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inhab'it-ing, inhab'it-able.

Inhab'itant, a rightful and permanent resident;

Inhab'it-er, one living in a house permanently or not.

Habitation, hab'.i.tay''.shūn; habitable, hāb'.ī.tā.b'l; habitable-ness; habitaney, hab'.ī.tān.sy.

Latin inhābitābilis, inhābitantes, inhābitatio, inhābitāre; French habitable, habitation; "in-habitable" (French), not-habitable.

Inhāle' (2 syl.), to draw into the lungs; inhāled' (2 syl.), inhāl'-ing (R. xix.), inhāl'-er, inhāl'-able (first Lat. conj.)

Inhalation, in'.hā.lay''.shun, inspiration [of fumes].

Latin inhālātio, in-hālāre (to breathe in); French inhalation.

Inharmonic, in'.har.mōn''.īk, sequence of sounds at abnormal intervals; inharmonical, -mōn''.ī.kāl; inharmonic'-ly.

Inharmonious, in'.har.mō''.nī.ūs (Rule lxvi.), not harmonious; inharmo'nious-ly, inharmo'nious-ness.

Fr. in, not, harmonque, harmonieux; Lat. harmōnia, harmōnicus.

Inherent, in.hē'rent, innate; inhē'rent-ly, inhē'rency.

French inhérent, inhérence; Latin in-hæ'rere, to stick fast in.

Inherit, in.hēr'rit, to possess by inheritance; inhēr'it-ed, inhēr'it-ing, inhēr'it-able, inhēr'it-ably, inhēr'it-ance.

Inhēr'it-or, fem. inhēr'itress or inhēr'itrix.

Inheritability, in.hēr'ri.tā.bīl''.ī.ty.

(The prefix "in-" should not have been added to these words, for "in hæres" (Lat.) is "one who is not the heir" or one who has no heir.)

Heritage, hēr'ri.tage; hēr'it-able, hēr'it-or.

Hereditable, he.rēd'.ī.tā.b'l; hered'it-ably, hered'ity.

Hereditary, he.rēd'.ī.tā.ry; hereditament, her're.dīt''.ā.ment.

(In the following the "h" is not sounded.)

Heir, fem. heir-ess, air, air'-ess; with the compounds.

French hériter, héritage, héritier, héréditaire; Latin hereditarius, hereditas, hæres, an heir. No verb in the Latin.

Inhospitable, in-hōs.pī.tā.b'l (not in'.hōs.pīt''.ā.b'l), not hospitable; inhos'pit-ably. Inhospitality, in'.hōs.pī.tāl''.ī.ty.

Latin inhospitālis, inhospitālitās (in, neg., hospes, a host).

Inhuman, in.you'mān, cruel; inhū'man-ly, cruelly.

Inhumanity, plu. inhumanities (R. xlv.), in'.you.mān''.ī.tiz.

Latin inhūmānus, inhūmāntas; French inhumain, inhumanité.

- Inhume, in.hewm', to bury. Exhume, ex.hewm', to disinter.
Inhūmed' (2 syl.), inhūm'-ing; in'humation, may''shūn.
 Fr. inhumation, v. inhumer; Lat. inhūmatio, inhūmare (humus).
Inimical, in.im'.ā.kāl (not in'.i.mī''.kāl), hostile; inim'ical-ly.
 Latin inimicus (in, not, amicus, a friend).
Inimitable, in.im'.ā.tā.b'l, exquisite, beyond imitation; inim'i- tably; inimitability, in.im'.ā.tā.b'il''ā.ty.
 Lat. inimitabilis (in, not, imitari, to be copied); Fr. inimitable.
Iniquity, plu. iniquities, in.ik'kwī.tiz, atrocity; iniquitous, in.ik'kwī.tūs; iniquitous-ly, in.ik'kwī.tūs.ly.
 French iniquité; Latin iniquitas (in, not, aequus, even or just).
Initials, in.ish'.ālz, the first letters of a person's name: as J. S.
 [John Smith]; initial, in.ish'.āl, at the beginning.
Initiat-or (Rule xxxvii.), in.ish'.ā.a.tor, one who initiates.
Initiate, in.ish'.ā.ate, to teach, to introduce; initiat-ed
 (Rule xxxvi.), in.ish'.ā.ate.ēd; initiat-ing (Rule xix.), in.ish'.ā.ate.ing. Initiative, in.ish'.ā.ā.tiv; initiative-ly, in.ish'.ā.ā.tiv.ly; initiatory, in.ish'.ā.ā.tō.ry.
Initiation, in.ish'.ā.ā''shūn, formal admission.
 French initiation, initiation; Latin initiatō, initiator, initiare (initium, the beginning; in-eo supine in-itum, to go in).
Inject', to force in; inject'-ed (R. xxxvi.), inject'-ing, inject'-er.
Injection, in.jēk'.shūn, the act of injecting, what is to be...
 Fr. injection, v. injecter; Lat. injectio, injectare (in facto, to throw in).
Injudicious, in.djū.dish''.ūs, not judicious; injudic'ious-ly, injudic'ious-ness. Injudicial, in'.djū.dish''.āl, not judicial.
Injudicable, in.djū'.āi.ka.b'l, not amenable to law-courts.
 Latin injudicabilis; in, not, iudicialis (iudex, a judge).
Injunction, in.jūnk'.shūn, command. (Latin injunctio).
Injury, plu. injuries, in'.djū.riz, damage; in'jūr-er.
Injurious, in.djū'.rī.ūs; inju'rious-ly, inju'rious-ness.
Injure, in'.djūr, to damage; in'jured (2 syl.), in'jūr-ing.
 Latin injūria, injūriōsus, v. injūriāri (in, not, jus, what is right).
Injustice, in.jūst'.īs, failure or violation of justice.
Unjust' (should be injust), unjust'-ly, unjustifi'able.
Unjustified, un.djūs'.tī.fide, not justified (Rule lxxii.).
 French injustice, injuste; Latin injustitia, injustus, injuste (adverb).
Ink, a fluid for writing, &c., to daub with ink; inked, inkt; ink'-ing, ink'-y, ink'i-ness (R. xi.), ink'i-ly, ink'-stand.
 French encre; Italian inchiostro; Latin encaustum; Dutch inkt.
Inkling, ink'.ling (no connection with ink), an intimation.
 Welsh ynghan, to hint or intimate.
Inlāce' (2 syl.), to embellish with lace, to lace together; inlāced'
 (2 syl.); inlac-ing, in.lāse'.ing; inlac-er, in.lāse'.er.
 Latin in lācino, to make holes in [cloth]; lācīna, fringe.

Inlaid', -laid, paid, said, with their compounds. (See Inlay.)

In'land, remote from the coast; in'land-er, one who dwells inland.

Inland Revenue, re.vēn'ū, derived from taxes, excise, stamps.

Old Eng. in-land, inlanda, an inlander; inlandisc, born in the land.

Inlay, (noun) in'lay, insertion; (verb) in.lay', to lay brass, ivory, &c., in furniture. Inlay, past inlaid, past part. inlaid (R. xiv.), inlay'-ing, inlay'-er. (O. E. in leg.)

In'let, a small bay, a passage into.

Old Eng. in with lēt, v. léd[an], to lead in, or lét[an], to let in.

Inly, in'ly, internally. (Old Eng. inlíc (adj.), inlíce (adv.), inly.)

In'mate (2 syl.), a mate in the same house. (Dutch maat.)

In'most, furthest from the outside. In'nermost (a corruption of the Old English innemest [in'.ne.mest]).

Inn, an hotel. In, a prep. Inn-keep'er, Inn-yard.

Inns of Court, the four "societies" which exercise the right of admitting persons to practice at the bar: (1) The Inner Temple, (2) The Middle Temple, (3) Lincoln's Inn, (4) Gray's Inn.

Inns of Chancery, nine appendages to the "Inns of Court": (1) Clement's, (2) Clifford's, (3) Lyon's (of the "Inner Temple"); (4) Furnival's, (5) Thavies', (6) Symond's (of "Lincoln's Inn"); (7) New Inn (of the "Middle Temple"); (8) Barnard's, (9) Staples' Inn (of "Gray's Inn").

Old English inn, an hotel, a mansion. In, prep. "Clifford's Inn," once the mansion of De Clifford; "Lincoln's Inn," of the earls of Lincoln; "Gray's Inn," of the lords Gray [of Willon].

Innate' (2 syl.), inborn; innate'-ly, innate'-ness. (Lat. innātus.)

In'ner, comparative of in, (super.) in'ner-most or in'-most.

"Inner-most," a corruption of innemost or innemest (in'.ne.mest), not inner and most. Old English in, inner, innemest.

Innervation, in'.ner.vay''.shun, a state of weakness, a vital process by which nervous energy is imparted.

Unnerved, un.nervd', the nerves unstrung. (Lat. nervus.)

("In" (intens. and neg.) in the same word is objectionable.)

Innings, in'.ningz, the turn of a player to use the bat in cricket.

Old Eng. innung, an inning. "Outing," a jaunt into the country.

Innocence, in'.nō.sense. In'nocents, idiots.

In'nocence, freedom from impurity, even in thought;

in'nocency. In'nocent, in'nocent-ly.

The Innocents, the babes slain by Herod.

French innocence, innocent; Latin innōcens, gen. -entis, innōcentia.

Innocuous, in.nok'kü.ūs. Innoxious, in.nōk'she'us (Rule lxvi.)

Innocuous, productive of no harm, safe from harm.

Innoxious, free from harmful qualities.

You may take [chloral] innocuously, because it is innocuous.
The drug is innocuous [harmless], because it is innocuous.

Innoc'uous-ly, innoc'uous-ness, freedom from harming;
innoxious-ly, in.nŏk'.shūs.ly; innoxious-ness.

Latin innŏuus (in nŏcens, not hurting); innŏxius (nox, a hurt).

Innovate, in'.no.vate, to introduce change; in'novāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), in'novāt-ing (R. xix.); in'novāt-or (R. xxxvii.); innovation, -vay''.shun, a change of established custom.

Lat. innŏvatio, innŏvator innŏvare (nŏvus, new); Fr. innovation.

Innoxious, in.nŏk'.she'us. (See Innocuous.)

Innuendo, plu. innuendoes (double n), in'.nu.ĕn''.dōze, an indirect hint. (Lat. in-nuendo, [to hint] by nodding to one.)

Innumerable, in.nu'.mĕ.r.ă.b'l, numberless; innu'merably.

Unnumbered, un.nŭm'.berd, not numbered (Rule lxxii.)

Latin innŭmĕrābilis (in nŭmĕrus, without number).

Innutritious (not -cious, nutricius [in Lat.] is the adj. of nutrix, gen. nutricis, a nurse), yielding nourishment (Rule lxvi.)

Innutritive, in.nu'.trĭ.tĭv, innutrition, in'.nu.trĭsh''.ĭn.

Latin innutritio, v. innutrire (in nutrio, not to nourish).

Inobservant, in'.ob.zer''.vant, not observant; inobser'vant-ly;
inobservance, in'.ob.zer''.vance; inobservable, -zer''.va.b'l.

Unobserved, un'.ob.zerv'd, not observed. (Rule lxxii.)

Latin inobservābilis, inobservantia, inobservans, gen. -vantis (in, not observare, to observe); French inobservable, v. inobserver.

Inoculate (only one -c-), in.ok'.ĭ.late, to bud, to propagate disease by introducing infectious matter into the blood; inoc'u- lāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inoc'ulāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Inoculation (one -n- and one -c-), in.ok'.ĭ.lay''.shŭn.

Inoc'ulāt-or (only one -c-), one who inoculates (R. xxxvii.)

Latin inocŭlatio, inocŭlātor, inocŭlāre (in ōculus [to put] an eye in).

French inoculation, v. inoculer, inoculiste, a partisan of inoculation.

Inodorous, in.ŏ'.dŏ.rŭs, scentless.

Latin inŏdŏrus (in ōdor), without scent.

Inoffensive, in'.ŏf.fĕn''.sĭv (not in'.o.fĕn''.sĭv), giving no offence; inoffensive-ly (double -f-), inoffen'sive-ness.

Latin inŏffensus, inŏffendĕre, supine -ŏffensum (in, of [ob]fendo, not to strike against, not to provoke to anger); French inŏffensif.

Unofficial, in'.ŏf.fĭsh''.ăl (not in'.o.fĭsh''.al, a common error), not official; unofficial-ly, in'.ŏf.fĭsh''.ăl.ly (double -f-).

Latin in, not, officiālis (officium, office); French inŏfficiel (wrong).

Inoperative, in.op'.ĕ.ră.tĭv, not effectual; inop'erative-ly.

Lat. in, not, ŏpĕrāri, to work (ŏpus, gen. ŏpĕris); Gk. hĕpŏ, to be busy.

Inopportune, in.op'.por.tune, not opportune; inop'ortune-ly.

Latin inopportŭnus, in, not, op[ob]portus, in the port.

Inoppressive, in'.ŏp.prĕs''.sĭv (not in'.o.prĕs''.sĭve, a common error), not oppressive; inoppressive-ly (-pp- and -ss-).

Unoppressed, un'.op.prĕst' (not un'.o.prĕst'), not oppressed.

Lat. in, not, opprimĕre, sup. oppressum (op[ob]prĕmo, to press against).

Inordinate, in.or'di.nate, immoderate; inor'dinate-ly, inor'di-nate-ness. (Latin inordinātus, in ordināre, ordo, order.)

Inorganic, in.or.găn'ik, not organic, as earths and minerals; inorganical, in.or.găn'ĩ.kăl; inorgan'ical-ly.

Inorganised, in.or'găn.ized, not having organic structure;

Unorganised, not methodised, not arranged;

Disorganised, deranged, broken up.

French inorganique; Latin in, not, orgănicus; Greek orgănōn.

Inosculate, in.ös'.kü.late, to unite as two vessels in a living body; inos'culāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), inos'culāt-ing (R. xix.)

Inosculat, in.ös'.kü.lay''shñ, union by ducts.

Lat. in osculārē, to [fit] one little mouth into another (osculum, osdim.)

Inquietude, in.kwĩ'.ĕ.tude, anxiety. (Lat. inquē-tudo, disquiet.)

Disquiet, dis.kwĩ'.et, discomfort; disqui'et-ed, distressed.

Unquiet, un.kwĩ'.et, not in repose, restless.

Inquire, in.kwĩr'e, to ask about, to search after; inquired' (2 syl.), inquir'-ing (Rule xix.), inquir'ing-ly, inquir'-er.

Inquiry, plu. inquiries, in.kwĩ'.rĩz, investigation, a question.

Inquisitive, in.kwĩz'.ĩ.tĩv, prying, apt to ask questions; inquis'itive-ly, inquis'itive-ness, impertinent curiosity.

Inquest, an official investigation into the cause of a death.

Inquisition, in'.kwi.zĩsh''.ăn, a court for trying "heretics"; inquisition-al, in'.kwi.zĩsh''.ăn.ăl, adj. of inquisition;

inquisition-ary, in'.kwi.zĩsh''.ăn.ăry;

Inquisit-or, in.kwĩz'.ĩ.tor, an officer of the inquisition;

inquisitorial, in.kwĩz'.ĩ.tor''rĩ.ăl; inquisito'rial-ly.

French enquérir, enquête now enquête, inquisition, inquisitorial, inquisiteur; Latin inquisitio, inquisitor, v. inquirere, supine inquisitum (in quæro, to search into).

Inroad, in'.rōde, an encroachment. (Old English in rād.)

Insalubrious, in'.sä.lũ''.brĩ.ūs (R. lxvi.), unhealthy; insalu'brity.

Insalutary, in.säl'.ĩ.tũ.ry, not favourable to health.

Latin insälubus, insälubritas (salus, health); French insalubrite.

Insane, in.sain', mad; insane'-ly, insane'-ness, madness.

Unsound, not sound; unsound'-ly, unsound'-ness.

Insanity, plu. insanities, in.săn'.ĩ.tĩz, madness.

Latin insānia, insānitas, v. insānīre (in sānus, not sound).

Insatiable, in.say'.shĩ.ă.b'l, greedy; insā'tiably, insā'tiable-ness; insatiability, in.say'.shĩ.ă.bĩl''.ĩ.ty.

Insatiate, in.say'.shĩ.ate, never satisfied; insatiated, in.say'.shĩ.ă.tēd, not satisfied; insa'tiate-ly.

Insatiety, in'.sa.tĩ''.ĕ.ty, state of hungering for more.

French insatiable, insatiabilité; Latin insātiābilis, insātiābilitas.

Inscribe, in.skrībē, to write, to draw, to address [to]; inscribed' (2 syl.), inscrib'-ing (Rule xix.), inscrib'-er.

Inscription, in.skrīp'.shūn; inscriptive, in.skrīp'.tīv.

Latin inscriptio, inscribere, supine inscriptum; French inscription.

Inscroll' (not inscrol), to insert on a scroll; inscrolled' (2 syl.), inscroll'-ing, inscroll'-er (in-scroll, in-roll, see Roll.)

Inscrutable, in.skru'.tā.b'l, mysterious; inscrū'table-ness.

Inscrutability, in.skru'.tā.b'l'.ī.ty; inscrū'tably.

French inscrutable, inscrutabilité; Latin inscrutābilis, inscrutābilitas (in-scrutāri, not to scrutinise).

In'sect, a small animal (like a bee or fly) whose body seems to be almost cut through in parts; insectivora, in'.sēk.tīv'.ō.rāh, a family of animals, like the hedgehog and mole, that lives on insects; insectivorous, in'.sēk.tīv'.ō.rūs.

Latin insecta vorāre, to devour insects.

Insectile, in.sēk'.tīlē, having the nature of insects.

Insection, in.sēk'.shūn, an incision; insect'-ed.

Latin insecta, insectio (in sēco, supine sectum, to cut into slices).

Insecure, in'.sē.kūre', not secure; insecure'-ly, insecurity.

Unsecured, un'.se.kured', not secured (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, secūrus, -secūritas (se[for]sum) cura, special care).

Insensible (not -able), in.sēn'.sī.b'l, without feeling; insen'sible-ness; insen'sibly, by imperceptible degrees.

Insensibility, in.sēn'.sī.b'l'.ī.ty, loss of sensibility.

Insensate, in.sēn'.sate, destitute of sense or sensibility.

Insentient, in.sēn'.shē.ent, not having perception.

Fr. insensible, insensibilité; Lat. insensibilis, -sensibilitas (sensus).

Inseparable, in.sēp'.ā.rā.b'l (-pa- and only one p), not separable; insepar'able-ness, insepar'ably, inseparabil'ity.

Inseparablēs, in.sēp'.a.ra.b'lz, things, &c., not to be parted.

Unseparated, un.sēp'.ā.rā.tēd, not separated (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inséparable, inséparabilité, inséparables; Lat. in-sēpdrāblis.

Insert', to put in; insert'-ed (R. xxxvi.), insert'-ing, insert'-er.

Insertion, in.ser'.shūn, a putting in, something inserted.

French insertion; Latin insertio, in-sēro, to put in.

Insessores, in'.ses.sō'.reez, birds which live perched on trees; insessorial, in'.sēs.sōr'.rī.āl, adj. of the above.

Latin insidēre [sedeo] insessum, to perch on [a tree], insessor.

Inshrine. (See Enshrine.)

Inside, in'.sīdē, the part within. Out-side, the part without.

Old English in side, ut side, v. insith[ian], utsith[ian].

Insidious, in.sīd'.i.ūs (not in.sīd'.jūs), treacherous, crafty; insid'ious-ness, insid'ious-ly, craftily, treacherously.

Latin insidiosus, insidia, a snare.

Insight, in'site, a clear comprehension, a sight beyond the surface.

Old Eng. in gesiht, v. geseón, [to see], past gesedh, past part. geségen.

Insignia (plu.), in.sig'ní.ah, badges [of office], &c. (Lat. insignia.)

Insignificant, in.sig.níf''í.kánt, of no importance; insignif'icant-ly; insignificance, in.sig.níf''í.káncé; insignif'icancy; insignificative, in.sig.níf''í.ká.tív, not expressive by symbols.

Lat. in, not, significans, gen. -antis, significativus (signum, a sign).

Insincere, in'sín.seer', not sincere; insincere'-ly, untruthfully;

Insincerity, in'sín.sér''rí.ty, want of candour and fidelity.

Fr. insincère; Lat. insinserus (in, sine-cera, not without wax). The reference is to honey from which the wax has been carefully extracted.

Insinuate, in.sín'.ú.ate, to screw oneself into [place or favour], to hint insidiously; insin'uát-ed (R. xxxvi.), insin'uát-ing (R. xix.), insin'uáting-ly, insin'uát-or (R. xxxvii.)

Insinuation, in.sín'.u.a''shün; insinulative, in.sín'.u.á.tív.

Latin insinuatio, insinuativus, insinuator, insinuare (in sinus, [to creep] into one's bosom; French insinuation, v. insinuer).

Insipid, in.síp'id, without flavour; insip'id-ly, insipid-ly, insipid-ness, insipidity.

Insipidity, in.síp'id''í.ty; insip'id-ness, insipidity.

French insipide, insipidité; Latin insipidus (in, not, sapidus, sapid).

Insist, to demand (followed by on), insist'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), insist'-ing, insis'tence (not insistance). We have also consistent and consistence, persistent and persistence; but have copied the French error in resistant, resistance. ("Desistent" is not fixed.)

Latin insistens, gen. insistentis (in-sistère, to sit or stand on);

French insistance (wrong), insistant (wrong), v. insister.

In situ (Latin), in sí.tu, in position. (Said of a fossil, when found in its original locality.)

Insnares, in.snair', to allure into a trap; insnares (2 syl.), insnar-ing (R. xix.), in.snair'ing; insnar-er, in.snair'er.

Old English in sneire, [to drive] into a snare; Danish snare.

Insobriety, in'so.brí''é.ty, drunkenness. Unsō'ber, drunk.

Latin in, neg., sōbrietas (sōbrius, sober, s. priv. and ebrius, drunk).

The corresponding Greek word is sō-phrón, of sound mind).

Insolent, in'sō.lent, impertinent; insolent-ly, insolence.

French insolent, insolence; Latin insolent, gen. -lentis, insolentia (in-sōlère, to be unusual). "Insolence" means unusual conduct.

Insoluble, Insolvable, in.sól'.ú.bl, in.sól'.v.á.bl.

Insol'uble, incapable of being melted or dissolved;

Insol'vable, incapable of being solved or guessed.

Insolubility, in.sól'.ú.bl''í.ty. Insolvabil'ity.

Insolvent, in.sól'.vent, one not able to pay his debts,

Insol'vency, the state of being insolvent. (Lat. solvo, to pay.)

French insoluble, insolvable, -insolubilité, insolvabilité; Latin insolubilis, insolvens, gen. insolventis (solvere, supine solutum).

In so much that, so that, to such a degree that... (Old Eng.)

Inspect', to review; inspect'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inspect'-ing, inspect'-or (Rule xxxvii.), inspect'-or-ship (-ship, office).

Inspection, in.spěk'.shŭn; inspective, in.spěk'.tiv.

Inspeximus, in.spěx'.ĭ.mŭs, confirmation of a grant. So called from the first word. "We have inspected" the grant and, being satisfied, confirm it.

Latin inspectio, inspector, v. inspecto (freq. of in-spicito, to pry into); French inspection, inspecter, inspecteur.

Inspire, in.spī'r, to infuse courage or divine afflatus; inspired' (2 syl.), inspir'-ing (R. xix.), inspir'-er, inspir'-able.

Inspiration, in'.spī.ray''.shŭn, divine afflatus.

Plenary Inspiration, plē'nā.ry, inspiration which renders a person incapable of committing error.

Verbal Inspiration, inspiration of words as well as thoughts.

Inspire, to draw air into the lungs; Respire, to exhale it.

Inspiration, inhalation; Respiration, exhalation.

Inspiratory, in'.spī.ra.t'ry; Respiratory, rēs'.pī.ra.t'ry.

Uninspired, un'.in.spīr'd', not inspired (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. inspiration, v. inspirer; Lat. inspiratio, v. in-spirāre, to breathe in.

Inspissate, in.spīs'.sate (double -s-), to thicken [by evaporation];

inspis'sat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inspis'sat-ing (Rule xix.);

Inspissation, in'.spīs.say''.shŭn, the act of inspissating, &c.

Lat. in, intens., spissare, to thicken; spissatio ("spissament," [Lat. spissamentum], what is used for thickening, might be introduced).

Inst., Prox., Ult., for in'stānt, prox'ĭ.mo, ŭl'ĭ.mo.

Instant, the current month: as On the 10th Inst. or inst.

Ultimo, the month just past: as On the 10th ult.

Proximo, the next month: as On the 10th prox.

"Instant," for instante mense, in the current month; proximo mense, in the next month; ultimo mense, in the last month (Latin).

Instability, in'.stā.bīl'ĭ.ty, want of stability.

Unstable, un.stay'.b'l, not steady, not permanent.

French instabillite; Latin instābilitas (in, not, stare, to stand).

Install (not instal), in.stawl', to invest with office by placing the person on a stall or chair; installed, in.stawld';

install-ing, in.stawl'ing; install-er, in.stawl'er;

Installation, in'.stāl.lay''.shŭn, the ceremony of...

Installment (would be better installment), in.stawl'.ment.

Fr. installation, v. installer; Germ. installiren, installation.

Instance, in'stance (R. lix.), an example in point, to give an ...

For instance, for example. In'stanced (2 syl.), in'stanc-ing.

In'stant, a moment, present; in'stant-ly, directly.

Instanter, in.stăn'ter (Lat.), directly.

Instantaneous, in'.stăn.tay''nĕ.ŭs, momentary; instanta'-neous-ness; instanta'neous-ly, momentarily.

Latin instans, gen. instantis, instantāneus, instanter, instantia (in stāre, to stand by); French instance, v. instant.

Instate' (2 syl.), to put in office; instāt-ed' (Rule xxxvi.), instāt'-ing, Rule xix. (Latin in-stātus, [to put] in state.)

Instead, in.stĕd, in the place. (Followed by of.)

Old English stede, a place, hence sted-ig, steady or fixed in its place, sted-fast, stednes, steadiness, &c.

In'step, the upper curve of the human foot. (Old Eng. insteppe.)

Instigate, in'.stĭ.gate, to urge, to induce; in'stigāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), in'stigāt-ing (Rule xix.), in'stigāt-or.

Instigation, in'.stĭ.gay''shŭn, inducement.

Latin instigātio, instigātor, instigāre (in stigo, to prick on; Greek stizō, to prick); French instigation.

Instil' (better instill), to infuse by drops; instilled' (2 syl.); instill'-ing (Rule iv.), instill'-er, instil'-ment.

Instillation, in'.stĭl.lay''shŭn, infusion by drops.

Fr. instillation, v. instiller; Lat. instillatio, instillare, to drop in.

Instinct, (noun) in'stinct, (adj.) in.stinct' (followed by with).

In'stinct, the "intellectual" faculty of animals below man.

Reason, ree'-son, the intellectual faculty of man.

Instinct' [with], replete; instinctive, in.stĭnk'.tĭv, impulsive, spontaneous; instinc'tive-ly, spontaneously.

Latin instinctus, instinguere, supine instinctum, to provoke, to spur on (stigo, Greek stizo, to provoke); French instinct, instinctif.

Institute, in'.stĭ.tute, a literary society, a law, to found, to install; in'stitūt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), in'stitūt-ing (Rule xix.), in'stitūt-or (Rule xxxvii.), in'stitūt-ist.

Institution, in'.stĭ.tu''shŭn; institu'tion-āry, institu'tion-āl; institut-ive, in'.stĭ.tu''tĭv.

Latin institutio, institutor, institutum, v. institutio (instituo, to appoint); French institut, institution, instituteur.

Instruct', to teach, to direct; instruct'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), instruct'-ing, instruct'-ible (not -able).

Instruct'-er, one who gives directions to another.

Instruct'-or, fem. instruct'ress, a teacher.

Instruction, in.strūk'.shun; instructive, in.strūk'.tĭv.

Latin instructio, instructor, instruere, supine -structum (to pile up, to draw up in rank); French instruction, instructif.

Instrument, in'strū.ment, a machine; instrument-al, in'strū. mēn'tāl, conducive, [music] by instruments; vocal [music] by voices; instru'mental-ly, instrū.mēn.tay' shūn; instrumen'tist.

Instrumentation, in'strū.mēn.tay' shūn; instrumentality, in'strū.mēn.tāl' ity, agency.

French instrument, instrumental, instrumentation, instrumentiste; Latin instrumentura, instrumentalis, v. instruere, to instruct.

Insubjection, in'sūb.jēk' shūn, unruliness; want of subjection; Unsubjected, un'sūb.jēk' tēd, not subjected (Rule lxiii.)

Lat. in, neg., subjectio (sub-jicio [jacio], supine jectum, to lie under).

Insubordination, in'sūb.or' dī.nay' shūn, resistance of authority; Insubordinate, in'sūb.or' dī.nate, not yielding to authority.

Fr. insubordination; Lat. in, neg., ordinatio, body of rules (v. ordinare).

Insufferable, in'sūf' fer.ā.b'l (Rule xxiii.), not to be tolerated; insufferable-ness, insufferably, in'sūf' fer.ā.b'l.

Latin in, sup[sub]ferro, not to bear up under.

Insufficient, in'sūf' fish' ent, not sufficient; insufficient-ly, Insufficiency, -fish' ent.sy; insufficiency, -fish' ence.

Lat. in, not, sufficiens, gen. -entis, sufficientia (sup[sub]jicio, i.e. facio).

Insular, in'sū.lar, adj. of island; insularity, in'su.lār' rī.ty.

Insulate, in'sū.late, to detach; insulat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), insulat-ing (Rule xix.), insulat-or (Rule xxxvii.); insulation, in'su.lay' shūn (Latin forms).

Isolate, ī.sō.late, to detach; isolat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), īsolāt-ing (R. xix.), īsolāt-or; isolation, ī.sō.lay' shūn (French forms).

Lat. insularis (insula, an island); Fr. isoler, isolement (ill-formed).

Insult, (noun) in'sult, (verb) in.sult', an affront; to affront; insult-ed (R. xxxvi.), insult-ing, insult-ing-ly, insult'-er.

Latin insulto [salto], to leap on one. Similarly "Result" to leap back, and hence to connect effect with cause; but "Consult" has quite another derivation, being from the v. consūlo, sup. consultum.

Insuperable, in'sū' per.ā.b'l, insurmountable; insu'perably.

Latin insuperabilis (in-super, [not to be got] over).

Insupportable (double -p-), in'sūp.por' tā.b'l, insufferable; insuppor'tably. Unsupported, not supported (R. lxxii.)

Fr. insupportable; Lat. in, not, sup[sub]porto, to bear up under.

Insuppressible, in'sūp.prēs' sī.b'l, not to be suppressed; insuppressibly; insuppressive, in'sūp.prēs' sīv.

Unsuppressed, un'sūp.prēs't (Rule lxxii.)

Latin in, not, sup[sub]primo [primo], sup. pressum, to press in.

Insure, in.shure'; Assure, as.shure'; Ensure, en.sure'.

Insure. (This word, in the sense of "assure," ought to be abolished; the Latin in-secūrus means "unsure," "insecure;" it never means "secure.")

Assure, to contract for an indemnity in case of fire, &c.

Ensure, to make sure, to certify, to guarantee.

Insured, in.shūred'; insur-ing (Rule xix.), in.shūre'-ing.

Insur-er, in.shūre'.er. (So with Assure and Ensure.)

Insurance (better Assurance), in.shūre'.ance.

Insurable, in.shūre'.ā.b'l (better Assurable).

Insurer, in.shūre'.er, one who makes a contract to indemnify himself against loss (better Assurer).

French assurer; Latin ad securus, to make secure to one.

Insurgent, in.sur'.djent, one who rises in arms against government; insurgency, plu. insurgencies, in.sur'.djēn.siz.

Insurrection, in'.sur.rēk'.shūn, a revolt, an uprising; insurrec'tion-ist, insurrec'tion-al, insurrec'tion-ary.

French insurgent, insurgence, insurrection, insurrectionnel; Latin insurgens, gen. -gentis, insurrectio (in-surgo, supine surrectum).

Insurmountable, in'.sur.mount''ā.b'l, insuperable; insurmount-ably. (French insurmontable; Latin in sursum montes.)

Insurrection, in'.sur.rēk'.shūn. (See Insurgent.)

Insusceptible, in'.sūs.sēp''tī.b'l, not susceptible; insuscep'tibly, insusceptibility, in'.sūs.sēp'.tī.bīl''tī.ty, callousness.

Latin insusceptus (in, not, sus[sub]ceptio [capiō], supine susceptum).

Intact, untouched, uninjured. (See Intangible.)

Intaglio, plu. intaglios (Rule xlii.), in.tāl'.yō, in.tāl'.yōze.

Intaglio rilievo, in.tāl'.yo rēl'.i.vah''.to (Eng.-Ital. for rilevato), intaglio in relief. "Intaglio" is a gem or stone with a design cut in it, like that of a seal. When designs are raised above the general surface they are called Relievos (Eng.-Ital. for rilievo or rilevo); intagliated.

Intangible (not -able), in.tān'.djī.b'l, insensible to touch; intan'gible-ness, intan'gibly, intangibility.

Intact, in.tact', not touched, uninjured.

French intangible, intangibilité, intact; Latin in, not, tangere, supine tactum, to touch, intactus, intact.

Integer, in'.tē.djēr, a whole number. Frac'tion, less than a whole number. Integral, in'.tē.grāl, whole, entire; in'tegral-ly; integrant, in'.tē.grānt, a component part.

Integral Calculus (in Math.), in'.tē.grāl kāl'.kū.lūs.

Integration, in'.tē.gray''shūn (in Math.)

Integrate, in'.tē.grate, to renew, to complete; in'tegrāted (Rule xxxvi.), in'tegrāt-ing, in'tegrāt-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Integrity, in.tēg'.rī.ty, honesty, entirety.

French intégral, intégrant, intégration, v. intégrer, intégrité; Latin integer, integratio, integritas, integrare (intact).

Integument, in.tĕg'gũ.ment, a covering [like the skin];
integumentary, in.tĕg'gũ.mĕn'.tǎ.ry (adj.)

Latin intēgumentum (in tēgere, to cover in, to cover entirely).

Intellect (double -l-), in.tĕl.lekt (not in.tĕ.lekt), talent, the understanding; intellect-ual, in.tĕl.lĕk'.tũ.āl; intellect-ual-ly, intellect-ual-ist, intellect-ual-ism.

Intellection, in.tĕl.lĕk'.shũn; intellective, in.tĕl.lĕk'.tĭv.

Intelligence, in.tĕl'.ĭ.jence, intellectual acuteness, news; intel'ligencer; intel'ligent, intel'ligent-ly.

Intelligible, in.tĕl'.ĭ.ġ.b'l, clear, lucid, perspicuous; intelligible-ness, intelligibly; intelligibility, in.tĕl'.ĭ.ġ.bĭl'.x.ty, perspicuity.

French intellect, intellectif, intellection, intellectuel (wrong), intelligence, intelligent, intelligibilité, intelligible; Latin intellectuālis, intellectus, intelligens, gen. -gentis, intelligentia, intelligibilis, v. intelligere, supine intellectum (inter, legere, to read).

Intemperance, in.tĕm'.pĕ.rance, excess; intemperate, in.tĕm'.pĕ.rate; intemperate-ly, intemperate-ness.

French intemperance, intempérant; Latin intempĕrantia, intempe-rans, gen. -rantis (in, not, tempĕrāre, to mix, to abstain).

Intend', to mean, to design; intend'-ed (R. xxxvi.), intend'-ing.

Intend'-ant, a manager; intend'-ancy, management.

(Two French words, and both, as usual, conjugationally wrong.)

Intense, in.tense, extreme; intense'-ly, intense-ness.

Intensity, in.tĕn'.sĭ.ty; intension, in.tĕn'.shũn.

Intensify, in.tĕn'.sĭ.fy, to render more intense; intensifies (Rule xi.), in.tĕn'.sĭ.fize; intensified, -fide; intensifier, in.tĕn'.sĭ.fĭ.ēr; intensify-ing.

Intensive, in.tĕn'.sĭv; intensive-ly, intensive-ness.

Intent', having the mind bent on a subject, meaning, drift; intent'-ly, earnestly; intent'-ness, close application.

Intention; Intension, in.tĕn'.shũn; Attention, at.ten.shũn.

Inten'tion, meaning, purpose, determination;

Inten'sion, same as tension, state of being strained;

Attention, diligence, vigilance, a listening state.

(Obs. "-sion" is restricted to the mechanical word.)

Intention-al, in.ten'.shũn.āl, with design, on purpose; inten'tional-ly; [well] or [ill] intentioned, in.ten'.shũnd.

Attentive, at.ten'.tĭv, bent on a subject, diligent; atten-tive-ly; atten'tive-ness, state of being attentive.

To all intents or To all intents and purposes, virtually.

French intendant, intendance!! intense, intensif, intensité, intention, [bien] or [mal] intentionné, intentionnel!! attentif, attention; Latin intendens, gen. intendēntis, intentio and intensio, intentus and intensus, v. in tendere, supine intensum, to strain on [something].

In'ter- (Lat. prep.), between, among: as inter-vene, inter-cept.
In the word inter-dict it is a negative.

Inter', to bury in the earth; interred, in'terd'; interr'-ing (Rule iv.), interr'-er, inter'-ment. (Should be interr.)

Ital. interrare; Lat. in terra (ter, thrice, terra, earth).

Intercalated (only one -l-), in'ter'.käl.ä.ted, interposed [applied to Feb. 29 in Leap Year]; intercalation (not intercallation), in'ter.käl.ä'.shün, addition of a day to the calendar.

Latin annus intercaläris, leap year, dies intercaläris, the extra day in leap-year; intercalätio (inter cäläre, to call [the extra day] between [the ordinary ones]).

Intercede, in'ter.seed'', to go between, to interpose; intercäd'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), intercäd'-ing (Rule xix.), intercäd'-er.

Intercession, in'ter.sës''.shün; interces'sion-äl, interces'sional-ly, intercess'-or (Rule xxxvii.); intercessor-ial, in'ter.sës.sür''ri.äl; intercessory, in'ter.sës''.sö.ry.

(We have ten words from the Latin "cedo" (to go), seven of which spell the word "-cede," and three "-ceed." The three ["exceed," "proceed," "succeed"] ought to be written "-cede" like the other seven, R. xxvii.)

Lat. intercessio, intercessor, inter-cädo; Fr. intercéder, intercession.

Intercellular (double -l-), in'ter.sël''.lül.lär (in Bot.), lying between the cellular tissues. (Lat. inter, cellüla, a little cell.)

Intercept, in'ter.sépt', to take or seize while on the way; intercept'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), intercept'-ing; interception, in'ter.sép''.shün; interceptive, -sép''.tiv; intercept'-or.

French interception, v. interceptor; Latin interceptio, interceptor, inter-ceptio [cäpio], supine -ceptum, to take [on the way] between [the sender and the proper recipient].

Intercession, in'ter.sës''.shün, &c. (See Intercede.)

Interchain, in'ter.chain, to link together with a chain.

Fr. inter chaîne (Lat. cätēna), v. -chainer, to put a chain between [two].

Interchange, (noun) in'ter.tchänge, (verb) in'ter.tchange', an exchange, to exchange; in'terchänged' (3 syl.), inter-change-ing, in'ter.tchange''.ing; interchang-er, in'ter.tchange''.er; interchange'-able (-ce and -ge retain the -e before -able, Rule xx.); interchange'able-ness, inter-change'-äbly; interchangeability, -tchänge'ä.bül''.ä.ty.

French inter changer; Low Latin cambiäre, to change.

Intercolonial (only one -l-), in'ter.köl.lö''.nül.äl (not in'ter.cöl.lö''.nül.äl), relating to mutual colonial intercourse.

Latin inter, between, colönia, a colony.

Intercommunicate (double -m-), in'ter.köm.mü''.nül.käte (not in'ter.kö.mü''.nül.käte), to communicate mutually; intercommu'nicät-ed (R. xxxvi.), intercommu'nicät-ing (R. xix.), intercommunication, in'ter.köm.mü''.nül.kay''.shün.

Intercommunion, in'ter.köm.mü''.nül.ön, mutual communion; intercommunity, in'ter.köm.mü''.nül.ty.

French inter, communication, communio; Latin communitas, commünitc, communitätio, commünitcäre (communis, common).

Intercostal, in'ter.kōs''tāl, lying between the ribs.

French intercostal; Latin intercostalis (inter costa, between the ribs).

Intercourse (R. lix.), in'ter.kō'rce, good fellowship, trade.

French inter course; Latin cursus, a running from one to another.

Interdict, (noun) in'ter.dikt, (verb) in'ter.dikt'.

In'terdict. Excommunication, ex.kōm.mū'ni.kay''shūn.

An interdict is a papal bull forbidding the clergy to perform religious rites to the person or state named in the document. "To interdict" is to issue this bull.

An excommunication (the necessary effect of an interdict), is the cutting off from church fellowship the person or state interdicted.

"To excommunicate" is to cut off from church fellowship the person or state interdicted.

An in'terdict carries excommunication, and excommunication implies the issue of an interdict.

An excommunication is capable of degrees, and the amount is always stated in the bull.

Interdict, interdict'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), interdict-ing.

Interdiction, in'ter.dik''shūn; interdictive, in'ter.dik''tiv; interdictory, in'ter.dik''tōry.

Fr. interdiction, excommunication; Lat. interdictio, interdictum, interdicere, sup., -dictum, to forbid; excommunicatio, excommunicare. ("Interdict" is the only word in which "inter" has a neg. sense.)

Interest, in'ter.est, concern, influence, a premium for a loan, to amuse. To interest [oneself], to use one's influence and exertion (followed by in or on behalf of);

Interest-ed, in'ter.ēs.tēd, amused, biased, concerned;

Interest-ing, in'ter.est.ing, amusing, exciting an interest; interest'ing-ly; interest'ed-ness, bias.

¶ In loans: the sum lent is the Principal; the premium paid for it is the Interest, the amount of premium is the Rate.

If £5 is given for the year's use of £100, then £100 is the principal, £5 the interest, and 5 per cent. (5 %) the rate.

Simple Interest is when the annual premium is paid to the lender, so that the interest is limited to the original loan.

Compound Interest is when the annual premium is not paid, but being added to the loan increases it. In the following year interest is paid on the original loan + the interest due thereon.

Thus: If £100 is lent at 5 per cent., at the end of the first year the loan will be £100 + £5, on which interest must be paid at the end of the second year. At the end of the third year the accumulated loan will be 100 + 5 + 5½ (£110 5s.), on which interest will be due, and so on, the "principal" increasing every year.

Germ. interessent, a partaker; interesse, interest, (Lat. inter csse).

Interfere, in'.ter.fee'r'', to intermeddle; interfered, in'.ter.fee'rd''; interfer-ing, in'.ter.fee'r''-ing; interfer-er, in'.ter.fee'r''-er; interference (not -ance), in'.ter.fee'r''-ence.

Latin inter ferre, to carry [oneself] between, or inter ferre, to strike between. Similarly, "interpose" is inter ponere, to put [oneself] between, and "interrupt" is inter rumpere, to burst in between.

Interim, in'.tĕrĭm, meanwhile. (Latin intĕrim.)

Interior, in'.tee'.rĭ.or, inside, internal. Exterior, outside, external; interior-ly; exterior-ly. (Not comp. degrees.)

Lat. interior, exterior, comp. deg. of intra and extra, but in English used sometimes substantively and sometimes as positive adj.

Interjacent, in'.ter.jay''-sent, lying between.

Interject, in'.ter.jĕkt'', to throw in, to throw between; interject'-ed (R. xxxvi.), interject'-ing, interject'-er;

Interjection, in'.ter.jĕk''-shŭn, an exclamation, an oath; interjection-al; interjectional-ly.

Interlace, in'.ter.lace'', to intertwine; interlaced' (3 syl.), interlac-ing (Rule xix.), in'.ter.lace'.ing; interlac-ing-ly, interlace'-ment.

French entrelacer; Latin laqueus; Greek lugos, a withe.

Interlard, in'.ter.lard'', to intermix [fat with the lean]; interlard'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), interlard'-ing.

French entrelarder; Latin lardum, lard.

Interleave, in'.ter.leev'', to insert blank leaves between printed ones; interleaved, in'.ter.leevd'' (not -left); interleav'-ing.

A hybrid, Latin inter, between, and Anglo-Saxon leaf, a leaf.

Interline, in'.ter.lĭne, to write between other lines; interlined'' (3 syl.), interlin'-ing (R. xix.), interlin'-er; interlinear, in'.ter.lĭn''.ĕ.ar; interlineary, in'.ter.lĭn''.ĕ.ĕ.ry;

Interlineation, in'.ter.lĭn''.ĕ.ĕ''.shŭn, remarks between lines.

French interlinéaire, interlinéation v. interlinéer; Latin interlinĕa, interlinĕāris, interlinĕre, (linĕa, a line).

Interlocutor, in'.ter.lŏk''ku.tor, one of the speakers in a dialogue; interlocutory, in'.ter.lŏk''ku.tŏ.ry, consisting of dialogue.

Latin interlocūtŏrius, inter-loquor, to speak between [each other].

Interloper, in'.ter.lŏ''.per, an intruder; interlope, in'.ter.lŏpe'', to intrude; interloped' (3 syl.), interlop'-ing (Rule xix.)

French interlope, which is compounded of inter and the Anglo-Saxon verb hleāp[an], to leap or loop; past hleop, past part. hleāpen.

Interlude, in'.ter.lŭde, a slight dramatic piece performed between the main drama and the "afterpiece." (Lat. interlŭdium.)

Interlunar (not -er), pertaining to that dark period which comes between the disappearance of one moon and the visible appearance of the new one. (Latin interlunium lūna.)

Intermarry, in'.ter.mär''ry, to marry a relative; intermarried, in'.ter.mär''rīd (Rule xi.); intermāry-ing. (Latin inter-māritāre; French marier.)

(The double "r" in "marry" is disgraceful. In "bury" we have a similar "r," but never think of doubling it to help out the sound.)

Intermeddle, in'.ter.mēd''.dl, to interfere; intermeddled, in'.ter.mēd''.dlā; intermed'dling, intermedd'ler.

German [ver]mitteln, to mediate, to interpose, -mittler, an interposer, -mittlung, an interposing; -mittler, a mediator.

Intermediate [space, colour], in'.ter.mē''.di.ate, between two extremes; interme'diate-ly. (Lat. inter mēdius.)

Interminable, in'.ter'mi.na.b'l, boundless; inter'minable-ness, inter'minably; interminate, in'.ter'mi.nate, endless.

Indeterminate, in'.de.ter''.mi.nate, uncertain.

French interminable (not a compound of [Latin] inter mīnāri, to threaten severely, but of in-termināre, not to terminate).

Intermingle, in'.ter.mīn''.g'l, to mix together; intermingled, in'.ter.mīn''.g'ld; intermīn'gling, intermīn'gler.

German inter, [ge]mengesel, a confused mixture, [ge]menge.

Intermission, in'.ter.mīsh''.ūn, temporary interruption;

Intermit, in'.ter.mīt''; intermitt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.); intermitt'-ing (Rule iv.), intermitt'ing-ly.

Intermitt'-ent [fever, spring], ceasing at intervals.

Fr. intermission, &c.; Lat. inter mittere, to cease between whiles.

Intermix', to mix confusedly; intermixed, in'.ter.mix'', (past part.) intermixt'; intermixture, in'.ter.mix''.tchūr.

Latin intermixtus from inter-misceor, to intermix.

Intermural [burials], in'.ter.mūr''.rāl, within the city walls, between wall and wall. (Lat. intermūrālis, mūrus, a wall.)

Inter'nāl, interior, domestic. Exter'nāl, exterior, foreign; inter'nāl-ly. Exter'nāl-ly. (Latin internus, externus.)

International, in'.ter.nash''.ūn.āl, mutual between nations.

International-ly, in'.ter.nash''.ūn.āl.ly, mutually...

Internationality, in'.ter.nash''.ūn.āl'.ī.ty.

French international; Latin inter nationēs, between nations.

Internuncio, phu. internuncios (Rule xlii.), in'.ter.nūn''.shē.ōze, a representative of the pope in inferior states, a messenger between two courts. (English-Italian internunzio.)

Interpellation, -pēllay''.shūn. Inter'polation, -polay''.shūn.

Interpella'tion (double -l-), a citation, a summons.

Inter'polation, a spurious word or sentence foisted in.

Latin interpellatio (inter pellāre, to drive or force between).

Interpolate, in'.ter'.po.late, to add something without authority to what has been written by another; inter'polāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), inter'polāt-ing (R. xix.), inter'polāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Interpolation, in.ter'.po.lay''.shŭn, In'terpellā'tion, q.v.

Latin interpōlātiō, interpōlātōr, interpōlāre (inter pōlio, to polish or furbish between [the parts supplied]); French interpolation.

Interpose, in'.ter.pōze'', to intervene; interposed, in'.ter.pōzd''; interpos-ing, in'.ter.pōze''.ing; interpos-er, in'.ter.pōze''.er.

Interposition, in.ter'.po.zish''.ŭn, intervention.

French interposition, v. interposer; Latin interpōstītiō, inter pōno.

Interpret, in.ter'.prēt, to explain, to translate; inter'prēt-ed (R. xxxvi.), inter'prēt-ing, inter'prēt-er, inter'prēt-able.

Interpretation, in.tcr'.prē.tay''.shun, explanation, meaning.

Interpretive, in.ter'.prē.tiv; inter'pretive-ly.

French interprétation, interprétif, v. interpréter; Latin interpretātiō, interpretātōr, interpretābilis, interpretāri (interpres, an interpreter).

Interregnum (double r), in'.ter.rēg''.nŭm, the interval between the death of one sovereign and the succession of another.

Latin inter regnum, space between two reigns. (So inter-vallum.)

Interrogate, in.tēr'.ro.gate, to question; inter'rogāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), inter'rogāt-ing (R. xix.), inter'rogāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Interrogation, in'.tēr'.ro.gay''.shun, examination by questions.

Interrogative, in'.ter.rōg''.a.tiv; interrog'ative-ly.

Interrogatory, in'.ter.rōg''.a.t'ry, a question, containing a question.

Lat. interrogātiō, interrogatīvē, interrogātōr, interrogatorius, interrogāre (inter, rogo, to ask questions); Fr. interrogation, interrogatif.

Interrupt, in'.ter.rupt'', to hinder, to stop; interrupt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), interrupt-ed-ly, interrupt-ing, interrupt-ing-ly.

Interruption, in'.ter.rŭp''.shŭn; interrupt-er (should be -or, R. xxxvii.); interruptive, in'.ter.rŭp''.tiv; interrup'tive-ly.

Latin interruptiō, interruptor, inter-rumpere; French interruption.

Intersect, in'.ter.sēkt', to meet and cross [like two lines]; intersect-ed, intersect-ing; intersection, in'.ter.sēk''.shŭn.

Latin intersectiō, inter-sēcāre, to cut midway; French intersection.

Intersperse, in'.ter.sperce'', to scatter; interspersed' (3 syl.), interspers'-ing (R. xix.) Interspersion, in'.ter.spēr''.shŭn.

Latin interspersus (inter spargo, to scatter among).

Interstice, in.ter'.stis, a chink; plu. interstices, in.ter'.stis.sēz (Rule xxxiv.); interstitial, in'.ter.stish''.ŭl.

French interstice; Latin interstitium. (-sisto, past stīti.)

Intertwine, in'.ter.twine'', to twist one thing into another; intertwined', intertwin'-ing, -twin'-ing-ly, -twin'-er.

Old English inter (Latin), twīn[an], to twine or twist.

Interval, the space between two events, two points of time, two musical sounds, &c. (Fr. intervalle, Lat. intervallum.)

Intervene, in'.ter.veen'', to come between; intervened' (3 syl.), intervēn'-ing (R. xix.) Intervention, in'.ter.vēn''.shŭn.

Latin interventiō, inter-vēnio, to come between; French intervention,

Interview, in'ter.vew, appointment between two persons to see each other. (Fr. entrevue; Lat. inter, videre, to see.)

Inter-weave (past) inter-wove, (past part.) inter-woven, in'ter.wcev, in'ter.wove, in'ter.wō'v'n.
 Latin inter, Old English wef[an], past waf, past part. wesen.

Intestate, in.tēs'tate, without a will at the time of death.

Intestacy, in.tēs'ta.sy, the state of being intestate.
 Latin in-testātus, not witnessed (testis, a witness), an "intestate" is one whose will is not duly attested; French intestat.

Intestine, in.tēs'tin (not in.tēs'tine), domestic, home, internal;

The Intestines, in.tēs'tinz, the entrails; intes'tinal.

Lat. intestina, intestinus (intus, within); Fr. intestin, intestinal.

Inthral, in.thrawl; inthrall, in.thrall-ing. (See Enthral.)

Intimate, in'ti.mate, a familiar friend, to hint, to announce; in'timāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), in'timāt-ing, in'timate-ly.

Intimation, in'ti.may"shūn, a hint, an announcement.

Intimāt-er (should be intimat-or, R. xxxvii.), in'ti.mātor.
 Latin intimas, gen. intimātis, intimatio, intimātor, intimāre, intimus (intra, within); French intimation, v. intimer.

Intimidate, in.tīm'i.date, to frighten; intim'idāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), intim'idāt-ing, intim'idāt-or (R. xxxvii.); intimidation, in.tīm'i.day"shūn. (Fr. intimidation; Lat. timidus.)

("Entimidate" (en timidus "to make" timid) would be better. Intimidate should properly mean "not to frighten.")

Into follows verbs of motion. In follows verbs of rest.

Intolerable (-tol only one l), in.tōl'ē.rā.b'l, insufferable; intol'er-able-ness, intol'erably. Tolerable, pretty good, bearable.

Intolerance (not intōllerance), in.tōl'ē.rance, want of toleration; intol'erant (only one -l-), prejudiced; intol'erant-ly. Intoleration (only one l), in.tōl'ē.ray"shūn.

Latin intolerābilis, intolerāns, gen. intolerantis, intolerantia, intolerāre, not to tolerate; French intolérable, intolérance, intolérant.

Intonate, in'to.nate, to modulate the voice in speaking; in'tonāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), in'tonāt-ing; intonation, -nay"shūn.

Intone, in.tōne, to read with a monotonous chanting voice; intoned (2 syl.), intōn-ing (Rule xix.), intōn-er.

Latin intōnāre, to speak with a strained or stretched voice (tōnus, tone); Greek tōnōs, from teino, to stretch; French intonation.

Intoxicate, in.tox'i.kate, to make drunk; intox'icāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), intox'icāt-ing (Rule xix.); intox'icant.

Intoxication, in.tox'i.kay"shūn, drunkenness;

French intoxication (Latin toxicum; Greek toxikon, rank-poison).

Intra, in'tra (Latin prep.), within.

Intractable (not -ible), in.trāk'tā.b'l, stubborn; intractable-ness, intractably, intractabil'ity, stubbornness.

Latin intractabilis, in trāhēre, supine -tractum, not to draw.

Intra-mu'ral, within the city walls. Extra-mu'ral, outside...

Latin mūrātis (mūrus, a wall). The Latin forms are intra-mūrānus and extra-mūrānus, within and without the city walls.

Intransient, in.tran'si'ent, not transient.

Intransitive [verb], in.trans'zitiv, a verb with "subject" but no "object." A Transitive [verb] has both.

"I sit": sit has the "subject" I, but no "object," and therefore is an intransitive verb. "I love him": love has the "subject" I and the "object" him; it is, therefore, a transitive verb.

Lat. intransitivus, in trans itum, not to go over [to an "object"].

Intrench. (See Entrench.)

Intrepid, in.trép'id, fearless; intrep'id-ly, fearlessly.

Intrepidity, in.tre.píd'zity, fearlessness.

Latin intrepidus, intrepiditas (in trépídus, not trembling).

Intricate, in'tri.kate (not in.trik'it), complicated; in'tricate-ly; in'tricate-ness, state of being complicated.

Intricacy, plu. intricacies, in'tri.ka.siz, complication.

Latin intricatus, intricatio (in trice, in the clogs of hair called trice fastened round the legs of fowls to prevent their roaming).

Intrigue, in.treeg', a cabal, a plot, to plot; intrigued, in.treegd'; intriguing, in.treeg'ing (verbs ending in any two vowels, except ue, retain both before -ing, Rule xix.); intriguing-ly, in.treeg'ing-ly; intrigue-er, in.treeg'er; intriguant, in.treeg'-ant.

French intrigant, intrigue, intrigueur, v. intriguer (Latin intricare, to entangle.) (See Intricate.)

Intrinsic, in.trin'sik, real, not merely outside show; intrin'sic-ly or intrin'sical-ly, truly, really, genuinely.

Latin intrinsecus (intra secus, in the inside); French intrinseque.

In'tro- (Latin prepositional prefix), within, into, in.

In'tro-duce (3 syl.), to bring in, to begin, to make acquainted; introduced (3 syl.); introduc-ing, in'tro.duce'ing; introduc-er, in'tro.duce'er; introductive, in'tro.dúk'-tiv; introductive-ly, introductōry, introductōri-ly.

Introduction, in'tro.dúk'.shūn, the beginning, &c.

Latin introductio, intro-ducere, to lead in; French introduction.

Intro-it, in'tro.it, what is sung while the priest is going to the altar. (Latin intro-it, [while the priest] goes in.)

Intrude, in.trūd', to come without right or welcome; intrūd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), intrūd'-ing (R. xix.), intrūd'ing-ly, intrūd'-er.

Intrusion, in.trū'zhūn (Rule xxxiii.); intru'sion-ist; intrusive, in.trū'ziv; intru'sive-ness, intru'sive-ly.

Latin intrudere, supine trusum, to thrust in; French intrusion.

Intuition, in'tu.ish'ān, instinct; intuitive, in.tu'zitiv, instinctive; intu'itive-ly. (Fr. intuition, intuitif; Lat. in tuor.)

Inundate, in'ũn.date (not in.ũn'.date), to overwhelm; in'undāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), in'undāt-ing (R. xix.), in'undāt-or;

Inundation, in'.un.day''shũn, a flood, an overflow.

Latin inundatio, inundator, inundāre (undā, a wave).

Inure, in.nũre', to habituate; inured, in.nũred'; inur-ing (Rule xix.), in.nũre'-ing; inure-ment, in.nũre'.ment.

Should be Enure. Archaic ure, use, habit; French en heur, hourly.

Inurn', to put into an urn; inurned' (2 syl.), inurn-ing.

Latin in urna, [to put] into an urn.

Inutility, in'.u.tĩl''.ĩty, uselessness; inutile, in'.u.teel';

Unuseful, un.ũse'.ful, not useful;

Unused' (2 syl.), not used; Dis'used, the use discontinued.

Use-less (2 syl.), use'less-ly, use'less-ness.

Latin inutilitas, inũtilis (in-utor [usus], not to use); French inutilit  , inutile, inutile (user, to use).

In vacuo (Latin), in. vak'ku.o, in a place from which all air has been extracted. A vacuum, vũk'.ũũm.

Invade (2 syl.), to violate another's rights, to enter a country hostilely; invād'-ed, invād'-ing (Rule xix.), invād'-er.

Invasion (R. xxxiii.), in.vay'.zhũn; invasive, in.vay'.ziv.

Lat. in-vād  re, supine invasum, to go against, invasio; Fr. invasion.

Invalid, (noun) in'.vũleed', (adj.) in.vũl'.ĩd (Rule li.)

In'valid', one not in health, one disabled; invalid'-ed.

Inval'id, worthless, of no authority; invalid'ity.

Invalidate, in.vũl'.ĩ.date, to render worthless; invalidĩdāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), invalidĩdāt-ing, R. xix. (All with -li-.)

Invaletudinarian, in.vũl'.e.tu.dĩ.nair''ri.an, one always ill.

Fr. invalid  , invalidit  ; Lat. invũletũdo (in, vũleo, not to be well). ("Invalid," the noun, ought to be written "invalid  .")

Invaluable, in.vũl'.u.ũ.b'l, inestimable; inval'uably.

Unvalued, un.vũl'.ude, not appreciated (Rule lxxii.)

French in value; Latin vũlor, value (vũl  re, to be worth).

Invariable, in.vair'ri.ũ.b'l, without variation; inva'riable-ness; inva'riably. (Fr. invariable; Lat. in vũriũbilis, varius.)

Invasion, in.vay'.zhun; invasive, in.vay'.ziv. (See Invade.)

Invective, in.v  k'.ziv, a tirade; invective-ly.

Inveigh, in.vay' (followed by against), to rail at; inveighed, in.vaid'; inveigh-ing, in.vay'.ing; inveigh-er, in.vay'.er.

Invade, in.vũd  , to enter a country hostilely.

(The spelling of "inveigh" cannot be commended, and the interpolation of "g" before "h" to lengthen a vowel or to give "ei" the sound of "a" is certainly a very clumsy contrivance, to say the least.) Latin inveh  , supine vectum, to inveigle (in vehi, to be carried against one), invehiva, invehivus; French invehive, v. invehiver.

Inveigle, in.vee'.g'l (not in.vay'.g'l), to allure; inveigled, in.vee'.g'ld; inveigling, in.vee'.g'ling; inveigler, in.vee'.g'ler; inveigle-ment, in.vee'.g'l.ment, enticement to evil.

Norman enveogler; French aveugler, to blind, to hoodwink.

Invent'. Discover, dis.kāv'.er.

We invent' (or find out) a work of art, as a machine;

We discover (or find out) a country or work of science.

To invent is to create what did not before exist.

To discover is to make known what was before unknown.

Invent'-ed (R. xxxvi.), invent'-ing, invent'-er (should be invent'-or, R. xxxvii.), fem. inventress, in.vēn'.tress.

Invention, in.vēn'.shūn, a discovery in art.

Inventive, in.vēn'.tīv; inven'tive-ness, inven'tive-ly.

Inventory, in'.vēn.tō.ry (ought to be inventory), a list of movable property; inventorial, in'.ven.tōr''rī.āl.

Invention of the Cross, the alleged discovery of the cross in the fourth century, by certain agents of St. Helena.

(This use of the word is quite abnormal.)

French inventaire, inventif, invention, v. inventer, v. inventorier; Latin inventarium, inventio, inventor, in venio, supine ventum.

Inverse, in'.verse (adj.), in.verse' (verb) (Rule li.); inverse'-ly.

Inversion, in.ver'.shūn, a reversion of the order.

Invert', to turn upside down; invert'-ed, invert'-ing.

Inversely as (not to): as "Velocity is inversely as the time."

In inverse ratio to (not in inverse ratio as): Thus, 1, 2, 3, is in inverse ratio to 3, 2, 1.

In the inverse ratio of (not in the inverse ratio to): as "Time is in the inverse ratio of velocity."

Latin inverso, in verto, supine versum; French inverse, inversion.

Invertebrate (obs. -te-), in.ver'.tē.brāte, an animal with no backbone; invertebral, in.ver'.tē.brāl, without a backbone.

Invertebrata, in.ver'.tē.brāy''tah. Lamarck divided the animal kingdom into vertebrata and invertebrata; the former embraces all animals which have a backbone or bony skeleton; the latter, those animals which are devoid of such a structure: as molluscs [snails, &c.]

Latin in vertebra, without backbone, vertebrātus.

Invest', to dress; invest'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), invest'-ing.

Invest-ment; investive, in.ves'.tīv, covering, clothing.

Investiture, in.vēs'.tītchūr, the act or right of giving legal possession [of church preferment].

Roman Catholic bishops have a ring and crosier given as external signs of office. An Anglican bishop, a crosier. A university student has a cap and gown. A freemason has an apron, &c.

Latin in-vestio, to clothe in [official symbols], vestis, a robe.

Investigate, in.vēs'.tī.gate, to examine into; inves'tigāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), inves'tigāt-ing (Rule xix.), inves'tigāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); investigable, in.vēs'.tī.gā.b'l.

Investigation, in.vēs'.tī.gay''shūn; investigative, in.vēs'.tī.gā.tīv; investigatory, in.vēs'.tī.gā.t'ry.

Latin investigāble, investigātio, investigātor, investigāre (vestigia, a slot); French investigation.

Inveterate, in.vēt'.ē.rate, confirmed by long habit; invet'erate-ly, invet'erate-ness; invet'erācy, long habituation.

Latin invetērātus (vetus, old, long-standing).

Invidious, in.vīd'.i.ūs (not in.vīd'.jūs), obnoxious, provocative, ill-natured; invid'ious-ness, invid'ious-ly (Rule lxvi.)

Latin invidiōsus (invidia, envy).

Invigorate, in.vīg'.ō.rate, to strengthen; invig'orāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), invig'orāt-ing; invigoration, in.vīg'.ō.ray''shūn; invig'orāt-er. (Latin vigor, vigour, strength.)

Invincible, in.vīn'.sī.b'l, unconquerable; invīn'cibly;

Invincibility, in.vīn'.sī.b'il'.t'y; invīn'cible-ness.

Fr. invincibilité, invincible; Lat. invincibilis (vincere, to conquer).

Inviolable, in.vī'.ō.lā.b'l, not to be profaned or polluted; invī'olably; inviolate, in.vī'.ō.lā.tē, unbroken, unpolluted.

Inviolability, in.vī'.ō.lā.b'il'.t'y, state of being inviolable.

Fr. inviolable, inviolabilité; Lat. inviolābilis (violāre, to violate).

Invisible (not -able), in.vīz'.i.b'l, imperceptible to the eye; invis'ible-ness, invis'ibly. Invisibility, in.vīz'.i.b'il'.t'y.

Fr. invisible, invisibilité; Lat. invisibilis (video, sup. visum, to see).

Invite' (2 syl.), to request the company of, to challenge, to solicit; invīt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), invīt'-ing (Rule xix.), invīt'ing-ly, invīt'-er. Invitation, in.vī.tay''shūn.

Latin invitatio, v. invītāre (in vitāre, to do the contrary of shunning, i.e., to seek, to court); French invitation, v. inviter.

Invoke, in'.vō.kate, to address in prayer; in'vocāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), in'vocāt-ing (Rule xix.), in'vocāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Invocation, in'.vō.kay''shūn, an address to deity.

Invoke, in.vō.ke', to address in prayer; invoked' (2 syl.), invōk'-ing (Rule xix.), invōk'-er.

("Invoke" is used in poetry, but "invōke" in ordinary speech.)

Latin invocatio, in-vōcāre, to call on [one] for help.

Invoice, in'.vōice, a written priced list of goods sent to a customer, to make such a list; in'voiced, invoic'-ing, Rule xix. (French envois, things sent.)

Lat. in via, [a list of goods] on the way; Spanish enviado, Italian inviato (an envoy, show the compound more distinctly).

Invoke, in.vō.ke'; invocation, in'.vō.kay''shūn. (See Invoke.)

Involuntary, in.vol'ũn.tã.ry, not done by the will; invol'un-tari-ly (Rule xix.), invol'untari-ness.

Latin involuntarius (in vóluntas, in-vôlo, not to will).

Involve (2 syl.), to implicate, to surround, to embarrass; involved (2 syl.), invölv'-ing (Rule xix.), involve'-ment.

Involution, in'.vö.lũ''.shũn. Evolution, e'.vö.lũ''.shũn (in Math.), "Involution," the raising of a number to a given power. "Evolution," extracting the given root.

Involution: as 4^3 , i.e., multiply 4 thrice by itself = 64.

Evolution: as $\sqrt[3]{64}$, $\sqrt[5]{a}$, i.e., extract the third or cubo root of 64, and the 5th root of "a": ($\sqrt[3]{64} = 4$).

Latin in-volvo, to roll on [itself]; e-volveo, to roll out, extricate, or extract; involutio, evolutio; French involution, evolution.

Invulnerable, in.vũl'.nẽ.rũ.b'l, not able to be wounded; invul'-nerable-ness, invul'nerably, invulnerabil'ity.

French invulnérable, invulnérabilité; invulnérabilité (vulnus).

Inward, in'.wãrd; internal, placed inside; in'ward-ly.

Inwards (adv.), towards the inside. (As the -s [-ces] is the adverbial suffix, it is wrong to use inward as an adv.)

Old English inweard, inward; inweardlice, inwardly.

Inweave, (past) inwove, (past part.) inwoven, in.aceev', in.wöve', in.wö'.v'n, to intertwine; inweav'-ing (Rule xix.)

Old Eng. in wëf[an], past wef or wëfode, past part. wëfen or wëfod.

Inwrap, in.rãp', to envelop; inwrapped, in.rãp't; inwrapp-ing (Rule iv.), in.rãp'.ing. Enrapt, inspired.

Inwrought, in.rãwt', worked in, adorned with figured work.

Old English in weorc[an], past worhte, past part. ge-worht.

There are 672 words beginning with "in," all of which, except 31, are directly or indirectly from the Latin. In 540 cases the force of "in" is negative, in 26 it is part of another prep.: as "inter," "intro," &c., in 11 it means "to make," and in 9 it is radical.

Iodine, i'.o.dine (not i'.o.deen), an element.

In Chem. the termination -ine denotes a simple substance.

Iodate, i'.o.date, a salt of iodic acid.

In Chem. -ate denotes a salt from an acid ending in -ic.

Iodic [acid], i'.o.dik. (In Chem. -ic denotes an acid containing the greatest possible quantity of oxygen.)

Iodous [acid], i'.o.dũs. (In Chem. -ous denotes an acid with less oxygen than -ic.)

Iodide, i'.o.dide, a compound of iodine with a base.

In Chem. -ide denotes a compound with a base.

Iodite, i'.o.dite, a non-acid compound of oxygen.

Greek iðês, violet, so called from its colour.

Ionian, i'.õ'.mũ.ũn, relating to Iônia, in Asia Minor.

Ionic, i'.õn'ic. (The -o- is long in Greek iónikos.)

- Iota, i.ô'tah, a jot, a tittle. (The smallest Greek letter.)
- I. O. U. (I owe you), a brief acknowledgment of a debt.
- Ipecacuanha, ip'.ĕ.kăk'ă.ăn''.ah, a South American plant.
Peruvian ipe, the root, cacuanha.
- Ipomœa, ip'.o.mee''.ah, a plant allied to the convolvulus.
Greek ips, gen. ipôs hōmoîds, like a worm.
- Ir- for in-, before the letter r.
- Irascible, ī.răs'.sī.b'l, prone to anger; iras'cible-ness;
Irascibility, ī.răs'.sī.bīl''ī.ty; iras'cibly.
Fr. irascible, irascibilité; Lat. irascor, to be angry (ira, anger).
- Ire, ī'r, anger; ire-ful, ī'r'.ful; ireful-ly, ī'r'.ful.ly.
Old English yrre or irre, Latin ira, anger.
- Iris, ī'ris, the rainbow, the coloured circle which surrounds the pupil of the eye; irised, ī'rist; irisated, ī'ris.ătĕd.
Iridescence (not irrediscence), ī'rī.dĕs''.sense, a rainbow-like exhibition of colours; irides'cent;
- Iridium, ī.rīd'ă.ăm, a metal which assumes divers colours while under dissolution in hydrochloric acid.
Latin iris, the rainbow; Greek iris.
- Irish, ī'rīsh, the language of Ireland, the people of Ireland, a cotton cloth made in Ireland, pertaining to Ireland;
Irish-ism, ī'rīsh.izm, a blunder of speech conveying a contradiction of terms. Ireland, ī'r.lănd.
Irishman, plu. Irishmen, fem. Irishwoman, plu. -women.
Proper names of a people ending in -ch, -sh, and -x, have two plural forms, one partitive made by adding -man, and one collective by placing The before the word: as The Irish, 2, 3, 4, &c., Irishmen.
Celtic Eri-in or Iar-in [innis], the western island.
- Irk, erk, to distress; irk-some, erk'sŭm, distressing (-some denotes "full of"); irk'some-ness, irk'some-ly.
Old English earg, wretched, evil, earg-sum.
- Iron, generally pronounced ī'on, sometimes ī'ron.
In irons, ī'onz, in chains. Fire irons, poker, shovel, and tongs.
To iron, ī'ôn, to smooth with a hot instrument for the purpose; ironed, ī'ōnd; iron-ing, ī'ōn.ing; iron-er, ī'ōn.er.
Iron-y, ī'ōn.y, containing iron. Ironry, ī'rōn.ry, satire.
Old English īren, īren-bend, an iron band, īren-fetor, an iron fetter, īren-græg, iron-grey, īren-sīd, iron-side.
- Ironry, ī'rōn.ry (never ī'ōn.ry), ironical speech, sarcasm; ironical, ī'rōn'ă.kăl; iron'ical-ly. Irony, ī'ōn.y (v.s.)
Latin īrōnicus, īrōnia; Greek cīrōnela (cīrōn, a dissembler).
- Irradiate, īr.răd'ă.ate. Eradiate, ĕ.răd'ă.ate.
Irradiate, to adorn with rays of light. Eradiate, to shoot forth like rays of light; irrad'iat-ed, irrad'iat-ing.

Irradiation, ir'rád'.í.ā'.shūn, the act of being irradiated;

Eradiation, ē.rád'.í.ā'.shūn, emission of beams of light.

Irradiance, ir'rád'.i.ance, lustre; irrad'iancy; irrad'iant.

Lat. irrādiatio, ir[in]rādiāre, to cast rays on [objects]; Fr. irradiation.

Irrational, ir'rásh'.ōn.āl, unreasonable; irrational-ly, ir'rásh'.ōn.āl.ly; irrationality, ir'rásh'.ōn.āl'.í.ty.

Lat. irrātionālis (in rātio, without reason); Fr. irrationnel (wrong).

Irreclaimable, ir're.claim''.ā.b'l, not to be reclaimed; irreclaim'-ably. Un'reclaimed' (3 syl.), not reclaimed (Rule lxxii.)

Latin ir[in]reclāmāre, not to claim again (clāmo, to demand).

Irreconcilable, ir're.kōn.sí'.lā.b'l, not reconcilable; irreconcil'-able-ness, irreconcil-ably; irreconciliation, ir're.kōn.sí'.í.ā'.shūn, want of reconciliation.

Unreconciled, un're.k'ōn.síld, not reconciled (Rule lxxii.)

French irréconciliable; Latin ir[in]reconciliātio, v. re-conciliāre, not to conciliate again (conciliūm, a meeting; con cālo, to call together).

Irrecoverable, ir're.cūv''.er.ā.b'l, not to be recovered; irrecov'-erable-ness, irrecov'erably.

Unrecovered, un're.cūv''.erd, not recovered (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. recouvrable (re-couvrir); Lat. reōpērāre, to recover; with neg. ir.

Irredeemable, ir're.deem''.a.b'l, not to be redeemed; irredeem-ably. Unredeemed, (3 syl.) not redeemed (Rule lxxii.)

Latin redimēre (re[d]imēre, to buy back); with ir-[in] neg.

Irreducible, ir're.dū''.sī.b'l, not to be reduced; irredu'cibly.

Unreduced, un're.dūced'', not reduced (Rule lxxii.)

Latin re-dūcere, to reduce, to bring back again; with ir-[in] neg.

Irrefragible, ir're.frān''.jī.b'l. Irrefragable, ir'ref'.rā.gā.b'l.

Irrefran'gible, not to be refracted; irrefran'gibly, irrefrangibil'ity. Irref'ragible, not to be gainsaid.

Latin refringere (re-frango, supine fractum), to refract or bend back, with ir[in], neg. Used chiefly in reference to rays of light.

Irrefragable, ir'ref'.rā.gā.b'l, not to be gainsaid; irref'ragably.

French irrefragable; Latin irrefrāgābilis, v. refrāgāri, to gainsay.

Irrefutable, ir're.fū''.tā.b'l, not to be refuted; irrefu'tably.

Latin irrefutābilis (ir[in]re-futāri, not to be refuted).

Irregular, ir'reg'.ular, not regular; irreg'ular-ly;

Irregularity, plu. irregularities, ir'reg'.u.lār'rī.tiz.

Latin irregulāris, irregulārītas, ir[in]regūllāre (regūla, rule).

Irrelative, ir'rēl'.ā.tiv. Irrelevant, ir'rēl'.ē.vānt.

Irrelative, unconnected: as irrelative chords (in music), chords which have no common sound; irrelative-ly.

Unrelated, un're.late''.ed, not related (Rule lxxii.)

Latin ir[in]relātivus (re-ferro, supine lātum, to refer).

Irrelevant (not irrevelant), inapplicable, not to the point : as irrelevant to the subject, irrelevant testimony; irrelevantly, irrelevancy; irrelevance, ir.rēl'.ē.vānce.

Latin ir[in]rēlevāre, not to lift off or relieve. Something that does not "lift off" the difficulty.

Irreligion, ir.rē.lidj''.ān, want of religion or contempt of it; irreligious, ir.rē.lidj''.ūs; irreligiousness, irreligiously.

French irreligion; Latin irreligiōsus.

Irremediable, ir're.mē''.dī.ā.b'l, not curable; irremediably, irremediableness. Remedi-less, remēd'.āless.

Unremedied, un.rēm'.ā.dēd, not cured (Rule lxxii.)

Lat. irremediābilis (ir[not]rēmēdium, without remedy); Fr. irremédiable, irremédiābilis.

Irremovable (not irremoveable, only -ce and -ga retain the e before -able, Rule xx.), ir're.moov''.ā.b'l, not able to be moved; irremovably; irremovability, ir're.moov''.ā.bil''.ī.ty. Unremoved, un'.rē.mōovd'' (Rule lxxii.)

Latin re-mōvō, to remove; with ir[in] negative.

Irreparable, ir.rēp'.ā.rū.b'l (not ir.rē.pair''.rā.b'l), not to be repaired or recovered; irreparably, irrecoverably.

Unrepaired, un'.rē.paird'', not repaired (Rule lxxii.)

Lat. ir[in]rēpārābilis (re.pārāre, to make anew); Fr. irréparable.

Irrepealable, ir.rē.peel''.ā.b'l, not to be repealed.

Unrepealed, un'.re.peeld'', not repealed (Rule lxxii.)

Latin ap[ad]pellare, to call to one; re-appellare, to call back again; ir[in]re-ap[ad]pellare, not to recall or repeal.

Irreprehensible, ir.rēp'.rē.hēn''.sī.b'l, not blamable; irreprehensibly. (Lat. irreprehensibilis; Fr. irréprehensible.)

Irrepressible, ir're.prēs''.sī.b'l, not to be repressed; irrepressibly.

Unrepressed, un'.re.prēst', not repressed (Rule lxxii.)

Latin re-prīmēre (prēmo), sup. pressus, to press back; with ir neg.

Irreproachable, ir.rē.prōtch''.ā.b'l, not worthy of censure; irreproachableness, irreproachably.

Unreproached, un.re.prōtchd, not censured (Rule lxxii.)

French irréprochable, re-procher (proche [Latin proximus], near, re-procher, not to admit, to reprove; ir-reprocher, not to reprove).

Irreprovable, ir.rē.proov''.ā.b'l, blameless; irreprovably.

Unreproved, un'.re.proovd'', not censured (Rule lxxii.)

Latin prōbāre, to prove; re-prōbāre, to reprove; with ir neg.

Irresistance, ir.rē.zīs''.tānce, forbearance to resist.

(Would be better irresistance, but, as usual, we have been led astray by the French, which gives "résistance," but résist-ible!!)

Irresistible (not -able), ir.rē.zīs''.tī.b'l, not to be resisted; irresistibly; irresistibility.

Resist'-less, not to be resisted; resist'less-ness, resist'less-ly.

Unresisted, un'rě.zis''těd not resisted (Rule lxxii.)

French résistance, irrésistible, irrésistibilité; Latin re-sistere, to make to stand back, with ir[in], negative.

Irresolute, ir'rěz'.ō.lūte, not decided; irres'olute-ness,

Irresolution, ir'rěz'.ō.lū''shūn; irres'olute-ly.

Irresoluble, ir'rěz'.ō.lu.b'l, incapable of being resolved into parts or into a more elemental state.

Irresolvable, ir'rě.zōl''va.b'l, not to be resolved.

Unresolved, un'rě.zōlvd'', not resolved (Rule lxxii.)

Fr. irrésolution, irresolu: Lat. irresolūbilis, -résolutio, re-solvere, supine -solutum, to melt back [to its simple state], with ir, neg.

Irrespective, ir're.spěk''.tīv (not ēr'rě.spěk''.tīv), independent; irrespec'tive-ly. Unrespect'ed, not respected (R. lxxii.)

Latin re-spicio, supine respectum, to look back upon, to respect, with ir[in], negative, not to respect, to disregard.

Irrespirable, ir'rěs'.pī.rā.b'l, not fit for respiration.

Unrespired, un're.spīred', not exhaled (Rule lxxii.)

Latin re-spirare, to exhale breath, with ir[in], negative.

Irresponsible (not -able) ir'rě.spōn''.sī.b'l, not responsible;

Irresponsibility, ir'rě.spōn''.sī.b'il''.ī.ty; irrespon'sibly.

Unresponded-to, un'rě.spōn''.dēd.tōo (Rule lxxii.)

Latin re-spondere, supine responsum, to respond, with ir[in], neg.

Irretrievable, ir'rě.tree''vā.b'l, not to be retrieved or recovered; irretriev'ably; irretrievable-ness, ir'rě.tree''vā.b'lness.

Unretrieved, un'rě.treevd'', not recovered (Rule lxxii.)

Latin re-tribuere, to give back, with ir[in], neg.: French trouver.

Irreverent, ir'rěv'.ē.rent, not reverent; irrever'ent-ly; irreverence, ir'rěv'.ē.rence, want of reverence.

Unreverenced, un.rev'.e.rencd, not reverenced (R. lxxii.)

Fr. irrévérent, irrévérence; Lat. irrévérentia, irrévérens, gen. -entis.

Irreversible, ir'rě.ver''sī.b'l (not ēr're.ver''sā.b'l), not to be reversed or recalled; irrever'sable-ness, irrever'sably.

Unreversed, un'rě.verst'', not reversed (Rule lxxii.)

Lat. re-vertēre, sup. reversum, to turn back, to reverse, with ir[in], neg.

Irrevocable, ir'rěv'.ō.kā.b'l (not ēr'rě.vōke'.ā.b'l), not to be reversed or annulled; irrev'ocably (not ēr'rě.vōke'.ā.b'ly).

Unrevoked, un're.vōkt', not revoked (Rule lxxii.)

Latin ir[in] re-vocābilis, not to be recalled; French irrévocable.

Irrigate, ir'rī.gate, to pour water over [land]; ir'rigāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), ir'rigāt-ing (Rule xix.);

Irrigation, ir'rī.gay''shūn; ir'rigāt-or (Rule xxxvii.)

Lat. irrigatio, irrigator (ir[in] irrigāre, to throw water on); Fr. irrigation

Irritate, ir'ri.tāte, to provoke, to inflame; ir'ritāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), ir'ritāt-ing (R. xix.), ir'ritāt-or (R. xxxvii.)

Irritation, ir'ri.tay''shūn; irritative, ir'ri.ta.tiv; ir'ritative-ly. Irritant, that which irritates; ir'ritancy.

Irritable, ir'ri.tā.b'l, passionate; ir'ritably, irritability.

Irritatory, ir'ri.tā.t'ry, productive of irritation.

French irritabilité, irritable, irritant, irritation, v. irriter; Latin irritabilis, irritabilitas, irritatio, irritator, v. irritare.

Irruption, ir'rūp'shūn, incursion. Eruption, a bursting out; irruptive, ir'rūp'tiv. Eruptive, er'rūp'tiv.

Lat. irruptio, ir'inlrumpere, sup. ruptum, to break in; Fr. irruption. (There are thirty-nine words beginning with the prefix "ir-," all directly or indirectly from the Latin, and in all (except the first one and the last three) the prefix is negative.)

Is, iz, third sing. pres. ind. of the anomalous verb To be.

Gothic i-m, i-s, is-t. Old English eo-m, ear-t, is, plu. ar-on.

-ise (Latin -itum) nouns, "act of," "habit of": as exercise.

-ise (Latin -ire) verbs, "to give," "to make": as apologise.

(The corresponding Greek ending is "-ize-")

-ish (Old English -isc or -isch) adj., pertaining to: as English.

Added to adj. it is a dimin. as good-ish, bad-ish.

Added to nouns it means "like": as boy-ish, girl-ish.

-ish (Lat. -ire, Fr. -ir, -iss) verbs, "to make," "to give": fin-ish.

Isinglass, iz'zīn.glass (a corruption of German hausenblase, that is, hausen-blase, the sturgeon's bladder).

This is a very disgraceful word, and quite misleads (see Rule lxiv.)

Islamism, iz'lä.mīz-m, the religious creed of Mohammedans.

Islam, iz'lä.m, the religion of Mohammed, the countries where it is professed, the whole body of Mohammedans.

Arabic islam, obedience to the will of God, salama, to submit.

Island, i'land, land surrounded by water. Highland, hi'land.

Island-er, i'län.der, an inhabitant of an island.

Highland-er, hi'län.der, one who lives in the Highlands.

Old Eng. ed, water; ed-land, water-land, an island; Lat. insula.

Isle, ile. Aisle, ile. I'll, ile. Ill, Hill.

Isle, ile, an island; islet, i'let, a little island.

French isle, now île; Lat. insula, an island.

Aisle, ile, the side "wings" of a church.

French aisle, now alle [of a church]; Latin ala, a wing.

I'll, ile, contraction of I will.

Ill, il, not well. (Old English yfel.)

Hill, hīl, an elevation less than a mountain. (O. Eng. hyll.)

-ism (Gk. suffix -ism-os), nouns, "system," "doctrine" "imitation of": as baptism, despot-ism, Mohammed-ism.

I'so- (Greek prefix), equal, similar. (Greek isos, equal.)

Iso-chronal, ī.sōk'.rō.nal, occurring at equal intervals, like the beats of the pulse. (Greek isos chrōnōs, equal time.)

Iso-clinal, ī'.so-klī'.nāl, having equal inclines or dips.

Greek isos klinō, to make equal slopes or inclines.

I'so-pōd, plu. ī'so-pōds, an insect which has all its legs alike; isopoda, ī.sōp'.ō.dah, the order ...;

Isopodous, ī.sōp'.ō.dūs. (Greek isos pōdēs, equal feet.)

Isosceles, ī.sōs'.kē.leez or ī.sōs'sē.leez, applied to triangles which have two sides equal. (Greek skēlōs, a leg.)

Iso-thermal, ī'.so-rheī'.māl, having the same temperature.

Greek isos thermē, equal heat.

Isolate, ī'.so.late, to cut off from all connections, to detach; ī'solāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), ī'solāt-ing; isolation, ī'.so.lay''.shūn.

In'sulate, in'sulāt-ed, in'sulāt-ing, insulāt-or (R. xxxvii.); insulation, in'.su.lay''.shūn; in'sular.

"Isolate," &c., the French form, isoler, isolation. "Insulate," &c., the Latin form, insula, insularis, insulare, supine insulātum.

Israelite, īz'.rā.ēlite (not īz'.rēl.ite), a descendant of Israel or Jacob, a Jew; Israelitish, īz'.rā.ēlite''.ish.

Issue, iss'.su (not ish'.shu), result, offspring, exit, an artificial ulcer, to proceed out of; issued, iss'.sude; issu-ing, iss'.su.ing (verbs ending in any two vowels, except -ue, retain both before -ing, Rule xix.); issu-er, iss'.su.er.

Fr. issue, outlet; issu, born (past part. of issir); Lat. ex-ire, to go out.

-ist (Greek suffix -ist-ēs) nouns, "an agent": art-ist.

-ister or -ster, nouns, "one engaged in": chorister. (R. lxii.)

Isthmus, īsth'.mūs, a neck of land joining a continent or peninsula to the mainland; isthmian, īsth'.mī.ăn.

Latin isthmus; Greek isthmōs, a neck or bridge.

It, possessive its, plu. they, theirs, them. Hit, to strike.

(The introduction of "its" dates from the beginning of the reign of James I. (1603). In the Bible "his" is used for its.)

Old English nom. hit, gen. his, dat. him, acc. hit.

Italian, ī.tāl'.yăn, adj. of Italy; Italian-ise, ī.tāl'.yăn.ize, to reduce to Italian habits or idiom; Ital'ianis-ing (R. xix.); Ital'ianised, ī.tal'.yăn.izd; Ital'ianis-er.

Italics, sloping type. Italicise, ī.tāl'.ī.size, to print in sloping type; italicised, ī.tāl'.ī.sized; ital'icis-ing (R. xix.); italicism, ī.tāl'.ī.sizm, an Italian idiom; Ital'ian-iron.

Latin Italia, the land of the Vituli, Vituli, or Siculi.

Itch, a cutaneous irritation. Hitch, an obstruction.

Itched, itcht; itch'-ing, itch'-y, itch'í-ness, (Rule xi.), itch'ing-ly. (Old English gictha, itch or tetter.)

- ite (Latin -it-us), adj., "quality of," "pertaining to," "like".
- ite (Latin -it-us), nouns, subject of an action: favour-ite.
- ite (in Chem.), a salt formed from an acid ending in -ous: as sulphite [of silver], sulphurous acid combined with silver.
- ite (Greek lithos, stone), in Geology, a fossil: ammon-ite.
- Item (Latin), ī.tēm, furthermore, also, a separate article.
- Itinerant, ī.tīn'ē.rānt, a vagrant; itin'erant-ly, itin'erancy; itinerary, plu. itineraries, ī.tīn'ē.rā.rīz, a route-book, a traveller's book for jottings on the way.
- Latin iter, gen. itinēris, a journey (eo, supine itum, to go).
- itis, ī.tīss, added to Greek words to denote inflammation: as card-itis (kardia), inflammation of the heart.
- Itself, plu. themselves, a reciprocal pronoun. (O. E. hit sylf.)
- ity, ī.y (Latin -itas), abstract nouns: as curiosity.
- ium (in Chem.), a metal: as potass-ium, sall-ium.
- ium (in Bot.), a species: as delphin-ium (larkspur).
- ive (Lat. -iv-us), adj., "able to," "inclined to": cohesive.
- ive (ditto), nouns formed from adj., "one who is": captive.
- I've, ī.ve, contract. of I have. Hive, a place for bees. (O. E. hyfe.)
- Ivory, ī.vō.ry, the tusk of male elephants, made of ivory;
- Ivories, ī.vō.rīz, works of art in ivory;
- I'vory-black, charred ivory or bone mixed with charcoal.
- Fr. ivoire; Lat. ebur, gen. eboris ([ex]barrus, from elephant's tooth).
- Ivy, plu. ivies, ī.vīz, a plant. (Old English īfig.)
- ize (Gk. hizō), "to make," "to make like," "to give": tantal-ize.
- The corresponding Latin suffix is "-ise."
- Jabber, djāb'ber, to gabble unintelligibly; jab-bered, djab'berd;
- jab'ber-ing, jab'bering-ly, jab'ber-er. (French jaboter.)
- Jacinth, djās'.cīnth, a pellucid gem (Rev. xxi. 20).
- Latin jacinthus or hyacinthus: Greek hvakēinthos. This gem is so called because its colour is like that of the purple hyacinth.
- Jack, a machine for sundry purposes.
- Jack-ass, the male ass. Jack-daw, a daw.
- Jack-pike, a young pike. Jack-rat, a male rat.
- Jack-plane, a large rough plane. Jack-towel, a long coarse towel hung on a roller. Jack-pudding, a clown.
- Jack o' lantern, īgnis fatuus. Jack-in-office, official prig.
- Jack of all trades, a man who can turn his hand to anything.
- Jackal, jāk'.awl, an animal half dog and half fox. (Span. chacal.)
- Jackanapes, jāk'.a.nāpes, an impertinent vulgar prig.
- Jacket, jāk'.ēt, a short coat without tails; jack'et-ed, put into jackets, wearing a jacket. (French jaquette.)

Jacobin, zhāk'.o.bīn, djāk'.o.bīte.

Jacobins, a revolutionary party in France who met, during the first revolution, in an old monastery of Jacobin monks; Jac'obin-ism, Jacobin'ical.

Jacobites, favours of the pretenders, when the Stuart dynasty was set aside. So called from Jac'obus, Latin for James; Jac'obit-ism; Jacobitical, djāk'.o.bīt' .ā.kāl.

Jacob's ladder, djā'.cōbz lād'.dēr (not djā'.cups...), the common Greek valerian. Its successive leaflets form a ladder.

Jaconet, zhāk'.o.nēt, a thick muslin. (French jaconas.)

Jacquard loom, zhāk'.ard loom, for weaving figures on silks and muslins. Invented by M. Jacquard, of Lyons.

Jade, djāde, a sorry horse or woman; jād'-ed, wearied out.

French jadis, once, in times gone by. A "jade," "once" a horse.

Jag, djäg, a rough tattered edge, to notch like a saw; jagged (1 syl.), jagg'-ed-ly (3 syl.), jagg'-ed-ness, jagg'-ing (Rule i.), jagg'-er, jagg'-y, not smooth at the edge.

Welsh gag, a hole; or German zacke, dented, a jag or spike, hammer.

Jaguar, djäg'.u.ar or djā.gwār', the American tiger.

Jail, djāle, a prison; jail'-er; jail-bird, a prisoner.

Spanish jaula; French geôle; Low Latin gaola, gaolarius, a jailer.

Jalap, djāl'.āp (not djōl'.ōp), a purgative drug.

Fr. jalap; made from the root of a plant common in Xalapa (Mexico).

Jalousy, plu. jalousies, zhāl'.ō.zeez'. Jealousy, djēl'.ō.sy. (q.v.)

Jalousy, zjāl'.ō.zee', a Venetian blind. Jealousy, suspicion...

French jalousie, both senses; Italian gelosia, jealousy.

The persienne (pair'.se.enn') is a folding outside shutter, with bars like those of a louver [window]. The Jalousy is an inside blind.

Jam, a conserve of fruit, to squeeze. Jamb, djām [of a door]; jammed, jāmd (Rule i.); jamm'-ing, jamm'-er.

Jamb, djām, the side supports of a door-way, fireplace, &c.

French jambage (jambe, a leg); Greek kamax, a pole or stake.

Jangle, djān'.gl, to wrangle; jan'gled (2 syl.), jan'gling, jan'gler. (Germ. zanken, to quarrel, zanker, zankerin.)

Janitor (Lat.), djān'.i.tor, a door-keeper (janua, a door).

Janizary, plu. janizaries, djān'.i.zā.riz, Turkish foot-guards.

The Turkish infantry so called rose in 1826 against the Sultan and were utterly exterminated to the number of 25,000. (Turkish yeni askari, new troops.)

Jansenism, zhān'.se.nizm, the dogmas of Jansen, bishop of Ypres, regarding grace and free-will; Jan'sen-ist.

January, djān'.u.ēr-ry, the first month of the year.

Latin januārius, from janua, a gate or porch. Generally derived from Janus, a god with two faces, one behind and one before.

Japan, djá.păn', to varnish with "japan varnish"; japanned, jă.pănd' (Rule iv.); japann'-ing, japann'-er.

Japanese, djăp'.ăn.eez' (sing. and plu.), a native of Japan.

Names of peoples in -ese are both sing. and plu., as Portuguese, &c.

Jar, djar, an earthen vessel, to distress the ear, to clash, to wrangle; jarred, jard; jarr'-ing, jarr'ing-ly (Rule i.)

Ajar, not shut close [said of a door] because in such a state it is liable to rattle by striking the jamb.

Spanish jarra, a jug; chirriar, to sing out of time and tune.

Jardiniere, zhar.dîn'.i.air, an ornamental flower-stand.

French jardin, a garden; jardinière, a flower-stand.

Jargon, djar'.gôn, unintelligible talk. (Fr. jargon, gibberish.)

Jargonelle [pear], djar'.go.něł'. (Called after Mad. Jargonelle.)

Jasmine, djăs'.mîn, a flower. (Fr. jasmin, Lat. jasminum.)

Jasper, djăs'.per, a variety of quartz. (Fr. jaspe, Lat. iaspis.)

Jaundice, djarn'.dis, a disease; jaundiced, jarn'.dist.

French jaunisse (jaune, yellow). The d is interpolated.

Jaunt, djaunt (to rhyme with aunt), a pleasure trip.

Archaic jaunce; Archaic French jancer.

Jaunty, djarn'.ty, coquettish in dress; jaun'ti-ness (Rule xi.), jaun'ti-ly. (French gentil, gentillesse.)

Javelin, djāv'.lîn, a light spear. (Fr. javeline, Lat. jăcŭlum.)

Jaw, djaw, the bone in which the teeth are set, to snag; jawed (1 syl.), jaw'-ing. (Old English geagl or geahlas, plu.)

Jay, djay, a bird. (French geai, in Latin grăcŭlus.)

Jealousy, djěl'.ăs.y, suspicion of fidelity in love. Jealousy, q.v.

Jealous, djěl'.ăs; jeal'ous-ness, jeal'ous-ly.

French jalousie, jalous; Spanish zeloso; Latin zēlus, zeal, envy.

Jean, djāne (not djeen), a twilled cotton cloth. Jane, a name.

French jean, so called from Gênes, i.e. Genoa, in Italy.

Jeer, djeer, a scoff, to scoff; jeered (1 syl.), jeer'-ing, jeer'-ing-ly, jeer'-er. (German scheren, to teaze, to jeer.)

Jehovah; jě.hō'.vah, not connected with the word Jove.

"Jehovah" is made from the three letters y h v (yē[h]o[v]ah), and comes from the Heb. verb to be: hence the synonym "I am."

"Jove" is a contraction of [Jupiter], that is Diespiter [pater], Greek Dis or Zeus pătēr, "father Dis," whence Latin dies, day or light. From thēs (to put in order), or, according to Plato, thēs (to run), from the course of the heavenly bodies. Others derive the word from theomai, to see [all things]. (Compare Herodotus καταμύθου ΘΕΝΤΕΣ τὰ πάντα and Xenophon Ἡρεῖ of ΘΕΟΙ ΔΙ-ΘΕΕΣΑΝ.)

Jeune, djē.djănē, empty-headed, childish, deficient in brain-muscularity; jejune'-ness, jejune'-ly.

Latin jejūnus, fasting, bare, barren.

Jelly, plu. jellies, djəl'iz, a conserve from fruit, calves' feet, &c.

Jellied, djəl'ləd, made into a jelly. Gelid, djəl'id, cold.

"Jelly," Spanish jalea, jelly. "Gelid," Latin gelidus, cold.

Jennet, djən'nēt, a small Spanish horse. (French genette.)

Jenneting, djən'nēt.ing, an apple. (French jeanneton.)

Not a corruption of June-eaten, although it means the midsummer apple. La Saint Jean means midsummer. Jeannette is a dim., and jeanneton means the little midsummer [apple].

Jenny, djən'ny, a spinning machine. (Corrupt for 'gin'y.)

Not so named by Arkwright from his wife, for his wife's name was Betsy, but from engine with dim. 'gin-ie, pronounced 'gēn-y.

Jeopardise, djēp'ar.dize, to endanger; jeopardised (3 syl.)
jeop'ardis-ing (Rule xix.); jeopardis-er, djēp'ar.dize.er.

Jeopard-ed, djēp'ar.dəd (R. xxxvi.), exposed to loss or injury.

Jeopardy, djēp'ar.dy, exposure to loss, injury, or danger.

French jeu parti (jō-cus partitus), an even game (Tyrwhitt).

Jeremiad, djēr'rē.mī.ade, a doleful long-winded story.

So called from the "Book of Lamentations" by Jeremiah.

Jerk, djerk, a twitch, meat dried in the sun, to twitch, to jolt; jerked, djerk't; jerk'-ing, jerk'ing-ly; jerk'-y.

Welsh terc, a jerk or jolt; v. tercu. "Jerk" (dried meat), Per. charqui.

Jerkin, djerk'jēn, a short coat. (French jaque with kin dim.)

Jersey, plu. jer'seys (not jer'sies), a woollen under-waistcoat.

So called from a fine woollen yarn spun in Jersey.

Jerusalem-artichoke, djēr.rū'sā.lēm ar'tī.tchoke, a plant from Brazil, with edible roots, akin to potatoes.

"Jerusalem," a corruption of the Italian girasole, the sunflower, which the plant resembles in leaf and stem.

Jessamine (corruption of jasmine), a plant.

French jasmin; Latin jasmīnum; Greek iasme.

Jess, plu. jesses, the leather strap tied to a hawk's leg and fastened to the fist of the tosser. (Fr. jeter, to toss off.)

Jest, a joke, to joke; jest'-ed (R. xxxvi.), jest'-ing, jest'ing-ly.

Jest'-er, a joker, a licensed fool. Gesture, djēs'tchūr, attitude.

Spanish chiste, a witticism, fun. "Gesture," Latin gestus.

Jesuit, djēz'u.īt, a member of the "order of Jesus," founded by Ignatius Loyola, in 1534, a crafty propagandist;

Jesuitical, djēz'u.īt'ī.kāl; jes'uit'ical-ly; jesuit-ism, djēz'u.īt.izm; jesuit-ry, djēz'u.īt.ry (not djez'u.īs.ry.)

Jet, djēt, a small shoot of water, a gas nipple, ag'ate.

Jet d'eau, plu. jet d'eaux, zhā.dō', zhā.dōze', a fountain.

Jet'sam, goods cast overboard to lighten a ship;

Flōt'sam, goods found floating about the sea;

- Lā'gan, goods thrown into the sea but tied to a buoy. (Fr. jet, v. jeter, to throw [out]. "Flotsam," Old Eng. flōþan, to float. "Lagan," Old Eng. licgan or liggan, to lie on [the sea]. "Jet" (the mineral); Lat. gagates, so called from Gagates, in Sicily.)
- Jetty, plu. jetties, djēt' tiz, a pier, a landing-place. (Fr. jetée.)
- Jew, fem. Jewess; Jew-ish, Jew-like. (-ish, added to nouns means like, Rule lxvii.); Jew-ish-ness, Jew-ish-ly.
- Jew'ry, Judea. Ju'ry, a panel of twelve men for law trials. Jew's harp (corruption of jeu harpe (Fr.), a toy-harp).
- Jew's eye, 10,000 marks. (Italian gioia, a jewel.)
- French Judah, the father of the Jewish race, fourth son of Jacob.
- Jew'el, a gem; jewelled, djew' eld, adorned with jewels; jew'ell-ing (Rule iii., EL), jew'ell-er; jew'el-ry. German juwel, juwelier; Italian gioiello, gioielliere.
- Jib, djib, to start aside. Gibe, djibe, to scoff. Jibbed, djibd; jibb'-ing (R. i.); (noun) a ship's sail, the beam of a crane; jib-boom. (See Gibe.)
- Jiffy, djif' fy, a hurry. "To send one off in a jiffy." Welsh ysgip, a quick snatch; v. ysgipio, to snatch off.
- Jig, djig, a dance, to dance a jig. Gig, a two-wheeled open carriage; jiggd, djigd; jigg-ing. (Fr. gigue, a jig.) "Gig," Fr. giguer, to frisk about. So cabriolet, from cabri, a kid.
- Jilt, djilt. Guilt, gilt, crime. Gilt, covered with gold leaf. Jilt, a woman who wins a man's love and then discards it, to win and discard a man's love; jilt'-ed, jilt'-ing.
- Jim'my, a small crow-bar for forcing doors.
- Jimmers, djim' merz, jointed hinges.
- Jingle, djin' gl, a rattling sound, to rattle [keys, &c.]; jingled, djin' gl'd; jin'gling, jin'gling-ly.
- Jōb, a piece of chance work. Jōb, a Bible character. Jōb, to do a jōb, to hack, to sell to a broker; jōbbd; jōbb'-ing (Rule i.), jōbb'-er; jōbb'-ery, djōb' bēry.
- Jockey, plu. jockeys (not jockies), djōk' y, djōk' iz, one who rides a horse in a race, one who deals in horses, to cheat, to bilk; jockeyed, djōk' ed; jock'ey-ing, jock'ey-ism. Scotch Jockie, English Jacky, a little Jack.
- Jocose, djō.kōce', given to jokes; jocose'-ly, jocose'-ness. Jocular, djōk' ū.lār, full of little jokes; joc'ular-ly; jocularity, djōk' ū.lār' rī.ty, sportfulness. Latin jocōsus (jōcus, a joke), joculāris (joculus, a little joke).
- Jocund, djōk' und, lively; joc'und-ly; jocun'dity. Latin jocundus (for jucundus, pleasant), jucunditas.
- Jōg, a shake, a jolt, to jolt; jogged, djōgd; jōgg'-ing (Rule i.); jōgg'-er. (Welsh gogi, to shake, gogis, a jolt.)

Join (1 syl.), to unite; joined (1 syl.); join'-ing, join'-er; join'ery, the art or trade of a joiner.

Joint (1 syl.), a hinge, a piece of meat, as a joint of mutton, shared by two or more, to separate into, "joints," to form with joints, to fit; joint'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), joint'-ing, joint'-ly, joint-stock-company, plu. ...companies, -niz.

Joint'-er, a plane. Jointure, djoin'tchür, a settlement on a wife at the death of her husband; jointured, joint'tchürd; jointur-ing (Rule xix.); joint'tchür.ing.

French joint or jointure, a joint; v. joindre; Latin jungere, to join.

Joist (1 syl.), djoyst (not djiste), the beams to which the boards of a floor or laths of a ceiling are nailed. Rafter (q.v.)

A similar meaning to "sleeper" of a railroad. French gister (giter), to sleep, to lodge; giste (gite), a "sleeper," a resting-place.

Joke (1 syl.), a jest, a merry trick, to make a joke; jök'ed (1 syl.), jök'-ing (Rule xix.), jök'-ing-ly, jök'-er; in joke, in fun.

A practical joke, a trick played on a person. (Latin jocus.)

Jolly, buxom, merry; jöl'li-ly (Rule xi.), jöl'li-ness, jöl'li-ty; jollification, jöl'.li.fi.kay''shün, a feast.

Jolly-boat, a small boat belonging to a ship, a yawl.

French joli, pretty. Jolly (boat), another form of "yawl"; French jale, a large bowl; German and Danish jolle; Swedish julle.

Jolt, a jog, to jog; jölt'-ed, jölt'-ing, jölt'-ing-ly, jölt'-er.

Jonquil, djön'.kwil, a flower of the narcissus species.

French jonquille; Italian giunchiglia (Latin juncus, junk).

Jostle, djös'l, to push against rudely; jostled, djös'l'd; jostling, djös'.ling; jostler, djös'.ler.

French jouter, now jouter, to tilt; Italian giostare.

Jöt, a very small quantity, to note down; jött'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), jött'-ing (Rule i.), jött'-er. (Gk. iöta, the smallest letter.)

Journal, djür'.näil, a daily newspaper, a daybook; journal-ise, djür'.näil.ize, to enter in a journal; jour'nalised (3 syl.), jour'nalis-ing (Rule xix.), jour'nalis-er, jour'nal-ism; jour'nal-ist, a newspaper writer; jour'nalist'-ic.

Journey, plu. journeys (not journies, Rule xlv.), djür'.ny, djür'.niz, land-passage. Voyage, sea-passage.

Journey, djür'.ny, to travel by land; journeyed, djür'.nëd; jour'ney-ing; jour'ney-er, one who travels by land.

Journeyman, plu. journeymen, (fem.) -woman, -women, djür'.ny-män, mën, djür.ny-wö.man, -wim'.ën, a mechanic employed from day to day and paid wages.

An "apprentice" is not hired, but pays a premium to be taken a trade. An articled clerk or assistant is an apprentice in a profession (law, medicine, school).

French journal, journaliste, journalée (jour, a day, Latin dies).

Joust (1 syl.), a tournament. Jüst, equitable, right.

Joust (verb), joust'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), joust'-ing, joust'-er.

"Joust" Fr. jouste, now joute, v. jouter. "Just" Fr. juste, Lat. justus.

Jovial, djō.vi.äl, convivial, gay, jolly; jō'vial-ly, jō'vial-ness; joviality, plu. jovialities, djō.vi.äl' i.tiz, conviviality.

Born under the planet Jove [Jupiter], the most genial and auspicious of all the planets according to astrology.

Jowl, jōle, the cheek. Cheek by jowl, tête à tête. (O. E. ceole.)

Joy (1 syl.), plu. joys, joiz, pleasure; joy'-ful, joy'-ful-ly, joy'-ful-ness, joy'-less, joy'-less-ly, joy'-less-ness.

Joyous, jōy'-us; joy'-ous-ly, joy'-ous-ness. (French joie.)

Jubilant, djū'.bī.lānt, exulting; jū'bilant-ly; jubilation, djū'.bī.lay''.shūn, exultation.

Jubilee, djū'.bī.lē, a grand periodical festival.

Jubilate [Sunday], djū'.bī.lay''.te, the third after Easter.

(The service for this Sunday anciently began with Psalm lxxi, "Jubilate Deo, omnes terræ" (Sing joyfully to the Lord, all ye lands).)

French jubilation, jubilé; Latin jubilatio, jubilans, gen. jubilantis.

Judaism, jū'.da.izm, the religion and social system of the Jews; judaise, jū'.da.ize, to conform to Judaism; judaism; judaism-ing (Rule xix.), judaised, jū'.da.izd; judaism-er. Judaic, jū'.day'āk; judaical, jū'.day'ā.kāl; judaical-ly.

Judean, jū'.deē'.ān, a native of Jude'a; juda'ist.

Judah, fourth son of Jacob, father of the tribe of Judah, and founder of the Judæi or Jews.

Judge (1 syl.), jūdged (1 syl.), jūdg'-ing (R. xix.), judge'-ship.

Judg'-ment (words in -dg and -ue drop -e before -ment: as acknowledg-ment, abridg-ment, lodg-ment, and argu-ment, Rule xviii.); judg'-ment-day, judg'-ment-seat;

Judge-ad'vocate, plu. judge-ad'vocates (not judges...).

Judicature, jū'.dī.kā.tchūr; judicative, jū'.dī.kā.tiv.

Judicatory, jū'.dī.kā.t'ry; judicable, jū'.dī.kā.b'l.

Judicial, jū'.dīsh'.äl; judicial-ly, jū'.dīsh'.äl.ly.

Judicious, jū'.dīsh'.ūs; judic'-ious-ly, judic'-ious-ness.

Judiciary, jū'.dīsh'.ä.ry, pertaining to courts of justice.

French juge, judicature, judiciaire, judicieux, jugement, v. juger; Latin jūdex, jūdicabilis, jūdiціальis, jūdiціarius, jūdicāre.

Jūg, a pitcher, to warble [like a nightingale], to stew [hare].

Junius speaks of jugge (an urn, a pitcher), and calls it a Danish word.

Juggernaut, djūg'ger.nawt (better Jag'annaut), a Hindu idol.

Hindustani jagannatha, lord of the world.

Juggle, djūg'.gl, to conjure; juggled, jūg'.gl'd; jugg'ling.

Juggler, djūg'.gler; jugglery, djūg'gle.ry. Ju'gular (q.v.)

Span. jugar, jugleria, buffoonery; Fr. jongleur, &c.; Lat. jūculātor.

Jugular, Jocular, Juggler, djū'.gū.lar, djōk'ku.lar, djūg'.gler.

Jū'gular [vein] (not djūg.u.lar), the large vein of the neck.

Jōc'ular, given to jokes and fun. (Lat. jōculāris, jōcus, a joke.)

Jūg'gler, a conjurer. (Spanish juglar, Latin jōculātor.)

"Jugular" Lat. jūgūllum, the throat. In Lat. the first syl. is short.

Juice, djūce, the liquor of fruit; juicy, (comp.) juci-er, (super) juci-est, jūce.y, jūce'.i.er, jūce'.i.est; juici-ness, jūce'.i.ness (Rule xi.); juice'-less, without juice.

(The final -e is dropped before -y: as "stone," ston-y, Rule xix.)

Latin jus, juice, gravy (Greek zēō, to boil, whence zōmōs, broth).

Jujube (Fr.), zhū'.zhūbe, a sweetmeat. (Latin ziziphium.)

Julep, djū'.lēp (not julup), a liquid mixture serving as a vehicle to medicines. (French julep, Persian djuleb.)

Julian [æra, year], djū'.lī.ăn. So named from Julius Cæsar.

Julian æra, began forty-six years before the Christian æra.

Julian year, 365½ days. Corrected by Gregory XIII., 1582.

July, djū.ly', so named from Julius Cæsar, who was born in July.

Jumble, djūm'.b'l, a confused mixture, to mix helter-skelter; jumbled, djūm'.b'ld; jum'bling, jum'bling-ly, jum'bler.

Archaic jombre, used by Chaucer.

Jūmp, a leap, to leap; jumped, jūmpt; jūmp'-ing, jūmp'-er.

Junction, djūnk'.shūn, the point of union, union; juncture, djūnk'.tchūr, a critical period, a seam, a joint.

Latin junctio, junctūra; French jonction, conjoncture.

June, djūne, the sixth month, dedicated to Juno.

Jungle, djūn'.g'l, land in India covered with thick brushwood.

Junior, djū'.nī.or, the younger. Senior, sē'.nī.or, the older.

Latin jūvenis, young, (comp.) jūnior. Senex, old, (comp.) senior.

Juniper, djū'.nī.pēr, an evergreen shrub. (Latin jūnīpērus.)

Junius ferre, to bear [berries] in June. Its season of fruit.

Junto, plu. juntos (Rule xlii.), djūn.tōze, a cabal.

A blunder for junta (Spanish), a secret council.

Jurisdiction, djū'.rīs.dīk'.shūn, the district over which any authority extends. (Latin jurisdictio.)

Jurisprudence, djū'.rīs.prū'.dence, skill and knowledge of law.

Latin juris-prudentia (prūdēns, i.e., providens, foreseeing).

Jury, plu. juries, djū'.rīz, a panel of twelve men. Jewry, Jude'a.

Ju'ry-man, plu. ju'ry-mēn, one who serves on a jury.

Grand-jury, a panel of not more than twenty-three men who decide if a cause shall be sent before a judge.

Petty-jury, a panel of not more than twelve men who decide if a person accused is guilty or not of the charge.

- Juror, one sworn on a jury. Non-jurors, certain clergymen who refused, after the Revolution, to swear allegiance to the new government. The non-jurors were Archbishop Sancroft, eight other bishops, and four hundred clergymen.
- Jury-mast, a temporary mast. (Corruption of jour mast, a mast for a day (jour), used for the nonce).
- Fr. jury, petty-jury, grand-jury (Lat. jurō, to swear, the men sworn).
- Just, right, equitable. Joust, a tournament; just'-ly; just'-ness.
- Justice, djūs' tīs. Justice of the peace, plu. justices...
- For justice sake (not for justice' sake nor for justice's sake). Similarly for conscience sake, for righteousness sake, for mercy sake. Only names of animals and words personified have a possessive case.
- Justiciary, plu. justiciaries, djūs' tīs' i.ā. rīz.
- Just now, a little time ago. So presently, a short time hence. (In French "présentement" means now at this present time.)
- Latin justitarius, justitia, justus (jus, legal right). French justice.
- Justify, djūs' tī. fy, to acquit; justifies, djūs' tī. fīz; justified, djūs' tī. fīd; justifi-er, justifi'-able, justifi'able-ness, justifi'ably (Rule xi.), justifi'-ing (Rule xi.)
- Justification, djūs' tī. fī. kay', shūn, exoneration.
- French justifier, justifiable, justification; Latin justificatio, justificare (justus-facio [facio], to make just).
- Jūt, to project forward. Jūte (1 syl.), fibre used for cordage. Jutt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), jutt'-ing, jutt'ing-ly: (Fr. jeter.)
- Jūte (1 syl.), an Indian plant used for cordage and coarse cloths.
- Juvenile, djū' vē. nīl, youthful. Ju'venal, a Roman poet. juvenility, djū' vē. nīl' i. ty, youthfulness.
- Latin jūvenilis, jūvenilitas (jūvenis, a young man).
- Juxta-position, djūx' ta. pō. zīsh' ōn, contiguity.
- Latin juxta positio, a position close to each other.
- Kail, greens, cabbage. Kale, colewort. (O. E. caiol; Lat. caulis.)
- Kaleidoscope (not -de-), ka. lī' dō. skōpē, an optical toy.
- (With few exceptions [the chief being telescope], the vowel before -scope is always -o-, Rule lxxiii.)
- Greek kalos eidos skōpō, I view beautiful appearances.
- Kali, kā' lī, glass-wort; ka'lium, the metallic base of kali.
- Arabic kali, ashes of the Salicornia. Al-kali (al, the).
- Kalmia, kāl' mī. ah, a genus of evergreen shrubs.
- So named from Peter Kalm, pupil of Linnæus.
- Kangaroo, kūn. gū. roo, a marsupial animal of Australia.
- Ka'olin, one of the clays used in the finest China porcelain.
- So called from Kaukin, a hill in China (kau ling, high ridge).

Kean-seedlings, no such word. (See Keen seedlings.)

Kedge (1 syl.), a small anchor used in rivers and harbours, to move a vessel by a kedge; kedged (1 syl.), kedg'-ing (Rule xxxvi.), kedg'-er same as kedge.

Keel. Kele. Keel, the principal and lowest timber in a ship, to turn the keel upwards, to scum broth. Kele, to cool.

Keeled (1 syl.), keel'-ing; keel'-age, port dues; keel'-sōn, the timber on the keel into which the mast is stepped;

Keel-haul'ing, hauling delinquent seamen under the keel from one side of a ship to the other.

Old English cæle, a keel or ship's bottom. "Kele" (to cool) cællan.

Keen, sharp; keen'-ly, keen'-ness. (Old English cēne, keen.)

Keen-seed'lings, an early dark strawberry full of seeds.

So named from Michael Keen, of Isleworth (1806).

Keep, condition, board, a castle fort, to retain, to take in charge; (past) kept, (past part.) kept; keep'-ing, keep'-er, keep'-er-ship (-ship, office of); keep'-sake, a gift.

Old Eng. cēpan, past cēpte, past part. cēpt; cape-hūs, a stone house.

Keeve (1 syl.), a mashing tub, to set wort in a keeve; keeved (1 syl.), keev'-ing. (Old English cysf, a large tub.)

Kēg, a small cask (more correctly Cag.)

French caque; Latin cācābus; Greek kachābōs, a caldron.

Kele (1 syl.), to cool; kēled (1 syl.), kēl'-ing (R. xix.) Keel, q.v.

Old English cællan, past cællode, past part. cællod.

Kēlp, sea-weed, the alkaline produce of burnt sea-weed.

Kelpie, kēl'-py, a water-sprite in Scotch mythology.

Kelt, a salmon that has been spawning, a celt. Kelts, the Celts.

Keltic, the modern way of spelling Celtic.

Kēn, to know, to perceive; kenned, kēnd; kēnn'-ing (Rule i.)

O. E. cunniān, past cūthe, past part. cūth; Welsh ceniaw, to perceive.

Kēnnel, a cot or house for dogs, a pack of hounds, to lodge in a kennel; kennelled, kēn'-nēld; ken'-nell-ing (R. iii., -EL).

French chenil (Latin cānis, a dog). Our word is badly formed.

Kent'ish, of or from Kent. Kent'ish-fire, vociferous applause.

Kent'ish-rag (in Geol.), a limestone common at Hythe (Kent).

Kent's hole, an ossiferous cavern in the Devonian limestone near Torquay, in Devonshire.

Kerb-stone, the stone rim at the outer edge of street pavement, the stone coping of a well. (Fr. courbe, a curb, v. courber.)

Kerchief, plu. kerchieves (should be kerchiefs), Rule xxxix., ker'-tchif, ker'-tchivz, a covering for the head or neck; kerchiefed, ker'-tchift, wearing a kerchief.

Hand-kerchief, plu. hand-kerchieves (better handkerchiefs).

- Neckerchief, plu. neckerchieves (better neckerchiefs), nĕk'.er.tchĭf, plu. nĕk'.er.tchĭfs, a cloth for the neck.
 "Handkerchief" and "neckerchief" are disgraceful hybrids.
Fr. couvrechef, a coif for the head. "Hand" and "Necca," Ang.-Sax.
- Kermes, ker'.meez (not kermz), the dried bodies of certain insects which yield, when crushed, a scarlet dye.
Arabic kermes or karmas; French kermés.
- Kern, an inferior Irish foot-soldier. (in times gone by), armed with inferior weapons, a vagabond. Quern, a hand-mill.
- Ker'nel, the nut of stone-fruit. Colonel, ker'.nel, a military officer.
Ker'nel, to form a kernel; kernelled, ker'.neld; ker'nell-ing.
 "Kernel," Old English cyrnel. "Colonel," French colonel. (Our pronunciation of this word is a vulgar contraction; Co'n-el.)
- Kersey, plu. kerseys (not kersies), ker'.sĭz, a coarse woollen cloth.
 A corruption of Jersey, where this cloth was first made.
- Kerseymere, ker'.se.meer, a superior cloth woven of the finest wool.
French casimir (du nom de son inventeur), M. Pierre Casimir, of Abbeville. The usual English derivation is Cashmere, in India.
- Kostrel, kĕs'.trel, the wind-hover, a kind of hawk. (Fr. crécerelle.)
- Ketch (Jack Ketch), a hangman. So named from John Ketch, hangman in the reign of James II. The name of the present [1877] hangman is Marwood.
- Ketchup, kĕt'.tchŭp, sauce made from mushrooms. (E.Ind. ketjab.)
- Kettle, Kittle, Kiddle, kĕt'.t'l, kĭt'.t'l, kĭd'.d'l.
Kettle, a vessel for boiling water. Kittle, an apparatus for dragging the flukes of an anchor towards the bow.
Kiddle, a basket set in the opening of a weir for catching fish.
 A pretty kettle of fish (a corrupt form of) A pretty kiddle of fish, a pretty mess, a very disagreeable dilemma.
Kettle-drum (a corruption of kiddle drum), a drum in the shape of a "kiddle" or basket used for catching fish.
 "Kettle," Old English cetel. "Kiddle," Bret kidel, a net fastened to two stakes near the opening of a weir for trapping fish.
- Key, plu. keys, kee, plu. keez. Quay, plu. quays, kee, keez, a wharf.
Key, an instrument to open a lock, an instrument to turn a screw, an ivory lever in a piano-forte, a musical scale denoted by the fundamental note (as the key of C).
- Key-board, kee.bōrd, the entire range of levers (touched by the fingers) in an organ or piano-forte.
- Key-stone, the highest central stone of an arch.
 Power of the keys, a power claimed by the pope of locking or unlocking the gates of heaven (Matt. xvi. 19).
 "Key," Old English cæg or ceg. "Quay," French quai, a wharf.
- Khedive, kĕd'.ĭ.vey (not kee.dive), viceroy of Egypt.

Khan, kan, an Asiatic chief. Can, a jug, to be able.

Khanate, kān'ate, the dominion or jurisdiction of a khan.

"Khan," Arab. "Can," a jug, O. E. canne. "Can" (verb), O. E. can.

Kick, a blow with the foot, to kick; kicked (1 syl.), kick'-ing, kick'-er. (Welsh cicio, to kick; cic, a foot.)

Kickshaw, kik'shaw, a worthless ornament, fanciful but not substantial food, a dainty. (Fr. quelque chose, something.)

Kid (Dan.), a young goat; kid'ling, a little kid (-ling, dim.)

Kiddle, kid'd'l, a basket for catching fish. Kettle, ket't'l [for boiling water]. Kittle [for dragging an anchor].

A pretty kiddle of fish corrupted into A pretty kettle of fish, a fine mess has been made, a dilemma.

"Kiddle," Bret. kidel, a fish-net fastened to two stakes at the mouth of a weir. "Kettle," Old English cetel.

Kidnap, to enveigle children; kidnapped, kid'nāpt; kid'-nāpp-ing (Rule iii., -P); kid'napp-er. (Better one p.)

"Kid," slang for child, "nab," slang for prig or steal.

Kidney, plu. kidneys (not kidnies), kid'niz, part of the animal body; kid'ney-shaped, -shāpt; kidney-bean, a bean kidney-shaped. Of the same kidney, of the same tastes.

Kilderkin, kil'der.kin, a tub containing eighteen gallons.

Dutch kinderken or kinneken, a baby-tub (kind, a child).

Kill, to take life. Kiln, kil'n (1 syl.), for drying bricks, &c.

Kill; killed, kild (not kilt); kill'-ing, kill'-er (Rule v.)

Old English cwell[an], to be killed, past cwel, past part. cwēlen.

Kiln, kil'n (1 syl.), a furnace for drying [bricks]. (O. Eng. cyl[n].)

Kiln-dry, kiln-dried, -dride; kiln-dry-ing.

Kilt, a Scotch philibeg, to tuck up [a gown] for walking; kilt'-ed, kilt'-ing. (Followed by up.) Kelt, a Celt.

Kim'bo, arched. Arms a-kimbo, with hands on the hips and elbows out. (Italian a sghembo, awry, schembo, crooked.)

-kin (suffix dimin.), as lamb-kin. -kind, race, as man-kind.

Kin, a blood relation; akīn', allied, of the same sort; kins'-man, plu. kins'men, (fem.) kins'woman, plu. -women, wim'n, a relative; kinsfolk, kins'fōke, male or female relatives; kindred, kin'drēd, related, similar.

Old English cyn, lineage, akin, suitable. (See below, Kind.)

-kind (Old Eng. suffix), "race": as man-kind. Kīn, dimin.

Kind, race, indulgent as a kinsman; kind'-ly, kind'li-ness, kind'-ness; kind-hearted, -hart'ēd; kind-heart'ed-ness.

Old English cyn, lineage, race, v. cenn[an], to beget, (past) cenned.

Kindle, kīn'd'l, to set on fire; kindled, kīn'd'ld; kīn'dling, setting on fire, material for lighting a fire [as chips]; kīn'dler. (Welsh cynneuad, a kindling, cynneu, to kindle.)

Kine (1 syl.), cows and oxen (a collective noun). O. E. cú, a cow.

The plu. of cú is cý (kí); the “-ie” is -en, a post-Norman plu. ending; representing -an, as in “ox-en”; cý-en [kí-en or kine] a double plu.

King, fem. queen, a monarch; king’-ly, king’li-ness (Rule xi.), king’-like, king’-less; king’-craft, the art of ruling a nation; king-dom, king’-dóm, the dominion of a king or queen (-dom, Old Eng. dominion, possession); king’-ship, office of a king (-ship, office); king’-ling, a petty king.

King-at-arms, plu. kings-at-arms, herald. There are three, viz. Garter, Clarenceux (kla.ren’-so), and Norroy (north-roi or king); king-post, the middle post of a roof.

King’s-bench or queen’s-bench, one of the high courts of law in which the king used to preside.

King’s evidence or queen’s evidence, evidence given by an accomplice on the promise of a free pardon.

King’s Counsel or queen’s counsel [Q.C.], a barrister selected as advocate for the crown.

(It is quite absurd to change “king” into “queen” in these compounds when the sovereign happens to be a woman. Just as well call the “kingdom” a “queendom” for the same reason.)

King’s evil, scrofula, supposed to be cured by royal touch. Old English cyning, a king, cyning-dóm.

King-fisher, a bird. Certainly not the king of fishers, as it is one of the worst, wounding many more than it catches.

So called from its note which sounds ke-fee-schew. So with the cuckoo, the peewit, the crow, the whip-poor-will, and others.

Kins’folk, kins’man, kins’woman. (See Kin.)

Kiosk, kē.ŏsk’, a Turkish pavilion or summer-house.

Kip’per, a salmon dried, to dry salmon; kippered, kip’-perd; kip’per-ing, kip’per-er.

Skipper, master of a trading merchant ship.

“Kipper,” Danish kippe. “Skipper,” Danish skipper.

Kirk, the Scotch church. (Old Eng. cyrce; Germ. kirche.)

Kirtle, kir’-t’l, a short jacket; kirtled, kir’-t’ld, wearing a kirtle. Old English cyrtel, a woman’s gown, a kirtle.

Kiss (Rule v.), plu. kiss-es (Rule xxxiv.), a salute with the lips, to salute with the lips; kiss’-ing, kiss’-er.

Kissed, kist, saluted with a kiss. Cist, sist. Cyst, sist.

Cist, a stone box, a Keltic coffin. (Latin cista, a chest.)

Cyst, a bag containing morbid matter. (Gk. kustis, a bladder.) Old English cyss, a kiss; v. cyssian, past cyste, past part. cyst.

Kit, a large bottle, a collection of necessary articles [for a march] as a soldier’s kit, a little cat, a small violin.

“Kit” (a large bottle, &c.), Old Eng. cytel. “A soldier’s kit” (Dutch). “Kit,” dim. of cat, Old Eng. catt. “Kit” (a pocket violin) unknown.

Kit-căt [club], so called from the cook (Christopher Cat), a small portrait the size of those on the walls of the kit-cat club.

Kitchen, kĭt' tchĕn, the room for cooking food; kit'chen-stuff, refuse fat and dripping; kit'chen-maid, the female servant under the cook; kit'chen-range, the kitchen fire-stove; kit'chen-garden, the vegetable garden.

Old English cycene; Italian cucina; Latin cūlina, the [back] kitchen (from colluo, to wash up, con-lavo).

Kite (1 syl.), a bird of prey, a toy. (Old English cyta, a kite).

Kith, acquaintance; kith and kin, friends and relations.

Old English cjȝth, knowledge of a person, cjȝthing, a relation.

Kleptomania, klĕp' tō.may' nĭ.ah, a thieving propensity.

Greek kleptos mania, thievish mania.

Knäck, dexterity; knick-knäck, a showy article of small value; knack'-er, a worn-out horse, a dealer in knackers.

German knack, knacken, knacker, &c.

Knäp, to break short. Näp, a short sleep, the "down" of cloth.

Knapped, knäpt; knäpp'-ing. Napped, näpt; napp'-ing.

"Knäp," Old Eng. knip[an], to bend (Germ. knacken, to crack).

"Näp" (to slumber), Old Eng. knæp[ian]. Näp (of cloth), knoppa.

Knäp'sack, a wallet to carry on the back. (Germ. knappsack.)

Knap-sack properly means a bag carried by a lad or servant.

Knappe (German), a lad or servant; and sack, a wallet or sack.

Knave, nave, a rogue. Nave [of a church, of a wheel].

Knave, strictly means a son, hence the "knave" of cards;

Knāv'-ish (R. xix.), fraudulent (-ish added to nouns means "like," with adj. it is dim.); knāv'ish-ly, knāv'ish-ness.

Knavery, plu. knaveries, nā' vē.rĭz, dishonest trickery.

Old English cnafa or cnafa, a youth, a son; German knabe.

"Nave" (of a wheel), Old English nafu (nafela, the navel).

"Nave" (of a church), French nef; Greek nāos, the inmost part of a temple, where the "God" was placed (not Lat. navis, a ship).

Knead, need, to work up dough into food. Need, necessity.

Knead'-ed (R. xxxvi.), knead'-ing, knead'-er; knead'ing-trough, need'ing-trōff. Need-ed, need'-ing, need'-ful, &c.

"Knead," Old English cned[an], past cnæd, past part. cneden.

"Need," Old Eng. need, v. nedd[ian], past neddode, p. p. neddod.

Knee, nee, the joint of the leg. (Old English cneow.)

Kneel, neel, to bend the knee. Neal, neel, (now anneal.)

Kneel, (past) knelt, nĕlt; (past part.) knelt; kneel'-ing, kneel'-er. (O. E. cneow[ian], past cneowede, p. p. cneowed.)

Knell, nĕll, the stroke of a tolling bell. Nell for Nelly.

Old English cnyll, v. cnyll[an], past cnyllde, past part. cnyllde.

Knicker-bockers, nĭk'ker-bōk'ērz, loose knee-breeches.

Named from Diēdrich Knickerbocker, the suppositious author of Washington Irving's "History of New York." It is compounded of the Dutch nicker broek, niggard-breeches.

Knick-knack, a small showy article of trifling value.

Knife, plu. knives, knife, knivz. (Only three words change -fe into -ves, to form the plural. "Knife," knives; "life," lives; and "wife," wives, Rule xl.)

War to the knife, war without quarter. (O. E. cníf, a knife.)

Knight, nite, a gentleman entitled to bear arms. Night, nite.

"Knight" is now a title next below baronet; and both prefix "Sir" before the Christian name, as Sir John Smith. In the address of a letter, &c., bart. is added after the surname of a baronet.

Knight, to make a knight; knight'-ed, knight'-ing, knight'-ly, knight'li-ness, knight-hood (-hood, rank).

Knight Templar, plu. Knights Templars. (A Gallicism.)

Knight Hospitallar, plu. Knights Hospitallars, nite hōs'pīt.āl.ar. (A Gallicism.)

Knight-ban'neret, plu. Knight-ban'nerets.

Knight-baronet, plu. Knight-baronets.

Knight-marshal, plu. Knight-marshals (not Knights...)

Knight of the Shire, plu. Knights of the Shire (not sheer).

Knight-er'rant, plu. Knight-errants (not Knights errant).

Knight-errantry, wandering in quest of adventure.

Squire, the personal attendant of an ancient military knight.

Accolade, āk'.kō.laid, the stroke which confers knighthood.

Old English cniht, a youth, cnicht-hdd, boy-hood; German knecht. (The "g" is interpolated and serves no useful purpose.)

Knit, nīt, to weave with knitting-needles. Nit, the egg of a louse.

Knitt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), knitt'-ing (Rule i.), knitt'-er.

Old English cnytt[an], past cnytte, past part. ge-cnyt.

Knob, nōb, a lump. Nōb, the head (one for his nob, in "cribbage"). Knobbed, nōbd, having a knob; knobb'-y, full of knobs; knobb'-i-ly (Rule xi.), knobb'-i-ness, knob'-stick.

Old Eng. cnœp; Germ. knopf. Our word is a blunder for knop.

"Nob" is a still more corrupt form of the same word.

Knock, nōk, a blow, to give a knock; knocked, nōkt; knock'-ing, knock'-er. To knock up, to weary out, to call out of bed.

Old Eng. cnuc[ian] or cny[s]ian, past. cnyse, past part. cnysed.

Knoll, nōl, a little mound (Old Eng. cnoll). Noll, Oliver.

Knot, nōt, a tie, to form a knot. Not, adv. of denial. Knott'-ed (R. xxxvi.), knott'-ing (R. i.), knott'-y, knott'-iness.

Knot'-grass, a grass, the underground stems of which are full of knots. Knot [of wood].

Old Eng. cnott, v. cnyt[an], to tie, past. cnytte, past part. ge-cnyt.

Knout (to rhyme with out), a whip for flogging criminals in Russia, to use the knout; knout'-ed (R. xxxvi.), knout'-ing. (Russian knūt.) Newt, nūte, an eft.

Know, (to rhyme with grow), to be cognisant of. Nō, not so.

Know, (past) knew, (past part.) known (rhyme to grown).

Knew, new, did know. New, not old. Gnu, nū, an antelope.

Known, clearly understood. None, nun, not any. Nun, q.v.

Knows, k silent (rhyme to grows). Nose, noze [of the face].

Know'-ing, k silent (rhyme to grow-ing); know'ing-ly.

Knowledge, nōl'.lēdge (not nō'-ledge), information.

Old English cniw[an], past cneow, past part. cniwen.

"Knowledge," cniw-lach, (after the conquest) cniw-lech (-lach or lde, the gift or state of [knowing]).

Knubs, nūbs, the waste silk in winding off cocoons.

Knuckle, nūk'.k'l, protuberance of a finger joint. to propel [marbles] by a filip; knuckled, nūk'.k'ld; knuck'ling, knuck'ler. To knuc'kle under, to yield. Knuck'le-duster, an iron "frise" for the hand. (German knöchel.)

Kobold (German), kō.bold', a spectre or spirit.

Koran, kō'rān, the Mohammedan bible. (Arab. al koran.)

Kraal, krawl, a Hottentot village of huts. (Dutch kraal.)

Kraken, krāh'.k'n (Norw.), a water-serpent of enormous size.

Kremlin, krēm'.lūn, a Russian fortress in Moscow, once the cap.

Kreutzer, kroyt'-zer, a German coin somewhat less than 1d.

Kris, a Malay dagger.

Krishna, krīsh'.nah, one of the incarnations of Vishnu.

Kufic, kū'fik, applied to the ancient Arabic letters.

So called from Kufa, a city of Bagdad noted for Kufic writers.

Kyanise, kī'an.ize, to preserve wood from dry-rot by steeping it in a solution of corrosive sublimate, &c.

So named from John H. Kyan, of Dublin, the discoverer (1774-1850). (Only two words beginning with "k" [kennel and kitchen] are even indirectly drawn from the Latin language. Four or five are Greek and the rest Teutonic.)

Label, lay'.bēl. Libel, lī'.bēl, a slander. La'bial (q.v.)

Label, a slip of paper [on a bottle] stating its contents; labelled, lay'.bēld; la'bell-ing (R. iii., -EL), la'bell-er.

"Label," Welsh llab, a strip, with -el diminutive.

"Libel," Lat. libellum, a little book, the statement of a defendant which always slanders the plaintiff, and hence its present use.

Labial, lay'.bi.āl, one of the letters b, p, m, pronounced by the lips; lā'bial-ly. Labiate, lay'.bi.ate, to form by the lips; lā'biāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), lā'biāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Labium, plu. labia, lay'.bi.ūm, lay'.bi.ah, the under lip of insects, the inner lip of shells. The outer lip is Labrum.

Fr. labial: Lat. labium, plu. labia, a lip; labrum, labra, a brim.

Laboratory (not labratory), lāb'.ō.rū.t'ry (not lā.bōr'rū.try), a chemist's workroom. (Fr. laboratoire, Lat. lābōratōrium.)

Labour, lay' bôr, toil, to toil, to cultivate [the soil]; laboured, lay' bôrd; la'bour-ing, la'bour-er.

Laborious, la.bôr'ri.ûs; labo'rious-ly, labo'rious-ness.

Lat. lâbor, lâbôrîosus, v. lâbôrâre; Fr. labeur, laborieux, laboureur.

Labrum, plu. labra, lay' brüm, lay' brah, the mouth-cover of insects, the outer lip of shells. The inner lip is Labium.

Latin labrum, plu. labra, a brim; labium, plu. labia, a lip.

Laburnum, plu. laburnums, la.bur' nûmz, a flowering tree called The shower of gold. (Latin laburnum, Plin 16, 31.)

Labyrinth (-by- not -ba-), lâb'î.rînth, a maze; labyrinth-ine, lâb'î.rînth'ân; labyrinth-ian, lâb'î.rînth'î.ân.

Lat. lâbyrinthus (the "y" shows it to be Gk.); Gk. lâbûrinthôs.

Labyrinthodon, plu. labyrinthodons, lâb'î.rînth'ô.dônz, a fossil reptile of the toad kind; labyrinthodontia, lâb'î.rînth'ô.dôn'.she.ah. (In Bot. and Zool. -ia denotes an "order.")

The labyrinthine-toothed (Greek lâbûrinthôs odôn). Under the microscope the teeth of this reptile exhibit a labyrinth of folds.

Lac, lâk, a resin, 100,000 rupees. Lack, deficiency. Shell-lac; laccic [acid], lâk'sik, acid obtained from lac.

"Lac" (resin), Germ. lack; Span. laca. "Lac" (of money), Ind. lakh.

Lâce (1 syl.), dentelle, to fasten with a cord [highlows, stays, &c.]; lac-ing (R. xix.), lace'ing; laced (1 syl.); strait-laced (not straight), narrow-minded, bigoted; lace'-man.

Latin lâcînia, a fringe, v. lâcînâre, to make holes or jags.

The French dentelle, from dens a tooth, and the Latin lâcîna, tooth-edged or jagged, contain the same idea.

Lacerate, lâs'.ê.rate, to tear; lac'erât-ed (Rule xxxvi.); lac'erât-ing (R. xix.); lacerable, lâs'.ê.râ.b'l; lacerative, lâs'.ê.ra.tiv. Laceration, lâs'.ê.ray'.shûn; lac'erât-or.

French lâcérâtion, lâcérâble, v. lâcérer; Latin lâcérâtio, lâcérâtor, v. lâcérâre (lâcer, a rent; Greek lâkis, v. lâkêô).

Lacertian, la.ser'.shě'ân, pertaining to lizards; lacertine, la.ser'.tîn, like a lizard. (Latin lacertus, a lizard.)

Laches, larsh'-êz (in Law), acts of neglect. Lash'es, stripes.

"Laches" Old Fr. lâchesse (lache, slothful). "Lash" Germ. laschen.

Lachrymal, lâk'ri.mâl, causing tears; lach'rymal ducts, the ducts which convey tears to the eye; lach'rymal glands.

Lachrymose, lâk'ri.môce, mournful; lach'rymose-ly.

Lachrymation, lâk'ri.may'.shûn; lach'rymable;

Lachrymatory, lâk'ri.mâ'try, a tear-bottle.

Lat. lachrymâtio, lachrymâbilis (lachryma, Gk. lakrîma, a tear).

Lack, deficiency, to want. Lac, a resin, 100,000 rupees. (See Lac.)

Lacked, lâkd; lack'-ing, lack'-er, but lac'quer, varnish.

Lack-a-day! alas, how sad! Lack-a-daisy, -day'sy! dear me! lackadaisical, lâk'.a.day'sî.kâl, affectedly pensive.

Lackey, plu. lackeys (not lackies, R. xlv.), a flunky, to follow as a lackey; lackeyed, lăk'ed; lackey-ing, lăk'j.ing.

Span. lacayo (lacear, adorned with ribbons); Fr. laquais; Germ. lackei.

Lack-lustre (not lack-lustred), lăk'-lŭs'.t'r, void of lustre.

Laconic, la.kŏn'ik, brief; laconical, la.kŏn'ik.ăl; lacon'ical-ly.

Laconism, la'.kŏn.izm, great conciseness.

Latin lăcŏnice, pithily, briefly; French laconique, laconisme.

("Lacon," a Spartan, noted for brevity of speech and conciseness of writing. The Greek ι is called the Lacedæmonian letter).

Lacquer, lak'er, a varnish, to varnish with lacquer; lacquered, lăk'.erd; lac'quer-ing, lac'quer-er.

Fr. laquer (laque); Germ. lackiren, lackirer (lack); Arab. lak.

Lacteal, lăk'.tĕ.ăl, conveying milk, one of the small tubes which convey the chyle to the thoracic [thŏ.răks'ik] duct; lactic [acid] lăk'.tik, the acid of sour milk.

Lacteous, lăk'.tĕ.ŭs (Rule lxvi.), milky, resembling milk.

Lactation, lăk.tay'.shŭn, the act or time of suckling.

Lactometer, lăk.tŏm'.ĕ.ter, an instrument for testing milk.

(This hybrid should be Galactometer; Greek galacto-melron.)

French lactation, lactômetre; Latin lactus (lac, milk).

Lactuca, lăk.tŭ'.kah, a genus of plants including the lettuce; lactucic, lăk.tŭ'.sik; lactusine, lăk.tŭ'.sŭn.

Latin lăctŭca, the lettuce or milky plant (lac, milk).

Lacuna, plu. lacunæ, 'la.kŭ'.nah, lă.kŭ'.nee, a defect, a gap; lacunar, la.kŭ'.nar (in Arch.), a soffit with panels.

Latin lăcŭna, plu. lăcŭnæ, lăcŭnar, a beam.

Lacustrine, la.kŭs'.trine, pertaining to swamps, lakes, and pools.

Lacus'trine deposits (in Geol.), those found in swamps, &c.

Lacus'trine habitations, houses of great antiquity raised on piles in the midst of lakes. (Switzerland, &c.)

Latin lăcustris (lăcus, a lake; Greek lakkŏs and lakos).

Lăd, fem. lăss, a boy, fem. girl. Lăde (1 syl.), to load.

"Lăd," Welsh llwŷd. "Lass," lad-ess, la'ss, a female youth.

Lăd'der, a machine for mounting. (Old English hlăder.)

[Lade], obsolete, past part. laden, lay'.den. For the other parts we use the verb load, lŏde; (past) load'-ed; (past part.) either load'-ed or lă'-den; load'-ing. Load (noun).

Bill of lă'ding (not loading), invoice of a ship's freight.

Old English hlăd, a load; v. hlăd[an], past hlŏd, past part. hlăden.

Ladle, lă'.d'l, a large spoon or scoop, to lift liquids with a ladle; ladled, lă'.d'ld; lă'dling, lă'dler.

Ladleful, plu. ladlefuls (not ladlesful), two, three "ladlefuls" mean the quantity held by a full ladle repeated twice or thrice; but two or three "ladles full" means two or three ladles, each one full.

Old English hlădel, a ladle, connected with hlăden, a well-bucket.

Lady, plu. ladies, (mas.) lord, lords, and gentleman, gentlemen, lǎ'.dǎz, gĕn'.tĕl.mǎn, -mĕn. A woman of rank, any woman above the artizan or operative class.

Lady retains the "y" in all its compounds; for example

Ladybird, ladybug, ladylike; ladyship, term of address in speaking to a lady by right of rank; Ladyday, March 25th, the annunciation; ladylove, a sweetheart; &c.

Old English hlǣfdige or hlǣfdie (hlǣf, a loaf; dige is supposed to mean "server," but the word has not yet been traced).

Lǎg, to loiter, to fall behind; lagged, lǎgd; lagg'-ing (Rule i.), lagg'-ing-ly, lagg'-ard, lagg'-er. (Welsh llag.)

Lagune, la.goon', a marsh, a fen. (Ital. laguna; Span. laguna.)

Laic, lǎ'.ik; laical, lǎ'.i.kal, secular. (See Laity.)

Laid (of the v. lay), placed. Lade (obsolete verb), to load.

Laid [paper], paper with ribbed surface; as cream-laid, blue-laid; laid-up, stored up, unwell. (See Lay.)

Lain, past part. of v. lie. Lane (1 syl.), a narrow road. (See Lay.)

It has lain by for two years. (It has been lying...)

It has lain in my head a long time. (It has been lying...)

He has lain at the porch from boyhood. (He has been lying...)

Lair, lǎre, the bed of a wild beast. Layer, lay'er, a stratum.

Germ. lager, a lair, a lodging, v. lagern, to set down, to encamp.

Laird, lay'rd, a Scotch squire or landed proprietor.

Laity, lǎ'.i.ty, the secular people as opposed to the Clergy; laic, lǎ'.ik, a layman; laical, lǎ'.i.kal; la'ical-ly.

Latin laicus (Greek laos, the people); French laïque; Italian laico.

Lāke (1 syl.), a large pond, a purplish red colour. Lǎc, a resin.

Lake-dwellings, houses raised on piles in the midst of a lake, which serves as a moat (see Lacustrine); lāk'y.

Lat. lūcus, Gk. lakkōs or lakos, a lake. "Lac," Germ. lack; Span. laca.

Lama, lǎh'.māh, a Tartar priest. Grand Lama, the chief lama representing deity; la'ma-ism (not la'ma.izm), the religion of those who adore the Grand Lama.

In the Tangutanese dialect llama, mother of souls.

Lamb, lām, the young of a sheep. Lāme (1 syl.), halt.

A male lamb is a tup-lamb, a female a ewe-lamb. The castrated tup is a wether or hogget; the female, after being weaned, is a ewe-hogget.

After the first shearing, the hogget is a shearling.

When the female shearling has had a lamb, it is a ewe.

To lamb, to bring forth a lamb; *lamb*ed, lāmd; lamb'-ing.

Lamb-kin, lām'.kin, a little lamb. (-kin, Old Eng. dim.)

Lamb-like, lamb-skins, lamb's-wool. Lamming, a beating.

Strictly speaking the young of a sheep is a "lamb" only till it is weaned, but popularly speaking it remains a "lamb" till it is sheared, when it is called a "sheep," regardless of sex.

"Lamb," Old Eng. lamb. "Lame," Old Eng. lam, v. lem[an].

Lambent, lām' bent, flickering like a flame.

Latin lambens, gen. lambentis, licking (lambo; Greek lpto).

Lāme (1 syl.), halt, to make halt: (comp.) lām'-er, (super.) lām'-est, lāmed (1 syl.), lām'-ing (R. xix.), lame'-ness.

A lame duck, a stock broker who breaks his engagement.

Old English læm[an], past læmede, past part. læmed.

Lament, lä ment', to bewail; läment'-ed (R. xxxvi.), läment'-ing, lament'ing-ly, läment'-er; lamentable, läm' en.tä.b'l; läm'entably; lamentation, läm' en.tay'' shün.

Latin lämentätio, lämentätilis, lämentum, v. lämentäri; French lämentation, lämentable, v. lämenta.

Lamia, plu. lamiæ (Latin), läm'.i.ah, läm'.i.ē, a demon under the guise of a beautiful woman, a hag.

Lamina, plu. laminæ, läm'.i.nah, läm'.i.nē, a thin plate or scale: lamine, läm'.i.nate, to form into laminæ; läm'inät-ed (R. xxxvi.), läm'inät-ing (R. xix.), läm'inable, läm'inär.

Lamination, läm'.i.nay'' shün; laminiferous, nif'' ē.rüs.

Laminariaceæ, läm'.i.nair'ri-ä'' se.ē, a order of algæ.

Laminaria, läm'.i.nair'ri.ah, a genus of the above order.

Laminarites, läm'.i.nä.rites, broad-leaved fossil algæ (-aceæ, an order; -ia, a genus; -ite, a fossil).

Latin lämina, plu. läminæ, a thin plate of metal; v. läminäre.

Lam'mas (-mass used as a suffix has only one s), the feast of harvest; läm'mas-day, August 1st; läm'mas-tide.

Old English hldf mæsse, loaf-feast, i.e., the feast of first-fruits.

Lam'ming, a beating. Lambing, bringing forth lambs.

"Lamming," a pun on the Latin verb lambo, to lick, a licking.

"Lamb," Old English lamb.

Lamp, lamp-light, lamp'-light-er, lamp-black, safety-lamp.

Latin lampas; Greek lampas (v. lampö, to shine).

Lampoon, läm.poon', a personal satire, to assail with lampoons; lämpooned', lämpoon'-ing, lämpoon'-er, lämpoon'-ry.

So called from the burden sung to them, lämpone, lämpone, camerada lämpone (Sir Walter Scott); French lämpon.

Lamprey, plu. lampreys (not lämpries), R. xlv., läm'.pry, läm'.priz, a fish resembling an eel; läm'pern, the river-lamprey.

Old Eng. lämpreda; Lat. lämpetra (lambo petra, to lick the rocks).

Lānce (1 syl.), a shaft with a spear-head, to cut with a lancet; länced (1 syl.), hurled, cut with a lancet; länc'-ing (Rule xix.); länc'-er (should be lancier).

Lance-cor'poral, a soldier from the ranks acting as corporal.

(In the middle ages a soldier was called a "lance," and a soldier with the horses and stable-lads under his charge, a lance-fournie.)

Lanceolate, län'.se.o.ate, shaped like the head of a lance.

Lanceolar, län'.se.ö.lar (in Bot.), tapering towards each end.

Lanciform, län'.si.form, lance-shaped; lance'-wood.

Lancet, län'.set, a surgical instrument for opening a vein.

Fr. lance, lancier, lancette; Lat. lancea, v. lancēre. (Gk. logché).

Länd; land'-ing, putting on shore; land'-ed, having an estate in lands; land'-ed propri'etor (not -er); land-ward, adj., towards land; land-wards, adv.: as we are sailing land-wards (R. lxxiv.); land-a'gent; land-breeze, a wind from the land towards the sea; land-carriage, carriage of goods by land; land-crab; land-fall (double -l, R. viii.); land-flood; land-force; land-jobber, one who buys and sells land as a trade; landlord, fem. landlady (plu. -ladies, la'.diz); an hotel-keeper; land-hold'er; land-lock, to enclose with land; land-lock'ing, land-locked' (-lokt); land-lubber, land-löper; land-mark; land-measure (-mez'zhür), land-measur-ing (-mez'zhür-ing, R. xix.); land-rail, a bird; land-slip; land-stew'ard; land-survey'ing; land-tax; land-wait'er; lands-man, one not a sailor; land'ing-net, land'ing-place. (O.E. land.)

Landau, län.daw', a light carriage, the top of which may be thrown back. (So called from Landau, in Germany.)

Landgrave, fem. landgravine, land'.gräve, land'.grä.veen', a Germ. noble; landgraviate, land.gräv'.ä.üt, territory of...

Fr. landgrave, landgravine, langraviat; Germ. landgraf, landgräfin.

Landscape, land'.skép, a rural prospect, the representation of a rural scene; land'scape-gar'dener, land'scape-gar'den-ing, planning grounds so as to produce a pleasing effect. Old Eng. landscipe (-scape or -ship, form [prospect], province, &c.)

Landwehr, land'.vüre, Prussian and Austrian militia.

German land wehr, land defence.

Lāne (1 syl.), a narrow road. Lain, past part. of lie. (Dutch laan.)

Langsyne, lang.siné', times gone by; auld lang-syne.

Scotch auld (old), lang (long), syne (since, gone by).

Language, län'.gwage, human speech, written or spoken.

French langage; Latin lingua, the tongue, speech.

Languid, län'.gwüd, weary, feeble; lan'guid-ly, lan'guid-ness.

Languish, län'.gwish, to pine, to fail in spirits; lan'guished (2 syl.), lan'guish-ing, lan'guishing-ly, lan'guish-ment.

Languor, läng'gwör, feebleness, lassitude.

Latin languidus, languor, v. languidäre, languescere (languco).

Laniard, lan'yard, a rope for setting up rigging.

French lanière, a narrow thong of leather, a laniard.

Länk, gaunt; lank'-y, long-legged; lank'i-ness. (O.E. hlanc.)

Lantern (not lanthorn), län'.tern, a case for a candle; magiclan'tern, dark-lan'tern; lan'tern-fly, a luminous insect; lan'tern-jaws, long thin face; lan'tern-jawed, -jawed.

This word is a blunder, copied from the French lanterne; the Latin word is lātēna, from lateo, to lie hid. Lanthorn is a still worse blunder, as it confounds the last syl. with "horn," with which the word has no connection.

Lanyard, län'yard, a rope for setting up rigging, any rope made fast for the sake of securing it. (Better Laniard.)

French lanitiere, a narrow thong, a hawk's tassel, a laniard.

Laocoon, la.ökö.ö.ön (not lä'.ö.koon'), a group of sculpture representing the fate of Laocoon and his two sons.

Läp, a seat on the knees, to nurse, to lick water with the tongue; lapped, läpt; lapp'-ing (Rule i.), lapp'-er, läp-dög.

Lap'ful, plu. lap'fuds (not lapsful). Two, three...lap'fuds means a lapful repeated twice or thrice, but two, three... lapsfull means two, three...laps all full.

Läpp'-ing engine, a doubling machine.

Lapel, la.pël', the facing of a coat; lapelled', la.pëtd' (R. iv.)

Lappet, läp'.et, a little loose flap.

Lap-wing, the peewit, one of the plover genus.

Old English lappa, a lap; v. lap[ian], past lapede, past part. laped.

Lapidary, plu. lapidaries (Rule xlv.), läp'.i.där rüz, engraver or dealer in precious stones; lapideous (Rule lxvi.), stony.

Lapis-lazuli, läp'.is lüz'.ä.li, an azure-blue mineral.

Latin lapidarius, lápideus (lapis, a stone); French lapis-lazuli; Italian lapis-lazzali or lapis-lazzuli, the sky-blue stone.

Lapse, läps, a slight mistake, a slip. Läps, plu. of lap.

Lapse, to slip away; lapsed (1 syl.), läps'-ing, läps'-able.

Lat. lapsäre (frequent. of lābor, sup. lapsum), to glide away, to slip.

Läp'-wing, the pee-wit. (Noted for flapping its wings.)

Lar, plu. lares, lair'rüz, household gods. (Lat. lar, plu. lares.)

Larboard, lar.börd, the left side of a vessel (looking forward).

Port is now used instead. Starboard, the right side...

Italian quello bordo, questo bordo, contracted into 'lo-bord, 'sto-bord.

Larceny, plu. larcenies, lar'.sč.nüz, petty theft; larcenist, -sč.nüst.

Fr. larcin; Lat. latrōcīnium (latro, a mercenary, a robber; Gk. latron, pay, latris, a hireling, mercenaries being generally robbers).

Larch, a tree of the fir kind. (Lat. larix, Gk. larix, a larch.)

Lard, the fat of pigs, to smear with lard; lard'-ed (R. xxxvi.), lard'-ing; lard'-er, a room for food; larderer, lar'.de.rer, one who has charge of the larder; lard'-y, containing lard.

French lard, v. larder; Latin lardum.

Large, extensive; large'-ly, large'-ness; at large, at liberty.

French large; Latin largus (Greek lauros, that is la eurus, wide).

Lar'gess, a gift. (Fr. largesse, a bounty; Lat. largio, to give freely.)

Larghetto, lar.gě'to, somewhat slowly. (Ital. largo, with dim.)

Lar'go, slowly, but not so slow as grave, and "grave" is not so slow as adagio. The degrees are larghetto, largo, grave, adagio slowest of all.

(All Italian words.) A quaver in "largo" = a minim in "presto."

Lark, a bird, a piece of fun, to catch larks, to devise a piece of mischievous fun; larked (1 syl.), lark'-ing, lark'-er.

Lark'spur, a flower, so called from a fancied resemblance of the horned nectary to a lark's spur.

Sky'lark (the most musical), wood'lark, meadowlark.

Skylark'ing with sailors consists in climbing to the highest of the yards and then sliding down the ropes; fun.

Old English laferc or lawerc; Scotch laverok; Latin alauda.

"Lark" (fun), a corrupt form of the Old English lúc, sport.

Larva, lar'.vah. Lava, lah'.vah. Laver, lay'.ver.

The first state of an insect is a Egg.

The second state a larva.

The third state a pū'pa or chrysalis [krīs'.ăl.iss].

The fourth and final state the Imā'go.

Lar'val, adj. of larva; lar'viform, like a larva.

Lava, lah'.vah, melted rock-matter from a volcano.

Laver, lay'.ver, a vessel for holding water.

Latin larva, a mask, "grubs," &c., are so called, because their appearance "masks" the future state. "Pū'pa" (Latin), "baby," the baby-state of the winged insect. "Imāgo" (Latin), "likeness," when the insect assumes its true "likeness" or shape.

"Lava" (of a volcano), Latin lavāre, to wash [down].

"Laver" (a vessel for purifications), Latin lavāre, to wash.

Larynx, lăr'rinx, the upper part of the wind-pipe; laryngeal, lă.rîng'gě.ăl, adj. of larynx; laryngean, la.rîng'gě.ăn.

Laryngitis, lăr'rin.gî''.tîss, inflammation of the larynx (-itis added to Greek nouns denotes inflammation).

Laryngoscope, lăr'rin'.go.skōpe, an instrument for inspecting the larynx. (Except in tele-scope and phanta-scope, the vowel preceding -scope is always -o, Rule lxiii.)

Laryngotomy, lăr'rin.gôt.ô.my, cutting the larynx.

Latin lărynx; Greek lărugx, lărugx-skōpē, I inspect the larynx.

"Laryngotomy," Greek lărugx temnō, I cut the larynx.

Lās'car, a native East Indian sailor, an artillery menial.

Hindustani lashkar, the popular name of a Malayan sailor.

Lascivious, lās.siv'.i.ătis, wanton; lasciv'ious-ly, lasciv'ious-ness.

Latin lascivîosus (lascivus, a wanton; Greek aselgēs, lewd).

Lāsh, a whip thong, a blow with a whip, to whip, to dash against, to fasten with a rope; lashed, lāsht; lash'-ing, lash'-er.

Germ. laschen, to whip; Fr. laisse, string, en laisse, tied to a string.

Läss, plu. lass-es, läs'.ez, fem. of läd, a girl; lassie, läs'.sy, a little girl, a term of endearment (lad-ess con. into lä'ss).

Lasso. läs'.sō, a long rope with a noose for catching wild horses, to use the lasso; lassoed, läs'.sōde; las'so-ing.

Spanish lazo, a noose (Latin laxus, loose).

Last, the final [one], the one just before the present [one], the model of a foot, a measure [12 sacks of wool], to endure, to continue; last'-ed (R. xxxvi.), last'-ing, last'-ing-ly, last'-ing-ness. Stick to your last, do not venture to pass an opinion on a subject you know nothing about.

At last, or at the last? If adverbially used, meaning lastly, most decidedly at last should be used. "At" is the Ang.-Sax. adverbial prefix, æt-laste or on-laste, lastly.

At the last requires a noun: as at the last [supper].

"Last" (final), Old Eng. laste. "Last" (shoemaker's), läst or läst.

"Last" (twelve sacks of wool), Old English hlæst, a load, a freight.

"Last" (verb), Old Eng. läst[an], past lästle, past part. lästled.

Latakia, lä't.ä.kee''.ah, a Turkish tobacco of superior quality.

So called from Latakia or "Laodice'a," where it is grown.

Latch [of a door], to fasten with a latch; latched (1 syl.), latch'-ing; latch'-key, -kee, for raising a door-latch.

Latchet, läch'.ët, a shoe-tie. (O. Eng. ge-læcc[an], to catch.)

Läte (1 syl.), comp. lä't'-er, super. lä't'-est; late'-ly, late'-ness.

Of late (adv.), lately; too late, after the proper time.

O. E. læt, comp. lætra or lætor, sup. latost or latemost, læt līce, adv.

Lateen, lä.teen', a broad triangular [sail], a lateen-vessel.

French latin (both senses); Latin lätus, broad.

Latent, läy'.tent (not lä't.ent), concealed; lä'tent-ly; lä'tency.

Latent heat, heat which passes into a body [as ice] without affecting the thermometer. (Latin lätco, to lie hid.)

Later, late'.er, more late. Latter, lä't.ter, the last of two.

Lä'ter refers to time. Lat'ter refers to order. (See Late.)

Lateral, lä't.ër.räl, proceeding from the side, pertaining to the side; lä't'er-al-ly. (Latin lätërälis, lätus, the side.)

Lateran, lä't.ër.rän, one of the churches of Rome, the pope's see, &c.

So called from the Laterani, a family which possessed a palace on this spot. Being seized by Nero, it became an imperial residence.

Lath, läth, a long thin slip of wood, to cover with laths.

Läthe (1 syl.), a turning machine; lathed (1 syl.), lath'-ing, lath'-y, like a lath, thin and feeble.

German, French latte; Welsh lath, a rod or staff a yard long.

"Lathe" (a turning-machine), Welsh lathru, to polish or smooth.

Lather, lärh'.er, the froth of soap, to cover with soap froth; lathered, lärh'.erd; lath'-er-ing, lath'-er-er.

Old English lethr[ian], past lethrode, past part. lethrod.

Lathyrus, la.rhí.rūs, the everlasting pen, the vetchling, &c.

Greek lathyrros (lathró [lantháō], to lie hid), so called because the flowers "lie hidden" amongst the leaves.

Latin, lăt'ăn [language]. Lăt'ten, iron-tinned. Lateen', a sail.

Lăt'in, the language of the ancient Romans; lăt'in-ism, lăt'in-ist. Latinity, la.tĩn'ĩ.ty; Latin style or idiom.

Latinise, lăt'ĩn.ize (Rule xxxi.), to convert into Latin; latinised, lăt'ĩn.izd; lăt'inis-ing (Rule xix.), lăt'inis-er.

The Latin Church, the Western, whose liturgy is in Latin.

The Greek Church, the Eastern, whose liturgy is in Greek.

The An'glican Church, the English Protestant church (established by law), the liturgy of which is in English.

The Latin race, the people of Italy, France, Spain, and Portugal, whose languages are based on the Latin, and called Romance.

Dog-Latin, gibberish Latin; Law Latin, debased Latin used in law courts; Monkish Latin, debased Latin used by monks; Low Latin, debased medieval Latin.

Latin, so called from Lattum. Abba Longa was head of the Latin league, and Rome was a colony of Abba Longa.

"Latten," Welsh llatwn; Span. laton; Fr. laiton; Ital. latta.

"Lateen," Fr. latin; Span. latino (Lat. lātus, Gk. plātus, wide).

Latitude, lăt'ĩ.tũde. Longitude, lŏn'.gĩ.tũde.

Latitude, the distance of a place due North or South from the Equator. The greatest latitude is 90 degrees;

Longitude, the distance of a place due East or West of some given line, called the Meridian of Longitude. The greatest possible longitude is 180 degrees.

Latitudinal, lăt'ĩ.tũ''đĩ.nāl, adj. of latitude.

Parallels of latitude, pār'rāl.lēlz ov lăt'ĩ.tũde, parallel lines drawn due East and West of each other.

High latitudes, hĩ lăt'ĩ.tũdes, those parts of the earth which lie near the poles. Low latitudes, those parts of the earth which lie near the equator.

Lat'itudē, license of speech, conduct, or faith;

Latitudinarian, lăt'ĩ.tũ''đĩ.nair''rĩ.ăn, one whose religious opinions are too lax to be orthodox;

Latitudinar'ian-ism, inorthodoxy.

Latin lātītudo (lātus, broad). The ancients supposed the earth to be a flat surface, bounded by the Atlantic and extending thence indefinitely eastward. This was called its breadth. Its length was similarly measured from the tropic of Cancer northwards.

Latria, lă.trĩ'.ah, divine adoration. The reverence paid to saints is called, in the Latin Church, dũ'lia [better dulĩ'ah].

Greek latreia, hired service, service of the gods. "Dulia" Greek doubleia, the service of slaves and bondmen.

Latten, lăt'.tĕn, iron tinned over. Lat'in [language].

Welsh lattu; Span. laton; Fr. laiton; Ital. latta, latten.

"Latin," so named from Latium, of which Rome was a colony.

Latter, lăt'.ter, the last of two. Later, lay'.ter, more late.

Former, för'.mer, the first of two. "Latter" and "former" refer to order, "later" and "latest" refer to time.

Lat'ter-ly, of late. Lat'ter-day Saints, the "Mormons."

"Latter" is the second of two, and "former" the prior of two. When three or more things are referred to these comparatives should not be used, but the superlatives "last" and first.

Errors of Speech.—

Copper, silver, and gold are used for coinage, the latter is by far the more valuable (last, most).

Gold, silver, and copper are all minted, but the former is more valuable than either of the other two (first).

Of larks there are many kinds: as the brown lark, wood lark, meadow lark, and skylark, but the latter is the most musical of them all.

B, p, m, f, and v are labials, but the latter two are called labio-dentals (the last two).

Lattice, lăt'.tiss, a framework with diagonal cross-bars; lat'tice-work; latticed, lăt'.tist, covered with lattice-work.

French lattis (lattes, laths; Welsh lath, a rod or staff).

Laud, lawd, praise. Lord, a nobleman, a term applied to deity; land, to praise; laud'-ed (R. xxxvi.), laud'-ing, laud'-able (1st Lat. conj.), laud'-able-ness, laud'ably.

Laudation, law.day''.shŭn; laudatory, law'.dă.tŏ.rŷ.

Latin laudabilis, laudatio, laudare, to praise.

Laudanum, lŏd'n.ŭm (not law'.dă.nŭm), a drug.

Fr. laudanum; Lat. lădănum (from the shrub lada, Plin 26.47. The Arabian name of the shrub is lŏdan; our error of spelling we owe to the French, our pronunciation to the Arabic.

Laugh, lăhf (noun and verb); laughed, lăhft; laugh-ing, lăhf'-; laugh'-ing-ly; laugh'-er, lăhf'.er; laugh-able, lăhf'.ă.b'l; laugh'-able-ness, laugh'ably; laugh'-ing-stock, a butt; laugh'-ing-gas, nitrous oxide.

Laughter, lăhf'.ter; laugh'-ter-less.

To laugh at, to ridicule; to laugh to scorn.

To laugh in one's sleeve, to laugh inwardly with scorn.

(The spelling of this word has greatly deviated from the older form, and the interpolated "g" is worse than useless.)

Old English hlīh[an], past hlōh, past part. hlægen; hleahtr.

Launch, lăunch, to move a vessel into the sea; launched (1 syl.), launch'-ing. To launch out, to give free scope.

(The better spelling of this word would be "lanch.")

French lancer, to dart (lance, Latin lancea; Greek logché).

Laundress, larn'.dress, a washerwoman of the better sort; laundry, larn'.drŷ, a room where linen is "got up"; laund'ry-maid (corruption of lavandress).

French lavandière, a wash woman (Latin lavare, to wash).

Laurel, lör'rêl, an evergreen, to crown with laurel; laurelled, lor'rêld; lau'rell-ing (R. iii., -EL); lauriferous, lör rîf'-.ê.rîs; laurine, lör'rîne, the bitter principle of the laurel; laurels, lör'rêlz, glory, honour obtained by merit.

Poet laureate, pō'.ēt lor'rê.ăt, the crown salaried poet.

Lau'reate-ship, the office of poet-laureate (-ship, office).

Lat. laureātus, laurea, a laurel; Fr. lauréat, laurier. (-el dim.)

Laurustinus (not laurestinus), lör'rûs.tî''.nûs, an evergreen.

Latin laurus tinus, the "Viburnum tinus."

Lava, lâh.vâh. Larva, lar'.vah. Laver, lay'.ver.

Lava, melted rock-matter from a volcano.

Larva, the insect in its grub or caterpillar state.

Laver, a vessel for holding water for purification.

"Lava" and "Laver," Latin lavâre, to wash.

"Larva" (a grub), Latin larva, a mask. (See Larva.)

Lâve (1 syl.), to wash; laved (1 syl.), lâv'-ing (R. xix.); lâv'-er, a vessel for purifications; brazen-laver [of Solomon].

Lavatory, plu. lavatories, lâv'.a.t.ô.rîz, a place for washing.

Latin lavatorium, lavâre, to wash; French v. laver, lavoir.

Lavender, lâv'.ên.der, an odoriferous plant; lavender-water.

Lat. lavandûla (from lavando, for its use in baths and fomentations).

Laverock, lâv'.ên.rôk (Scotch), the lark. (Old English laferc.)

Lavish, lâv'.îsh, profuse, to squander; lavished, lâv'.îsht; lâv'ish-ing, lâv'ish-ly, lâv'ish-ment, lâv'ish-ness.

French lavasse, shower; "lavish" is to "shower down" [money].

Law, law'-ful (R. viii.), law'ful-ly, law'ful-ness; law'-giv'er, law'-less, law'less-ly, law'less-ness; law-maker; law-breaker, -brâk'.er. By-laws (not bye-laws), local or borough laws (by, Danish a borough or town).

† Can'on-law, ecclesiastical law.

Civ'il-law, the Roman law having respect to man as a citizen.

Common law, "unwritten" or traditional law. Its force is "derived from long usage and not from "statutes."

Statute law, stât'tute law, law which owes its force to "statutes" and not to tradition or long usage.

† Criminal law, krîm.î.năl law, that which rules what shall be deemed "crime," and what punishment is to be awarded to those proved guilty thereof.

Ecclesiastical law, êk.klee's.î.ăs''.tî.kăl law, that which rules the government of the church.

Maritime law, mâr'rî.time law, that which rules on the sea considered as a highway of commerce.

Municipal law, mu.nîs'.î.păl law, that which rules a particular borough or township.

National law, năsh'ôn.ăl law, that which rules an entire nation or state.

International law, în'.ter-năsh'ôn.ăl law, that which rules in the intercourse of nation with nation.

¶ Ceremonial law, sěr're.mō''.nă.ăl law, the Levitical law given by Moses to the Jews.

Moral law, mōr'răl law, the ten commandments.

Physical laws, fîz'.ă.kăl lawz, those of nature observed in the physical creation.

Revealed laws, rĕ.veeld' lawz, those of God made known to man in the Bible.

¶ Lynch law, linch law, mob law, or punishment inflicted without legal examination. (From Lynch, of Virginia.)

Old English lagu, lag or lah, lah-breca, a law-breaker; lahle, lawful; lahlice, lawfully (v. lccg[an], to set down).

Lawn, a grass plot, a fine sort of linen. Lorn, forsaken, lonely.

Lawn'y; lawn-sleeve, a [bishop's] sleeve made of lawn.

Welsh llan, a yard, an open meadow. "Lawn" [cloth], Span. and Fr. linon; Lat. linum, linen. "Lorn," Old Eng. fortoren, forlorn.

Lăx, loose. Lăcks, doth lack. Lakes, lăks, large ponds.

Lax'ly, lax'ness, lax'ity; laxation, lăx.ă'.shăn; laxative, lăx'.ă.tiv, purgative; lax'ative-ness; laxă'tor [muscles], muscles [of the ear], opposed to the Ten'sor [muscle].

(The office of the "Tensor muscle" is to draw the head of the "maleus" backwards, that of the "Laxator muscles," forwards.)

Latin laxitas, laxus, laxatio, v. laxare, to slacken, to loose.

Lăy, (past) laid, (past part.) laid, to place (a verb transitive).

Lie, li; (past) lay, (past part.) lain, to recline, to remain.

(Note—lăid, păid, said (sĕd), are irregular in spelling.)

Lay is the pres. tense of the transitive verb lay, and the past tense of the intransitive verb lie.

Lăid, lăde, the p. p. of "lay"; lain, lăne, the p. p. of lie.

To lay by, to rest, to set aside.

To lay up, to store; to be laid up, to be ill.

To lay to, too, to stop [a ship]. To lay waste, to devastate.

To lay out, to expend, to plan out [a garden];

To lay on, to strike;

¶ To lay oneself down, to lie down.

To lay wait for, to wait in ambush, but To lie in wait, to lie in ambush.

To lay apart, to put on one side; To lie apart, to sleep away from each other.

To lay down, to relinquish; To lie down, to recline.

To lay together, to collect, to place close to each other;
To lie together, to occupy one bed, to agree in a misrepresentation of facts.

Lay (noun), a poem; lay (adj.), not clerical, as lay-brother, lay-sister; layman, one not a minister; lay-figure, lay-fig'ur, an artist's jointed model figure.

Much error exists in the use of the two verbs "lay" and "lie."

Obs. 1. "Lay" must have a noun in regimen with it, and means to "place" or "deposit."

"Lie" cannot have a noun in regimen with it, and it means to "recline," to "remain."

Obs. 2. "Lay" is the present tense of the verb "lay," and the past tense of the verb "lie."

Obs. 3. The past part. of "lay" is laid, and of "lie" lain.

EXAMPLES—

The hen lays an egg. The man lays his hat down. Rain lays the dust.
The hen laid an egg yesterday. The man laid his hat on the table.
The rain laid the dust.

The hen has laid an egg. The man has laid his hat on the table.
The rain has laid the dust.

The hen is laying an egg. The man is laying his hat on the table.
The rain is laying the dust.

Obs. "egg," "hat," "dust" follow the verb "lay" in proper regimen.

Errors of Speech.—

There let it lay (Byron). There let it lie.

They laid in bed till the clock struck ten (Nursery rhyme). They lay.
I have lain the book on the shelf (I have laid....).

The land lays very low (The land lies....).

How lays the battle (How lies.... "Battle" is subject, not object).

Here will I lay to-night (Here will I lie....).

The land lays desolate (lies.... See Lev. xxvi. 34, 43; Isa. xxxiii. 8).

To lay in ambush (lie.... See Josh. viii. 9).

They lay in wait for blood (lie.... See Mic. vii. 2; Acts xxiii. 21).

"Lay," Old English læcg[an], past legede, past part. leged.

"Lie," Old English licg[an], past leg, past part. legen.

Lay'er, a stratum. Lair (1 syl.), the bed of a wild beast.

Layer, a row [of bricks], a coat [of paint], a shoot laid in the ground for propagating; layer-ing, propagating...

German lage, a stratum or layer. Lager, a lair or couch.

Lazzarone, plu. lazzaroni, lăz'.ză.rō.ny, Neapolitan vagrants.

Lazaretto, plu. lazarettos, lăz'.za.rēt'.tōze, a pest house.

Lazar-house, lăz'.ar house, a hospital for lepers.

(If the Italian is adopted, as in "lazzarone," the double z should be preserved throughout. If "Lazarus" is to be the model, Lazzarone should be spelt with one z. "Lazaretto" is Franeo-Italian, and "Lazar-house" English-French and a hybrid.

Italian lazzarone, lazzaretto (!); French lazare, lazaret.

Lazuli, lăz'.ă.li or lăp'is-laz'uli, an azure-blue mineral;

Lazulite, lăz'.ă.lite, an inferior species of lapis-lazuli.

Lapis-lazuli is neither Latin nor Italian. The French compound borrowed by us is meant for the Italian lapis lazuli or lazzulo. The Latin noun lazulus means the "azure-blue stone," and lapis, a stone, is not required. (Arab l'azar, the azure stone.)

Lazy, lay'zy, indolent; lā'zi-ness (R. xi.), lā'zi-ly. (Welsh llesg.) -el (Lat. -l' or -ll', with any preceding vowel), nouns, instrument, or diminutive, sparkle, a little spark; candle, table, &c.

Lea, lee, a meadow, a field. Lee, defended from the wind.

Leas, leez, plu. of lea. Lees, dregs. Lease, lēce [of a house].

"Lea," Welsh lle. "Lee," Old English hlēo, shelter, refuge.

"Lees," Fr. lie (Lat. limus, mud). "Lease," Fr. laisser, to let one have.

Lead, lēd (a metal), leed (to conduct). Lēd, did lead.

Lead, lēd, a metal, to cover with lead; lead-ed, lēd'ed; lead-ing, lēd'ing; lead-en, lēd'n, made of lead (-en added to materials denotes "made of," as gold-en, wood-en).

Leads, lēdz, a roof covered with lead, slips of metal inserted by printers between the lines of type, a point for writing;

Black-lead, plumbago or graphite, a compound of iron and carbon; White lead, oxide of lead. Lead pen'cil, led...

Lead, lēd, to convey; (past) led, (past. part.) led; lead-ing, lēd'ing; lead'er, lēd'er-ship (-ship, office of); lead'ing-strings; a lead'ing question, a question which leads to the answer.

"Lead" (metal), Old English lēad, leaden.

"Lead" (verb), Old English lēd[an], past lēdde, past part. lēded.

Leaf [of a plant], leef. Lief, leef, willingly. Leave, lēve, to quit.

Leaves, leevz, plu. of leaf (3 per. sing. pres. tense of leave).

Leaf, plu. leaves. (Nouns in -af and -lf make the plu. in -ves, R. xxxviii.); leaf-less; leaf-age (-age, collection), abounding in leaves, season of leaves.

Leaf-let, a small leaf; leaf'y, leaf'iness (Rule xi.);

Leaf-stalk, leef'-stawk, the stalk of a leaf; leaf-bud, the bud which develops into a leaf; fruit-bud, the bud which develops into fruit.

"Leaf," Old Eng. leaf. "Lief," Old Eng. lēof, comp. lēofre, rather.

"Leave," Old Eng. lēaf, alēdf[an], to give leave, geledf[an], to believe.

League, leeg, an alliance, a cabal, three miles, to combine for mutual aid; leagued, leegd; leagu-ing, leeg'-ing (verbs ending in any two vowels, except -ue, preserve both before -ing, Rule xx.); leagu-er, leeg'er.

French ligue, a union; Latin ligere, to tie.

"League" (three miles), Low Latin leuga or leuca; French lieue.

Leak, leek, a chink, to ooze out. Leek, a kind of onion.

Leaked, leekd; leak-ing, leak'-age (-age, act of), leak'-y, leak'i-ness (Rule xi.); to leak out, to get "wind."

"Leak," Old Eng. hlece, hlece-scip, a leaky ship. "Leek," O. E. leac.

Lean, leen, thin, to incline. Lien, lē'en, an obligation.

(Past and p. p.) leaned, leend, or leant, lent. Lent (q.v.)

(Comp.) lean'-er, (super.) lean'-est, lean'-ness, lean'-ly.

A lean-to, a building the rafters of which lean against another building. To lean on, to rest on, to depend on.

"Lean" (verb), Old Eng. hlin[ian], past hlinode, past part. hlinod.

"Lean" (thin), Old English lêne or hlêne, v. lén[ian], to be lean.

Leap, leep, a jump, to jump; (past and past part.) leaped, leapt, or leapt, lept; leap'-ing, leap'-ing-ly, leap'-er; leap-frog, jump-back; leap-year, every fourth year, the date of which will always be an exact measure of 4.

Old English hleap[an], past hleop, past part. hledpen.

Learn, lern, to receive instruction. Teach, teech, to give instruction. Learn-er, lern'-er, a scholar. Teacher, teech'-er, an instructor. Learn'-ing, lern'-ing, receiving instruction, knowledge obtained by study; learned or learnt, lern't, acquired by study; learn-ed, lern'.ed, wise; learned-ly, lern'.ed.ly, wisely. The learn'-ed, the book-wise.

Errors of Speech.—

Lead me in Thy path and learn me (Ps. xxv. 4, Prayer Book version).

Such as are gentle, them shall He learn His way (Ps. xxv. 8, ditto).

O learn me true understanding (Ps. cxix. 66, ditto).

[They shall] keep My covenant.. that I [will] learn them (cxxxii. 3).

Old Eng. leorn[ian], past leornode, past p. leornod, leornere, a learner; leornigende, learning (part.); leornung, learning (verbal noun).

Lease, leece [of a house], leeze, to glean. Lees, leez, dregs.

Leased, leest, let for a term of years. Least, leest, smallest.

Leasing, lee'.sing, letting on a lease, lee'.zing, lying.

Lease'hold, property held by lease; lease'-hold'er.

Less'or, one who gives a lease. Less'ee, one who holds a lease.

Less'er, smaller in size. Leaser, lee'.zer, a gleaner.

"Lease" (a contract), Fr. laisser, to leave, to let. "Lees," Fr. lie.

"Lease" (to glean), Old English les[an], to glean; lese, a gathering.

"Leasing" (lying), Old Eng. leasung, leas, falsehood; leas[ian], to lie.

Leash, lesh, three head of game, three hounds, &c., to hold by a string; leashed, leshd; leash'-ing.

A brace is a couple. Two brace = 4. Two leash = 6.

Fr. laisse; Low Lat. lesia; Lat. lūqueus, a noose (Gk. lugos, a withe).

Leasing, lee'.zing, lying, gleaning. (O. E. leasung, lese. See lease.)

Least, leest, smallest. Leased, leest, let on lease. Lēst (q.v.)

At least or At the least? "At least" = at any rate. (This is the Old Eng. adv. prefix at-). "At the least"...requires a noun to follow as At the least [disturbance], "least" being an adj. In the least, i.e., in the least [degree]. The degrees are [little], less, least. "Little" is not of the same root, but is supplied for want of a positive.

Old Eng. [leas, opposite of full] comp. lesse or læssa (læs-ra), super. lest (læs-est), "læssa" or "lesse" is our "lesser," and "less" is merely a contracted form. "Leased," Fr. laisser. "Lest," Old Eng. thy læs, the less, lest that.

Leather, lĕth'ĕr, prepared hides. Lather, lăth'ĕr, soap-froth.

To leather, to beat with a leather strap; leath'ĕr-ing, a beating; leath'ĕry, tough, resembling leather; leathern.

"Leather," O. E. lether, lethern. "Lather," O. E. lethr[ian], to lather.

Leave, leev, permission, to quit, (past and past part.) left.

Leaves, leevz, doth leave, also the plu. of leaf (which see); leav-ing (R. xix.), leev'ing. Leavings, lee'vĭngz, refuse.

To leave off, to desist. To leave out, to omit.

Left to oneself, left to one's own devices, left alone.

As "leave" is a verb transitive, the following are elliptical.

I shall not leave till to-morrow (leave this place).

He left by train (left this house, this place).

Old Eng. lĕf[an], past lĕfde, past part. lĕfed. "Leaf," O. E. leaf.

"Left" [hand], Old Eng. lef, left or weak, the weak hand, and not as

Dr. Trench asserts "the hand that is left" or not used.

(Every word but one in "lea-" belongs to our native language.)

Leaven, lĕv'n, ferment. Eleven, e.lĕv'n, one more than ten.

To leav'en; leavened, lev'nd; leaven-ing, lĕv'n.ĭng; leaven-er, lev'n.er. (Fr. levain; Lat. lĕvāre, to raise.)

Lecherous, lĕch'.ĕrŭs, lustful; lech'ĕrous-ly, lech'ĕrous-ness; lechery, lĕch'.ĕry, debauchery; lech'er, a debauchee.

O. E. legerseipe, fornication, adultery; Low Lat. leccator, a debauchee.

Lecturn, lĕk'turn (not lectern), a reading-stand.

Low Latin lecturnium, Latin lectrum, a reading-desk.

Lecture, lĕk'.shŭn, a portion of Scripture appointed to be read in Church, a MS. "reading"; lec'tor, a reader; lection-ary, lĕk'.shŭn.ĕry, a book of the "lessons."

Lecture, lĕk'.tchŭr, instructive discourse read from [notes]; a reproof, to give a lecture; lectured, lĕk'.tchŭrd; lec'tur-ing (R. xix.), lec'tur-er, lec'ture-ship (-ship, office of).

Lesson, lĕs'son, a task, selected portion of Scripture.

Lat. lectio, lectionarium, lector, lectūra, v. lĕgĕre, sup. lectum, to read;

Fr. leçon; Germ. lesen, to read, lesung, a lesson, a reading.

Lĕd, conducted (past and p. p. of lead, leed). Lead, lĕd, a metal.

A led-horse, a sumpter-horse. A led-captain, an obsequious guest who acts as "padding" to the host.

"Led," Old Eng. lĕdan, past lĕdde, past part. lĕded, to lead, to guide.

"Led-horse," O. Eng. hlæden-horse or 'lad'-horse, a sumpter or laden-horse, similarly lade-saddle, the saddle for a sumpter-horse.

"Led-captain," the "captain" in leading-strings, a lady's man.

-ledge (Anglo-Saxon suffix -lach, -lac); gift, state; know-ledge.

Lĕdge, a ridge, a rim, a fillet, a spline. (O. E. lecg[an], to lay.)

Lĕd'ger, an account-book, an extra line in the staff [of music].

German lager[buch], stock book. (The d is interpolated.)

Ledger lines (in music) means ledges for the notes out of the staff.

Lee, defended from the wind. Lea, lee, a field, a meadow.

Lee-shore, the shore upon which the wind is blowing.

Under the lee of [A.], [A.] being between you and the wind.

The lee side, the side on which the wind does not blow; the weather side, the side on which the wind does blow; thus if the wind blows on the starboard, the starboard is the weather side, and the port the lee side.

Lee-ward, lu'rd, in the direction of the lee side.

Windward, wind'rd, in the direction opposite to that from which the wind blows.

Lee-way, the loss of way caused by drifting to leeward.

"Lee," Old English hleō, shelter, refuge. "Lea," Welsh lle.

Leech, a blood-sucker, a physician; leech-craft, medical skill.

Old English læce, a medical man, a blood-sucking worm; lace-craft.

Leek, a kind of onion. Leak, leek, a chink, to ooze from a chink.

"Leek," Old Eng. leac. "Leak," O. E. hlece, hlece-scip, a leaky ship.

Leer, a libidinous side-look, to look with a leer; leered (1 syl.), leer-ing, leer-ing-ly; leer'-er, one who leers.

Lees, leez, dregs [of wine]. Lease, leece, a contract.

"Lees," Fr. lie (Lat. limus, mud). "Lease," Fr. laisser, to let one have.

Leet, an Anglo-Saxon senate and law-court; court-leet.

Old Eng. leod, the people, leod-wita, a legislator; Low Lat. leta, a leet.

Leeward, lu'rd; lee-way. (See Lee.)

Left, not right, past and past part. of leave; left-hand, the "weak" hand (not as Dr. Trench says the "left" or unused hand); left-handed, one who uses the left-hand most.

A left-handed marriage, mür'ridge, a German marriage allowed to the nobility, which can be dissolved without divorce, also called a Morganatic marriage.

(The bridegroom pledges his troth with the "left" hand. Morganatic means "curtailed" or "limited," because the rights of the bride are limited to the dowry, and do not extend to the husband's estates.)

Old Eng. lef, left, weak (not from v. láf [an]), past láfde, p. p. láfed.

Lēg, a member of the animal body; legged, legd, having legs; legg'ings (R. i.), covering for the legs (when a pair can be divided into two articles, it has a sing.: as a legging, a glove; otherwise it has no sing.: as scissors, tongs); leg-less.

To take leg-bail, to run away from one's creditors.

Icelandic leggr, a stalk or stem. In Italian lacca means a leg.

Legacy, plu. legacies, lēg'ũsz, a bequest of movable property.

Leg'ator, one who leaves a legacy.

Leg'atee, one to whom a legacy is bequeathed.

Latin legātor, legātum, a legacy, v. legāre, to bequeath. (This Latin verb must not be confounded with lēgo, lēgere, to read.)

Legal, lee'.gāl, according to law; le'gal-ly, legāl'ity; legalise, lee'.gāl.ize (Rule xxxi.); to render lawful; legalised, lee'.gāl.izd; le'galis-ing (Rule xix.).

A legal tender, coins which may be legally offered in payment of a debt (copper to the extent of 1s., silver to the extent of 40s., gold to any amount).

Latin lēgālis, lēgālitās (lex, gen. lēgis, a law).

Legate, lēg'.atē (not lee'.gate, it has no connection with lēgal), leg'ate-ship (-ship, office of); legatine, lēg'.a.tine, adj.

Legation, lēgay'.shūn, the ambassadorial suite.

(The first vowel is long in Latin, so is it in legacy.)

Latin lēgātus, lēgatio (from lēgare, to send on an embassy).

Legend, lēdg'.ēnd (not lee'.gend), a traditional tale, the words round the rim of a coin; legendary, lēdg'n.dū.ry.

Latin legēda, things to be read. Applied originally to a book of lessons appointed to be read in the Romish church; then to the chronicles of saints and martyrs read at matins and meals.

Legerdemain, lēdg'.er.dē.māin, sleight of hand.

English-French for tour de main,—"leger de la main" is light-fingered (Rule lxiii.).

Leghorn, lē.gōrn', a plait for bonnets originally made at Leghorn.

Legible, lēdg'.i.b'l, easy to be read; leg'ible-ness, leg'ibly; legibility, lēdg'.i.b'il'.i.ty. Negative il-legibility.

Latin legibilis, (lēgere, to read; Greek lēgo, to recount, to tell).

Legion, lee'.djūn, a Roman brigade of 600 horse and 6,000 foot.

Legion of honour, a French order of merit (by Napoleon).

Legionary, lee'.djūn.ā.ry, adj. of legion. Legendary (q.v.)

Legendary, lēdg'.en.dū.ry, fabulous, adj. of leg'end, q.v.

Latin lēgio, gen. lēgiōnis, lēgiōnārius (lēgere, to pick out, to select).

Legislate, lēdg'.iss.late, to enact laws; leg'islāt-ēd (Rule xxxvi.), leg'islāt-ing (Rule xix.); legislative, lēdg'.iss.la.tiv.

Legislation, lēdg'.iss.lay''.shūn, enactment of laws.

Legislature, lēdg'.iss.la.tchūr, the power that legislates;

Legislator, lēdg'.iss.la.tor, a law-maker, one of the legislature, (fem.) leg'istratrix; lē'gist, one skilled in law.

Fr. législation, législatif, législature, légiste; Lat. legislātor.

Legitimate, lē.djīt'.i.mate, lawful, to render lawful; legit'imāt-ēd (Rule xxxvi.), legit'imāt-ing (Rule xix.); legit'imate-ly, legit'imate-ness, legit'imacy.

Legitimation, lē.djīt'.i.may''.shūn, legalisation.

Legitimise (R. xxxi.), lē.djīt'.i.mize, to pronounce a child legitimate; legit'imised (4 syl.); legit'imis-ing (R. xix.)

Legitimist (in France), a favourer of the Bourbon dynasty, Fr. légitimation, légitimiste, légitimor; Lat. legitimus, legitimāre.

Legumen, lě.gū'.měn, pulse. Legumine, lě.gū'.mǐn, a product called vegetable caseine [kas'.ě.ăn], obtained from pulse;

Legumes, lě.gūmz', peas, beans, &c.; legu'minous, -mǐn.us.

Leguminosites, lě.gū'.mǐ.nō''.sītes, fossil seeds of pulse (-ite denotes a fossil, Greek lithos, a stone).

French légume, légumes, légumineux; Latin légūmen, pulse.

Leisure, lě'.zhūr, time unoccupied; lei'sure-ly; at lei'sure, not busy. (Fr. loisir; Lat. licet, it is lawful, hence loisible, lawful.)

Lem'ma, a geometrical proposition assumed as granted, and taken to help out the proof of a dependent proposition. Dilem'ma, a perplexity, two antagonistic propositions.

Greek lēmna, anything assumed (lambdno, eilēmmai, to take).

Lemon, lēm'.ōn, a fruit; lem'on-ade (-ade, a drink "made of").

Span. limon; Ital. limons; Lat. limōnes, plu.; Ind. leemoo.

Lemur, lee'.mūr, one of the monkey tribe. Lemures, lēm'.u.reez, ghosts. "Propitious" ghosts were by the Romans called lares, lair'rēz; "evil" ones, Lar'væ.

-lence (Latin -lencia), nouns, "fullness of"; corpu-lence, fullness of corpus (flesh); vio-lence. (See -lent.)

Lend, (past) lěnt; (past part.) lěnt, to grant temporary use; lend'-ing, lend'-er. Loan, the thing lent. Borrow, bōr'rō, to obtain the temporary use of a thing lent.

Old English lén, a loan; v. lén[an], past lénde, past part. léned.

"Borrow," O. E. borg, something borrowed; v. borg[ian], to borrow.

Length (-th added to adj. converts them to nouns). Length, breadth, depth, but height (not highth). Length'-y, length'i-ness (Rule xi.), length'i-ly; length'-wise (not length-ways). It is the Anglo-Saxon termination -wis, in the direction of). At length, at last. Length'-en (-en signifies "to make"), to add length or make longer; length'ened (2 syl.), length'en-ing.

Long, (comp.) long-er, long'g'r; (super.) long-est, long'g'est.

Old English lang, comp. leng-ra, (super.) leng-est, length, lengtogen, to lengthen; leng[ian], to make long; past lengde, past part. lenged.

Lenient, lee'.nǐ.ěnt (not lěn'.ěnt), mild; le'nient-ly.

Leniency, lee'.nǐ.ěn.sy, mildness; lěn'ity, len'i.tive, -tīv.

Latin lenitas, leniens, gen. lenientis, v. lenire (lenis, mild).

Lens, lěnz, plu. lens-es, lenz'.cz, an optical glass for changing the direction of the rays of light. Crystalline lens, kris'.tāl.līnē lenz, the middle humour of the eye.

Lenticular, len'tik'.u.lar, in the shape of a double convex lens; lentic'ular-ly.

Latin lens, gen. lentis, a lentil; French lenticulaire.

-lent (Lat. -lent[us]), adj., "full of": as vio-lent, full of vis, force; corpu-lent, full of corpus (flesh); succu-lent, full of juice.

Lent, forty days fast, beginning with Ash-Wednesday, part. of v. lend; Lent'en, pertaining to Lent, frugal [in diet].

Old Eng. lencten, lent, lencten-fæsten, lent-fast, lencten-tid, lent-tido.

Lentil, lĕn'til, a plant of the bean kind.

French lentille, Latin lens, a lentil.

Leo, lee'o, the lion, the fifth sign of the zodiac; leonine, lee'o.nine, like a lion. (Lat. leo, a lion; leoninus, adj. of leo.)

Leopard, lĕp'ard, the lion-pard, offspring of a panther and lioness (pard means spotted, "leopard" the spotted-lion).

Lat. leopardus; Gk. leopardālis or leopardōs, the lion-pard.

Leper, lĕp'er, one affected with leprosy; leprosy, lĕp'rō.sy; leprous, lĕp'rūs; lep'rous-ness. (Gr. lepra, lepros, scaly.)

Leporine, lĕp'ō.rine, pertaining to a hare. Leporidae, lĕp'ōr-ri.dē, the hare tribe (-idæ, a group or family).

Latin leporinus (lĕpus, gen. lĕpōris, Greek lāgōs, lāgōs, a hare).

Leprosy, lĕp'rō.sy; leprous, lĕp'rūs. (See Leper.)

Lesion, lee'zhŭn, injury. (Fr. lésion, Lat. læsio, gen. læsiōnis.)

-less (nat. suffix leas), "void of," "loose from": fear-less, joy-less.

Less, smaller in quantity, shorter in duration, &c.

Less'er, smaller in size, is always in contrast with greater: as "The greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night." The lesser Asia. The lesser of two circles or triangles, &c. (Never in contrast with much.)

Less-en, to make less (-en, "to make"). Lesson, a task.

Lessened, less'end; less'en-ing.

Lesser is not a comparative degree of less, but another form of the comparative degree of the lost positive. The adj. supplied is little, but "little" is not of the same root. The lost adj. is leas, the opposite of full.

[Leas]. comp. læssa; (lesser), læs-ra shortened into læs, less, and læs-est shortened into lest. The older forms were læsse and læst. Instead of "lesser" being a double comparative, the truth is that less is a mere contraction of lesser.

Lesson, less'n, a task. Lessen, less'n, to diminish.

"Lesson," Fr. leçon; Lat. lectio, a lesson. "Lessen," O. E. læs, less.

Less'or, one who lets on lease. Less'ee, one who accepts the lease.

Less'er, less in size. Leaser, lee'zer, a gleaner.

"Lease," Fr. laisse. "Lesser," O. E. læsse. "Leaser," O. E. les[an].

Lĕst, for fear that, that..., not. Least, leest, smallest. List [of cloth].

"Lest," Old Eng. læs. "Least," Old Eng. læst. "List," O. E. lĭst.

-let (a native diminutive suffix), as stream-let, a little stream.

Let, (past) let, (past part.) let, to allow, to hinder, to put to hire; lett'ing, hindering, putting to hire. Hire (1 syl.) to take on a consideration what is let; hir'ing (R. xix.)

Lett'er, one who lets, one who hinders, an epistle, part of the alphabet. Hirer, hire'er, one who hires what is let,

Let's, contraction of let us. "Let's go birdsnesting, you, I, and Harry" (you, me, and it); "let us, viz., let me, with you and Harry..." "Let you and I go" (you and me).

"Let's us all go" (let's all go; i.e., let us all go).

"Let" (to allow), Old Eng. lét[an], past lét, past part. létten.

"Let" (to hinder), O. Eng. lett[an], past lette, past part. lett, to delay. (These two verbs are often used indifferently.)

"Letter" (of the alphabet), an epistle, Latin littera.

Lethe, lee'-rhe, the river of oblivion; lethean, lee'-rhee'-an. (not lee'-rhe'-an), adj. of Lethe; lethal, lee'-rhal, deadly.

Lethargy, lèth'-ar-gy, morbid drowsiness; lethargical, le-rhar'-gik-ál; lethargical-ly; lethargic, le-rhar'-djik.

Gr. lèthê, river of oblivion; lèthargikós (lethanô, to make one forget).

Letter, an alphabetic character, an epistle; a hinderer, one who lets on hire, to stamp with letters; lettered, lèt'-terd; let'ter-ing; let'ter-er, one who stamps with letters.

Letter-box, a box for letters; letter-car'rier, letter-case, letter-paper; letter-press, printed matter from type; letter-writer, one who...; a book to teach letter-writing.

(The following have "i" for the first vowel and only one "t".)

Literary, lit'-e-ry; literature, lit'-e-ry-ure; literate, lit'-e-rate, learned; il-lit'-e-rate, unlettered.

Literati, lit'-e-ray'-ty, men who profess literature.

Literal, lit'-e-ral, letter for letter, exact, not figurative; lit'-e-ral-ly, lit'-e-ral-ness. Littoral, lit'-to-ral, pertaining to the sea-shore. (Latin littus, the sea-shore.)

Letters of administration, authorisation to administer the goods and estates of a person deceased.

Letter of advice, notice to a banker or merchant of some transaction (as of goods sent off).

Letter of credit, a bank order authorising the bearer on his travels to receive a stated sum of money for which the writer will hold himself chargeable.

Letter of licence, a customs permit or privilege.

Letter of marque, mark, licence given to a private ship in time of war to seize on the ships of a hostile state.

Letters pā'tent (not pāt'ent), authorisation for the holder to enjoy some privilege stated in the document.

Letters testamentary, authorising an executor to act.

A dead letter, one lying at the post-office undelivered because the address or person is unknown.

(The error of spelling "letter" with "e" and double "t" we take from the French, but in "literary" &c., we avoid the double "t" of the French, and conform to the Latin models. The error of "letter" with double t is still worse, as the first vowel should be long.)

Latin littera, litteræ, litteralis, litterarius, litteratura, litterati; French littre!! littéraire, littéral, littérature.

Lettuce (obs. the u), lēt'iss, a table vegetable for salads.

(The word should be "lattuce" or "lactuce," the first syl. being "lac.")

German lattech; Latin lactuca (lac, milk), the milky plant.

Leucorrhea, lū'kōr'ree'.ah, a female ailment, the "whites."

French leucorrhée; Greek leukōs rhēō. As in "diarrhœa" the r is doubled to compensate for the aspirate which cannot be expressed in Greek. The Greek form of "diarrhœa" is διάρροια (not διάρροια,) from διά (ρῶ), and the Greek form of "leucorrhea" would be λευκόρροια (not λευκόρροια from λευκός (ρῶ)).

Levant, lē.vānt', the eastern part of the Mediterranean Sea, to abscond without paying a lost bet; Levant'-er, a strong east wind in the Mediterranean Sea, one who absconds...

Levant-ine, lē.vān'tine, adj. of Levant, a silk cloth so called.

Gallavant, gāl'lā.vānt, to attend on ladies with gallantry.

French levant; Italian levante, the east, (Lat. levare, to rise, to ease, hence "to get rid of," "to repudiate." The Latin phrase are alieno se levare means to pay not to repudiate a debt.)

"Gallavant," a corruption of Spanish galanteur, French galanterie.

Levator, lē.vay'tor, de.prēs'sor, muscles of the mouth, eye, uvula, &c. The levator [of the mouth] serves to elevate the upper lip, the depressor to draw it down, &c.

Latin levātor, a lifter up. Depressor, a presser down.

Levee, lēv'y, a court reception. Lēv'y, to raise troops, &c.

French levée, the process of getting up and dressing. During the monarchy certain gentlemen were privileged to pay their respects to the queen during her "levée," and these visits were called levée-visits, but what we call a court levée is in French termed a réception. "Levy" (of troops), Fr. levée; Low Lat. levina; Lat. levare, to raise.

Level, lēv'el, smooth, even, to make level; levelled, lēv'eld; lev'ell-ing (Rule iii., -EL), lev'ell-er, lev'ell-ness.

The degrees of "level" are nearly level, more nearly level, very nearly level, quite level; "more" and "most," level are the degrees of not level.

Old English læfeldre, læfel (a level), Low Latin levella, a level.

Lever, lēv'er, one of the mechanical powers; lever-age, lēv'er.aj (not lēv'er.aj) (-age, the act of).

French levier, v. lever, to raise (Latin levare, to raise).

Leveret, lēv'.er.ēt, a young hare. (Fr. levrant, lièvre; Lat. lēpus.)

Our word is the French lièvre, with -et diminutive.

Leviathan, lē.vī'ā.rhān, a huge sea-monster alluded to in the book of Job xli., a whale. (Hebrew l[e]vi.th[a]n.)

Levitation, lēv'.i.tay'.shūn, the opposite of gravitation, or the power that acts in opposition to gravitation. (See Levity.)

Levite, lēv'.vite, a Jew of the tribe of Levi, one of the priestly order; Levitical, lē.vit'.i.kāl; Levitical-ly.

Leviticus, lē.vit'.i.kūs, a book of the Bible relating to the Jewish priesthood. (Levi, third son of Jacob.)

Levity, plu. levities, lěv'ǎ.tiz, frivolity; levitation, lev'i.tay''-shun, the opposing power of gravitation.

Latin lėvitas, lėvis, light.

Levy, lěv'y, to raise troops, to impose a tax. Lev'ee, lěv'y, a court reception. (French levée, a levy.) See Levee.

Lewd, lūde, wanton. Looed, lude, fined at the game of loo for not having won a trick; lewd'-ly, lewd'-ness.

Old English lėwede, one of the laity, pertaining to the laity. Marriage and courtship being forbidden to the Roman Catholic clergy, "lewdness" is identified by them with the laity.

Lexicon, lex'ǎ.kōn, a dictionary; lexical, lex'ǎ.kāl, adj.; lex'ical-ly, lexicol'ogy, lexicol'ogist.

Lexicography, lěx'ǎ.kōg''rū.fy, the art of compiling a dictionary; lexicographer, lex'ǎ.kōg''rū.fēr; lexicographic, lex'ǎ.ko.grāf''ǎk; lexicographical, lex'ǎ.ko.grāf''ǎ.kāl.

Lexigraphy, lex'ǎg''rū.fy, definition of words; lexig'raphist; lexigraphic, lex'ǎ.grāf''ǎk; lexigraphical, -grāf''ǎ.kal.

Lexicology, lex'ǎ.kōl.ō.gy, treats of the proper meaning and application of words; lexicol'ogist, one skilled in...

Greek lėxikōn (lexis, speech; lėgō, to speak); Latin lexicon.

"Lexicography," Greek lėxikōn graphēin, to write a lexicon.

"Lexigraphy," Greek lexis graphēin, to write upon words.

"Lexicology," Greek lėxikon lōgōs, a lexicon treatise.

Leyden-jar, lay'.d'n jar, a jar used in electrical experiments.

From Leyden (Netherlands), birthplace of Vanleigh, the inventor.

Leze-majesty, leez-mādge'.ēs.ty, a crime committed against the sovereign, treason, rebellion. (Lat.[crimen] lāsēmajestātis.)

Liable, li'.ā.bl, responsible, apt to, subject to; li'able-ness; liability, plu. liabilities, li'.a.bl''ǎ.tiz, responsibility, debt.

Lim'ited liability, responsibility in a joint-stock company limited to the extent of one's "shares." (Lat. ligo, to bind.)

Liaison (French), le.ā'.zon, an intrigue. (Latin ligāre, to bind.)

Liana, lē.ā'.nah, a luxuriant woody climbing plant.

Liar, li'.ar, one who tells falsehoods. Lyre, li'r, a lute. (See Lie.)

Lias, li'.as, a calcareous clay. Liars, li'.arz, plu. of liar. Lyres, li'rz, plu. of lyre. Ly'-ers [in bed], from lie (q.v.)

Liasic, li'.ās'ǎk, adj. of lias.

Lias, a corruption of lyers or layers, from its stratified appearance in the quarries where it is worked.

Liatris, li.ā'.trīs, a flower (meaning unknown).

Libation, li.bay'.shūn, a drink-offering. Libration, li.bray'.shūn.

Latin libatio, libation; libratio, libration.

Libel, li'.bel, a lampoon, to defame. La'bel, a direction.

Libelled, li'.bēld; li'bell-ing (Rule iii., -EL), li'bell-er; libell-ous, li'.bēl.ūs, defamatory; li'bellous-ly.

Latin libellus, a little book. It meant originally "a plaintiff's statement," hence a gross exaggeration, a lampoon.

Liberal, lib' .e.rāl, generous; A liberal, a whig; lib'eral-ly, liberality, lib' .e.rāl' .i.ty; liberal-ism, whiggism;

Liberalise (R. xxxi.), lib' .e.rāl .īze, to free from narrow views; lib'eralised (4 syl.); lib'eralis-ing (R. xix.); lib'eralis-er;

Liberate, lib' .e.rate, to set free. Li'brate, to poise. Lib'erāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.); lib'erāt-ing; lib'erāt-or; liberation, lib' .e.ray' .shūn, freedom from bondage.

Libertarian, lib' .er .lāir' .rī.ăn, one who believes in the "freedom of the will." Necessita'rian, one who believes that man must do what he does do; libertarian-ism.

Liberticide, lib' .er' .tī .side, a destroyer of liberty.

Libertine, lib' .er .tīn, a debauchee; libertinism, lib' .er .tīn .izm.

Lib'erty, freedom; liberties, lib' .er .tīz, unwarranted freedom of conduct; The liberties [of London], limits within which certain civic immunities are enjoyed.

Lib'erty of the press, freedom to print and publish.

At liberty, disengaged, free from restraint.

Latin lib'eralis, lib'eralitas, lib'erator, lib'ratio, lib'rare, supine lib'ratum, libertinus, libertas (liber, free); French lib'eral, lib'eralité, libertin, liberté ("liberation," is not French).

Libidinous, li .bid' .i.nūs, lustful; libid'inous-ness, libid'inous-ly.

Latin libidinōsus (libido, lust); French libidineux.

Libra (Lat.), li' .brah, the balance, the seventh sign of the zodiac.

Library, plu. libraries, li' .brā .rīz (not li' .bū .ry), a room for holding books; librarian, li .brair' .rī.ăn, one who has charge of a library; libra'rian-ship (-ship, office of).

Latin librāria, librārius (liber, a book).

Librate, li' .brate, to poise, to balance. Lib'erate, to set free.

Librāt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), librāt'-ing (Rule xix.), li'bratory.

Libration, li .bray' .shūn, applied to certain phenomena connected with the moon's motion. Lib'eration, freedom.

Latin librātio, librāre; French libration.

Libretto, plu. librettos (Rule xlii.), li .brēt' .tōze, the words of an opera. (Italian libretto, a little book; libro, a book.)

Lice (1 syl.), plu. of louse, as mice is the plu. of mouse.

Old English lūs, plu. lys, a louse; mūs, plu. mýs, a mouse.

Li'cence, a liberty, a permit. Li'cence, to permit (Rule li.); li'censed (2 syl.), li'cens-ing (Rule xix.), li'cens-er; licens-able, li' .sēn .sū .b'l. Li'censing court.

Licentiate, li .sēn' .shē .ate, one licensed to practise [medicine]; licensed victualler, vi' .tū .lēr, one licensed to sell wine and spirits, to be drunk on the premises.

Licentious, li .sēn' .shūs, profligate; licen'tious-ness, licen'tious-ly. (Fr. licence (noun); Lat. licentia, licentiōsus.)

Lichen, lĭ'kĕn (not litch'n nor lik'n), rock or tree-moss.

Lichenin, lĭ'kĕn.in, starch of Iceland moss; lichenic, lĭ'kĕn.ĭk, adj. of lichen. (Lat. lichen; Gk. leichen; Fr. lichen.)

Lich-gate, litch-gāte, the gate at the entrance of a cemetery where the coffin awaits the arrival of the clergyman.

Old English lic, a dead body; lic-tĕn, a sepulchre; lic-geat.

Lick, to wipe with the tongue, to flog; licked (1 syl.), lick'-ing.

Lick'-er, one who licks. Liquor, lik'er, "spirits."

Lick-spit'tle, a parasite; lick'ing, a drubbing.

To lick the dust, to fall in battle. To lick up, to devour.

To lick into shape, to bring into order. (It was once supposed that the bear had to lick its cub into shape.)

Old English liccian, to lick; past liccode, past part. liccod.

"Lick" (to flog), O. E. sticcan; past sticcode, past part. sticced, sticc.

Lickerish, lik'er.ish, dainty. Liquorice, lik'er.iss, a drug.

Lick'erish-ness, lick'erish-ly. (Germ. leckerig, lickerish.)

Licorice or liquorice, lik'er.iss, a demulcent drug.

Lictor (Latin), lik'tor, a consul's fascis-bearer.

Lid, the cover of a box, the cover of the eye. (Old Eng. hlid.)

Lie, a falsehood, to recline. Lay, to place. Lye, ley.

Lie (to tell falsehoods), past lied (1 syl.), ly'-ing, liar.

Lie (to recline), past lay, past part. lain; ly'-ing.

Lay (to place), past laid, past part. laid; lay'-ing.

"Lie" and "lay" are constantly misused even by the well-educated. Remember "lie" is intransitive, and has no "object" following it; but "lay" is transitive, and has an "object" expressed or understood.

He told me to lie down, so I lay down, and had lain down an hour when John arrived.

He told me to lay the carpet down, so I laid it down, and it had been laid down an hour when John arrived.

Errors of Speech.—

Here lays the body of poor Mary Ann (lies; "body" is not the object but the subject: here the body lies).

He told me to lay still (to lie still).

They laid in bed till the clock struck ten (they lay..).

The ship lays in the downs (lies).

The ship laid at anchor all yesterday (lay).

The enemy laid in wait for you (lay).

That stone is laying in the way (lying).

These goods will lay on my hands a long time (lie).

This trouble lays heavy on my mind (lies).

The troops still lay under arms (lie).

They have laid in the trenches all night (lain).

Suffolk lays south of Norfolk (lies).

He has laid in that state of coma for a week (lain).

"Lie," Old English licgan, past lĕg, past part. legen.

"Lay," Old English lægan, past legede, past part. leged.

"Lie" (to tell an untruth), Old English lēogan, past lēog, past part. logen, lēogere or lēgere, a liar.

Lieberkuhn, lee'.ber.kune, a reflector attached to a microscope.

So called from the inventor, Lieberkuhn, a German.

Lief, leef, willingly; as lief, as readily. Leaf [of a book or tree].

"Lief," Old Eng. leof, comp. leofre, rather. "Leaf," Old Eng. leaf.

Liege, leege, a vassal, bound to, as a vassal; liege-lord, the master of a liegeman; liege-man, a vassal.

Allegiance, al.lee'.djance, obedience to which we are bound as subjects. Loyalty, obedience from respect to law.

French lige; Low Latin ligius (Latin ligare, to bind).

"Allegiance," Latin al[ad]ligo, to bind to one.

"Loyalty," French loyal, loyaliste (loi, law, Latin lex, gen. legis).

Lien, lee'.en. Lion, lee'.on. Lean, leen. Lain, lane. Lane.

Lien, lee'.en, a charge on property for debt.

Lion, a wild beast. (Latin leo, gen. leonis.)

Lean, leen, meagre, thin, to incline.

Lain, past part. of the v. lie, to recline. (Old Eng. legen.)

Lane, a narrow road. (Dutch laan.)

French lien; Latin ligamen, a bond (v. ligare, to tie).

Lieu, lee'.u, place; in lieu of, instead of. Loo, a game with cards.

French lieu (Latin locus, a place); au lieu de, in the place of.

Lieutenant, lee'.teen'.ant, an officer next below a captain.

Lieutenancy, plu. lieutenancies, lee'.teen'.an.siz, commission of lieutenant; lieutenant-ship (-ship, office.)

Lieutenant-colonel, plu. lieutenant-colonels, lee'.teen'.ant ker'.nel, officer next above a major and below a colonel.

These officers are styled "colonels."

Lieutenant-general, plu. lieutenant-generals, officer next above a major-general, and below a general. These officers are styled "generals."

Lord lieutenant, plu. lords lieutenants [of counties].

(This plural should be lord-lieutenants [of Ireland or of counties]. The Gallicism, "Lords lieutenants," is as absurd as lords mayors.)

French lieutenant (lieu tenant, Latin locum tenens, holding the place of another). A "lord lieutenant" is vice-roy or deputy of the sovereign; and a "lieutenant" in the army is (in case of absence) the locum tenens of the officer next above him in rank.

Life, plu. lives, life, livz. (This, like "knife," knives, "wife," wives, makes the plu. by changing "fe" into "ves." R. xl.)

Life-like, life-less, life'less-ly, life'less-ness, life'-long, life'- belt, life'-blood; life-boat, -bote; life-buoy, -boy; life-guards, -gards, two regiments of cavalry, so called because they "guard the life" of the sovereign; life-guards'man, one of the "life-guards"; life-interest; life-lines, ropes in rigging to hold on by; life-preserver, a life-buoy, a loaded weapon for self-protection; life-rent; life-time.

Life-annuity, plu. annuities, en.nu'.i.tiz, a sum of money paid annually during life.

- Life-assu'rance, a sum of money paid at decease, in consideration of an annual payment during life.
- Live'-ly, animated; liveli-ness (Rule xi.), cheerfulness. (The following have the -i- short without any sufficient reason.)
- Live, liv; lived, līvd; liv'-ing (Rule xix.), live-long.
- The liv'ing, those now alive. A liv'ing, church preferment. Manner of liv'ing, style of housekeeping.
- Old English lif, lif-dæg, life-time; lif-leas, lifeless; lif-līc, lively. Lif[ian], to live, past lifode or līfeode, past part. lifod or līfeod.
- Lift, a machine for lifting, to raise; lift'-ed (R. xxxvi.), lift'ing, lift'-er. Shop-lift'-er, a thief who steals goods exposed for sale; shop-lift'ing. A dead lift, a body in which there is no buoyancy; lift'ing-gear, an apparatus for lifting the safety-valve of steam-engines. Lifts, ropes for hoisting or lowering the yard arms. Left, omitted, &c.
- Old English hlif[ian], past hlifode, past part. hlifod.
 "Lift," Old English lif[an], past lāf, past part. lifen.
- Ligament, lig'ū.ment. Ligature, lig'ū.tchūr.
- Ligament (in Anat.), a strong elastic membrane connecting the extremities of movable bones; ligament'-al.
- Ligature, a bandage, a tie in music, waxed thread used in surgical operations for tying veins or arteries, a double type-letter on one shank.
- Ligan, lī.gan, goods tied to a buoy and sunk in the sea.
- Flotsan, goods left floating on the sea for transport, &c.
- Jetsan, goods cast into the sea to lighten a ship.
- Lat. Ulgamentum, Ulgātūra, Ulgāre, to lie; Fr. ligament, ligature.
- Light, lite, medium of visibility, not heavy.
- Light, light'er, light'-est; light'-ness, light-ly.
- Light, lite, to kindle, (past) lit or light'-ed, (past part.) [lit] light'-ed.
- Light, to alight, lit [light'-ed], (past part.) [lit] light'-ed.
 Some contend that the verb "light" (to kindle) should be conjugated light, lighted, lighted, and the verb "light" (to settle) light, lit, lit, but (1) there is no such distinction in the original verbs, (2) no such distinction holds in ordinary speech, (3) the verb "alight" is never conjugated alight, alit, alit, but always alight, alighted.
- A lighted candle (not a lit candle), a candle burning.
- Lights, lites, the lungs of quadrupeds. (So called from their lightness.) Not applied to the lungs of man.
- Northern lights, the auro'ra borea'lis or "dancing fires."
- Lighten, lite'n, to ease, to illuminate; lightened, lite'nd; -lighten-ing, lite'ning, easing. Lightning, lite'ning [flash].
- Lightning conduct'or, a rod to protect from lightning.
- Light'er, lite'er, a large flat-bottomed boat for loading and unloading ships; light'er-man, one employed in a "light-er"; lighter-age, money paid for the use of a "lighter" (-age, something done, the charge for doing it).

Light-house, a lighted tower to warn ships of danger.

Light-dues, tolls on ships for the service of light-houses.

Light-ship, a ship with a light anchored near a shoal.

Lightsome, lite'sum, airy (-some, native suffix, "full of"); light'some-ness, light'some-ly.

Old English liht, lihting, lighting; lihtung, lightning; lihtingnes, lightness; lihtlice, lightly. (The interpolated g is quite useless.)

"Light" (to kindle), liht[an], past lihte, past part. liht or liht[an], past lihtede, past part. lihted.

"Light" (to settle), liht[an], past lihte, past part. liht or aliht[an], past alihte, past part. aliht.

The two verbs, therefore, should, in strictness, be conjugated thus:—

"Light" (to kindle), light, lit or lighted, lighted or lit.

"Light" (to settle) light, lit (not lighted), lighted (not lit).

Signales, line-āl'ize, a grove or planting of aloes (Num. xxiv., 6); aloes-wood. (Latin lignum aloes, wood of aloes.)

Ligneous (R. lxvi.), lig'nē.ūs, woody, resembling wood.

Lignine, lig'nin, pure woody fibre.

Lignite, lig'nite, fossil brown coal, exhibiting the wood origin (-ite, a fossil). Lignitic, lig'nit'ik, adj. of lignite.

Ligniferous, lig'nif'.ērūs, producing wood. (Lat. fērens.)

Ligniform, lig'nī.form, resembling wood. (Latin forma.)

Lignify, lig'nī.fy, to convert to wood; lignifies, lig'nī.fize; lignified, lig'nī.fide (Rule xi.); lig'nify-ing; lignification, lig'nī.fī.kay'.shūn, conversion into wood.

Ligniperdous, lig'nī.per'.dūs, wood destroying. (Lat. perdo.)

Lignum vite, lig'.num vī'tee, the tree-of-life, i.e., the life-enduring tree. (Its wood is very hard and durable.)

Latin lignum, wood, ligneus, &c., lignifier, lignum vite.

-like (native suffix lic), adj., resembling, like: as god-like.

Like (1 syl.), resembling, in the same manner; like'-ly, like'li-hood (R. xi., -hood, state, condition), like'li-ness.

Like'-ness, a portrait, resemblance; like-mind'ed.

Had like [to be drowned], Had like [to break his head], came little short of being, chanced, nearly.

Like, to approve of; liked (1 syl.), lik'-ing (Rule xix.)

Likes and dis'likes, attachments and aversions.

Liken, like'n, to compare; lik'ened (2 syl.), lik'en-ing.

Likewise, like'-wise, also, in like manner.

(Like is used as a verb, adj., and adv., but should never be used as a conjunction; hence the following expressions should be avoided.)

Like you do, like you say (as).

Like I do, like we do, like he is (as).

Old English lic, lic-ness, v. lic[an], past licode, past part. licod.

Lilac, lī' lak (not lay' lāk nor lay' līk); a shrub; a colour.

Persian lilac; Spanish lilac; French lilas.

Lilliputian, lī' i. pū' shūn, dwarfish, a dwarf; from a

So called from Swift's tale of "Gulliver's Travels" to Lilliput.

Lilt, a cheerful song, to sing cheerily; to do a thing dexterously; lilt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), lilt'-ing.

Gothic lulla, Low German lollen, German lallen.

Lily, plu. lilies, lī' liz, a flower; liliaceous, lī' lī. ā' shūs, adj. of lily,

(not li. lay' shūs), Rule lxvi.; liliaceæ, lī' lī. ā' sē. ē, (not li. lay' sē. ē) the order containing the lily (aceæ [in Bot.], an order of plants); liliated, lī' lī. ā, adorned with lilies.

Latin lilium, liliaceus; Greek leirion; Spanish lirio.

Limacious, lī. may' shūs, slimy, pertaining to a snail, snail like.

(Lat. nouns in -ax, add -cious, not -ceous for adj. suffix, R. lxvi.)

Limacidae, lī. mās' i. dē, the snail family (-idae, Gk. a family).

Latin limax, gen. limacis, the slug or snail.

Limb, līm, a member of the body, the edge. Limn, līm, to draw.

Limbed, līmd, having limbs; limb'-less, without limbs.

"Limb" (of the body), Old Eng. līm. "Limb" (border), Lat. limbus.

"Limn" (to draw or paint), Lat. līmitō; Fr. enluminer, to illuminate.

Limber, līm' ber, flexible. (Old English lempe; pliancy.)

Limbo, plu. limbos, līm' bōze (R. xlii.), the frontier of hell, where there is neither happiness nor misery; in limbo, in prison; in pawn; under restraint.

Italian limbo; Latin limbus, the edge.

Lime (1 syl.), an earth, a fruit; to smear with lime; earth, to entangle; limed (1 syl.), līm'-ing, līm'-y, līm'i-ness.

Lime'-burner; lime'-kiln, a place for burning lime-stone;

lime'-water, water impregnated with lime; lime'-stone.

Slaked lime, slākt' lime, hydrate of lime or lime watered.

Lime-light, lime'-lite, Drummond's light produced by passing upon a small ball of quick lime a stream of oxygen gas through the flame of alcohol. Lime'-white.

Lime-juice, juce, juice of the lime-fruit; lime'-plant, the May-apple. Bird'-lime, a glutinous substance for catching birds. Lime'-hound, a hound for boar-hunting.

"Lime" (the earth), Old Eng. līm, mortar, bird-lime; Lat. limus, mud; ge-līmfan, to glue; past ge-līmede, past part. ge-līmed.

"Lime" (the fruit), the citrus-limetta.

"Lime-hound," the hound led by a lead or string. (Fr. lien, a band.)

Limit, līm' it, the utmost extent, boundary, to bound; līm'it-ing, līm'it-ed (R. xxxvi.), līm'ited-ly, līm'ited-ness, līm'it-er, līm'it-able; limitary, līm' it. ter. ry, restrictive.

Limitation, līm' i. tay' shūn, restriction.

Limited liability, money liability limited to the number of shares held. Limited liability company, plu. -nies.

Lim'it-less, without limit. Unlim'ited, illim'itable.

Latin limes, gen. limitis, limitaris, limitatio, limitare.

French limite, v. limiter, limitation, illimité.

Limn, lim, to draw or paint. Limb, lim, a member of the body.

Limned, limd; limning, lim'ing; limn-er, lim'er.

Fr. enluminer, to illuminate; Lat. illuminare. "Limb," O. E. lim.

Limp, flexible, to halt in walking; limped, limpt; limp'-ing, limp'-ing-ly; limp'-er. (Old Eng. limp-halt, lame.)

"Limp" (flexible), Old English lempe, pliancy, = Latin lenitas.

Limpet, lim'pet, a shell fish. Limpid, lim'pid, clear [stream].

"Limpet," Lat. lepas, gen. lepædis: Gk. lepas, so called from it clinging to the rock (lepas, a bare rock or crag). "Limpid" (see below).

Limpid, lim'pid, clear [running water]. Lim'pet, a shell-fish.

"Limpid," Lat. limpidus. "Limpet," Lat. lepas, gen. lepædis (v.s).

Limulus, lim'ūlus, the king crab. (Latin limulus, crooked.)

Linch'-pin, the pin which fastens a wheel in the axle-tree.

Old Eng. lynis-penn, an axle-tree pin (Welsh pin, a pin or pen).

Linden, lin'dēn, a lime-tree. (Old Eng. lind, the linden-tree.)

Line (1 syl.) a rope, a string, a row of letters, a lineament, a mark, a calling, a family descent, the 12th part of an inch.

The line, the equator. A line of battle, a rank or row of soldiers or ships arranged for battle. Lin'er, one of a line of trading ships.

Troops of the line, the regular infantry regiments.

Horizontal line, a line drawn parallel to the horizon.

Vertical line, a line at right-angles to an horizontal line.

Parallel lines, lines equi-distant throughout.

Line of beauty, Hogarth's dogma about a curve ~

Line of defence, the line of fire of the flank of a bastion.

Line of dip, the slope of a stratum.

Line of fire, the direction in which the guns fire.

Line of march, the route taken by an army on march.

Line of operations, the different points of attack.

Right line, a straight line. Hard lines, ill-treatment.

Line, to cover the inside of a garment, &c.; lined (1 syl.), lin'-ing, covering the inside..., the material used for...

(The following change the quantity of the first vowel.)

Lineage, lin'ēage, race, progeny (-age, Fr. collective suffix).

Lineal, lin'ēal, in a direct line from some ancestor;

lin'ēal-ly; lin'ear, consisting of lines; lin'ear-ly; lin'ear numbers, those which relate to length only;

lin'ear perspective regards the magnitudes of objects as they stand in reference to the vanishing points.

Ærial perspective takes cognizance of light and shadow.

- Lineament, līn'ē.ă.mēnt; feature. Līn'iment, embrocation.
- Lineaments, līn'ē.ă.mēnts, the distinguishing lines or marks of the face. Līn'iments, embrocations.
- Old Eng. līne; Lat. linea, lineālis, lineāmentum, lineāris, v. lineāre, to draw lines; Fr. lignage, lineage, lineaire, lineament, liniment.
- Linen (not līnnen), līn'.en, cloth made of flax, underclothing, made of linen; linen drāper, one who sells linen cloth.
- Old Eng. līnen; Lat. linum, flax; Gk. linōn (with the i long).
- ling (native patronymic), offspring, descended from, and hence dim.: first-ling (first offspring), duck-ling (a little duck).
- Līng, heather, a fish of the cod kind. (Danish lyng, heather.)
- Lingel, līng'gēl, a little tongue of leather, shoemaker's thread.
- Lingula, līn'.gŭ.lāh, molluscs, with tongue-shaped valves.
- Lat. lingŭla, a little tongue (lingua); Fr. ligneuil, shoemaker's thread.
- Linger, līng'ger, to tarry; lingered, līng'gerd; ling'er-ing, ling'ering-ly; ling'er-er, one who hangs behind.
- Old English langtīan, past langode, past part. langod.
- Lingo, plu. lingoes (R. xlii.), līn'.gōze, dialect. (Lat. lingua.)
- Linguist, līn'.gwīst, one who knows several languages; linguistic, līn.gwīs'tik; linguistics, science of languages.
- Lingual, līn'.gwāl, formed by the tongue; līng'ual-ly.
- Linguals, līn'.gwālz, letters formed by the tongue, as sh, zh.
- Linguadentals, līn'.gwa-dēn'tālz, letters formed by the joint action of the tongue and teeth, as d, t, dh, th.
- Linguiform (-giu- not -gua-), tongue-shaped.
- Līngel, līn'.gēl, a little tongue of leather.
- Lingula, līn'.gŭ.lāh, molluscs, with tongue-shaped valves.
- Lingulate, līn'.gŭ.late, tongue-shaped.
- French lingual, linguiste; Latin lingua, lingŭla.
- Liniment, līn'.ă.mēnt. Lineament, līn'.ē.ă.mēnt.
- Liniment, an embrocation.
- Lineament, feature, a distinguishing character of the face.
- "Liniment," Latin linimentum, an ointment (linīre, to besmear).
- "Lineament," Latin lineamentum, a diagram, an outline, a mark.
- Link, one ring of a chain, a torch; to join by links or bonds;
- Links, plu. of link. Lynx, līnks, a wild animal.
- Link, linked (1 syl.), līnk'-ing; link-motion, -mō'shŭn, an apparatus for reversing steam engines.
- Link'-boy, a street torch-bearer.
- "Link" (of a chain), German ge-lenk.
- "Link" (a torch), Lat. lychnus, a lamp or link; Gk. lychnos, a light.
- Linnæan [system], līn.nē'.an, that of Linnæus, the Swede.
- Līn'net, the flax-bird, so called from its feeding on flax.
- Old Eng. līnce, the flax-finch (līn, flax); Welsh līnos (līn, flax); Fr. linotte. In Lat. carduelis, the thistle-bird, which is so called from carduus, thistle, on which it feeds.

AND OF SPELLING.

- Linoleum, lín' nō'.lē.ŭm, floor-cloth on a basis of linen or a Greek linon, made of flax; Latin linum, flax, flax-thread.
- Linseed (not lintseed), lín'.seed, the seed of flax. (O. E. linsce.l.)
- Linsey-woolsey, lín'.ze wool'.ze, a fabric of mixed linen and wool.
- Linstock, lín'.stŏk, a gunner's match once used for firing cannon. Compound of lint and stock, a stock or staff with a lint cap.
- Lint, the fluff of scraped linen. (Old English linct.)
- Lintel, lín'.těl, the head-piece of a door or window frame. Spanish lintel; French linteau (Latin limen sup̄erum).
- Lion, fem. lion-ess, li'.ŏn, li'.ŏn.ess. Lien, le'.en [on property].
- Lions, plu. of lion (the wild beast), places or persons of interest shown as sights.
- Lionise, li'.ŏ.nize, to show a person the sights of interest; li'onised, li'onis-ing (Rule xix.), li'onis-er.
- To see the lions, to see the things of interest in a place.
- The lion's share, the whole or a very disproportionate share.
- Lion-hearted, -hart'.ed, courageous. Lion's cub or whelp. Old Eng. leo, a lion; leon, a lioness; leoltic, lion-like; leon-hwelp, a lion's or rather a lioness's whelp; Lat. leo, gen. leōnis; Gk. leōn.
- Lip, part of the mouth; lip'-less; lipped, līpt, having lips; lip'-lēt; lip-ser'vice, ostensible but not real service or attachment; lip-wisdom. Lip-salve, -sarve. Old English lippe, a lip; German lippe; Latin labium.
- Liquefy, lik'kwě.fy, to melt; liquefies, lik'kwě.fize; liquefied, lik'kwě.fide; liquefi-er, lik'kwě.fier (Rule xi.); liquefy-ing; liquefi-able, lik'kwě.fī''.ă.b'l.
- Liquescent, li.kwēs'.sent, becoming fluid (deliquescent).
- Liquefaction, lik'kwě.făk''.shŭn, solution; liquefaciant, lik'kwě.făsh''.ă.ănt, a promoter of liquefaction. Latin liquefactio, liquefactio, liquefactio, liquesco (liqueo, to melt).
- Liqueur (French), lē.kŭre', a cordial. Liquor, lik'ker, spirits.
- Liquid, lik'kwěd, a fluid; liquid-ly, liquid-ness.
- Liquidise (R. xxxi.), lik'kwě.dize, to reduce to a liquid state; liquidised (3 syl.), liquidis-ing (Rule xix.), liquidis-er.
- Liquidate, lik'kwě.dâte, to discharge a debt; liquidat-ed (R. xxxvi.), liquidât-ing (R. xix.), liquidât-or (R. xxxvii.)
- Liquidation, lik'kwě.day''.shŭn, payment, solution.
- Liquor, lik'.er, an intoxicating beverage, as "spirits"; liquored, lik'.erd; liquor-ing. (Americanisms.)
- Liquor sanguinis, lik'kwŏr săn'.gwŏ.nŭs. Latin liquidus, liquidare, supine liquidatum, liquor (v. liquare, to melt); French liquefaction, liquefiable, liquefier, liqueur, liquide, liquider, liquidation.

- Liquorice, lik'er.iss (not lik'er.ish), the root of a plant from which a sweet drug, called Spanish liquorice, is made.
- Liquorish, lik'er.ish, sweet: as a liquorish tooth.
- Latin glycyrrhiza; Greek glukus rhiza, sweet root.
- Lisp, to convert sibilants into liquidals in speaking; lisped, lispt; lisp'-ing, lisp'ing-ly, lisp'-er.
- Dutch lispēn; German lispeln, noun lispel.
- Lissom, lis'sum (colloquial), for lithesome, pliant.
- List, the salvage of cloth, an inventory, hearken, to desire.
- Lists, a place enclosed for tournaments, &c.; list'-ed; list'-ing; list'-less, spiritless; list'less-ly, list'less-ness.
- To enter the lists, to compete with others.
- The civil list, the household expenses of the sovereign.
- Old Eng. list, selvage of cloth, a catalogue, list-leas, purposeless.
- Listen, lis'n, to hearken; listened, lis'nd; listen-ing, lis'ning; listen-er, lis'ner. (O. Eng. lystan, past lyste, p. p. listel.)
- Litany, plu. litanies (Rule xlv.) Liturgy, plu. liturgies, lit'āny, plu. lit'āniz; lit'ūr.djy, plu. lit'ūr.djiz;
- Litany, a part of the liturgy (being a humble supplication);
- Liturgy, the whole church service contained in the Common Prayer Book; litur'gic, litur'gical.
- "Litany," Lat. litania; Gk. litana, the prayers (litai, prayers).
- "Liturgy," Lat. liturgia, liturgicus; Gk. leitourgia.
- Literal (one t), lit'.ērāl, exact. Littoral (double t), lit'.tō.rāl, relating to the sea-shore. (Lat. litorālis, litus, the coast.)
- Lit'eral-ly, lit'eral-ness; literality, lit'.ērāl'.ā.ty.
- Literary, lit'.ērā.ry, one who follows the profession of literature, book-learned.
- Literate, lit'.ēr.ate, a degree given to non-university candidates for ordination. Illiterate, uneducated.
- Literati, lit'.e.ray''.ty, men of erudition.
- Literatim, lit'.e.ray''.tim, literally; litera'tim et verba'tim (Latin), letter for letter and word for word.
- Literature, lit'.e.ra.tūre, all books, except those on science and art; polite literature, po.lite' lit'.e.ra.ture, works of taste as poetry, belles-lettres [bel lēt'r]. (See Letter.)
- Lat. litrālis, litrārius, litrātūra, litrātus, plu. litrāti.
- (The absurdity of spelling letter with ctt is due to the French, but we have avoided their error of double t in the derivatives.)
- Litharge, lith'.arge, partially vitrified protoxide of lead.
- Lat. lithargyros, the scum of silver; Gk. lith-argureos, stone of silver.
- Lithe (1 syl.), flexible; lithe'-ness; lithe'-some, -sūm (colloquially lis'som); lithe'some-ness, lithe'some-ly.
- Old English lithe, lithelic, lithelic, adv.; lithenes, litheness.

- Lithia, lith'ia, an alkali found in petalite (3 syl.)
- Lith'ium, a metal obtained from lithia.
- Lithic, lith'ik [acid], uric acid, an acid liable to form into "cal'culus." Lithics, medicines to prevent the formation of cal'culus; lithiasis, lith'i'.ās'is. (Gk. lithos, a stone.)
- Litho-, lith'o (Greek prefix), stone, made of stone (lithos).
- Lith'o-carp, carpolite, a fossil fruit. (Gk. karpōs, fruit.)
- Lith'o-chrome, -krōme, the impression on canvass of a painting in oils upon stone. (Greek chrōma, colours.)
- Lith'o-graph, -grāf, the impression of a drawing on stone; lith'o-graphed, -grāft; lith'o-graph'ing; lithographer, lith'ōg' rā.fēr; litho-graphic, lith'o.grāf' ik; litho-graphical, lith'o.grāf' i.kūl; lith'o-graph'ical-ly.
- Lithography, lith'ōg' rā.fy, the art of drawing on stone; lithographer, lith'ōg' rā.fēr, one who lithographs. (Greek lithos graphō, I write or draw on stone.)
- Lithoidal, lith.ō'.dāl, of stony structure or aspect. (Greek lithos eidōs, stone likeness or resemblance.)
- Lithology, lith'ōl'.ō.djy, that part of science which treats of rocks without reference to their fossils; litho-logic, lith'o.lōdg' ik; lith'o-logical, lith'o.lōdg' i.kūl; lith'o-logical-ly; lithologist, lith'ōl'.ō.jist. (Greek lithos-logos, treatise about stones.)
- Lithophagus, lith'ōf'.ā.gūs, eating or swallowing stones or gravel [as some birds do]; lithophagi, lith'ōf'.ā.dji. (Greek lithos phagō, I eat stones.)
- Lith'o-phane, -fane, pictures on thin sheets of white porcelain for lamps and other transparencies. (Greek lithos phandōs, stone transparent.)
- Lith'o-photography, -fo.tōg' rā.fy, the art of photographing drawings done on stone. (Greek lithos phōs-graphō, I draw-by-light from stone.)
- Lith'o-phyte, -fite, a stone-plant: as coral;
- Lith'o-phytic, -fit' ik, pertaining to stone-plants. (Greek lithos phutōn, stone plant or growth.)
- Lithornis, lith'or' nīs, fossil bird-remains. (Greek lithos ornīs, stone [remains] of birds.)
- Lithotomy, lith'ōt'.ō.my, a medical operation for extracting cal'culus from the bladder; lithotomic, lith'ōt'.ō.mik; lithotomist, lith'ōt'.ō.mist, one skilled in lithotomy. (Greek lithos temo, I cut [for] the stone.)
- Lith'o-tripsy, -trip'.sy, or lithotrity, lith'ōt'.rī.ty, a medical operation for crushing cal'culus in the bladder; lith'o-triptic, lith'o.trip'.tik; lith'o-trip'tist. (Greek lithos tribo, I rub [to pieces], the stone.)

- Lithotrity, λιθότριτις; lithotrite, λιθότριτις, an instrument for crushing cal'culus in the bladder.
 (Greek lithos, Latin tritus, a rubbing or grinding of the stone. This hybrid should be lithotritite.)
- Litigate, λιτίgate, to contest' in law; lit'igāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), lit'igāt-ing (Rule xix.), lit'igāt-or (Rule xxxvii.)
- Lit'igant, one engaged in a law-suit; litigation, λιτίgay'.. shūn, a law-suit, a contention.
- Litigious, λιτιδίγιος; litig'ious-ly, litigious-ness.
 Latin litigatio, litigātor, litigium, litigare (lis, gen. litis, strife).
- Lit'mus, a darkish blue pigment prepared from certain lichens [li'-kins]; lit'mus-paper, unsized paper coloured with litmus and used as a test for acids which turn it red.
 German lack-moss or lake-moss, a moss which produces archil.
- Litter, λίτερ, straw for the bed of horses, straw for cattle yards, a hand-barrow for a coffin, a brood of pigs, disorder, to strew about, to bring forth a litter of pigs; littered, λίτερδ; lit'ter-ing; lit'ter-er, one who litters a room.
 French litère (lis, Latin lectus, Greek λῆδος, a couch or bed).
- Little, λίττλ, (comp.) less, lesser, (super.) least, small, trifling; lit'tle-ness; little by little, slowly, in small quantities.
 "Little" is the supplied positive of less, least, as "good" is of better, best, and "bad" of worse, worst. The real positive is lost.
 Old Eng. lytel, comp. læssa, super. lest. "Less" is a contracted form of lesser (læssa or læsse). Lesser is only used in contrast to greater, and never in contrast to much.
- Littoral (double t), λίττοράλ, pertaining to the sea-shore.
 Literal (one t), not figurative, exact. Littoral Concrete.
 In Latin there is only one t to either of these words. "Littus" is a poetical form of litus. Our word is the French blunder littoral. Littoralis (litus, poet. littus). "Literal," Lat. litteralis (littera).
- Lituite, λίτυιτε (in Geol. -ite denotes a fossil), a shell, the last chamber of which is produced into a trumpet-like tube.
- Lituolite, λίτυολιτε, a genus of minute foraminifera having a spiral form. (Latin lituus, a trumpet.)
- Liturgy, πλου. liturgies. Litany, πλου. litanies.
 Liturgy, πλου. liturgies, λίτ.αρ.δζιζ, the general church service.
 Litany, πλου. litanies, λίτ.α.νιζ, part of the liturgy.
 Liturgic, λιτ.υρ.ζικ; liturgical, λιτ.υρ.ζικ.άλ.
 "Liturgy," Gk. leitourgia, public service (leitōs ergos, public work); Lat. liturgia, liturgicus (liturgus, a minister); Fr. liturgie.
 "Litany," Gk. ta litana, the prayers (lité, prayer); Lat. litania.
- Live, βίβ, to exist with animal or vegetable life; lives, βιβ; lived, βιβδ; liv-ing (R. xix.); liv-er, one who lives, part of the animal body, [lights, q.v.]; live-long, βιβ.λόνγ.
 The living, those now alive. A living, church preferment.
 (The following have the "i" long.)

Alive, a.live, still having life. (Old Eng. alibbe, a survivor.)

Live-ly, active, full of life; live'li-ness (R. xi.), sprightliness.

Life, plu. lives (each 1 syl.), vitality; life-like, life-less, life'less-ly, life'less-ness, life-time.

Old Eng. lif, līflic, adj., lively, līfleas, lifeless, līfeast, lifelessness, v. lif[ian], past lifode, past part. lifod; also lybb[an], lybbode, lybbod (from which verb we get our short t).

Liver, liv'er, part of the body (it secretes bile), one who lives.

Old English lifer, the liver, but lybbere, one who lives.

Livery, plu. liveries, liv'ĕ.rīz, a manservant's uniform.

The liv'ery, the whole body of liverymen in the city of London.

Liv'eryman, plu. liv'erymen, a freeman of one of the 96 guilds of London entitled to wear a livery gown.

Livery-stable, liv'ĕ.ry stā.b'l, a stable where horses are fed or kept for hire. (French livrée, v. livrer, to deliver.)

A "livery" is a dress given to a servant; "livery stables" are stables where horses are "delivered" into the charge of a keeper.

Livid, liv'ĭd, a leaden blue colour; liv'id-ly, liv'id-ness.

Lat. lividus. "Lividit" (Lat. lividitas, blueness) might be introduced.

Lixivium, lix'ĭv'ĭ.um, water impregnated with wood-ashes.

Lixivate, lix'ĭv'ĭ.ate, to impregnate water with wood-ashes; lixiv'iāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), lixiv'iāt-ing (R. xix.); lixiviation, lix'ĭv'ĭ.ā'ĭ.shŭn; lixivial, lix'ĭv'ĭ.ā'l.

Latin lixivium (lix, lye); French lixiviel, lixiviation.

Lizard, liz'ard, a reptile. Fossil lizards are called sau'rians.

French lézard; Latin lacerta. "Saurian," Greek sauros, a lizard.

Lizard Point (Cornwall), a corruption of lazars' point, being a place of retirement for lazars or lepers.

Llama (Peruvian), lah'mah, an animal of the camel kind.

Llanos (Spanish), lay'nōze, treeless plains along the Orinóco.

Lloyd's, part of the Royal Exchange (London) set apart for ship brokers. Lloyd's agents, persons in divers parts of the world who supply shipping news to the underwriters.

Lloyd's list, a daily sheet of shipping intelligence.

Originally rooms at Lloyd's coffee house were set apart for the purpose.

Lō! Low, not high. Loo, a game with cards. Lieu, lē'u, place.

"Lo," O. E. lū, behold! "Low," Old Eng. hlāw. "Lieu," Fr. lieu.

Load, lōde, a burden, to pack. Lode, a mineral vein.

(Load, a corrupt form of the verb lade, from the past tense hlōd.)

Load'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), load'-ing, load'-er.

Laden, lay'.d'n, the original past part. of the verb lade.

Loaded, regards the act; laden, the effect.

"Loaded" denotes that the act of packing is complete.

"Laden" implies that the object referred to is quite full or as heavily weighted as it ought to be.

The ship was well loaded, i.e., the act of packing it was well done.

The ship was well laden, i.e., was heavily freighted or burdened.

The gun was loaded, charged (not laden or heavily freighted).

The horse was heavily laden (burdened).

Laden with sorrow (oppressed); laden with cares.

I am loaded with presents (not oppressed or weighted), like a letter carrier or pack horse, but "am in the reception of a large number."

Old English hlād[an], past hlōd, past part. hlæden.

Loadstone, lode-stone, a magnet (this should be lode-stone); load-star, the pole-star (this should be lode-star).

(The first part of these words has no connection with "load.")

"Load-stone," the stone or ore that leads or guides (O. E. lēd[an]).

"Load-star," the star that guides (O. E. lēd[an], to lead or guide).

Loaf, plu. loaves, lōfe, lōvz (all words in -af, and all but one (gulf) in -lf, form the plu. by changing "f" or "lf" into -ves, Rule xxxviii.), a mass of bread bigger than a roll, a conical mass of white sugar.

O. Eng. hlāf, bread. Lord is hlāf-ord, the cause or earner of the bread.

Loafer, lō'fer, an idle man who obtains a living by sponging on others; loaf'-ing, living by sponging on others.

Spanish gallífo, a lazy indolent life, gallofear y gallofar, to saunter about and live on alms; German laufer, a running footman.

Loam, lōme, sandy clay. Loom, a weaving machine.

Loam-y, lō'my (not loo'my), containing loam, like loam.

"Loam," Old English lām or laam. "Loom," so called from Sir Thomas Loom, who set up the first at Derby for weaving raw silk.

Loan, lōne, something lent. Lōne, desolate, lonely.

"Loan," Old Eng. lān, v. lān[an], to lead. "Lone," alone [all one].

Loath (to rhyme with both), reluctant. Loathe (to rhyme with clothe); to detest; loath-some, lōrk'-sūm (-some, full of [what] disgusts); loath'some-ness, loath'some-ly.

Loathe, to detest; loathed (1 syl.), loath'-ing, loath'-er.

Old Eng. lāth, enmity, hateful; v. lāth[ian], past lāthode, p. p. lāthod.

Lōb, to droop; lobbed, lōbd; lobb'-ing (R. i.) (Welsh llob.)

Lobby, plu. lobbies (Rule xlv.), lōb'biz, an antechamber.

German laube, a shed, an arbour, with -y diminutive.

Lōbe (1 syl.), the lap or soft part of the human ear, a division of the lungs, liver, &c., a division of a leaf, seed, &c.; lobed (1 syl.), having lobes; lobate (2 syl.), having lobes; lobule, lō.būle, a little lobe (-ule, Lat. dim.); lobular.

French lobe; Latin lobus; Greek lōbōs, same meanings.

Lobelia, lō.bee'.lē.ah (should be lō.bēl'.ī.ah), a genus of plants.

Lobeliaceæ, lō.bee'.lī.ă'.sē.ē, the "order" of the above.

(In Botany the termination -aceæ denotes an order.)

So called from Matthias de Lobel, Flemish botanist (1538-1610).

Loblolly, lŏb.lŏl'.ly, gruel and other spoon-food; loblolly-boy.

Welsh llob, a dolt; Archaic loll, a spoilt child, with -y dim., "a stupid little spoilt child." When seamen apply the word to spoon-food, they mean food only fit for a loblolly. (See Lollypop.)

Lobster, lŏb'.ster, (male) cock-lobster, (fem.) hen-lobster, a crustacean (Rule lxii., termination -ster).

Old Eng. loppestre or lopustre; Lat. locusta, a locust or lobster.

Local, lŏ'.kāl, limited to a locality; lo'cal-ly.

Locality, plu. localities, lŏ'.kāl' .i.tiz, a circumscribed spot.

Localise (R. xxxi.), lŏ'.kāl.ize, to limit to a circumscribed spot; localised, lŏ'.kāl.izd; lo'calis-ing, lo'calis-er.

Localisation, lŏ'.kāl'.zay'' .shŭn; locable, lŏ'.kă.b'l.

Locate, lŏ.kate', to establish in a special place or position; locat'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), locat'-ing (Rule xix.).

Location, lŏ.kay'.shŭn, situation, state of being located.

Latin locālis, locābilis, locātio, locāre, supine locātum, to place (locus, a place); French local, location (a law term).

Loch, lŏk, a bay, an arm of the sea. Lock, an instrument.

(In Scotch the "ch" is guttural.)

"Loch," Gaelic loch; Welsh loc, a dam. "Lock," Old English loc.

Lochaber-axe, lŏk kay'.ber ax, a pole with an axe-head.

So called from Locha'ber, in Scotland, where it was first made.

-lŏck (native suffix), nouns, gift, state: wed-lock.

-lŏck (native suffix -leac, a herb), plants: as hem-lock.

-lŏck (native suffix -loce), nouns, a tuft of hair: fet-lock.

Lock, a tuft of hair, a machine for making [doors] fast, the trigger, &c., of a gun, the part of a canal confined by gates, to lock; locked, lŏkt; lock'-ing; lock'-age, toll paid for passing through a lock (-age Latin, toll, service); lock'-er, a cupboard or box which may be locked; lock'-et, a little tuft of hair. Lock-jaw, rigidity of the lower jaw. Lock-smith, a maker of locks. A lock-up, a temporary prison. Dead-lock, a complete stoppage.

Old English loc [of a door], loca, a lock or prison; locc [of hair], v. loc'an, past lode, past part. loccn, to lock, to fasten.

(It is a pity these distinctions have been abolished.)

Locomotion, lŏ'.ko.mŏ'.shŭn, the act or power of moving from place to place; locomotive, lŏ'.ko.mŏ'.tiv, a steam-engine to draw railway carriages; locomotivity, lŏ'.ko.mo.tiv'' .i.ty.

Fr. locomotion, locomotif; Lat. locus mōtio, motion [from] a place.

Locust, lŏ'.kŭst, a winged insect. (Latin locusta.)

Lode, a mineral vein. Load, lode, a burden. Lode-stone and lode-star (better than loadstone, loadstar).

Old English lād, a lode. Lode-stone, lode-star, lād[an], to guide.

Lodge, the cottage of a park gate-keeper, to deposit for safe keeping, to abide in hired rooms; lodged (1 syl.), lodg'-ing (Rule xix.); lodg'-er, one who lives in hired rooms.

Lodg'-ment (words in -dge and -ue drop the -e when -ment is added. Those in -dge are abridg'-ment, acknowledg'-ment, judg'-ment, and lodg'-ment, Rule xviii.)

A lodg'-ing, hired apartments, temporary abode.

A lodg'-ing-house, a house let off in apartments for lodgers.

To lodge a complaint against [one], to inform against.

Old Eng. logtlan, to lodge, to deposit, past logode, past part. logod.

Loft, a floor over a stable; cock-loft, a loft over a loft; hay-loft, a loft where hay is stored; rood-loft, a gallery in churches to hold the rood or representation of the crucified Saviour.

Lofty, lɔf'ty, tall; loft'i-ness (Rule xi.), loft'i-ly.

Dan. loft; Ang.-Sax. lyftédor, an aerial dwelling, lyten, lofty.

Lög, a piece of cleft wood for fires, a clog fastened to the foot of a horse, a registry used on board-ship, &c.

Lög-book, the book for registering a ship's rate, &c.

Lög-line, a line used at sea for measuring the rate at which a ship is moving; log-house, a house constructed of logs.

Logwood, a heavy red wood employed in dyeing, &c.

Water-logged, -lɔgd, rendered motionless by leakage.

Log-rolling, to aid in collecting logs, to aid in any-way.

Old English clot, a log; Welsh cloigen, anything tied to another; Dutch log, heavy.

Logan-stones, lɔ'gǎn stɔnz (corruption of logging-stones), weather-worn blocks of stone, so finely balanced that a very slight force will make them rock; rocking-stones.

Log (Cornwall) means to oscillate (Halliwel).

Logarithm, lɔg'ä.rithm, one of the exponents of a series of powers and roots; logarithmic, lɔg'ä.rith'nik; logarithmical, lɔg'ä.rith'nikäl; logarith'mical-ly.

Logarithms, lɔg'ä.rithmz, the logarithmic system.

Fr. logarithme, logarithmique; Gk. logos arithmos, proportion number.

Lög'-ger-head, -hɛd, a dunce; at logger-heads, in dispute; to go to logger-heads, to contend (log and head).

Logic, lɔdg'ik, the science of ratiocination; logical, lɔdg'ikäl; log'ical-ly; logician, lɔ.djish'än, one skilled in logic.

French logique; Latin lógica, lógicālis; Greek lógiké [techné].

(All the sciences except five with a similar termination are plural. The five exceptions are from French words. They are arithmetic (arithmétique), logio (logique), magic (magique), music (musique), rhetoric (rhétorique). The plural is the better form.)

Lög'o- (Greek prefix), nouns, a word. (Greek lōgōs, a word.)

Logography, lo.gōg'.rǎ.fy, a method of printing in which a type represents a word instead of a letter: as  hand, † dagger, * star, o circle, &c.

Logographic, lōg'.o.grǎf''ǎk; logographical, lōg'.o.grǎf''ǎ.kāl; logograph'ical-ly.

(Greek logos grapho, I write a [whole] word [at once].)

Logo-griph, lōg'.o.grǐf, a word puzzle, the word selected (by different arrangements of the letters, or by certain omissions) form other words: thus P.L.A.T.E will form

(1) petal, lapet;

(2) pate, peat, peal, late, leat, leap, teal, tale, tape;

(3) ate, eat, let, lap, ape; (4) at, la! &c.

Logogriphic, lōg'.o.grǐf''ǎk, of the nature of a logogriph; logogriphical, lōg'.o.grǐf''ǎ.kāl; logogriph'ical-ly.

(Greek lōgōs griphōs, a word puzzle.)

Logomachy, lo.gōm'.ǎ.ky, contentions about words, a war of words. (Greek lōgōs machē, a word battle.)

Lōg'wood, a heavy red wood used in dyeing. The colouring principle is called hæ'matine (3 syl.), from haima, blood.

Loin (1 syl., rhymes with coin), a joint of meat: as a loin of mutton. The loins, part of the animal body.

French longe, pronounced lonz; Latin lumbus.

Loinette (no such word). See Lorgnette.

Loiter, loy'ter, to dawdle; loitered, loy'terd; loi'ter-ing, loi'ter-ing-ly; loi'ter-er. (German lotter-bett, lazy-bed.)

Lōll (Rule v.), to hang and lounge listlessly about, to hang out loosely, as a dog's tongue; lōlled (1 syl.), loll-ing.

Lollop, lōl'.lōp, an idle sloven, to lounge and loll about; lol'lop-ed, lol'lop-ing, lol'lop-er.

Lollard, lōl'.lārd, one of the early reformers in Germany. The term was applied in England to the followers of Wickliffe. An older form is loller; lollardism, lōl'.lar.dīzm.

Lollipop, lōl'.li.pōp, a sweetmeat made of treacle.

Lollie, archaic, a little spoilt child, and "pop" (Italian poppare, to suck), our pap, food eaten by sucking it, "food for little children to be sucked," or lollie pup, the child's playthings. (Fr. poupée.)

Londoner, lūn'.dūn.er, a native or inhabitant of London; Lon'don-ism, cockneyism; London clay, that of the London basin. (Ang.-Sax. forms Londen, Lunden, -burh.)

Lōne (1 syl.), solitary. Loan, lōne, something lent. Lorn, forsaken. Lōne-ly, lōne'li-ness; lōne'-some, -sūm (-some, "full of," "exceedingly"); lōne'sōme-ly, lōne'sōme-ness.

"Lone" for alone (all-one). "Loan," O. E. lān. "Lorn," leóran.

- Lǒng, (comp.) long'-er, (super.) long'-est, lǒng'ger, lǒng'gest, extensive in regard to time, quantity, or extent, to crave.
- Long, verb (always followed by for or after), to desire earnestly; longed (1 syl.), long'-ing; long'-er (not long'ger, like the comp. adj.), one who longs. Lǒng'-ish (-ish added to adj., is dim., added to nouns it means "like," R. lxvii.). Long ago; far back in time; long-boat, -bōte, the longest boat belonging to a war-ship; long-bow, a bow the height of a man; To draw the long-bow, greatly to exaggerate one's own prowess or achievements.
- Long dozen or bakers' dozen, thirteen for twelve.
- Long hundred, -hūn'.drēd, six score, or 120 for 100.
- Long-headed, -hēd'.ēd, sagacious, foreseeing.
- Long-lived, -lived, living for a long time.
- Live-long [day], liv-lǒng, the entire [day].
- Long-prim'er, a type two sizes larger than that of this line.
- Long-rānge (2 syl.), the greatest range of a gun or cannon.
- Long-shanks, having long legs, sobriquet of Edward I.
- Long-sighted, -site'.ed, able to see to a great distance, wise to foresee events or calculate prospects.
- Long-stop (in cricket), the scout behind the wicket-keeper.
- Long-spun, tedious; long-suf'fering, patient.
- Long-Tom, a cradle for washing out gold "at the diggings."
- Long-tongued, -tūngd, a blab, one who talks too much.
- Long Vacation, -va.cay'.shūn (in the law-courts), from August 10th to the end of October. (In Cambridge University) from the last week of June to the beginning of October. (In Oxford University), about ten days later.
- Long-wise (not long-ways), in the direction of its length.
- Long-winded, prosy and tedious.
- Long-yarn, a sailor's exaggerated tale of adventures; to draw a long yarn, to tell a very exaggerated tale.
- In the long run, in the final result.
- The long and short of [it], in brief, the result without details.
- Length, length'-y, length'i-ness (Rule xi.), length'i-ly; length-wise, in the direction of the length.
- Length'en, to increase the length; lengthened (2 syl.), &c.
- "Long" is both adjective and adverb. We have not retained the adverbial form long-ly (langlice), although we still use the word short-ly (applied to time). We have also the adverbs wide-ly, broad-ly, deep-ly, shallow-ly, lateral-ly, superficial-ly, &c.
- Old English lang or long, (comp.) lengra, (super.) lengest, (adj.), but (comp.) leng, (super.) lengst (adv.); langlice, for a long time; v. lang[ian], (p.) langode, (p. p.) langod, to lengthen or long-for.
- Lang-līfe*, long-lived; langnys (longness), that is, length.
- ("Longsome" [langsum], long-lasting, might be re-introduced.)

Longevity, lŏn.djĕv'x.ty, great length of life; longeval, lŏn.djĕe'vål. (Latin longævitas, longævus, longus ævum.)

Longitude, lŏn'djĭ.tũde. Latitude, lăt'x.tũde.

Longitude, the distance east or west from a given point.

Our point is a line drawn from pole to pole through the spot on which the observatory of Greenwich stands, from this meridian longitude extends 180 deg. east and west.

Latitude, the distance from the equator towards either pole. It extends 90 deg. north and 90 deg. south.

Longitudinal, lŏn'djĭ.tũ'di.nål; longitudinal-ly.

Longitude from the starting point, in the place sailed to.

Meridians of longitude, lines drawn from pole to pole at right angles to the equator (number optional).

Parallels of latitude, lines drawn parallel to the equator, across a map or round a globe (number optional).

Latin longitudo, lăttitudo, longitudinālis, lăttitudinālis (from longus, long, and lătus, broad). The ancient Romans supposed the earth to be a large plain bounded on the west by the Atlantic, and extending thence to an indefinite length in an eastern direction; similarly the southern boundary was the tropic of Cancer, whence it stretched indefinitely in a northern direction.

Loo, a game at cards. Lieu, lĕ'u, place; in lieu of, instead of.

Looed, lood, fined for not having won a single trick; loo-table, a round table on a pedestal, more convenient for a round game like loo than an ordinary card-table.

Looby, plu. loobies (R. xlv.), loo'bĭz, a half-witted creature; loo'bi-ly (R. xi.), stupidly. (Welsh llabi, a looby.)

Look (short, not loo'k), a glance, a sight, to take a look; looked (1 syl.), look'-ing, look'-er, one who looks.

A looker-on, plu. lookers-on, one who looks on a transaction.

To look about one, to be vigilant. To look for, to expect.

To look after, to watch over. To look blank, to show in the face signs of great disappointment.

To look down on, to treat with contempt.

To look into, to examine. To look up, to brighten.

To look up to, to respect, to confide in.

Look'-ing-glass, a mirror; look-out, a watch-tower.

(The oo before -k is shorter than when a labial or liquid follows: thus book (not boo'k), brook, cook, crook, hook, look, nook, rook, shook, took; but fool (long), room, noon, poor, loop, &c.)

When the adverb is to follow "look," and when the adjective—

If the word qualifies the verb it must be an adverb, but if it represents a result, and not the way of producing that result, an adj.

EXAMPLES—

The queen looked majestic at the drawing-room (not majestically), the result was a "majestic appearance."

EXAMPLES (continued)—

You look scornfully (i.e., you look in a scornful manner).

You look superb (i.e., your appearance is superb).

She looks sadly (here sadly is an adj. = unwell).

She looks sad (i.e., distressed).

The moon looks bright (not brightly. It is the result).

She looked coldly on (in a cold manner). She looked cold.

She looked haughtily (i.e., in a haughty manner).

She looked haughty (i.e., she appeared to be haughty).

Old Eng. lōc[ian], past lōcode, past part. lōcod, lōca nū, look now.

Loom, loo'm, a weaver's work-frame. Loam, lōme, clayey mould.

Hand-loom, a loom worked by the hand;

Power-loom, a loom worked by steam;

Jacquard-loom, zhāk'kard-, a loom for weaving figured goods, invented by M. Jacquard, of Lyons.

"Loom," so named from Sir Thomas Loom, who introduced the first from Flanders, and set it up in Derby, for weaving raw silk.

Loom, to show imperfectly, as through fog or at a great distance; loomed, loomd; loom'-ing. (O. Eng. leōm[an].)

(Before labials and liquids -oo- is longer than when k, d, or t follows: thus "hook" (not hoo'k), "hood" (not hoo'd), "foot" (not foo't), but schoo'l, loo'm, noo'n, poor, loo'p, &c., have -oo- lengthened.)

Loon, loo'n, a good-for-nothing fellow. (Old Eng. lun, needy.)

Loop, loo'p, a noose, to make a loop, to fasten with a loop; looped (1 syl.), loop'-ing; loop-line, a connecting line on a railway; loop'-ing, running on together by semifusion.

To loop along, to walk with large strides.

Loop-hole, a peep-hole, a secret means of escape.

Gaelic lùb, lùba, a thong or loop; Irish lùbam, to fold.

"Loop" (to run ore), is the Dutch loopen, to run.

Loose, loo'ce, slack. Lose, loo'ze, to suffer loss. Lūce, a pike.

Loose, loo'ce, to unfasten; loosed, loo'cd; loos-ing (R. xix.), loo'ce-ing; loos-er, loo'ce-er; loose-ly, loose-ness.

Loose-cash, small change of which no strict reckoning is kept.

Loosen, loo's'n, to unfasten; loosened, loo's'nd; loosen-ing, loo'ce-ning; loosen-er, loo'ce-ner.

To break loose, to escape from confinement.

To let loose, to set free. To play fast and loose, to act contradictorily for personal advantage.

Old English lys[an] or leos[an], past lyste, past part. lyst.

Loot, loo't, plunder, to ransack for plunder. Lūte, a mus. inst.

Loot'-ed (R. xxxvi.), loot'-ing; loot'-y, a plunderer (E. Ind.)

Lōp, hanging down, heavier on one side than the other, to prune, to cut off; lopped, lōpt; lopp'-ing (R. i.), lopp-er.

Lop-sided, having one side heavier than the other.

Lop-eared, having hanging ears.

Welsh llab, a stroke; llabio, to slap. "Lop" (sided), Lat. labo, to totter.

Loquacious (R. lxvi.), lo.kwā'.shūs, talkative; loqua'cious-ness; loquacity, lo.kwās'.i.ty; loquacious-ly, lo.kwā'.shūs.ly.

Latin loquacitas (loquar, gen. loquacis); French loquacité.

Lord, fem. lady, plu. ladies, lay'.dāz; landlord, landlady, the master and mistress of an hotel, the owner of property let to a tenant; to lord it over [one], to domineer: lord-ed, lord-ing, lord-ly, lord'li-ness (Rule xi.), lord-like.

Lord-ling, a little lord (-ling, dim.); lord-ship, the jurisdiction or territory of a lord, a manor (-ship, office, &c.)

My lord, your lordship, terms of respect in addressing a lord.

Lord, the supreme being; the Lord's day, Sunday.

The Lord's Supper, the eucharist. Our Lord, Jesus Christ.

Lord Advocate, plu. Lord Advocates (not lords...).

Lord High Chancellor, plu. Lord High Chancellors.

Lord Lieutenant, -lēv.tēn'.ant, plu. Lords Lieutenants.

Lord Justice, plu. Lords Justices. Lord Marcher, plu. Lords Marchers.

(These Gallicisms ought to be abolished. They are just as silly as "Lords Mayors" would be.)

Lord Mayor, plu. Lord Mayors.

Lord Spiritual, Lord Temporal, plu. Lords...

House of Lords, the legislative assembly of the peers.

Old English hlāf-ord, loaf-earner; hlāford-scipe, lordship.

Lōro (1 syl.), learning. Law, a statute. Lower, low'.er, more low.

"Lore," O. E. lōr. "Law," O. E. lag or lah. "Low," O. E. lūh, a pit.

Lorgnette (Fr.), lor'n.yet'. Lunette, loo.net', a flat watch-glass.

Lorgnette, an opera-glass, a double eye-glass which does not hold on by gripping the nose like a pince-nez.

French lorgner, to eye, to ogle. In French, lorgnette is a telescopic opera-glass, lorgnon or lunette a single eye-glass, jumelles an opera-glass not telescopic.

Loricatē (one r), lō'rri.kate, to cover with mail armour; loricāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), loricāt-ing (R. xix.), lorica'tion.

Latin loricatio, loricare, supine loricatum (lorica, a coat of mail).

Lose, loo'ze, to suffer loss. Loose, loo'ce, free. Lūce, a pike.

Lose, loo'ze, (past) lost, (past part.) lost (rhymes with frost); loser, loo'zer, one who suffers loss. Looser, loo'ser, more slack. Lūss, privation; at a loss, perplexed, in perplexity.

The terminations -ose, -ost, are very irregular in sound.

(1) "-ose" = ōze: chose, close, v. glose, hose, nose, -pose (except purpose), prose, rose, those.

(2) "-ose" = oce: close (n.), dose, globose, jocose, morose, rugose, verbose.

(3) "-ose" = ooz: lose, whose. (4) = us: purpose.

(1) "-ost" = ōst: ghost, host, most, post.

(2) "-ost" = ōst: cost, frost, lost, tost. (3) = ust: dost.

Old English los[ian], past losode, past part. losod, los, loss.

- Lôt, fate, portion, to sort in lots; lott'-ed (R. xxxvi.), lott'-ing.
 To cast lots, to determine by the throw of a die.
- To draw lots, to determine by drawing a slip of paper from a bag, &c. To pay scot and lot, to pay rates and taxes.
- Lottery, plu. lotteries, lôt.tê.rîz, a distribution of money or goods by lots, the goods or money to be so distributed.
 Old Eng. hlot, v. hleot[an], to cast lots; (past) hleot, (p. p.) hleoten.
 "Scot," Old Eng. scot, payment; scot-freeh, scot-free, payment-free.
- Lotion, lô.shûn, embrocation. (Fr. lotion; Lat. lôtio, lâvo.)
- Loud, lôwd (to rhyme with proud), noisy; (comp.) loud'-er, (super.) loud'-est, loud'-ly, loud'-ness.
 Old English hlud, hludnes, loudness.
- Lough, lôk, a loch, an arm of the sea. (Irish form of loch.)
- Louis d'or, loo'.ê.dôr, a gold coin of the French monarchy, about equal to a sovereign. (First struck by Louis XIII.)
- Lounge (1 syl.), to loiter about. Lunge, to thrust at. Lung (q.v.)
- Lounged (1 syl.), lounge'-ing (Rule xix.), lounge'-er.
 French longis (se dit d'un homme qui est extrêmement lent à tout ce qu'il fait), a lounge. Fleming et Tibbins.
 "Lunge," Fr. allonger, to thrust in fencing (to lengthen out the arm).
- Lour, lôw'r (to rhyme with sour), to look cloudy, to look gloomy.
- Lower, lôw.er (to rhyme with mower), more low.
- Loured, lôw'rd; lour-ing, lôw'r-ing; lour'ing-ly.
 Lour is not a corruption of lower, but of the Anglo-Saxon heow, shade.
- Louse, plu. lice, lôwce, lice. So mouse, plu. mice. Lousy, lôw'.zy ("low" to rhyme with now); lou'si-ness (Rule xi.)
 Old English lûs, plu. lûs; so mûs, plu. mûs.
- Lout (to rhyme with out), a bumpkin, a losel. Loot, plunder.
- Lout'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); lout'ish-ness, lout'ish-ly.
 "Lout," Dutch loete, a rustic. "Loot," an East Indian word.
- Louvre (better louver), lou' ver, a window unglazed, but having cross-bars, like the windows of church towers; brewing-rooms, drying-rooms, and so on; louver-boards, the cross-bars of a louver-window; louver-tower, a wooden belfry, fitted all round with louver-boards.
 It is a great blunder to suppose that the Louvre of Paris has any connection with the word louver, and hence the spelling of the two words should be kept distinct. The louvre is a corruption of luparia (Latin), "a haunt for wolves," and so is it called in old title-deeds; but louver-window is a corruption of the French l'ouvert [window], "the open window."
- Love, lûv, affection, to be fond of; loved, lûvd; lov-ing (Rule xix.), lûv'ing; lov'ing-ly, lov'ing-ness, lov'ing-kindness; lov-er, lûv'er; lov-able, lûv'.a.bl'; love-less, lûv'.less;

love-ly, lŭv'.ly, (comp.) loveli-er, lŭv'.li.er, (super.) love'-li-est; love'ly (adv.) (rarely loveli-ly (R. xi.), lŭv'.li.ly); loveli-ness, lŭv'.li.ness.

Love-apple, lŭv'.ap.p'l, the toma'to; love'-charm.

Love'-child, a euphemism for a child born before wedlock.

Love-fa'vour; love-feast, lŭv'.feest, a religious repast held by Wesleyan Methodists.

Love-knot, lŭv'.nŏt, a knotted bow symbolical of mutual affection. Love'letter. Love'-lock, a curl over the forehead common in the reign of Elizabeth and James I. Love'-lorn, forsaken by one's lover; love'-ma'king, courtship; love'-sick, love-to'ken.

Love-lies-a-bleeding, the pendulous amaranth.

The termination -ove is very irregular, and has three distinct sounds:

(1.) "-ove" = ōve: clove, cove, drove, grove, hove, rove, stove, strove, throve, wove.

(2.) "-ove" = uve: dove, glove, love, shove.

(3.) "-ove" = oove: move, prove, and their compounds.

Old English luf, lufelice, lovingly; lufiend, a lover; luflic, lovely.

luflice, adv.; luf-tacen; v. luf [ian], past lufode, past part. lufod.

(We might re-introduce the adj. "lovesome" [lufsum].)

Lōw (to rhyme with grow). Lō! behold.

Low, not high, mean, to bellow like a cow.

Low, (comp.) low'-er, (super.) low'-est; lower-most.

Lōw'-er, more low, to sink. Lour, lŭw'r, to look cloudy; lowered, lŭw'.erd; low'er-ing.

Lōw-ly (adj.), humble, meek; (comp.) low'li-er, (super.) low'li-est, low'li-ness (Rule xi.), lōw'-ness; low-life, mean-condition; low minded, mean spirited, humble-minded; low-spirited, depressed.

Lowlands, districts not hilly, opposed to Highlands (Scotland); lowland-er, an inhabitant of the lowlands.

Low-water, the lowest point of the tide at ebb;

Low-water mark, the depth of the tide at low-water.

Low-pressure engine, a condensing steam-engine.

Low-Sunday, the Sunday next after Easter, so called because it is at "the bottom" of easter, which it closes.

Low-bell, night-fowling (the birds are first roused by the tinkling of a bell and then dazed by a low or flame.

"Low-bell," Scotch lowe, glare: as "a lowe of fyre," to "rayse a great lowe" [flame]; Welsh llug, a glare, llugain, teeming with light, lugas, daybreak.

"Low" (depressed), Old English loh, a deep pit.

Low affixed to names of places is the Anglo-Saxon hlæw, a heap, a barrow, a small hill, rising ground: as Bed-low, Lud-low, &c.

Loyalty, Obedience, Royalty.

Loy'alty, voluntary attachment to a sovereign, devotion of a wife, fidelity to one's word, &c.

Latin lego, to choose (obedience from choice), "laws" are rules freely chosen by a governing body for the general good.

Obedience, conformity to a command, voluntary or not.

Latin ob audio, doing something because "I hear" the order.

Royalty is quite another word, and means the state or office of a sovereign. (French roi, a king; Latin rex.)

French loyal, loyauté (lot, law); Italian leale, lealtà. These words have departed far from the Latin lēgālis, lēgālitas (lex, law).

Lōz'enge, diamond-shaped, a lozenge-shaped sweetmeat; lōz'enged (2 syl.), loz'engy. (French losange or lozange.)

Lüb'ber, a clumsy fellow; a land-lubber, a sailor's word of contempt for a landsman; lüb'ber-ly, awkward.

Lubber's hole, between the head of a lower-mast and the edge of the top-mast, through which "lubbers creep" instead of trusting themselves up the futtock shrouds.

Lubber's point, the mark on the inside of the compass-case indicating the direction of the ship's head. So called because only a "lubber" would regard it in steering.

Welsh llabi, a looby; llabies, a strapping wench; llabwst, gawky.

Lubricate, lū'.brī.kate, to make slippery with oil so as to diminish friction; lu'bricāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), lu'bricāt-ing (R. xix.), lu'bricāt-or (R. xxxvii.); lubrication, lū'.brī.kay''shūn; lubricity, lū'.brīs'.ī.ty, slipperiness.

Latin lubricitas, lubricāre, supine lubricātum (lubricus, slippery).

Lūce (1 syl.), a full-grown pike. Loose, loo'ce, slack. Lose, loo'ze.

"Luce," Lat. lucius, a pike. "Loose," O.E. leas. "Lose," O.E. los[ian].

Lū'cent, shining. (Lat. lūcens, gen. lūcentis (lux, light), shining.)

Lucerne, lū'.sern, a fodder for cattle. (French luzerne.)

Fr. Lucerne, in Switzerland, the south of which is famous for its pasture.

Lucid, lū'.sīd, clear, distinct; lu'cid-ly, lu'cid-ness, lucid'ity.

Latin lūcidus, lūciditas, lūcidāre, to make bright (lux, light).

Lucifer, lū'.sī.fer, a friction-match, the morning-star, Satan.

Latin lūcifer (lux fero, I bring the light).

Lūck, a happy casualty; luck'y, fortunate; luck'i-ly (Rule xi.); luck-less, unlucky; luck-less-ly, luck-less-ness.

German gluck, glücklicher weise, luckily, unglücklich.

Lucrative, lū'.krā.tīv, profitable; lu'crative-ly.

Latin lucratus (lucrum, profit, v. lucrari, to gain profit).

Lucubration, lū'.kū.bray''shūn. Lubrication, lū'.brī.kay''shūn.

Lucubra'tion, study at night time by lamp-light;

Lubrica'tion, moistening of machinery to decrease friction.

Lucubratory, lū'.ku.bra.t'ry, composed by lamp-light ;

Lubricatory, lū'.bri.ka.t'ry, slippery.

Latin lūcubrātio, lūcubrātōrius, lūcubrāre (lūcubrum, a torch, but lubricitas, lubricāre, supine lubricātum (lubricus, slippery).

Ludicrous, lū'.dī.krūs, laughable ; lu'dicrous-ly, lu'dicrous-ness.

Latin ludicrus [lūdus, sport], laughable.

Lues, loo'.eze, a cankerous disease. (Latin lues, the plague.)

Luff (R. v.), to put the helm so as to bring the ship up nearer to the wind ; luffed (1 syl.), luff-ing.

Luff-tackle, -lūck''l, a "purchase" composed of a double and single block. Luff-upon-luff, a luff tackle upon the fall of another luff tackle.

Spring-a-luff ! Keep your luff ! orders to luff.

Danish luffe ; French lof, venir au lof, aulofée, v. lofer.

Lūg, the ear, to haul with difficulty ; lugged, lūgd ; lugg-ing (R. i.) ; lugg'-er, one who lugs, a vessel carrying lug-sails.

Lug sail, a sail bent to a "yard" hung obliquely to the mast,

Lug'gage, the trunks, &c., of a passenger, goods packed for conveyance by rail, &c. (O. E. a-lūc[an], to haul out.)

Lugubrious, lu.gū'.brī.ūs, doleful ; lugu'brious-ly.

Latin lūgūbris (lūgūbrum or lūgūbra, a lamentation).

Luke'-warm (not loo'-warm, "warm" to rhyme with storm), tepid ; luke'-warm-ly, luke'-warm-ness.

German laulich, warm (lau, tepid) ; Danish lunken, tepid.

Lūll (Rule v.), a cessation, an abatement, to abate, to quiet ; lulled, lūld ; lull-ing.

Lullaby, plū. lullabies, lūl'.lū.bī, plu. lūl'.la.bīze, a song to quiet infants and soothe them to sleep.

"Lull," German lullen ; Danish lulle.

"Lullaby," Gr. lūleo, Lat. lullāre (lullus, a lullaby). The "by" is common to many languages, as Gr. pauó, to soothe, Lat. paco, Russian bayu. The word means "to talk or sing in order to soothe."

Lumbago, plū. lumbagoes (Rule xlii.), lūm.bay'.goze, pain of the loins ; lumbaginous, lūm.bāgd'.ī.nūs, adj.

Lūm'bar, pertaining to the loins. Lum'ber, rubbish.

Lumbar-regions, -rē'.jūnz, the lower part of the trunk.

Latin lumbāgo (lumbus, the loins) ; French lumbago, lumbaire.

Lūm'ber, rubbish, bulky things which are not of use, to encumber with heavy articles. Lūm'bar, pertaining to the loins ; lumbered, lūm'.berd ; lūm'ber-ing ; lūm'ber-er, one who lumbers, one who deals in lumber, one who fells and shapes timber, a backwoodsman ; lumber-dealer or lumber-broker ; lumber-room, for boxes, &c.

Lumbard, a pawnbroker's shop. The first pawnbrokers were Lombards, and the places where the pawns were kept were called "lumber-rooms." Thus Lady Murray writes : "They put all the little plate they had in the lumber, which is pawning it."....

Luminary, plu. luminaries, lū'.mī.nā.rīz, a thing that gives light, a person who enlightens others; luminous, lū'.mī.nūs; lu'minous-ly, lu'minous-ness; luminosity, lū.mī.nōs'ī.ty.

Lumination, lū'.mī.nay''shun, or Illumination, q.v.

Luminiferous, lū'.mī.nīf''ē.rūs, light-producing.

Latin lūminatio, lūmīneus, lūmīnōsus, lūmīnāre (lumen, light).

Lump, a mass, to throw into a heap, to strike; lumped, lūmpt; lump'-ing, lump'ing-ly; lump'-ish, heavy (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); lump'ish-ly, lump'ish-ness; lump'y, lump'i-ness (Rule xi.)

Lump'ers, labourers employed by merchant-ships for loading and unloading cargoes.

Lump'en, a long fish of a greenish colour.

Lumps, a kind of brick, a mass of loaf-sugar larger than a "loaf" which is conical, or a "titler" which is flat at top.

Lump-sugar, loaf-sugar; lump-fish, the "sea-owl."

German klump, der lump, the lump-fish, plump, lumpish, lumpen-zucker, lump-sugar, klumpig, lumpy.

Lūnacy, madness supposed by the Romans to increase and decrease as the moon waxes or wanes; lunatic, lū'.na.tīk, one affected with lunacy; lu'natic asylum, -a.sj' lum.

Lu'nar, pertaining to the moon; lu'nary, influenced by the moon; sublunary, sub'.lu.nā.ry, terrestrial.

Lunarian, lū.nair'ri.an, an "inhabitant" of the moon.

Lunate, lū'.nate, formed like a half-moon; lunat-ed, lu.nate'.ed, crescent-shaped; lunation, lū.nay'.shūn, one revolution of the moon, a lunar month.

Lunar month, one day thirteen hours more than four weeks.

Lunar caustic, nitrate of silver (Latin luna, the moon), the name given to silver by the old alchemists.

Lat. lūnāris, lūnātīcus, lūnatio, lūnātus, v. lūnāre (lūna, the moon).

Lunch or luncheon, lūn'shūn, a light repast between breakfast and dinner; to lunch, to eat luncheon; lunched, lunch'-ing. (Welsh llunc, a gulp, llyncu, to swallow at a gulp.)

Frequently said to be derived from the Spanish lonce (the eleven o'clock repast), but as Mr. Skeat says (in Notes and Queries) why should we speak Spanish in such an everyday matter?

Lunette, lū.nēt, a flattened watch glass. Lorgnette, lor'n'yēt.

French lunette, an eye-glass, a watch-glass. "Lorgnette," v. lorgner, to ogle. (In French a double-eyed opera-glass which does not hold on by gripping the nose is jumelle, if it grips the nose a pince-nez; a telescopic opera-glass is lorgnette; a single eye-glass is lorgnon.)

Lūng, one of the lungs. Lunge (1 syl.), to thrust at in fencing. Lounge, q.v. In common parlance we always say The lungs, except when we want to particularise, in which case we add one, or specify which one: as one lung is affected, the right lung is sound; the left lung is gone.

Lung-wort, black hellebore, the leaves of which are spotted like tubercular lungs.

Old English lunge, the lungs; lungwȳrt, lungwort.

Lunge (1 syl.), to thrust out in fencing. Lung, one of the lungs, v.s.; lunged (1 syl.), lung-ing (Rule xix.), lunge'-ing; lung-er, lunge'-er.

French allonger, to lengthen [the arm], to make a thrust.

Lupercal, lu'per.kāl (not lu.per'.kāl), a Roman feast day in honour of Pan, February 15th. (Latin lūpercālia.)

So called from lupercal, a cave at the foot of mount Palatine, where Romulus and Remus were said to have been suckled by the wolf, but really from Lupercus, an Italian deity, which warded the sheep from wolves.

Lupine, lu'pīn, a flowering plant producing a kind of pulse.

Latin lupinus, the lupin; French lupin.

Lurch, a rolling on one side, as a ship in a storm, a game won by a player before his adversary has scored a point.

To leave in the lurch, to leave in a helpless condition without one "point", in your favour.

To lurch, to roll on one side (as a ship); lurched (1 syl.), lurch-ing.

Lurcher (a corruption of lurker), one who lies in wait, and hence a poacher's dog which "lurches" for game.

"Lurch" (to roll over), a corruption of the Welsh lluch, a throw; v. lluchlaw, to fling over.

"Lurch" (to lie in wait), Welsh llerc, v. llercian, to loiter about.

Lure, lūr, an enticement, to entice; lured (1 syl.), lur-ing (Rule xix.), lūr-ing; lur-er, lūr'-er; allure-ment.

French leurre, a lure; v. leurrer; Latin lorum, a cord [for a snare].

Lūrid, gloomy, overclouded. (Latin lūridus, lūrōr, paleness.)

Lūrک, lurked (1 syl.), lurk-ing, lurk'-er, lurk-ing-place.

Welsh llerc, v. llercian, to skulk, to loiter, to lie in wait.

Luscious, lūsh'.ūs, sickly sweet; luscious-ness, luscious-ly.

Ital. lussuriare, to be over fertile; lusso, luxury; lussuria, sensuality.

Lusiad, lu'si.ād, the Portuguese epic by Camoëns, on the "discovery" of India by Vasquez da Gama.

Lusians, the Portuguese (-ad Gk. patron.), "the adventures of," &c.

Lüst, sensuality, to long for (followed by after); lust'-ed, lust'-ing, lust'-ful (Rule viii.), lust'ful-ly, lust'ful-ness.

Old English lyst, v. lyst[an], past lyste, past part. lysted.

Lustral, used in purifications, pertaining to purifications; lustralia, lūs.tray'.ū.ah, purifying feasts of the Romans.

Lustrate, lūs'.trate, to purify. Illustrate, il'lūs'.trate, to explain or exemplify by pictures. Lūs'trāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), lūs'trāt-ing (R. xix.); lustration, lūs.tray'.shŭn, the act of purifying, the purification feast. Il'lustration, elucidation by pictures. Lustrāt'-or (R. xxxvii.) Il...

Latin lustrālis, lustratio, lustrator, lustrare (lustrum, a public purification held every five years; Greek lutrōn, v. lud).

"Illustrate," Latin illustrare, supline illustratum, to make manifest.

Lustre, lūs'.t'r, brightness, a scone with ornamental glass pendants, (in Min.) the sheen of metal which is of five sorts, splendent, shining, metallic, vitreous, or pearly.

Lustre-less; lustrous, lūs'.trŭs; lustrous-ly.

Fr. lustre; Lat. illustris, bright; v. illustrare, to throw light on.

Lustrum, plu. lustra, a period of five years, the interval between the Roman lustrations. (Latin lustrum, same meaning.)

Lusty, lūs'.ty, sturdy; (comp.) lus'ti-er, (sup.) lus'ti-est (R. xi.), lus'ti-ly, lus'ti-ness, lus'ti-hood (-hood, state, condition).

Old English lustlic, joyous; German lustig; Norse lystig.

Lŭte (1 syl.), a musical instrument similar to the lyre but smaller, a composition for securing the joints of vessels, a putty made of clay, sand, and water, for coating retorts.

Lute-string, the string of a lute, a stout shiny silk (a corruption of the French lustrine, from lustre, shining).

To lute, to stop joints with lute; lŭt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.); lŭt'-ing; lutation, lŭ.tay'.shŭn, application of lute.

"Lute" (musical inst.), Fr. luth; Ital. liuto; Germ. laute; Norse lut.

"Lute" (for stopping joints), Latin lŭtum, clay or loam; Gk. lŭma.

Lutheran, lŭ.rhĕ.rŭn, according to the theological system of Martin Luther, a disciple of Luther; Lutheranism, lŭ.rhĕ.rŭn.izm, the theological system of Luther.

Luxuriant, lŭx.zŭ'.rĭ.ănt, exuberant; luxu'riant-ly, luxu'riant-ness, luxu'riance, luxu'riancy. Luxuriate, lŭx.zŭ'.rĭ.ate, to indulge (followed by in); luxu'riat.ed (Rule xxxvi.), luxu'riat-ing (Rule xix.); luxuriation, lŭx.zŭ'.rĭ.ă''shŭn.

Luxury, plu. luxuries, lŭx'.zŭ'.rĭz (not lŭk'.shŭ'.rĭz), whatever contributes to self-indulgence; luxurious, lŭx.zŭ'.rĭ.ŭs (not lŭg zhu'.rĭ.ŭs); luxu'rious-ness, luxu'rious-ly.

Lat. luxŭria, luxŭriōsus, luxŭrians, gen. luxŭriantis (luxus, revelry).

-ly, "like," represents the native adjectival suffix -lic and the adverbial suffix -lice: thus "godly," "manly," "lovely," &c., are both adjectives and adverbs representing god-lic (adj.), god-lice (adv.), man-lic, man-lice, luf-lic, luf-lice. It is a pity that these distinctions have not been retained.

Lyceum, li.sĕe'.ŭm (not lis'.ĕ.ŭm nor lĭ'.sĕ.ŭm), a place for lectures, a school, a theatre. Elysium, ĕ.lĭz'.i.ŭm, the heaven of classic mythology; elysian, ĕ.lĭz'.i.ŭn, adj.

Lyceum, at Athens, where Aristotle taught philosophy.

"Elysium," Lat. elysium, paradise; Gk. elusion (eludō, to set free).

Lychnis (not lychnus), lĭk'.nĭs, "ragged-robin," "catch-fly," &c.

Greek lychnis, a lantern, the calyx being semi-transparent.

Lycopodium, lĭ'.kŏ.pŏ'.dĭ.um, club-moss, its fine seed;

Lycopodiaceæ, lĭ'.kŏ.pŏ'.dĭ.ă'.sĕ.ĕ, the order containing the above. (-aceæ in Bot. denotes an order.)

Latin lycopodium; Greek lukos pous, wolf's foot.

Lydian, lĭd'.ĭ.ăn, adj. of Lydia, effeminate, soft.

Lye, lĭ, water impregnated with ashes. Lie, lĭ, a falsehood.

"Lye," O. Eng. lye; Lat. lix, whence lixivium, lye made of wood ashes.

"Lie" (to falsify), O. E. lēg[an]. "Lie" (to recline), O. E. lieg[an].

Lȳ'-ing, telling falsehoods, reclining. (See Lie.)

Lymph, lĭmf, a nearly colourless fluid in animal bodies;
lymph-y, lĭm'.fy, resembling lymph.

Lymphatics, lĭm.făt'.ĭks, vessels containing lymph.

Fr. lymphe, lymphatique; Lat. lymp̄a, lymphaticus; Gk. numphē.

Lynch, lĭnch, to punish without trial; lynch-law, mob-law.

So called from James Lynch, a farmer, of Piedmont, in Virginia, who was very fond of taking the law into his own hands, and obtained the sobriquet of "Judge Lynch."

Lynx, lĭnks, a wild beast keen of sight. Links [of a chain].

Lyncean, lĭn'.sĕ.ăn (not lynxean), adj. of lynx.

Lynx-eyed, links-ide, having very keen vision.

Lynx-sapphire, links săf'.fire, a greenish blue sapphire.

Latin lynx, lynx̄us; Greek lux̄ (-g before x = "n" in Greek).

Lyre, lĭre, a musical instrument. Liar, lĭ.ar, one who tells lies.

Lyric, lĭr'rik [poetry], suitable to be sung to the lyre.

Lyrical, lĭr'ri.kăl; lyrist, lĭ'rĭst, one who plays on the lyre; lyrist, lĭ'rĭst, a lyric poet.

Latin lyra, lyrica, lyricus, lyristes; Greek lŭra, lŭrikos.

-lyte (Gk. termination) nouns, denotes a substance which can be dissolved or decomposed: as electrolyte (Gk. luo, to loose).

M A., Master of Arts. A.M., ar'tium magis'ter (Latin).

M.D., Medicinæ doctor (doctor of medicine).

MS., plu. MSS., manuscript, plu. manuscripts.

M.P., plu. MM.P., member of parliament.

A.M., (1) anno mundi, in the year of the world, i.e., since the "beginning" of creation ["4004 years before the birth of Christ"]; (2) ante mēridian, ante-meridian, before noon; (3) ar'tium magis'ter, a university degree.

M-roof (in Arch.), a double gable, like an inverted W (M).

Ma'am, măm (not marm), contraction of Madam (q.v.)

Mac, Scotch affix before proper names, meaning "son of."

The Welsh affix is ap-, the Irish O', the English Fitz-.

Macadamise (R. xxxi.), măk.ăd'.ăm.ăze, to make roads according to Macadam's system; macadamised, măk.ăd'.ăm.ăzd; macad'amis-ing, mac'adamis-er (Rule xxxi.)

Roadmaking on the plan of Sir John Loudon Macadam (1750-1836).

Macaroni, măk'.a.rō'.ne, a food, a dandy, an extravagant folly; macaronic, măk'.a.rōn'.ik, adj. applied also to a burlesque kind of poetry. Macaroon, măk'.a.roon, a cake.

French-Ital. macaroni, macaronique, macaroon; Ital. maccheroni.

"Macaroni" as a sing. is quite indefensible, the Italian is un maccherone. The Macaroni Club consisted of flash-men who aimed at foppery, extravaganza, insolence and prodigality (1773).

Macaw, mă.kaw', a bird of the parrot-kind (Antilles, 2 syl.)

Maccabees, măk'.kă.beez, an heroic Jewish family, the name of four books of the Apocrypha; Maccabean, măk'.kă.bee'an.

Said to be formed from the initial letters of the motto M.C.B.I. ("Who is like to thee among the gods, O Lord," Exodus xv, 11).

Mace (1 syl.), an insignia of authority, a spice; mace-bearer, -bare'er, or ma'cer, a beadle. Mace-ale, ale with mace.

"Mace" (of office), Fr. masse; Ital. mazza, mazziere, a macer.

"Mace" (spice), Ital. mace; Lat. macis; Gk. makēr, mace.

Macerate, măs'sē.rate, to steep in cold liquid either to soften the texture or to obtain an extract, to mortify the body, to make lean; macerat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), măs'sē.rate.ed; macerat-ing (Rule xix.), măs'sē.rate.ing; macerat-or.

Maceration, măs'sē.ray'.shŭn, is obtained by steeping a substance in cold water.

Infusion, in.fŭ'.zhŭn, is obtained by steeping a substance [as tea or coffee] in boiling hot water.

Decoction, de.kōk'.shŭn, is obtained by boiling a substance.

Latin măcērătio, măcērāre, supine măcērătum (măcer, thin).

"Infusion," Latin in.fŭ.sio, in.fundere, supine in.fusum, to pour over.

"Decoction," Lat. decoctio, decoquere, sup. decoctum, to seethe down.

Machiavelian, măk'.ă.ă.vēl'.ă.ăn (not măsh'ă.ă.vēl'.ă.ăn nor may'.shē.ă.vēl'.ă.ăn), the political principles of Nicolo del Machiavelli, of Florence, which may be termed craft or "expediency," not uprightness and plain dealing, one who adopts these political principles;

Machiavelism, măk'.ă.ă.vēl'.ă.izm, state-craft or cunning.

Machicolation, ma.shik'.o.lay'.shŭn, erection of a gallery in a castellated building, having such a gallery.

Machicolated, ma.shik'.o.late.ed, furnished with a gallery from which pitch, &c., can be poured on invaders.

Low Latin machicolamentum; French măchicoulis (mèche couler).

Machine, mă.sheen', an instrument made by art, now applied to a compound contrivance and not to such things as knives, forks, spoons, spades, and so on; machin-ing (R. xix.), mă.sheen'ing, the working off of letter-press by steam;

Machinery, plu. machineries, ma.sheen'.ĕ.rĭz.

Machin-ist, ma.sheen'ĭst, a maker of machines;

Mechanist, mĕk'.ănĭst, one skilled in mechanical work;

Mechanic, me.kăn'ĭk, an artisan, one who gains a livelihood by doing "skilled labour" with his hands.

A "machinist" makes such ponderous machines as steam engines.

A "mechanist" is skilled in smaller mechanical contrivances, and a "mechanic" is a workman who follows the instruction given him or the mechanical work of his trade.

Fr. machine, mĕcanique, machiniste; Lat. măchĭna; Gk. mĕchanĕ.

(The pronunciation of -ine as -een, shows that we have taken the word from the French and not from the Latin.)

Machination, măk'.ĭnay".shŭn, a scheme, a plot; machinate, măk'.ĭ.nate, to plot; machinat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), măk'.ĭ.nay.ted; machinat-ing (R. xix.), măk'.ĭ.nay.ting.

Latin măchĭnătĭo, v. măchĭnărĭ. The ch = k directs us to the Greek mĕchanĕma, a device or trick (mĕchōs, contrivance).

Macintosh, măk'.in.tōsh, waterproof-cloth, a waterproof cloak.

Patented by Mr. Macintosh, from whom it takes its name.

Mackerel, măk'.ĕ.rĕl, a fish; mackerel-gale, a gale which only ripples the sea, and is favourable for catching mackerel;

Mackerel-sky, a sky spotted and streaked with white and blue.

Welsh macrell; German makrele; French maqueriau.

Macro- (Greek makros, large), măk'.ro-.

Macro-cephalous, -sĕf'.ă.lŭs (in Botany), having a large head. (Greek măkrōs kephălĕ, large head.)

Macro-cosm, -kōzm, the universe. Micro-cosm, mĭ'.kro-.kōzm, a miniature world, applied to man.

(Greek makros, great, mikros, little, kōsmos, world.)

Macro-dactyle, -dăk'.ăl, a bird with long toes; macro-dactylic, -dăk'.ăl.ĭk. (Greek dactŭlōs, a finger.)

Macrometer, ma.krōm'.ĕ.ter, an optical instrument for measuring inaccessible objects. (Greek mĕtrōn.)

Macro-pod, a crustacean with enormously long feet; macropodous, ma.krōp'.ō.dŭs, adj.

(Greek măkroi pōdes, long feet [pous pōdos, a foot].)

Macro-therium, -thĕ'.rĭ.um, an extinct ant-eater.

(Greek makros thĕrton, the long [bodied] wild beast.)

Macula, plu. maculæ, măk'.ă.lah, plu. măk'.ă.lee, a spot [on the moon, sun, &c.]; maculate, măk'.u.late, to spot; mac'ulāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), mac'ulāt-ing; maculation, mak'ku.lay".shŭn. Immaculate, perfect, without blemish.

Latin măcŭla, măcŭlătĭo. v. măcŭlăre, supine măcŭlătum.

Mād, deranged in intellect, to infuriate; (comp.) madd'-er, (super.) madd'-est (Rule i.), madd'-ed, madd'-ing.

Madden, mād'n, to infuriate; maddened, mād'nd; madden-ing, mād'n-ing; madden-er, mād'n-er; mad'-ly, mad'-man, mad'-house.

Mad'-ness, is insanity beyond personal control.

Insan'ity, is the dominance of fancy over reason.

Lu'nacy, is chiefly limited to legal phraseology.

Old Eng. ge-mæd, mad. "Insane," in-sānus, not [of] sound [mind]. "Lunacy," a madness supposed to be affected by the moon.

Madam, plu. mesdames, mād'.am, mēz'.d'ns. "Madam" is contracted into ma'am, mām.

"Mesdames" in French is called may-dahm, but is never so pronounced as the English plural of madam. The word is chiefly used in heading announcements of untitled ladies at levees, &c., and in trade circulars.

Madden, mād'n, to infuriate. (See Mad.)

Mād'der, a plant the root of which is used for dyeing red, more mad; mad'der-ing, dyeing with madder; mad'der lake, a colour obtained from madder. (Old English mæddere.)

Māde (1 syl.), past tense of make, q.v. Maid, a virgin.

Madeira, mǎ.dee'.rah, a wine from the island of Madeira.

Mademoiselle (French), mād'.mwä.zēl', Miss (not madam...)

Madonna, ma.dōn'.nah, the Virgin Mary, a picture of the Virgin.

Italian madonna; Spanish madona.

Madrepore, mād'.rē.pōr, a genus of corals; madreporite, mād'.rē.pō'.rite, fossil madreporite. (-ite denotes a fossil.)

French madrépore; Italian madrepore (madre poro, "mother-pore," qui veut dire pore fécond, parce que ce polype semble engendré dans les pores de la croûte qu'il habite, Dict. Univ., &c.)

Madrigal. Glee. Madrigal, mād'.rī.gāl, a very elaborate vocal composition for five or six voices in the ancient style of counterpoint and fugue. (Words pastoral.)

Glee, a vocal composition for three or four voices, less complicated than a madrigal. Originally gleeful, but now of any style, gay, erotic, bacchanalian, or pathetic.

"Madrigal," Italian madrigale (fait de la ville de Madrigal ou de celle de Madrigalejo, en Espagne, où ce genre aurait d'abord été cultivé, Dict. Univ. des Sciences, &c.)

Maelstrom, mahl'.stroom, a whirlpool; The Maelstrom, a whirlpool at the south end of the Lofföden Islands, off the west coast of Norway. (Norman malström.)

(The "e" is quite useless and the native spelling would be better.)

Magazine, mag'ga.zeen', a storehouse, a strong building for the storing of gunpowder, a serial in pamphlet form.

The pronunciation of "zine" as zeen is bad French for magasin; Arab. makhsen, a treasury.

Magdeburg hemispheres, mäg'.dë.berg hēm'.iz.feerz, two brass cups for illustrating the force of atmospheric pressure.

Invented by M. de Guericke of Magdeburg, in Saxony.

Magellanic Clouds, ma.djël.län'.ikh..., two white nebulae near the south pole, which revolve like stars.

First observed by Magellan [ma.djël'.län], the navigator.

Maggiore, mäd.djō'.rë (each g to be distinctly sounded), the scales, intervals, modes, &c., to be major, not minor.

Maggot, mäg'.gōt, a small grub, an odd whim; maggotty, mäg'.gō.ty, full of maggots or whims. (Welsh maceiod, plu.)

Magi, may'.djī (plu. of magus, not in use), the "wise men" who came from "the East" to honour the infant Jesus; magian, mā'.djī.än, a Persian priest; magianism, mā'.djī.än.izm, Zoroaster's system of religion, philosophy, &c.

Latin magus, plu. magi; Greek magos, plu. magoi, a magian.

Magic, mädg'.ikh, sorcery; magical, mädg'.ikhäl; magical-ly; magician, mā.djish'.än, one skilled in magic; magic lantern, magic square, &c.

Five of the sciences [taken from the French] end in "-ic" instead of "-ics": viz., arithmetic, logic, magic, music, and rhetoric.

Fr. magique; Lat. magicus; Gk. magikos (magus, a magician).

Magistrate, mädg'.is.träte, a justice. Majesty, madj'jes.ty.

Magistracy, plu. magistracies, mädg'.is.trä.siz, the office or dignity of a magistrate.

Magisterial, mädg'.is.të''.ri.äl; magiste'rial-ly, magisto'rial-ness. (Latin magisträtus [magister].)

Magna Charta, mäg'.nah kar'.tah (not tchar'.tah), the great charter of English rights extorted by the barons from King John. (Latin magna charta.)

Magnanimous, mäg.nän'.ä.müs, of noble spirit; magnan'iously; magnanimity, mäg'.nä.nim''.ä.ty.

Lat. magnänimus, magnänimitas (magnus animus, a great mind).

Magnate, mäg'.näte, a grandee. Mag'net, a "loadstone."

Latin magnas, gen. -nätis, a grandee; magnes, gen. -nëtis, a magnet.

Magnesia, mäg'në'.zä.ah, the protoxide of magnesium.

Magnesian, mäg.në'.zä.än, adj. of magnesia; magne'sian lime'stone, limestone with twenty per cent. of magnesia.

Magnesium, mäg.në'.zä.üm, the metallic base of magnesia;

Magne'sium light (not magnesian...), a brilliant light produced by the burning of magnesium wire.

Sulphate of magnesia, sül'.fate..., Epsom salt.

French magnésie (mot dérivé de magnès, parce que cette terre a la propriété, ainsi que plusieurs terres argileuses, de happer à la langue, de l'attirer, comme l'aimant attire le fer. Roquefort).

Magnesia, in Thessaly, is generally given as the origin of the word.

Magnet, măg'net, the loadstone. Magnate, măg'nat, a grandee; Magnetic, măg.nēt'ik, possessing the property of the loadstone; magnetical, măg.nēt'ikāl; magnetical-ly.

Magnetics (R. lxi.), măg.nēt'iks, the science of magnetism.

Magnetism, măg'nētizm, the attractive power of a magnet.

Magnetise (Rule xxxi.), măg'nētize, to render magnetic; mag'netised (3 syl.), mag'netis-ing (R. xix.), mag'netis-er.

Magnetisation, măg'nētizay''shūn.

Magnetite, măg'nētite, an iron ore from which the finest steel is made, also called magnetic-iron.

Magnetic battery, magnetic dip, magnetic equator, magnetic fluid, magnetic meridian, magnetic needle, magnetic poles (poles, 1 syl.), magnetic telegraph.

Magneto-electricity, măg.nēt'o ē.lēk.trīs'itij, electric phenomena produced by magnetism; magneto-electric.

Animal magnetism, mesmerism;

Terrestrial magnetism, ter.rēs.trī'āl (not ter.rēs'tchāl...), the magnetic power of the earth.

Magnetometer, Magnetomotor.

Magnetometer, măg'nētōm'ēter, an instrument for measuring the intensity of magnetic force.

Magnetomotor, măg'nētōmō'tor, a voltaic series for the production of a store of electricity for exhibiting electro-magnetic phenomena.

French magnétique, magnétisme, magnétiser; Latin magnes, gen. magnētis, magnēticus; Greek magnētis or [lithos] magnetes ab inventore ejus nominis, Plin. 36, 25; a Magnētia, Lydiae regione, magnētum, quia sit patris in finibus ortus. Lucr. vi., 900. Said to have been first discovered in the town of Heracleūm, near Magnētia, hence called in Greek [lithos] Heracleia or Magnētes.

Magnificent, măg.nīf'isent, grand, splendid; magnificent-ly.

Magnificence, măg.nīf'isense, grandeur, splendour.

Magnifico, plu. magnificoes (Rule xlii.), măg.nīf'ikōze, a Venetian grandee (Italian).

Magnify, măg'nīfī, to enlarge; magnifies, măg'nīfize; magnified (Rule xi.), măg'nīfide; mag'nifi-er; mag'nifi-able, mag'nify-ing.

Latin magnificētia, v. magnificō [fāctō], to make larger; French magnificence, magnifico.

Magniloquent (not magneloquent), măg.nīl'o.quent, pompous in words or style; magniloquent-ly;

Magniloquence, măg'nīl'ō.quence, inflated talk.

Latin magniloquentia (magnus-loquens, "tall" talking).

Magnitude, măg'nītude, bulk, size. (Latin magnitūdo.)

Magnolia, măg'.nô'.lî.ah, a genus of plants.

Magnoliaceæ, măg'.nô'.lî.ă.ș.ē.ē, the magnolia "order."

Named in honour of Pierre Magnol, professor of botany, at Montpellier, 1638-1715. (-ia, a genus, -iaceæ, an order.)

Mag'num (Lat.), a large wine-bottle, two dozen of wine.

Mag'num bo'num, a plum, ideal or supreme excellence.

Magpie, măg'.pî, one of the crow tribe. (Lat. maj[or] pica.)

Magyar, maď'.yar, one of the dominant class in Hungary.

The Magyars were the conquerors and founders of the kingdom of Hungary. They came from Central Asia or Scythia, under the leadership of Almus and his son Arpad, and are termed Ugari by the Slaves. The word means "the noble or illustrious."

Maharajah, maħ'.har rah'.jah, a Hindû sovereign or prince.

Mahl-stick, mawl stîk, for painters to rest their right hand on in painting. (German maler-stock, painter's stick.)

Mahogany, plu. mahoganies, ma.hôg'.ă.niz, a wood.

West Indian mahagoni; genus Swietenia mahogani.

Mahometanism, ma.hôm'.ē.tăn.izm, the religious system of Mahomet; Mahometan, ma.hôm'.ē.tăn, a Mussulman, adj. of Mahomet; Mahometanise (Rule xxxi.), ma.hôm'.ē.tăn.ize, to convert to Mahomet's "faith."

Mahom'etanised (5 syl.), Mahom'etanis-ing (Rule xix.)

Mahomet, born at Mecca, in Arabia (571-632).

The "Bible" of Mahomet is called the Koran (q.v.)

The epoch from which Mahometans begin to date is the Heg'ira or Flight of Mahomet (Friday 16th, 622).

Maid (1 syl.), a female servant. Măde (1 syl.) of the v. make.

Maid-servant, plu. maid-servants (not maids-servants);

mas. man-servant, plu. men-servants (not man-servants, see Gen. xii. 16). Maiden, maid'n, a young unmarried woman; maid'en-ly, modest, like a maiden; maid'enli-ness, maiden-like; maid'en-hood, the state of virginity (-hood, state, condition); maid'en-head, -hed, virginity (-head, state, condition); maid'en speech, one's first speech; maid'en assize, one at which there is no criminal. Maid'en, a Scotch guillotine.

Old English mægth, mægth-hăd, maidenhood. The Welsh mag is "the act of nursing"; magwres, a nurse; magur.

Mail (1 syl.) Male (1 syl.), one of the masculine sex.

Mail, scale-armour, tribute, an iron-mould, a post-bag, the letters conveyed by mail, &c.

Mail-clad, clad in mail armour; mailed (1 syl.)

Black-mail, forced tribute paid to freebooters.

Mail-train, mail-coach, mail-packet.

Mailed (1 syl.), sent off by mail; mail-able, that may be sent by mail; mail-ing, preparing for the mail.

"Mail" (armour), French maille; Italian maglia.

"Mail" (tribute), Old English mal; Low Latin mallia = medallia.

"Mail" (an iron mould), Old English mal; Latin macula.

"Mail" (post), French maille, a bag; maille-poste, a post bag.

"Male," French male; Latin masculus.

Maim (1 syl.), to cripple, to blemish; maimed (1 syl.), maim'-ing; maimedness, māme'.ed.ness.

Old Fr. maimer, n. mehaigne; Low Lat. mahemiare, mekemium.

Main. Ocean. Sea. Mane (1 syl.) Mān, mēn.

Sea, a large body of water land-locked, as the Baltic-sea, Mediterranean-sea, Black-sea, White-sea, &c.

Ocean, a larger body of water than a sea, and not land-locked, as the Indian, Atlantic, and Pacific oceans.

Main, one of the chief oceans.

Mane, the long neck-hair of a horse, lion, &c.

Mān, plu. men, human beings full-grown of the male sex.

Main, chief; main'-ly, main-deck, main-keel; main'-land, the continent, the chief of an island group; main'-mast, main'-sail; main-sheets, ropes used for fastening the main-sails. (Sheet, in nautical language, "a rope used in setting a sail"); main'-spring, main-stay; main-top, a platform over the head of the mainmast; main-yard.

Old English mægen (from magan, to be able, our word may).

"Main" (hair on the neck of a horse, lion, &c.); German mahe.

Maintain' (2 syl.), to provide for, to persist in, to preserve; maintained' (2 syl.), maintain'-ing, maintain'-er.

Maintenance, main'.tē.nance, board, support, &c.

Cap-of-maintenance, a cap of dignity once worn by dukes, the lord mayor's cap of state; maintain'-able.

French maintenir (from main tenir, to hold [in] the hand).

Maize, māze, Indian wheat. Maze, a labyrinth. Amaze.

"Maize," Spanish maiz. "Maze," Old English mase, a whirlpool.

"Amaze," to put one into a maze or bewilderment.

Majesty, mad'jes.ty. Magistrate, mad'jis.trate.

Magistrate, a justice of the peace.

Majesty, grandeur, dignity. Your Majesty, title of address to a sovereign. The King's (or Queen's) most excellent Majesty, title given to royalty in formal documents.

Majestic, ma.djēs'.tik, stately, like a king; majestical, ma.djēs'.tik.kāl; majes'tical-ly.

Fr. majesté; Lat. majestas (major, an elder). Henry VIII. was the first Eng. sovereign styled "His Majesty," James I. added "Sacred" and "Most Excellent" (H.M., Her or His Majesty or Majesty's).

Majolica, ma.jöl'ä.kah, soft enamelled pottery, first introduced into Italy from Majolica [Majorca] in the 12th century.

Major, may'.djör, a military rank above captain and below [lieutenant] colonel, one who has passed his twenty-first birth-day, the greater; major-ship (-ship, office or rank);

Majority, mā.djör'ri.ty, the office or rank of major, the attainment of "full age."

Major-domo, plu. major-domos, -dō'.mōze, one who rules the house (a corruption of the Spanish mayor-domo).

Major-General, plu. Major-Generals;

Drum-major, plu. Drum-majors; Serjeant-major, plu. Serjeant-majors, sar'.djent mā'.djorz.

Major Interval. Perfect Interval (in Music). "Major Intervals" are the 3rd and 6th, the 2nd and 7th. "Perfect Intervals," the 8th, 5th, and 4th.

Major key (in Music), that in which all the intervals are either major or perfect. The 4th and 5th are perfect, the other four major.

The major or The major premise, -prēm'iss, the first proposition of a syllogism, the second is the minor.

Latin major, comp. of magnus, great, also a mayor or seignior.

Māke (1 syl.), past made, past part. made. Maid, a virgin.

* Make, to fashion, to fabricate; māk'-ing (Rule xix.), māk'-er; make-shift, a temporary substitute; make-weight, something thrown in to insure good weight.

To make as if, to pretend that.

To make away with, to murder, to destroy, to spend.

To make believe, to pretend.

To make bold, to take the liberty, to dare.

To make for, to direct one's movement towards.

To make free with, to treat without ceremony.

To make good, to indemnify. To make amends.

To make land, to arrive near land.

To make for land, to steer a ship towards land.

To make light of, to treat with indifference.

To make love to, to pay one's addresses to.

To make merry, to be joyful.

To make much of, to treat with fondness and respect.

To make out, to understand, to decipher.

To make over, to transfer.

To make sail, to increase a ship's speed.

To make suit to, to court.

To make shift, to manage under adverse circumstances.

To make sure of, to secure, to feel sure of.

To make up, to collect, to become reconciled.

To make up to, to seek to gain the favour of.

To make way, to give place, to make progress.

Old English mac[ian], past macode, past part. macod, macung.

Mäl- (Lat. prefix), bad, wrong, not; but male-, mäl'.e-, spiteful.

Malachite, mäl'.ä.kite, a green carbonate of copper.

Greek mälächē, a mallow, which it resembles in colour.

Malaco-, mäl'.ä.ko- (Greek suffix), soft (mäläkhōs, soft).

Malaco-lite, mäl'.ä.ko.lite, a variety of augite.

Greek mäläkhos lithos, soft stone.

Malacology, mäl'.ä.köl'.ō.gy, natural history of molluscs.

Greek mäläkhos lōgōs, treatise on soft [bodied animals].

Malacopter, plu. malacopteri, mäl'.ä.köp'.ter, -tē.ri, a fish, like the eel, with soft or jointed fins; malacopterous, mäl'.ä.köp'.tē.rūs, adj., pertaining to malacopters.

Greek mäläkhos ptērōn, [having a] soft wing or fin.

Malacosteon, mäl'.ä.kōs'.tē.ōn, atrophy of the bones.

Greek mäläkhos osteōn, soft-bone, a softening of the bones.

Malacostomous, mäl'.ä.kōs'.tō.mūs, soft jawed, i.e., jaws without teeth. (Greek mäläkhos stōma, soft mouth.)

Malacostracan, mäl'.ä.kōs'.trä.kän, shrimps, lobsters, and other soft-shelled crustaceans.

Malacostraca, mäl'.ä.kōs'.trä.kah, the soft-shelled crustacean genus; malacostracous, mäl'.ä.kōs'.trä.kūs, adj.

Malacostrology, mäl'.ä.kōs'.tröl'.ō.gy, the natural history of the crustacea. (Greek mäläkhos ostrakon, a soft shell.)

Mal-adjustment, mäl'.äd.jüst'.ment, a wrong adjustment.

French mal ajustement; Latin male ad justus, not to what is right.

Mal-administration, -ad.män'.iss.tray'.shün, bad management of official duties. (Latin malus administratio.)

Mal-adroit (Fr.), mäl'.a.drwöyt', awkward; mal'adroit'-ness.

French mal a droit, not dexterous (droit = dexter, right-hand).

Malady, plu. maladies, mäl'.ä.diz, a sickness, a disease.

Fr. maladie (Lat. maladea, under the spell of a malignant goddess).

Malaga, mäl'.ä.gah, wine of Magaga grapes; malaga-raisins.

Malaise (Fr.), mäl'.äze, undefinable restlessness and discomfort.

Malapert. Impertinent. Saucy.

Malapert, mäl'.a.pert, flippant, too free spoken.

Welsh pert, pert, smart, with mal[a], in a bad sense.

Impertinent, meddling with what does "not pertain" to you.

Saucy, rudely insolent. (French sauce, Latin salsus, salted.)

"Sauce" means salt, and "saucy" means spicy in a bad sense.

Mal-apropos (Fr.), māl.ap'prō.pō, not to the point, unseasonable;

Malar, may'lar, pertaining to the cheek. Mō'lar [teeth].

"Malar," Latin māla, the cheek-bone; Greek mēlōn.

"Molar," Latin mōlāris, a grinder (mōla, a mill).

Malaria, māl.air'rī.ah, bad exhalations productive of fevers;
malarial, māl.air'rī.āl; malarious, māl.air'rī.ūs.

Italian mala aria, bad air.

Mal-content, one who does not approve [of a measure proposed].

Discontent, positive dissatisfaction.

Uncontented, absence of contentment (Rule lxxii.)

French mécontent; Latin malē contentus, ill-contented.

Māle (1 syl.) Mail, [armour, for letters]. Mall, māl or mawl.

Male, of the masculine sex. Fe'male, of the feminine sex.

These are used as gender words also: as male-child, female-child; male descendant, female descendant; male donkey, female donkey, male or bull elephant, female or cow elephant; male servant, female servant; heir male, heir female, plu. heirs male, heirs female.

"Male," French māle (masle); Latin masculus (mas, a man).

"Mail," Fr. maille (armour), malle (post bag). "Mail," Lat. mallus.

Male-, māl.e- (Lat. prefix), lawless, spiteful; mal-, wrong, not.

Male-diction, māl'.ē.dik''shūn, malicious-speaking, execration, curse. (Latin mālēdictio, māl'e dico.)

Male-factor (Rule xxxvii.), a criminal, a doer of evil deeds.

Latin mālēfactor (māle fācto, to do lawless deeds).

Malevolent, māl.lēv'.ō.lent, spiteful; male'volent-ly;

malevolence, ma.lēv'.ō.lense, spite, malignity.

Latin mālēvolentia (male volens, wishing spitefully).

Malfeasance, māl.fay'.zance (not māl.fee'.zance), an unlawful act.

French malfeasance; Lat. mālēfactum (māle fācere, to do evil).

Malic, may'.lik, obtained from apples. Malice, māl'iss, spite.

Ma'lic acid, found in many fruits but especially in apples.

Latin mālum, an apple. "Malice," French malice; Latin malitia.

Malice, māl'iss, spite. (Ma'lic, see above.) Malicious, ma.lish'.ūs; malicious-ly, malicious-ness; malice prepense, māl'iss pre.pense', malice instigating a malicious deed.

French malice; Latin mālitia, mālitiosus (mālus, bad).

Malignity, plu. malignities, ma.līg'.nī.tīz, unprovoked malice.

Malignancy, ma.līg'.nān.sy, bitter hostility.

Malign, ma.līnē', to defame; maligned, ma.līnēd; maligning, ma.līnē'ing; malign-er, ma.līnē'er; malign-ly.

Lat. māgnitas, māgnus (mālus, evil); Fr. malignité, malin.

Malkin, mōl'.kin or maw'.kin, a scare-crow, an oven mop.

Shakespeare speaks of "the kitchen malkin" or scullery wench. The word is a diminutive of Moll ("Moll-kin").

- Mal, māl [or mawl]. Maul, to beat. Māle [sex]. Mail [bag].
Mal, a heavy wooden beetle. Maul, to beat; mauled, maul'-ing, maul'-er.
Malleable, māl'.lē.ă.b'l, capable of being spread out by hammering; mal'leable-ness. Malleability, māl'.lē.ă.b'il''.i.ty.
Malleation, māl'.lē.ă''.shūn; malleate, māl'.lē.ate, to hammer out; malleāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), malleāt-ing (R. xix.)
Malleolar, māl'.lē.ă.lar, belonging to the ankle; mal'leolus (in Bot.), a hammer-shaped slip.
Mallet, māl'.lēt, a wooden hammer.
 Latin malleus, v. malleare; French malleabilité, malleable.
Mallard, fem. wild duck, both wild-fowl. (French malart.)
Mallow, māl'.lo, a plant. (Old Eng. malu or malve; Lat. malva.)
Malmsey, māhm'.zy, a sweet wine. (Malvasia, in Greece.)
Malpighian, māl.pīg'.x.ăn, certain secreting tubes in the kidneys, &c.; Malpighian cones or pyramids; Malpighian capsules, -kăp'-sūles; ...corpuscules, -kor.pūs''.kūles.
 Named after the anatomist Malpighi, by whom they were discovered.
Malpractice, māl.prăk'.tiss, illegal or immoral conduct.
 Latin malus praxis (Greek pratto, to do); French pratique.
Malt, mōlt (not mawlt), barley prepared for brewing, to convert grain into malt; malt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), malt'-ing; maltster (-ster, not a gender affix, R. lxii.); malt-dust, siftings of malt; malt-liquor, -lik'.er, ale, beer; malt-man.
 Old Eng. mealt or malt; mealt-hūs, malt-house; mealt-wurt, wort.
Maltese, mōl.teez, sing. and plu., a native of Malta; pertaining to Malta, brought from Malta. (Names of people in -ese are sing. and plu. as Chinese, Portuguese, Siamese, &c.)
 Malta, a contraction of Mēvita.
Malthusian, māl.thū'.x.ăn, adj. of Malthus, who said that population should be checked, as its increase was greater than the increase of supply, consequently early marriages should be discouraged. ("Essay on Population.")
Maltreat, māl.treet', to use roughly. Ill-treat, to treat ill; Maltreat-ed, māl.treet'.ed (Rule xxxvi.); maltreat'-ing, maltreat'-ment. Ill-treated, ill-treat-ing, illtreat-ment.
 Maltreat refers to physical ill-usage, rough handling, &c.
 Illtreat refers to more serious ill-usage, and of a wider range.
 Old English yfel trahlt[ian]; French mal traiter, mal [mauvais] traitement; Latin male tractare, to handle badly.
Malversation, māl'.ver.say''.shūn, improper conduct.
 French malversation; Latin māle versāri, to behave badly, versatio.
Mamaluke, mām'.ă.lūke, the chief military force of Egypt, destroyed in 1811 by Mohammed Ali. (Arab. mamluc, a slave.)

Manma. The compounds of this word are very irregular.

1. Mamelon, one m followed by e. (French mamelon.)
2. Mamilla, one m followed by i. (Latin mamilla.)
3. Mamma, Mammal, mammalia, mammalogy, double m followed by a. (Latin mamma.)
4. Mammifer, mammiform, mammillary, double m followed by i. (Latin mammillāris.)

¶ Mamelon, măm'.ě.lôn, a slightly rising ground.

A French error. The word ought to be mamillon, Latin mamilla, a little breast. French mamelon, a nipple, the pap of a mountain.

¶ Mamilla, mă.mîl'.lah (in Bot.), little granular protuberances in the pollen of certain plants; mamillated, măm'.îl.lay''ted, having mamillæ.

Latin mamilla, plu. mamillæ, diminutive of mamma.

¶ Mamma, măm'.may (in Med.), a nipple, mam.mah', mother; mamma (mother) is often contracted into ma, mah.

This word used in the sense of "Mother" was introduced by the Normans and used to be limited to the families of the Norman gentry. The lower orders being Saxons retained their own word "mother," still prevalent with the peasantry.

Mammal, măm'.māl, an animal that suckles its young.

Mammalia, măm.may'.î.ah, the mammal class. Mamma'-lian, adj. of mammal. Mammmary, măm'.ma.ry, adj. of mamma, a pap. (Latin mamma.)

Mammaliferous, măm'.mă.lîf''ě.rîs, containing fossil remains of mammals. Mammiferous, having breasts.

Latin mammalia fero, I carry mammals.

Mammalogy (not mamology), măm.măl'.đ.gy, that branch of Natural History which treats of mammalia.

Greek mamma logos, treatise about mothers.

¶ Mammifer, măm'.mî.fěr, an animal that has breasts; mammiferous, having breasts; but Mammaliferous, containing fossil remains of mammals.

French mammifère; Latin mamma fero.

Mammiform, măm'.mî.form, shaped like paps.

French mammiforme; Latin mamma forma.

Mammillary, măm.mîl'.la.ry, pertaining to or resembling the breast; mammillated, măm'.mîl.lăte.ed, having small nipples.

French mamillaire (one m is preferable, as the Latin word is mamilla, with one l).

(The abnormal forms "mamelon," "mammifer," "mammiform," &c., we owe, as usual, to the French.)

Latin mamma, a breast, a pap; Greek mamma, mother.

Mammet, mām'mēt, a puppet; mammetry, mām'mētry, corruption of Mahomet and Mahom'etry, idolatry.

This is a curious instance of prejudice and perversion. Idolatry and all forms of idols are absolutely forbidden in the koran, but in the middle ages Mahometanism became the synonym of false religion, and as idolatry is the most prevalent form of false religion, the two words got confounded.

Mammon, mām'mōn, wealth; mam'mon-ist, one whose whole pursuit is the accumulation of money. (Chaldee mammon.)

Mammoth, mām'mōth, the great fossil elephant of Siberia.

Russian mamant; Hebrew behemoth.

Mān, plu. mēn, (fem.) wom'an, plu. women, wīm'm'n; v. to furnish with men, to set a guard; manned, mānd; mann'-ing (Rule i.); mann'-ish (-ish added to nouns means like, added to adj. it is dim.); man-less.

Man'-ful (Rule viii.), man'ful-ly, man'ful-ness.

Man'-ly, man'li-ness (Rule xi.); man'-hood (-hood, state, condition); man-kind (-kind, race).

Man-child, fem. woman-child, plu. men-children, women-children, wīm'n chil'drēn, boy, (fem.) girl.

Man-servant, plu. men-servants, (fem.) maid-servant, plu. maid-servants, wom'an-servant, plu. women-servants, wīm'n...; man-midwife, mīd'if, an accoucheur.

Man-of-straw, plu. men .., one who has no money to back his engagements, a man that exists only on paper.

Man of war, plu. men of war, a war-ship.

Man at arms, plu. men at arms, formally applied to the heavy armed military.

Old English mann, plu. menn; mann-cild, a man-child; mann-cin, mankind; mannhād, man-hood; man-leas, manless, without men; mannlic, mannlice adv., v. mann[ian], p. mannode, p. p. mannod.

Manacle, mān'a.k'l (only one n, it is no comp. of man), a shackle for the hands; (Fetter, a shackle for the feet); to shackle the hands; manacled, mān'a.k'ld.

The spelling of these words is disgraceful. The French have avoided the absurdity of a second a in their word manacles.

Latin manicula, māntea, dim. of manus; but manūcus, means the orb of the moon. (Greek mēniatōs.)

Manage, mān'age, to contrive, to direct. Manege, ma.nāje, the management and training of horses in riding-schools.

Man'aged (2 syl.), man'ag-ing (Rule xix.), man'ag-er;

Man'age-able (-ce and -ge retain the -e before -able, R. xx.); man'ageable-ness, man'ageably, man'agement (only -dge and -ue drop the -e before -ment, Rule xviii.)

Fr. ménager, ménagement; Low Lat. menagium, a household; Lat. manēre, to abide. We have the law-term messe, a house, &c.

Manakin, măn'.ă.kîn, a genus of small birds. Man'ikin, a dwarf.
 "Manakin," French manaquin. "Manikin," German manneken.

Manchoo (not Mantchoo), măn.shoo', the language of Manchooria, spoken at the court of China.

Mandamus (Lat.), măn.day'.mūs (not măn'.dă.mūs), a writ issued by the Court of Queen's Bench in the sovereign's name.

So called from the first word Mandāmus we, [the Queen] command..

Mandarin, măn'.dă.rîn, a Chinese magistrate or governor.

Spanish mandarin (mandar, to command, Latin mandāre).

Mandate, măn'.dāte. Command, kôm.mand':

A mandate is a written order or rescript (manu datus, "given under hand" and seal). Command is an order by word of mouth or otherwise.

Mandatary, măn'.dă.tă.ry. Mandatory, măn'.dă.tō.ry;

Mandatory, one to whom the Pope has given a "mandate" for a benefice, one who undertakes from written authority to do something for another.

French mandataire; Italian mandatario.

Mandatory, adj. containing a mandate or commission.

Mandator (Latin), măn.day'.tor, one who gives a mandate.

Latin mandatarius, a mandatary, mandator, mandātum, mandāre.

Mandible, măn'.dă.b'l, the jaw of a bird, insect, or cuttle-fish; mandibular, măn.dib'.ă.lar, pertaining to the jaw; mandibulate, măn.dib'.ă.late, having mandibles.

Lat. mandibulum, the jaw-bone; mandibulāris (v. mandēre, to chew).

Mandolin, măn'.dō.lîn, a small cithern played with a quill.

French mandoline; Italian mandola; Portuguese bandola.

Mandragora, măn.drăg'.ō.rah, Latin for mandrake (q.v.)

Mandrake, măn'.drăke, a plant (corruption of mandrăg[ora]).

The first syllable has no connexion with the Anglo-Saxon word man.

Greek mandrăgōras; French mandragore; Italian mandragola.

Mandrel, măn'.drēl, the revolving shank of a lathe to which turners fix their work, a round bar on which plumbers form tubing. (Fr. mandrin; Lat. manubrium, a handle.)

Mandrill (Fr.), măn'.dril, species of monkey. Spand'rel (in Arch)

Mane (1 syl.), hair on the neck of a horse, &c. Main, chief;
māned (1 syl.), having a mane. Manned, mănd.

"Mane," Germ. mahne. "Main," Old Eng. mægen. "Manned," man.

Manege, mă.năje', the training of horses. Man'age, to direct.

French manège, exercice qu'on fait faire à un cheval pour le dresser. Hien où l'on exerce les chevaux pour les dresser, also the tricks and gambols taught to horses trained for a circus.

"Manage," Low Lat. menagium, a household; Lat. manēre, to abide.

Manes, mă'.neez, ghosts, spirits of the dead. (Latin manes.)

Man'-ful (Rule viii.), man'ful-ly, man'ful-ness. (See Man.)

Manganese, măn'.gă.neez', a metal; the black ore is called the black oxide of manganese; manganesian, măn'.gă.ně''.zî.ăn, pertaining to or consisting of manganese.

Manganese, măn'.gă.nee''.zî.ăm, the metal manganese.

Manganesia, măn'.gă.nee''.zî.ah, the oxide of manganese.

Manganic [acid], măn.găn'.îk..., obtained from manganese.

Manganate, măn'.gă.năte (-ate, denotes a salt formed by the union of [manganic] acid with a base).

Manganite, măn'.gă.năte (-ite denotes a fossil or ore), it is a grey oxide of manganese.

French manganèse, qu'on dérive de magnès, parce qu'on confondait autrefois le manganèse oxyde avec la pierre d'aimants.

Mange, mănj, the scab or itch in dogs, &c.; mang'-y, scabby; mang'i-ness (Rule xi.)

French dé-mange[aison], v. démanger, to itch.

Man'gel-wur'zel (not mangold), a field root. Man'gle, to mutilate. The roots are called mangels, not mangel-wurzels.

German mangel wurzel, scarcity root. Eaten by man'in times of scarcity as a substitute for bread, as well as by cattle.

Manger, main'-djer, a fixed feeding-trough for horses and cattle.

French mangeoire, v. manger, to eat; Latin manducare, to chew.

Mangle, măn'.g'l, a calendar. Mangel, man'.gël, a root.

Mangle, to mutilate, to calender; mangled, măn'.g'ld; mangling, măn'.gling; man'gler.

Germ. mangel, v. mangeln, both senses; Lat. mango, a regrater who polishes up articles for sale, hence "to scratch," to mutilate. The French mangle is the mangrove.

Mango, plu. mangoes (Rule xlii.), a tree and its fruit.

Mangos marum, in the Talmud language of India.

Mangrove, măn'.grōve, an Indian tree which forms dense groves.

The tree is the Mangle (Malay), but The mangle-grove, and the Mangle-tree have got confounded.

Mania. Madness. Insanity. Lunacy. Frenzy.

Mania, may'.ni.ah, a warping of the judgment and that ungovernable enthusiasm consequent on some great excitement, as war, drink, politics, and so on. Hence the mania for some new fashion, book, idea, "lion."

Mon'o-ma'nia, a mental delusion on one special subject.

Maniac, may'.nî.ăk, a madman; maniacal, ma.nî'.ă.kăl.

Mad'ness, a state of mental excitement in which both memory and judgment are overmastered.

Insan'ity, an unhealthy state of mind in which the judgment is too feeble to assert itself, but the passions are not violent.

Lu'nacy, a term for any mental aberration, chiefly confined to legal documents and institutions: as Commissioners in Lunacy, Masters in Lunacy, Lunatic Asylums, and so on.

Frenzy, inflammation of the cerebral membrane, inducing fever and mental disturbance.

"Mania," Greek mānta (v. mainōmai, to be overexcited).

"Madness," Old English ge-maad.

"Insanity," Latin in sānitas, want of healthiness [of mind].

"Lunacy," moon-struck; Latin luna, the moon.

"Frenzy," Greek phrēn-itis, inflammation of the mind."

Manichean, mān'ī.kee''ān, pertaining to Manēs and his doctrines, a disciple of Manēs the Persian philosopher.

Manes taught that there are two supreme principles, Light and Darkness. The former the author of all good, the latter of all evil.

Manifest, mān'ī.fest, apparent, to make manifest, to declare; man'ifest-ed (R. xxxvi.), man'ifest-ing, man'ifest-ible.

Manifestation, mān'ī.fēs-tay''shūn; man'ifest-ly.

Manifesto, plu. manifestoes (Rule xlii.), mān'ī.fēs''tōze, a written declaration of motives, before commencing war.

Latin manifestus, manifestāre, supine manifestātum; French manifester, manifeste, manifestation; Italian manifesto.

Manifold, mān'ī.fold (not mēn'ī.fold), oft repeated, complicated; man'ifold-ly; man'ifold-writer, -rite'er, an apparatus for taking several copies of a writing at once.

Many is pronounced mēn.y, and so are its compounds, many-headed, many-handed, &c., but manifold is not so pronounced.

Man'ikin, a little man (used in contempt). Manakin, a baboon.

"Manikin," double dim. man-y-kin. "Manakin," Fr. manaquin.

Manilla, ma.nīl'.lah, a ring or bracelet worn by Africans, a piece of money shaped like a horse-shoe, used in Africa, a coarse fabric woven from cocoa or palm fibre.

Manilla cheroot, ma.nīl'.lah she.root', a delicate cigar.

"Manilla" (a ring, &c.), Spanish manilla (Latin manus, a hand).

"Manilla" (cloth, &c.), Manilla, one of the Philippine islands.

Maniple, mān'ī.pl, a small band of soldiers; manipular, ma.nīp'ū.lar, adj. of maniple.

Manipulate, ma.nīp'ū.late, to work up with the hands; manip'ulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), manip'ulāt-ing.

Manipulation, ma.nīp'ū.lay''shūn, work done by the hand; manipulative, ma.nīp'ū.la.tīv; manip'ulative-ly.

Manip'ulator; manipulatory, ma.nīp'ū.la.t'ry.

"Maniple," Lat. mānīpūlus, mānīpūlāris (mānus plico, to fill a hand).

"Manipulate," Fr. manipuler, manipulation, manipulateur (Lat. manus plico, to ply with the hand), a badly compounded word.

Manitou, mān'ī.too, the spirits or gods of the Amer. Indians.

Manna, mān'.nah, food, a drug. Man'ner, method (q.v.)

Mannite, mān'.nīte, sugar of the drug manna.

"Manna," Hebrew man hu? what is this? Exodus xvi. 31.

"Manna" (the drug), corrupt for mana, Latin manāre, to flow.

Mān'ner, way, method. Manna, a drug. Man'or, an estate.
Man'ners, behaviour. Man'ors, manorial estates.

Mannerism, măn'ner.izm, imitation of others or of oneself, a uniform speciality of style; manner-ist.

Man'ner-ly, well-behaved; man'nerli-ness (Rule xi.)

In a manner, to a certain degree. (French manière.)

Manœuvre, mă.nũ.v'r, management with artifice, tactics, to move troops or ships, to exercise men in tactics;
manœuvred, ma.nũ.verd; manœuvring, ma.nũ.vring;
manœuvrer, ma.nũ.vrer, one who acts with artifice.

French manœuvre, manœurer (main œuvre, hand work).

Manometer, mă.nôm'.ē.ter, an instrument for measuring the density [or rarity] of air from its elasticity; mano- metrical, măn'.ō.mēt'.rī.kāl; manoscope, măn'.ō.skōpe.
 (Except in tele-scope and panta-scope the vowel before -scope is always -o-, Rule lxxiii.)

Gk. manos metron, measure of rarity, manos scopeo, I view the rarity.

Manor, măn'.or. Manner, măn'.ner. Manna, măn'.nah.

Manor, the estate which a feudal lord held in possession for the use of his household; manorial, ma.nōr'ri.al; manor-house, the house occupied by the feudal lord;
lord of the manor, the proprietor of the manor.

Fr. manoir; Low Lat. manerium, manerialis (Lat. manēre, to abide).
 "Manner," Fr. manière. "Manna," Heb. man hu? what is this?

Mān'sard roof, the curb roof, devised by Mansard the Fr. architect.

Mānse (1 syl.), the dwelling-house of a Scotch clergyman.

Mansion, măn'.shũn, a grand house or hall.

Low Latin mansura, a parsonage; mansum, a mansion (Latin manēre, supine mansum, to abide).

Manslaughter, măn slaw'.ter, the killing of a human being in sudden heat without previous malice; man-slay'-er.

Old English mann slaga, man'slayer, mann slæge, man slaughter.

Mantel, the frame round a fire-stove. Mantle, man'.t'l, a robe.

Mantel-piece, -peece, the frame of a fire-place; mantel- shelf, plu. mantel-shelves, -shelvz, the shelf above a mantel-piece. (Latin mantelium or mantēle, a mantle.)

Mantilla, măn.til'.lah, a Spanish scarf. (Spanish mantilla.)

Mān'tis, plu. mantises, a genus of insects. (Gk. mantis, a prophet.)

The word is applied by Theocritus to the cicada. Idyl. x. 18. The true mantises are called the praying insects, because their front legs are folded together as hands are folded in prayer.

Mantle, măn'.t'l, a robe, to robe. Mān'tel [of a fire-place].

Mantled, măn'.t'ld; mant'-ling, investing, spreading over.

Latin mantile, mantēle, mantelium or mantellum.

- Mantua-maker, măn'tu'ah mā'ker, a lady's dressmaker.
 French manteau; Italian manto; Latin mantle, a mantle. The derivation from Mantua, in Italy, is mere trifling.
- Manual, măn'.ă.ăl (not manuel), a small hand-book, done by the hand, as manual labour; man'ual-ly.
- Sign-manual, sine măn'.ă.ăl, the royal signature.
 Latin manuālis; French manuel (wrong); manus, the hand.
- Manufacture, măn'.ă.făk''.tchūr, articles made by machinery, to make articles by machinery.
- Manufacturer, măn'.ă.făk''.tchūr.rēr, one who manufactures; manufactory, măn'.ă.făk''.tō.ry (or factory), the place where articles are manufactured; manufactured, măn'.ă.făk''.tchūr.d; manufactur-ing, măn'.ă.făk''.tchūr.ing.
 French manufecture, v. manufacturers, manufacturier (Latin manū fācere, supine factum, to make by the hand).
- Manumit, măn'.ă.mīt', to emancipate; măn'umitt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), man'umitt-ing; manumission, măn'.ă.mīsh''.ăn.
 Latin manūmissio, manūmittō (manus mittēre, to send from one's hand, that is, not to "hold in hand" any longer).
- Manure, mă.nūre', dung for the soil, to put manure in the soil; manured' (2 syl.); manur-ing, mă.nūre'.ing; manūr'-er.
 Manure means "hand-work," French main-œuvre [tillage by] hand-labour. So Milton uses the word "Yon flowering arbours: with branches overgrown, that mock our scant manuring" [handy-work].
- Manuscript, a literary production in writing, contracted into MS.sing., MSS.plu. (Lat. manū scriptum, written by hand.)
- Manx, sing. and plu., the language of the Isle of Man, a native of the isle, produced in the isle, peculiar to the isle: as a Manx-cat. Manx-man, plu. Manx-men, The Manx.
 The name of a people ending in -sh, -ch soft, or -x, have two plurals, one collective by placing The before the word: as The Manx, The English, The Scotch, and the other partitive by adding -men: as 2, 3.. Manx-men, English-men, Scotch-men, &c.
- Many, men'.y, (comp.) more, (super.) most, a great number;
Much, (comp.) more, (super.) most, a great quantity.
The many, the multitude. Mani-fold, măn'.ă.fold (not mēn'.i).
Many a one, Many a day, Many an April, Many a man, &c.
- ¶ The indef. art. a, which usually stands before the adjective comes after "many," "what," "such": What a piece of work is man! Such a Roman. Many a man and many a maid (Milton).
- ¶ If too, so, how, or as precedes the adj. the article is again removed and placed between the adj. and its noun: as too great an honour, so excellent a man, how large a letter, as strange a compound as....
- ¶ If great precedes "many," the article is placed before great: as a great many men.
- "Manifold" is the only compound of "many" which changes -y into -i, and sounds the first vowel as a, not e. This arises from a blundering association of the word with mani-fest, mani-kin, mani-ple, &c., with which it has no connection.
- Compounds of many: many-cleft, many-coloured, many- cornered, many-flowered, many-headed, many-leaved, many-legged, many-leagued, many-lettered, many-mastered, many-parted, many-peopled, many-petaled, many-sided, many-toned, many-tribed, many-twinkling, many-valved, many-veined, many-voiced, &c., &c.

"Many," "Much," are neither of them from the same root as more, most, but are positives supplied.

"Many" is Old Eng. menigeo, a multitude, whence menig or manig.

"Much" is Old English muchel, mucel, or mycel, great, much.

"More," "Most," are the degrees of mæg or mæg, the root of mægen or mægen, strength, (comp.) mæg-re, (super.) mæg-ost (ma're, m'ost).

Maori, may'.ō.rī, one of the natives of New Zealand, adj.

Map, a chart, to draw a map; mapped, māpt; mapp'-ing (R. i.); mapp'-er. Map [of the land]. Chart [of the sea].

Latin mappa; French mappemonde, a map of the world.

Maple, may'.pl, a tree; maple-tree; maple-sugar, -shoog'.ar.

Old English mapel-treo or mapul-treo, mapeld-ern, a maple-grove.

Mar, to injure; marred (1 syl.), marr'-ing (Rule i.) Mars.

Old English merr[an], past merrde, to obstruct, to scatter, to corrupt.

Marabūt, mah'.rah.boot, one of the royal priesthood of Barbary, Guinea, &c., greatly venerated by the Moslem negro. The Great Marabūt ranks next to the king.

Arabic marbouth, a cenobite or religious devotee.

Marabout, mah'.rah.boo, a plume made of the wing or tail feathers of the marabout stork.

Marabout hat, a hat with marabout feathers.

Maranatha, mār'ra.nay'.rah, may the Lord come quickly [to take vengeance] 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

Maraschino, mār'ras.ke', no, a liqueur made from cherries.

It is made of the marasca cherry of Dalmatia.

Marauder, mā.rau'.der, a plunderer, a freebooter;

Maraud', to plunder; maraud'-ed (R. xxxvi.), maraud'-ing.

French marauder, maraudeur.

Maravedi, mah'.rā.vā'.dě, a Spanish coin less than a farthing.

Marble, mar'.b'l, a calcareous stone, a plaything, to colour in imitation of marble; marbled, mar'.b'ld; mar'bling, mar'bler, mar'bly, marble-cutter, marble-mill, marble-quarry; marble-works, -wurks; marble-worker, &c.

Arundelian marbles, a.rūn.dee'.lā.ñ mar.b'lz, certain statues and busts purchased by Lord Arundel of W. Petty, and given to the Oxford University in 1627.

Elgin marbles, Elg'.in (-g. hard, not El.jin), fragments of Athenian statuary collected by Thomas Lord Elgin, in 1802, and purchased for the British Museum in 1816.

French marbre; Latin marmor, v. marmōrāre..

March, martch, the third month of the year, military step, a military journey, to move with a march; marched (1 syl.), march'-ing, march'-ing-ly. Forced march.

Mad as a March hare, wild and disorderly as a hare in the rutting season. Marsh, a meadow.

"March" (the month), Latin Martius, Mars, the Roman war-god.

"March" (to walk), Fr. marche, v. marcher; Low Lat. marchiāre.

"Marsh" (a meadow), Old English mersc, mersc-land.

Marches, marsh'-es, frontier-lands, march'-es, journeys, doth march. Marshes, marsh'-es, meadows. March-er, marsh'-er, warder of a frontier, march'-er, one who marches.

Riding the marches, walking the bounds of a parish.

Marchioness, mar'-shōn-ess, wife of a marquis, a lady who has the rank of a marchioness.

The Medieval Latin word for "marquis" is marchio, and for "marchioness" marchionissa. We have taken the French "marquise" for the man, and the Low Latin word for the woman.

"Marches" (frontier-lands), Old Eng. meare, meare-land, borderland.

"Marshes" (meadows), Old English mersc, mersc-land, meadowland.

Mārc (1 syl.), fem. of stallion, stāl'-yŭn, (both) horse (1 syl.), a quadruped. Mayor, mair, (fem.) mayoress, mair'-ess.

Night-mare, nite'-mare, an incubus; plu. night-mares.

Mare's nest, mairz nest, a fancied discovery which turns out to be no discovery at all.

Mare's tail, a marsh plant. Marc's tails, streaky clouds.

"Mare," Old English meare. "Stallion," Welsh ystalwyn.

"Mayor," Spanish mayor, mayora; French maire; Latin major.

"Night-mare," Old English mere-fee or niht mærc.

"Mare's tail" is not the same plant as "Horse's tail," the former is equisetum, a cryptogam, and the latter Hippuris, a monogynious plant. The habitat of the former is a moist shady spot, such as woods and plantations, of a latter, ditches or ponds.

Maréchal, mār'-ra-shāl, the highest military title in France.

Marshal, mar'-shāl, chief officer of arms. (See Marshal.)

Marischal College (Aberdeen'), mar'-shāl colledge.

Founded in 1593 by George Keith, fifth earl of Marischal.

"Marechal," Low Latin marescallus; Anglo-Saxon mare-sealc, master of the horse.

Margaric, mar-gŭr'-rik, pertaining to pearls or to margarine.

Margarine, mar'-ga-rĭn, the pearly solid portion of oil or fat (-ine denotes a simple substance or element).

Margarate, mar'-gŭ-rate, a compound of margaric acid with a base (-ate denotes a salt formed by the union of an acid in -ic with a base. -ic means "most highly oxidised.")

Margarite, mar'-gŭ-rite, pearl-mica (-ite denotes a fossil, an ore, a mineral). Margaret, a woman's name.

Marguerite, mar-gwē-reet, the large field daisy.

Latin margŭrita; Greek margŭritēs, a pearl, the white daisy.

Margin, mar' djîn, the border; marginal, mar' djî.nâl; placed in the margin; pertaining to the margin; marginal-ly; marginate, mar' djî.nate, to set off with a good margin; margînat-ed (Rule xxxvi.), margînat-ing (Rule xix.)

Latin margo, gen. marginis, marginâlis, v. marginâre.

Margrave, fem. margravine, mar'.grâve, mar'.gra.veen', a German title, similar in origin to our marquis, that is the lord warden of a march or frontier; margraviate, mar.grâv'.i.ate (not mar.gra.vate), the territory over which a margrave has jurisdiction.

German markgraf, markgräfin, markgrafschaft. Our words are from the French, and both destroy the character of the word (markgraf, count or earl of the marches) by omitting k or c, and changing graf (earl) into grave. French margrave, margraviat.

Marie Louise, mah'.ree loo'.êzé', a pear.

So named by the Abbé Duguesne, in honour of Marie Louise, Archduchess of Austria, second wife of Napoleon I.

Marigold, mâr'ri.gold, a flower; marigold-window, also called a Catherine-wheel window, a rosace (rô.zarce') or rose window, a large round church window, especially used in "lady chapels." Marygold, £100,000.

"Marl" is "Mary," the Virgin, mother of Jesus Christ.

Marine, mâ.reen', pertaining to the sea; marine'-engine, -en'.gîn; marine'-glue, -glu; marine'-soap, -sôpe; marine'-stores, -stores (1 syl.), old odds and ends of ship stores.

Mariner, mâr'ri.ner, a seaman; mar'iner's compass.

The pronunciation tells us we have taken the word from the French marine; Latin mārinus (māre, the sea; Hebrew mar, bitter).

Mariolatry, mair'ri.ôl'.ă.try, worship of Mary the Virgin; mariolater, mair'ri.ôl'.ă.ter, a worshipper of Mary...

Latin Maria; Greek Marias; French Marie.

Marinorama, ma.ri'.no.rah'.mah, sea views on the plan of a panorama or diorama.

A wretched hybrid, Latin mārinus, Greek horāma, marine views; "pelagorama," pêl'.ă.go.rah'.mah, would be Greek.

Marionette (Fr.), mâr'ri.ô.nêt', a puppet; marionettes, -netz.

So called from Marion, an Italian, who introduced them into France in the reign of Charles IX.

Marital, mâr'ri.tâl, pertaining to a husband. (Latin māritâlis.)

Maritime, Marine, mâr'ri.time, mâ.reen'.

Maritime, bordering on the sea, connected with sea matters, as maritime town, maritime affairs, maritime laws.

Marine, produced in the sea, belonging to the sea, thrown up by the sea, enjoying sea views or breezes: as marine productions, marine shells, marine parade, &c.

"Maritime," Lat. māritimûs. "Marine," mārinus, Fr. marine.

Marjoram, mar'.djo.râm (not -rum), an aromatic herb.

A corrupt form of the Latin majoran[a], German majoran. The French form marjolaine is even worse than our own.

Mark. Marc, Marque, mark, licence of reprisals. Marquee,

Mark, a token, a symbol, a coin = 13s. 4d.; to make a mark; marked (1 syl.), mark'-ing, mark'-er.

Marksman, one who shoots at a mark or object.

Trade-mark, a symbol used by merchants to identify their goods. To mark down, to mark off, to mark out.

Marc, refuse of fruit from which the juice has been extracted.

Marquee, mar.kee', a large field-tent.

"Mark," Old English marc, v. marc[ian]. "Marc," French marc.

"Marque," French marque. "Marquee," French marquise.

Market, a place of mart, to deal; mark'et-ed (Rule xxxvi.); mark'et-ing. Mark'etings, goods brought home from market. Mark'et-able, marketable-ness.

Market-bell, rung at the opening and closing of market;

Market-cross, market-place, market-house, market-day;

Market-gardener, one who rears and sells fruits and vegetables for the public market; market-geld;

Market-penny, a percentage taken by those who sell goods for another; market-price, the price charged for goods at market; market-town, a town in which a public market is held; market-man, plu. market-men;

Market-woman, plu. market-women, -wim'n, one who attends market to sell her wares.

German markt, markt-tag, market-day, markt-geld.

Marl, lime with clay and mould; to manure with marl; marled (1 syl.), marl'-ing, marl'-y; clay-marl, where the clay predominates; marl-clay, where the lime predominates; shell-marl, marl containing fresh-water shells; marl-stone; marlaceous (Rule lxvi.), mar.lay'shě'ūs.

Welsh marl, marliog, marly; marliad, a marling.

Marline, mar'.lin, twine for twisting round cables to preserve them; marl, to bind with marline; marled (1 syl.)

Marl'ing-hitch, a hitch used in marling a rope.

Marling-spike, an iron prong used for a fid, &c.

Spanish merlin; French merlin; German marling, marlien; -line (of "marline") is a blunder for lien, a bond.

Marmalade (not marmelade), mar'.ma.laid, a preserve of Seville oranges, a conserve of quinces, &c.

The word ought to be marmelade, as it comes from the Portuguese word marmelo, a quince, marmelad, conserve of quinces; Spanish marmelada; French marmelade.

Marmoset, mar'.mō.zět, smallest of the monkey tribe.

French marmouset (marmotter, to chatter). The little chatterer.

Marmot, mar'mōt, the Alpine rat. (French marmotte.)

Maroon, mă.roon'. Morone, mo.rōnē', a mulberry colour.

Maroon', a chestnut colour, a free negro-slave escaped to the woods, to leave a sailor on a desolate shore; ma'rooned' (2 syl.), maroon'-ing, maroon'-er.

A corruption of the Spanish cimarron, an unruly man or beast.

"Maroon" (chestnut colour), French marron, a chestnut.

"Morone" (mulberry colour), Lat. mōrum, Gk mōrōs, a mulberry.

Marplot, mar'.plōt, one who spoils a plan by interference.

Marque, mark. Marc. Mark. Marquee, mar.keē' (q.v.)

Marque, licence given to a subject in time of war to make reprisals on an enemy's chattels; letters of marque, licence granted to a private person in time of war to seize the ships or goods of an enemy.

Marc, the residuum of fruit after the juice has been expressed.

Mark, a symbol, a token, to make a mark.

Teutonic marck, marche, mearc, a frontler; the licence was first granted to those living on frontiers who, being especially subject to depredations, were permitted to make reprisals.

"Marc," French marc. "Mark," Old English mearc, v. mearc[ian].

Marquee, mar.keē', a large field tent. (French marquise.)

Marquetry, mar'.kwē.try, ornamental inlaid work in furniture.

French marqueterie, v. marqueter, to variegate.

Marquis, fem. marchioness, a title next below a duke.

Fr. marquis; Low Lat. marchionissa. Low Lat. for "marquis" is marchio. We have taken the French word for the man, and the Med. Latin word for the woman. A marquis was originally a warden of a marck or mearc (a frontier).

Marriage. Wedding. Nuptials. Espousals.

Marriage, mă'r.rāge, the consummation of a wedding.

Wedd'ing, the act of uniting in marriage.

Nuptials, nūp'.shē'ūlz, the wedding ceremony.

Espousals, es.pōw'.zalz, the consummation of a betrothal.

Marriage-able, mar'rāge.ă.b'l (-ce and -ge retain the -e before -able, Rule xx.); marriage-con'tract.

Marry, mărry, to unite by marriage; married, mă'r.rēd; mar'ry-ing. Marry! an oath (By Mary!).

Marital, mă'r.rī.tāl, pertaining to a husband. (Lat. măritālis.)

Matrimony, măt'.rī.mŭn.y (q.v.); matrimo'nial, &c.

Latin māter, mother.

It is disgraceful that a double r should be used in these words; in bury, where the r is under precisely similar circumstances, we have not doubled the r.

The Latin words are măritus, v. măritāre (from mas, gen. măris, one of the male kind); the word marra (with double r) means a pick-axe or mattock.

We stand alone in this absurdity; thus, Fr. mariage, mariable, v. marier; Ital. maritare, maritaggio; Span. maridable, maridage, v. maridar; Low Lat. maritagium, &c. And we ourselves have only one r in marital. The only excuse for doubling the r in "marry" is to distinguish it from the proper name Mary.

Mars, marz, the Roman war-god, the planet between "Earth" and "Jupiter," 3rd sing. pres. ind. of the v. mar. (Lat. Mars.)

Marsala, mar.sàh'.lah, a Sicilian white wine. (Marsala, Sicily.)

Marseillaise (The), mar'.sè.lāze (not mar'.sāl.yāze), a French revolutionary song by Rouget de Lisle, 1792.

Marsh, plu. marshes, a meadow; marsh'-y, marsh'i-ness (R. xi.)

Marsh centau'ry, a plant; marsh-elder, the guelder rose; marsh-mallow; marsh-mar'igold; marsh-pennywort, -pèn'.nī.wurt; marsh-rock'et, a water-cress; marsh-samphire, -sām'.fīre; marsh-tref'oil (all marsh plants).

Marsh miasma, -mē.āz'.mah, infectious vapours which rise from certain marshes and produce intermittent fevers.

Old Eng. mersc, mersc-land, mersc-mealwe, the marsh mallow.

Marshal. Maréchal. Martial. Marischal. Marshall.

Mar'shāl, chief officer of arms, one who regulates the order of precedence at banquets, &c., to dispose in order; marshalled, mar'.shāld; mar'shall-ing, mar'shall-er.

Marshal-ship (-ship, office or rank); earl-marshal, field-marshal (a title introduced by George I.), the highest military rank in the British army.

Maréchal, mār'rè.shāl, chief military officer in France.

Martial, mar'.shāl, warlike. (Latin martīālis.)

Marischal College, mar.shal (not mār'rī.shāl) cōl'ledge (Aberdeen), founded, in 1593, by George Keith, fifth earl of Marischal, for medical students.

Marshall, mar'.shāl, a proper name.

Low Latin marescallus; Ang.-Sax. mare scealc, master of the horse.

Marsupial, mar'.sū'.pī.āl, having a fetus pouch.

Marsupials, mar.sū'.pī.ālz, such animals as the kangaroo and opossum. Marsupialia, mar.sū'.pī.ā''.lī.ah, the marsupial "order" (-ia denotes an order, a class).

Marsupium, mar.sū'.pī.ūm, the marsupial pouch.

Marsupite, mar'.sū'.pīte, cluster stones (-ite denotes a fossil, these fossils resemble purses).

French marsupial; Latin marsūpium, a pouch.

Mart, a market (contraction of market, German mar[k]t).

Martello-tower, mar.tēl'.lo tōw.er (tow- rhyme to now), a small circular shaped fort for the defence of a seaboard.

So called from the Italian Torri da Martello, erected as a defence against pirates. Warning was given by a "martello" or hammer striking on a bell.

The usual derivation is Mortello (or Myrtle) Bay, in Corsica, where Le Tellier, with only thirty-eight men, resisted a simultaneous sea and land attack by Lord Hood and Major-General Dundas in 1794.

Marten, mar'.t'n, a sort of weasel. Mar'tin, the swift, a name.

"Marten," Fr. marte or martre; Germ. marder; Lat. mustela (mus).

"Martin" (the swallow), Fr. martinet. Some say it is St. Martin's bird, but St. Martin's bird is a raven, not a swallow. Probably the word is mur-ten (for murus ténéo), and hence the Germans call it the mauer-schwalbe, the wall-swallow.

Martial. Marshall. Marshal. Marischal (all mar'.shäl).

Martial, mar'.shäl, warlike; martial-ly, martial-law.

Marshall, mar'.shäl, a proper name.

Marshal, mar'.shal, an officer of arms. Field marshal, the highest military rank in the British army.

Marischal College (Aberdeen), mar'.shäl cöl'lëdže, founded by George Keith, fifth earl of Marischal, in 1593.

"Martial," Latin martialis (Mars, gen. Martis, the war-god).

"Marshal," Anglo-Saxon mare sceale, master of the horse; Low Latin marescallus; French maréchal.

Martin, the house-swallow, a man's name. Marten, a weasel.

"Martin," Fr. martinet. "Marten," Fr. martre. (See Marten.)

Martinet, mar'.tñ.nët, an inflexible disciplinarian.

Martinets, mar'.tñ.nëts, small lines on the back of a sail.

"Martinet," so called from M. de Martinet, a young colonel in the reign of Louis XIV., who remodelled the French infantry.

Martingale, mar'.tñ.gäle, part of the furniture of a horse, part of a ship's rigging. (French martingale.)

Mar'tinmas, the feast of St. Mártin, November 11th (-mass as an affix drops one -s: as Christmäs, Michaelmas, R. viii.)

Mart'let, a sort of swallow. Mar'tinet, a pedantic disciplinarian.

Martyr, mar'.t'r, one who suffers for conscience sake, to suffer as a martyr; martyred, mar'.t'rd; martyr-ing, mar'.t'r-ing; martyr-dom, the death or suffering of a martyr.

Martyrology, mar'.t'r.öl'.džy, a history of martyrs; martyrological, mar'.t'r.öl'dž'ä.käl, adj.; martyrol'ogist.

O. Eng. martyr, martyrdóm; Lat. martyr; Gk. martír (martureo).

Mar'vel, a wonder, to wonder; marvelled, mar'.vëld; mar'vell-ing, mar'vell-er; mar'vell-ous, -us; mar'vellous-ly, marvellous-ness (Rule iii., -EL).

French merveille, merveilleux; Latin mirābilis (mirus, wonderful).

Mary, plu. Marys (is the modern spelling, not Maries).

Marybud, the marigold. (The bud of the Virgin Mary.)

-mas (the word mass used as a suffix, Rule viii.), Christmas, &c.

Masculine, mäs'.kü.lën (not mäs'.ku.line), of the male kind, like a man; masculine-ly. (Latin masculinus.)

Mash. Mesh. Marsh. Mess. Mass.

Mäsh, a mixture of bran and water, to squeeze, to make a mash; mashed (1 syl.), mash-ing, mash-y, mash-tub.

Mēsh, a wick, an interstice of a net. (Old Eng. mæscere.)

Marsh, a fen, a meadow. (Old English mersc.)

Mess, a muddle, a military ordinary. (O. E. mes[an], to feed.)

Mass, the mass, a feast or festival. (Old English mæsse.)

"Mash," Fr. masche, now mâche; Lat. masticare; Gk. mastazo.

Mask (to rhyme with ask), a visor, to wear a mask. Masque, mask (q.v.) Masked, maskd; mask'-ing, mask'-er, masked battery, a battery concealed from the enemy.

German maske, v. maskiren; Italian maschera; French masque.

Mason, a builder [in stone], one who cuts and works up stone, a "freemason"; masonic, ma.sôn'.îk, pertaining to "freemasonry"; masonry, ma'son.ry, the art or trade of a stonemason, the craft of "freemasonry."

French maçon, maçonnerie (maison, a house; Low Latin mansio).

Masorah, mäs'.o.rah, a Hebrew critical work on the text of the Bible; masoretic, mäs'.o.rët''.îk, adj. of masorah;

Masoret'ic points, the points used for Hebrew vowels.

Masorite, mäs'.ô.rite, one of the writers of the masorah.

Hebrew masar, to hand down, masora, tradition.

Masque, mâsk, a sort of drama in masks. Mask, a visor.

Masquerade, mask'.ër.râde', a soiree of persons in masks, to attend a masquerade in character; masquerad'-ed, mask'.er.râde''.ed; masquerad'-ing, masquerad'-er.

French mascarade. It is strange that we should have gone out of the way to "Frenchify" the look of this word. Why not maskarade?

Mass, a large quantity, to form into a mass, the eucharist in the Roman church. Mess, a muddle, a dish of food, a military ordinary. Mash, a mixture of bran and water.

Massed (1 syl.), mass'-ing; massive, mäs'.siv; massive-ly, massive-ness, mass'-y, mass'i-ness; mass-meeting, a large political meeting.

High mass, hi..., that which is chanted or sung.

Low mass, that which is read; mass-book, the missal.

Old Eng. mæsse, masse-bôc, masse-sang, celebration of High mass.

"Mass" (a lump), Lat. massa, lump of dough; Gk. massô, to knead.

Massacre, mäs'.sä.k'r, indiscriminate slaughter, to slaughter wholesale; massacred, mäs'.sä.k'rd, barbarously murdered; massacring, mäs'.sä.k'ring; massacrér, 'sä.k'rer.

French massacre, v. massacrer, massacreur.

Massive, mäs'.siv; massive-ly, massive-ness. (See Mass.)

Mast (to rhyme with fast, last), a spar to support the sails, &c., of a ship, the fruit of beech-trees, &c.; mast'-ed, furnished with masts; mast'-er, a vessel having masts, a title given to young gentlemen, a teacher, an owner; mast'ful, abounding in the fruit of beech-trees, &c.

"Mast" (of a ship), O. E. mæst. "Mast" (nuts), mæste, acorns, &c.

Măst'er, the head of a household, an owner, one well skilled in anything, a teacher, an employer, a title of literary dignity (M.A., master of arts; A.M. (Latin), artium magister, master of arts), a title of respect given to young gentlemen, to subdue, to overcome difficulties; măst'ered, măst'er-ing, măst'er-ful (Rule viii.), măst'er-ful-ly, măst'erful-ness, măst'er-less, măst'er-ly, impe-rious, excellent (adv.), with a master's skill;

Mastery, măs'.tě.ry; master-ship (-ship, office, rank);

Master baker, plu. Master bakers, &c.

Master in Chancery, plu. Masters in Chancery.

(If a preposition separates a compound noun, the plu. "-s" is added to the word before the preposition.)

Master-leaver, -lee'.ver; master-stroke; master-piece, -peece; master-touch; master-work, -wurk.

French maitre, now maitre, v. maitriser; Latin magister.

Mastic, măs'.tik, an odoriferous gum. (Gk. and Lat. mastiche.)

Masticate, măs'.tik.kâte, to chew; măst'icăt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), măst'icăt-ing (Rule xix.), măst'icăt-or (Rule xxxvii.); măst'icable, măs'.tik.kā.b'l; mastication, -tik.kay'.shūn; masticatory, măs'.tik.kā.t'ry, adapted to mastication.

Lat. masticare, supine masticatum; Gk. mastazō; Fr. mastication.

Mastiff, plu. mastiffs (not mastives, R. xxxix.), măs'.tīfs, a dog.

Fr. mastin, now matin; Low Lat. massatinus (house-dog, mansio, a house, Lat. manere, to abide), a dog to guard the house.

Mastitis, măs.ti'.tis, inflammation of the breast.

Greek mastōs, a breast (-itis denotes inflammation).

Mastodon, măs'.tō.dōn, a genus of extinct "elephants."

Greek mastōs odōn, nipple-toothed; its teeth have from eight to twelve little cones, not unlike "nipples."

Măt, a thick fabric for wiping shoes on, a texture for packages, an article to set dishes on, to entangle, to entwist, to cover with mats; mătt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), mătt'-ing (R. i.)

Welsh mat; Old English meatte; Latin matta, a mat.

Matador, măt'.a.dōr, the man appointed [in Spanish bull-fights] to kill the disabled bull, one of the three principal cards at ombre [om'.bray] and quadrille. (Sp. matador, murderer.)

Mătch, a lucifer, a contest, one equal to another, an espousal, to pit one against another, to pair, to suit; matched (1 syl.), mătch'-ing, mătch'-able, mătch'-er, mătch-măker, mătch'-less, mătch'less-ly, mătch'less-ness.

Match'-lock, a musket fired by a match.

"Match" (a "lucifer"), French mèche; Latin myrus, a candle wick.

"Match" (an equal), Old English maca, a mate.

Măte (1 syl.), a companion, to match. Măt (for the door), Met.

Mate, mat-ed, măte'.ed; măt'ing (Rule xix.), but

Māt, māt't-ed, māt't-ing (Rule i.);

Mate'-less, companionless. Matè, mah'tā, Paraguay tea.

Check-mate, the king so checked that he cannot move.

"Mate" (a companion), Dutch mact.

"Check-mate," Ital. scacco-matto, the squares befooled; Germ. schach-matt, the squares worn-out or forbidden; Span. xaque or mate.

Mater, may'ter (Latin), mother. Dura-mater, dū'rah may'ter, the outer membrane of the brain; pī'a ma'ter, the inner membrane. Alma mater, āl'mah may'ter, the university at which a person has graduated is his alma mater.

Dura mater (Lat.), "hard mother," called hard because it is the toughest membrane of the brain. Pia mater (Lat.), "tender mother," immediately investing the brain. Called mater from the ancient notion that it gave birth to all the membranes of the body.

Materia medica (Latin), ma.tee'.rī.ah mēd'ā.kah, whatever is employed as a medicine, a book containing a description of these substances, their uses, quantities, &c.

Material, ma.tee'.rī.āl, that of which anything is made, essential, corporeal, made of matter (not spiritual); mate'rial-ly, to an important degree, considerably; mate'rial-ness, the state of being formed of matter.

Materiality, ma.tee'.rī.āl''ī.ty, opposed to spirituality.

Materialise (R. xxxi.), ma tee'.rī.āl.ize, to degrade to matter; mate'rialised (5 syl.); mate'rialis-ing (R. xix.)

Materialist, ma.tee'.rī.āl.ist, one who believes that the "soul" and "life" are due to organised matter.

Materialism, ma.tee'.rī.āl.izm, the creed of a materialist; materialistic, ma.tee'.rī.āl.iss''.tīk.

Matériel (Fr.), munitions of war, the baggage and equipments of an army, the instruments, &c., required in any art.
(The following have double "t.")

Matter, material; matters, affairs, signifies; mattered, māt'.terd; mattery, full of matter; matter-less.

As in "letter" (q.v.) the introduction of a second t is much to be regretted, and has no sanction in other languages.

French matériel (wrong), matérialisme!! matérialiste, matérialité, matérialiser, matière, matter; Ital. materia, materiale, materialita, matiera, matter; Lat. matéria, matérialis (from māter, a mother).

The only words in Latin with double t are matla, a mat, matlea, a junket, matvus, foul, and matrice [pilæ], soap-balls. If the second t is added to shorten the "a," then it should be added to "material," but in Latin the "a" is long, and the double t diverts the mind from the fact that mater (mother) is the root-word.

Maternal, mā.tēr'.nāl (not māt.ter'.nāl), befitting a mother, pertaining to a mother; mater'nal-ly, like a mother.

Maternity, mā.tēr'.nī.ty, state or character of a mother.

Latin maternalis, maternitas (māter, Greek matér, a mother).

Māth, a crop mowed; after-math, the grass crop which rises after haysel. (Old English māth, a math, or mowing.)

Mathematics (Rule lxi.), māth' ē.māt' .iks, science of numbers; mathematical, māth' ē.māt' .i.kāl, adj., mathematical-ly.

Mathematician, māth' ē.ma.tsh' .ān, one skilled in mathematics. Pure mathematics, the abstract science. Mixed mathematics, mīxt-, mathematics applied to objects, as in buying and selling, land-surveying, and so on.

Mathesis, māth' ē.sis, the science of mathematics.

Greek [ta] māthēmātikā or [hē] māthēmātikē [technē], māthēsis (manthano, to learn); Lat. māthēmātica, māthēmāticus, mathēsis.

Maties, māt' .iz, the best Scotch cured herrings. Mathes, māth' .ez.

Matin, māt' .in, used in the morning. Mat'ing, a texture of jute.

Matins, māt' .inz, morning prayers. Ves'pers, evening prayers.

Matinal, māt' .i.nāl, pertaining to the morning;

Matutinal, mā.tū' .tš.nāl, early in the morning.

Matinée musicale (French), mat' .e.nay mu'.si.kahl', a morning concert. Mat'inee, a reception in the morning.

(This is an English use of the French word matinée).

"Soirée matinale," sometimes seen in announcements meaning a "morning entertainment," is nonsense. "Soirée" (from "soir," evening) is only applicable to evening assemblies, and "matinale" added is a contradiction.

Fr. matin, matinal, matinée, matines; Lat. mātūtīnus, mātūtīnālis.

Matrass. Mattress. Matrice or Matrix.

Matrass, māt' .rās, a chemical vessel also called a cucurbit.

Mattress, māt' .trēs, a cushion for a bed.

Matrice, māy' .trīs or Matrix, may' .trix, a mould.

"Matrass," Fr. matras (du Latin matracium, de māter, à cause de son gros ventre). Dict. Univer. des Scien., &c.

"Mattress," Welsh matras; German matratze; French matelas.

"Matrice or Matrix," Fr. matrice; Germ. matrize; Lat. matric.

Matrice, plu. matrices, may' .trī.seez. (See Matrix.)

Matricide, may' .trī.sīde (not māt' .rī.sīde), mother-murder;

matricidal, may' .trī.sī' .dāl, adj.

Latin mātrīcīda, mātrīcīdium (māter cædo, to kill a mother).

Matriculate, ma.trīk' kŭ.lāte, to become enrolled in a university;

matric'ulāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), matric'ulāt-ing (Rule xix.);

matriculation, ma.trīk' kŭ.lay' .shŭn, enrollment...

Latin mātrīculātio (mātrīcula, a list or roll).

Matrimony, māt' .rī.mŭn.y, the marriage state; matrimonial, māt' .rī.mō' .nā.āl; matrimo'nial-ly. (See Marry.)

Latin mātrīmōnium (māter, a mother).

Matrix, plu. matrices, may' .trix, may' .trī.seez, a mould.

Latin matrīx, plu. matrīces, the womb, (māter, a mother).

Matron, may' .trŏn (not māt' .rŏn), the mother of a family, the woman superintendent of a hospital; ma'tron-ly, ma'- tron-al; matronise (R. xxxi.), may'trōnize; ma'tronised (3 syl.); matronis-ing (R. xix.), ma'trōnize-ing.

Latin matrōna, matrōnālis; French matrone.

Matter, māt'ter, that of which a thing is made, the subject of a book, discourse, or thought, type set-up, ailment, pus.

Mattery, mat'tery, full of pus; matter-less, without pus.

Matter (verb), only used in the third persons: It matters not, signifies not; it mattered not, signified not; no matter, never mind, it is of no importance. (See Material.)

Welsh mater; French matière; Latin māteria, matter, material.

"Matter" (pus), Welsh madru, to fester, madrudd, &c.

Mätting, a fabric made of jute, &c. Mät'in, morning prayer.

"Mätting," Welsh mat; Latin matta.

"Matin," French matin; Latin mātūtīnus.

Mattock, māt'tōk, a pick-axe for "grubbing." (Welsh matog.)

Mattress, Matrass. Matrice or Matrix.

Mattress, māt'trēs, the cushion of a bed. (Welsh matras.)

Matrass, māt'rās, a cucurbit. (Fr. matras; Lat. matracium.)

Matrice, may'tris, a mould. (Fr. matrice; Lat. matrix.)

Mature, nature', ripe, to ripen; matured' (2 syl.), matur-ing (Rule xix.), nature'ing; mature'-ly; mature'-ness.

Maturity, ma.tū.rī.ty, ripeness, completion; maturescent, māt.tū.res'sent; maturation, māt.tu.ray''shūn.

Maturate, māt.tu.rate (not ma.tū.rate), to ripen; mat'urāt-ed, mat'urāt-ing (R. xix.); maturative, -tīv.

Lat. mātūrātio, mātūrescens, gen. mātūrescentis, mātūrītas, matūrus, v. mātūrāre, supine mātūrātum.

Matutinal, māt.tū'ti.nal, early in the morning. Mat'inal (q.v.)

Latin mātūtīnālis, mātūtīnus, soon in the morning.

Maudlin, maud'lin, sentimentally drunk, fuddled.

A corruption of Magdalen, who is drawn with eyes swollen with weeping; Magdalen College is pronounced Maudlin.

Maugre, mau'ger, notwithstanding. (Fr. malgré, in spite of.)

Maul, to beat and bruise. Mall, maul or māl, a heavy wooden hammer; mallet, māl'let, a small mall; mauled (1 syl.), maul-ing. Maul-stick, the stick on which a painter rests his arm while painting.

Latin malleus, a hammer, v. matteo; French mail, maillet.

Maund, a hand-basket, a gift doled out on Maundy Thursday.

Maun'dy, the office read by Roman Catholics during the feet-washing before Good Friday. Monday, mūn'.day.

Maundy Thursday, the day before Good Friday.

"Maund," O. Eng. mand or mond, a basket, mundlan, a little basket.

"Maundy," a corruption of mandātum, from the words of the Lord after washing his disciples' feet, mandātum novum do vobis (a new commandment give I unto you), John xlii. 34.

Maunder, maun'.der, a beggar, to mutter to oneself, to saunter about mumbling; maundered, maun'.derd; maun'der-ing, maun'der-er. (An old cant word, Halliwell).

Latin mando, to champ [the bit], to chew. A maunderer "chews the cud of sweet or bitter fancy" as he saunters along.

Maundril, maun'.dril, a pick used in coal-mines.

Maundy, maun.dy. Monday, mūn'.day. (See Maund.)

Mausoleum, maw'.sō.lee''.ūm (not maw.sō'.lē.ūm), a stately tomb; mausolean, maw'.so.lee''.ān, adj. of mausoleum.

So called from the monument of Mausōlus, king of Caria, erected by his widow, and considered one of "the seven wonders."

Mauve, mōve, a dye. Move, moov, to stir.

French mauve; Latin malva, a mallow, the flowers of which plant are marked with "mauve" hues.

Mavis, may'.vīs, the song-thrush, the red-wing, the swine-pipe.

Fr. mauvīs (de ala mavis, à cause du dégât que font ces oiseaux).

Maw, the craw of a fowl. More, an additional quantity. Moor, q.v.

Maw-worm, -wurm, an intestinal worm. (O. E. maga.)

Mawkish, maw'.kish, insipid; maw'kish-ness, maw'kish-ly.

Maxilla, plu. maxillæ, max'il'.lah, max'il'.lē, the upper jaw, the bones in which the teeth are set; maxillar, max'il'.lar, adj.; maxillary, max'il'.lā.ry (not max'il'.la.ry); max-illiform (not -aform), max'il'.lī.form, jaw-shaped.

Latin maxilla, plu. maxillæ, maxillaris (mala, the cheek).

Maxim, max'.īm, a precept, an adage. (Fr. maxime; Lat. maxīma.)

Maximum, max'.ī.mūm, the greatest number or quantity;

Minimum, mīn'.ī.mūm, the smallest number or quantity.

Maximise (R. xxxi.), max'.ī.mīze, to carry to a maximum; maximised (3 syl.); maximis-ing (R. xix.), max'.ī.mīze-ing.

Latin maximum, super. of magnus, great; French maximum. ("Maximity," overpowering greatness (Latin maximītas) might be introduced.) "Minimum," Latin super. of parvus, little.

May, the fifth month, an auxiliary verb, (past) might, mīte.

May-ing, celebrating May-day. May-flower, hawthorn.

May-bug, the lady-bird or chafer; May-day, 1st of May;

May-duke, a cherry (corruption of Medoc, a district of France famous for cherries); May-fly, plu. May-flies, -flīzē.

May-morn; May-pole; May-queen or Queen of the May.

May-be, perhaps; Might, mīte. Mite, a coin, an insect.

"May" (the month), Lat. Maius, the growing or sprouting month, not from Maia, mother of Mercury, nor yet from maiores, the elders.

"May, Might," Old Eng. māg[an], past mīhte (g is interpolated).

Mayor, fem. mayor-ess, may'r, may'r'-ess. Mare, a horse.

Mayor, may'r, chief magistrate of a corporate town;

mayoress, the mayor's wife. Mayoralty, may'r'.āl.ty.

French maire; Latin major; Spanish mayor, the superior [officer].

Maz'ard, a black cherry, the jaw, the head.

"Mazard" (cherry), cor. of Mazanderan, "the Garden of Persia."

"Mazard" (jaw), corruption of the Fr. mâchoire (Lat. masticare).

Mazarine, maz'.a.reen, a deep-blue colour.

So called from the wrappers of the mazarinades published in France against Mazarin, the unpopular minister of Louis XIV.

Māze (1 syl.), a labyrinth. Maize, maze, Indian corn. Amaze.

Mazy, may'.zy, intricate; mā'zi-ness, mā'zi-ly.

Amaze' (2 syl.), to astonish; amazed' (2 syl.), amāz'-ing.

"Maze," Old English mase, a whirlpool. "Maize," American mais.

Mazer, may'.zer, a drinking-bowl made of some spotted wood.

German masser, a spotted wood, hence masholder, maple.

Mdle., plu. Mdles., cont. of mademoiselle, plu. mademoiselles, mad'.mwā.zel' (for the plu. we say The mademoiselles), a title given and assumed by unmarried women in professions and trade, who wish to pass for foreigners.

Me, obj. of I. Nom. I, poss. mine, obj. me;

Plu. Nom. we, poss. ours, obj. us.

"Me" is used after the verb To be, and after the words than, but, like, and as, with such pertinacity it is at least doubtful whether it is not correct. C'est moi is the French idiom, not C'est je, and It is me is far more common than It is I. ("Me" is dat. not acc. case.) So again, the French say Il est plus riche que moi, or plus riche que je ne suis, "more rich than me," or "more rich than I am." It is by no means certain that these Gallicisms should be abolished, but grammarians stoutly resist them, and the tendency of the educated classes is more and more in their disfavour. Hence all such sentences as the following are accounted as

Errors of Speech.—

Who shall decide when doctors disagree.

And soundest casuists doubt, like you and me. (Pope.)

Yet oft in Holy Writ we see

E'en such weak ministers as me

May the oppression break (Sir Walter Scott).

Who's there? It is me.

You know it was not me who told him.

It is me that has been the ruin of you.

It is me that has brought you to this misery.

It is not me who will be a trouble to you.

It is me, your friend and master, who advises it.

(The following are not Gallicisms, but bad grammar.)

When me and Patsy went to see him, he was much better.

Who's within? Only me. Who will have this? Me.

But it were vain for you and I (me)

In single fight our strength to try (Prof. Aytoun).

(The following are correct.)

You did not suspect it to be me. You did not know it was me.

That picture is just like me (like to....).

He likes you better than me (than he likes me).

He likes you better than I (than I like you).

It is I, be not afraid.

(It is quite certain that we did not use the object me after the verb to be before the Conquest. We said ic sylf hit com (It am I myself), and Chaucer frequently writes it am I, but never it am me.

Ang.-Sax.—S. Nom. ic, gen. min, dat. me, acc. me.

Pl. Nom. we, gen. user, dat. us, acc. us.

Mead, meed, a meadow, honey-wine. Meed, recompense.

Meadow, mēd' dō, pasture-land; mead'ow-y.

"Mead," O. Eng. mād, mādewe, a meadow or anything that is mown.

"Mead" (hydromel), Welsh meddy-glyn, meddwol, intoxicating.

"Meed," Old English mēd, reward, wages.

Meagre, mee'g'r, lean, scanty; mea'gre-ly, meagre-ness.

French maigre; Latin mācer, fem. macra, v. mācere, to be thin.

-meal, meel (native suffix), nouns, broken into parts; piece-meal.

Meal, meel, a repast, unsifted flour (the meal of wheat is also called sharps); meal'-y, meal'i-ness (Rule xi.); meal'y-mouthed, mourhd, one who minces unpleasant truths; meal'y-mouthedness, mou'rhēd.ness, disingenuousness.

Piece-meal, piece by piece, into little pieces.

"Meal" (repast), Old English mæl, a meal, mæl-tīma, meal-time.

"Meal" (flour), Old Eng. mehl; Lat. mōlo, to grind, mōla, a mill.

Mean, meen, base, to intend. Mien, meen, deportment.

Mean, to intend; past and past part. meant, ment; meaning, meen'-ing; mean'ing-ly, mean'ing-ness.

Mean-ly, shabbily; mean'-ness (double n), mean-spirited.

Mean, medium; mean-time, equated time, for the nonce; mean-while, meen-wile, "ad interim." In the meantime, In the mean-while, in the interval.

Means, meenz, property, power; by all means, certainly; by no means, on no account; by any means, in any way.

"Means," regarded as the instrument of doing something, is followed by a verb singular: as

The best means of doing it is to employ a broker.

That is a means to an end.

Consuming means soon preys upon itself (Rich. II. II. 1).

"Means," regarded as riches, possessions, power, &c., is followed by a verb plural:

Your means are slender (2 Hen. IV. i. 2).

His means are but in supposition (Merch. of Ven. i. 2).

"Mean" (base), O. E. mēne. "Mean" (to intend), O. E. mæn[an].

"Mean" (medium), French moyen; Latin mediū.

Meander, me.ăn' der, to wind, to flow zig-zag; meandered, me.ăn' derd; meander-ing, me.ăn' der.ing.

Latin Mæander, a river in Caria full of turnings; Greek malandros

Meaning, meen'-ing, signification, intention. (See Mean.)

Measles, mee'z'lz (plu.), a disease to which all children are liable; measly [pork], mee'z'ly..., the flesh of pigs infected with measles. (German maser, the disease with spots.)

Measure, mezh'ūr, an instrument for measuring, a plan of operation, mètre, to ascertain the size, &c.; measured, mesh'ŭrd; meas'ur-ing (Rule xix.), meas'ur-er, meas'ur-able (only -ce and -ge retain the e before -able), meas'urable-ness, meas'urably; meas'ure-less;

Measurement, mez'h'ŭr.ment. Without measure.

Hard measures, harsh dealing. Common measure.

To take measures, to take means to accomplish an object.

Mensuration, mĕn'.sŭ.ray''.shŭn, science of measuring.

Fr. mesure, v. mesuren, mesurcur; Latin mensŭra, v. mensurāre.

Meat, meet, food. Meet, to encounter. Mēte, to measure.

("Meat" has become restricted to its present meaning only since animal food has become the chief diet of man.)

"Meat," Welsh maeth, v. maetha, to take nourishment; Fr. mets.

"Meet," Old Eng. ge-mĕt[an], ge-mĕting, a meeting, an assembly.

"Mete," Old Eng. met[an], past mæt, past part. meten.

Meatus, me.ŭ'tus, a wide duct as the meatus of the ear meŭtus auditōrius. (Latin meŭtus, a passage; meŭre, to go.)

Meaw, me.aw', the loud mewing of a cat. (Imitative word.)

Mechanic. Mechanics. Mechanician. Mechanist. Machinist.

Mechanic, me.kăn'ĭk, a workman in any mechanical employment skilled or otherwise; plu. mechanics.

Mechanics, me.kăn'ĭks, the science of machinery.

(All but five of the sciences with this ending are plural, Rule lxi.)

Mechanician, mĕk'.ă.nĭsh''.ăn, one skilled in mechanical works, one who makes machinery.

Mechanist, mĕk'.ă.nĭst, a maker or inventor of machinery.

Machinist, ma.shee'nĭst, a maker of large or complex machines, one who works a sewing-machine.

Mechanical, me.kăn'.i.kăl; mechan'ical-ly.

Mechanism, mĕk'.ă.nĭzm, mechanical structure.

Mechanical philosophy, me.kăn'.ĭ.kăl fĭ.lŏs'.ŏ.fy, that branch of science which treats of the phenomena of nature so far as they are the results of mechanical forces.

Mechanical powers, the lever, wheel and axle, pulley, screw, and wedge. Some add the inclined plane.

Lat. mĕchānĭca, mĕchānĭcus, māchĭna; Fr. mĕchānique, mĕcanicien (wrong), mĕcanism; Greek mĕchanĕ, mĕchānĭkŏs, ta mĕchānĭka or hĕ mĕchānĭkĕ technĕ, mechanics (mĕchānaomai, to contrive by skill).

Mechlin [lace], mĕk'.lĭn, lace made at Mechlin, in Belgium. (Called in Belgium and France Malines, 2 syl.)

Medal. Meddle. Metal. Mettle.

Medal, mĕd'l, a coin not current, a metal device given as a reward of merit; medallet, mĕd'.ăl.let, a small medal.

Med'all-ist, one who has obtained a medal as the reward of merit. Gold medallist, one who has obtained the highest prize in medals. Medallic, me.dăl'.ĭk, adj.

- Medallurgy, me.dāl'.lur.gy, the art of making and striking medals. (Corruption of Gk. mētallōn ergōn, metal-work.)
- Medallion, me.dāl'.yŭn, an antique medal.
- Meddle, mēd'.d'l, to interfere. (French mesler, now mêler.)
- Metal, one of the 43 metallic elements. (Latin mētallum.)
- Mettle, mēt'.t'l, spirit. (Old English mōdlic, spirit.)
Fr. médaille, médailist, médailon; Ital. medaglia; Lat. metallum.
- Meddle, mēd'.d'l, to interfere. Medal, mēd'.l (see above).
meddled, mēd'.d'ld; medd'ling, medd'ling-ly, medd'ler.
- Meddle-some, mēd'.d'l.sŭm, given to meddling (-some, full of, given to); med'dlesome-ness.
French mesler, now mêler; Lat. miscōre; Greek mignuo [mignumi].
- Mediæval or medieval, mēd'.i.ē''.vāl, pertaining to the middle ages, from the 8th to the 15th cent. (Lat. mēdius ævum.)
- Medial, mē'.dī.āl; mediant. (See Medium.)
- Mediate, mē'.dī.ate, to intervene, to intercede; me'diāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), me'diāt-ing (Rule xix.), me'diating-ly.
Mediately, me'.dī.ate.ly. Immediately, directly.
Mediately, not directly, but acting as a go-between.
Mediation, mē'.dī.ā''.shŭn, intercession.
- Mediator, fem. mediatrix, mē'.dī.ā.tor, mē'.dī.ā.trix; mediatorial, me'.dī.ā.tōr''rī.āl; mediator'ial-ly; mediator-ship, mē'.dī.ā''.tor.ship (-ship, office, rank); mediatory, mē'.dī.a.t'ry, mediatorial.
- ¶ Mediatise (R. xxxi.), mē'.dī.a.tize, to annex a small state to a larger contiguous one; me'diatised (4 syl.), mediat'is-ing.
Mediat'isation, me'.dī.ā.ti.zay''.shŭn.
Latin mediatio, mediator, mediatrix, mediāre, supine mediātum.
French mediat, mediation, mediatisation, mediatiser.
- Medicine, mēd'.i.sĭn (not mēd'.sĭn), physic;
Medical, mēd'.i.kāl. Medicinal, me.dīs'.i.nāl;
Med'ical, pertaining to the art of healing; med'ical-ly;
Medic'inal, of the nature of a medicine; medic'inal-ly.
Medicament, mēd'.i.ka.ment (not me.dīk'a.ment); medica-ment'-al, medicament'al-ly.
Medicate, mēd'.i.kate, to tincture with medicine, to doctor; med'icāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), med'icāt-ing (Rule xix.); med'icāble, curable; medicative, mēd'.i.ka.tiv.
Medication, mēd'.i.kay''.shŭn; medical-man or medical-adviser, -ad.vī.zer, a physician, a surgeon.
Med'icated spirits, a drug mixed with alcohol.
Medicinal waters, mē.dīs'.i.nāl wor'.terz, natural springs impregnated with medicinal properties.
Latin mēdicābilis, mēdicāmentum, mēdicatio, mēdicina, mēdicinālis, v. mēdicāre, supine mēdicātum.

- Medieval, mĕd'ă.ĕ''văl, of the middle ages. (Lat. mĕdius ævum.)
- Mediocre, mĕ'.dĭ.ō''k'r, middle rate, of ordinary talent;
- Mediocrity, mĕ'.dĭ.ōk''rĭ.ty. (Lat. mĕdiōcritas, mĕdiōcris.)
- Meditate, mĕd'ă.tāte, to think on, to muse; med'itāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), med'itāt-ing (Rule xix.), med'itating-ly.
- Meditation, mĕd'ă.tay''shŭn; meditative, mĕd'ă.ta.tĭv; med'itative-ly, med'itative-ness, med'itat-or.
- Latin mĕdĭtātĭo, mĕdĭtātĭvus, mĕdĭtātōr, v. mĕdĭtāri.
- Mediterranean (double r), mĕd'ă.ter.ray''nĕ.ăn (the), the sea lying between Europe and Africa, inland;
- Mediterraneous, mĕd'ă.ter.ray''nĕ.ŭs.
- Latin mĕdĭterrāneum, mĕdĭterrāneus (mĕdĭus terra).
- Medium, plu. mediums and media, mĕ'.dĭ.ŭmz or mĕ'.dĭ.ah, middle rate, midway, means whereby anything is effected, that in which bodies exist or through which they act, the person through whom "spirit manifestations" are made.
- Circulating medium, money, bank-notes, &c.
- Medium-sized, between the largest and the smallest.
- Medial, mĕ'.dĭ.al, average. Me'diant (in Music), the third above the key-note. Sub-me'diant, the sixth (maj. scale).
- Latin mĕdĭum, plu. mĕdĭa; French mĕdĭal, mĕdĭante.
- Medlar (one d), mĕd'.lar, a fruit. Meddler, a busy-body.
- "Medlar," a corruption of mespler, Latin mes'pilus; Greek mes'pilōn (mĕsos pĭlō, moderately constipating or astringent).
- "Meddler" [meseleur], French mesler, now mĕler.
- Medley, plu. medleys (not medlies), mĕd'.lēz, a confused mass, a collection of different sorts. (French meslé, mĕle.)
- Medulla, me.dŭl'.lah, the marrow in long bones, pith; medul'lar; medul'lary, pertaining to marrow or pith;
- Medulla oblongata, me.dŭl'.lah ōb'.long gay''tah, the "marrow" which connects the spinal cord to the skull.
- Medul'la spina'lis, the spinal marrow.
- Medul'lary rays (in Bot.), connecting the pith with the bark.
- Medul'lary sheath, -sheeth; medul'lary substance.
- Latin mĕdŭlla, marrow; Greek muĕlos.
- Medusa, plu. medusæ, mĕ.dŭ'.sah, mĕ.dŭ'.see, sea blubber or jelly-fish; medu'sidans; medusa'ria (-ia, a class, order).
- Medusa*, the mortal Gorgon. Linnæus gave this name to these marine animals because the tentacles in some species resemble the snakes round Medusa's head. (Greek medousa, ruler.)
- Meed, recompense. Mead, meed, a meadow, honey-wine.
- "Meed," Old English mĕd. "Mead" (meadow), Old English mĕd.
- "Mead" (hydromel). Welsh meddyglŷn, meddwol, intoxicating.
- Meek, mild; meek'-ly, meek'-ness, gentleness.
- Old English ge-mĕtlic, modest, ge-mĕtlice, modestly.

- Meerschaum, meer'shūm, a tobacco pipe of magnesian earth mixed with silex. (Germ. meerschaum, froth of the sea.)
- Meet. Mete, to measure out. Meat, meet, animal food.
- Meet, fit, a coming together, to come together; past met, past part. met; meet-ing, an interview, coming together; meeting-house, a place of worship [for dissenters].
- Meet'er. Meter, mē'ter. Metre, mē't'r.
- Meet-er, one who encounters or meets another.
- Me'ter, an instrument to measure with, as gas-meter.
- Metre, me't'r, a French measure of length.
- "Meet," Old English ge-mēttan, ge-mēttung, a meeting.
- "Mete," Old English mettan, past met, past part. meten.
- "Meat," Welsh maethiant, food, maethu, to feed, maeth.
- "Meter," see above "Mete." "Metre," Greek metrōn, a measure.
- Meg'a- (Greek prefix), before any consonant except s. Megal-, before vowels. Megalo- (before -s), great.
- Mega-ceros, mē.gās'ē.rōs, a fossil deer (not the Irish elk). Greek mēga-keras, the great-horn (of the Pleistocene period).
- Megal-ichthys, mēg'ā.līk''rhiss, a sauroid fish. Greek mēgal-ichthys, great fish (of the Coal period).
- Megal-onyx, mēg'ā.lōn''ix, an extinct mammal. Greek mēgal-onyx, long-claw (of the Upper Tertiaries).
- Meg'alo-saurus, plu. megalō-sauri or megalō-saurian, a huge extinct saurian reptile.
- Greek mēgālo-saurōs, great lizard (found in the Oolite, &c.)
- Meg'a-therium, plu. mega-theria, mēg'a rhē'rī.um, mēg'a rhē'rī.ah, an extinct monster sloth.
- Greek mēga-thērion, monster-beast (of the Upper Tertiaries).
- Megrim, mē.grīm, headache confined to one side of the head.
- Fr. migraine; Lat. hemicrania; Gk. hēmi krānion, half the skull.
- Meiocene, mī.o.seen (in Geology), the Middle Tertiaries.
- Gk. meion kainos, less recent, that is, having fewer remains "recent" or existing plants and animals than the group above it.
- Melancholy, mēl.ăn.kōl.y, depression of spirits; melancholic, mēl.ăn.kōl''ik, adj. Melancholia, mēl.ăn.kōl''ī.ah, melancholy madness. (Latin mēlanchōlia, mēlanchōliūs.)
- Gk. mēlanchōlia, i.e., mēlas chōlē, black bile, a redundancy of which was once supposed to be the cause of melancholy.
- Melange (Fr.), me.lānge, a medley, a miscellaneous collection.
- Melanite, mēl.ăn.ite, a grey-black garnet; melanitic, mēl.ăn.īt''ik; melanin, mēl.ăn.nīn, the black pigment of the eye.
- Greek mēlas, black (-ite, a fossil or stony substance).
- Melanochoite, mēl.ăn.nōk''.ro.īt (not mēl.ăn.ō.kroit), chromate of lead. (Greek mēlas chrōa, black colour.)
- Melee, ma.lay, a scuffle, an affray. (French mêlée.)

Mellifluous, mĕl.lif'flu.ŭs, sweet to the ear; mellifluent, mĕl.lif'flu.ent, [words or music] with an agreeable flow; mellifluent-ly; mellifluence, mĕl.lif'flu.ense.

Lat. mellifluŭs, mellifluens, gen. -entis (mel fluo, to flow with honey).

Mellite, mĕl'.lĭte, honey stone. (Gk. mĕli, honey, and -ite, stone.)

Mellow, mĕl'.lo, mature, soft and sweet from ripeness, to ripen; mellowed (2 syl.), mĕl'low-ing, mellow-ish (-ish added to adj. is dim., added to nouns it means "like"); mĕl'low-y, mĕl'low-ness; mellow-toned, -tōnd, having soft tones.

Weish melysu, to sweeten, melys, sweet (mĕl, honey).

Melodrame, mĕl'.o.drām, a play interspersed with songs; melodramatic, mĕl'.ō.drā.măt'ik, sensational; melodramatical, mĕl'.ō.drā.măt'ik.āl; melodramatist, mĕl'.ō.drām'ă.tist; melodrama, mĕl'.ō.drām'ah (not mĕl'.o.drāh'mah).

French mélodrame (Greek mēlōs drama, song [and] drama).

Melody, plu. melodies, mĕl'.ō.dĭz. Harmony, plu. harmonies.

Melody, the tune; harmony, the combination of sounds as in chords and parts. (Melody (air) may consist of single notes, but harmony must deal with combinations.)

Melodious (R. lxvi.), mĕl'.ō.dĭ.ŭs (not mĕl'.ō.djūs), musical; melo'dious-ly, melo'dious-ness; melodist, mĕl'.ō.dĭst.

Melodise (R. xxxi.), mĕl'.ō.dĭze, to form into melody; mel'o-dised (3 syl.); melodis-ing (R. xix), mĕl'.ō.dĭze.ing.

Latin mēlōdia, mēlōdus; Greek mēlōdia, mēlōdōs; French mélodie.

Melon, mĕl'.on (one l), a fruit; mel'on-frame, for raising melons.

(There is a substance which Liebig called mellon, consisting of carbon and nitrogen, which combines with metals to form mellonides.)

Greek mēlōn, a pomaceous fruit; Latin mēlo, gen. mēlōnis, a melon.

Melpomene, mĕl.pŏm'.ē.nē (not mĕl'.po.meen), the tragic muse.

Greek Mēlpōmēnē (mēlpō, to sing); Latin Mēlpōmēnē.

Melrose, mĕl'.rōze, honey of roses. (Latin mĕl rōsa.)

Melt, (past) melt-ed, (past part.) melted or molten, mole'.t'n; melt'-ing, melt'-er. "Molten" chiefly used as an adj.

Old Eng. melt[an], past mealt, past part. molten, metlung, a melting.

Member, mĕm'.ber, a limb, one of a community; membered, mĕm'.berd, having limbs. Dis-membered, &c.

Member-ship (-ship, office, rank).

Member of Parliament, plu. Members of Parliament, par'.lĭ.ment, expressed by the letters M.P., plu. M.M.P.

Latin membrum; French membre, membre du parlement.

Membrane, mĕm'.brane, a thin skin serving to line or cover some part of an animal or plant, as the nose, &c.

Membranous, mĕm'.brā.nŭs. Membranaceous, -nay'.shŭs.

Membranous, consisting of membranes;

Membranaceous (Rule lxvi.), resembling membrane.

Mucous membrane, mū'.kūs, a membrane which lines any open cavity of the body and secretes mucus, as the mucous membranes of the nose, throat, stomach, &c.

Serous membrane, sē'.rūs, a membrane which lines a closed cavity of the body and secretes serum, as the serous membranes of the chest, abdomen, &c.

Filous membrane, fī'.lūs, tough and inelastic like a tendon, as the filous membranes of the dūra ma'ter, capsules of the joints, &c.

Jacob's membrane (tu'nica Jaco'bi), the lining of the retina (from Oliger Jacob, Danish phy. 1650-1701).

Membra'na tympani, -tim'.pā.nī, the drum of the ear.

Membraniferous, mēm'.bra.nīf''ē.rūs, producing membrane. Latin membrāna fero, bearing or producing membrane.

Membranology, mēm'.bra.nōl''ō.gy, a description of the animal membranes. (A hybrid, Latin membrāna with Greek lōgos. Humenol'ogy would be good Greek, hymén, gen. hyménos, a membrane.)

Latin membrāna, membrāneus, membranāceous.

Memento, plu. mementos (R. xlii.), a souvenir. (Lat. memento.)

Memoir, mēm'.wor (not mē'.more), a biographical sketch, a register of facts; mem'oir-ist, one who writes memoirs.

Memorabilia, mēm'.ō.ra.bīl''ī.ah, things worthy to be remembered, things to be borne in memory.

Memorable, mēm'.ō.rā.b'l, remarkable; mem'oräbly.

Memorability, mēm'.ō.rā.bīl''ī.ty.

Memorandum, plu. memorandums or memoranda, mēm'.ō.rān'.dūm, plu. mēm'.ō.rān'.dūmz, mēm'.ō.rān''.dah, notes to help the memory.

Memorial, mē.mōr'ri.āl, in memory of [someone], an address containing a complaint or request, a state paper without subscription or address.

Memorialise, mē.mōr'ri.āl.īze (R. xxxi.), to petition by memorial; memor'ialised (5 syl.), memor'ialis-ing (R. xix.); memor'ial-ist, one who presents or sanctions a memorial.

Memory, mēm'.ō.ry, recollection, the faculty which retains and reproduces at will what has been once learned.

Remem'ber, remem'bered, remem'bering, &c., the verb.

Lat. mēmor, mindful, mēmōrābilis, mēmōrandum, plu. -da, mēmōria, mēmōriālis. ("Memorious" or "memorous" [Lat. memoriosus or memorosus, having a good memory] might be introduced).

Memphian, mēm'.fī.ān, obscure, pertaining to Memphis (Egypt).

Menace, mēn'.āce, a threat, to threaten; men'aced (2 syl.); menac-ing, mēn'.ā.sing (Rule xix.); men'acing-ly; menac-er, mēn'.ā.ser.

French menace; Latin mīnax, gen. mīnācis, v. mīnāri, to threaten.

Menagery, plu. menageries, mě.nàh'.zhě.riz, a place containing a collection of wild beasts.

French ménagerie; Low Latin menagium.

Mend, to repair; mend'ed (R. xxxvi.), mend'-ing, mend'-er.

This contraction of the Latin e-mendo, or French a-mender, wholly reverses the meaning. Menda means "a fault," and it is the prefix which gives it the meaning of correcting a fault.

Mendacious (Rule lxvi.), měn.day'.shūs, false; mendacious-ly, untruly; mendacious-ness, untruthfulness;

Mendacity, měn.dūs'.i.ty. Mendicity, měn.dis'.i.ty.

Mendacity, falsehood. Mendicity, pertaining to beggars.

Latin mendax, gen. mendācis, lying, mendācter (menda, a mistake).

Mendicant, měn'.dī.kant, a beggar; mendicancy, beggary.

Mendicity, měn.dis'.i.ty, pertaining to beggars;

Mendacity, měn.dūs'.i.ty, utter falsity, lying.

Latin mendicans, gen. mendicantis, mendicitas, mendicare, to beg.

Menial, mě'.nī.āl, servile, a servant; me'nial-ly.

Norm. meignal (from meignee, a family), hence our law terms, mese, a house, mesnality, a manor, mesnalty, mesne lord, demesne, &c.

Meniscus, me.nīs'.kūs, a lens crescent-shaped; menis'cal.

Greek méniskōs, crescent-shaped (méné, a crescent).

Menses, měn'.seez, catamenia. (Latin mensis, [once] a month.)

Menstrual, měn'.stru.āl; menstruous, měn'.stru.us.

Latin menstruālis, occurring monthly, menstruōsus.

Menstruum, plu. menstruums or menstrua, měn'.stru.um, a [chemical] solvent, any liquid used as a dissolvent.

Latin menstruum, [acting once] a month. The alchemists thought that the full moon was essential to success in the transmutation of baser metals into gold.

Mensurable, měn'.sū.rā.b'l, able to be measured;

Mensurability, měn'.sū.rā.bīl'.i.ty; men'sural.

Mensuration, měn'.sū.ray'.shūn, the art, act, or science of finding out the dimensions of surfaces or solids.

French mensuration, mensurable, mensurabilité; Latin mensura.

-ment (Latin termination) nouns, instrument, cause of, state, act. It is often added to pure English words: judg-ment, the act of a judge; agree-ment, the state of being in accord.

Mental, měn'.tāl, intellectual; men'tal-ly, mental'ity.

French mental (Latin mens, gen. mentis, the mind or intellect).

Mention, měn'.shūn, expression in words, to express by words; mentioned, měn'.shūnd; men'tion-ing, men'tion-able.

Latin mentio, gen. mentiónis; French mention, v. mentioner.

Mentor, měn'.tor, a wise monitor or adviser; mento'rial.

Mentor, the friend of Ulysses, whose form Minerva assumed when she accompanied Telemachus in his search for his father.

Mephitic, me.fī't.ik, noxious; mephitis, mē.fī'tis, any bad exhalation, especially carbonic acid gas.

Latin mephiticus, mephitis, stinking, harmful to health.

Mercantile, mer'.kän.tile, commercial. (See Merchant.)

Mercator's chart, mer.kay'.torz.tchart, a map with the longitudinal lines parallel; mercator's projection, the making of the longitudinal lines of a map all parallel, and compensating for it by drawing the map in perspective.

Devised by Gerhard Kauffman, whose surname Latinised is Mercator (merchant), 1512—1594.

Mercenary, plu. mercenaries, mer'.sē.nā.riz, one hired to serve in a foreign army; mercenary, actuated by a love of greed. (Latin mercenarius, merces, hire.)

Mercer, mer'.ser, a dealer in silks and haberdashery;

Mercers' company, one of the 12 great liveryies of London.

Mercery, plu. merceries, mer'.sē.riz, goods sold by a mercer.

("Mercery" is a collective noun, and "merceries" is only used when different collections of mercery are referred to.)

French mercier, mercerie: Latin merx, gen. mercis, merchandise.

Merchant, mer'.tchant, a wholesale dealer, one who carries on trade with foreign countries; Greek merchant, Turkey merchant, one carrying on trade with Greece, Turkey, &c.

Merchandise, mer'.tchän.dize; mer'chant-man, a trading ship or vessel; merchant-service, the mercantile marine.

Mercantile, mer'.kän.tile, commercial.

(The irregularity of the h in these words is due to the French, but we have not followed the French in the substitution of a.)

We do not, like the French, term petty traders merchants, but reserve the word as a complimentary term when applied to retail dealers.

We have a large number of words to express a "seller" of goods: For example—

Broker, one who deals in second-hand furniture, pawns, shares, stock (bought and sold on 'Change), &c.

Dealer, one who deals in horses, cattle, carpets, pictures, crockery, game, turnery, tea (in retail), &c.

Factor, one who deals in corn, coals, &c., in a small way.

Furnisher, one who sells all sorts of furniture and household wares.

Maker, one who sells boots and shoes, clocks and watches, &c.

Mercer, one who sells by retail silks and other materials for ladies.

Merchant (besides the use given above), applied to dealers in wine and spirits, hops, corn (in a large way), tea (wholesale), coals (wholesale), timber, seed (wholesale).

Monger, one who sells fish, cheese, iron-ware, news (now generally called a news vendor), fell-monger (seller of skins).

Seller, applied to one who sells books, music, ready-made slops, &c.

Warehouseman, applied to one who sells "Italian wares," fancy goods, &c.

Many other dealers have a special word to express the trade they carry on: as Confectioner, draper, grocer, haberdasher, hatter, poulterer, tobacconist, upholsterer, &c., &c.

Fr. marchandise!! marchand!! mercantile; Lat. mercator, merx, gen. mercis, merchandise, v. mercari, to buy and sell.

Mercury, mer'.kū.ry, "quick-silver," a mineral medicine, the planet nearest the sun; mercurial, mer.kū'.rī.āl, sprightly, light-hearted, containing mercury, mercu'rial-ist.

Mercurialise (Rule xxxi.), mer.kū'.rī.āl.īze, to affect the system with mercury; mercu'rialised (5 syl.), mercurial-is-ing, mer.kū'.rī.āl.īze.ing (Rule xix.)

Latin Mercūrius, mercūriālis; French mercuriel and mercurial.

"Mercurial" (light-hearted), being born under the planet Mercury.

Mercy, plu. mercies, mer'.siz, compassion; merciful (R. viii., xi.), mer'ciful-ly, merciful-ness, mer'ci-less, merciless-ly, merciless-ness. Mercy-seat, -set, the lid of the ark-of-the-covenant. Sister of Mercy, one of the society whose object is to succour the sick and destitute, founded in Dublin in 1827. To be at the mercy of [A], to be wholly in the power of [A]. Mer'cery, goods sold by mercers.

French merci, contraction of Latin misericordia (m'er'ci), miser cor.

Mere, meer, sheer, a pool; mere-ly, only.

"Mere" (sheer), Latin mēre, purely. "Mere" (a pool), Latin māre.

Meretricious, mēr'rē.trīsh''us, like a harlot, having a nominal value far beyond its real worth; meretricious-ly, meretricious-ness. (Latin mērētricius.)

Merge (1 syl.), to swamp; merged (1 syl.), merg'-ing (R. xix.)

Latin mergere, to dip or plunge under; Greek maergō.

Meridian, mē.rīd'.i.ān, noon-day. A meridian, a line drawn on a globe or map from pole to pole, so called because every place under this line has mid-day at the same time.

Meridional, me.rīd'.i.o.nāl, having a south aspect, pertaining to the meridian; merid'ional-ly.

Latin mēridiālis, mēridiānus, mēridiānum (medius dies, mid-day); French méridien (wrong), méridional.

Merino, plu. merinoes (Rule xlii.), me.ree'.nōze, a fabric made of the wool of merino sheep.

Spanish merino, moving (from pasture, to pasture).

Merit, mēr'rit, desert, to deserve; mer'it-ed (Rule xxxvi.), mer'it-ing. Meritorious (Rule lxvi.), mer'ri.tōr'.rī.ūs, praiseworthy; meritor'ious-ly, meritor'ious-ness.

Lat. mērīto, to merit, mērītōrius, mērītum; Fr. mérite, mériter.

Merle, merl. Merlin, mer'.līn. Merlon, mer'.lōn.

Merle, a blackbird. (French merle; Latin mērūla.)

Merlin, a kind of hawk. (Fr. émerillon, the merle hunter.)

Merlon, the projection which alternates with the embrasures on an embattled parapet. (French merlon.)

Mermaid, mer'.maid, a woman from the waist upwards, and a fish from the waist downwards. (Old English meremen.)

There is also the word mere-wyf. The Welsh word is morfogwyn.

Merry, mě'ry, cheerful; mer'ri-ly (Rule xi.), mer'ri-ness; mer'ri-ment. Mer'ry-an'drew, a buffoon. Mer'ry thought, -rhawt, the forked breast-bone of a fowl. Merry-go-round, a round-about [for children, seen at fairs]. To make merry, to enjoy oneself socially.

Mirth, mirth'-ful (Rule viii.), mirthful-ness, mirthful-ly.

Old English mirig or myreg, myrgnes, merriness, myrth.

Merycotherium, plu. merycotheria, mee'.rĭ.kō.rhē''.rĭ.ām (not mě'rri-), plu, mee'.rĭ.kō.rhē''.rĭ.ah, a huge ruminant allied to the Bactrian camel (found in the Drift).

Greek mérukō thērion, the ruminating beast.

Mesembryanthemum, mes.em'.brĭ.ān''.rhē.mūm (not mesambry-anthemum), the ice-plant, &c.; mesembryaceæ, mes.ēm'.brĭ.ā''.sē.ē. (-aceæ in Botany denotes an "order.")

Gk. mēsos-mēbruôn-anthós, embryo in the centre of the flower.

Mesdames, měz'.dāms, plu. of madam. This is the usual English pronunciation. So Messieurs the plu. of Mr. (or monsieur) is pronounced mez'h'urz. In French mesdames is called mey.dahm', and messieurs is called mey.sē'eu'.

Mesentery, mēs'.en.tēr ry, a membrane by which the intestines are attached to the vertēbræ; mesenteric, mēs'.en.tēr'rik, adj., as mesenteric glands, disease, &c. (not misenteric).

Greek mēsēntērōn; Latin mesentĕrium, the midriff, mesentĕricus.

Mesh, a net. Mash, brewers grains. Mass, a heap.

Mesh, strictly means one of the interstices of a net, but we say I have got him in my meshes (net); mesh-y; meshed, mesht, caught. (Old English mæscre, a mesh.)

"Mash," Fr. masche, now mâche. "Mass," Fr. masse; Low L. massa.

Mesmerism, měz'.mě.rĭzm, a state of coma produced by "animal magnetism"; mesmeric, mez.mě'r'rik, adj.

Mesmerise (Rule xxxi.), měz'.mě.rĭze, to produce mesmeric sleep; mes'merised (3 syl.), mesmeris-ing (Rule xix.), mez'.mě.rĭze.ing; mes'meris-er, one who mesmerises; mes'merist, one who believes in mesmerism.

Introduced into Paris, 1778, by Friedrich A. Mesmer (1734—1815).

Mesne, meen, intermediate. Mean, meen, base, to intend.

Mesne lord, a lord who holds of a superior lord.

Mesne process, -prōs'sēss, writs which intervene during the progress of a suit or action.

Mesne profits, profits derived from land while the possession of it has been held by a wrong owner.

"Mesne," Old law French. "Mean" (base), O. E. māne, v. mæn[an].

Mes'o- (Greek prefix) nouns, intermediate, the middle.

Mes'o-cæcum, -sē'.kūm, a part of the large intestine.

A hybrid. Lat. cæcum, the blind gut, so called because (like a "blind alley") it is open only at one end. [A blind needle has no eye.]

Mes'o-carp, -karp (in Bot.), between the epicarp and endocarp.
Greek meso-karpōs, intermediate carp [fruit].

Mes'o-cheleum, kee'.lē.ŭm (in Bot.), the middle part of the labellum of orchids. (Greek chēlē, a claw, a lobe.)

Often spelt chillium, but this is grossly wrong, with another meaning.

Mes'o-colon, -kō'.lōn, the mesentery of the colon.

Greek meso-kōlōn, same meaning.

Mes'o-gastric, -gās'.trik, that which attaches the stomach to the walls of the abdomen. (Gk. gastēr, the stomach.)

Mes'o-lite, -lite, a mineral intermediate between natrolite (3 syl.) and scolezite (skō'.lē.zite).

Greek meso-lithos, an intermediate stone or mineral.

Mes'o-phlœum, -flee'.um, the middle layer of bark.

Greek meso-phloiōs, intermediate bark of plants.

Mes'o-phyllum, -fīl'.lŭm, the fleshy part of a leaf which comes between the upper and lower membranes.

Greek meso-phyllon, the middle part of a leaf.

Mes'o-sperm, -sperm, the middle coat of seed.

Greek meso-sperma, the middle [coat of] seed.

Mes'o-sternum, -sternum, the lower half of the middle segment of the thorax in insects.

Greek meso-sternon, middle [segment of] the breast.

Mes'o-thorax, -thō'.rax, the posterior part of the ali-trunk or thorax of insects, which bears the posterior wings and third pair of legs. (Greek thōrax, thorax or ali-trunk.)

Mes'o-type, -tipe, a mineral called natrolite, intermediate between analcime (3 syl.) and stilbite (2 syl.).

Greek meso-tūpōs, [of an] intermediate type.

Mes'o-zoic, -zō'.ik (not -zoik), the secondary geological period including the triassic, the lias, the oolite, the wealden, and the cretaceous groups. (Greek zōē, life.)

Mess. Miss. Mass. Moss (Rule v.)

Mess, a dish of food, a military ordinary, disorder; to dine at mess; messed, mest; mess'-ing; mess-mate.

Miss, the title given to young ladies, failure, to fail.

Mass, a religious service, a heap. (O. E. mæsse; Fr. masse.)

Moss, a family of cryptogams (Fr. mousse; Lat. muscus.)

"Mess" (food), Old E. mese, a table, v. mes[an], to eat; Lat. mensa.

"Mess" (confusion), Lat. miscēre, to mix, to throw into confusion.

"Miss" (a young lady), cont. of mistress. (to fail), O. Eng. miss[an].

Message, mēs'.sŭge, an errand. Messuage, mēs'.swage, a house.

Messenger, mēs'.n.djer, one who takes a message.

(This word ought to be messenger as it is in French.)

French message, messenger; Latin mittere, supine missum, to send.

"Messuage," Old F. mesonage, meson, now maison; Low L. messuagium.

Messiah, mēs.sī'ah, "the anointed one." (It does not mean "The Sent," and has no connection with the Lat. missus.)

Messiah-ship (-ship, office, rank); messianic, -ān'ik.

Heb. M[e]s[i].āh, anointed. Applied by Christians to Jesus Christ.

Messieurs, mez'h'arz, plu. of Mr. [mister]. Measures, mez'h'arz, q.v.

Messieurs (mes-sieurs, my sirs) is the Fr. plu. of Monsieur (my sir). In French it is pronounced mey.se'eu', but in English mez'h'arz, when preceding proper names: as Messieurs Jones, Smith, & Co., but when not followed by proper names we call the word mēs.seu'rz. It is never written or printed in full, but always in the contracted form of Messrs. (in French MM.); neither is the sing. ever written or printed in full, but always in the contracted form of Mr. (in French M.)

The fem. of "Mr." is Mrs. mīs'iz, plu. Mesdames, mez'dāms (in Fr. mey.dahm'), but the plural is almost exclusively used in the headings of newspaper announcements of levees, &c., in the cards of professional ladies, and those engaged in trade. In ordinary society we repeat the word Mrs. before each proper name.

For my own part, I cannot imagine why such a wretched perversion as "mez'h'ers" (Messrs.) should be preferred to the simpler and more English plural Misters (MM. or MMr.)

Messuage, mes'suage, a dwelling house. Mes'sage, an errand.

("Messuage," Low Latin messuagium; Old French mesonage, meson, now maison; Latin manēre, supine mansum, to abide.

"Message," Fr. message, v. messenger; Lat. mittere, supine missum.)

Met'a- (Gk. pref.) nouns, beyond, after; over, transference.

Metabasis, mē.tāb'.āsīs, transition. -(Greek bainō, to go.)

Met'a-carpus, -kar'pus, the solid part of the hand between the wrist and the fingers. Metatar'sus, the solid part of the foot between the ankle and the toes; meta-car'pal, adj.

Greek meta karpos, beyond the wrist.

Metachronism, mē.tāk'.rō.nīzm, the error of placing an event after its real date. The opposite fault is prochronism, prōk'rō.nīzm, or placing a date before its proper time. Either fault is an Anachronism, a.nāk'.rō.nīzm, a false date. (Greek ana chrōnōs, out of time.)

Greek meta chrōnōs, behind or after [the true] time.

Met'a-genesis, -djēn'.ēsīs, the changes of form which the same being passes through in its different stages of existence; met'a-genetic, -dje.nēt'ik, adj. (Gk. gēnēsis, birth.)

See Met'a-morphosis, meta-phor, meta-phrase, meta-physics, &c., in their proper places.

Metal, Mettle, both mět''l. Medal, Meddle, both měd''l.

Metal, mět''l, forty-three of the elements are so called; metallic, mě.tăl''ik, containing metal, &c.

Metalliferous, met''lĭf''ĕ.rūs, earth or ore rich in metal.

Metallist, mět''lĭst, a worker in metals.

Metalliform, mět''lĭ.form, resembling metal.

Metalline, mět''lĭn, impregnated with metal;

Metallisation, met''lĭ.zay''shĭn.

Metallise (R. xxxi.), mět''lĭze, to render metallic, to imbue with metal; met'allised (3 syl.), met'allis-ing (Rule xix.)

Metallography, met''lĭg''ră.fy, a treatise on metals.

Metalloid, mět''loid, the metallic base of the alkaloids and earths, inflammable non-metallic bodies: as sulphur and phosphorus; metalloidal, mět''loid''ăl.

Metallurgy, met''lĭr.gy (not mě.tăl''lur.gy), the art of working metals or obtaining them from ore; metallurgic, mět''lĭr.dĭk (not mě.tăl''lur.gik); metallurgist, mět''lĭr.dĭst, one skilled in metals.

The perfect metals, those not easily oxidised: as gold, silver, and platinum.

The base metals, those easily oxidised: as copper, iron, lead, tin, and zinc.

Road metal, broken stones for roads.

White metal, wĭte mět''l, nickel or German silver.

Lat. mĕtallum, mĕtallĭcus; Gk. mĕtallon; Fr. mĕtal, mĕtallĭque, mĕtallĭfere, mĕtallĭsation, mĕtallĭser, mĕtallĭgraphie, mĕtallurgique, mĕtallurgiste, mĕtallurgie.

"Metalliferous," Latin mĕtallum fĕro, I bear metal.

"Metalloid," Greek mĕtallōn eidos, like a metal.

"Metallurgy," Greek mĕtallōn ergon, metal work.

"Mettle," O. E. modiltc. "Medal," Fr. mĕdaille. "Meddle," Fr. mĕler.

Metamorphosis, plu. metamorphoses, mět''ă.mor''fĕ.sĭs, plu. -sĕz, change of form; metamorphic, mět''ă.mor''fĭk, adj.

Metamorphose, mět''ă.mor''fĕz, to change the form; metamorphosed, met''ă.mor''fĕzd; metamorphos-ing (Rule xix.), mět''ă.mor''fĕ.zing.

Metamorphic rocks, those which contain no trace of organic remains; metamorphic system.

(This is one of the most striking deviations from the classic models; both in Gk. and Lat. the "pho" is long. In Gk. it is o-mega.)

Greek mĕtāmorphōsis (μεταμóρφωσις, meta morphō, to change the form); Latin mĕtāmorphōsis; French mĕtāmorphose, mĕtāmorphique, mĕtāmorphoser.

Metaphor, mět'.ä.för. Simile, sim'.i.le.

Metaphor, a resemblance implied but not introduced by any word of warning.

Simile, a resemblance claimed and introduced by a word of warning, such as like, as, &c.

Hope is the anchor of our faith (a metaphor).

Hope is like an anchor to our faith (a simile).

Judah is a lion's whelp (a metaphor).

Judah is like a lion's whelp (a simile).

He couched down as a lion, even as an old lion (a simile).

Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path (a metaphor).

Benjamin shall raven as a wolf (a simile).

Metaphoric, mět'.ä.för''rük; metaphorical, -för''rükäl; metaphor'ical-ly; metaphor-ist, mět'.ä.för.ist.

Greek mētaphōra (mēta phōrēō, to transfer [a word from its original bearing to something else]); Latin mētāphōra, mētaphōricus.

Metaphrase, mět'.ä.fraze. Paraphrase, pär'rä.fraze.

Metaphrase, a word for word translation;

Paraphrase, a free translation in which the text is explained by a running commentary.

Metaphrastic, mět'.ä.frä's''tük, adj. of metaphrase.

Metaphrast, mět'.ä.frä'st, one who translates verbally.

Greek mētaphrāsis, (meta phrazo); Latin mētaphrāsis.

Metaphysics, mět'.ä.fiz''iks (Rule lxi.), theoretical philosophy.

Physics, fiz'.iks, is that branch of science which explains all natural phenomena (Greek phusis, nature). Metaphysics is the science which comes after physics, being that which treats of the phenomena of mind or spirit.

Metaphysics includes—

1. Ontology, which treats of the nature and attributes of being.
2. Cosmology, which treats of the nature and laws of matter and motion as displayed in creation, &c.
3. Anthroposophy, än'.thrō.pōs''.ō.fy, which treats of the powers of man, and the motions by which life is produced.
4. Psychology, sī.kōl''.ō.gy, which treats of the intellectual soul.
5. Pneumatology, nū.mä.tōl''.ō.gy, which treats of soul, spirit, &c.

Metaphysical, mět'.ä.fiz''i.käl; metaphys'ical-ly.

Metaphysician, mět'.ä.fiz'.zish''än, one versed in metaphysics.

Latin metaphysica. The word, according to Dr. W. Smith (Class. Dict. art. Aristōtēlēs), arose thus: At the death of Aristotle, his fourteen treatises on "theoretical philosophy" were put together as one work, and styled τῶν μετὰ τὰ φυσικὰ, from the fact of their being placed μετὰ, after, τὰ φυσικὰ, the treatises in physics.

Metastasis, me.täs'.ä.sis, the removal of a disease from one part of the body to another. (Gk. meta-stāsis, change of place.)

Metatarsus, mět'.ä.tar''süs, the solid part of the foot, between the ankle and the toes. Metacarpus, the solid part of the hand, between the wrist and the fingers; metatar'sal.

Greek meta tarsos (tarsos is that part of the foot to which the leg is attached, including the instep), the "meta-tarsus" is beyond that, or between the "tarsus" and the toes.

Metathesis, me.tǽrh'.č.sis, the transposition of a letter: as the older word afyrht has become afryht (afright).

Greek mētathēsis (meta tithēmi, to put after [its right place]).

Metathorax, mēt'.a.ṛhō''.rax, the third and last segment of the thorax of insects. The second segment is called the Mes'o-thorax. (Gk. meta thōrax, beyond the thorax.)

Mete (1 syl.), to measure. Meet, to encounter. Meat, meet, food.

Met-ed (R. xxxvi.), meč'-ed; meet-ing (R. xix.), meet'-ing.

Meter, meet-er, a measurer. Metre, meet''r (in poetry).

Metric System, the French system of weights and measures.

Metrology, me.trōl'.ō.gy, science of weights and measures.

"Mete," Old English met[an], past met, past part. meten.

"Meet," Old English met[an], past mētte, past part. ge-mēt.

"Meat," Old Eng. mete or mette. "Metre" (verse), Old Eng. meter.

Metempsychosis, me.tem'si.kō''.sis, transmigration of the soul.

Greek mētempsychōsis (meta en psychōo, to put life in [another body] after [it has left the present body]).

Meteor, mē'.tē.ōr, an atmospheric phenomenon;

Meteoric, mē'.te.ōr''rik; meteoric stones, aerolites;

Meteoric iron, aerolitic iron.

Meteorite, mē'.tē.ō.rīte, a solid substance falling from the higher regions of the atmosphere.

Meteorological, mē'.tē.ō.rō.lōdg''ī.kāl, pertaining to the atmosphere and its phenomena; meteorolog'ic.

Meteorology, mē'.tē.o.rōl''.ō.gy, the science which explains the phenomena of the atmosphere.

Meteorologist, mē'.tē.o.rōl''.ō.djist, one skilled in...

Meteoromancy, mē'.tē.ō.ro.mān''sy, divination by thunder and lightning, falling stars, and so on.

Meteoroscope, mē'.te.ōr''rōs.kōpe (Rule lxxiii.)

Latin mētēōra (no singular number), mētēōrologus, mētēōroscōpus;

Greek mētēōrōs (meta eōra, with things lifted up aloft).

Meter, mē'.ter, a measure, as gas-meter. Metre, mē'.t'r, verse.

Old English met[an], to measure; meter, metre or verse.

Methglin, me.ṛhēg'.līn, honey-wine. (Welsh meddyglyn.)

A compound of meddyg, a doctor, and llyn, tipple, v. llynna, to booze.

Methinks, (past) methought, mē.thinks, me.ṛhort', it seems to me.

Old Eng. thinc[an], an impersonal verb, "it seems." The object was in the dat. case, as me thinceth, methinks (mihi videtur), me ge-thuhte, me-thought (mihi visum est). It was originally used with other personal pronouns, as thē thinceth, thē ge-thuhte, &c.

It is a gross error to suppose me-thinks is a corrupt form of I think[s].

"Me" is dative case, and "thinks" impersonal.

Method, mēth'.ōd, order, systematic arrangement; methodic, me.thōd'.īk; methodical, me.thōd'.ī.kāl; method'ical-ly.

Methodise (R. xxxi.), mēth'.ō.dīze, to arrange systematically; meth'odised (3 syl.), meth'odis-ing, meth'odis-er.

Methodist, měth'.o.dist, a disciple of John Wesley; methodism, měth'.ō.dizm; methodistic, měth'.ō.dīs'.tik; methodistical, měth'.ō.dīs'.tī.kāl (a term of contempt meaning "canting," "hypocritical"); methodistical-ly.

Greek methōdōs (mēta hōdōs), method, a searching after something systematically, scientific inquiry; Latin methōdus, methōdicus (the Rom. methōdici were physicians opposed to the quacks or empirici, the latter obtained their knowledge by practice or personal experience, the methodici followed certain broad principles and diagnosed from general symptoms). The Methodists are so called from the strict "method," or religious rules they undertake to observe.

Methyl, měth'.il, the hydro-carbon radical of meth'yl alcohol.

Methylamine, me.rhīl'.ā.mīn, ammonia in which one atom of hydrogen is replaced by meth'yl.

Methylated, měth'.ī.lū.ted, imbued with methyl.

Meth'ylated spirit, spirit of wine mixed with one-tenth of its volume of naphtha or wood-spirit (it is duty-free because it is too nauseous to be used as a drink); meth'yl alcohol.

Methylene, měth'.ī.leen, a very inflammable liquid procured from wood, and forming the basis of wood-spirit.

Greek methu hulé, wine [of] wood.

Metis, mē'.tiss, one of the asteroids (as'.tē.roidz).

Mētis, daughter of Oceanus, during pregnancy was swallowed by Zeus [Jove], and in due time Zeus himself gave birth to Athēna [Minerva], who sprang from his head, a woman of full stature.

Metonic, mē.tōn'.ik, adj. of Meton, an Athenian astronomer.

Meton'ic cycle, -sī'.k'l, a period of nineteen years, in which time the lunations of the moon repeat themselves.

Meton'ic year, a period equal to nineteen years.

Metonymy, mět'.o.nīm.y, the substitution of one word for another: as I have read Homer; I know Milton well; metonymic, mět'.o.nīm.ik; met'onymical, -nīm'.ī.kāl; metonymical-ly.

Greek metónymia, metónumikōs (mēta ónīma, change of word).

Metre, mē'.tr, verse. Meter, mē'.ter, a measurer: as gas-meter; metrical, mět'.trī.kāl, having rhythm; met'rical-ly.

Metric, mět'.rīk, denoting measurement; met'ric sys'tem, the French decimal system of weights and measures.

Metrology, me.trōl'.ō.gy, the science of weights and measures.

"Metre," Old Eng. mēter; Lat. metrum; Gk. mētrōn, metricus.

"Meter," Old Eng. met[an], to measure; Lat. metrum; Gk. mētrōn.

Metrograph, mět'tro.gráf, an instrument for telling at what rate a train is moving, and for marking the moment of its arrival and departure from a station.

Greek metron graphō, I write the measure [of speed].

Metronome, mět'tro.nōme, an instrument for beating time;

metronomy, mět'tro.nōm.y, measurement of time by a...

Greek metron nōmé, measure [of the] divisions or bars.

Metropolis, me.trōp'ō.līs, the capital; metropolitan, mēt'tro.pōl'ā.tān, adj. The metropol'itan, bishop of the metropolis, an archbishop; metropol'itan-ate, the office or see of a metropolitan [bishop].

Greek metrōpōlis (mētēr pōlis, mother city); Latin metropolitānus.

Mettle, Metal, both mēt'l. Meddle, Medal, both mēd'l.

Mettle, met'l, spirit; mettled, mēt'tl'd, high-spirited; mettle-some, -sūm (-some, full of), full of mettle.

Metal, mēt'l, an element like gold, iron, &c. (Fr. métal.)

Meddle, mēd'l, to interfere. (Fr. mesler now mêler.)

Medal, mēd'l, a metal token. (French médaille.)

"Mettle," Old Eng. mōdoltic, high-spirited, mōdig, full of spirit.

Mew, plu. mews. Muse (1 syl.), goddess of song, to meditate.

Mew, a gull, to cry as a cat, to confine, to moult.

Mews, a range of buildings where horses are lodged.

The royal mews, the royal stables (not mewses).

Mewed, mewd; mew'-ing.

"Mews" (to moult), Fr. muer. "Mews" (stables), Fr. mue.

"Mew" (as a cat), Welsh mew. "Mew" (a gull), O. E. mēu or mēw.

"Muse," Lat. musa (to meditate); Fr. muser, to dawdle.

(In 35 Geo. III. chap. 73, we have "mewses" as plural of mews, but Official English is notoriously untrustworthy.)

Mewl, to cry as a babe from uneasiness. Mule, an animal.

Mewled (1 syl.), mewl'-ing, mewl'-er.

"Mewl," Fr. miauler. "Mule," Old Eng. mūl; Lat. mūlus.

Mezereon, me.zee'r.ē.ōn, the spurge olive. (French mézéréon.)

Mezzo- (Ital.), mēdz'.o, moderate, half, moderately.

Mezzo-forte, mēdz'.o fōr'te (in Music), rather loud.

Mezzo-piano, mēdz'.o pē.ah'.no (in Music), rather soft.

Mezzo-soprano, plu. mezzo-sopranos (Rule xlii.), mēdz'.o so.prah'.noze, a low soprano or treble.

Mezzo-tuono, mēdz'.o tu.ō'.no, a semitone.

Mezzo-relievo, plu. -relievos (Rule xlii.), mēdz'.o rēl'ā.ā'vo, mean relief. English-Italian for mezzo-rilievo.

Mezzo-tinto, plu. -tintos (Rule xlii.), mēdz'.o tīn'.toze, half-tint drawings in imitation of Indian ink.

Mi (Ital.), me, the third note of the tonic sōl-fa system.

Miasma, mē.az'.mah, infection or pollution floating in the air from ill-drainage; miasmatic, mī.az.māl'āk; mias'mal.

Greek mīasmos, pollution (mīainō, to defile).

Mica, mī'kah, Mus'covy glass; micaceous (R. xli.), mī.kay'shūs; mica schist. (Latin micāre, to glisten.)

Michaelmas, mīk'ēl.mās (Rule viii.), the feast of St. Michael.

Michaelmas day, September 29th; Michaelmas term (in Law), between the 2nd and 25th of November.

Mickle, mīk'əl, much. - (Old English mycel or micel.)

Micro-, mī'kro- (Gk. prefix), nouns, small. (Greek mīkrōs.)

Mī'cro-cosm, -koz'm, applied to man, supposed to be an epitome of the universe or great world; mī'cro-cosmic, -kōs'mīk; mī'cro-cosmical, -kōs'mī.kāl.

Greek mīkrōs kōsmōs, a little world.

Micrography, mī.krōg'.rā.fy, a description of microscopic objects. (Gk. mīkrōs grapho, I write about small things.)

Micrometer, mī.krōm'.ē.ter, an instrument for measuring small objects, spaces, angles, &c.

Greek mīkrōs mētron, a meter of small things.

Microscope, mī.kro.skōpe, an instrument for inspecting very minute objects; microscopic, mī'.krō.skōp''.īk; microscopical, mī'.kro.skōp''.ī.kāl; microscop'ical-ly; microscopist, mī'.kro.skō''.pīst; microscopy, mī'.kro.skōp.e.

(Except in "panta-scope" and "tele-scope," the vowel preceding -scope is always o.)

Greek mīkrōs skōpō, I inspect small objects.

Micro-zoa, mī'.kro zō'.ah, minute animal organisms.

Greek mīkrōs zōon, plu. zōa, minute living things.

Mid, middle; mid-day, mid-night, mid-land, mid-lent, mid-ship; mid'ship-man, a junior officer in a man-of-war, &c.; mid-way, mid-summer, mid-winter.

Middle, mīd.d'l: middle-ages, from the fall of the Western empire till the revival of learning (500-1500); middle-class, between the aristocracy and mechanics; middle-man, an agent, a go-between; middle-most; middle-passage, the part of the Atlantic between Africa and the West Indies; middle-post, the king-post; &c.

Middling, mīd.līng, tolerable, mediocre.

Old Eng. mid-, middle, mid-deg, mid-nīht, mid-lencten (mid-lent), mid-sumer, mid-winter: middan, adv. in the midst midde, (super.) midmest; middel, middel-fīnger, middel-flōr (floor).

Midden, a dunghill (Scotch).

Midge (1 syl.), a very small insect, a gnat. (Old Eng. mycg.)

Midriff, mīd'.rīf, the diaphragm. (Old Eng. mid, hrif bowels.)

Midst (super. of mid), thickest of a throng, the middle. A corruption of mīddes for to-mīddes, adv.: as "to-day."

(Adj.) The midst of it was paved with love (Cant. iii. 10).

(Adv.) Him first, Him last, Him midst, and without end (Milton).

ERRORS OF SPEECH.—

In our midst (should be In the midst of us).

In their midst (should be In the midst of them).

Into their midst (should be Into the midst of them).

Out of our midst (should be Out of the midst of us).

("Midst" is never a noun, nor even an adjectival noun, and therefore cannot be used with an [adjective] possessive pronoun.)

Midwife, plu. midwives, mīd'wif, mīd'wifs, an accoucheuse, midwife-ry, mīd'wif.ry. (O. E. mid wif, with the woman.)

The Spaniards have a precisely analogous word, comadre (com madre, with the mother), a midwife.

Mien, meen, manner, air. Mean, meen, base, to intend.

"Mien," Fr. mine, countenance. "Mean," O. E. mæne, v. mæn[an].

Might, mīte, power, past tense of may. Mite, a very little grub.

Might-y, mī'ty, powerful. Mit-y, mī'ty, full of mites.

Mighti-ly (Rule xi.), mī'tī.ly; mighti-ness, mī'tī.ness.

With might and main, with the utmost efforts.

Old Eng. miht, mihtig, mihtiglice, mihtignes, v. mihte of mag[an].
(It will be seen that the useless "g" is an interpolated letter.)

Mignonnette (double n), mīn'yōn.nēt' (not mignonette nor mignonette), the "little favourite" [flower].

French mignonnette (mignonne, a favourite, with dim.)

Migrate or Emigrate, mī.grate, ēm'ī.grate. Immigrate, &c.

Migrate, to remove from one's college or country to another.

Immigrate, to enter into a new country as a resident;
mī'grāt.ed (R. xxxvi.), mī'grāt-ing (R. xix.), mī'gratory.

Migration, mī.gray'shūn. (Latin migratio, migrāre.)

Mikado, plu. mikadoes (Rule xlii.), mī.kay'dōze, priest-king of Japan. The temporal king is the Tycoon.

Milanese, mīl'ān.eez, sing. and plu., native of Mil'an.

(Names of peoples in -ese are sing. and plu., as Chinese, Portuguese.)

Milch [cows] giving milk. (Old Eng. melc, milch, meole, milk.)

Mildew, mīl'du, blight, to blight; mīl'dewed (2 syl.), mildew-ing. (Old English mildeaw, honey dew.)

Mile (1 syl.), 1760 yards land measure; mile-age, fares paid by travellers per mile (-age, tax, toll, payment); mile-post, mile-stone; nau'tical mile, one sixtieth of a degree.

Latin milliare or milliarium (mille passus, a thousand paces).

Milfoil, mīl'.foil, the herb yarrow. (Latin millefolium.)

Militant, mīl'ī.tānt. The Church militant, the Church on earth, so called because it is in a state of warfare.

The Church trium'phant, the Church in heaven.

Military, mīl'ī.ter ry, pertaining to a soldier.

The military, the soldiery.

Militate, mīl'ī.tate, to be in opposition to, to contradict;
mīl'itāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), mīl'itāt-ing (Rule xix.)

Militia, mīl'īsh'ah, citizens trained as soldiers; militia-man, plu. -men, one serving in the militia.

Latin militans, gen. militantis, militarius, militia, warfare, militāre, supine militātum; French militant, militaire.

- Milk (noun and verb), milked (1 syl.), milk-ing, milk-er, milk-y, milk'i-ness (Rule xi.), milk'i-ly, milk-maid; milk-tooth, plu. milk-teeth, the first teeth; milk-white; milk'y-way, a white zone in the heavens full of stars.
- Milch, adj., giving milk. (Old Eng. meolc, milk, mele, milch.)
- Mill (retains its double l in all its compounds), milled (1 syl.); mill-ing, grinding, indenting the edge of coin, beating; the indented edge of coin, a beating; mill'-er; mill-board, -bord, a thick pasteboard; mill-dam, mill-pond; mill-race, the stream that drives a mill; mill-stone; mill-wright, -rite, one who constructs and repairs mills; treadmill.
- Old English miln; Welsh melin, v. melino, meilon, flour.
- Millennium, mīl.lēn'.nū.ūm, the thousand years when "Christ is to come in person to earth and reign." (Rev. xx. 1-6.)
- Millenarian, mīl'.le.nair''rī.ūn, consisting of 1000 years, one who believes in the millennium; millenarian-ism.
- Millenary. Millinery. Millionary.
- Millenary, mīl'.lē.nā.ry, consisting of 1000;
- Millinery, mīl'.lī.nēr ry, goods made by a milliner;
- Millionary, mīl'.yūn.ū.ry, consisting of millions.
- Millennial, mīl.lēn'.nū.āl, pertaining to the millennium.
- Millen'ial-ist, one who believes in the millennium.
- (The words millenarian, millenarianism, millenary, ought to have double "n," but we owe, as usual, our error to the French.)
- Lat. mille annus, a thousand years. (In composition the a of annus becomes e, as bi-ennial, tri-ennial, septennial, millennial, &c.)
- "Millinery," a corruption of Milaner. At one time Mil'an, in Italy, set the fashion for dress. "Millionary," by millions.
- Millepede, mīl'.lē.pēd, an insect. (Lat. mille pēdes, 1000 feet.)
- Millepores, mīl'.lē.pōz, a genus of branching corals.
- Milleporite, mīl'.lē.pō''rīte, a fossil millepore (-ite denotes a fossil); milleporidæ, mīl'.lē.pōr''rī.dē.
- Latin mille pōrus, a thousand pores or minute cells.
- Millet, mīl'.lēt, a plant containing small edible grains.
- French millet; Latin miliūm (mille grānum, a thousand grains).
- Milliner, mīl'.lī.ner, one who makes women's dresses.
- Millinery. Millenary. Millionary.
- Millinery, mīl'.lī.nēr ry, the works of a milliner.
- Millenary, mīl'.lī.nūr ry, the space of a thousand years.
- Millionary, mīl'.yūn.ū.ry, consisting of millions.
- "Milliner," supposed to be derived from Milan, in Italy, once the mart and glass of fashion. "Millenary," Latin mille, 1000.
- Million, mīl'.yūn, seven figures; millionth, mīl'.yūnth, the ten-hundred-thousandth; millionaire, mīl'.lī.o.nair (not mīl'.yūn.air), a man worth a million of money.

Millionary, mɪl'.j̄.ð.n̄r ry, consisting of a million, as the pundit's millionary chronology.

Millionary, millinery (see above).

The million, the general public as opposed to the "Upper ten," or aristocracy. (French million.)

Milt, fem. roe; milt, the "soft roe" or that of the male fish; roe, the "hard roe" or that of the female fish.

Milter, mɪl'.ter, the male fish; spawn'er, the female fish; milt-ing, milt-er.

Old Eng. milt. "Roe," Germ. rogen. "Spawn," Old Eng. spana.

Mimic, mɪm'.ɪk, one who imitates another, to imitate another; mimicked, mɪm'.ɪkt; mim'ick-ing (with -k-.)

Mimicry, plu. mimicries, mɪm'.ɪk.rɪz, imitation of another.

Latin mimus, mīmīcus; Greek mimos, an imitator of others.

Mimosa, mɪ.mō'.sah, the sensitive plant; mimosite, mɪ.mō'.sɪte, a fossil apparently of the mimosa family (-ite, a fossil).

Greek mimos, an imitator [of the sensibility of animals].

Mimulus, mɪm'.ū.lūs, the monkey flower.

Latin mimus, one with a mask, alluding to the form of the corolla.

Minaret, mɪn'.ā.rēt, the lofty turret of a mosque. (Arab. menarah.)

Minatory, mɪn'.ā.tō.ry, threatening. (Latin mīnatio, a threat.)

Mince, to cut into small pieces, to be finical; mɪnced (1 syl.), mɪnc'-ing (R. xix.), mɪn'cing-ly; mince-meat, -meet, a sweetmeat made of raisins, &c.; minced-meat, meat chopped into a mince. (French émincer, mince.)

Mind, the thinking faculty, to take care of, to attend to, to obey; mɪnd'-ed (R. xxxvi.), mɪnd'-ing; mind'-less, mind'less-ness, mɪnd'-ful (R. viii.), mɪnd'ful-ly, mind'ful-ness.

Never mind, take no heed of it, dismiss it from your thoughts.

Old English mynd; Latin mens, gen. mentis; Greek mēnōs.

Mine (1 syl.), poss. case of I, a pit containing minerals or ore, to dig for minerals or ore; mɪn-ing (Rule xix.), mine-ing, pertaining to mines, digging a mine; mɪn-y, mine'y.

Miner, mɪ'.ner, one who mines. Minor, mɪ'.nor, under age.

"Mine" (pron.), Old Eng. mīn. N. ic (I), G. mīn, D. me, A. mec.

"Mine" (a pit), Welsh mwyn, whence munat, money.

Mineral, Metal, mɪn'.ĕ.rāl, mēt'l.

Minerals are such as stones, rocks, coals, salt, sand, &c. A mineral may or may not be a simple or elemental body.

Metals are such as gold, silver, lead, iron, zinc, tin, &c. A metal must be a simple or elemental body.

(N.B.—Metals are minerals, but minerals are not always metals.)

Mineralise (Rule xxxi.), mɪn'.ĕ.rāl.ize, to impregnate with mineral matter, to convert to a mineral; mɪn'eralised (4 syl.), mɪn'eralis-ing, mɪn'eralis-er; mɪn'eral-ist.

Mineralisation, mĭn'.ĕ.rāl.ĭ.zā''.shŭn; min'eral-blue; mineral-caoutchouc, -koo.tchōok'; mineral-charcoal; min'eral-green, carbonate of copper; mineral-oil, rock oil which oozes from the earth; mineral-water.

Mineralogy (not minerology), mĭn'.ĕ.rāl'.ō.gy, the science of minerals; mineralogical, mĭn'.ĕ.rāl.lōdg''.ĭ.kāl; mineralogical-ly; mineralogist, mĭn'.ĕ.rāl'.ō.djĭst.

French minéral, minéralogiste, minéralisation, minéralogique, minéralogie; Low Latin minera, a mine, minerarius, a miner.

Minever, mĭn'.ĕ.ver, ermine. Minerva, mĭ.ner'.vah, a goddess.

Mingle, mĭn'.g'l, to mix; mingled, mĭn'.g'ld; mingling, ming'gling; mingler, ming'gler.

Old English meng[ian], past mengde, past part. menged.

Miniature, mĭn'.a.tchŭr, a small portrait, on a small scale.

Paintings by the miniatori, a set of monks noted for their paintings with minium or red lead. The first miniatures were the initial letters of rubrics, which generally contained the head of the Virgin or a saint, and hence the word came to signify a small likeness.

Minim, mĭn'.ĭm (in Mus.), a note = half a semibreve (an open note with a tail), a liquid measure meaning one drop.

Min'ium, red-lead. Minimum, mĭn'.ĭ.mĭm, the smallest quantity, opposed to maximum, max'.ĭ.mĭm, the largest quantity.

"Minim." In the ancient musical notation the note of longest duration was termed a "Large" = 2 longs, or 4 breves, or 8 semibreves, or 16 minims, "minims" being the least of the "breves" (or shorts). After this a new set of terms was introduced, crotchet and quaver.

Minium, Latin minĭum, vermillion, red-lead.

"Minimum," Latin super. of some obsolete adj. meaning small.

Minion, mĭn'.yŭn, a low unprincipled favourite of a prince.

French mignon; Italian mignone, a darling.

Minister, mĭn'.ĭs.ter, a pastor, one of the state legislators, to wait on the sick, to perform the office of a pastor; ministered, mĭn'.ĭs.terd; min'ister-ing; ministration, mĭn'.ĭs.tray''.shŭn; ministrative, mĭn'.ĭs.trā.tĭv; min'istrant.

Ministerial, mĭn'.ĭs.tē''.rĭ.āl; ministe'rial-ist, ministe'rial-ly. Ministry, plu. ministries, mĭn'.ĭs.trĭz.

Latin minister, ministrĭalis, ministratio, v. ministrare.

Minium, minimum, minim, mĭn'.ĭ.ĭm, mĭn'.ĭ.mĭm, mĭn'.ĭm.

Min'ium, red-lead. (Latin minĭum, vermillion, red-lead.)

Min'imum, the least possible quantity. (Latin minĭmus.)

Min'im, min'im, a drop, a note in music. (Lat. minĭmus.)

Minnow, mĭn'.no, a small British fresh-water fish. (O. E. mina.)

Minor, mĭ'.nor, under age. Mi'ner, one employed in mines.

Minority, mĭ'.nŏr'rĭ.ty; minor key (in Mus.), the mode in which the third from the key-note is only three semitones above the tonic. In the major key it is four.

Minor Canon, priest vicar of a cathedral, &c., attached to one of the religious houses dissolved by Henry VIII.

"Minor Canons" of cathedrals, &c., not affected by that "reform" are still properly called "priest vicars."

"Minor," Lat. minor, comp. deg. of some lost adj. meaning "little."

"Miner," Fr. mine, a mine; Low Lat. minerarius, minera, a mine.

Minotaur, mī'nō.tōr, a bull with a man's head. Miniature, mīn'.a.tchūr, a small portrait. (Latin Mī'nos taurus.)

Minster, mīn'.ster. Cathedral, ka.t'hē'.drāl. Min'ister, a pastor.

Minster, the great church of a monastery. (O. E. mynster.)

Cathedral, a bishop's church. (Greek kathēdra.)

"Minister," Latin minister, one who serves, v. mīnistrāre.'

Minstrel, mīn'.strēl, a poet; minstrel-sy, the art of a minstrel.

French ménestrel; Low Latin ministerialis, a servant.

(-sy for "arts," as poesy, minstrelsy, but -cy for "conditions," R. lxxv.)

Mint, a plant, the place where money is coined, to coin; mīnt'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), mīnt'-ing; mīnt'age, that which is coined.

Mint julep (not julap), iced liquor flavoured with mint.

"Mint" (the plant), O. E. mintē; (for money), O. E. mynit, money.

Minuet, mīn'.ū.ēt, a dance, the tune adapted to the dance.

French menuet (danceer menu, to dance with short steps).

Minus, mī'nūs, the sign [-] denoting subtraction. (Lat. minus.)

Minute, mī.nūtē', small, mīn'īt, the 60th part of an hour; mīnute'-ly, exactly; minute-ly, mīn'īt.ly, every instant.

Minutia, plu. minutiæ, mī.nū.shē.ah, mī.nū.shē.ē, the smallest particular. Minuet, mīn'.ū.ēt, a dance.

Minute-book, mīn'īt book; min'ute-glass, min'ute-gun, min'ute-hand, min'ute-men (Americanism).

Latin minūtum, adj. minūtus, mīnūtia, plu. mīnūtia.

Miocene, mī'o.seen, the middle tertiaries; miocene period.

Greek meiōn kainos, less recent, i.e., containing "fewer existing specimens" of plants and animals than the supervening groups.

Miracle, mī'rāk'l, a phenomenon produced by an especial interposition of divine power; miraculous, mī.rāk'.ū.lus; miraculous-ly, miraculous-ness; miracle-play.

Latin mīrāculum, mīrācūlōsus (mirum, a wonder, with dim.)

Mirage, mī'rāhj, reflection of terrestrial objects on the clouds.

French mirage, looming (from miroir, a looking-glass).

Mire (1 syl.), deep mud; miry, mī'ry; mī'ri-ness (Rule xi.)

Danish myr, a morass.

Mirror, mī'rōr, a looking-glass, to reflect; mirrored, mī'rērd; mir'ror-ing. (French miroir; Latin miror, to admire.)

(The doubling of the r in this word is a blunder. See Mirage.)

Mirth, merriment; mirth'ful (R. viii.), mirth'ful-ly, mirth'ful-ness, mirth'less, mirth'less-ly. (Old English myrth.)

- Mis- (native prefix), defect, error, evil, unlikeness.
Dis- denotes an active state of antagonism.
Un- denotes a passive state of antagonism: Thus Mis-belief is false belief; dis-belief, positive abstention of belief; un-belief, mere absence of belief.
Mis-adventure, -ad.věn'.tchūr, ill-luck, mishap.
Mis-alliance, -al.lí'.anse, marriage below one's rank.
Misanthrope, mīs'.ăn.thrōpe, a man-hater; misanthropical, mīs'.ăn.thrōp''.ī.kāl; misanthropical-ly, misan'thropy.
 Greek misanthrōpos (mīsēs anthrōpōs, I hate man).
Mis-apply, mīs'.ăp.ply'' (not mīs'.ă.ply'), to apply to a wrong purpose; misapplied, mīs'.ăp.plide'; misapply'-ing.
Misapplication, mīs'.ăp.pli.kay''.shŭn.
Unapplied, un'.ap.plide', not applied at all (Rule lxxii.)
Mis-apprehend, mīs'.ap.prě.hend', to misunderstand; misapprehend'-ed, mīs'apprehend'-ing; misapprehension, -shŭn. (Verbs in -d or -de add -sion, not -tion.)
Unapprehended, not apprehended (Rule lxxii.)
Mis-appropriate, mīs'.ăp.pro''.prĭ.ate (not mīs'.ă.pro''.prĭ.ate), to apply to a wrong use; mis-appropriat'-ed (R. xxxvi.), mis'appro'priat'-ing (Rule xix.); misappropriation, mīs'.ăp.pro.prĭ.ă''.shŭn (not mīs'.ă.pro.prĭ.ă''.shŭn).
In-appropriate, not appropriate, not pertinent;
Un-appropriated, not appropriated (Rule lxxii.)
Mis-becoming, mīs'.bě.kŭm''-ing, improper; misbecom'-ing-ly;
Un'becom'-ing, not suitable to the person or character.
Misbehave, mīs'.be.hāve', to conduct oneself amiss; misbehaved' (3 syl.), misbehāv'-ing; misbehaviour, -be.hāv'.yer.
Misbelieve, mīs'.bě.leev', to believe erroneously; misbelieved, mīs'.bě.leevd'; misbeliev'-ing (Rule xix.), misbeliev'-er.
Misbelief, mīs'.be.leef', erroneous belief;
Disbelief, dis.be.leef, positive incredulity; disbelieve, &c.
Unbelief, without belief. Unbelieved (3 syl.), Rule lxxii.
Miscalculate, mīs.kāl'.kŭ.late, to calculate amiss; miscal'culāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), miscal'culāt-ing, miscalculation, -lay''.shŭn.
Uncalculated, not reckoned up (Rule lxxii.)
Incalculable, in.kāl'.kŭ.lă.b'l, enormous; incal'culably.
Miscall' (not miscal, R. viii.), to call amiss; miscalled' (2 syl.), miscall'-ing. Uncalled, not called (Rule lxxii.)
Miscarriage, mīs.kār'riage, failure, premature birth.
Miscarry, mīs.kār'ry, to fail to effect; miscarries, mīs.kār'rĭz; miscarried, mīs.kār'rěd; miscar'ry-ing.
Uncarried, un.kār'rěd, not yet carried (Rule lxxii.)

Miscellany, plu. miscellanies, mĭs'.sĕll.ĕ.nĭz, a collection of objects of divers sorts, a book of fugitive pieces.

Miscellaneous (Rule lxvi.), mĭs'.sĕll.lay''.nĕ.nĭs; miscella'-neous-ly, miscella'neous-ness, miscel'lanist.

Latin miscellanea (plu.), miscellaneus (miscĕre, to mix).

Mischance, mĭs.chānce', ill-fortune, mishap.

Mischief, plu. mischiefs (not mischieves, R. xxxix.), mĭs'.tchĭf; mischievous, mĭs'.tchĭ.vŭs (not mĭs.tchee'.vŭs); mis'-chievous-ly, mis'chievous-ness. (Old French meschef)

Misconceive, mĭs'.kŏn.seev' (Rule xxviii.), to misapprehend; mĭs'conceived' (3 syl.), misconceiv'-ing (Rule xix.)

Misconception, mĭs'.kŏn.sĕp''.shŭn, misapprehension.

Inconceivable, in'.kŏn.see'.vā.b'l, incredible; -bly, &c.

Un'conceived' (3 syl.), not conceived (Rule lxxii.)

Misconduct, (noun) mĭs.kŏn'.dŭkt, (verb) mĭs'.kŏn.dŭkt', ill-behaviour, to behave oneself amiss, to mismanage; misconduct'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), misconduct'-ing.

Misconstrue, mĭs.kŏn'.stru (not mĭs.kŏn.strŭ'), to construe amiss, to interpret wrongly; miscon'strued (3 syl.), miscon'-stru-ing. (Verbs ending in any two vowels, except -ue, retain both before -ing, Rule xix.); misconstruction, mĭs'.kŏn.strŭk''.shŭn. Uncon'strued (3 syl.), Rule lxxii.

Miscount, mĭs.kount', to make a mistake in counting; miscount'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), miscount'-ing. Uncounted.

Miscreant, mĭs'.krĕ.ānt, a vile unprincipled wretch.

The word means "one who holds a wrong faith;" French mescréant;
Latin crĕdere, to believe, with the prefix mis-.

Misdate, mĭs.dāte', to give a wrong date; misdat'-ed (R. xxxvi.), misdat'-ing (R. xix.) Undated, not dated at all (R. lxxii.)

Misdeed, mĭs.deed', an evil action.

Misdemeanour, mĭs.dĕ.meen''.er, a petty crime, ill conduct.

Misdirect, mĭs'.dĭ.rĕkt', to address incorrectly; misdirect'-ed (R. xxxvi.), misdirect'-ing; misdirection, -dĭ.rĕk''.shŭn.

Undirect'-ed, not directed at all (Rule lxxii.)

In'direct', not straightforward; indirect'-ly, indirect'-ness.

Misdoing, mĭs.doo'.ing, wrong behaviour; misdoer, -doo'.er.

Undone, in.dŭn', not done (Rule lxxii.)

Misemploy, mĭs'.ĕm.ploy', to employ to no good purpose; mis-employs (not -plois, Rule xiii.), mĭs'employed' (3 syl.). misemploy'-ing. Unemployed, not employed (R. lxxii.)

Miser, mĭ.zer, a hoarder of money; miser-ly, avaricious.

Miserable, mĭz'.er.ā.b'l, wretched; mĭs'erably, mĭs'erable-ness. Misery, plu. miserries, mĭz'.ĕ.rĭz.

Latin mĭser, miserable, mĭserābilis (Greek mĭsō, I hate).

Misfeasance or malfeasance, -fay'.zance, a culpable act, a trespass; misfeasant, mis.fay'.zant; misfeator, -fay'.zor.

Wharton spells these words with z. French malfeasance.

Misfit', a bad fit, to fit badly; misfitt'-ed, misfitt'-ing (Rule iii.)

Misform', to form badly; misformed (2 syl.), misform'-ing.

Misfortune, mis.for'.tehūne, ill fortune, disaster, calamity.

Misgive, (past) misgave, (past part.) misgiven, -gīv', -gāve, gīv'n, to fail in courage or confidence; misgiv'-ing.

Misgovern, mis.gūv'.ern, to govern ill; misgoverned, mis.gūv'.ernd; misgov'ern-ing; misgov'ern-ment.

Misguide, mis.gide', to mislead; misguid'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), misguid'-ing (Rule xix.), misguid'-ing-ly, misguid'-er, misguid'-ance. Unguid'-ed, not guided (Rule lxxii.)

Mishāp', an accident; mishapp'-en (Rule iii.), to happen ill.

Mishna, mish.nah. Gemara, ge.mah'.rah. Talmud.

Mishna, the oral or traditional law of the Jews; mish'nic.

Gema'ra, comments and notes on the Mishna.

Talmud, the Mishna and Gemara together.

"Mishna," Hebrew shanah, to learn, Instruction (not repetition).

"Gema'ra," Chaldee, means supplement.

"Talmud," Hebrew lamad, to teach, Teaching.

Misimprove, mis'im.proov', to deteriorate; misimproved' (3 syl.); misimprov'-ing (R. xix.), -proov'ing; misimprove'-ment.

Unimproved, un'im.proovd', not improved (Rule lxxii.)

Misinform, mis'in.form', to give wrong information; misinformed' (3 syl.), misinform'-ing, misinforma'-tion, -shun.

Uninformed, not informed (Rule lxxii.)

Misinterpret, mis'in.tēr''prēt, to interpret incorrectly; misinter'pret-ed (Rule xxxvi.), misinter'pret-ing, misinter'pret-er; misinterpretation, mis'in.ter.prē.tay''shūn.

Misjudge, mis.jūdge', to judge incorrectly; misjudged' (2 syl.), misjudg'-ing (Rule xix.), misjudg'-ment (-dje and -ue drop -e before -ment, Rule xviii.)

Mislay', (past) mislaid, (past part.) mislaid (laid, paid, said, sēd, are irregular in spelling, they should be layed, payed, sayed, Rule xiii.); mislay'-ing.

Mislead, (past) misled, (past part.) misled, mis.leed' mis.lēd, to lead astray; mislead'-ing; mislead-er, mis.leed'.er.

Misletoe, mis's'l.tō, an epiphyte bearing white berries.

Old English mistellā; German mistel, the misletoe.

Mismanage, mis.mān'age, to manage badly; misman'aged (3 syl.), misman'ag-ing (Rule xix.), misman'age-ment.

Misname, mis.nāme', to call by a wrong name; misnāmed' (2 syl.), misnām'-ing (Rule xix.) Unnamed, not named.

- Misnomer, mĭs.nō' mēr, a wrong name. (Latin nōmen.)
- Misogamist, mĭ.sōg'.ă.mĭst, a hater of marriage; misogamy, mĭs.ōg'.ă.my. (Greek mīsō gāmōs, I hate marriage.)
- Misogyny, mĭ.sōg'.ă.ny, aversion to women; misogynist.
Greek mīsō gūnē, I hate women.
- Misplace, mĭs.plac'e, to put in a wrong place; misplaced' (2 syl.), misplāc'-ing (Rule xix.), misplace'-ment.
Displace', to remove from its proper place; displaced', displac'-ing, displace'-ment. Unplaced', not placed.
- Misprint, mĭs.prĭnt, an error in printing, to print erroneously; misprint'-ed, misprint'-ing. Unprint'-ed, not printed.
- Misprision, mĭs.prĭzh'.ŭn, an offence bordering on criminality, from gross neglect, &c. (French mépris.)
- Mispronounce, mĭs'.prō.nounce', to pronounce amiss; mispronounced' (3 syl.), mispronounc'-ing (Rule xix.); mispronunciation, mĭs'.prō.nŭn'.sĕ.ă'.shŭn.
- Unpronounced, not pronounced at all. (Rule lxxii.)
- Misquote, mĭs.kwōt'e, to cite incorrectly; misquot'-ed (R. xxxvi.), misquot'-ing (R. xix.); misquotation, -quo.tay''.shŭn.
Unquoted, not quoted (Rule lxxii.)
- Misreckon, mĭs'.rĕk'.ŏn, to compute incorrectly; misreck'-oned (3 syl.), misrĕck'on-ing. Unreck'-oned (Rule lxxii.)
- Misreport, mĭs'.rĕ.port', to report incorrectly; misreport'-ed (R. xxxvi.), misreport'-ing. Unreport'-ed, not reported.
- Misrepresent, mĭs'.rĕp.rĕ.zĕnt, to represent incorrectly; misrepresent'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), misrepresent'-ing; misrepresentation, mĭs'.rĕp.rĕ.zĕn.tăy''.shŭn.
Unrepresented, un'.rĕp.rĕ.zĕn''.tĕd, not represented (R. lxxii.)
- Misrule, mĭs.rŭl'e, unjust rule, to rule badly; misruled' (2 syl.), misrŭl'-ing (Rule xix.) Unruled', not ruled (Rule lxxii.)
- Miss, plu. misses, mĭs'.ĕz, the title of address conferred on young unmarried women above the lowest grade;
Miss, to fail; misses, missed (1 syl.), miss'-ing, Mist, fog.
"Miss" (title), cont. of mistress. "Miss" (verb), Old Eng. miss[ian].
- Missal, mĭs'.săl. Missel. Missile, mĭs'.s'l. Missive, mĭs'.sĭv.
Missal, the mass-book of the Latin Church. (Ital. messale.)
Missel, a bird of the thrush species. (Germ. mistel-drossel.)
Missile, any weapon thrown. (Lat. missile, mitto, to send.)
Missive, a letter or message sent. (French missive.)
- Misshape, mĭs.shāp'e, to shape amiss; misshaped' (2 syl.), misshāp'-ing (Rule xix.); misshapen, mĭs.shā'.p'n.
Unshaped', not shaped; unshapen (Rule lxxii.)

Missile, mīś's'l, a weapon to be thrown. (See Missal.)

Mission, mīsh'ăn, a message, a missionary station, special missionaries, persons sent on any special business;

Missionary, plu. missionaries, mīsh'ôn.ă.rīz.

Latin missio, gen. missionis (missus, sent); French missionnaire!!

Missive, mīś'siv, a letter or messenger sent. Missile, mīś's'l, a weapon intended to be thrown. Missal, missel (see Missal).

Misspell (not misspel), mīs.spell', to spell incorrectly; misspelt', misspell-ing (double s and double l).

Misspend', (past and past part.) misspent', to spend amiss; misspend'-ing. Unspent', not spent (Rule lxxii.)

Misstate, mīs.stāte', to state incorrectly; misstāt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), misstāt'-ing, misstate'-ment (double s). Unstat'-ed.

Mist, fog. Missed, mīst (past tense of the verb) miss (q.v.)

Mist'-y, mist'i-ness (R. xi.), mist'i-ly. (O. E. mīst, mīstīg.)

Mistake', (past) mistook', (past part.) mistaken, mīs.tā'k'n; mistāk'-ing (Rule xix.), mistāk'-ing-ly, mistaken-ly.

I am mistaken (deponent verb), I make a mistake, &c.

Old English mis-tac[an], past mis-toc, past part. mis-tacen.

Misteach, (past) mistaught, (past part.) mistaught, -teech, -taut; misteach'-ing. Untaught, not taught (R. lxxii.)

Old English mis-tēc[an], past mis-tēhte, past part. mis-tēht.

(It will be seen that the useless "g" is interpolated.)

Mister (written and printed Mr.), the title of address to men above the lowest grade, not servants; plu. Messieurs (cont. Messrs.) When given to a firm, pronounced mēzh'ērz.

"Mister," a corruption of Lat. magister, master; Old Fr. maistre (now maitre). "Messieurs," Fr. (plu. of monsieur), mey.sē'eu.

Mistime, mīs.time', to neglect the proper time; mistimed' (2 syl.). mistim'-ing. Untime'-ly, inopportune; untime'li-ness.

Mistletoe, mīś'l.tō, a parasitic plant. (Old Eng. mīsteltā.)

Mistral (Fr.), mīś'.trāl, a north-west wind in the Mediterranean.

Mistranslate, mīs'.trāns.late', to construe incorrectly; mistrans-lāt'-ed (R. xxxvi.), mistranslāt'-ing; mistranslation, -trāns.lay''shūn. Untranslat'-ed, not translated (R. lxxii.)

Mistress, fem. of Master, mīs'.trēs, mas'.ter, a teacher, one who employs others. As a title of address it is not now employed, we use Mrs. (mīś'.ēz), instead. (O. F. maistresse.)

Fr. maistre, now maitre (Lat. magister); maistre-esse, now maitre-esse.

Mistrust, mīs.trūst', want of confidence, to doubt; mistrust'-ed (R. xxxvi.), mistrust'-ing, mistrust'-ful -trust'ful-ly.

Distrust', suspicion, to hold in suspicion; distrust'-ed, &c.

Untrust'-ed, not confided in (R. lxxii.); untrusty, &c.

"Distrust" expresses a stronger degree of doubt than mistrust.

Misunderstand, (past) misunderstood, (past part.) misunderstood, mĭs'ən.der.stānd', ·stood' (to rhyme with good); misunderstand'-ing, a slight quarrel, error of judgment.

Misuse, (noun) mĭs.ūce', (verb) mĭs.ūze', ill usage, to use amiss; misused, mĭs.ūzed'; misus-ing (Rule xix.), mĭs.ūze'ing.

Misusage, mĭs.ū'zage, ill treatment.

Disuse, (noun) dĭs.ūce', (verb) dĭs.ūze', discontinuance of the use, to discontinue to employ; disused, disūs'ing.

Unused, un.ūzed', not used; unuse-ful, un.ūce'ful, &c.

Mite (1 syl.), one of the ac'ari, common in cheese, a small coin;

Mity, mĭte'y, full of mites. Might, mĭte, power; might-y.

"Mite," Old English mtte. "Might," Old English mæht or mīht.

Mitigate, mĭt'ĭ.gāte, to alleviate; mit'igāt-ed (Rule xxxvi.), mit'igāt-ing (Rule xix.), mit'igant, mit'igāt-or (Rule xxxvii.); mitigable, mĭt'ĭ.gā.b'l; mitigative, mĭt'ĭ.ga.tĭv.

Mitigation, mĭt'ĭ.gay'·shŭn, alleviation.

Latin mitigatio, mitigātor, mitigāre (mĭtis ago, to make mild).

Mitrailleuse (French), mĭt'rāl.ūze', a many-barrelled gun having the barrels bound together like a faggot. First used in the Franco-Prussian war, 1870.

Mitre, mĭ'tr, a bishop's crown, junction of [mouldings] at an angle of 45 deg., to join [mouldings] at an angle of 45 deg.; mitred, mĭ'trəd, adorned with a mitre, joined at an angle of 45 deg.; mitring, mĭ'tring (not mĭ'ter-ing); mitre-square, for striking angles; mitre-wheels, two wheels of equal diameter acting together with their axes at right angles; mitriform (not -tre-), mĭ'trĭ.form (in Bot.).

Latin mitra; French mitre. "Mitri-form" is ill-compounded.

Mittens, mĭt'ns, gloves without fingers, also called mitts.

(When a pair can be separated into two perfect articles, it has a singular, as a mitten, a glove, otherwise it has no singular, as tongs, nutcrackers, tweezers, scissors, &c.)

Mittimus, mĭt'tĭ.mūs, a writ authorising the removal of a record, a precept to a goaler to keep in prison the person named. (From the first words of the writ—We send.)

Mix, (past.) mixed, mĭxt, (past part.) mixed, to mingle mix'-ing; mixedly, mĭx'ēd.ly; mix'-er, mĭxtly.

Mixture, mĭx'tchŭr; mix'-able; mixtion, mĭx'shŭn.

Latin miscere, supine mixtum (Greek misgo or mignumi, to mix).

Mixen, mĭx'n, the dunghill, a laystall. "Better wed over the mixen than over the moor," i.e., Better wed near home than among strangers. (Old Eng. mĭx, dung, mĭxen.)

Mizzen [or mizen], mĭz'z'n, a spanker; mizzen-mast, the after-most mast of a ship. (Italian mezzana.)

Mizzle, mĭz'.z'l, a fine rain; to rain with fine rain; mizzled, mĭz'.z'ld; mizzling, mĭz'.lĭng. (Old Eng. mistell[ian].)

Mnemonics, nĕ.mŏn.ĭks, the art of aiding memory. (All the sciences with this ending (except arithmetic, logic, magic, music, and rhetoric) are plural, Rule lxi.); mnemon'ic.

Gk. mnēmōnikōs (mnēmē, memory); Lat. mnēmōnica, mnēmōnicus.

Moa, mō'.ah. Moor, moo'r. More, mōre. Mower, mōw'.er.

Moa, an extinct gigantic bird of New Zealand.

Moor, a heath, a north African. (O. E. mōr; Lat. Mauritania.)

More, comp. of much. (Old Eng. māre, comp. of mycle.)

Mower, one who mows. (Old English māw[an], to mow.)

Moan, mōne, a groan, to groan. Mown, cut with a scythe.

Moaned (1 syl.), moan'-ing (noun and part.), moan'-ing-ly, moan'-er, moan'-ful (Rule viii.), moan'-ful-ly.

"Moan," Old English mēn[an], past mēnde, past part. mēned.

"Mown," Old English māw[an], past meow, past part. māwen.

Moat, mōte, a ditch. Mote. Moot. Mute.

Moat'-ed, having a moat; moat'-ing. (Fr. motte, a clod.)

"Moat" (a "mound"), like "dike," is transferred to the ditch.

Mote, a fine particle, like dust, floating in the air. (O. E. mot.)

Moot, debatable, to debate. (Old English mōt, a council.)

Mute (1 syl.), silent, dumb. (Latin mŭtus, dumb.)

Mōb, the rabble, to taunt, to jeer; mobbed, mōbd; mobb'-ing (Rule i.); mobb'-ish (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); mobb'-ish-ly; mōb-law.

Mobocracy, mōb.ōk'.ră.sy, the rule of the rabble (a hybrid).

Mob-cap, an undress cap for women tied under the chin.

The word "mob," applied to the populace, originated in the "Green Ribbon Club," in the latter part of the reign of Charles II. "The rabble first claimed this title and were called the 'mob' [mobile vulgus] in the assemblies of this club" (North's Exam. p. 574).

Mobile, mō'.bĭl, susceptible of motion; mobility, mō.bĭl'.ĭ.ty.

Mobilise (not mobalize, Rule xxxi.), mō.bĭl.ĭze, to call into active service; mo'bilised (3 syl.), mobilis-ing (R. xix.)

Mobilisation, mō'.bĭl.ĭ.zā'.shŭn, calling troops together for active service. Demobilise, to dismiss troops from active service; demobilised, demobilisa'tion, &c.

Lat. mōbilis, mōbilitas (mōvēre, to move). To "mobilise and demobilise [troops]" came into general use in the Franco-Prussian war.

Mobocracy, plu; mobocracies, mōb.ōk'.ră.sĭz, mob-government.

Ochlocracy, ōk.lōk'.ra.cy (Greek ochlos, the mob).

All words derived from the Greek kratia are spelt with -cy: as aristocracy, autocracy, plutocracy, democracy, &c.

- Mocassin, mŏk'.kă.sĭn (not mŏk kăs'.ĭn), a shoe without a sole, worn by American Indians. (Indian word.)
- Mocha, mŏ'.kah (in Arabia); mocha-coffee, mocha-stone.
- Mŏck, a counterfeit, a sneer, to mimic, to deride; mocked (1 syl.), mock'-ing, mock'-ing-bird, mock'-ing-ly, mock'-er.
- Mockery, plu. mockeries, mŏk'.ĕ.rĭz, derision, mimicry,
To make a mock of, to turn into ridicule.
 Welsh moc, v. mocio, mociad, a mocking.
- Mōde (1 syl.), manner. Mood [in Gram.], a temper of mind.
Modish, mŏ'.dish, fashionable; mo'dish-ness.
- Modist, mŏ'.dist. Modiste, mŏ.deest'. Modest, mŏd'.est.
- Modist, one who follows the mode or fashion.
- Modiste, a fashionable milliner. (French modiste.)
- Modest, chaste, diffident. (Latin mōdestus.)
 Latin mōdus; French mode, modiste. "Mood," Old English mōd.
- Model, mŏd'.ĕl. Modal, mŏ'.dāl. Module, mŏd'dule.
- Mod'el, a pattern, to make a model; modelled, mŏd'ĕld, mod'ell-ing (Rule iii., -EL), mod'ell-er. (Fr. modèle.)
- Modal, mŏ'.dāl, having the form without the essence;
mo'dal-ist, one who considers the Trinity as three mōdes, not three persons; mo'dal-ly, modal'ity, (Fr. modalité.)
- Module, mŏd'dule (in Arch.), a measure equal to the semi-diameter of a column. (Lat. mōdūlus, chapter of a pillar.)
- Moderate, (adj.) mŏd'.ĕ.rĕt, (verb) mŏd'.ĕ.rāte, temperate, to restrain; mod'erāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), mod'erāt-ing (R. xix.), mod'erāte-ly, mod'erāt-or (R. xxxvii.), moderator-ship (-ship, office, &c.), mod'erate-ness.
- Moderation, mŏd'.ĕ.ray".shŭn; moderato, mŏd'.ĕ.rāh".tŏ.
 Latin mōdērātio, mōdērātor, mōdērātus, v. mōdērārī.
 Italian moderato (in Mus.), between andante and allegro.
- Modern, mŏd'.ern, recent, not ancient; mod'ern-ness.
- Modernise, mŏd'.ern.āze (Rule xxxi.), to make modern;
modern-ism, modernised (3 syl.), mod'ernis-ing, -is-er.
- Modernisation, mŏd'.er.nĭ.zay".shŭn; mod'ern-ist.
 Fr. moderne (Lat. modo-ernus, as in hodi-ernus, hes-ternus, &c.)
- Modest, mŏd'.est. Modist, mŏ'.dist. Modiste, mŏ.deest'.
- Mod'est, chaste, diffident; mod'est-ly, mod'esty.
- Mo'dist, one who follows the mode or fashion. (Fr. mode.)
- Modiste, mŏ.deest', a fashionable milliner. (Fr. modiste.)
 Latin mōdestia, mōdestus (mōdus); French modeste, modestie.
- Modicum, plu. modicums, mŏd'.ĭ.kŭm, a small quantity.
 Latin mōdicum, plu. mōdīva (mōdus, a measure).

Modify, mōd' .i. fy, to change slightly; modifies, mōd' .i. fize; modified (Rule xi.), mōd' .i. fide; mod'ify-ing, mod'ifi-er, modifi'-able; modifiability, mōd' .i. fī .ā. bīl' .i. ty.

Modification, mōd' .i. fī .kay' .shūn, a slight alteration.

Latin mōdificatio, v. mōdificāre; French modification, v. modifier.

Modish, mō' .dish; modist, modiste, &c. (See Mode.)

Modulate, mōd' du. late. Moderate, mōd' .ē. rate.

Modulate [the voice], to speak more musically, not so harshly;

Moderate [the voice], to speak more softly, not so loud.

Mod'ulāt-ed (R. xxxvi.), mod'ulāt-ing (Rule xix.).

Mod'ulāt-or (Rule xxxi.); modulation, mōd' du. lay' .shūn.

Lat. mōdūlatio, mōdūlātor, mōdūlari, to warble; Fr. modulation.

Module, mōd' .āle (in Arch.), a measure equal to the semi-diameter of a column. (Lat. mōdūlus, the chapter of a pillar.)

Modal, mō' .dal, having the form without the essence.

Model, mōd' .ēl, a pattern. (French modèle; Latin mōdus.)

Mæso-Gothic, mæ' .so gōth' .ik, pertaining to the Goths who settled in Mæ'sia, in Europe, the language of the Mæso-Goths.

Mogul [or mongul], mō. gūl', a native of Mongō'lia (E. Asia).

Great mogul, the ruler of the Moguls (extinct).

Mongolian, mōn. gō' .ū. ān, a native of Mongō'lia.

Mohair, mō' .hāre, hair of Angō'ra goats (Asia Minor).

Du Levantin moiacar, étoffe en poil de chèvre (Bouillet).

Mohammed, mō. hām' .mēd; moham'medan, moham'medan-ism; moham'medan-ise. (See Mahomet.)

Mohawk or mohock, mō' .hawk, a set of ruffians who infested London in the last century, a tribe of American Indians.

Moidore, moy' .dōr (not moy' .a. dōr), a Portuguese coin = 27s.

French-Portuguese for moeda d' ouro.

Moiety, plu. moieties, moi' .ē. tīz, the half. (French moitié.)

Moil (1 syl.), to toil; moiled (1 syl.), moil'-ing, moil'-er.

Moire (French), mwor, a wavy appearance called "watering": as moire de soie, moire de laine, moire de coton; moiré, (mwar'ray, watered: as moiré antique, ruban moiré; moirage, mwor'rage, "watering" fabrics.)

Moist (1 syl.), damp; moist'-ness, moist'-ly, moist'-ful (R. viii.)

Moisten, mois' .n, to make damp (-en in verbs means "to make"); moistened, mois' .nd; moisten-ing, mois' .ning; moisten-er, mois' .ner; moisture, mois' .tchūr; -less.

Old French moiste, now moite, moiture.

Mo'lar [tooth, plu. teeth], the grinders. (Latin mōla, a mill.)

Molasses (Ought to be Melasses), mō.las'.sēez, treacle, syrup.

(The word is both sing. and plu. In speaking of a single specimen we say This molasses is excellent, but in speaking of different specimens we say These molasses are excellent.)

Port. melasses; Fr. mélasse; Gk. méli. ("Mo-" is a blunder.)

Mōle (1 syl.), a little animal that throws up mole-hills, a mound.

Mole-spot, a mark on the human skin; mole-bat, a fish; mole-cast, a mole-hill; mole-eyed, -ide, nearly blind; mole-catcher; mole-skin, a stout twilled cotton cloth with close pile; mole-track, the "run" of a mole.

"Mole" (the animal), Dutch mole; O.E. molde-weorpe, mould-thrower.

"Mole" (a mound), French mole; Latin mōles, a mound.

"Mole" (a spot), Old English māl or māl, a mole or spot.

Molecule, mō'.lē.kūle (not mōl'.e.kule), a small mass, a very minute particle of matter; molecular, mō'.lēk'.ū.lar;

Molecular attraction, mō'.lēk'.ū.lar āt'.trāk.shūn.

Molecularity, mō'.lē.kū.lār'ri.ty, the state of being...

French molécule; Latin mōles, a mass, with -cule, diminutive.

Molest, mō'.lest', to annoy; molest-ed (R. xxxvi.), molest-ing, molest-er, molest-ful; molestation, mōl'.es.tay''.shūn.

Latin molestia, molestus, v. molestāre, to vex; French molester.

Molinist, mō'.līn.ist, a disciple of Mo'lina, a Spanish priest, whose opinions resembled those of Armin'ius.

Molinism, mō'.līn.izm, the dogmas of Mo'lina.

Mollify, mōl'.lī.fy, to soften, to appease; mollifies (Rule xi.), mōl'.lī.fize; mollified, mōl'.lī.fide; mollifi-er; mollifi-able, mollify-ing. Mollification, -kay''.shūn.

Lat. mollifcātio, mollifcāre (mollis, soft). "Mollification" not Fr.

Mollusc, mōl'.lūsk, snails, slugs, oysters, and other animals devoid of a bony skeleton; mollusca, mōl'.lūs'.kah, Cuvier's second great "division" of the animal kingdom; mollus-can; molluscous, mōl'.lūs'.kūs; molluskite, mōl'.lūs'.-kite (-ite denotes a fossil), a mollusc fossilised.

Molluscoida, mōl'.lūs.koī''.dah, molluscs with horny integuments. (Latin molluscus; Greek eidos, like a mollusc.)

In Latin we have mollusca and molluscum, but they do not mean "mollusc." Cuvier has taken the word and given it a special signification (mollis, Greek mālākos, soft).

Moloch, mō'.lək, chief god of the Phœnicians and Ammonites.

Moly, mō'.ly, a fabulous herb mentioned by Homer. (Gk. molū.)

Moment, mō'.ment, 60th part of a minute, an instant, importance.

Momentaneous (R. lxvi.), mō'.mēn.tay''.nē.ās, momentary.

Momentary, mō'.mēn.tā.ry, lasting only an instant;

mo'mentari-ly (Rule xi.); mo'ment-ly, every moment;

Momentous, mō.mēn'.tūs, important; momen'tous-ly, momen'tous-ness. Momen'tum, impetus.

Latin mōmentāneus, mōmentārius, mōmentum.

Mon- (Greek prefix), alone, only one. (Greek mōnōs.)

This prefix is always mono- except when -a follows.

Monad, mōn'ād (not mō'nād), an ultimate atom; monadic, mōn'ād'īk; monadical, mōn'ād'ī.kāl.

Greek mōnas, gen. mōnad[os], a unit, an atom.

Mon-adelphia, mōn'.ā.dēl''fī.ah (in Bot.), plants having hermaphrodite flowers in which (like the mallow) all the stamens are united into one bundle through which the pistil passes; monadelph, mōn'.ā.dēlf, one of the monadelphias; monadelphian, -ā.dēl''fī.ăn; monadelphous.

Greek monos adelphia, a solitary brotherhood.

(Linnaeus called the stamens of flowers manhood (andria), the pistils womanhood (gynia), and stamens in bundles brotherhood (adelphia).

Monarch, mōn'.ark, a sovereign, a sole ruler;

Monarchy, plu. monarchies, mōn'.ar.kīz, the dominion of a monarch; mon'arch-ist, mōn'.ar.kist.

Monarch'al, suitable to a monarch. monarchical, mō.nar'.kī.kāl, vested in a monarch, pertaining to...; monarch'ical-ly; monarchic, mo.nar'.kīk.

Monarchise, mōn'.ar.kīze, to assimilate to a monarchy; monarchised, mōn'.ar.kīzd; monarchis-ing (Rule xix.), mōn'.ar.kīze.ing, tyrannising.

Greek mōnarchos, mōnarchia (mōnos archō, I rule alone).

Monastery, plu. monasteries, mōn'.as.tēr.rīz, a convent; monastic, mō.nās'.tīk; monastical, mō.nās'.tī.kāl; monas'tical-ly; monasticism, mō.nās'.tī.sizm.

Monasticon, mō.nās'.tī.kōn, a book on monasteries.

Greek mōnastērion (monos, alone); Latin mōnasterium, mōnasticus.

Monday, mūn'.day, the first secular day of the week.

Old English monan-dæg, the day sacred to the moon (mona).

-monde (Fr.), mōnd; beau-monde, bō' mōnd', the fashionable world; demi-monde, dēm'.i mōnd, a euphemism for what the Greeks called hētairai (hetæra). Plato defines hetaira as "mērētrix speciosa nomine rem odiosam denotante." Plut. et Athen.

Money, mūn'.y. Cash.

Money, current coin, that which represents money.

Cash, money kept in a till, money as an article of trade, as in banks, &c. (French caisse, a strong box.)

Moneys (not monies, Rule xiii.), different sums of money collectively considered;

Moneyed (often but improperly written monied, Rule xiii.), rich; moneyer, one of the officers of the royal mint to superintend the coining of money; money-less.

Monetary, mūn'.ē.tēr.ry. Monitory, mōn'.i.tō.ry;

Monetary, pertaining to money;

Monitory, admonition, warning. (Latin mōneo.)

Mon'ey - chang'er, mon'ey - lend'er, mon'ey - mā'king, mon'ey-mark'et, mon'ey-māt'ters, mon'ey-or'der;

Money-scrivener, mūn'y skriv'n.er, one who raises money for others; money's worth, mūn'iz wurth.

Old Eng. mynet, myneter, a moneyer; Fr. monnaie!! The Roman mint was once the temple of Juno Monēta (the warner of danger).

-monger, mūng'ger, a dealer: as fish-monger, fell-monger, iron-monger, cheese-monger. (Old English monger, a dealer.)

Old Eng. mangere, a merchant, v. mang[ian], to traffic, mang-hūs.

Mongolian, mōn.gō'li.an, a native of Mongōlia. (See Mogul.)

Mongrel, mūn'.grēl, of a mixed breed, [a dog] not thorough-bred.

Old English meng[ian], to mix, with diminutive affix.

Monition, mō.nīsh'ūn, warning; monitive, mōn'.ī.tīv:

Monitor, mōn'.ī.tor (R. xxxvii.), fem. monitress, mōn'.ī.trēs; monitorial, mōn'.ī.tōr''rī.āl; monitorial-ly, mon'itor-ship (-ship, office, &c.), the office of a monitor.

Monitory, monetary, mōn'.ī.tōr ry, mūn'.ē.tār ry.

Monitory, containing advice or warning.

Monetary, relating to money. (See Money.)

Latin mōntio, mōntior, fem. mōntrix, mōntōrius, v. mōneo.

Monk, mūnk. Friar, frī.ar. Nun.

Monk, member of a monastery, a hermit.

Friar, an outdoor or free religious brother.

Nun, member of a convent for women.

Cloister-monk, a monk who actually lives in the monastery.

Extra-monk, a monk who serves a monasterial church and does not live in a monastery, but in his parish.

"Monk," Old English monec or munuc; Latin mōntichus; Greek mōntchōs (mōnōs, alone, or separate [from the world]).

"Friar," Fr. frère; Lat. frater, a brother. "Nun," Old Eng. nunne.

Monkey, mūn'.ky. Ape (1 syl.) Baboon, bā.boon.

Monkey, plu. monkeys, have long tails, £500.

Baboon, plu. baboons, have short tails.

Ape, plu. apes (1 syl.), have no tails at all.

"Monkey," Ital. monicchio (monna, a she-ape). "Ape," Old E. apa.

"Baboon," Fr. babuin (babine, with aug., large-lipped [animal]).

Mōn'o- mōn- before -a (Gk. prefix), alone, singly. (Gk. mōnōs.)

Mono-basic, mōn'.o-bā'.sīk, one part of base to one of acid.

Greek monō-[mōnōs]basis, only one [part] of base.

Mōn'o-cardian, -kar'.dī.ān, having (like fish and reptiles) only one auricle and one ventricle in the heart.

Greek mono-kardic, the heart with only one [auricle and ventricle].

Mon'o-car'pon, bearing fruit only once and then dying, an annual; mono-carpous, -kar'.pus: (Gk. karpos, fruit.)

Mono-cerous, mŏ.nŏs'.ĕ.rŭs, having only one horn or tusk. Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]kēras, only a single horn.

Mono-chord, mŏn'.o.kord, a one stringed instrument for testing intervals. (Greek monos chordē, single string.)

Mon'o-chrome, -krŏme, a painting of only one colour: as sepia or indian ink; mon'o-chromatic, -krŏ.măt'.ĭk. Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]chrŏma, only one colour.

Mon'o-cotyledon, -kŏt'tj.lee''.dŏn (not ko.tjĭ'.ĕ.dŏn), a plant (like wheat) with only one seed-lobe; mon'o-cotyledonous, -kŏt'tj.lee''.dŏ.nŭs. Plants with two seed-lobes are di-cotyle'dons. Plants without a seed-husk a-cotyle'dons. Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]kŏtŭlēdon, a socket, husk, or lobe.

Monocracy, mŏn.ŏk'.ră.sy, government vested in one ruler; monocrat, mŏn'.o.krăt, a monarch.

Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]kratia, government vested in one.

Monocular, mŏn.ŏk'.ŭ.lar, having only one eye; monocule, mŏn'.o.kŭle, a one-eyed insect. Binocular, bi-nŏk'.u.lar, having two eyes or eye-tubes.

"Binocular," Lat. binus oculus, double-eye, is a good compound, but "monocular" (Gk. monos, Lat. oculus) is a disgraceful hybrid. 'Unocular, a good Latin compound, would have done as well.

Mon'o-dactylous, -dăk'.tj.lŭs, having but one toe.

Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]daktŭlos, with only one toe or finger.

Mon'o-don, ŭ animal (like the narwhal or sea-unicorn), with only one tooth. (Gk. mono-odous, gen. odontos, one tooth.)

Monody, plu. monodies (Rule xlv.), mŏn'.ŏ.dĭz, a poem on the death of a friend (sung by a person to himself in solitude.) (Greek mon-[mŏnŏs]ŏdē, solitary ode.)

Monœcia, mŏn.ĕ'.sĕ.ah, plants which have both stamens and pistils on the same plant; monœcian; monœcious, mŏn.ĕ'.si.ŭs. (Greek mon-[mŏnŏs]-oikia, one dwelling.)

Monogamy, mŏ.nŏg'.ă.my, marriage restricted to one wife. Living in marriage with more than one wife at the same time is called polygamy, po.lŏg'.ă.my; monog'amist; monogamous, mŏ.nŏg'.ă.mŭs.

Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]gamos, single marriage; polus gămŏs, many wives.

Mono-gram, mŏn'.ŏ.grăm (not mŏ.nŏ.grăm), a cipher, the interlaced initial letters of a person's name.

Monogram'mic. Monogrammat'ic.

Mŏnogram'mic, pertaining to a mŏnogram;

Monogrammat'ic, in the style of a monogram.

Greek monos gramma, [two or more] letters [waved into] one.

Monograph, mŏn'ō.grăf (not mō'.nō.grăf), a treatise limited to one subject or object; monographist, mŏ.nŏg'.ră.fĭst; monographic, mŏn'ō.grăf''.ĭk; monograph'ical, -.grăf''.ĭ.kăl; monograph'ical-ly; monography, mŏ.nŏg'.ră.fy.

Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]graphŏ, I write on one thing only.

Mon'o-gynia, -djĭn'.ĭ.ah, plants which have only one pistil or stigma in a flower; monogyn, mŏn'ō.djĭn, a plant with only one pistil; monogynian, mŏn'ō.djĭn''.ĭ.ăn; monogynous, mŏ.nŏdg'.ĭ.nŭs; monogynœcial, mŏn'ō.djĭn.ĕ''.sĭ.al, fruits formed by the pistil of one flower.

Greek monos gunia, single womanhood. Linnæus called pistils the "womanhood," and stamens the "manhood" (andria) of flowers. "Monogynœcial," mono-gunia, -oikos, the single-pistil's abode.

Mono-lith, mŏn'ō.lĭth, a pillar made of only one stone; monolithic, mŏn'ō.lĭth''.ĭk. (Greek lithos, a stone.)

Mono-logue, mŏn'ō.lŏg (not mō'.nō.lŏg), a soliloquy, a scene or drama with only one character or speaker; a scene with more than one speaker is a dialogue; monologist, mŏ.nŏl'ō.djĭst; monology, mŏ.nŏl'ō.djy.

These words in -logue are from the French, the -ue is perfectly needless and quite un-English. "Monolog" and "Dialog" would be far preferable (Greek monos log[os], a soliloquy. Dia-log[os]).

Mono-mania, mŏn'ō.may''.nĭ.ah (not mŏ'.nŏ...), inad on one subject; mon'o-maniac, -.may''.nĭ.ăk; monomaniacal, mŏn'ō.mă.nĭ''.ă.kăl; monomani'acal-ly.

Greek mono-[mŏnŏs]măntia, madness [on] one single point.

Monomial, mŏ.nŏ'.mă.ăl (in Algebra), one term: as 2ab; an expression with two terms (as a + b) is a binomial; with three terms (as a + 2ab + b) a trinomial.

If drawn from the Greek, bi-nomial should be di-nomial.

If drawn from the Latin, mononomial should be unnomial.

The prefixes mono-, di-, tri- with ŏnŏma or ŏnĭma (Greek).

The prefixes un-, bi-, tri- with nomen (Latin).

Mŏn'o-morphous, -.mŏr'.fŭs, having but one form; insects which change their form are metamorphic.

Mon'o-petalous, -.pĕt'.ă.lŭs, having the corolla in one piece as the primrose. (Greek pĕtălŏn, a petal.)

Monophthong, mŏ.nŏf'.thong, two contiguous vowels only one of which is sounded: as ea in "speak," ie in "picce."

Diphthong, dĭf'.thong, two vowels combined into a new vowel sound: as ou in "prowl," oi in "boil."

Triphthong, trĭf'.thong, three concurring vowels sounded as one: as beauty, purlieus.

Greek mono-, di-, and tri- phthoggos, single, double, triple [vowel] sound, v. phtheggŏmai, to utter a sound.

Monopolise, mŏ.nŏp'.ŏ.lize, to engross the whole; monop'o-lised (4 syl.), monop'olis-ing (Rule xix.); monop'olis-er, one who arrogates to himself or engrosses the whole; monopolist, one who is a monopoliser.

Monopoly, plu. monopolies, mõ.nõp'.õ.liz, the right of exclusive sale in an article either by patent or otherwise.

Greek mõno-[monos] põleõ, I alone deal in [the article].

Monopteral, mõ.nõp'.tẽ.rũl, one-winged, i.e., a temple without a cella. (Greek mõnos pteron, only one wing.)

Mono-spermous, mõn'.o.spẽr''.mũs, one-seeded, as a plum; mon'o-sperm, a monospermous plant.

Di-spermous, dis'.pẽr.mũs, two-seeded, as the barberry; disperm, dis'.perm, a dispermous plant.

Tri-spermous, tris'-per.mũs, three-seeded; trisperm, tris'-perm, a trispermous plant.

Poly-spermous, põl'.ĩ.sper'.mũs, many-seeded, as an apple; polysperm, põl'.ĩ.sperm, a many-seeded plant.

Greek mõno-, di-, tri-, põlu-sperma, one, two, three, many seeds.

Mono-stich, mõn'.o.stik (not -stich), a poem complete in one verse, a line of poetry complete in itself.

Distich, dis'.stik, a poem consisting of two verses, two lines of poetry complete in themselves.

Greek mono-di-, stichos, a verse.

Mon'o-syllable, -sỹl'.lũ.b'l, a word of one syllable.

Dis'-syllable, a word of two syllables.

Tri-syllable, tris'.sĩl.lũ.b'l, a word of three syllables.

Poly-syllable, a word of more than three syllables.

Fr. dissyllable, trissyllable. Very absurdly we have been led by the French in one of these words and not in the other. "Dissyllable" should have only one s (Gk. mono-, di-, tri-, polu-syllabe).

Mon'o-tone, -tõne, a succession of sounds all having the same pitch; monotonous, mõ.nõt'.õ.nũs, having a uniform same-ness; monot'onous-ly; monotony, mõ.nõt'.õ.ny.

Greek mõno-[monos] tõnõs, only-one tone.

Monseigneur, plu. Messeigneurs, moh'n.sẽn'.y'r, plu. ma.sẽn'.y'r', a title given to bishops and abbots in France.

During the Empire this title was given to all the nobility, lay as well as clerical, and corresponded with our titles of your grace, your lordship. The dauphin son of Louis XIV. was styled simply "Monseigneur," other dignitaries had a name or title added: as Monseigneur le Prince, Monseigneur Dupanloup.

Monsieur, plu. Messieurs, mõ.sẽ'eu', plu. ma.sẽ'eu', the Fr. title of address equivalent to our Mr. and Messrs., mezĩ'.erz.

With this important difference, either word can be used alone, without the addition of a proper name, as we at one time used Sir or Sirs. This useful address, especially in speaking to strangers, is unhappily tabooed, except from servants, or when tradesmen and operatives address the "gentry."

French mon sieur, my sir, my Mr.; plu. mes sieurs, my sirs, &c.

Monsoon, mŏn.soon', a periodical wind in the Indian and Arabian seas, blowing S.W. from April to October, and N.E. from October to April. (Fr. monson; Malay moseen, season.)

Monster, mŏn'.ster, a being of frightful aspect or character, huge; monstrous, mŏn'.strŭs; mon'strous-ly, mon'strous-ness.

Monstrosity, plu. monstrosities, mŏn.strŏs'ŭ.tiz, an unnatural production. (Latin monstrum, monstrŏse, adv.)

The word means something to be "pointed at," v. monstrāre.

Montanist, mŏn.tay'.nist (not mŏn'.tă.nist), a disciple of Montānus, a Phrygian bishop of the second century; Montanistic, mŏn.tă.nis'.tik; Montanism, mŏn.tay'.nizm.

Month, mŭnth, four weeks, one of the twelve divisions of the year; month'-ly, every month. Cal'endar month, one of the twelve months termed January, February, &c. Lunar month, four weeks. Bimonthly, twice a month.

The word bimonthly, meaning "twice a month," is quite indefensible. It can only mean every two months, as "biennial" means every two years. Besides, the word is a hybrid at its best, bi- being Latin, and month Anglo-Saxon. It should be Twy-monthly, or bi-menstrual, or bi-mestral. (Old Eng. mŏndth, mŏndthlic, monthly.)

Monument, mŏn'.u.ment, a structure in memory of the dead, an enduring memorial; monumen'tal, monumen'tal-ly.

Latin monumentum (mŏneo, to put in mind); French monumental.

-mony, -mŭn'y (Lat. -mon-ia), added to abstract nouns: ceremony.

Mood (in Gram.), temper of mind. Mŏde (1 syl.), fashion; mood'-y, crotchety in temper, gloomy; mood'i-ly, -ness.

"Mood," O. E. mŏd, mŏdlic, moody. "Mode," Fr. mode; Lat. mŏdus.

Moon, the earth's satellite (3 syl.); moon'et, a little moon; moon'-y, dreamy; moon'i-ly (R. xi.); moon-ing, absent-minded; moon-less; moon-beam, -beem; moon-calf, plu. moon-calves (R. xxxviii.), a dolt; moon-fish; moon-light, -lite; moon-lit, illuminated by the moon; moon-shine; moon-stone, an iridescent stone; moon-struck, lunatic.

Old English mŏna, mŏnalic, moony, mŏnan-dæg, Monday.

Moor, moo'r (not mŭr). More, mŭ'r (not mŭr), comp. of much.

Moor, moo'r, an extensive waste, a native of North Africa, to fasten a boat with a rope, or a ship with anchors.

Moorish, moo'r-ish, fenny, pertaining to the Moors;

Moor-cock, fem. moor-hen, both moor-fowl;

Moor-buzzard, moor-land, moor-stone.

Moor (verb); moored, moo'rd; moor-ing; moor-ings, the anchors, chains, &c., employed to moor a vessel;

Moor-age, a place where a vessel can be moored.

"Moor" (a heath), Old Eng. mŏr, mŏr-land, mŏr-hŏth, moor-heath.

"Moor" (of N. Africa), Latin Mauritānia (Greek amaurŏs, dark).

"Moor" (to fasten), Spanish amarrar; French amarrer.

- Moose-deer, moo's-deer, the American elk. (Amer. Ind.)
- Moot, doubtful; to discuss; moot'-ed (Rule xxxvi.), moot'-ing.
 A moot point, a question still undetermined; moot'-able.
 Old English mót, v. mót[ian], past mótoðe, past part. mótoð.
- Möp, a "broom" made of thrums, to mop. Möpe (1 syl.), to sulk.
 Mop, mopped, möpt; mopp'-ing (R. i.); mopp'-et, a rag-doll.
 Möpe, möped (1 syl.), möp-ing (Rule xix.), möp-ish.
 "Mop," Welsh mop. "Mope," Dutch moppen, to sulk.
- Mope (1 syl.), to sulk; möped (1 syl.), möp-ing (Rule xix.), möp'-ing-ly, möp'-ish, möp'-ish-ly, möp'-ish-ness.
 Möp, to use a mop; mopped, möpt; möpp'-ing (Rule i.)
 "Mope," Dutch moppen, to sulk. "Mop," Welsh mop.
- Moraine (Swiss), mō.rain', the stones, sand, and debris drawn from the highlands by glaciers and deposited in valleys, &c.
- Moral, mör'räl, a practical lesson. Morale, mo.rähł.
 Moral (adj.), relating to the conduct of men, subject to the moral law, supported by evidence or experience;
 Morally, mör'räl.ly; morals, motives of conduct.
 Morality, mo.räl'.ä.ty; moralities, mo.räl'.ä.tiz, moral dramas which succeeded miracle plays.
 Moralise (Rule xxxi.), mör'räl.ize, to inculcate practical moral lessons; mor'alised (3 syl.), mor'alis-ing (Rule xix.); mor'alis-er, one who moralises.
 Moralisation, mör'räl'.ä.zay''shün.
 Moral agent, one capable of knowing right from wrong.
 Moral philosophy, -f'ä.lös'.ö.fy, that branch of philosophy which treats of man's social relations and duties.
 Moral sense, that sense or feeling whereby we weigh conduct and motives of conduct.
 Morale (French), mō.rähł', moral object or inference.
 Latin mōrälis, mōräl'itas (mos, gen. mōris, custom, temper, &c.)
- Morass, mō.räs', a marsh, a fen; moras'sy, märshy.
 Old English mör, plu. mōras, fens, bogs, marshes.
- Moravian, mō.ray'.v'ä.n, adj. of Mora'via or of the society called Mora'vians; Moravianism, mō.ray'.v'ä.n.izm.
- Morbid, mor'.bīd, unhealthy; mor'bid-ly, mor'bid-ness.
 Morbid anatomy, that part of anatomical study which treats of the effect of disease on the animal body.
 Morbidity, mor'.bīd'.ä.ty. Morbific, -bīf'äk, causing disease.
 Latin morbīdus, morbīd'itas, morbīf'icūs (morbūs, disease).
- Mordant, mor'.dant (for fixing dyes). Mordent (in Botany).
 Mordacious, mor.day'.shūs (adj. from Latin words in -x make -ious, not -eous, Rule lxvi.); mordacious-ly.
 Mordacity, mor.däs'.ä.ty. (Latin mordax, gen. mordācis.)

More, mō'r (not mōr), comp. of much. Moor, moo'r (q.v.)

More than probable, little short of quite certain.

"More" has two supplied positives, its own being lost:—

1. Many, (comp.) more, (super.) most (Old English, maneg).

2. Much, (comp.) more, (super.) most (Old English, micel).

"More" is from the obsolete adj. mag or mah, (comp.) mah-re, (super.) mah-ost. "Mag" means the quality of being able or sufficient, whence the v. mag[an], to be able.

Morell' or morell'o, a cherry. Morel', an edible fungus.

(These words are totally distinct, and it is very desirable to preserve a distinction in the spelling, although both are often spelt morel.)

"Morell or Morello" cherry is also called The Mil'an cherry.

"Morel" (the edible fungus), Fr. morelle; Ital. morella; Ger. morchel.

Moreover, mō'r.ō'.vēr, besides, further-more.

Moresque, mō.rěšk', arabesque. (French moresque, Moorish.)

Morganatic [marriage], mōr'.ga.nāt'āk. A licence allowed in Germany to the nobility to marry a woman without her taking either the title, rank, or estates of the husband. These marriages are called "left-handed," because the left hand of the bridegroom is used instead of the right.

"Morganatic" means limited to the morgengabe, the dowry or gift made on the morning of the ceremony; Low Latin morganiticum.

Morgue (Fr.), morg, a place where bodies found dead in rivers or streets are laid out that they may be recognised.

D'un vieux mot qui veut dire visage (Bouillet). First applied to a vestibule, where criminals were placed that the prison officials might familiarise themselves with their faces and figures.

Moribund, mō'rī.būnd, ready to die. (Latin mōribundus.)

Morion, mō'.rī.ăn, a helmet with no visor.

Italian morione (Moro, a moor), the Moor's helmet.

Morisco, plu. moriscoes, mō.rīs'.kōze, the Moors who remained in Spain after the taking of Granada in 1492, but renounced the Catholic religion to which they were pledged for that of Mahomet. (Spanish morisco, moro, a Moor.)

Mormonite, mor'.mōn.īte, a disciple of Joseph Smith, of America, who asserted that the angel Mormon had made communications to him. Mor'mon-ism.

Morn, contraction of morning. Mourn, mō'urn, to lament.

Morn'ing, from midnight to midday. Mourning, mō'urn'-ing, grieving, black dresses symbolical of the death of some one beloved or nearly related.

Old English morn, mōrgen, morgen dedgung, morning dawn.

Morocco, plu. moroccoes (R. xlii.), a fine grained leather prepared in Morocco from the skins of goats or sheep.

- Morone, mō.rōne'. Maroon, ma.roon'. Mo'rion. Meri'no.
Marone, mō.rōne', a deep crimson colour, like the unripe mulberry. (Latin mōrum, a mulberry.)
Maroon', a rich chestnut colour. (Fr. marron, a chestnut.)
Morion, mō'.rī.ōn, a Moorish helmet. (Sp. moro, a Moor.)
Merino, mē.ree'.nō, a fabric made from the wool of the merino sheep. (Spanish merino, changing pasture.)
Morone curtains, curtains of a deep crimson colour.
Maroon curtains, curtains of a rich chestnut colour.
Meri'no curtains, curtains made of merino wool.
- Morose, mō.rōce', sullen; morose'-ly, morose-ness.
 Latin mōrōsus, froward; French morose.
- Morpheus, mōr'.fuce (not mōr'.fē.ūs), god of sleep.
Morphia, mōr'.fī.ah, the narcotic principle of opium.
Morphology, mōr'.fōl'.ō.gy, that part of botany which treats of the forms of plants and of their different organs; morphologist, mor.fōl'.ō.djīst; morphol'ogical.
 The word means "The modeller," so called because he conjures up shapes to the sleeper (morphé, shape, v. morphéo, to shape).
- Morris, mōr'.rīs, a Moorish dance, a game.
Mor'ris-dance, morris-dancer, morris-pike.
Nine-men's-morris, a game with nine holes in the ground.
Morris-board, a board for the game of morris.
 "The nine-men's-morris is filled up with mud." (Mid. N. Dr. ii. 2.)
 Spanish morisco danza, the Moorish dance; the Moorish [game].
- Morrow, next day to this, an indefinite future period;
 Good morrow, Good morning. (Old English gód morgen.)
To-morrow, on the day following this (to- is the adverbial prefix, as in to-day, to-night, &c.).
 Latin hodie, adv., to-day; French demain, adv., to-morrow.
 Old English to-morgen, to-morrow, gód morgen, good morrow.
- Morse (1 syl.), the sea-horse, the walrus. (Russian morj.)
Morsel, mōr'.sēl, a small piece. (Italian morsello, a mouthful.)
Mort, a salmon in its third year, a large quantity, notes sounded at the death of hunted game. (Fr. mort, the death of game.)
Mortal, mōr'.tāl, subject to death, deadly, a human being, &c.; mortal-ly; mortality, mor.tāl'.ī.ty.
 Lat. mortālis, mortālitās (mors, death); Fr. mortel (wrong), mortalité.
- Mortar, mōr'.tar, a strong vessel in which things are bruised or pounded with a pestle, a piece of ordnance for throwing shells, a cement for stones and bricks; mortar-board.
 Lat. mortāriam; Fr. mortier; Span. mortero. O.E. mortere, the cement.
- Mortgage, mor'.gage, a dead pledge, that is real property pledged to another in security for debt. The pledge is dead because the holder cannot in any way dispose of it, and the person who made the pledge can recover it at any time by paying the debt, to convey to a creditor a mortgage; mortgaged, mōr'.gāj'd; mortgag-ing (Rule xix.), mor'.gage.ing; mortgag-er, mor'.gage.er.

Mortgagor' (law term), the debtor who grants the mortgage.

Mortgagee', the creditor who receives the mortgage.

(-or and -ee are regular law terminations for agent and recipient.)

Fr. mort gage, a dead pledge, so mort-main, a dead hand; in each case the word "dead" means "unable to part with the property."

Error of Speech.—

To foreclose a mortgage is nonsense, but is not unfrequently used to signify "putting an end to a mortgage," either by redemption, transfer of the property, or sale. "Foreclose" does not mean "to bring to a close," but "to shut out from the law-courts" (e foro clusio). It is possible to foreclose a mortgagor, or "shut him out of court," and it is possible to claim for a foreclosure, that is, to compel the debtor to redeem the mortgage or to give up "his right of redemption," and so "shut himself out of court," but it is not possible to "foreclose a mortgage."

Mortify, mōr'.tīfy, to vex, to become corrupt, to vex oneself by fasting and penance; mortifies, mōr'.tīfize; mortified, mōr'.tīfide; mortifi-ex, mortify-ing, mortifying-ly.

Mortification, mōr'.tīfī.kay''shūn.

Latin mortificatio, v. mortificāre; French mortification, mortifier.

Mortise, mor'.tīs, a hole cut in one piece of wood to receive the tenon of another, in order to unite them, to mortise; mortised, mōr'.tīst; mortis-ing (R. xix.) (Fr. mortaise.)

Mortmain, mor'.main, possession of real property by "hands" which cannot alienate it, as property given to a corporation, a college, and formerly to the church.

Fr. mort main, dead hands, i.e., hands which are powerless to part with the property. So mort-gage, a dead gage, means a pledge which cannot be parted with or sold by the holder.

Mortuary, plu. mortuaries, mor'.tū.ā.rīz (R. xlv.), a cemetery.

A mortuary urn, an urn to hold the ashes of a dead person.

A mortuary gift, a gift left at death to a parish church.

Fr. mortuaire; Lat. mortuus (moriōr, mortuus sum, &c., to die).

Mosaic, mō.zā'īk, tessellated work; (adj.), tessellated, pertaining to Moses; mosaical-ly, mō.zā'ī.kāl.ly.

(It is a pity that "mosaic," meaning tessellated, is not spelt with a -u, "Musaic," as "Mosaic" was already appropriated.)

Latin mūsāicus, tessellated, mūsivum "opus tessellarium."

French mosaïque; German mosaisch or musaisch; Spanish mosaica.

Mosa-saurus, mōs'.a.saw''rūs, a great saurian or fossil crocodile found in the Mæstrich chalk beds.

A hybrid: Latin Mōsa, the Meuse, and Greek sauros, a lizard.

Moslem, moz'.lēm, a mussulman. (Arabic muslim, a believer.)

Mosque, mōsk, a Moslem's place of worship. Musk, a plant.

French mosquée; Arabic masjid or mesjid, place of worship.

Mosquito, plu. mosquitoes (R. xlii.), mös.kē.tōze, a sort of gnat.

Spanish mosquito (mosca, a fly): Latin musca, a fly.

Moss, one of the "families" of plants; moss'-y, moss'i-ness;

Mossed, mösst, covered with moss. Möst, nearly all.

Moss-agate, an agate striated with mossy forms.

Moss-berry, cranberry; moss-clad, moss-grown, moss-land.

Moss-rose, a rose with a mossy pubescence.

Moss-troopers, banditti who infested the border-lands of England and Scotland before the union of the crowns.

Old English meos; Welsh mwsg, moss.

-most (native affix), adj., superlative degree: utter-most, hind-most.

Möst, nearly all, (super.) of Many and Much.

At most or at the most? "At most" for the very utmost (at is the Old Eng. adverbial prefix æt-. "At the most" requires an adj. and noun to follow: as at the most distant part of the world.

"Many" and "Much" are supplied positives, the true positive mag or mah is lost, (comp.) mah-re, (super.) mah-ost (most).

1. "Many" (maneg), comp. more, super. most.

2. "Much" (micel), comp. more, super. most.

Mostacchio, plu. mostaccios (Rule xlii.), mös.tah'.shē.o (Italian spelling), hair between the nose and mouth;

Mostacho, plu. mostachos, mös.tah'.sho (Spanish form);

Moustache, plu. moustaches, moos.tash', moos.tash'.es (Fr.)

Mustache, plu. mustaches, müs.tarsh', müs.tah'.shēs.

Latin mustax, gen. mustācis. The last is the best form.

Mot, mō. Mote, mōte. Moat, mōte. Moot.

Mot, mō, a saying, an expression; bon-mot, a witticism (Fr.)

Mōte (1 syl.), a small particle of floating dust. (O. E. mot.)

Moat, a ditch, properly the earth dug out. (French motte.)

Moot, disputable, to debate. (Old English mōt.)

Motet, mō.tēt', a short piece of sacred music. (Italian mottetto.)

Mōth (to rhyme with Goth), not maurh, a sort of butterfly; moth'-y, full of moths; moth-eaten, -ēte'n, injured by moths. (Old English moththe, a moth.)

Mother, mürh'er; mother-ly, motherli-ness (Rule xi.), motherhood (-hood, state); mother-less, without mother.

Mothery, mürh'.ēry, containing a thick slimy matter, as mothery wine, beer, &c.

Mother Church, the oldest church in a parish from which district churches have sprung.

Mother tongue, -tūng, one's native language.

Mother liquor or water, the liquid from which crystals have been deposited.

Mother wit, shrewd common sense. Mother wort, -wurt.

Mother-in-law, plu. mothers-in-law, the mother of a wife is mother-in-law to her husband, and the mother of a husband is mother-in-law to his wife.

Step-mother, plu. step-mothers, a second wife is step-mother to the children of her husband's first wife.

Mother-of-coal, fine silky laminæ of mineral charcoal which occur embedded in coal seams.

Mother-of-pearl, -purl, the iridescent layer of shells.

Mother-of-vinegar, &c., the flocculent mycelium of various moulds, formed on the surface of vinegar.

Mother waters are the original saline solutions from which crystals have been deposited; when poured off and re-evaporated, they "bring forth" a second crop. So in wine-making, &c., the husks, &c., are the mother from which the wine was obtained, and the sediment is part of the "mother substance."

Old Eng. mōdor or moder, steop-mōdor, mother of an orphan child.

Motion, mō'shūn, movement, to make a significant sign to another; motioned, mō'shūnd; mo'tion-ing, mo'tion-er.

Motive, mō'tīv, causing motion, the power that puts in motion. Motivity, mō'tīv'ī.ty.

Motor, mo'tor, that which gives motion, (in Anat.) motor nerves and muscles; motory, mō'tōry.

Move, moov, to stir; moved (1 syl.); mov'-ing, moov'ing; mov-er, moov'er; move-ment, moov'ment.

Latin mōtio, mōtivus, mōtor, v. mōvere, supine mōtum, to move.

Motley, speckled, the dress of an ancient jester or court fool.

Mottle, mōt'tl, to speckle; mottled, mōt'tld; mōtt'ling; mottled (adj.), variegated. (Welsh ysmot, a patch, a spot.)

Motto, plu. mottoes (R. xlii.), mōt'tōze, an heraldic sentence, a sentence on a title-page, at the head of a chapter, on literary competitions, &c. (Ital. motto, a motto, device, word.)

Mould, mōld (to rhyme with cold, sold, not with howl'd, prowl'd), the soil, a matrix or "shape," the suture of the skull, a downy fungus on jams, paste, stale bread, &c., to mould, to knead, &c.; mould'-ed (Rule xxxvi.); mould'-ing, modelling, a fillet; mould'-er; mould'-able, mōle'-dā.bl.

Mouldy, covered with mould, (comp.) mouldi-er, (super.) mould'i-est, mould'i-ness (Rule xi.) Iron-mould, a stain produced by the rust of iron.

Mould'-er, to turn to dust; mouldered, mōle'derd; mould'-er-ing; mould'ery, of the nature of mould.

Mould-board (of a plough); mould-warp, a mole.

"Mould" (earth), O. E. molde. "Mould-warp," O. E. molde-worþ.

"Mould" (a matrix, to knead), Welsh mold, v. moldio.

"Mould" (fungus), and "Moulder," Welsh moldiwr.

Moult, mōlt (to rhyme with colt, dolt), to shed the feathers; moult'-ed (R. xxxvi.); moult'-ing, shedding the feathers; (n.) the fall of the plumage [of birds]. On the moult, in the act of shedding the plumage. Moulting-sea'son.

Welsh moel, bare, moelder, baldness, v. moeli, moeliad.

(In two words ("mould" and "moult") the "-ou" is nearly = to long ō; in one word ("mourn") it is open, mōurn; in all other words it equals -ow- in "now.")

Mound, mōund (to rhyme with found, ground), a small heap of earth or stones; shell-mounds. (Welsh munt.)

Mount, mōunt (to rhyme with count, fount), a hill, a ride on horseback, to rise, to get a ride on horseback, to "set" jewelry, to "back" pictures so as to leave a margin; mount'-ed, mount'-ing, mount'-er. To mount guard.

Mountain, mōunt't'n, a very high hill. The mountain (in Fr. hist.), extreme Jac'obins, so called because they occupied in the Convention (1793) the most elevated seats. Those who occupied the "pit" of the house, called The Plain, were men of moderate political views.

Mountain-eer, mōun'.tā.neer, an inhabitant of a mountainous district. In Scotland a Highlander.

Mountain-ous, mōun'.tā.nūs (not mōun.tay'.nē.ūs); moun'-tainous-ness, state of being full of mountains.

Mountain-ash; mountain-cork, an asbestos; mountain-dew, Scotch whisky; mountain-limestone; mountain-meal, -meal, an infusorial earth; mountain-milk, a soft variety of carbonate of lime; mountain-soap, -sōpe, a silicate of magne'sia; mountain-tallow, a mineral.

To make a mountain of a molehill, to make a great fuss about a small matter. A mountain in labour, a mighty preparation with very small results.

Old English munt, munt-land; Latin montānus, mons, gen. montis.

French mont, montagne, v. monter; Italian monte, montagna.

Mountebank, mōun.te.bank (mōun to rhyme with crown), a charlatan, who mounts a bench (or banco), to puff off his wares, one who makes himself ridiculous.

Italian montare banco, to mount a bench [to puff one's wares].

Mourn, mō'rn (the only example of mou- with the two vowels open), to lament. Mōrn, early day.

Mourned, mō'rnd; mourn'-ing, mourn'-er, mourn'-ful (Rule viii.), mourn'-ful-ly, mourn'-ful-ness.

Mourning-coach, -kō'tch, a coach covered with black cloth and drawn by black horses to attend a funeral.

Old English murn[an], past mearn, past part. mornen, murnung, mourning or black dresses, murnende, mourning, grieving.

Mouse, plu. mice, so louse, plu. lice. Poss. sing. mouse's, mouse'ez; poss. plu. mice's, mice'ez.

Mouse (verb), mouze, to catch mice; moused, mouzd; mous-ing (Rule xix.), mouz'ing; mous-er, mouz'er.

Mouse-ear, mouce-è'r, a plant, the soft velvety leaves of which are shaped like a mouse's ear.

Mouse-hawk, a hawk that feeds on mice.

Mouse-hole, a hole made by mice. Mouse-trap.

Old English mīs, plu. mȳs. So lūs, plu. lȳs; mūs-edre, mouse-ear, mūs-hafoc, mouse-hawk; Latin mus, a mouse.

Mousselain-de-laine (French) moos'len dē lāné', wool muslin.

Moustache (French), moos.tash', hair on the upper lip.

Greek mustax, gen. mustākos, the upper lip. Our English word mustach is far better than the French, Italian, or Spanish.

Mouth (to rhyme with south), plu. mouths, mou'rhz; mouth'-less; mouth-piece, peece, the part of a wind instrument put into the mouth, one who speaks for another.

Mouth'-ful, plu. mouth-fuls (not mouthsful), two, three... mouthfuls means a "mouthful" repeated two or three times; but two, three...mouthsful means two or three different mouths all full. Down in the mouth, mortified.

Mouth (verb), mou'rh (this word ought to be mouthe), to speak bombastically, to articulate indistinctly; mouthed, mou'rh'd; mouth-ing, mou'rh-ing; mouth-er, mou'rh'er. (-outh is very irregular. There are but five words, and they represent four distinct sounds: (1) oo, as uncouth; (2) ow (as in now), mouth, south; (3) ow'rh (with a drawl), as mouth (verb), mouths; (4) ū, as youth.)

Old Eng. mūth, mūth-hrēf, roof of the mouth, mūtha, a river mouth.

Move, moov, to stir; moved, moovd; mov-ing (R. xix.), moov'-ing; moving-ly; mov-er, moov'er; move-less, moov'less.

Move-ment, moov'ment. Mov-able, moov'.a.b'l, able to be moved. Mov-ables, moov'.a.b'lz, any property which can be removed, houses and lands are immovable property (only -ce and -ge retain the -e before -able).

Movable feast, one that does not occur, like Christmas day, on a fixed day-of-the-month, but is regulated, like Easter day, by a full moon.

Moving-power, moov'ing pōw'er (pōw rhymes with now.)

Motive, mō'tiv, causing motion; motive force, motive engine. Motivity, mō.tiv'.i.ty; motor, mō'tor.

Motion, mō'.shūn, movement, to make a sign to another; motioned, mō'.shūnd; mo'tion-ing, mo'tion-er.

The termination -ove is very irregular, and has three distinct sounds:

(1) = ōve: clove, cove, drove, grove, hove, rove, stove, strove, throve, vove.

(2) = ūv: dove, glove, love, shove.

(3) = oov: move, prove and its compounds (Fr. mouvoir, 'prouver').

Latin mōvere, to move, mōtio, mōtīvus, mōtor; French mouvement.

Mōw (-ōw as in grow). Mōw (-ōw as in now). Moo.

Mōw (to rhyme with grow), a pile of hay, barley, &c., stored under cover: If stored in the open air, it is rick or stack; to store up hay, &c., under cover; to cut grass.

Mōw, (past) mōwed (1 syl.), (past part.) mōwn (as in ōwn).

Mowed, mōwd. Mōde (1 syl.) Mood.

Mowed, mōwd, cut with a scythe; mōw'-ing, mōw'-er.

Mōde, manner, fashion. Mood, temper, a term in Gram.

Mow, mōw (to rhyme with now), to make mouths; mowed, mōwd; mōw-ing.

Moo, to blare like a cow; mooed (1 syl.), moo'-ing. (R. xix.)

"Mow" (a pile), Old English move, a heap, a mow.

"Mow" (to cut grass), Old Eng. māw(an), p. meow, p. part māwen.

"Mow" (to gibber, to make mouths), Old English mūth.

"Moo" (as a cow), an imitative word.

Mr., fem. Mrs., mīs'ter, mīs'ez, titles of address to men and married women. Master, Miss.

We have no plural for either Mr. or Mrs., and therefore adopt the French plurals, which we sadly pervert: thus

Mr., plu. Messrs. (mes.sieurs) pronounced mēzh'ers;

Mrs., plu. Mdms. (mes.dames), pronounced mēž.dāms.

Master, mās'ter, plu. The Masters or The Master with -s added to the surname: Master Brown, plu. The Masters Brown or The Master Browns.

(Used as the title of address only to boys, sons of respectable parents, who have no special title of their own.)

Miss, plu. The Misses, -mīs'.ēz, or The Miss with -s added to the surname: as The Misses Brown or The Miss Browns.

(Given to girls and unmarried women of all conditions, who have not a special title of their own.)

The whole of this requires reform. The plurals are most objectionable and very uncertain. It is surprising that in a matter of every-day use we have not hit upon something better. No one likes to say or write Messrs., except to a "firm," Mesdames, Misses, and Masters, with The Miss and The Master, are both doubtful and unsatisfactory. There can be no objection to MMr. as the plu. of Mr., and it might be called The Mistrs. Similarly, MMrs., plu. of Mrs., might be called The Misess; Master, plu. The Masters, and Miss, plu. The Misses. If mistress had not been already engrossed, a greater distinction might be made between Mrs. and Miss.

Old Eng. Mæster, Master-issa, mæst'iss, "mistress" contracted to "miss." Mrs. (misess) is a corruption of Mistress (Mis'ess); Latin magister, fem. magistra.

Much, mūтч (comp.) more, (super.) most, a large quantity.

(This word requires to be followed by a noun singular.)

Many, mēn'y, (comp.) more, (super.) most, a great number.

(This word requires to be followed by a noun plural.)

(?) Much people, a common expression in the Bible, as—Much people followed Him (Mark v. 24).

Much people took branches of palm-trees (John xii. 9).

When the Bible was translated, people was a collective noun of the sing. numb. Hence we read, "This is a rebellious people" (Isa. xxx. 9); "There is a people come out of Egypt" (Numb. xxii. 5).

As "many" requires a noun plural, it could not be used with "people" (sing.), so the translators took the word "much" instead. Nowadays "people" is treated as a collective noun plural, and "much," which requires a noun sing., cannot be used with it.

We say instead, a great number of people, a multitude, of people; "many people" means several, but not a multitude.

"Much" and "Many" supply the place of the lost positive of more, most, which was mag or mah (sufficient), the root of magfan, to be able; whence Mag or mah, (comp.) mah-re (ma're), (super.) mah-ost (m'ost). "Much," O. E. mycle. "Many," O. E. manig or mcenig.

Mucic, mūcē'ik [acid]. Music, mū'zik, melodious sounds.

Mucic acid is formed by the action of nitric acid on sugar of milk, gum, &c. (French mucique; Latin mūcus.)

Mucilage, mū'sil.aj, a slimy animal or vegetable substance; mucilaginous, mū'sil.ājg''ānūs; [mucilag'inousness. (French mucilage; Latin mūcus.)

Mucus, mū'kūs (noun). Mucous, mū'kūs (adj.)

Mucus, a secretion of the mucous membrane.

Mucous membrane (not mucus membrane), the membranous lining of any cavity of the body which opens externally, as the nose, throat, lungs, &c.

Muck, dung, to spread manure; mucked, mūkt; muck'ing; muck-heap, -heep; muck-cart; muck-worm, a miser.

To run amuck, to run blindfold against a person, to run indiscriminately or into what you do not understand.

"Muck," Old English meox. "Amuck," Malay amok, to kill.

Mūd, slush; mūdd'-y (Rule i.), (comp.) mudd'i-er, (super.) mudd'i-est; mudd'-ed, besmeared with mud; muddled, mud'.did, made muddy; mudd'i-ly, mudd'i ness; mud-cart.

Mud-lark, one who cleans out sewers, one who searches amongst mud for half-pence or articles lost.

Mud-suck'er, a sea-fowl. Mud-wall, a wall of mud.

Welsh mwyd, that which is soaked, v. mwydo, to soak.

Greek mūdos, wet, v. mūdaō, to soak; Latin mādor, v. mādere.

Muddle, mūdd'.dl, a disarrangement, to confuse; muddled, mūdd'.dl; mudd'ling, mudd'ler, muddle-head'ed.

This word means to make muddy, hence to foul, to disturb, &c.

Muezzin, mū'ēz'zīn, a crier who proclaims the hour of prayer in Mohammedan countries. (Arabic muezzin.)

Mūff, used by ladies for keeping their hands warm; a dolt.

"Muff" (for the hands), German muff; (a dolt), muffen, to sulk.

Muffin, mūf'īn, a flat round spongy cake. (Fr. muffin.) Spiers.

Muffle, mŭf'f'l, to deaden sound, to cover up (hence "to conceal"), to wrap up warm; muffled, mŭf'f'id; muff'ling; muff'ler, a wrap for the neck. (German muffeln.)

Mufti, mŭf'ti, a sort of Turkish bishop. The grand mufti, "chief of Islam," the archbishop or arch-mufti being the "head" of the Ule'mas or religious jurists.

In mufti, out of uniform, in disguise, incognito.

Mŭg, a drinking vessel [of earthenware or china, with a handle], the face or rather the mouth.

Muggy, mŭg'gy, warm and damp air; mug'gi-ness (Rule xi.); mugg-ish, rather muggy. (Welsh mwci, a fog).

Mulatto, plu. mulattoes (R. xlii.), the offspring of one white and one black parent. (Spanish mulato; Italian mulatto.)

Mulberry, mŭl'bĕr ry, a fruit. (German maulbeere.)

Mulch, mŭlsh, rotten dung, to mulch. Mulse, a drink, q.v.

Mulched (1 syl.); mulch'-ing, dressing with mulch.

"Mulch," Old Eng. molsn[ian], to rot, to crumble into small pieces.

"Mulse" (wine boiled and sweetened with honey), Latin mulsum.

Mulct, mŭlkt, a fine, to fine; mulct'ed (not mulct), mulct'-ing (not mulk-ing); mulctuary, mŭlk'.tŭ.ĕ.ry (not mŭlk'.tchŭ.ĕr ry), imposing a fine. (Latin mulcta.)

Mŭle (1 syl.), offspring of a mare and ass. Mewl, to squeal.

Mule, a machine used in spinning (a "cross" between a jenny and a water frame); mŭl'-ish (Rule xix.), obstinate like a mule (-ish added to nouns means "like," added to adj. it is dim.); mŭl'-ish-ness, mŭl'-ish-ly; muleteer, mŭ'.lĕ.ter', a mule driver; mule-like. (Latin mŭlus.)

Mŭll (Rule v.), to soften wine by warming it up with sugar and spice, a muddle, a headland; mulled, mŭld; mull'-ing; mull-er, a vessel for mulling. (Latin mollio, to soften.)

Mullet, mŭl'.lĕt, a fish, (in Her.) the rowel of a spur, denoting the third son. (Lat. mullos, the fish. Fr. molette, a rowel.)

These words being totally different, ought not to be spelt alike: The "fish" is the Latin mullos, Greek mullos; but the "rowel" is the French molette, diminutive of the Latin mŭla, a little mill.

Mulligatawny, mŭl'.ĭ.gŭ.taw''.ny, a kind of curry soup (Ind.)

Mullion, mŭl'.yŭn, a vertical stone division in Gothic windows; mullioned, mŭl'.yŭnd, having stone divisions. An horizontal stone division of a Gothic window is a Trans'om.

Mullion is a corrup. of munion (Lat. munio, to strengthen), bars used to strengthen a window. The Fr. call them "leaders" (meneaux).

Mŭlso, wine boiled and sweetened with honey. Mŭlch, dung.

"Mulse," Latin mulsum, honeyed wine.

"Mulch," Old English molsn[ian], pret. molsno.le, to decay.

- Mũlt-, mũlti- (Latin prefix), much, many. (Latin multus.)
- Mũlt- before vowels, as mult-angular, mult-ocular.
- Multi- before consonants, as multi-form, multi-ply.
- Mult-angular, mũl.tǎn'.gũ.lar, having many angles; mult-an'gular-ly. (Latin mult- [multus] angũlus, an angle.)
- Mult-articulate, mũl'.tar.tĩk''.ũ.late, many-jointed.
 Latin mult- [multus] articũlātus (articũlus, a joint).
- Mul'ti-capsular, -kǎp'.sũ.lar, having many capsules [cǎp-sũles, 2 syl.] (Latin capsũla, a little chest, bag, coffer.)
- Mul'ti-cepital, -sǎp'.ĩ.tǎl, many-headed.
 Latin multi- [multus] cǎpita, heads (in composite words cǎpita).
- Mul'ti-costate, -kǒs.tate, many-ribbed.
 Latin multi- [multus] costātus, many ribbed (costa, a rib).
- Mul'ti-dentate, -dǎn'.tate, many-toothed.
 Latin multi- [multus] dentātus (dens gen. dentis, a tooth).
- Mul'ti-digitate, -dĩdg'.ĩ.tate, many-toed or fingered.
 Latin multi- [multus] digitātus (digitus, a toe or finger).
- Mul'ti-farious (Rule lxvi.), -fair'ri.ũs, manifold, various; multi-far'ious-ly, multi-far'ious-ness.
 Latin multifarius (quod multis modis est fari or multi-varius).
- Mul'ti-fid. Multi-partite, -par'.tite. In Bot. a multifid leaf is divided laterally into many clefts to about the middle; in a multipartite leaf the divisions extend much further.
 Lat. multifidus (fidi, cleft). "Partite," partitus, divided.
- Mul'ti-floral, -flǒ'.ral, having many flowers.
 Latin multi-, flos, gen. flōris, a flower; Greek chlōrōs, green.
- Mul'ti-form, having many shapes; multiformity, diversity of shapes. (Latin multiformis, forma, a form.)
- Multigenous, mũl.tĩdg'.ĩ.nũs, of sundry sorts.
 Latin multigēnus, gēnus, a sort or kind.
- Mul'ti-grade, -grāde, having many degrees.
 Latin multigrādus, grādus, a degree.
- Mul'ti-lateral, -lǎt'.ĕ.rǎl, having more than four sides.
 Latin multi- [multus] lātus, gen. lātēris, a side.
- Mul'ti-lineal or linear, -lĩn'.ĕ.ǎl, -lĩn'.ĕ.ar, having many lines. (Latin multi- [multus] linea, a line.)
- Mul'ti-ocular, -lǒk'.kũ.lar. Multocular, mũl.tǒk'.kũ.lar;
Multi-ocular, having many cells or chambers;
Multocular, having many eyes. (Latin ocũlus, an eye.)
 Latin multi- [multus] lǒcũlus, a cell (dim. of lǒcũs, a place).
- Multiloquent, mũl.tĩl'.ĕ.kwěnt, talkative; multiloquence, mũl.tĩl'.ĕ.quence, talkativeness.
 Latin multi- [multus] lǒquens, gen. -loquentis, much talking.

Mul'ti-nomial, -nō'.mī.āl, having more than four terms: as $a + b + c + d + &c.$ (in Algebra).

Latin multi- [multus] nōmen, gen. nōmīnis, a name or term.

Mul'ti-partite, -par'.tīte. Mul'ti-fid (in Botany).

Multi-partite, a leaf deeply cleft into several strips.

Multifid, a leaf cleft about midway into strips.

Latin findo, perf. fidi, to cleave. Partitus, divided.

Mul'ti-pēd (Latin). Poly-pod (Greek), pōl'.ī.pod, having many feet, like the wood-louse. (Lat. pēd-; Gk. pōd-.)

¶ Multi-ple, mūl'.tī.p'l, the product of two or more numbers multiplied together: thus 8 is a multiple of 4 or 2. Common multiple, different products of two or more numbers common to a series: thus 12, 24, 36 can all be obtained by multiplying 4, 3, and 2 by some figures. Least common multiple, the lowest number that can be exactly divided by a series of figures: thus 12 is the lowest number that can be divided by the series 4, 3, 2.

¶ Mul'ti-plex (in Bot.), manifold. (Latin multiplex.)

¶ Multiply, mūl'.tī.ply, to increase; multiplies (Rule xi.), mūl'.tī.plize; multiplied, mūl'.tī.plide; multipli'ing.

Multiplier, mūl'.tī.plī.er. Multiplicator, mūl'.tī.plī.ka''.tor.

Multiplier, one who multiplies.

Multiplicator, an instrument for multiplying motion.

Multiplicable, mūl'.tī.plī.kā.b'l, capable of being multiplied.

¶ Multiplication, mūl'.tī.plī.kay''.shūn, increase, an arithmetical operation.

Multiplicand, mūl'.tī.plī.kānd, the number to be multiplied (in a multiplication sum);

Multiplicator, mūl'.tī.plī.kay''.tor, or multipli'er, the number to multiply by.

The multiplicand and multiplicator are called Factors: In the sum $3 \times 4 = 12$, 3 is the "multiplicand," 4 the "multiplicator," and 12 (the answer) is called the product.

¶ Multiplicate, mūl'.tī.plī.kate, of a multiplex character.

Multiplicative, mūl'.tī.plī.kā.tīv.

¶ Multiplicity, mūl'.tī.plīs''s.ty, many of the same sort.

Multiplying-glass, an optical toy to make one object appear more than one. Multiplying wheel, a wheel to communicate multiplied motion to a machine.

Latin multiplicabilis, multiplicatio, multiplicātor, v. multiplicāre, sup. multiplicātrum, to multiply (multi-plicāre, to fold much or often).

Multipotent, mūl'.tīp'.ō.tent, having many powers or great might. (Latin multipōtent, possum, to be able.)

Mul'ti-pres'ent, present in several places at the same time, ubiquitous; multi-pres'ence, ubiquity.

Latin multi- [multus] præsens, gen. præsentis, present.

Mul'ti-siliqueous, -sil'.i.kwus, many podded.

Latin multi- [multus] siliqua, a pod; Greek kētāphos, a husk.

Multisonous, mŭl.tis',ō.nūs, having many sounds.

Latin multi- [multus] sonus, many a sound.

Mul'ti-spi'ral, having many whorls or spirals.

Latin multi- [multus] spira, a wreath, a whorl; Greek speira.

Mul'ti-striate, -stri'.ate, having many streaks.

Latin multi- [multus] striatus (stria, a streak).

Multitude, mŭl'.tī.tūde, a vast number, a crowd;

multitudinous, mŭl'.tī.tū''.dī.nūs; multitu'dinous-ly.

Latin multitudo; French multitude; Spanish multitud.

Mul'ti-valve, -vālve (I.syl.), having many valves.

Latin multi- [multus] valve, many valves.

Multi-ocular, mŭl.tōk'ku.lar. Multiloc'ular;

Multocular, many-eyed. (Latin ocŭlus, an eye);

Multi-loc'ular, many-celled. (Latin locŭlus, a cell.)

Mult-ungulate, mŭl.tŭn'.gŭ.late, having the hoof divided into more than two parts. (Lat. mult-, ungŭla, a hoof.)

Multum in parvo (Lat.), much in a small compass, a compendium.

Mŭm, keep silent, this is a secret, ale from wheat-malt.

Mum-chance, a game with dice. (German mumme.)

Mumble, mŭm'.b'l, to mutter; mumbled, mŭm'.b'ld; mum'bling, mumbling-ly, mum'bler. (Germ. mummeln, to mumble.)

Mummer, mŭm'.mer, a buffoon, a masked actor; mum'ming, acting as a mummer, a masquerade.

Mummery, plu. mummeries, mŭm'.mĕ.riz, buffoonery.

German mummerei; French momerie.

Mummy, plu. mummies, mŭm'.miz, a dead body embalmed by the ancient Egyptians. Mum'mify, to convert a dead body into a mummy; mummifies, mŭm'.mĭ.fize; mummified, mŭm'.mĭ.fide. Mummification, mŭm'.mĭ.fĭ.kay''.shŭn. mum'miform.

To beat to a mummy, to beat to a mash.

Diodorus Sic'ulus v. 1 says: "The people of the Balea'ric Isles beat the bodies of the dead with clubs to render them flexible, in order that they may be deposited in earthen pots called mummae."

"Mummy de l'arabe moumyd, mot formé de deux mots coptes, dont l'un signifie mort, et l'autre sel; c'est-à-dire mort préparé avec le sel." (Diet. des Scien., &c.)

The derivation more generally given is mum, wax, from its use in the cerements or mummy-cloths.

Mūmp, to move the lips while closed like a rabbit;

Mumps, a swelling in the glands of the neck.

Mum'pers, Christmas waits are so called in Norwich.

Mump'-ish, sullen; mump'-ish-ly, mump'-ish-ness.

In the mumps, in a sullen temper, in the sulks.

"Mump," Ger. mummeln, to mumble. "Mumps," Dutch mumms.

Munch, to chew ravenously; munched (1 syl.), munch'-ing, munch'-er. (Fr. manger, to eat; Lat. mandūco, to chew.)

Mundane, mūn'.dāne, earthly; mundane-ly. (Lat. mundānus.)

Mun'go, plu. mun'goes, -gōze. Shoddy, plu. shoddies, shōd'.diz.

Mungō, woollen cloth manufactured from cast-off fine-woollen clothes respun and mixed with new wool.

Shoddy, woollen cloth manufactured from fluff, old carpets, and other coarse woollens, mixed with new wool.

"Mungo," mongrel cloth, partly new and partly old.

"Shoddy," formed from shed, provincial past tense shod, p.p. shotten the fluff shod or thrown off from cloth in the process of weaving.

Municipal, mū.nīs'.ī.pāl, corporate, belonging to a corporate town or corporation; municipal-ly.

Municipality, plu. municipalities, mū.nīs'.ī.pāl''ī.tiz.

Latin municipālis, municipium, a free town (mūnus cāpio).

Munificent, mū.nīf'.ī.sent, very generous; munificent-ly;

Munificence, mū.nīf'.ī.sense, great liberality.

Lat. mūnificēs, gen. -centis (mūnus fīcto [facio], to make a present).

Muniment, mū'.nī.ment, a stronghold, a charter, title-deed, record. (Latin mūnimentum, mūnio, to fortify.)

Munitions of war, mū.nīsh'.ūnz ov wor, materials used in war.

Latin mūnitio or mūnitium, mūnio, to fortify.

Mural, mū'.rāl, pertaining to the city walls; mural crown, a wreath of gold given by the Romans to him who first scaled the walls of a besieged city. (Lat. mūrālis, mūrus, a wall.)

Murchisonia, mur'.kī.sō'.nī.ah (not mer'tchā.sō'.nī.ah), a long spiral shell deeply notched in the outer lip;

Murchisonite, mur'.kī.sōn.āte, a greyish felspar.

So named from their discoverer, Sir Roderick Murchison.

Murderer, fem. murderess, mur'.dē.rer, mur'.dē.ress.

Mur'der, to kill a human being maliciously; murdered, mur'.dērd; mur'der-ing; murderous, mur'.dē.rūs; mur'derously, mur'derous-ness.

To murder the Queen's English, to commit errors of spelling and grammar. (Old Eng. morther, morth, death.)

Our forefathers had a good word for "malice prepense," morther-héte, murder-hate, animosity leading to murder.

Mu'rex (not muriæ), a genus of rock-shells; murexide, mu.rex'ide, purpū'rate of ammonia; murx'an, purpū'ric acid obtained from murexide. (Lat. mūrex, a shell-fish.)

The usual way of forming words is to take the crude form, not the nom. case. The crude form of murex is mūric, and therefore Prout ought to have written his words mūrican and mūricide.

Muriate, mū.rī.ate, a salt formed by the combination of muriatic acid with a base: as muriate of soda (-ate denotes a salt formed by an acid in -ic with a base);

Muriatic acid, mū.rī.ăt'ik ās'sīd, hŷdrochlo'ric acid.

Lat. mūria, brine, sea-water; Gk. almurōs, briny. Muriatic acid is procured by the action of sulphuric acid on brine or salt.

Murky, mur'ky, gloomy, misty; murk'i-ness (R. xi.), murk'i-ly. Danish mørk, gloom; mørke, murky.

Murmur, mur'mur, a low dull sound, a muttered complaint, to murmur; mur'mured (2 syl.), mur'mur-ing, mur'mur-ing-ly, mur'mur-er; mur'murous, -ūs.

Latin murmur, v. murmūro; Greek mormūros, v. mormūrō.

Murrain. Murrhine. Myrrhine, mūr'ren, mūr'rīn, mer'rīn.

Mūr'ren, a cattle plague. (Sp. morriña; Lat. mōrīor, to die.)

Murrhine, mūr'rīn, porphery ware. (Latin murrhīna.)

Myrrhine, mer'rīn, adj. of myrrh. (Latin myrrhīnus.)

Murray, mūr'ry, mulberry colour. (Lat. mōrum; Gk. mōrōs.)

Murrhine, mūr'rīn, a porphery ware. (See Murrain.)

Murza, mur'za, second grade of Turkish nobility.

-mus (Latin [-m]us) nouns, becomes -ous in adj. = -us

Muscadine. Muscardin. Muscardine.

Muscadine grapes, grapes with a musky odour grown in the South of France and dried on the vines for raisins.

Muscardin, mūs'.kar.dīn, a dormouse. (Fr. muscardin.)

Muscardine, mūs'.kar.dīne, a fungus very fatal to silk-worms. (French muscardine.)

Muscatel grapes, mūs'.kă.těl, same as muscadine (q.v.)

Muscatel wine, wine made of muscatel grapes.

Muscatel pears, pears with a musky odour.

Not from Latin musca, a fly, but French musc, musk; Latin moschus.

Muschel, moo'.shēl. Muscle. Mussel. Mussulman.

Muschel-kalk, moo'.shēl kalk, a shelly limestone (German).

Muscle, mūs'l, a fleshy animal fibre. (Latin musculus.)

Mussel, mūs'sēl, a shell-fish. (Latin musculus.)

Mussulman, plu. Mussulmans, a moslem. (Turk. muslim.)

Muscle. Mussel. Muschel-kalk. Mussulman (v. Mytilaceæ).

Muscle, mūs'ʹl, animal fibre capable of contraction and relaxation; muscled, mūs'ʹld, having large muscles;

Muscular, mūs'.kū.lar, full of muscles, brawny; mus'cular-ly.

Muscularity, mūs'.kū.lar''rī.ty, a muscular state.

Muscular tissue, mus.ku.lar tīs.sue (not tīsh'shu).

Muscular Christianity, a healthy religion which braces one to the battle of life. (Charles Kingsley's phrase.)

Lat. musculus, dim. of mus, a mouse; Gk. mūs, a mouse, a muscle.

Muscoid, mūs'.koid, moss-like, a moss-like plant.

A hybrid: Latin musculus, Greek -eidos, moss-like.

Muscology, mūs.kōl'.ō.gy, that part of bot. which treats of mosses.

A hybrid: Latin musculus, Greek lōgōs, a treatise on mosses.

Muscovado sugar, mūs'.kō.vay''.do shūg'gar, raw sugar.

A corruption of Spanish mascabado, an inferior sugar.

